Sanctuary. See Tabernacle.
Sathan rageth more, the more God blesseth, 188 he can worke wonders, 195. but cannot make a Louse when God will restraine him, 202. if he cannot hurt the Church wholly, hee will hurt it in part, 211. his rage when men escape from him, 239. his temptation. 264
Saints. 316
Security. 198
Second causes. See meanes.
Seed of the Church, the blood of Martyrs. 169.
Scab, an Ægyptian plague. 205
Scriptures, 219.240. compared with food, 266. represented by the Shew-bread, 303. they must not be wrested, 236. 312. they are the rule of religion, 256. how the Church is keeper of them, 301. they are the beauty of the Church. 304
In the Scriptures sometimes that is set after which in precise order was to goe before. 224
Christ speakes in the Scriptures. 225
Separation from calamitie is of the Lord. 203
Serpent made of Moses rod. 195
Servants duty, 184. if painfull and faithfull, they shall bee recompenced under hard Masters, 225.280. they must not by any businesse bee ever kept from Church, 235. they are accepted of God as well as free-men. 236
Servants flocked away. 282
Shew-bread, the signification and name thereof. 303
Shooes put off, how to be understood. 178
Signes used of God to confirme faith. 180
Signes given to Moses to confirme him in his calling. 183
Signes and the Word must be joyned. 241
Signes of Gods presence. 328
Simon Magus termed a god. 194
Simplicity of former ages. 173
Simplicity of Doves. 288
Sinners punished publikely, 208. punished divers waies, 201. punished for divers ends. 281
Sinners repentant finde mercy. 224.223
Sinne is hard to be left, 182.189. one sinne pulleth on another. 169
Sinne prevented by God. 237
Sleepe, God provideth for us therein. 260
Snuffers and Snuffe-dishes. 305
Sorrow of heart, 206. &c. our secret sorrow seene, heard, and knowne of God. 178.191
Sorcerers. See Inchanters.
Souldiers. 267
Sowre hearbs in the Passeover what they signified. 232
Speech blessed by God. 192
Stranger: it is no reproachfull name alwayes, 175. we must be favourable to Strangers. 285.289
Our strength is to commit all to God. 240
Strife. 267
Subjects duty. 184
Subjects are the Kings hands. 274
Succession of place is no essentiall note of the Church. 230
Superstition in reserving of the Sacrament. 314
Suspition. 167

T

TAbernacle: to what end it was builded, 294. the fashion of it, 297. the matter of it, ibid. why it was called the Tabernacle of the Covenant, 299. the Coverings of it, 306. the distinct roomes of it, ibid. what they signified. ibid.
The Tabernacle was a figure of the visible Church. ibid.
Table of Shew-bread. 303
Communion Tables. 279.303
Tables of the Law written with the finger of God, 319. they are broken, 324. the second wrtten Tables, 328. what was figured by them. ib.
We discerne matters of the second Table better than of the first. 325
Talio. 284
Tale-tellers. 174
Talke. 271
Teacher. See Minister.
Temptations and tryals suffered by God according to our strength. 237.271
Temptations to bee repelled, 264. a three-fold remedy against them. ibid.
Tempt the Lord, how men doe it. 263
Testaments old and new agree in one. 302
Thankfulnesse for love shewed, 175.191.225. for benefits received. 245
Thankfulnesse not to be deferred. 246
Thanksgiving to God should be from every particular man, though the benefit be pulick. 246 251.269.312
Thanksgiving before and after meat. 303
Theft diversly punished. 283
Thoughts knowne of God. 182.186.196

Thracians. 320
Time discovereth falshood. 199
Time of affliction appointed by God, 202. and the time of our deliverance out of the same, 237. it is to be left to God. 244
Titles. 280
Tolleration of two religions in one government. 329
Tongues, why the holy Ghost appeared like cloven fiery tongues. 177
Tongues must be governed. 254.271
Torments in the persecution of the Church by the Emperours. 269
Trades and handicrafts. 309,320
Tradition. 290
Transubstantiation. 314
Tribute for maintenance of the Tabernacle, 315 the Romanes tooke it to themselves. 317
Truth in the end prevaileth against falshood, 195,&c. 200,&c. the adversaries of truth seeke to oppugne it by the selfe same meanes God doth teach it. 199
A rule to finde truth by. 314
The love of truth is the property of a good Magistrate. 275.286
Truth in trust. 284
Turke seeketh the prayers of Christians. 199
Tyrants use first craft, then rage, 170. they rage most against such as God blesseth most, 189. and increase from words to blows. ibid.
Tyrants are Satans instruments, 239. and yet their power is Gods appointment. 274,&c.
Tyrants shall die, 175. God overthroweth their purposes, 170.172.208.225. they can doe but what God will. 207
Tyrants compared to flies. 203
Tythes are to be paid cheerfully, 293. and of the the best, not of the worst. 312

V

THe Vaile what it signified. 306
Vaine-glory. 263.280
Variety of names of God, is from a variety of affections in us. 191
Verses, an ancient kinde of writing. 245
Vertues given to creatures. 249
Vertue is the chiefe nobility. 330
Visions are ceased. 302
Understanding darkened. 330
Union betweene God and his Church. 247
Unity. 244.330
Unnaturall lusts. 285
Unthankfulnesse. 168.174.254
Voluntary sinnes. 281
Urim and Thummim. 310
Usurers. 203
Usury. 219.286

W

WArres from Rome. 214
Warre is lawfull, 266. the causes thereof. 267
Washing what it signified. 317
Waters turned into blood. 196
Waters bitter. 248
Weather is disposed by God, and therefore to be ascribed neither to Nature nor Devill. 207
Whisperers. 174
Wicked: their thoughts and hearts are known of God, 182. they are left without excuse, 188. they mistake the causes of things, 189. in extremity they seeke the prayers of the godly, whom erst they contemned, 199. 216. 237. they deferre good things, 200. they can doe but what God will, 207. yet they boast as if they could doe what they list, 247. when their destruction is at hand, there are baites offered to pull them on, 239. they quickly repent them of their good, but seldome of their evill. ibid.
Widowes. 285
Will of God performed by the wicked, 207. for none can resist it 223 it must be all, (and not in part) observed by the godly, 211. it is the rule of right, 225. no reason is to be demanded about it, 185. we must be pleased with it. 251.263.
Our will is wayward, 187. obstinacy of will is ever the refuge of a reprobate, ibid. and of a worldling, 239. it is the measure of sinne. 281
Will of the dead is to be regarded with faithfulnesse. 237
Will-worship. 301.303.308.312
Willingnesse in Gods service. 293
Wind commanded by God. 241
Witches, 204. 284. they are instruments to worke youth to marriages. 285
Wives dutie, 185.247. brawling wives hinder religious husbands, 186. they should not bee an hindrance to mē in their calling, 270. they must goe to Church with their husbands. 295
Womens wits best in extremitie. 172
Women may not baptize. 187
Women are wedded to Iewels, yet will part with them to maintaine Idolatry. 321
World not to be loved too much. 218.232.255. 256.261
World inconstant. 166.263
World unthankefull. 321
Worship of God must be comely, and without pompe. 279
Wrath of God can arme all creatures against one, 201. and yet God remembreth mercy in the middest of wrath. 207
Writing better than tradition. 290

Y

YEare had the beginning thereof diversly taken. 230
Youth is to be catechised. 210.233.282

Z

ZEale. 261.323
Zipporah bringeth her husband into danger, 186. her act in circumcising her child, is no warrant for womens baptizing now adayes. 187

The end of the Table of the Notes upon EXODUS.

COMFORTABLE NOTES VPON EVERY CHAPTER OF THE BOOKE OF LEVITICVS.

VVITH AN ALPHABETICALL TABLE OF THE PRINCIPALL MATTERS contained in the ſame.

BY
The right Reverend Father in God, GERVASE BABINGTON, late Biſhop of Worceſter.

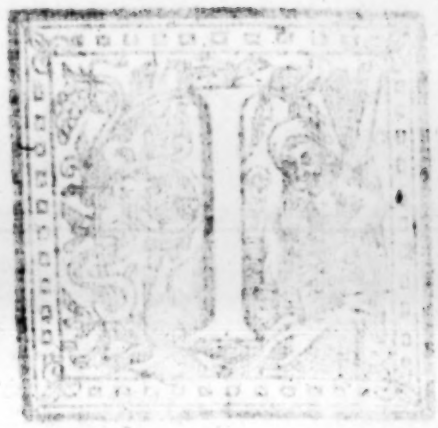
PSAL. 119. 140.
Thy Word is proved moſt pure, and thy ſervant loveth it.

LONDON,
Printed by M. FLESHER.
1637.

THE PREFACE.

IT is Saint Hierome his ſpeech in one place, Singulas ferè ſyllabas ſpirare cœleſtia Sacramenta: That almoſt every ſyllable of the Booke of Leviticus containeth a myſterie. A great motive to ſtirre up all Gods people, both to the reading of it, and to a very great obſerving of whatſoever weereade in it. Wee ſee by experience, that if a man happen to finde any old and ancient Monument of ſome famous man, that lived many yeares agoe, with any inſcription of old letters or characters, how hee rejoyceth at it, keepeth it, ſheweth it to his friends, and is never weary of it. Much more ſhould it pleaſe us to view and marke the ancient figures of this Booke, wherein (as in pictures) Ieſus Chriſt the great King of all Kings, and the eternall Sonne of Almighty God was ſet out and expreſſed to the world before he came, and ſtill moſt profitably noted and knowne now when hee is come. Let us therefore begin to reade this heavenly Booke with comfort, and continue the ſame with conſtancy to the end. And (moſt gracious Father) for thy deare Sonnes ſake I beſeech thee, throw my ſinnes out of thy ſight, that make mee utterly unworthy to come neare thy Word, much more, both to taſte the ſweetneſſe of it my ſelfe, and to be a meanes that others may doe the like with mee. And as it hath pleaſed thee to vouchſafe me a place of teaching in the Church, with many, and many mercies more, & to ſtirre up my heart to this courſe of doing ſome part of my dutie in the ſame; ſo vouchſafe to give power to my will, and to enable me with thy grace, that I may ſee and ſet downe, obſerve and note what may bee to this end, namely, to worke both in mine owne ſoule, and in the hearts of thy deare Choſen, knowledge and feeling of thy heavenly truth, that may be to the praiſe of thy unſpeakable goodneſſe, and our owne eternall comfort for evermore. O grant it (ſweet Lord,) grant it, and be ſtrong in weakneſſe, as thou haſt promiſed to be. Let no ſinne of mine, or of thy people, that ſhall ever uſe my poore labours, hinder and hold this mercy from us. Amen, Amen.

THE PREFACE.



COMFORTABLE NOTES
UPON EVERY CHAPTER OF THE BOOK OF LEVITICUS.

CHAP. I.

BEFORE you come to the words of the Text, you may conſider in your minde, why God ſhould inſtitute and appoint ſuch a kinde of worſhip as this, hereafter deſcribed in this Booke; ſeeming to bee delighted with the ſlaughter of Cattell and living creatures, to his ſervice. And (the rather) I wiſh you to thinke of this point, becauſe we reade of ſome in old times, that by reaſon hereof, and by the commandement, and approbation of warres alſo (wherein men, women, and children are often ſlaine with great rigour and force) have condemned the holy Law of God his ſacred and Divine Word, as not agreeable to his nature, who is all good, and not delighted with ſlaughter and cruelty, but with loving mercy, and mildneſſe, unity, amity, and peace. Such were the Cerdonian and Marcion Heretikes, as witneſſe Tertullian and Auguſtine. Others have fallen into this fooliſh and falſe conceit, that there were two Gods; one God, the Father of Chriſt, and the Author of the New Teſtament: The other ſevere and ſowre, cruell and bloody, the Author of the Old Teſtament, wherein ſo many commandements, concerning blood by warres, and by ſacrifices, are given. Againe, Lucian, that prophane ſcoffer, ſcoffed and jeſted at this kinde of worſhip by blood and death. The former folly is ſo groſſe and ſenſeleſſe, as in our dayes (God bee bleſſed) it needeth no confutation: For we well know, that even the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament alſo, Came not by the will of man, but holy men of God ſpake as they were moved by the holy Ghoſt. Wee know that the Law it ſelfe is holy and undefiled, given (as a good Schoole-maſter) to leade us unto Chriſt: And even the whole Scripture together, Old Teſtament and New, Law and Goſpell, is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to improve, to correct, and to inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, That the man of God may be abſolute, being made perfect unto all good workes. The other point may be a little touched; namely, his prophanneſſe, that jeſted at this worſhip, and thought it unfit. Wherein firſt, let us conſider, that not man deviſed it, and accepted it: For the firſt man Adam, was taught of God, and he taught his ſonnes, Cain and Abel: otherwiſe, in Faith could not Abel have ſo worſhipped: Faith being by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. So from man to man it proceeded as the will of God in all generations, and was uſed with the godly as the forme of duty, which God required of them and allowed. And now here in your Chapter, the words are thus: Now the Lord called Moſes, and ſpake unto him out of the Tabernacle of the Congregation, &c. concerning this kinde of worſhip. Whereupon it followeth, that being his owne appointment (who is Wiſdome it ſelfe, Juſtice it ſelfe, and all goodneſſe) fleſh and blood, duſt and aſhes ſhould not dare to cenſure it, but as good, although no reaſon thereof could appeare to his underſtanding.

2 Pet.1.21.
Pſal.19.7,8,9.
2 Tim.3.16,17
Heb.11.4.
Rom.10.17.
Verſ. 1.

The ſingular uſe of it, and great fitneſſe to the end God appointed it for, will after appeare in the whole booke by noting the particular ſacrifices mentioned, and commanded. But in the meane time, although God be not bound to give reaſons ever to us of his will, nor wee bound to ſearch out for them, but humbly and obediently to reſt in his good pleaſure, made knowne by his Word: yet if we think he choſe this courſe to confound the wiſdome of the wiſe, we ſhall not thinke amiſſe. For all the learned Writings and wiſe Lawes deviſed by man, to make people good, could never worke ſo much to that end, as this did, in ſuch as tooke the righ uſe of it. The more therefore any deſpiſed it, and thought it folly, the more did it overthrow him in his judgements, and prove his wiſdome to be ſtarke folly.

2. Yet, concerning the continuance of this kinde of Worſhip, the Lord never intended it ſhould be perpetuall; but onely for a time, namely, till that great Sacrifice (figured and ſhadowed by all thoſe Sacrifices) ſhould be exhibited and given unto mankinde, according to the Scriptures, with whom all ſhadowes ſhould ceaſe and take an end. And this was well knowne to ſuch as rightly underſtood the Scriptures, albeit to ſome others it was not tolerable doctrine, but very dangerous to be touched. The Prophet David underſtood it, when he ſaid, Sacrifice and Offerings thou wouldeſt not have, but mine eares haſt thou opened. Sacrifice for ſin haſt thou not required, then ſaid I, Loe, I come. Pſal.40.8,9. The Prophet Malachy ſpake of it, when he alledgeth the Lord ſpeaking thus, I have no pleaſure in you, ſaith the Lord God of Hoſts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand. For, from the riſing of the Sun, unto the going down of the ſame, my name is great among the Gentiles, and in every place (Mark this) Incenſe ſhall be offered unto my Name, and a pure offering: for my Name is great among the Heathen, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. Mal.1.10,11. Agreeable to which place, are the words of Chriſt to the woman, in the fourth of John: Woman, beleeve me, the houre commeth, when ye ſhall neither in this Mountaine, nor at Ieruſalem, worſhip the Father, &c. Iohn 4.21. Alſo the Apoſtle Paul his words: I will that the men pray every where, liſting up pure hands, without wrath, or doubting. 1 Tim.2.8. Sempiterno ritu. Whatſoever therefore you reade in the Word, of the perpetuity of this kinde and forme of worſhip, you muſt ſtill take it by reſtraint, unto the comming of Chriſt, and the continuance of that common wealth and policy of the Jewes, not longer.

3. Touching theſe Sacrifices and Rites, we are to know, and ever remember, that God never inſtituted and ordained them to be meritorious, and even by the work done (as we ſay) to appeaſe the wrath of God, and deſerve eternall life. For ſo thought ſome Hypocrites in thoſe dayes, and are ſharply, and often rebuked for it. And the Apoſtle telleth us plaine, The blood of Bulls and Goats cannot take away ſin, &c.

4. They were not appointed to be onely Allegories of good works, and civill vertues, and darke delinearies of a politicall life, as were the Symbols of Pythagoras, or the Hieroglyphicks of the Ægyptians: And yet there may be a fit application of them this way. For indeed they doe ſhadow out ſuch vertues, as the Sacrifice of Chriſt ſhould work by faith in true beleevers, but I ſay, they were not inſtituted onely for this purpoſe, but the holy Ghoſt looked at higher matters in theſe Ceremonies, namely, that they might ſhadow out the Lord Ieſus, the promiſed Meſſias, and the true Sonne of God, and that Sacrifice which he ſhould make of himſelfe for the Redemption of all mankinde upon the Croſſe according to the Scriptures, that they ſhould nouriſh and maintaine the promiſes hereof in mens hearts, and that ſaving faith thereupon ſpringing in him, and in him only, to be ſaved for ever. For every Sacrifice was a Sermon of this matter, of his comming, of his ſuffering, of his death, &c. And by ſuch viſible ſights the Goſpell was preached, concerning life by him. Thus judged S. Iohn, when he ſaid, Behold the Lambe of God, &c. Iohn 1.36. as if he ſhould have ſaid, that Lambe, that was ſhadowed by all the Lambes and Sacrifices of the Law. Hitherto tend the words of S. Paul to the Epheſians, Chriſt hath loved us, and hath given himſelfe for us, to be an offering and a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour to God. Ephes.5.2. The words of S. Peter; Knowing, that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, from your vaine converſation received by the tradition of the Fathers: But with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a Lambe undefiled, and without ſpot. 1 Pet.1.18,19. The words of S. Iohn, The blood of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſinne. 1 Iohn 1.7. In the Revelation, The Lambe ſlaine from the beginning of the world. Apoc.13.8. How? Surely not onely in the purpoſe and appointment of God, but by the Sacrifices which were offered even from the beginning. For by all ſuch, his death was ſhadowed, and hee as it were ſlaine (to the faith of man) as often as any Sacrifice was offered. The whole Epiſtle to the Hebrewes alſo, in full manner teacheth thus much, and marke the words well in the tenth Chapter. The Law had the ſhadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things. Heb.10.1.

5. For the variety of them, there were many ſorts of Sacrifices, and yet but one Chriſt to be ſignified by them all. This did the Lord in great mercy and wiſedome, that ſo his people fully buſied, and pleaſed with ſuch variety, might have neither cauſe, nor leiſure to looke unto the wicked Idolatries of the Heathens, according to the ſeverall charges given them of God, To beware leſt they were taken in a ſnare, to aske after their gods, ſaying, How did theſe Nations ſerve their gods, that I may do ſo likewiſe? &c. Deut.12.30. Seeing all the abomination that God hateth, they did unto their gods, burning both their ſonnes and daughters with fire to their gods, and the Lord would have them doe onely what he commanded, putting nothing unto it, neither taking any thing from it. Secondly, although Chriſt be but one, and his Sacrifice but one; yet great is the fruit, and many ſeverall mercies flow from him and his death unto us. By him our ſinnes are daſhed and waſhed out, by him Gods wrath againſt us is appeaſed; by him we are adopted and taken for for the Sons of God, and Fellow-heires with him; by him we are juſtified, and indued with the holy Ghoſt, inabled thereby to die unto ſinne, and to live unto righteouſneſſe, walking in his holy Commandements with comfort, and longing for our deliverance out of this vaile of miſery, That we may be clothed with our houſe which is in heaven, &c. Divers ſorts of ſacrifices therefore were appointed, to note by that variety, the variety of theſe fruits of Chriſt to all beleevers, though he be but one. 2 Cor. 5. 1.

Thirdly and laſtly, there were many ſorts of ſacrifices, that ſo plainly the Church might ſee that theſe kinde of ſacrifices were not the true ſacrifices for ſinnes. For if any one had beene able to take away ſinne, the other had beene in vaine added: as the Epiſtle ſaith to the Hebrewes; Thoſe ſacrifices which by the law were yearely offered, could not ſanctifie the commers thereunto. For then would they have ceaſed to have beene offered, becauſe the offerers once purged, ſhould have had no more conſcience of ſinnes, &c. Therefore (as I ſay) the variety and multitude of them, was of purpoſe to ſhew (amongſt other things) the inſufficiency and weakneſſe of them. Heb. 10. 1. In the ſecond and fourteenth verſes of this Chapter, you may ſee and note, of what things they might offer ſacrifice lawfully; namely, Of cattell, Beeſes, and Sheepe, verſe 2. and of Fowles, Turtle Doves, or young Pigeons. verſe 14. For, what God commanded, that onely might they lawfully doe, neither adding nor diminiſhing. Therefore deteſtable before God was that offering of men and children, that we reade of both amongſt Iewes and Gentiles. Of the Iewes, the Pſalme ſaith, They offered their Sons and Daughters unto devils. And againe, They ſhed innocent blood, the blood of their Sons and Daughters, which they offered up to the Idolls of Canaan. Of the Heathens, reade how the King of Moab, in his diſtreſſe tooke his ſonne, and offered him, &c. 2 Kings 3. 27. * Haply theſe Heathens had it from the Patriarches, that a man ſhould come, by whoſe ſacrifice Gods wrath ſhould be appeaſed; And they, not underſtanding how that ſhould be, namely by Chriſt: founded thereupon this bloody cruelty, to offer up men and children in ſacrifice. Or elſe, in their reaſon they framed this argument, that if ſacrifices of Beeſes, Sheepe, and Fowles, were acceptable to God, much more muſt needs bee offerings of men. But it was not ſo, the Lord commanding the one, and abhorring the other. Concerning theſe lawfull ſacrifices, a good note is given, that foraſmuch as God is pleaſed to receive his ſacrifices of ſuch things, as man hath for his common meate, beeſe, and ſheepe, &c. Why ſhould vile earth and aſhes ſo hunt for delicates to pamper up their ſinfull bodies, as they doe never think any thing dainty enough, that may be gotten for the things ſacrificed. Ea ſibi ſacrificari juſſit Deus, qua ab Ægyptiis pro Deo coluntur: nempe, de numero quadrupedum, Vitulum, Capram, & Ovem; è volatilibus, Turturem, & pulles Columbarum, &c. ut ſacrificiis deſtinata ne Deos putarent, ſed eum ſolum adorarent, cui convenit iſta offerri. Sic de immundis, &c. God would have theſe things ſacrificed unto him, which the Ægyptians worſhipped for gods: to wit, of foure-footed creatures, the Calfe, the Goate, the Sheepe: of Fowles, the Turtle Dove, yong Pigeons, &c. that being thus appointed for ſacrifice, the Iſraelites might well know, and ſee that they were no gods: but that they ought to worſhip him onely, to whom all theſe things were offered. So of uncleane things, &c.

* Lactant. de falſa religione lib. 1. cap. 21. Euſeb. de præparat. Evang. lib. 4. cap. 7. Arnob. li. 8. Auguſt. de civit. Dei lib. 7. cap. 14. See more examp. of this cruelty. Theodoret. in Levit. q. 1.

If his ſacrifice be a whole burnt offering of the heard, he ſhall offer a male without blemiſh, &c. Here begin the ſeverall ſorts and kindes of ſacrifices, and firſt is named the burnt offering, and three ſorts thereof. One of the heard, in this verſe; a ſecond of the flocks, ver. 10. and the third of fowles, verſe 14. Concerning the firſt kinde, you may obſerve, firſt, in what caſe it was uſed: and ſecondly, with what rites, and after what ſort. It was uſed both by the ancient Patriarchs, and their ſucceeding poſterity, chiefly in the agonies of their conſciences, in their worldly diſtreſſes and their greateſt feares, to confirme their Faith in Gods aſſured aſſiſtance, when, and how his good pleaſure ſhould be, that hee would not forget them, forſake them, and leave them, but ſurely and mercifully bee preſent with them, looke upon them, and helpe them to their contentment and comfort. When the Flood was ceaſed, and Noah ſhould enter out of the Ark, to comfort his heart after ſuch a great danger, and heavy judgement of an angry God upon all fleſh, and to aſſure his ſoule of Gods gracious favour to continue towards him for future times, as it had mightily ſhewed it ſelfe for the time paſſed; He built an Altar to the Lord, and tooke of every clean beaſt, & of every clean fowle, and offered a whole burnt offering upon the Altar. The Lord pleaſed therewith, gave him comfort accordingly, and promiſed no more ſo to curſe the ground againe for mans cauſe, neither any more to ſmite all things living, as he had done. From thenceforth there ſhould be againe ſeede time and harveſt, cold and heat, Summer and Winter: day and night ſhould not ceaſe, ſo long as the earth remained. When the Iſraelites endeavouring to revenge that great wickedneſſe of the Benjamites to the Levites wife, and were twice fearefully overthrowne by the Benjamites, then they went up to the houſe of God, and wept and faſted, and offered burnt Offerings, &c. When the Philiſtimes came up againſt Iſrael to fight with them, and the Iſraelites were ſore afraid, then Samuel offered a burnt Offering, to confirme and comfort them, and behold the effect; The Lord thundered with great thunder upon the Philiſtimes, and ſcattered them, ſo that they were ſlaine before Iſrael. When that great plague was

Verſe 3.

In magnis conſcientiæ pavoribus.
In gravibus rerum difficultatibus.
In timore periculorum, &c.
Gen. 8. 20.

21.

22.

Iudg. 20. 26.

1 Sam. 7. 8, 9.

amongst the people, for Davids ſinne in numbring the people, then in that griefe of mind, and woe of heart for his owne fault, and the peoples death, David bought the threſhing floore of Araunah, &c. And offered burnt offerings unto the Lord, whereupon his comfort followed: The Lord was appeaſed towards the Land, and the plague ceaſed from Iſrael. Thus might I weary you with examples, but I will adde but one more, the example of Solomon, who being brought of God to the Kingdome of his father David, and wiſely weighing the great charge and burden of it, as alſo his owne want of experience and skill, to guide ſo great a ſhip, troubled and perplexed in his heart, betwixt a deſire to doe well, and a feare to light ſhort of what hee deſired, through his weakneſſe got him in this agony to God, and offered burnt offerings, which likewiſe had effect to his joy; the Lord ſaw him, and heard him, and gave him both wiſedome for his charge (which he onely begged) and riches and honour (which hee begged not:) ſo that before him was never ſuch a one, neither after him ſhould ever be the like. See then, as I ſaid, the uſe of this kinde of Sacrifice in all feares and troubles, when comfort was wiſhed, and a ſtrong ſtable heart in Gods promiſes, till the time of the ſame comfort came, without fainting or falling away.

2 Sam.24.24, 25.

1 King.3.12, 13.

Secondly, after obſervation, in what caſe the burnt Offering was uſed, let us conſider the manner and circumſtances of it, which likewiſe you ſee in this third verſe, &c. Firſt, it muſt bee of the beard or flockes, (if it were a beaſt) not a wilde Hart, Bore, Beare, Wolfe, &c. For theſe kind of creatures being fierce, ſavage, cruell, and by force brought to death, not otherwiſe, could not be figures and ſhadowes of a meeke, milde, ſweet, and gracious Saviour, who willingly and lovingly ſhould even lay downe his life for us, that we by his death might be ſaved. Secondly, it was required to be a male: The Male is ſtronger and perfecter then a Female, and therefore fitter to ſhadow and ſhew the ſtrength and perfection of Chriſt, in vanquiſhing ſinne, death, devill, and hell, which the mightieſt Monarch the earth ever had, could never doe. Thirdly, it was required that it ſhould be without blemiſh, that is, not blind, not lame, nor broken, and ſo forth as you may reade, Levit.22. verſe 22. which when the Jewes obſerved not, ſee how the Lord complaineth, Malachy 1.8. if any man thinke theſe bodily imperfections, ſmall things to bee regarded of God, it is very true: but for an expreſſe commandement to bee ſtubbornly broken by duſt and aſhes that ſhould obey, is no ſmall matter. If we looke at the Apple eaten by our firſt Parents, it was but an Apple, a matter of ſmall moment; but when the Commandement ſaid no, and yet they did it, their fault was not ſmall, and ſo the puniſhment ſhewed. Therefore ever in the Commandement of God, we muſt not regard ſo much the thing, as his will, who (being our maker) may command what he will: and his will being ever juſt, holy, wiſe, and for our good, if we have grace, ought to be obeyed preciſely, carefully, and cheerefully. This condition of the burnt Sacrifice, figured out the purity of that Lambe, that indeed had no blemiſh any way, no guile found in his mouth; but ſo cleane, as by his cleanneſſe, his righteouſneſſe being imputed unto us, his Spirit daily worketh our ſanctification, and newneſſe of life from ſinne, and uncleanneſſe. Fourthly, your Chapter ſaith, It muſt be preſented of voluntary will, ſo to figure out, that Chriſt ſhould willingly (not conſtrainedly) give himſelfe to death for mankinde; and peradventure alſo to ſhew that God never liketh of conſtrained ſervice, but will have men doe their duties to him voluntarily, as indeed is fit for the creature to the Creator ever. Fifthly, it muſt be preſented at the doore of the Tabernacle, God tying them to a place appointed by him, and not ſuffering them to ſacrifice where they liſted themſelves in every place, Deut.12. 13, 14. as in the Margin the places are noted. If this thought come in your minde, why God ſhould thus tye them to a place, when as (for the ſhadowing of Chriſt, and confirming the faith of the godly) it ſeemeth rather it ſhould have beene lawfull every where to ſacrifice, becauſe every where Chriſt is a comfort to all beleevers, and faith in all places ſhould receive her appointed helpes, to make ſtrong and ſtable from deſpaire or doubt. You againe may remember, that there were two reaſons chiefly of this commandement. The firſt is expreſſed in Levit. Chap.17. Verſe 3. &c. namely, that by this meanes they might be ſtayed from uſing any unlawfull manner in their Sacrifices, and from following the faſhions of their adjoyning neighbours, the Heathens, which haply they might have done, if in every place, at their pleaſure they might have ſacrificed. The ſecond reaſon was, to ſignifie by this meanes that he onely was the true ſacrifice for ſinne, whom that Mercy-Seat there in the Tabernacle did repreſent; and which in that place, where after the Temple ſhould be built, to wit, in Jeruſalem, ſhould offer himſelfe for our ſinnes. If you aske whether (by this example) at this day, a certaine place be requiſite? you may remember that even by this example and true experience, wiſely our Elders have both thought of and provided, that in every Pariſh there ſhould be a publike place, even a Church or Chappell, whither (except in caſe of neceſſity) all people of that limit, ſhould come to performe their duties to God, publikely after one manner, not allowed at their will every one to have a ſeverall place, leſt private places ſhould breed private fancies, errours, and hereſies, ſchiſmes, and diviſions in the Church. Sixthly, upon the Burnt offering, you reade here they muſt lay their hand even upon the head of it, Verſe 4. And divers good things were taught hereby

Levit.17.4.
2 Chron.28.29.
Ezech.6.
Oſe.4.

hereby to them that understood those Ceremonies then used. For first, the party bringing that Sacrifice, did by this meanes acknowledge, that hee himselfe deserved to die; but (by the mercy of GOD) hee was spared, and his desert laid upon the beast, for which hee ought to bee thankfull. Secondly, as that beast then was to die for him, and to bee offered in Sacrifice, so did he beleeve that Christ should come, and die for him. Thirdly, that it is not enough to beleeve that Christ should come, and die for sinne, but hee must put his hand upon Christ, that is, lay upon him all his iniquities, by the hand of his Faith; apply Christ to himselfe, and beleeve that he must die then, and wee now, that hee hath dyed for his sinnes, my sinnes, your sinnes, &c. being the onely propitiation for sinne. The Iewes put their hand upon the workes of the Law, the Heathens upon their devised worships. Hypocrites upon their almes, fasts, prayers, &c. Making these things satisfactory to God for them, and so wronging the Lord Jesus, and all his powerfull blood. Fourthly, this laying on the hand, shewed, that men bringing Sacrifices to God, should rather sacrifice themselves, and all their exorbitant affections, than that beast. For many are content to give their goods to God, but themselves to the devill, which God abhorreth. Lastly, this Ceremony taught them, of what minde they should bee when they offered; namely, of this, that they thought the favours and mercies of God so great and gracious towards them, that if they should even offer themselves to the death for him, and indeed die as that beast must, yet no recompence would that bee, worthy such a loving Lord, and answerable to such his great kindnesse. When it is said in the Text, that such sacrifice should be accepted to the Lord, to be his attonement, verse 4. and in the 9. verse, for a sweet savour unto the Lord, or a savour of rest, which pacifieth the anger of the Lord, these promises being no deceivings of men, but true, as the Promise-maker is ever true: Wee must note and consider, that there was a satisfying power in those Legall Sacrifices, whereby the right Offerer was loosed and cleared from guilt in the sight of God: not that bruite creatures of themselves could doe thus, but as they were true figures of Christ, and grace by him to be obtained, and had sacramentally. Therefore they satisfied and helped, or reconciled to GOD, as at this day we are washed Sacramentally by Baptisme. Profitable then no further, but as they were exercises to true repentance, and faith, that sinners might learne to feare the wrath of God, and to seeke salvation in Christ, and Christ onely. Seventhly, the burnt Offering was slaine, to fore-shew the death of Christ, O fooles and slowe of heart, saith our Saviour, to beleeve all that the Prophets have spoken; Ought not Christ to have suffered those things, and to enter into his glory? And he began at Moses and all the Prophets, and throughly interpreted unto them, &c. Now thinke with your selfe, wherein, Moses (that is, the Law) did so shew the death of Christ, as by these deaths and killings of the Sacrifices? But who offered the slaine Sacrifice? any but the Priest? No: that so it might bee shadowed, how that there is no power in man to please God, but by the chiefe and high Priest Christ IESVS, of whom the Levitical Priest was a Type and a Figure. Eighthly, the Priests sonnes offered the blood, and sprinkled it round about upon the Altar, that is, by the doore of the Tabernacle of the Congregation. The blood, noting the death of Christ, and the sprinkling, the preaching of it through the world. Ninthly, the burnt Offering was flayed, and the skinne plucked off, then was it cut in pieces, v.6. Hereby was noted the great and grievous bitternesse of Christ his Passion, who should (for mans sake) bee stripped out of all humane helpe, and made as bare and naked of all worldly glory, shew, credit, and estimation with men, as this Sacrifice was turned out of his skinne.

7. Luke 24 25,26, 27.

8. Verse 5.

Remember what you reade in the Psalme, spoken of Christ in the person of David. I am a worme and no man; a shame of men, and the contempt of the people. All they that see me, have mee in derision: they make a mowe, and nodde the head, saying, He trusted in the Lord, let him deliver him, let him save him, seeing he loveth him. And so forth, as followeth in the Psalme. Adde unto it what you reade in Esay, He hath neither forme nor beauty: when we shall see him, there shall be no forme that we should desire him. He is despised and rejected of men, &c. we hide our faces from him, he was despised, and we esteemed him not. Both which Prophecies are expositions of this shadow, and may truly tell us, how his skinne was plucked off. Another use there might be to the party that offered the burnt Sacrifice, even to teach him to pull off his skinne, and to offer himselfe up to the Lord flayed, and without skinne, that is, without all counterfeit and hypocriticall shewes, without all earthly, vaine, and proud confidence in himselfe, or any workes, or vertue, or worth whatsoever in him, but naked and bare to present himselfe to his GOD, that is, with a single, a simple, a true, and a faithfull heart; boasting of no desert, but humbly craving mercy and pardon, and life for the true Sacrifice sake, Christ IESVS, who in time should come, and so suffer for mans sinnes, to set him free. And surely thus still must wee bee flayed and skinned in all our Prayers, and approachings to God, or else wee shall deceive our selves, and bee disappointed of our desire. The proude Pharisee in the Gospell was not thus, but came with his skinne on: and let his example teach us. The poore Publican was flayed, and came with skinne off; let it comfort, and incourage us. Tenthly, your Psal. 22.6,7,8.

Esay 53.2, 3.

Iohn 15.

Chapter ſaith, And the ſonne of Aaron the Prieſt, ſhall put fire upon the Altar, and lay the wood (in order) upon the fire. Then the Prieſts, Aarons ſonnes, ſhall lay the parts (in order,) the head and the kall upon the wood that is in the fire upon the Altar. In that, body, and head, and all was laid in the fire, it might note how whole Chriſt ſhould ſuffer for us; that is, Chriſt wholly, both in body and ſoule, for our bodies and ſoules that had ſinned; and ſo you know Chriſt did, verifying and fulfilling the Figure. Againe, by the head, might be underſtood himſelfe; and by the parts, his Church and members; all in the fire, and all burnt together, that it might be ſhewed the ſuffering of Chriſt to belong to his Choſen, both in fruit and ſenſe. The fruit is his taking away of their ſinnes. The ſenſe is their ſuffering alſo with him, and for him, which is fit, when it ſhall be his bleſſed pleaſure, and allotted to us but in mercy, that ſo ſuffering with him, we might alſo raigne with him eternally in his Kingdome. The Diſciple is not greater than his Maſter, &c. Mat. 10. 24. And bleſſed is the man whom God correcteth, therefore refuſe not thou the chaſtiſing of the Almighty. For he maketh the wound, and bindeth it up; He ſmiteth, and his hands make whole againe, &c. So ſaith Saint Iames againe, Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation; for when hee is tryed, he ſhall receive the crowne of Life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him. Thirdly, in the fire might be ſhadowed the power of the Spirit; and this Leſſon ſo learned, that as the fire gave thoſe Legall Sacrifices their ſavour, and was (as it were) the ſawce that made them taſte well: ſo is the Spirit, to all our duties, the meanes to ſeaſon them, and give them liking with the Lord. Pray then without Spirit, and what is it? Heare the Word preached without Spirit, and what doe you? Receive the Sacrament without this working Spirit, and how can you doe well? Marke it therefore that all Sacrifices had either all or part, burned with fire, &c. We know not (ſaith the Apoſtle) what to pray as we ought, but the Spirit helpeth our infirmities, &c. The Spirit beareth witneſſe to our ſpirit, that we are the children of God. If any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, the ſame is none of his. The Spirit is life for righteouſneſſe ſake. The Spirit ſhall quicken your mortall bodies, &c. This fire therefore the Lord ever vouchſafe unto us, and we ſhall doe well. Laſtly, when it is ſaid, The wood muſt be laid in order, the pieces in order, and all in order: well might they then, and we now, obſerve and learne, how highly God is pleaſed with order, and how much he abhorreth confuſion. Wherefore the Apoſtle giveth it for a rule, Let all things be done decently, and in order. And the more we frame our ſelves unto good order, the more aſſurance we ever have, the Spirit governeth us. But the inwards and the legs thereof ſhall ye waſh in water, ſaith your Chapter.

Verſe 7. 2.

Tam fructat, quam ſenſu.

Rom. 8. 17. 2 Tim. 2. 10. Coloſſ 1. 24.

Iob 5. 17, 18.

Iames 1. 12.

Rom. 8. 26. 16. 9, 10, 11.

Verſe 5. 11.

The eleventh Circumſtance in this kinde of Sacrifice, notably ſhadowing, how Chriſt our Saviour brought nothing impure or uncleane unto his Paſſion, as all other men doe, when they ſuffer. For although they ſuffer willingly and joyfully, yet doe what they can, they ſhall ever finde a law in their members, rebelling againſt the law of their minde, and leading them captive unto the law of ſin, which is in their members. No man therefore can offer a perfect offering to his God for his ſins. Onely Chriſt hath, whoſe Inwards and Legs were waſhed, that is, who wholly was pure and immaculate, within and without, and every way. This, This is my beloved Son, in whom I (and in whom only I) am well pleaſed. Laſtly, this burnt offering, in this ſort uſed and offered, was a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord, ſaith the Text. Not that God is delighted, as man, without any outward ſavour: but becauſe firſt, being done according to his preſcript, he accepted it, and liked it; and ſecondly, he ſaw in it his ſlaine Son, and ſmelled, as it were, his obedience, which though it was fulfilled in due time, yet was with God from the beginning, as he was alſo ſlaine from the beginning. Thus have you viewed the Ceremonies of the firſt kinde of Burnt Sacrifices taken from the Heard. Conſider of them againe, and often; the Lord being entreated ſhall make them profitable to you.

Rom. 5. 23.

The ſecond kinde of Burnt offerings.

Verſ. 10.

AND if his ſacrifice for the burnt offering be of the flockes, (as of the Sheepe, or of the Goates) hee ſhall offer a Male without blemiſh, &c. The firſt kinde was of the Heard, as you have ſeene; now the ſecond is of the Flockes, where againe you may note the Ceremonies before in the other kinde obſerved, and let that Expoſition ſerve here without any repetition againe of the ſame things. One thing here is, which was not before touched, namely, how they ſhall kill it, on the North-ſide of the Altar, not on any ſide indifferently, but on the North-ſide onely; which was done aſſuredly to draw this his people from the Idolatry of the Gentiles, who worſhipped the Sunne in many places, and therefore ever in their ſervices turned them towards the place where the Sunne was, as in the Morning to the Eaſt, at Mid-day to the South, at Night to the Weſt. And matters of great moment they would referre to the judgement of the Sunne. The Perſians in choice of a King, agreed that all ſhould meete at a place on Horſe-backe betimes, and whoſe Horſe firſt neighed before the riſing of the Sunne, hee ſhould be King: For they tooke the Sunne for a God, and Horſes with them were conſecrated to the Sunne, as things pleaſing to him. In Tyrus, when ſervants and ſlaves had cruelly ſlaine, by treacherie and Verſe 11.

Juſtine.

and villany, their Maſters, and all Free-men, they forſooth would make a King of themſelves, and how? Even thus; they would all aſſemble before the Sunne, and hee that could firſt ſee the Sunne ariſe, hee ſhould be King, as choſen out by that their God, the Sunne. Theſe toyes, leſt the Iſraelites ſhould learne of their neighbours the Heathens, God, not onely by words, and expreſſe prohibitions, but alſo ſuch ſignes as this, would teach and inſtruct them. On the North-ſide therefore muſt this Burnt-offering be killed. Deut. 4.

2. This Ceremony might admoniſh them, that the full Sunne, Chriſt Ieſus, was not yet riſen unto them, but (in time) hee ſhould come and ſhine in his ſtrength. For theſe Sacrifices, and Legall Rites, were but as little Candles that gave ſome ſmall light, and a farre more excellent Light ſhould they expect, that beleeved, in due time. And now, I pray you, hath it not appeared, and with his glory put out all theſe dimme lights of the Law? We know it, and finde it, with thankfulneſſe ever may wee thinke of it. For hee that reſerved us for theſe times, and theſe times for us, could have made us be borne, and to have our being in the darkeſt times.

But now this Ceremony of turning to the North is gone, and wee may turne any way, and pleaſe God. The time is come, when the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip in Spirit and Truth, every way, and every where, lifting up pure hands unto God. Thus much would our old Fathers ſignifie, by the placing of the upper end of our Churches Eaſtward, not Northward; which they would not have done, if they had thought this Ceremony had bound men ſtill. Let us then uſe things indifferent indifferently, and not unto any ſuperſtition or ſinne.

The third kinde of Burnt-offering.

AND if his Sacrifice be a Burnt-offering to the Lord, of Fowles, then he ſhall offer his Sacrifice of the Turtle-Doves, or of the young Pigeons. Behold, the third ſort of Burnt-offerings, taken neither of the Heard, nor of the Flockes, but of the Fowles; wherein firſt, the Lord (by variety) did meet with the variable and mutable nature of Man, and ſo kept that people from luſting after the faſhions of the wicked. Verſe 14.

Secondly, he mercifully regarded and provided for the poore, that ſhould not bee able to offer the former ſorts, and ſo might have beene diſcomforted with it. This appeareth, Chap. 5. verſe 7, 11. and 14, 21, 22.

2. But of Fowles you ſee here, not all ſorts might be offered, as Geeſe, Cockes, and uncleane Fowles, whereof you reade elſewhere, but Turtles and Pigeons: which Fowles long before this time, God had appointed Abraham to offer, Gen. 15. (Happily) becauſe theſe moſt aptly figured Chriſt, in whom was all holy Simplicity, Patience, Innocency, &c.

3. Concerning the Rites, your Chapter ſpecifyeth them in this ſort. The Prieſt ſhall wring the necke of it aſunder: (or, pinch it with his naile,) ſo as not the head ſhould be quite plucked off, but wounded, that the blood might goe out, and the creature die. Thus was the paſſion of Chriſt ſhadowed out, whoſe blood was ſhed, and hee dyed, yet his head not plucked from his body. And his head not plucked from his body: to ſignifie, hee ſhould not bee taken from his Church, which is his body, by any death, but raiſe himſelfe up againe, and bee with his to the end of the world. Thus then the Elect of God comfort themſelves, both in afflictions of the world, and in death it ſelfe: That for as much as their Head thus liveth, and never was, nor can bee plucked off from them: Therefore as hee hath overcome, ſo ſhall they by him overcome both the malice of the world, and the power of Satan, and enter into joy for evermore. Verſe 15.

4. The Maw and Feathers were not offered, but caſt away as uncleane: ſo ſtill noting, that which I have often noted, the puritie of the Lord Jeſus our true Sacrifice.

5. The Prieſt did cleave it with the wings, but not divide it in ſunder: Againe, to ſhadow, that though Chriſt dyed, yet hee was not quite extinguiſhed, but ſhould riſe againe and live. To which end alſo it was, that not a bone of him was broken; as were theirs that dyed with him. That being alſo figured in the Paſchall Lambe.

Laſtly, it is repeated here, for a ſweet ſavour to the Lord: and not in vaine, but to the great comfort of all ſuch offerers. For thus are they aſſured, that albeit they were not of abilitie to offer unto him Oxen and Sheepe, or ſacrifices of great coſt, yet were they as deare to him, as thoſe that could ſo doe: and their Sacrifice of Turtles, or two Pigeons, yeelded as ſweet a ſavour. O ſweet ſtill! For this God is not changed; but the ſame for ever. And therefore ſtill even two Mites of a poore Widow graciouſly accepted, ſtill a little Spice, a little Goates hayre, or what my power is to bring unto him is accepted. So that I have no cauſe to grieve at my poverty, if my heart be ſound, and therefore looke unto that, and bee chearfull in this. Thus have you viewed this Chapter. And now a little (with your ſelfe,) thinke of the manner of Revelation then, and now. What a darke and dimme light (I ſay againe) was that to this vouchſafed unto us now? Surely, ſo darke, as the Apoſtle feareth not to call that Night, and ours

Day:

Day: saying, The night is gone, the day is come. God for his Christs sake, make us thankfull.

But now that these kindes of Burnt-Offerings and sacrifices are gone, is there no sort left unto us Christians? Yes indeed. First, it is a Sacrifice to God most acceptable, to preach the Gospell, and it is even as the Song which David speaketh of, pleasing to the Lord, better than a yong Bullocke, that hath hornes and hooses. Thus Saint Paul offered up the Gentiles to God for a Sacrifice, winning them by his Ministery unto the truth, Rom. 15. verse 16. A Sacrifice so farre passing all others, as man passes all bruite beasts. And the faithfull Preachers of the Gospell daily doe the like. Secondly, it is a chiefe kinde of Burnt-offerings for Christians, to beleeve in Jesus Christ by the Gospell; because he that beleeveth, offereth Christ daily to God for his sinnes, then the which nothing can bee more pleasing to Christ and his Father. Thinke of it early, and thinke of it late, when you are upon your knees, desiring mercy and pardon, favour and comfort, both presently and to death, yet laden and over-laden with a great burthen of grievous sinnes, blemishes and imperfections, hatefull to God, and hatefull to your selfe, through grace given. What hope have you to speed and prevaile, but by his Sacrifice? You will take Christ your deare Saviour in the armes of your Faith, and say; Holy Father, looke upon him, not upon me without him; (for then I die in Justice:) but upon mee in him, and then shall I live in mercy. Thus you offer Christ daily, and it is the chiefest Sacrifice still of all beleevers.

1 Holocaustum Deo gratissimum prædicare Evangelium.

2 Præcipuum holocausti genus.

Thirdly, it is another kinde of burnt Sacrifice left us, to offer up our selves wholly to God; our selves, I say, our soules and bodies, a living, holy, and acceptable Sacrifice, every member to doe his will, and not ours. Of which Saint Paul speaketh to the Romanes, Chap. 12. 1. Fourthly, every good worke commanded of God, and done of us in faith, is a pleasing Sacrifice (in this sort) to God. As Almes, Coloss. 4. To doe justly, to love mercy, and to humble thy selfe, to walke with thy God, Mich. 6. vers. 8. To offer spirituall Sacrifice, see S. Peter. Lastly, all our afflictions patiently endured, according to the Psalme, The Sacrifice of God is a troubled spirit, &c. Doe therefore what God willeth, or suffer what he appointeth, as you are taught, and you offer Sacrifice daily to God. Thus let this Chapter profit you.

Psa. 51. 17.

CHAP. II.

FRom bloody Sacrifices now to unbloody: and because the Burnt-Offering, described in the former Chapter, could not be without the Meat-offering, as you may see, Num. 15. 4. therefore, before hee proceed to other kindes of Offerings, Moses describeth in this Chapter, the Meate-offering, laying downe three sorts of it. The first, of raw flesh, verse 1. to the fourth. The second, of flower, not raw, but baked, fryed, sodden, verse 4. to the fourteenth. The third sort, of corne, not ground to flower, verse 14. to the end. For the institution of these Meat-offerings, it was not because God hath need of any meate of smelling savours; in the Psalme he telleth us, that if he be hungry, he needeth not shew us, &c. Neither yet that the deed done might merit, and turne away Gods anger: For, he that offereth an oblation, is as if he offered Swines blood, and he that remembreth Incense, as if he blessed an Idol, saith God by his Prophet: but by these the Lord would teach to his Church and children, good things concerning Christ their Saviour, and his comming: good lessons also for life and manners, as by particulars will appeare.

The heads of the Chapter.

Psal. 50. 12.

Esay 66. 33.

First, this Meat-offering of flower and corne, might greatly comfort them touching their labours, and assure them, that yearely God would blesse their corne, and their fields, because it pleased him to be a partner with them in those fruits.

2. The Meat-offering of flesh, might draw their hearts to God in all times of their dyet, teaching them, that God giveth, and God sanctifieth, God prospereth, and is the staffe both of bread and meate. They are not upon Tables by chance, but by his kinde providence, and great goodnesse; and therfore to forget him, were to become most unworthy of those blessings.

Ose. 2. 21, 22.

3. The flower must be fine flower, to signifie still unto them, the cleannesse and purity of Christ, in whom there was no sinne, neither any guile found in his mouth: Of whom is all purity in any of his members, our foulnesse being washed by his blood. It taught also, that our best things should be given to God, and not our worst, as our manner is.

4. The Meat-offerings taught, that Christ is the remedy against all hunger. As, am I grieved with sinne, and hunger for righteousnesse? Christ helpeth this hunger, being made righteousnesse, and wisedome, and sanctification, and redemption unto us. Am I afraid to die, and hunger for comfort? Christ is my helpe for this hunger, and telleth mee, That blessed are the dead which die in him. He that beleeveth in him shall not die eternally. But though he be dead, yet shall he live. Death is swallowed up in victory. O Death, where is thy sting? O Grave, where is thy victory? through our Lord Iesus Christ.

1 Cor. 30. Apoc. 14. 13. Iohn. 1 Cor. 15. 55. 57.

5. He

5. He ſhall powre Oyle upon it, and put Incenſe thereon, ſaith the Text; Oyle delighteth the taſte, and Incenſe the ſmelling. Neither of them careth God for, we know. But thus it pleaſed him to ſhadow out unto his people, that they ſhould ever ſerve him according to his owne preſcription, which is acceptable, as a good taſte or ſmell is, and not with the unſavory inventions of their owne braine, as hatefull unto him, as the other is pleaſing. Verſe 1.

Againe, the Oyle noted Chriſts kindneſſe and mercy, which hee ſhould ever ſhew to poore penitent ſinners, wounded and ſmitten with woe for their manifold frailties and ſinnes. Hee ſhould not bee rough unto them, ſterne and cruell; but ſoft as Oyle, gracious and kinde, ſweet and comfortable, ready to receive them and pardon them. Learne of me, I am meeke and lowly in heart, take my yoke upon you, and you ſhall finde reſt unto your ſoules. For my yoke is eaſie, and my burden is light. Come unto me all yee that are weary and laden, and I will eaſe you. Matth. 11. 29. 30. 28.

6. Incenſe againe figured out the prayers of Chriſt for his Church, ſo powerfull with God his Father, that not onely he was heard himſelfe, but thereby he obtained, that whatſoever wee ſhould aske in his Name, and for him, we ſhould receive alſo.

The vaine uſe of Frankincenſe in Popiſh Churches, as an imitation of the Law, is ſtill to love darkneſſe, when God vouchſafeth light; ſtill to continue aboliſhed Ceremonies, and ſtill to bee ſtubborne againſt God, with a will-worſhip of our owne, neglecting his will.

And ſhall bring it unto Aarons ſonnes, the Prieſts; and he ſhall take, &c. Whatſoever was offered to God, muſt be given into the hand of the Prieſt, ſtill repreſenting unto men this Doctrine; That onely by Chriſt there was acceſſe to God, and no way elſe. According to that plainer Revelation in the Goſpell by himſelfe; No man commeth to the Father but by mee, I am the way; And, let us therefore by him offer the ſacrifice of praiſe to God, &c. Heb. 13. verſe 15. Verſe 2.

A handfull of the flower, and of the oyle, with all the Incenſe, and the Prieſt ſhall burne it for a memoriall upon the Altar, for it is an offering made by fire, for a ſweet ſavour unto the Lord. Verſe 2.

Not all the flower, but a handfull; not all the Cakes, but one; and not all was burned, but onely a little part of one: the reſt went to the Prieſts, and none could eate of it but the Prieſts. It was a memoriall to them, to aſſure them, that God did reſpect the partie offering, and would be mercifull unto him. And becauſe it ſo pleaſed God it ſhould bee, to him alſo it was a memoriall to extend his ſweet goodneſſe to his penitent ſervant.

3. This Meate-offering you ſee in your Chapter, was either baked, verſe 4. or fryed in the Frying-panne, verſe 5. or ſodden in the Caldron, verſe 7. And which way ſoever it was, three rules were to be obſerved, ſpecified in the Text. Firſt, It muſt be without Leaven, verſe 11. In the 7. Chapter, verſe 13. and in the 22. Chap. verſ. 20. you may reade of a lawfull uſe of Leaven, but it was never lawfull (by the Law) to offer unto God for a Sacrifice any leavened bread, Leaven being a figure both of corrupt doctrine, and bad life. Beware of the Leaven of the Scribes and Phariſees, that is, of their corrupt Doctrine. Mat. 16. And, Let us keep the feaſt not with old Leaven, neither in the Leaven of maliciouſneſſe and wickedneſſe, but with the unleavened bread of ſincerity and truth, 1 Cor. 5. 8. Leaven noted bad life. Chriſt then being ſhadowed in all theſe burnt Offerings, by this rule of having no Leaven, they were taught the purity of Chriſts Doctrine, and the holineſſe of his life. His Doctrine ſo pure, that it maketh others pure. Ye are cleane through the word which I have ſpoken unto you. And, Verily, Verily, I ſay unto you, if any man keepe my Word, he ſhall not ſee death. Then you ſee it maketh cleane. His life alſo ſo pure, that not onely his falſe accuſers could faſten no fault upon him; but by his innocency he appeaſed Gods wrath for our impurity. Againe, it taught the Church in that Legall faſhion by darke figure, that after Chriſts example they ought alſo to be free from both theſe; to wit, falſe Doctrine, and ill manners. Not teaching (if they be Teachers) any corrupt matter, not beleeving and holding (if they bee no Teachers) any abſurd untruths. Neither Teachers nor people leading a wicked life, but in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, as the Lord ſhall inable, ſpending all their dayes. The ſecond rule is, That there be no honey in his meat offering, made by fire unto the Lord. Of Honey, we reade many things; as, that the nature of it is to preſerve bodies, not ſuffering them to rot and putrifie: That many, (by the uſe of it) live unto a great age, as namely, in the Ile of Corſica, by Plinies teſtimonie, who calleth them long livers, onely by the daily uſe of Honey. Honey hath a ſweet and pleaſing taſte, not ſharpe. Whereupon Salomon ſaith, Faire words are as a hony-combe, ſweetneſſe to the ſoule, and health to the bones. My ſonne, eate honey, for it is good; and the hony-combe, for it is ſweet unto the mouth. What might be the reaſon then, that God did forbid any Honey to be uſed in this offering? Anſwer is made, that Honey, although it be ſweet in taſte, yet it is bitter by effect. For it greatly increaſeth choller, which is as bitter as the honey is ſweet. Secondly, although Honey be good to eate, yet a man may eate too much of it, Prov. 25, 26. Thirdly, even in taſte it will not ſeeme ſweet (if you eate much) but very bitter or ſowre. Laſtly, it hath the very nature of Leaven, being boyled, and ſo having got a little ſharpneſſe. Now, for as much as none of theſe things are in Chriſt, who was ſhadowed by this Sacrifice, therefore is Honey forbidden to be uſed in it, as you reade here in your Chapter, as well as Leaven, verſe 11. Firſt, in Chriſt there is no ſuch ſweetneſſe as ingendreth bitterneſſe, or any evill to the true eater of him

The firſt Rule.

Matth. 16. 6. 11. 12.

Iohn 15. 3. Iohn 8. 51.

The ſecond Rule.

Prov. 16. 24. Pro. 24. 13.

him by faith. Secondly, Christ cannot be received or eaten too much, but the more wee feed on him, the better. Thirdly, Christ is not sweet at the beginning, and bitter at the end; but contrariwise, bitter at first, and sweet at the end. He that forsaketh not all, and followeth me, cannot be my Disciple: How bitter is this at the first, but in the end how sweet? You shall sit upon twelve seates, and judge the twelve Tribes of Israel: You shall eate of my Table, &c. Lastly, Christ puffeth no man up, as Leaven doth the Dough, neither sowreth his servant in whom hee dwelleth; but hee maketh him lowly and humble, and sweet in behaviour to his brethren poore and grieved, and needing comfort. Melancthon (not unprofitably) saith, Honey was forbidden also to be offered to God, to teach that the Word and Doctrine of God, is not bee turned to popular applause, not to content the Prince, and to please the people, contrary to the truth and edge of it; Art may not draw his Divine precepts, to make them delight humane reason; But his Word must bee left to his right nature, please it, or displease it the hearers. For such Honey-offerers are but daubers, sowers of pillowes under mens Elbowes, flatterers, and time-servers, hatefull to God, and hurtfull to his people. Others have noted, that if Honey be burned, it smelleth not well: and therefore was forbidden to be used in the sacrifice shadowing Christs death, as this sacrifice by fire did: because his death smelleth most sweetly, and right deare unto God also is the death of his Saints for him. The Gentiles againe used to offer Honey in their Cakes to their gods, as wee reade: and therefore (happily) God also forbad it.

Mel coctum, ut statim acorem contrahit, panem fermentat. Calvin.
1 Cor. 2.

The third Rule Verse 13.

The third Rule you have in the 13. verse. All the Meat-offering shalt thou season with Salt neither shalt thou suffer the salt of the Covenant of thy God to bee lacking from thy Meat-offering, but upon all thy oblations thou shalt offer salt. First, it is called, the salt of the Covenant of God, because God required it in all these sacrifices, as a covenant and thing agreed upon firme and stable, not to be broken, which kinde of covenants were called covenants of salt. Numb. 18. 19. 2 Chronic. 13. 5. Secondly, the Commandement is generall; All the Meate-offerings: whereupon our Saviour Christ taketh occasion to exhort, that all men would addresse themselves unto the perpetuall and faultlesse keeping of Gods holy covenant, by the example of these offerings, which (without salt) were no way acceptaple nor tolerable. To the continuall keeping I say, because the Text saith, Thou shalt not suffer the salt of the covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy Meat-offering. Which is, as if hee had said, ever have in thy selfe the Word and Law of thy God, with which thou art seasoned as with salt, the offerings of strangers from Gods covenant, being never acceptable, but an abomination to God. For the true seasoning, which findeth grace with God, is no where found but in the Word, and therefore all worships devised by man (seeme they never so wittie, and gay in the eyes of the inventors) are unsavorie and odious. Others looking at Christs alluding to this place on the ninth of Marke above said, gathered thus of it: that Christ from this ceremony draweth his exhortation to his faithfull, that they patiently endure to bee purged and purified, if they desire ever to be acceptable to God. For every sacrifice (saith hee) must be salted with salt, and every man shall bee salted with fire: that is, our corrupt affections, by the Word and Crosse, as by holy fire, cleansed and cleared from that displeasing savour they yeeld, and wee wholly seasoned unto God, as this mortality will give us leave. If you thinke farther of salt thus preferred before Leaven and Honey, you shall see that Salt is most commodious for mans use. For Salt keepeth our meate from putrefaction, it keepeth wine from sowring, it preserveth dead bodies a long time sweet and savorie, it yeeldeth our meate a good taste, and dryeth up the superfluous moisture of it in our bodies, which might breed diseases: and (in a word) so good it is, that the Proverbe joyneth it with the Sunne, without which wee cannot live, saying: Sale & Sole nihil utilius: Than Salt and the Sunne nothing is more profitable. Witty and sharpe pleasant speeches have their name of Salt, and hee that hath no wit, is said to have no salt in him. Salt then was required in the sacrifice to figure out Christ, who indeed is the true Salt, that seasoneth us and all our workes, or else neither we nor they please God. Sinne hath made us unsavory to God; and till this Salt be sprinkled over us, we have no accesse to him, nor favour with him, but when once we are seasoned with Christ, Then hee that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye. And as our persons, so our workes then please him, before being foule, and as a stained cloth. So that now it is said, He that beleeveth in me shall not perish, but have eternall life. To Christ we are gotten by the Ministery of the Word, and therefore the Apostles were called Salt, and the Ministers of God, still are the Salt of the earth.

Chap. 2. 13.

Translata locutio a sensibus ad animum. Tremel.
Mar. 9. 49.

For as Salt lighteth upon the flesh, and biteth and dryeth up corrupt moysture, preserving and keeping sweet the same: even so the Ministers by their labours consume and drie up the errors, the lusts, the pride, the vaine-glory, the covetous affections, and whatsoever maketh unsavory, preserving body and soule sweet unto God in Christ, and free from eternall corruption.

Verse 14.

If thou offer a Meate-offering of the first fruits unto the Lord, thou shalt offer eares of Corne dryed by the fire, and wheate beaten out of the greene eares, &c. It was said in the beginning, that these Meat-offerings were here laid downe in three kindes: The first, raw flesh, the second, flowre not raw, but either baked, fryed, or ſodden; the third, Corne not growne to flower. The two firſt kinds you have ſeene with their ceremonies; and now followeth this third kinde. You may here remember the many ſorts of offerings of firſt-fruits mentioned in the Scriptures, whereof this is but one. In Deut. you reade of firſt-fruits, but in a basket, and carried to the place appointed. In Leviticus here you reade of a ſheafe of the firſt-fruits of the harveſt, to be brought unto the Prieſt. In Exodus you reade of that generall offering of firſt-fruits. In Deuter. againe, of the offering of Tenths. In the Chapter alſo (above noted) of this booke, you reade of two leavened Loaves to be brought. And, in Numb. of cakes to be made of their firſt dough. Laſtly, this kinde here noted of eares of Corne dryed by the fire, &c. By this diverſity we may well note, (and ſinke it deepe into our hearts) what a reckoning God maketh of thankfulneſſe in man, for the benefits and mercies he receiveth at Gods hands; and how odious it is to him, and dangerous to man, when it is otherwiſe. And by this ſort we may ſtill ſee Chriſt figured, and taught: whereupon Chriſt compareth himſefe to Corne, which except it fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it doe, it bringeth forth much fruit. And the Apoſtle calleth Chriſt the firſt-fruits. The beating alſo of the Corne out of the Husks, ſhadowed the bitter paſſion of our Saviour.

Deut.26.2. Levit.23.10. Exod.23.16. Deut.12. Levit.23.17. Numb.15.20. Iohn 12.24. 1 Cor.15.20.

9. The remainder (a memoriall being burned to God) did remaine to the Prieſts: ſo ſhadowing out, that Chriſt ſhould not obtaine heaven for himſelfe, but for his Church, which was repreſented in the Prieſt, all being a royall Prieſthood. Againe, it taught how carefull God would have his ſervants for the maintenance of the Miniſterie, when they ſee him ſo carefull of them, and for them. From which care how farre they are that ſpoile them, and all manner of wayes abuſe them, let their owne ſoules witneſſe unto them before the ſmarting day come. And thus doe you profit by this Chapter.

CHAP. III.

The heads of the Chapter.

THe burnt-offering and the meat-offering thus paſſed over, this Chapter returning againe to the ſacrifices of living creatures, ſpeaketh of the Peace-offering, that is, a ſacrifice of thankſgiving, offered for peace and proſperity, either generally, or particularly. For who, ſaith Iob, hath beene fierce againſt him, and hath proſpered? He removeth the Mountaines and they ſeele not when he overthroweth them in his wrath. He removeth the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof doe ſhake, &c. That men therefore might know their peace and ſatetie both of their perſons and goods, to proceed onely from this Almighty God, therefore would hee have a ſet kinde of ſacrifice to bee offered of them for the ſame, and called a Peace-offering. This kinde of ſacrifice hath ſomething like, and ſomething unlike to the burnt-offering, deſcribed in the firſt Chapter. Like were theſe, It was brought to the doore of the Tabernacle as that was: the offerers hand laid upon the head, killed, and the blood ſprinkled about the Altar, as that, &c. Unlike were theſe: In that, only a male might be offered: in this, either male, or female: in that, the whole was burnt, in this, onely a part: namely, the fat, and as you ſee verſe 4 &c. in that, no part went to any man but the skinne, that was divided into three parts, one to the Lord, one to the Prieſt, and one to the Offerer, as you ſee in the 7. Chapter of this Booke, and Deut. 18 in that, Fowles might be offered; in this, not, &c. Of the former nothing needs to bee ſaid againe, becauſe in the firſt Chapter they were ſufficiently opened, but of the latter a little.

Iob 9.4.

1. Firſt then, what might it meane, that in the burnt-offering, onely a male might be offered, and in this peace-offering, both male and female? Anſwere may bee made, that firſt the Lord in this would draw the Iſraelites from the manner and faſhion of the idolatrous Ægyptians, who in their ſacrifice (as Herodotus noteth) uſed to offer no female. And ſecondly, he would herein yeeld a comfort to all women, that for them Chriſt ſhould die as well as for men, and they ſhould be heyres of his Kingdome (by faith in Chriſt) as well as men. For there is neither Iew, nor Grecian, (ſaith the Apoſtle) there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, but we are all one in Chriſt Ieſus. And ye huſbands (ſaith S Peter) dwell with your wives as men of knowledge, giving honor unto the woman, as unto the weaker veſſell. (Now mark) even as they which are heires together of the grace of life, that your prayers be not interrupted. A ſweet Saviour then is the Lord Jeſus, you ſee, to women as well as to men, if they have grace to beleeve; and in token hereof God would have the female offered as well as the male. It was a bleſſed woman that ſaid, My ſpirit rejoyceth in God my Saviour: and ſo may every true beleeving woman ſay with comfort.

Gal.3.28.

2. In the offering of the fat that covereth the inwards, and all the fat that is upon the inwards, &c. verſe 3,4. Some have judged the delights and pleaſures of the fleſh to be ſhadowed, which of a true Childe of God are to be killed and ſlaine as ſacrifices were, and mortified. Others looking at the phraſe of the Scripture, which uſually noteth by the word (fat) the beſt things, have thought, that herein was figured and taught, how men ought to offer to God ever of their beſt, and not, as wee now a dayes doe, of our worſt. For the phraſe, you have it often in Scripture, as when God ſaith, All the fat of the Oyle, and all the fat of the Wine have I given thee: that is, the chiefe or the beſt, *Numb.*18. In the Pſalme, God would have fed them with the fat of the Wheate; your vulgar Tranſlation expreſſeth what that is, even with the fineſt wheate-flowre. In another Pſalme, My ſoule ſhall be ſatisfied as it were with marrow and fatneſſe: That is, even (as it were) with the beſt things, and ſo in many places more. For the matter, who in right ſhould have the beſt, if God ſhould not? of whom wee have the beſt, and all whatſoever wee have. Thinke then of this many wayes by your ſelfe, and amend what is amiſſe. In your Tythes and duties doe you give the beſt? Doe you offer the fat? No, no, your conſcience accuſeth you fearefully (I feare) in this behalfe. He that ſweareth and ſwaggereth all his youth, and intendeth to offer unto God his old age, when for debility of body he can doe no more harme, doth he offer to God the fat, or the leane? the beſt or the worſt? Hee that hath many ſonnes and can endure none to ſerve God in his Temple, but onely one that is lame and full of imperfections, doth hee offer willingly the fat unto his God, who gave him all theſe branches of his body, and muſt give him comfort of them, or elſe hee ſhall never have any, but unſpeakeable woe and griefe in ſtead of it? Thus may you goe further in this meditation, and bee the better by it in many particulars. Again, becauſe this fat appointed to be offered was an inward thing, and not an outward; others have thought, that thereby was figured, how carefull wee muſt ever be to offer unto God our inwards, without which no externall dutie can or wil pleaſe God. Hypocrites are full of outward holineſſe, make cleane diligently the out-ſide of the platter: but God abhorreth them, and their painted ſhewes. The true worſhippers of God take another courſe, and looke that all be well within. The Lord (ſaith David) loveth truth in the inward parts, and his ſacrifice is a troubled ſpirit, a broken and a contrite heart within, not a pale face, and downe looke, many outward ſighes that are heard of men, vaine faſting from fleſh, and ſurfeting upon fiſh, &c. Enter into thy Chamber and ſhut the doore to thee, and thy Father which ſeeth in ſecret ſhall reward thee openly. Still, ſtill, offer to God thy inwards. Moſes prayed within, Anna prayed within, that her cheeke quivered with the vehemency of her ſpirits, &c.

as

Numb.18.12. Pſal.63.6.

Exod.14.15. 1 Sam.1.13.

3. In that, (part of the ſacrifice went alſo to the party that offered it) plainely was figured, that Chriſt ſhould die for all, and Lay-men (as we ſpeake) ſhould have their portion in him, as well as the Clergie; the hearers as well as the Preacher; the people as well as the Miniſter be bleſſed of him, if God vouchſafe faith. So men, ſo women, ſo learned and unlearned, and all take hold and hold faſt; He is all-ſufficient for us all, to bring us to the kingdome of his Father, without vaine ſupplies of ſinfull Idolaters, and he belongeth to us all, if we be not in fault our ſelves. This I ſay againe, might bee learned by the allowance of part of the ſacrifice to them that offered it, of what degree and calling ſoever they were.

Verſe 7.

4. You may here obſerve, how they were forbidden to eate either fat or blood. The Lords prohibition of fat, might teach them to like and uſe, a modeſt, moderate, and fitting dyet, which as it is good for the body, ſo alſo hath it profit for the ſoule. Hee that loveth Wine and Oyle, (ſaith the wiſe-man) ſhall not be rich. And, Beware of ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, of exceſſe and belly-cheare, often ſaith the Scripture, in regard of the ſoule. Faſting and prayer are joyned together, not feaſting and prayer: A ſhippe too much laden ſinketh; and, a body too much ſtuffed with fulneſſe of bread, periſheth. It is a double conqueſt to conquer thy ſelfe: And, it is a double deſtruction to deſtroy thy ſelfe: Iohns meate was Locuſts and wilde Honey, a moderate diet. The companion of gluttony is rottenneſſe, and the follower of drunkenneſſe is forgetfulneſſe and ſottiſhneſſe. Gods people are here forbidden to eate their fat, and thinke ever on the meaning. Blood alſo was forbidden to them, that ſo they might learne to take heed of cruelty, and to taſte of mercy and loving-kindneſſe in all their actions and behaviour. God is mercifull, and wee muſt follow him. Satan and his members are bloody and cruell, we muſt avoid it. Mercie and cruelty are two large matters, you may your ſelfe (as you like) follow the Meditation farre. Whoſoever (ſaith the Lord) he be of the houſe of Iſrael, or the ſtrangers that ſojourne among them, that eateth any blood, I will even ſet my face againſt that perſon that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people, &c.

Pro.21.17.

Bis vincit, qui ſe vicit. Bis interimitur, qui ſuis armis perit. Vino forma perit, vino corrumpitur ætas, Vino ſæpe ſuum neſcit amica virum. Propert.

Thus had this people their Peace-offerings, that is, duties of thankfulneſſe to their God, for their peace and proſperity vouchſafed unto them. And moſt fit it was that hee ſhould often bee thanked for ſuch favours. The like mercies and goodneſſe remaine to us at this day; and are we either freed from the duty, or left without meanes to performe it? No, no; but as they had Oxen, and Kine, and Sheepe, and Goates then appointed and allowed; ſo have wee the Calves of our lippes, and the ſacrifice of thanksgiving ſtill remaining for us, and as ſtrictly required of us, as theſe (in thoſe dayes) were of them. Offer them up then with a free heart, and with a feeling ſoule. Our peace is great, our proſperity comfortable, our God moſt ſweet and kinde, and ſhall we not offer? The publike is ſweet, the private is ſweet, and forget you to offer? We lay us downe and take our reſt, and this our God maketh us dwell in ſafety: O where is your offering? We riſe againe and goe to our labour, and a Dogge is not heard to move his tongue among us: Owe wee no offering? O Lord, O Lord, make us thankfull to thee for theſe mercies;

Levit.17.10.

The

The whole State we live in, for the Commons, and our ſeverall ſoules, for ſeverall mercies now many yeares enjoyed. O touch us, O turne us, from our feareſull dulneſs, and abuſing of this ſo ſweet, ſo long, and ſo happy Peace. Continue thy ſacred Servant, the chiefeſt meanes under Thee of this our comfort, and ever ſtill furniſh him with wiſe helps, truely fearing Thee, and truly loving him. Let our heads go to the grave in this peace, if it may be thy bleſſed pleaſure, and our eyes never ſee the change of ſo happy an Eſtate. Make us thankfull and full of Peace-offerings, be Thou ſtill ours, and ever mercifull, Amen, Amen.

CHAP. IIII.

MOSES having ſpoken of ſuch Sacrifices and Oblations, as were exerciſes of piety and gratitude to God; now beginneth to adde ſuch as were Expiatory, and did reconcile men unto God, aboliſhing their guiltineſſe and ſinne: yet not by the vertue of the thing, but by faith in Chriſt, promiſed and ſhadowed by the Sacrifice, Hebr. 10. In this Chapter he ſpeaketh of the Sinne-offering, that is, of a kinde of Sacrifice ordained to be offered for ſinnes committed of error, ſuch as S. Paul noteth, when hee ſaith, Brethren, if any man bee ſuddenly taken in any offence, yee which are ſpirituall reſtore ſuch a one with the ſpirit of meekneſs, conſidering thy ſelfe leſt thou be alſo tempted. For there be other ſinnes of error, which are not here meant, which Davids diſtinction of ſinnes in his Pſalme may teach you: whereby he maketh a difference betwixt his Secret ſinnes, (O Lord, keepe thy ſervant from preſumptuous ſinnes, leſt they get the dominion over me.) The ſinnes therefore of error, here meant, are ſuch, as have in them no wicked pride againſt God, but of meere weakeneſſe are committed, whileſt the infirmitie of the fleſh choaketh reaſon and judgement, that the offender is for the time blinde, and ſeeth not his fault. The Rites and Ceremonies of this Sacrifice differeth according to the quality of the perſon for whom it was. The manner was diverſe, the matter was divers. If it were the High-Prieſt, then thus; If the Prince, then ſo; If a private man, then after another faſhion; as your Chapter ſheweth. The matter alſo was one, if rich men offered; another, if poore men; and a third ſort, if men of the middle ſort; that is, neither rich nor poore; but well offered. Wherein, that ſtill ſtill the Lord pleaſed to reſpect the poore, and to fit his Sacrifice to their ability, what a comfort containeth it, if it bee well marked? Shall any worldly want breake thy heart, when to thy God thou art ſo deare even in that want, and with that want? No, no, be of good comfort, and let this world bee as God pleaſeth, the next world is thine, where is true and during comfort. This was felt of David as ſweet, when he preferreth the light of Gods countenance upon him, before Wine and Oyle, and worldly wealth whatſoever. And yet (even here) the Lord will never leave you without his mercy, as ſhall be fit, whoſe providence feedeth the yong Ravens.

The Heads of the Chapter.

Gal. 6. 2.

Pſal. 16. 12, 13.

Aliter.

Aliud.

2. Conſider the end of this kind of Sacrifice: It was not inſtituted to abrogate Civill puniſhments, which according to the Law were to be inflicted upon offenders, as Theeves, Murtherers, and ſo forth: But it was ordained (as hath beene ſaid) for the Expiation of thoſe faults which ignorantly (as not thinking of the matter) were committed againſt the Ceremoniall Law chiefely, and for which there was no other puniſhment laid downe either Civill or Criminall. Neither was this Expiation other, you muſt ever remember, then as Faith truely tooke hold of Chriſt figured by the Sacrifice. For it ſtandeth firme, that it is impoſſible for the blood of Bulles and Goates to take away ſinnes: Hebr. 10 4. But Chriſt with his owne Offering hath conſecrated for ever them that are ſanctified: verſe 14. See alſo Rom. 8. 3. 2 Cor. 5. 21. Heb. 13. 11. &c.

Pſal. 4. 6, 7.

3. The firſt perſon that is named, is the Prieſt, that is, the High-Prieſt that is anointed, who, ſaith your Chapter, If he doe ſinne (according to the ſinne of the people) then ſhall he offer for his ſin which he hath ſinned, a yong Bullocke without blemiſh (for a ſinne-offering) unto the Lord, &c. By which you may profit thus; When you reade that the High-Prieſt had need alſo ſometimes to offer for his negligences and ignorances, you ſee how plainly it was taught to that people, that the High-Prieſt, was not the true High-Prieſt, which ſhould make perfect and ſound ſatisfaction and attonement to God, but another was to be expected, of whom that was but a figure and ſhadow, to wit, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt the Sonne of God, promiſed in the Scriptures. Then for the Ceremonies uſed: The bringing of him to the doore of the Tabernacle, The laying his hand on his head, The killing of him, &c. have beene expounded before. But where mention is made of the Blood brought into the Tabernacle of the Congregation, you may remember, that there were two ſorts of theſe offerings for ſinne. One, whereof the blood was brought in, and of theſe the Prieſt might eate no part, but the fleſh, skinne, the head, &c. were burned without the Hoſte, verſe 11. Another, whereof the blood was not brought in, and the fleſh of ſuch the Prieſt might eate. Chapter the ſixt of this Booke, and the tenth, The ſprinckling of the blood ſeven times, ſignified that the ſatisfaction and Expiation for and of ſinne, made once by Chriſt,

Verſe 3.

Verſe 4.

Verſe 5.
Hebr. 13. 11.
Levit. 6. 30.
& 16, 17

endured good for ever in all ages and times, and needed not to be iterated: The number of seven representing the whole time of the worlds continuance. Others, by this seven-fold ſprinckling, have thought, that the grievouſneſs of ſinne was ſhadowed and noted. For (ſay they) it is written, He that ſlayeth Cain ſhall be puniſhed ſeven fold; that is, grievouſly. And againe, If Cain bee avenged ſeven-fold, truly Lamech ſeventy times ſeven-fold: that is, more grievouſly a great deale. Wherefore, this ſeven-times ſprinckling of the blood, might note, that every ſinne (with God) deſerveth ſeven puniſhments, that is, ſharpe and great puniſhment, if he ſhould deale with us in Juſtice, and not in mercy.

Verſe 6.

Gen. 4. 15. 24.

Verſ. 7. &c.

4. The blood was put upon the hornes of the Altar of ſweet Incenſe, to ſignifie that no prayer can pierce up to God, but in and by the blood of Chriſt. All the reſt of the blood was powred at the foote of the Altar of burnt-Offering; to note ſtill the true ſhedding of Chriſts blood for mankind, and becauſe alſo it was holy, it might not be caſt out as profane. The burning of the whole without the hoſte, plainly ſhewed that Chriſt ſhould not ſuffer in Hieruſalem, but ſhould be led out of the City, to a place appointed, and there ſuffer; which you know was fulfilled accordingly, Heb. 13. 11, 12. And the whole Bullocke was to be burned, being a ſinne offering, to teach men to burne all their ſinnes, and not to divide them (as wee doe) when wee ſay, I will amend my drunkenneſs, but I cannot leave my ſwearing; or, if I leave that alſo, yet my licentious life a little more muſt have a ſwinge, &c. But burne all, thou were beſt, and willingly keepe none: burne them (I ſay) by true ſorrow and deteſtation of them, even All, All, leſt but one (being wilfully ſtill delighted in) burne thee all and wholly in Hell for ever. When Moſes with the Iſraelites was to depart out of Ægypt, and Pharaoh would have had them to leave their cattell behinde them, ſaving what they intended to ſacrifice: Anſwer was made, they would not leave one hoofe of a beaſt behinde: and ſo deale you with your ſinnes, leave not one hoofe of ſinne behind. No one ſinne, no part of ſinne; that is, (ſtill I ſay) by wittingly, willingly, and boldly continuing in it, and delighting in it: Otherwiſe, free from ſinne in this life we cannot be. But (through the grace of God) wee may bee free from preſumptuous pleaſure in ſinne, and ſigh and grone more and more, for that any way we ſhould offend ſo good a God, as we finde infinite wayes of him that we doe offend; deſiring and longing to be free even from all ſinne.

Verſ. 12.

5. In that there is more ſolemnity about the Sinne-offering of the Prieſt, then of a private man; you may firſt ſee the care of God, to ſet out to his Church the dignity of his Calling, which ever with him was great, and for him, with all that truely reverenced and feared his name. Secondly, you may thinke of the greatneſs of ſinne in ſuch a one: For, the more is required to the expiation of it, the greater is ever the ſinne. The like may be ſaid of Princes faults, and great mens. Alſo by the heavy puniſhment which God hath laid on them, when they fell, the ſame appeareth, for how heavily did God puniſh Eli the Prieſt, for not correcting his ſonnes faults, but by a ſinfull kinde of gentleneſs, ſuffering their grievous miſdemeanors to continue? King Saul, for ſacrificing againſt the Law, how ſharply puniſhed? Davids adultery and murder, O how fearfully puniſhed? Horribly and ſuddenly will God appeare to the great Officers of his kingdome: And the mighty ſhall be mightily tormented, ſaith the Booke of Wiſdome, reade your ſelfe the ſixt Chapter of the Booke.

2 Sam. 4. 12.
1 Sam. 2. 22, 23, 24.
1 Sam. 15. 9. 23
2 Sam. 12. 11.
Wiſdome 6. 5.

6. In the thirteenth verſe, note, how a multitude of offenders excuſeth no offence: but if even the whole Congregation ſhould ſinne through ignorance, yet a ſinne offering muſt bee offered by them all, and their number yeeldeth no excuſe. Great was the number of ſinners, when God ſent the Flood, but their number defended them not. So in Sodom and Gomorrah, the offenders were many. Ten Tribes of twelve fell away from God, and became Idolaters. Broad is the way that leadeth to Hell, and many finde it, going to Hell, though they be many, &c. Secondly, obſerve with your ſelfe the phraſe (hid from your eyes) and ſee the ſtate of many a man and woman doing evill. The matter is hid from their eyes in Gods anger, and albeit they lye at the pits brinke of damnation and deſtruction, yet they ſee it not, feele it not, are not troubled with it. Becauſe (indeed) they never ſit and take an account of themſelves and their workes, laying them to the Rule of the Word: which if they did, conſcience would quickly bite and ſpie, and ſpeake of a miſdoing. The godly do this at laſt, and therefore you ſee it here in your Chapter, a time of knowing to them, as there was a time of hiding. Pray we ever for this grace, that wee ſleepe not in death: I meane in ſinne, that leadeth to death, but that we may awake and ſtand up from the dead, and Jeſus Chriſt vouchſafe us Light, to amendment of life, and eternall comfort and ſafety.

7. In the 22. verſe, you ſee the like Offering for the Ruler when he ſhould ſinne, that is, for the Heads and Chiefe men of the Tribes, who had authority among them: No man is exempted, Prieſt nor Prince, but all that ſin muſt uſe the meanes appointed to remove their ſins, or elſe all muſt take the puniſhment for their contempt. For he that is Lord over all (ſaith the booke of Wiſdome) will ſpare no perſon, neither ſhall he feare any greatneſs; for he hath made the ſmall and the great, and careth for all alike: Yea, the mighty abideth the ſore triall.

8 In

8. In the ſeven and twentieth verſe you have the Sinne-offering for the private perſons, which, by this already ſpoken, is plaine enough, and you may conferre it with the fifteenth of Numbers, verſe 22. And let this ſuffice of this Chapter.

CHAP. V.

BEfore Moſes will proceed to ſhew what poore people ſhould offer for their ſinne, in this Chapter, hee layeth downe certaine kinds of ſinne for which they muſt offer, and by which they may learne to judge of other the like offences. And the firſt is an example of the Judiciall Law, in the firſt verſe. The plaine meaning whereof, is, if any ſhall heare one ſweare, that eyther he hath not had, or hath not done, what he (upon his owne knowledge) underſtandeth he hath had, and hath done, if hee teſtifie not what hee knoweth, and reveale not the iniquity of the other that hath ſo falſely ſworne, hee ſhall bee guilty of his ſinne. Where you ſee, and ought ever to remember, that not onely he taketh the name of God in vaine, which ſweareth falſely; but even he alſo that winketh at the ſame falſe oath, being able to reprove him, and zealouſly doth not his endeavour to have that abuſe of Gods Name puniſhed by revealing and making it knowne. A Law that toucheth us neerely, as the world goeth now, men wholly preferring many times their affection to their friends; before all the glory of God in this behalfe.

Vſitatum humani generis vitium eſt, peccatum latendo committere, negandodefendere, & defendendo multiplicare, Greg.

2. The ſecond example is of the Law Ceremoniall in the ſecond verſe: As if he ſhould have ſaid, whenſoever any perſon becommeth uncleane by touching of ſuch things as make him uncleane, and carelesly neglecting (according to Rites of the Law) to purge himſelfe from that uncleanneſſe, eate of ſanctified Sacrifices, aſſoone as that his ſinne ſhall be knowne unto him, he muſt offer the Offering here preſcribed, &c. The true drift of which Law was to draw men to that carefull and diligent conſideration of their impurity, and to the knowledge of their ſinne.

Reade over the firſt of Eſay, and ſee how the Lord abhorreth all Sacrifices and ſervices whatſoever, when men ſee not their ſinne, but run on with their offences, and yet thinke to pleaſe God with outward Religion. No, no, ſaith God there, that will not be: But waſh you, make you cleane, take away the evill of your workes from before mine eyes, ceaſe to do evill, learne to do well, ſeek judgement, relieve the oppreſſed, judge the fatherleſſe, and defend the widow, and the caſe ſhall be altered, &c. Then, though your ſinnes were as Crimſon, they ſhall be made as white as Snow, and though they were red as Scarlet, they ſhall be as wooll. If you conſent and obey, yee ſhall eate the good things of the Land: but, if yee refuſe and be rebellious, yee ſhall be devoured with the ſword, for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it, &c. Thus ſeeketh the Lord to have us know ſinne, and flye ſin. And marke it againe in the Text, verſe 2. (And is not ware of it) making to your ſelfe this good uſe of it: That we are not ever cleane, when we ſee not any uncleanneſſe; for our fault may be hid from us, and we not ware of it, and therefore David prayeth for his ſecret ſinnes. But ſtill it remaineth an uncleanneſſe, though we be blinde, and it will deſtroy us, if we ſee it not in time. Wherefore pray for Eyes, and the Lord ſhall give them: pray for a heart of Fleſh, and the Lord ſhall give it. If thou ſee thy ſinne, God ſhall not ſee it; and if thou ſee not, God will remember it. Vpon our Garments wee endure not uncleanneſſe an houre, not a Mote, not a little Mote, but wee bruſh and beate, if wee bee not bruſhed; yea, the very ſhooe upon our foote is regarded, that it be cleane, and every day wee looke unto it often: yet ſee (and tremble to thinke on it) our bodies and ſoules are uncleane, and wee ſee it not; No, wee goe not about to ſee it, but uſe all the meanes wee can to bee farre from the ſight of it, as Sports, Playes, Company, and ſuch like.

Si tu peccata videris, Dominus obliviſcetur, ſi tu neglexeris ea videre, Dominus memor erit eorum.

We hate him that will rubbe us that way, and we avoid the place where ſin is reproved. It breedeth melancholy, and marreth mirth: We cannot abide it at any hand. But remember you this Chapter, and follow the Law of the Lord, if you will be ſafe.

3. The third example is of the Morall Law, in the fourth verſe, Concerning raſh Oathes and Vowes: where, I pray you, carefully marke; that albeit raſhneſſe and inconſiderate haſte, with man hath ſome excuſe, before ſet and purpoſed actions; yet (with God) it is evill, and there muſt be an Expiatory ſacrifice offered for it. Let it reforme our raſh ſwearing in our common talke, and the fooliſh vowing of things neither lawfull, nor in our power; And thinke with your ſelfe, whether they erre not greatly, that thinke what they have raſhly ſworne and vowed, they muſt needs keepe; when you ſee here, God would have them offer a Sinne-offering, for their raſhneſs, and not adde more ſinne unto it, by performing what they have ſinfully ſaid. Alſo by this occaſion conſider, how defiled creatures we are before our God, when even that is ſin in us, wherein we have not a minde to ſinne, as in ſuch raſh things we often have not.

4. But if he be not able to bring a ſheep, he ſhall bring for his treſpaſſe which he hath committed, two turtle Doves, or two yong Pigeons unto the Lord, one for a Sin-offring, & the other for a Burnt-offring. Verſ. 7. & 11.

Now ſee the ſweet goodneſſe of the Lord, to his poore people, that are not able to bring ſuch offerings to him as others doe, and ſo by the ſubtilty of Satan, and frailty of Faith, might be drawne to thinke that God regarded them as men doe: (that is) either little, or not at all. To theſe hee appointeth ſmall-offerings, framing his Law to their powers; and ſo giving them moſt ſweet and true comfort of his Love to them: as alſo in accepting of their little, as well as of the greater ſacrifices of richer perſons. It hath beene touched before, but it can never be learned too much, ſo weake are we, and ſubject to doubts.

The Ceremony of Oyle and Incenſe.

5 Note againe in the eleventh verſe, How no oyle might be put upon that offering, neither any Incenſe. Oyle ſignifying gladneſſe, and Incenſe a ſweet ſavour. The Lord by this Ceremony ſhadowed, how hatefull a thing ſinne is, and all that commit it, till the Lord be reconciled to them againe. He hath no joy in us, neither yeeld we any ſweet ſavour. And as he joyeth not in us, ſo ſhould we not joy in our ſelves: For if we do, wee powre Oyle upon our Sacrifice, contrary to the Law; and if wee thinke well of our ſelves, we put Incenſe alſo unto it. The Lord loveth a ſorrowfull ſinner adorned with ſack-cloth and aſhes, and they that ſo weep, ſhall laugh: he abhorreth proud ſinners, that doe evill, and yet rejoyce, aſſuring ſuch laughers that they ſhall weepe. But alas our dayes! who ſorrow leaſt then they that ſinne moſt? and who are more luſty and jolly, than they that have leaſt cauſe, if they knew their eſtate? Reade the one and twentieth of Iob, and ſee the merry dayes of the wicked; ſo in the booke of Wiſdome againe, and in many more places in the Scripture. Theſe men offer prayers to God at times, after their faſhion; but they put Oyle and Incenſe upon their Offering, they rejoyce, and are merry being full of evill, and they thinke their ſmell is as Incenſe to God, pleaſing and acceptable, when hee abhorreth them, and all their workes. O, take heed therefore of this unfeelingneſſe, and remember this Ceremony often in all your doings, and you diſliking your ſelfe, the Lord ſhall like you in his liked and beloved Sonne, your onely Saviour ever.

6. In the fifteenth verſe, See and marke the Law againſt purloyning and taking away of Tythes or firſt fruits due to the Prieſts. God ſtill loveth his Miniſters, and ſtill requireth, that they be honeſtly and liberally maintained; God ſtill abhorreth the wilfull and wayward breakers of ſuch Order for their maintenance, as the Chriſtian Magiſtrate in his authority (according to right) eſtabliſheth and appointeth. Therefore let ſuch as deſire to be acceptable to God, neither offend him nor their owne conſciences by ſuch fraud and injury. Saint Auguſtines * Speech is as true, as old, The fault is not forgiven with God, unleſſe that which was taken away be reſtored to men: not, that reſtitution taketh away ſinne before God, but becauſe true faith muſt needs have good fruit, and cannot be without reſtitution, if there be power, and if not, yet in heart and will. For againe, S. Auguſtine, If that which is another mans, ſinfully purloyned by mee, be not reſtored, repentance is but fained, there is none indeed. How little this falſe and unjuſt dealing with Gods Miniſters is regarded with many in theſe dayes, who knoweth not? and they are never troubled for it, much leſſe do they purpoſe either reſtitution or amendment. But the day will come, when it will ſmart, this Law of God having his enduring equity, and God in other places profeſſing, That this robbing of his ſervants is the robbing of him: and ſo he taketh it, and ſo will puniſh it. But let this ſuffice of this Chapter. Theſe things will come in other places to bee remembred againe.

* Non dimittitur peccatum, niſi reſtituatur ablatum. Aug. Epiſt. 54. contra Maced. Si res aliena, propter quam peccatum eſt, reddi poſſit, & non redditur, pœnitentia non agitur, ſed fingitur. Idem. Malach. 3.8. Levit. 22.14.

CHAP. VI.

The Heads of the Chapter.

Verſe 2.
Verſe 3.
Verſe 4.
Verſ. 5.
Verſe 6.
Verſe 7.

THis Chapter firſt ſpeaketh of the Offering for ſinnes that are done willingly. And ſecondly, ſetteth out more fully the Rites and Ceremonies of other Sacrifices, briefely touched before, beginning with the fire and aſhes of the Burnt-offering. Of the former the Text ſaith thus: If any ſinne, and commit a treſpaſſe againſt the Lord, and deny to his neighbour that which was taken him to keepe, or that which was put to him of truſt, or doth by robbery or violence oppreſſe his neighbour, or hath found that which was loſt, and denyeth it, and ſweareth falſely, for any of theſe things that a man doth, wherein he ſinneth: when, I ſay, he thus ſinneth and treſpaſſeth, hee ſhall then reſtore the robbery that he robbed, or the thing taken by violence, which he tooke by force, or the thing which was delivered to him to keep, or the loſt thing which he found. Or, for whatſoever he hath ſworn falſely, he ſhall both reſtore it in the whole ſumme, and ſhall adde the fifth part more thereunto, and give it unto him to whom it pertaineth, the ſame day that he offereth for his treſpaſſe. Alſo hee ſhall bring for his treſpaſſe unto the Lord, a Ramme without blemiſh out of the flocke, in thy eſtimation worth two ſhekles, for a treſpaſſe-Offering unto the Prieſt. And the Prieſt ſhall make an attonement for him before the Lord, and it ſhall be forgiven him, whatſoever thing he hath done, and treſpaſſed therein.

This place thus written out at large, yeeldeth great comfort to many a trembling ſoule, and therefore duely to be regarded. Sinnes of ignorance have not ſuch blackneſſe in them (although ſinnes, as you ſaw before) as ſinnes wittingly and willingly committed: and therefore, when feeling comcommeth, this circumſtance of Knowledge greatly afflicteth the Conſcience. But bleſſed be God, even theſe ſinnes alſo finde mercy with him upon true repentance. So did Abraham for his lie (which contrary to his knowledge) hee wittingly and willingly committed. So did David for his fall, Peter, and many more. Here you ſee a Speciall Sacrifice appointed, and an attonement to be made. Should it not bee ſo likewiſe now, that even for theſe ſinnes there were an attonement by Ieſus Chriſt, our ſtate under the Goſpell, were worſe than theirs under the Law. Yet let no mercy and goodneſſe in God make us bold and preſumptuous to ſinne, but with David pray againſt ſuch kinde of ſinning ever. Keepe me, ô Lord, from preſumptuous ſinnes, that they have not dominion over me, &c.

2. You may obſerve the examples or particulars laid downe in the Text, and ſee how before God all theſe are ſinnes, which yet many perſons in the world make little reckoning of. To deny the thing committed to her keeping; To breake the truſt repoſed in us, To rob our neighbours, and violently to take things from them; To deny that which was loſt and wee have found; To ſweare falſly many times, and even for trifles, with ſuch like, doe every one thinke them ſinnes, and ſtand in feare to commit them? No, we know it well, they are lightly thought of, by too many. But let Gods Law profit all his to a true knowledge what is ſinne, and a due care to avoid it, when wee know it. So ſhall it be well with us for ever, and with thoſe alſo we wiſh well unto after us, to a thouſand generations.

3. Note in the fift verſe, The reſtitution againe which God appointeth to be made to the owners, even with a fift part more, the ſame day that he offereth for his treſpaſſe. And ſtill gather this Doctrine for your uſe, That God is never pleaſed with any thing that is ours, whileſt we retaine and keepe that which is not ours. But marke well an Offering to the Lord, beſide that ſatisfaction of men. And through all Moſes, finde mee a place where ſinne is taken away otherwiſe than by Sacrifice. Now, whatſoever is attributed to the Sacrifices, the ſame is plainly taken away from mans workes. And if it was never the meaning of God to tie that people to the outward Sacrifice it ſelfe, but by the ſame to leade them to Chriſt ſhadowed by the Sacrifice, then apparent it is to all men, that there is no meanes to take away ſinne, but onely Chriſt: which all men will not confeſſe, becauſe they would eſtabliſh workes in farther ſtrength than God hath given.

When we will agree with God we muſt alſo agree with our neighbour.

4. Well, weigh it againe in the 7. verſe, and ever throughout theſe Bookes, That the Prieſt muſt make the attonement; ſo ever ſignifying, that not in the Sacrifice, but in the Prieſthood was the matter. Now that Prieſthood noted Chriſt his Office. And therefore, as then no Sacrifice pleaſed, but offered by the Prieſt, ſo at this day nothing of ours, as prayer, and ſuch like, availeth, but in Chriſt, and by Chriſt our onely and eternall High-Prieſt. Againe, the Text ſaith, Before the Lord this attonement ſhall be, thereby overthrowing the wicked error of them, that affirmed a civill purgation onely of ſinne by thoſe Sacrifices, and not any ſpirituall promiſe in them. Which, I ſay, is moſt wicked, as well as falſe. Becauſe ſo, thoſe Sacrifices and Exerciſes of piety, ſhould no way have ſerved, to breed and ſtrengthen faith in man, touching his ſpirituall eſtate, whereunto indeed they wholly aymed, and effectually wrought in the godly that uſed them rightly.

Verſe 7.

5. The ſecond point in this Chapter is, concerning the Rites and Ceremonies of the Sacrifices; And firſt of the fire upon the Altar, wherewith the Burnt-Offering was conſumed. The Text is thus; Then the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, Command Aaron and his ſonnes, ſaying, This is the Law of the Burnt-Offering, (it is the Burnt-Offering, becauſe it burneth upon the Altar all the night unto the morning, and the fire burneth on the Altar, &c.) So carefull is God of this continuall burning, that (if you marke) it is reported over and over. In the 12. verſe againe, but the fire upon the Altar ſhall burne there and never be put out. Againe in the 13. verſe, The fire ſhall ever burne upon the Altar, and never goe out, &c. To this end, the Prieſts care was to feed it with wood, and ſee to it, day and night, and with no other fire might either Sacrifice, or Incenſe, bee burned and offered to God. This fire was carefully kept upon the Altar to the captivity of Babylon, and afterward found againe of Nehemias, 2 Macbab. 2. 1. 18. and 19. verſes. Of like from hence might grow that great honour and regard, which the Heathens had fire in, whereof wee reade often. The Athenians in their Prytaneo, and at Delphos, and at Rome, of thoſe Veſtall Virgins continuall fire was kept, and of many it was worſhipped as a god. The Perſians called it Oriſmada, that is, Holy Fire; and in publike pompe they uſed to carry it before Kings with great ſolemnity. A merry tale there is of this göd (Fire) which I will repeate. The Chaldeans, ſay our Bookes, worſhipping this vaine god, proudly boaſted, that of all other gods hee was the ſtrongeſt, conquering and conſuming all other Gods of the Gentiles. And no marvell, for they were either wood or mettall that by Fire might be defaced. This bragge at the laſt came to the eares of a Prieſt at Canopus. This Canopus was maſter of Menelaus ſhippes, and dying in an Iſland, at the entry of Nilus, the famous River of Ægypt, cauſed that Iſland to bee called after his name, and was there honoured for a god. The Prieſt fearing leaſt his Canopus (the Image being belike of ſome metall) might come in contempt, Verſe 9. The Ceremony of fire.

Verſ. 12, 13.

The Greeke word ἑστία, and the Latine Veſta, are thought to come originally of the Hebrew Eſch Iah, the fire of God. Xeno. Κύρου παιδείας. lib. 8. Plutarch in vita Artaxerxis et Alexandri, &c.

and ſo his living be taken away, deviſed thus with himſelfe. He got a Water-pot full of holes, (like unto theſe that we water gardens withall) ſtopped up all the holes with waxe, filled it full of water, painted it very trim, and ſetting it very artificially upon the top of the olde Image of his god Canopus, brought him forth to contend with the Caldeans god of fire, which of them ſhould be the greater. The fire was ſet about him, and great expectation in the beholders, which way the victory would goe. By and by, when the heate of the fire had melted the waxe that ſtopped the holes of the pot, the water began to ſtreame out at the holes, and quite put out the fire about it. Then there was a cry by all Canopus friends, Victory, victory: and from that time Canopus that Idoll, was counted, through this ſubtilty of the Prieſt, the ſtrongeſt god of all others. Thus blinde are men, when God giveth not light, and thus eaſily abuſed when they are blinde. Wee may marvell leſſe at their great ſimplicity, if we conſider what is taught and held by thoſe that thinke themſelves wiſe in theſe dayes. Namely, that the water, called Holy Water, ſprinckled in the grave of a dead man, not onely purgeth the ſame man from all ſpot of ſinne, but extinguiſheth alſo in great part, that fell-fire, which they call Purgatory fire. Thus you ſee mens follies, both of Fire and Water. But paſſe we them over, and come to the Matter. What might be the reaſon, why God appointed this Ceremonie of continuall Fire upon the Altar, and how may we profit by it? Firſt, there was figured by it, the death of Chriſt, from the beginning of the world: Namely, that he was the Lambe ſlaine from the beginning for Mankinde; and by this ſhadow they were ledde to beleeve, that although as yet Chriſt was not come in the fleſh, nevertheleſſe the fruit of his death belonged to them, aſwell as to thoſe that ſhould live when he came, or was come: for this fire was continuall and went not out, no more did the fruite of his Paſſion faile to any True-beleever, even from the beginning; but they were ſaved by beleeving that hee ſhould come, as wee are now, by beleeving that he is come, Alſo this Fire came from Heaven, Levit.9. verſe 24. and ſo ſhould Chriſt in the time appointed. This fire was ever in, and never went out, and ſo is God ever ready to accept our ſacrifices and appointed duties, ever ready to heare us, and forgive us, but we are ſlow and dull, and come not to him, as we ought. No other fire might be uſed but this, and ſo they were taught to keepe to Gods Ordinances, and to flie from all inventions of their owne heads. For ever it was true, and ever will be true, In vaine doe men worſhip me, teaching for Doctrines mens precepts. Our devices (ſeeme they never ſo wiſe, ſo fit, ſo holy and excellent) they are ſtrange fire, not that fire that came from Heaven, not that fire that God will bee pleaſed withall, or endure. This fire comming firſt from Heaven, and thus preſerved, ſtill preached unto them by figure, that aſwell did their Sacrifices and ſervices duely performed according to the Law pleaſe God, as that did when firſt God ſent his fire from heaven to conſume it in token of approbation, which ſurely was a great comfort to their conſciences, and a mighty proppe to fainting fearing weake Faith. This fire thus maintained and kept with all care, and not ſuffered ever to goe out, taught them, and ſtill may teach us, to be carefull to keepe in the fire of Gods holy Spirit, that it never die, nor go out within us. The fire is kept in with wood, with breath, or blowing, & with aſhes: ſo is Gods Spirit kept in (that holy and happy fire) by honeſt life, as by wood, by true ſighes of unfained repentance, as by breath or blowing, and by meeke humility, as by ſoft aſhes. O, that we may have care to keepe it in! what ſhould I ſay? This continued fire taught then, (and though it be now gone and abrogated) may ſtill teach us now to bee carefull to keepe in, amongſt us, the fire of Gods Word, the true preaching of his Truth, to the ſalvation of our ſoules. Fooliſh men, fooliſhly will imitate this Law, by maintaining of lights, and lampes, candles and tapers to burne continually, but let us care to preſerve this Lampe and light of Gods Goſpell amongſt us, that it goe not out, and God ſhall bee pleaſed, wee and ours bettered in his bleſſing. It had beene a hainous ſinne then to ſuffer the fire of the Altar to goe forth, and can wee thinke it no ſinne now, by taking away the maintenance to ſerve our greedy covetouſneſſe, to put out this fire from amongſt us, and all Gods people about us? God make Patrons thinke of it, and give them conſcience before there bee no more time for mercy. Fitly is the Preaching of the Goſpell ſhadowed by the fire upon the Altar, conſuming the Burnt-offering. For the fire hath theſe properties, it ſhineth and giveth light, it heateth, it conſumeth, it tryeth: ſo the Preaching of the Goſpell; Thy word is a Lanterne unto my feete, and a light unto my path. Saint Peter calleth it a Candle in a darke place, and many Scriptures teach the ſhining light of it. The heate in like ſort, Did not our hearts burne within us, whileſt hee talked with us, and opened the Scriptures? The fire kindled, and I ſpake with my tongue, ſaith the Pſalme, and as fire it pleaſed the Holy ſpirit to appeare at Pentecoſt, to ſhew this fruit or effect of the Word preached by their mouthes, it heateth the heart to all good life, and maketh us zealous of all good workes. The droſſe of our corruption by degrees it waſheth, the ſtubble of our fancies it burneth up and conſumeth, ſo that wee abhorre the ſinnes wee have beene pleaſed with, and hate the remembrance of evill paſſed. Laſtly, it drieth Doctrine, and ſevereth Truth from Error; it tryeth men, and diſcovereth Hypocrites. All worthy Motives to make us carefull to preſerve this fire perpetually amongſt us whileſt we live, and in a holy zeale to provide for it alſo, when wee are dead. So ſhall wee live Sempiterna Chriſti oceiſio, per ſempiternum ignem &c.

Mat. 15.9.

Pſal. 119.105. 2 Pet.1.19. Luke 24.32. Pſal. 39.3. Acts 2.3.

live being dead; Nay, ſo ſhall we aſſuredly never die, but with immortall ſoules, and never dying tongues, praiſe his Name that liveth for ever, and will have us with him. This is the Ceremony of the fire.

6. The next Ceremony is concerning the Aſhes of the Burnt-offering, wherein your Chapter ſaith thus, verſe 10. And the Prieſt ſhall put on his linnen-garment, and ſhall put on his linnen breeches upon his fleſh, and take away the Aſhes, when the fire hath conſumed the Burnt-offering upon the Altar, and he ſhall put them beſide the Altar, &c. to the 14. verſe. Firſt, concerning theſe linnen-breeches, you ſee the Law for them to be made, Exod. 28.42. with the reaſon of the ſame, modeſty and comlineſſe in their Miniſtery. This putting-off their garments, figured that bearing of our Saviour Chriſt when hee ſuffered, from his Garments; ſo that as the Prieſt laid aſide the clothes he ware, and put his linnen breeches about his nakedneſſe; even ſo was the Lord Ieſus ſtripped out of all his clothes, and, onely with his nakedneſſe covered, nailed upon the Croſſe for our ſake. Some have ſaid alſo, that this laying aſide of their garments, ſhadowed out that laying aſide (as it were) of his Divinity, whileſt in his humanity, hee truely ſuffered upon the Croſſe. Not that ever there was any reall ſeparation betwixt his Natures (that being impoſſible,) but becauſe his Godhead did (as it were) hide it ſelfe, by not ſhewing his power, that the decreed ſalvation of man (by the meanes alſo decreed) might be effected. The carrying of the aſhes forth without the Hoſte, notably figured out the ſuffering and buriall of Chriſt, without the City of Hieruſalem, which was performed. The aſhes were to bee put in a cleane place, not prophaned or abuſed, or careleſſy caſt away; ſo to note, that although Chriſt his body ſhould die, and be as aſhes in the conceit of men, yet ſhould that body revive againe, and muſt not bee putrified, but put in a cleane place, even a new Tombe, wherein never any man lay before, &c.

Verſ. 10.

Verſe 11, &c

Matt. 27. 35.

Matth. 27.

Matth. 27. 60.

7. In the 14. verſe, and ſo to the 19. The Ceremonies of the Meat-offering are more fully ſet downe, than they were before in the ſecond Chapter; That the remnant ſhould be the Prieſts, as before ſaid; but it was not laid downe how Aaron and his ſonnes ſhould uſe this remnant. Wherefore now it is further added, That they ſhould eate it, verſe 16. But how? It ſhall be eaten without Leaven in the holy Place, in the court of the Tabernacle. The Males onely might eate it, and not women, &c. What leaven uſually in Scripture ſignifieth, you have heard before, Namely, corrupt doctrine, and bad life, with either which, the Lord would not have his Prieſts ſtained, In the holy Place onely, and not elſe where muſt they eate it, to ſignifie, that onely in the Church, is the benefit of Chriſt to bee had, and not out of the Church. The branch beareth not fruit but in the Vine, and the Vine is onely in the Vineyard. This Church is not a building of lime and ſtone, but a ſociety of Chriſtian people, among whom the Goſpel is truly preached, the Sacrament duely and rightly adminiſtred, and who with one conſent firmely beleeve, that they have remiſſion of ſinnes, and life everlaſting: not by the merits of mans righteouſneſſe, but by, and for the merits and righteouſneſſe of the Lord Ieſus onely. To bee in the Church therefore, is not to bee in the place of lime and ſtone built to meet in: but to bee one of his number, that holdeth and beleeveth as all Patriarkes and Prophets, Apoſtles and Martyrs, and all the faithfull Elect of God, ever have done from the beginning of man, and hereafter ſhall doe to the end of the world, who all, as you ſee, by theſe Sacrifices were drawne to Chriſt and Chriſt onely, or elſe their Sacrifice availed them nothing, but to them was unprofitable, and to the Lord God abominable. In this Church are no Turkes, no Iewes, no Infidels, nor any that live a wicked life, with careleſſe ſecurity, and ſinfull delight; or yet a holy ſtrait life in ſhew, but inwardly are nothing leſſe than they ſeeme. Wherefore with God they have no remiſſion of ſinnes, and without a change, they ſhall alſo faile of eternall life. That here the males onely might eate, let it lead you to the eighteenth of Numbers, which will make it more plaine, ſhewing you there, what women might eate as well as the men. In ſome things they were barred, to ſignifie that God would not have women beare any publike Office and charge in the Church as the Prieſts did, and among the Heathens women did (to ſay nothing of ſome better knowne:) and againe in ſome things they were allowed to eate, that ſo it might appeare they belonged alſo to the Covenant of God, and the merits of Chriſt ſhould ſave them as well as men. For in Chriſt there is neither male nor female, bond nor free, rich nor poore, Noble nor baſe, but a new creature, that is, Chriſt rejecteth no ſort, but of what ſort ſoever, if they be new creatures, that is, borne anew by the Spirit, to forſake ſinnes, and live unto him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, they are received, they are welcome, and Hee or Shee that thus commeth, he never caſteth away, &c.

Verſe 14, &c Chap. 2, 3.

Verſe 16, 17, 18.

Levit. 22. Numb. 18.

Gal. 3. 28.

Iohn 6. 37.

8. From this 19. verſe to the 24. the Meat-offering of the High Prieſt, ſo often as hee ſhould bee elected, by the death of the former, is laid downe, wherein this onely I note, That every Meat-offering of the Prieſt, muſt bee wholly burned, and none eaten, as was of other Meat-offerings. Therein was ſhadowed the perfection of that Atonement and expiation which Chriſt made, and ſo their errour confuted, that hold and teach the death of Chriſt, onely to have taken away Originall ſinne, and that men themſelves muſt ſatisfie for Actuall ſinnes. Or, that Chriſt hath merited but the firſt grace for us, that is, hee hath merited, that wee hereafter by our

Verſe 19, &c

Verſe 23.

our merits may take away our owne ſinnes and others, with ſuch like wicked and damnable aſſertions. But ever remember you, That here this Offering was wholly burned, and no part left to man; to teach, that evenſo in appeaſing Gods wrath, Chriſts Sacrifice of it ſelfe was moſt perfect, and no part left unto man in that matter. Other Scriptures alſo abundantly teach ſo much, which now often have beene touched, and ſtill muſt, to the end of this Booke. Worthy is that place of the Apoſtle to the Corinthians, where ſpeaking of actuall ſinnes, as Adulterie, Fornication, worſhipping of Idolls, &c. Such (ſaith hee) were ſome of you: but yee are waſhed, but yee are ſanctified, but yee are juſtified in the name of the Lord Ieſus, and by the Spirit of our God. Here even Actuall ſinnes, and not onely Originall, are taught to be taken away by Chriſt, and by Chriſt onely. To which agreeth the like ſaying to Titus, and many more. And as for our merits, the words are plaine; When we have done all, we muſt ſay we are unprofitable ſervants, &c.

1 Cor. 6. 11.

Titus 3. 3. &c.

Luke 17. 10.

Verſ. 24. &c. 9 Laſtly, in this Chapter, you have the Ceremonies of the Sinne-Offering touched againe, from the foure and twentieth Verſe, to the end of this Chapter. All tending to teach this ſtrongly, That out of the Church there is no benefit to bee reaped by Chriſt, as before hath beene ſaid. Namely, this Ceremonie, that if any of the blood dropped upon a garment, that blood might not ſo be carried out of the Holy Place, but muſt there be waſhed away, and not carried out. What a plaine figure was this, That Chriſts blood profiteth none out of the Church? If it were an earthen Pot that it was ſodden in, it muſt be broken, not applyed after to prophane uſes; and if a brazen Pot, then ſcoured and waſhed with water, all to teach the holineſſe of Chriſts blood which ſhould be ſhed for man, and how odious and damnable it is, after wee are waſhed and purged by this blood, to give our members againe unto uncleanneſſe and ſinne, and to faſhion our ſelves like unto this wicked world. Many things more doth both this Chapter and others containe, if with exact curioſity, they ſhould bee ſtood upon, and every particular examined; but my purpoſe being onely to give a taſte of the uſe of the Scriptures, to our edification and comfort, (when wee reade, and have not better helpes) this much may ſerve to that end, and ſo in every Chapter onely a touch of things ſhall ſerve. God (in mercy) give it a bleſſing to us: Amen.

27.

28.

Chap. VII.

Verſe 1. NOw to the Rites and Ceremonies of the Treſpaſs-Offering; which are here more fully deſcribed than in the fourth Chapter before. This kinde of Offering was not vulgar, but it was reckoned among the moſt Holy; and therefore hath ſuch Rites and uſage as they had. It was killed in the place where the Burnt-Offering was killed, Namely, at the North ſide of the Altar; ſo ſhadowing alſo that Chriſt ſhould die at Hieruſalem, of which the Prophet ſaith, On the North-ſide is the City of the great King. The blood was ſprinckled round about the Altar, ſhadowing, that the merits of Chriſts blood ſhould be ſprinckled by preaching throughout all Nations. The inwards were burned to aſhes, ſhadowing, that all the honour and reputation of Chriſt, was by his ignominious death and Paſſion brought (as it were) to aſhes, that is, to no account with men, that knew not the myſtery of it, All they that ſee mee laugh mee to ſcorne: they ſhoote out their lips, and ſhake their heads, ſaying: Hee truſted in God, that hee would deliver him: let him deliver him if hee will have him, &c. My ſtrength is dryed up like a potſheard, and my tongue cleaveth to my gummes, and thou ſhalt bring mee into the duſt of death, &c. The remnant was eaten by the Prieſt, in token that benefit of Christ belonging to the faithfull. The Skinne of the Burnt-Offering here, was the Prieſts, and all the Meat-Offering that is baked in the Oven, and that is dreſſed in the panne, &c. Why God ſhould thinke of ſo ſmall and baſe a thing, as the skinne, ſome may aske a reaſon? and ſee you the reaſon, and the good of it. Firſt, it notably confirmeth our Faith in his Providence, that hee will never forget us, and leave us deſtitute of things needfull and good for us, ſeeing wee are much better than the skinne of a bruit beaſt, whereof yet, he hath care and thought. Therefore wee muſt not ſhrinke in the time of want, nor hearken to Satan that ſo buſily layeth our infirmities and unworthineſſe before us, that ſo hee may ſhake us off from God, and make us beleeve, hee will never regard ſo vile perſons, &c. But let Faith anſwer, avoid Satan. For I learne that God regardeth the Sparrowes, and forſaketh them not, though two of them ſhall be ſold for a farthing, yea, the beaſts skinne in the Law he vouchſafed to thinke of, and to diſpoſe of it, to his will, and he telleth us, we are better than Sparrowes, and therefore better alſo than the beaſts skinne, that hath no life, as the Sparrowes, have. Hee ſaith, O yee of little Faith, if wee doubt of it, and therefore I know, hee will, and doth thinke of mee, and I ſhall have in his time, ever what is convenient and profitable. Secondly, it ſhewed that ſweet and comfortable care that the Lord then had, and ſtill hath of the miniſtery, that it ſhould bee maintained, and not defrauded of the leaſt thing allotted to it, which ſtill he ſheweth in all other particulars, urging

Verſe 2.

Verſe 3, 4, 5.

Pſal. 22. 7, 8. 15.

Verſe 7, 6.

Verſ. 8, 9, 10.

Mat. 16. 23.

Mat. 10. 29, 31.

Mat. 8. 16.

urging ſtill, that they bee given to the Prieſts according to his will. Great things to move our conſciences in theſe dayes, if God be with us, to a true and juſt dealing with thoſe that ſerve at the Altar amongſt us, and not ſo greedily, ſo wickedly, and ſo unfeelingly to robbe and ſpoyle them, as we doe. If this people of the Jews had done ſo, in theſe matters allotted to the Prieſts, as we doe with the Tithes, and portions given to the Church in our dayes; do you thinke, or can you thinke that God would have endured it? No, you know well he would not. And is he changed? will hee not ſtill have us taught by the ordinance of his Word, and ſtill them that ſerve at the Altar, to live of the Altar? Are not theſe duties from us now, as due as ever thoſe were then? It may not, it cannot with truth be denied. How then may wee, firſt or laſt, eſcape the wrath of God for ſinning ſo, as if the Jewes had ſinned, we confeſſe that God would have ſeverely puniſhed it? if you ſay, ſo much and ſo much is enough for him, and this and that hee may ſpare: make the caſe ſo of the Iſraelites, and in this particular of the beaſts skinne, durſt any fleſh have ſo reaſoned then? beware therfore of making your ſelfe a Judge where you are none, of robbing them, that have the title, and inriching your ſelfe that have no right. What is allotted by the government you live under, is his and not yours, if he bee not worthy ſo much, the Law helpeth that by a due triall of him, and yet leaveth the maintenance ſtill to a more worthy, not to you. Harden not your heart againſt God, againſt Law, againſt right and truth; accuſtome not your heart to covet your neighbours due, your hands to purloine it by fraud, or to take it by ſtrength, it is theft, ſpirituall theft, ſacriledge, your houſe receiveth ſtolne goods, and the wrath of God may haply ſhake the foundation of it for ſuch ſinne, and you in yours, or you and yours be puniſhed. Thirdly, this care of the Lord for the beaſts skinne, to appoint it to one that ſhould have it, well taught that people then, and ſtill teacheth us ever, to bee carefull to prevent ſtrife, and to take away all queſtions and controverſies as much as wee may, that every one knowing what is his, may therein reſt, and peace enſue. The more God hath given you, the more muſt bee your paine this way, in your good health and perfect memory.

2. Your Chapter goeth on with the Peace-offering, whereof hee ſpecifieth two ſorts: the one of thankſgiving, the other of a vow. Touching the firſt, you remember how greatly God teſtifieth his liking of it throughout the Scriptures. In the 50. Pſalme, he commeth to preferre it before all others in ſome ſort. For I will not reprove thee (ſaith God) for thy ſacrifices, or for thy burnt offerings, becauſe they are not alway before me. I will take no Bullock out of thy houſe, nor hee-goats out of thy folds. For all the beaſts of the forreſt are mine, and ſo are the cattell upon a thouſand hills, &c. Offer unto God thankſgiving, and pay thy vowes unto the moſt High. Who ſo offereth unto me thanks and praiſe, he honoreth me; and to him that ordereth his converſation aright, will I ſhew the ſalvation of God. Vnto thee therefore O God (ſaith David) will I pay my vowes, unto thee will I give thanks. O that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſſe, &c! O that they would offer unto him the Sacrifice of Thankſgiving, and tell out his works with gladneſſe! and ſo forth all the Pſalm over, you ſee it is repeated as the foot of his Song. Ionas ſaid, I will ſacrifice unto thee with the voice of thankſgiving, and will pay thee that I have vowed: Salvation is of the Lord. I will praiſe the name of God (ſaith David againe,) with a ſong, and magnifie it with thankſgiving. This ſhall pleaſe the Lord better then a bullock that hath hornes and hooſes. Yet careth not the Lord ſo much for this in reſpect of himſelfe, as for man, becauſe there is nothing, that increaſeth feeling, faith, hope, and prayer, as this exerciſe of thankſgiving doth. Let it therefore be in uſe with us more and more, that is ſo accepted of him, to whom we owe ſo much.

Verſe 11, 12.

Pſal. 50. 8, 9, 10 14. 23.

Pſal. 56. 12. Pſal. 107. 22.

Ionas 2. 9. Pſal. 93. 30, 33.

3. In the 13. verſe you ſee Leaven admitted of, which before you remember was rejected and forbidden. He ſhall offer his offering with cakes of leavened bread, &c. Leaven therefore in the Scripture is taken both in ill part and in good part. In ill part, Matthew 16. 6. 1 Cor. 5. 6. Galat. 5. 9. In good part, Matth. 13. verſe 33. and Luke 13. verſe 11. when the Apoſtles are reſembled to a little leaven, that leaveneth the whole lumpe, they being ſent out of God into the unleavened world, by preaching and teaching to leaven it cleane through. And there is a Leaven of the new nature accepted, as the leaven of our old nature is rejected. For looke how the leaven maketh the bread ſavoury, and ſtrong and wholeſome, looke alſo how it maketh it riſe and heave up, which otherwiſe would be ſad and heavy: So doth Gods regenerate Spirit change us, make us ſavoury, and all our duties pleaſing to God in our new birth, and we riſe up, yea, our hearts and ſoules are heaved up in love and thankfulneſſe to him, that in mercy hath ſo looked upon us. This Leaven therefore of new nature is accepted. Try your ſelfe then in your ſecret meditation, how you are ſeaſoned, whether with old leaven, or new. It will bee good for you to take this view, and heartily to pray for what you want. Are you a Miniſter called of God to leaven his people with good Leaven? Looke how you doe it and be painefull: Faithfulneſſe will bee crowned, when ſlothfulneſſe ſhall bee condemned, and condemne you. And ſubmit your ſelfe to the profit of your people, not hunting after your owne glory, that you are thus and ſo learned, eloquent, profound, and ſo forth. If your people profit not, becauſe you flie too high a pitch for them, and ſcorne to lay a foundation of the Catechiſme among them, you will bee

Verſe 13.

Matth. 25. 25. bee found an unprofitable ſervant in the reckoning day, one that hath gained nothing to his Lord, but hid his talent in the foule Napkin of fruitleſſe matter, and idle figures of affected ſpeech. Are you a hearer and no teacher? Looke at your leaven: doth it heave you up in thanks for the Goſpell vouchſafed unto you: in love to them that truely preach it? in honeſt life to them that looke at your example? Doe you ſeaſon your childreu, ſervants, and family, as you are able? this is new leaven then in you, and good leaven, accepted of God, and profitable to your ſelfe: be thankfull for it, and God increaſe the meaſure of it.

Verſe 14. 4. In the 14. verſe you reade thus: Of all the ſacrifice hee ſhall offer one Cake for an heave offering unto the Lord; &c. And but one Cake (ſaith a Writer upon this Booke) was appointed, that it might ſhadow out one holy Communion to be celebrated in time to come of the Church, and not of ſo many Maſſes, even Maſſes upon Maſſes, &c.

Verſe 15. 5. In the 15. verſe, &c. A Law was made that the Fleſh of the Peace offerings for thanksgiving ſhall be eaten the ſame day that it is offered; and nothing thereof left untill the morning. A ceremony uſed (ſaith one) to ſignifie that publike Feaſts ſhould not bee ſuperſtitiouſly continued, and kept long under the colour of Religion. For God loveth not idle banqueting and prodigall ſpending, although he allow graciouſly what is fit for the occaſion. Mariage feaſts therefore in ſome places, according to the equity of this Law, are reſtrained to one day, or two dayes, and not more. So of other lawfull occaſions of meetings. A ceremony (ſaith another) made in wiſedome by God; leſt if the fleſh ſhould have ſmelled by longer keeping, Religion might ſo have beene vile in the eyes of tickle perſons. Happily alſo (ſaith the ſame perſon) to reſtraine vaine glory, which would have ſhewed in ſacrificing often, with ſmall charge, if the meate might have been kept ſalted, and ſo offered againe for a glory.

Calvin.

Verſ. 16. Verſe 17. Verſe 18. 6. But if the ſacrifice of his offering be a vow, or a free offering, it ſhall be eaten the ſame day that he offereth his ſacrifice: and ſo in the morning the reſidue thereof ſhall bee eaten. But as much of the offered fleſh as remaineth unto the third day, ſhall bee burned with fire. For if any of the fleſh of his Peace-offerings be eaten in the third day, hee ſhall not be accepted that offereth it, neither ſhall it bee reckoned unto him, but ſhall be an abomination: therefore the perſon that eateth of it ſhall beare his iniquity. That is, the ſinne for which hee offered, ſhall ſtill remaine and not bee forgiven. The fleſh then of the firſt ſort, muſt bee eaten the ſame day, and this of the ſecond ſort in two dayes, none might bee eaten the third day, but (if any remained) burned. A ceremony (ſay ſome) fore-telling and fore-ſhewing, that this outward worſhip of God by ſacrifices, and ſuch ceremonies, ſhould have his being no longer, than unto the reſurrection of the Meſſiah, which was on the third day. Others make uſe of this ceremony thus, even to learne thereby, that the taking hold of Chriſt and his benefits, is not to bee deferred and put off, but ſpeedily and quickly to be done, whilſt time ſerveth and opportunity is offered: for behold (ſaith Chriſt) to day, and to morrow I caſt out devils, and the third day, &c. Luke 13. 32. that is, a ſhort time I have yet to goe on with my Miniſtery, and then I ſhall be ſlaine. So the phraſes, to day, and to morrow, ſignifie a ſhort time, and therefore when this Law allotteth but one day to eate the one ſort, and but two at the uttermoſt for the ſecond, well may wee learne by it, that whileſt by the preaching of the Word, the fruit and benefit of Chriſt is offered, we ſpeedily take hold and deferre not, leſt the time elapſe, and wee finde the doore ſhut againſt us. This point hath beene handled before.

7. Others divide all time in three dayes (as it were) and the firſt day they make from Adam to Chriſt; the ſecond, from Chriſt to the Judgement; and the third, ever after. In theſe two firſt dayes, the gate is open to true penitent ſinners, that come when they are called, without putting off from day to day, but theſe two dayes neglected and ended, there is no more ſacrifice for ſinne, no more mercy, no Chriſt, nor comfort any longer, but a fearefull expectation of Judgement, and eternall death for ever. More particularly every man and woman may bee ſaid to have three dayes; The firſt, of youth till age come; The ſecond, of age till death come; and in theſe two dayes there is mercy offered; but the third day is after death, and then no helpe: As here on the third day no offering was accepted, but the ſin remained unpardoned and not forgiven. All theſe applications by godly men, tending to our good, are agreeable to the proportion of faith, and we may be bettered by them.

Verſe 19. 8. In the 19. verſe &c. You have another law of uncleanneſſe growing by touching, For the fleſh, (ſaith your Chapter) that toucheth any uncleane thing ſhall not be eaten, but burnt with fire, &c. Againe, if any eate of the fleſh of the Peace-offerings that pertaine to the Lord, having his uncleanneſs upon him, even the ſame perſon ſhall be cut off from his people. Moreover, when any toucheth any uncleane thing, as the uncleanneſs of man, or an uncleane beaſt, or of any filthy abomination, and eate of the fleſh of the Peace-offerings, which pertaineth unto the Lord, even that perſon ſhall bee cut off from his people. A man would thinke, that rather this fleſh of the Sacrifice repreſenting Chriſt, ſhould ſanctifie all things that it touched, than bee defiled by any thing, ſo that it might not be eaten. But the ceremony aptly teacheth, what it was intended for, if any marke it. For as it was meant, it ſheweth that Chriſt ſanctifieth and bettereth none, but ſuch as take hold of him by a true faith: to others, if they touch him, he is uncleane (not in himselfe, who ever is holy and pure, the immaculate Lambe of God) but accidentally, he is hurtfull by reason of their want of faith, and prophaneneſſe according to the Scripture; Wee preach Chriſt crucified; to the Iewes a ſtumbling blocke, to theGrecians fooliſhneſſe: but to them that are called of both ſorts, wee preach Chriſt, the power of God, and the wiſedome of God. And that the uncleane toucher of this ſacrifice was to bee cut off, it taught them the puniſhment of unreformed hypocrites, and ſtill doth ſhew what ſhall bee the end of thoſe that touch Chriſt, that is, beare his Name and are called Chriſtians, uſe his Word, come to the Sacraments, and yet, as the Pſalme ſaith, hate to be amended: ſurely, they ſhall bee cut off; their end ſhall bee deſtruction, and they ſhall periſh eternally. Ever therefore let the prayer of David bee in our mouth, and uttered from our heart, O knit me faſt unto thee, that I may feare thy Name. Let us joine inward truth to outward ſhew: For the Lord loveth truth in the inward parts. Abſalon, Ananias and Saphira, Iudas, &c. had their uncleanneſſe, and how ended they?

Cha. 15. 3, 20, 21.

hold

1 Cor. 1. 23. Eſay 8. 14. Rom. 9. 33. Luke 2. 34. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Pet. 2. 7. Pſal. 50. 17. Pſal. 51. 6.

9. The forbidding to eate the fat, was a ceremonie, that even at home in their houſes continued them after a ſort in the exerciſe of Religion. For ſtill they remembred the Law, and obeyed the ſame. It alſo (as I have noted before) preached unto them figuratively, that for God (if he ſo appoint) all the ſweet pleaſures of this world, riches, honours, friends, and whatſoever elſe, being as the fat, pleaſing are delightfull, and forſaken, forborne, refuſed and left. A leſſon never enough learned, though often repeated; ſo cleave our hearts to this earth, and this fatneſs thereof. But pray often, and pray heartily with S. Auguſtine, that the Lord would vouchſafe to give us what he requireth, and then require what he pleaſeth. He is ſtrong though wee bee weake; and can make us as contentedly leave them, as ever we received and injoyed them.

Verſe 23, 24. 25.

Nunquam ſatis dicitur, quod nunquam ſatis diſcitur. Da quod jubes, & jube quid vis. Aug.

10. The forbidding of them to eate the blood alſo, as before hath beene noted, ſignified unto them that the Lord abhorreth cruelty in every childe of his; and will have them merciſull, pittifull, gentle, &c. In the 30. verſe, The bringing of the ſacrifice with his owne hands, and not ſending it by others, taught humility and duty to God, taught that every one muſt live by his owne faith, and not by anothers; and may ſerve us now, to ſee how fooliſh an error it is in Popery, to give another his Beades to ſay them over for him that day, &c. The heaving of it up, was a figure of the lifting up of Chriſt upon the Croſſe. So was alſo the lifting up of the Brazen Serpent. Some have made it a figure alſo of his exaltation after death and Hell conquered; of which the Apoſtle ſpeakth, when he ſaith, Wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name above all names, that at the name of Ieſus every knee ſhould bow, &c. That is, hath highly exalted him, and given him authority and power, and rule, whereunto all ſhall bee ſubject, men, women, and creatures whatſoever: Little thinking of any earthly ſcraping with the foote, at the word of Jeſus, when neither word, deed, nor thought yeeld him reverence due to him. Popiſh elevation of their conſecrated Cake was never thought of in this heaving: and therefore vainely do they uſe this proofe. The ſhaking of it to and fro foure wayes, Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, ſhadowed the ſpreading of that lifting up of Chriſt; that is, of Chriſts death and paſſion throughout all the world, by the preaching of the Goſpell.

Verſe 30. Verſe 32. Iohn 12. 32. Numb. 2. 8, 9. Phil. 2. 4. Verſe 34.

11. Laſtly the breſt and the ſhoulder were the Prieſts, and ſo they were admoniſhed to be as breſts and ſhoulders to the people. Breſts for counſell and direction in all their affaires: ſhoulders, to beare up the burthen of care and labour for them, to under-go croſſes and troubles in government for them, and for them to reſt, as it were, and leane upon, in all their woes of heart, and agonies of mind whatſoever. A profitable meditation for all faithfull Miniſters ever, thus to be, as the Lord ſhall inable them, to their ſeverall flockes in this world. And as worthy a meditation againe for the people, to increaſe love, and ſingular love in their hearts, towards their Paſtors for their worke ſake, even for this uſe of them in all their diſtreſſes, and occaſions whatſoever. A godly Paſtor is a breſt of ſweet comfort in adverſity, and a faithfull ſhoulder to leane upon for ever, and to ſupport both us and ours, when without him we ſhall fall fearefully, and peradventure eternally. Happy are the people that have them, and God worke in their hearts to make much of them. In the 37. verſe, ſee a ſhort rehearſall of all the ſorts. Theſe are ſome of the chiefeſt things in this Chapter.

Verſe 37.

CHAP. VIII.

The Contents of this Chapter.

IF you turne to the 28. Chap. of Exodus, you ſhall finde the moſt of this Chapter there explayned; and therefore a briefer touch may ſerve here. It containeth the Sacrifices and Ceremonies uſed at the conſecration of Aaron and his Sonnes into the Prieſts office, and fitly followeth upon the other Chapter, becauſe after ſacrifices appointed, the next care is for Prieſts to offer and uſe them according to appointment. For uſe and benefit to our ſelves; Firſt, let us note, that this office of holy Prieſthood was not of man, nor from man, but the Lord Almighty first instituted and ordained it by his owne expresse commandement: then (being ordained) he confirmed the honour and reputation of it, by that great miracle of the budding of Aarons rod; and he very severely and fearefully punished the contempt of it in Corah and his company, whom the earth opening swallowed up with their wives, children, and families, and all their goods. Upon Ieroboam also and Vzziah, for incroching upon it. And the Law was sharpe and generall: If any stranger whatsoever (not called to this office by God) approch the Altar, he was to dye. The reasons why the Lord thus precisely appointed these Priests, and would not leave it to every man, to performe this office, were these and such like. First, it was to be knowne, that not every man, no, not any man. But the man Christ Jesus could appease Gods wrath, satisfie his justice, and take away the sinnes of the world, reconciling us to God, and putting us in assurance of eternall life. This could not bee figured out better, than by secluding all the whole Hoste of Israel from this Office, and chusing but Aaron and his sonnes as Types of Christ, this onely able Priest to doe (as I have said) and therefore they onely were chosen, and so by such ordinance the majesty, authority, and (if wee may so speake) the propriety of Christs office resembled and shadowed. Secondly, God was ever the God of order, decency and comlinesse, and therefore in his Church would have all things done accordingly, not enduring any to bee an invader of another mans right, an intruder of himselfe into another mans office, and a busie body out of rule, out of order. Certaine men therefore are appointed, and they onely shall doe it. Others if they meddle, being strangers, because not called, shall die the death, as you heard before. Thus hath hee also in the new Testament established a Ministery, and given some Apostles, some Evangelists, some Pastors and Doctors for the building up of his Church, &c. Hee also decreed, that the contempt of these, is the contempt of him; and then judge you, first, or last, what punishment will ensue. In neither Old nor New Testament can wee find the Popish Priesthood ordained to sacrifice for the sinnes of quicke and dead. For this is to deny the perfection of Christs one oblation, and that there is no remission of sinnes, seeing the Scripture saith, Where there is remission of sinnes, there is no more offering for sinnes, &c. Heb. 10.18.

Verſe 1, 2. Exod. 28.

Numb 17.8.
Numb.16 32.
1 King.13.4.
2 Chron.26.19.
Numb.4.15.
Heb.5.4.

Ephes 4.12.
Luke 10.16.

Heb.10.18.

Verse 4.

2. So Moses did as the Lord commanded him, and the company was assembled at the doore of the Tabernacle of the Congregation. Obedience in Moses the head and chiefe, obedience also in the people under him, doe offer us here a good example. Such mutuall agreement in great and little, to come together to the Tabernacle to understand further of Gods will, O, how commendable in it selfe, how acceptable to God, how profitable for others that shall behold and see it! Would God any thing might smite our hearts, to come to Gods house diligently! Certainely the praise of it will endure when wee are dead, and the blessing of such zeale, upon our childrens children. Banish then ungodly whisperers to the contrary, with all their deceitfull and damnable perswasions: and hee that hath an eare let him heare what God will say to his soule. Let him speake as that good Samuel was taught to speake: Say on Lord, for thy servant heareth.

1 Sam.3.9.
*Vers.*5.

3. Then Moses said unto the company, This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded to doe. Nothing but Gods Commandement doth Moses offer unto them. For he well knew Gods will onely, in his owne house must bee the rule. Our owne heads were never the best heads to follow; and for God, hee knoweth our mould too well, to give that swinge unto us. If wee will preach his will hee hath a blessing, and if wee teach our owne fancies, he will with his breath blow away both us, and our idle fancies. Wee offering then but his will to his people, and by a plaine course of teaching, according to their capacities, making that appeare to them, as many as are ordained to eternall life shall beleeve in time, to our unspeakable comfort, and their eternall good; and such as must perish (if any such bee in our flocke) even in those also, wee shall bee a sweet savour to God, because wee have onely delivered to them, what wee received of God, and not abused them, with any mans traditions that cannot save.

Acts 13.48.
2 Cor.2.15.
1 Cor.11.23.
Verse 6,7.
Verse 10.
Verse 12.
Verse 13.
Rom.13.12.
What ground Popish greasing hath here, judge you, the Apostles words also remember, protesting that whosoever was circumcised, became a debter to the whole Law to keep it, *Gal.*5.2. So, so, &c.
In Christo nihil (sinistrum, sed omnia dextra.
Matth.15.34.

4. And Moses brought Aaron and his sonnes, and washed them with water, and put him the coat, and girded him with the girdle, &c. Of all these ceremonies reade what hath beene noted in the 29. Chapter of Exodus. The Tabernacle (a type of heaven, *Heb.*9.2. *Chap.*2,11,12,24.) anointed, to signifie that heaven is the sanctified place, for perpetuall and eternall rest, unto all the sonnes of Gods Elect, before the foundations of the world were laid. Hee powred the Oyle upon Aarons head, so in him, who was a figure of Christ, shadowing out the fulnesse of the Spirit upon Christ, *Psal.*44. and Esay 61. He put also coats upon Aarons sonnes, &c. They were a figure of the Church, which by faith eateth also of the sacrifice of Christ, being made partakers of his merit as well as the Priests. Their garments figured out the graces and gifts, wherewith the beleevers in Christ are adorned and beautified. Casting away the workes of darkenesse, and putting on dayly more and more the deeds of light. The lap of Aarons right eare, and his sons thumbes of their right hands, and the great toes of their feet are anointed to represent that in Christ there is no left, but all right; to shew, that that his blood should make blessed them on his right hand; and to teach that such as be his chosen, have their eares touched and made right, hearing with profit good things, and sincerely abhorring to heare evill. Their works also shadowed by by their right thumbe, are holy, honeſt and good: and in their ſeverall vocations, they painfully and carefully walke, ſhadowed by their right toes anointed with the blood.

5. Upon Aarons ſons, Moſes did but ſprinkle the anointing oyle, which before was ſaid hee powred upon Aaron, ver. 12. ſo plainly ſhewing, that in Chriſt the ſpirit ſhould be without meaſure, and upon his ſervants in meaſure, we all receiving of his fulneſſe according to his good pleaſure, ſome more, ſome leſſe.

6. That which is ſaid of abiding at the doore of the Tabernacle day and night, ſeven dayes, and ye ſhall keep the watch of the Lord, that ye die not; is thought to have ſhadowed that watch, which all our life long (noted by the ſeven dayes) we keep in avoiding ſin, and working righteouſneſſe, as the Lord ſhall enable. Which indeed may be called the watch of the Lord, being a holy, Chriſtian, and happy watch. The ſeventh day we ſhall be free, fully ſanctified, and delivered from this vale of miſery, to keep an eternall Sabbath in heaven to our endleſſe comfort. Thus briefly for order ſake of this Chapter, the chiefe points, (as I ſaid) having beene touched in the 29. of Exodus.

Verſe 13. Iohn 1.14,16. Col. 1.19. Verſe 35. Conſecratio ſeptem dierum ſignificat totius hujus vitæ tempus ordinatum divinitus, ut in eo conſecremur in ſpirituales ſacerdotes. Ante ſeptimum diem non plene ſanctificatus ſacerdos: ſic nec pii ante mortem.

CHAP. IX.

THe conſecration of Aaron and his ſonnes being fully ended, in this Chapter is ſhewed how they entred upon their office, and began to doe the duties thereof. Aaron offering the foure principall ſacrifices; to wit, the burnt offering; the ſin-offering; the peace-offering; and the meat-offering. And for uſe unto us. Firſt, it may be obſerved, that Moſes, who was never conſecrated himſelfe, doth conſecrate and inveſt Aaron into his office, that ſo men might learne to aſcribe all to God, the authority I meane, and effect of the outward ſigne.

The contents of this Chapter

2. In that Aaron is commanded to offer aſwell for himſelfe as his people ver. 7. The Apoſtles to the Hebrews reaſoneth that the Leviticall Prieſthood was weake, and but a ſhadow of a ſtronger, namely, of Chriſts. For ſuch an High Prieſt (ſaith he) it became us to have, as needeth not daily, like thoſe in the Law, to offer up ſacrifice firſt for his own ſins, and then for his peoples, &c. Reade the 7. Chap. ver. 26,27. Alſo the fifth Chap. ver. 3. He was alſo here in a figure of Chriſt, not that Chriſt had any ſins of his owne, but that ours were ſo laid upon him, and he ſo made ſatisfaction to God for them, as if they had been his owne. Surely, ſaith the Prophet, He hath born our infirmities, and caried our ſorows, yet we did judge him as plagued and ſmitten of God, and humbled: That is, we judged evill, as though he were puniſhed for his owne ſins, and not for ours. But he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was broken for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed.

Verſe 7. Eſay 53.4,5.

3. When it is ſaid, Aaron lift up his hand and bleſſed the people, ver. 22. Wee muſt conſider, that herein he was plainly a figure of Chriſt, who onely can bleſſe, being onely the ſeed of Abraham, In whom all the Nations of the world are bleſſed, and in whom (ſaith Saint Paul) The Father hath bleſſed us with all ſpirituall bleſſing in heavenly things: As with the bleſſing of reconciliation to himſelfe, reputing us now juſt for his Son Chriſt, and Sons and heires of all heavenly benefits: with the bleſſing of his Spirit, whereby we walke in his calling, being guided and governed thereby in the ſame: with the bleſſing of acceptance of all our workes (though full of imperfection and weakneſſe;) and with this great bleſſing, That all adverſity becommeth a helpe to us, to draw us to heaven and eternall reſt, &c. How are we bound to love ſuch a God? Let us often fall into the reckoning of it, and riſe up in thankfull ſpeeches and thoughts, as others of his ſervants have done before us, upon the ſame cauſe; Namely, Saint Auguſtine, whoſe words are theſe: Minus te amat, O Deus, qui aliquid tecum amat, quod non propter te amat. O God, he loveth thee not as much as he ſhould, who loveth any thing elſe but thee, which he loveth not for thee. Saint Cyprian: Diſce nihil Deo præponere, quia Deus nihil tibi præpoſuit; Learne (O man) to preferre nothing in thy love before God, becauſe he hath preferred nothing before thee in his love; No, not the life and blood of his owne deare and onely Sonne. Saint Bernard: Quando ignorabam, me inſtruxit; quando errabam, me reduxit; quando ſteti, me tenuit; quando cecidi, me erexit; quando veni, me ſuſcepit, &c. O quid retribuam? When I was ignorant, he inſtructed me; when I erred, he reclaimed mee; when I ſtood, hee held mee up; when I fell, he raiſed me; when I came to him, he received me, &c. O what ſhould I give to the Lord for theſe favours? &c.

Verſe 22. Gen. 18.18. Epheſ. 1.3.

4. And the glory of the Lord appeared to all the people. And there came a fire out from the Lord, and conſumed upon the Altar the Burnt-offering, and the fat; which when all the people ſaw, they gave thankes and fell on their faces: (or, they gave a ſhoute for joy.) Thus did the Lord pleaſe to confirme both that manner of worſhipping him, by ſuch Sacrifices and the Miniſtery of Aaron, and his Sonnes now choſen and conſecrated to that office. The like credit hee gave to Elias his Prophet, When fire from heaven came downe, and conſumed the burnt-offering, and the wood, and the ſtones, and the duſt, and licked up the water that was in the ditch. Which the people alſo ſaw, and there fell againe upon their faces, and ſaid: The Lord He is God; the Lord He is God. Againe, When Solomon had made an end of praying, fire came downe from heaven, and conſumed the Burnt-offering, and the ſacrifices, and the glory of the Lord filled the houſe. Such mercy in the Lord to meet with mans weakneſſe, is duely and carefully to bee thought of, all peeviſh frowardneſſe to be inſtructed and to beleeve, (as a moſt unfit thing for any that looke for heaven) to be abandoned and caſt away; Leſt after all meanes in mercy offered to winne us and ſave us, we be deſtroyed with ſome fearefull judgement, that all the world may talk of us for our obſtinacy. This (I ſay) becauſe even this gracious God is the ſame to man, by his holy Word and infinite favours, ſeeking us as loſt ſheep to be wonne unto him. Let us reade, let us ſearch, let us day and night endeavour to know his holy will; and then conſtantly and faithfully walke in the ſame, whilſt we have a day to live. This fire from heaven did not plainlier confirme them, than the evidence of his Word doth all thoſe at this day, that will looke into it. And as well may we at this day fall upon our faces, and give a ſhoute in thankfulneſſe for the great glory of the ſame, in the Miniſtery of his ſervants endued with great gifts of knowledge and power to open and expound the ſame unto us, as they did here or in other places, for ſuch viſible teſtimonies of his approbation. God ſtrike us and worke with us for his mercies ſake, that we may live and not die, praiſing and bleſſing his Name for ever, for his goodneſſe, Amen, Amen.

Verſe 23,24. 1 King. 18.38, 39.

2 Cor. 7. 1.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 13. HAving ſhewed in the former Chapter, by that miracle of fire from heaven, how hee accepteth of worſhip done according to his will; now in this, by a dreadfull judgement upon the two Sonnes of Aaron, hee ſheweth how hee abhorreth all preſumption of man, to ſerve him any other way. The ſinne and death of the yong men for their ſinne, is laid downe in theſe words, But Nadab and Abihu, the Sonnes of Aaron, tooke either of them his Cenſar, and put fire thereon, and put Incenſe thereupon, and offered ſtrange fire before the Lord, which hee had not commanded them. Therefore a fire went out from the Lord, and devoured them; ſo they dyed before the Lord. Their ſinne was then, that to burne Incenſe withall, they tooke not the fire from the Altar, of that which came downe from heaven, and was preſerved by the diligence of the Prieſts, till the captivity of Babylon, but other fire, which therefore is called ſtrange fire, becauſe it was not fire appointed and commanded. Which fault in mans eyes may ſeeme to have excuſe, and not to deſerve ſo fearefull a puniſhment. For they were but yet green in their office, and ſo of ignorance might offend, being not yet well acquainted with the nature of their office.

Verſe 1, 2.

Locum ſacrum etiam ingreſſi ſunt, quod ne ſummo quidem ſacerdoti licebat. niſi ſemel in anno. Tremelius.

Againe, of forgetfulneſſe they might offend, not remembring or thinking of the matter, as they ought. Thirdly, there was no malice in them, or purpoſe to doe evill, but wholly they aymed at Gods ſervice, with a true meaning, although in the manner they miſſed ſomewhat. But all theſe, and whatſoever like excuſes, were as fig leaves before God, vaine and weake to defend them from guiltineſſe, in the breach of his commandement, and notwithſtanding any ſuch, they are thus fearefully and dreadfully devoured with fire from God, that they then, we now, and all fleſh to the end, might learne and ſettle in our hearts, two things.

First, with what ſeverity the Lord challengeth and defendeth his authority, in laying downe the way and manner of his worſhip, not leaving it to any creature to meddle with, but according to preſcription and appointment from him; Content he is, that men ſhall make lawes for humane matters, concerning their worldly eſtate in this earth, as ſhall be fitteſt for the place where they live: Laws againſt murder, theft, oppreſſion, &c. but for his Divine worſhip hee onely will preſcribe it himſelfe, and what he appointeth, that muſt be done, and that only, or elſe Nadab and Abihu, their puniſhment expected, that is, Gods wrath expected, in ſuch manner as he ſhall pleaſe. The point is good to be carefully marked, and would God it might take full place in all hearts! The Scriptures are plaine, and they would bee ſeriouſly thought of, You ſhall not doe every man what ſeemeth good in his own eyes, but I command, what I command, that, that, ſhall ye doe, &c. Reade all the Chapter. Looke in every Chapter of the booke of Judges, how ſtill, ſtill they were delivered over to their adverſaries for tranſgreſſing in this behalfe. All the dayes of Ioſhua, ſaith the Story there, and all the dayes of the Elders that out-lived Ioſhua, which had ſeen all the great workes of the Lord that he did for Iſrael. But when that generation was gathered to their Fathers, there aroſe up another generation, which neither knew the Lord, nor yet the works which he had done for Iſrael, and theſe did wickedly in the ſight of the Lord, and ſerved Baalim, &c. Wherefore the wrath of the Lord was hote againſt them, and he delivered them into the hands of ſpoilers, &c. And whither ſoever they went, the hand of the Lord was ſore againſt them, &c. Mark with your ſelfe, the vehemency of theſe words, and the greatneſſe of this wrath for worſhipping him after any other wayes then he himſelfe hath appointed.

Deut. 12. 8. &c. Deut. 4. 10.

Iudg. 2. 7, 10. 11, 14, 15.

In

In the eighth Chapter Gideons Ephod made without warrant, did it pleaſe? O marke the words; All Iſrael went a whoring after it, which was the deſtruction of Gideon and his houſe. He and his houſe periſhed for worſhipping God otherwiſe, than God himſelfe appointed. This is no ſmall puniſhment, if God give a heart to thinke of it fruitfully. The like you reade of Saul, who would offer Sacrifice contrary to the Word, Hee and his houſe alſo periſhed for it. Ieroboams golden Calves ſet up without warrant, and worſhipped without warrant, overthrew him and all his alſo. I exalted thee, ſaith God to Ieroboam, and made thee Prince over my people Iſrael, &c. But thou haſt not been as my ſervant David, which kept my Commandements, and followed me with all his heart, and did only that which was right in mine eyes. For thou haſt gone and made thee other gods, and molten Images, to provoke me, and haſt caſt me behinde thy backe: And therefore behold, I will bring evill upon thy houſe, and will cut off him that piſſeth againſt the wall, (every male, even to the Dogges, as the marginall note hath) and I will ſweep away the remnant of thy houſe, as a man ſweepeth away dung till it be all gone. Judge then in your ſecret thought, hearing theſe words, whether it be a ſmall matter, to worſhip God otherwiſe than he in his word appointeth to us.

Iudg.8.27.

1 Sam.15.23.

1 Kings 14.7,8, 9,10.

It is a very memorable thing, that is written of Gregory, ſometimes Biſhop of Rome, (the beſt of all that followed him, the worſt of all that went before him) how hee in a moſt grievous plague deviſed and appointed theſe ſupplications to Saints ſet downe in the Letany, having for it neither commandement, nor example, nor any warrant in the Word, but all to the contrary very plainly, and that ſo God revenged this wicked boldneſſe, as in one houre, foureſcore of thoſe that ſo prayed and rehearſed thoſe ſuffrages, ſuddenly fell to the earth, and breathed out their laſt breath. Thus the Lord liketh devices of men in his ſervice. Why ſhould not all fleſh bee reſolved then, that In vaine doe we worſhip God, teaching for doctrine, mens precepts? And conſequently, of the impudency of that ſpeech of a Popiſh Doctor, that, God reſpecteth not ſo much what we doe, as with what minde we do it. The untaught Romanes underſtood more truth than this man, when being moved to receive Chriſt into the number of their gods, they anſwered, that every god muſt needs be ſerved according to his will, and not according to his worſhippers will; and therefore ſince they underſtood that Chriſt would have no fellowes, but would bee worſhipped alone, they muſt needs either forgoe all their other gods, which they might not doe, or worſhip him otherwiſe than his will was, which would offend him. So they reſolved to reject him, which turned to the deſtruction of them in the end. Diſcamus Deum, ex ipſius voluntate honorare, &c. Let us learne to worſhip God according to his will, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome, &c. Cyprian telleth us, We muſt follow Chriſt, and he that doth not ſo, is not a Prieſt of God, but walketh in darkneſſe. Paul ſaith, He delivered to them what he had received, &c. He condemned all voluntary worſhip. A learned Profeſſor in Paris affirmed boldly, that mens precepts turne people from the truth, and ſeduce the hearts of the ſimple: therefore (ſaith he) God tyeth us ſo ſtrictly to his Word without adding or diminiſhing, &c.

Note.

Mat.15.9.

Cypr. lib.2. Epiſt. 3. contra Aquarios.

1 Cor.11.23.
Col.2.22,23.
Vatablus in annot. in Deut.4.

2. But doth not a good intent and meaning prevaile with God, albeit the thing be not expreſly warranted? Your ſelfe judge, by that which you ſee here, and in many other Scriptures, making this the ſecond of the two things, I ſaid were here to be obſerved. Had Nadab and Abihu the Sonnes of Aaron here, any ill meaning towards God, or did they of malicious purpoſe offend him, and procure their owne deſtruction? No, you muſt needs thinke their intent was good, but becauſe they ſwarved from the Word, that good intent ſerved not. The words out of Deuteronomie cited before, are not, you ſhall not do ill in your owne eyes, But you ſhall not doe that which ſeemeth good, good I ſay, and I pray you marke it, you ſhall not doe that, but ſhall keepe you to my Commandement. Be it never ſo good then in my conceit, that is, be my meaning never ſo good, it profiteth not, neither ſhall excuſe Gods deſtroying wrath, more than it did here theſe Sonnes of Aaron. There is a way (ſaith Solomon) that ſeemeth good to a man and right, but the iſſues thereof are the wayes of death. Such aſſuredly are all will-worſhips, not grounded upon the Word, but upon mans will, and good intent. They ſhall excommunicate you. (ſaith our Saviour Chriſt) Yea, the time ſhall come, that whoſoever killeth you, will thinke that he doth God good ſervice. What then? Shall his ſo thinking excuſe his bloody murder? Ioſeph had no ill meaning, when he prayed his father to change his hand, and lay his right hand upon his elder ſonnes head. What ill meant Ioſhua when he wiſhed Moſes to forbid thoſe that prophecied? Michas mother, when according to her vow, ſhee made her Sonnes two Idols. Saul when hee ſaved alive the ſheepe of the Amalekites, &c. Peter when he bade Chriſt, his Maſter, to pitty himſelfe. The Diſciples of Chriſt, when they forbad little children to come unto him, when they would have commanded that fire ſhould come from heaven, &c. Peters meaning had no hurt in it, when he forbade Chriſt to waſh his feet: with a number like places in Scripture: yet you know no good intent was accepted in theſe caſes. No more, no more ſhall it ever be, when it is not agreeing to the Word, which onely is a Chriſtian man and womans true and perfect guide. Let therefore theſe things take place with us, and never wreſtle wee againſt the Lord, for hee is too ſtrong for us, and his will muſt ſtand, not ours. O why

Good intent.

Deut.12.8.

Prov.14.12.

Iohn 16.2.

Gen.48.18.

Numb.11.28.
Iudg.7.3.
1 Sam.15.15.
Mat.26.22.
Luke 18.15.
Luke 9.54.
Iohn 13.8.

ſhould it grieve me to be ruled by his word, ſeeing it is ſo ſure a way for me to walke in? Or why ſhould any Teacher deliver to me, that which hee never received of God, to be delivered to his people? if they crave obedience, why ſhould they be angry, that I pray to have it ſhewed out of his Word, whom onely I muſt obey? Hee hath preſcribed a forme of ſerving him, that forme he will accept and bleſſe with eternall peace; all other formes hee will abhorre and puniſh.

Nadab and Abihu preacheth ſo unto us and all fleſh. They wiſh us to take heed by their harme: God is in other things full of patience, but in this he is full of wrath, and his authority, to appoint his owne worſhip, he will not endure it to be taken from him by any man. Let Popiſh whiſperers then, make good out of Gods Word latine prayers, when we underſtand no latine; calling upon Saints that heare us not; Flying from ſufficiency of Chriſts Paſſion, to our owne merits, croſſings and creepings, with a thouſand deviſed toyes, and we will obey them. But if they cannot, let them leave us to ſerve God, according to his word, that wee may bee accepted.

3. You may alſo well note it here, that Nadab and Abihu, were two of Aarons eldeſt ſons, which after their father, ſhould in his place have ſucceeded him, yet there is no mercy with God, to ſtay his judgement, when they will not be ruled by his Word. No prerogative therefore of any man, ſhall ſave him from wrath, if he thus offend, but the eldeſt ſhall die, as well as a younger, the richeſt as well as the poorer, a great man or a woman, as well as a ſmall. There is no regard with God of theſe things. But the ſoule that ſerveth him according to his owne will revealed in his Word, that is regarded, and ever deare unto him, &c. Build we not therefore, upon any Titles, and ſo ſwarve from the rule laid downe unto us. If ſo little a tranſgreſſion cannot bee qualified any way, by any circumſtance: O what will bee their caſe one day, that ſo many wayes ſtray from the Law of God, and almoſt in no one jott of their worſhip, have any warrant? Thinke with your ſelfe more of this matter, and meditate further of it at your times.

Verſe 3. 4. Then Moſes ſaid unto Aaron, This is that the Lord ſpake, ſaying; I will be ſanctified in them that come neere me, and before all the people will I be glorified. You can conceive what woe it was unto Moſes, to ſee this end of two of his Brothers Sonnes, but he muſt ſtoope to God, and ſo he doth, telling Aaron the truth of the fault, and ſo conſequently defending God, that hee did but juſtly. Indeed, (ſaith he) we muſt confeſſe that this is that we were told before, how God will be ſanctified in them that come neere unto him: That is, how he will have his Law obeyed and followed in his worſhip, and not any way elſe, how though he uſe the Miniſtery of man, yet no man living muſt be wiſer than he, to ſwarve from the forme appointed, and to follow his own liberty, but man muſt thinke it his wiſdome, to doe as God biddeth, &c.

Verſe 3. 5. But Aaron held his peace (ſaith the Text) that is, was ſo aſtoniſhed with the fearefulneſſe of it, that hee had no ſpeech, but all amazed and ſhaken with the woe of it, held his peace. Hee howled not out with any unſeemely cryes, neither uttered any words of rage and impatiency, but meekly ſtooped to Gods will, kiſſed his Rod, and held his peace. If thus Aaron in ſo great a judgement, how much more we, when our friends die naturally, ſweetly, and comfortably, ſo that we may boldly ſay, Non amiſimus, ſed præmiſimus; We have not loſt them, but ſent them before us, whither we our ſelves hope to follow. Lay to this heavy hearted father, yet ſilent and patient, the example of old Father Eli the Prieſt, to whom when Samuel had related ſuch fearefull things, quietly he anſwered; It is the Lord, let him doe what ſeemeth him good.

1 Sam. 3. 18.

2 Sam. 15. 26. The example alſo of David, who in his diſtreſſe very bitter and heauvy, yet notably ſaid, Let the Lord doe to me as ſeemeth good in his eyes. Theſe are moſt excellent patternes for us to follow in all our croſſes and griefes, not forgetting that golden ſaying of Iob, We have taken good things at Gods hands, and ſhall we not take evill? O yes, yes, The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh, and ever, ever, bleſſed be his Name for all. The fiſh groweth greater in ſalt waters, and the Lord for his mercy make our faith, patience, and comfort in him great, in the ſalteſt and bittereſt waters of this world, Amen.

Iob 2. 10. Iob 1. 21.

6. Obſerve here againe with your ſelfe, the ſtrange and admirable change of theſe worldly matters, in the turne, (as we ſay) of a hand. For but yeſterday, (as it were) Aaron and theſe Sonnes of his had a famous and glorious conſecration, into the greateſt and higheſt dignity upon earth (nothing under the Sunne being more glorious than that Prieſthood in thoſe dayes.) And how may you thinke his heart rejoyced to ſee, not onely himſelfe, but his Children, (which Parents often love more than themſelves) ſo bleſſed and honoured? But, O change now ſuddaine and fearefull! O fickle fading comfort that man taketh hold of in this world, whatſoever it be, if worldly! Theſe Sonnes ſo lately exalted and honoured to their old Fathers ſweet and great joy, now lye deſtroyed before his face, to his extreame and twitching torment. And how? Not by any ordinary and accuſtomed death, but by fire from Heaven, a ſore and dreadfull judgement. For what alſo? Even for breach of commanded duty duty by the Lord, all which doubled and trebled the Fathers ſorow, as it did in David when his ſonne Abſolon dyed not an uſuall death, but in rebellion and diſobedience againſt his King and Father. You remember his paſſion then uttered; O my ſonne Abſolon, my ſonne, my ſonne Abſolon; would God I had dyed for thee, O Abſolon, my ſonne, my ſonne. He conſidered the cauſe wherein he dyed, and the manner how he dyed; to a Father ſo kinde as David was, both of them full of woe and ſorow. Let never therefore any proſperity in the world puffe us: for we little know what to morrow day may bring with it; The glaſſe that gliſtereth moſt, is ſooneſt broken; the rankeſt corne is ſooneſt laid, and the fulleſt bough with pleaſant fruit is ſooneſt ſlit, having more eyes upon it, and moe ſtones caſt at it, than all the other boughs of the tree. Pleaſant wine maketh wiſe men fooles, and fooles often ſtarke mad. Thouſands fall at the left hand, but ten thouſands at the right. Multos frangit adverſitas, ſed plures extollit proſperitas: Many (ſaith S. Bernard) are cruſhed with adverſity, but more are puffed up by proſperity. Lacertus Milonem perdidit, ambitio Cæſarem. Nimis alter Naturæ, nimis alter Fortunæ credidit: Milo his ſtrong arme overthrew him, and Cæſar his ambition. The one truſted too much to Nature, and the other to Fortune. As a Spiders web, ſo is a mans greatneſſe in this world, ſoone wiped away with a little whiske. Often therefore thinke of S. Iohns words, Love not this world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love this world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in this world, (as the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eyes, and the pride of life) is not of the Father, but is of the world. And this world paſſeth away, and the luſt thereof: but he that fulfilleth the will of God, abideth for ever.

2 Sam.18. 33.

Pſal.91.7.

Bernard.

1 Iohn 2.15,16 17.

7. But was Aaron hated of God, becauſe this fearefull hap fell upon his children? No, no. Therefore learne to ſtay your haſty nature from judging raſhly, and be not caried away by a pratling world. Ever remember what croſſe is laid here, not upon a meane man in the Church, but upon him that had the higheſt place, that was a Figure of Chriſt, and accepted of him, and meditate of it much with your ſelfe for your comfort, &c.

8. Note in the 4. and 5. ver. the manner of buriall, not in the Hoſt, but without in the fields, prepared and kept for ſuch uſe. Where was then the ſuperſtitious conceit of Churches and Church-yards? Their friends and kinſmen cary them forth to buriall, and the cuſtome is ſtill commendable amongſt us.

Verſe 4,5.

9. After Moſes ſaid unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and Ithamar his ſons; uncover not your heads, neither rent your clothes leſt ye die, and leſt wrath come upon all the people; but let your brethren, all the houſe of Iſrael bewaile the burning which the Lord hath kindled. In this caſe it was not lawfull for Aaron and his ſons to mourne, leſt they ſhould ſeem to prefer their carnall affection to God his juſt judgement. And it is a great caveat to all ſuch as deſire to governe themſelves in an acceptable courſe. Of mourning for the dead, and the manner of Nations differing in the ſame, more may be ſaid in the nineteenth Chapter.

Verſ. 6.

10. But the people here might mourne, that it might ever be learned, noted, and remembred how neerely and truly the griefe of the Miniſter ſhould touch a loving and godly people. But where, where is ſuch a people? God forbid but we ſhould aſſure our ſelves, there is a portion that doth thus, although all that reape the labours as well as they, doe it not. And let it be a faithfull Miniſters comfort ever, that moe love him, and ſuffer with him in any griefe of his, than hee knoweth of. I know what I ſay, and my ſoul bleſſeth the Lord for my experience in this point. My infirmities are many, and my weakneſſe to doe ſervice hath ever been very great, I know it, I acknowledge it in humility before him that knoweth, whether I lie or no. Yet hath it been his good pleaſure, ever ſince I was firſt a Miniſter, to ſhew himſelfe ſtrong in my weakneſſe, and to give a gracious bleſſing to my poore labours in divers places, that I might well learne it is all one to him to work with ſmall gifts and with great. And touching the thing I ſpeake of, I have found this love in ſome for my onely Miniſtery ſake, that I have been advertiſed by writing, of matters much concerning mee, and to this day could never learne and know who they were. The Lord reward it ten thouſand fold into their boſomes if they be living, and upon theirs if they be gone to God. Thus much breaketh from mee in this place out of a thankfull heart to God, and to them, and for a true comfort to my brethren in this Land, lighting upon theſe my weake labours, that beſides their owne experience, they know alſo mine, that howſoever all are not kinde and loving where we live and labour, yet more are our faithfull friends than wee know. And therefore let us goe on through all reports good and bad, and through all croſſes great and ſmall: doe the worke whereunto we are called, and reſt upon him that will never faile us nor let us fall.

2 Cor.6.8.

11. And they did according to Moſes commandement, ſaith the Text. So will the rod of God waken his people and worke obedience. For which cauſe the Lord often layeth it where he loveth. Not willing, as himſelfe ſaith, the death of a ſinner, but rather that he may turne and live.

Verſe 7.

Ezech.18.32.

12. Thou ſhalt not drink wine nor ſtrong drinke, thou, nor thy ſons with thee, when ye come into the Tabernacle of the Congregation, leſt ye die: this is an Ordinance for ever throughout your generations. That ye may put difference betwix the holy and the unholy, and betwixt the cleane and the uncleane:

Verſ. 9,10.

11. And that ye may teach the children of Israel all the Statutes which the Lord hath commanded them by the hand of Moses. Sobriety is a vertue fit for all men, but especially for Ministers of the Word and Sacraments. Thus much in this Law the Lord shadowed, and we may truly learne: wine was forbidden them absolutely, when their turn came to minister, but now, that law bindeth not. Yet to sobriety with wine, and without wine, we are ever bound. Let a Minister (saith the Apostle) be no drinker of wine, meaning, disorderly and unfitly, for otherwise Timothy is exhorted to drinke a little wine for his stomacks sake, and his often infirmities. To all men the same Apostle saith againe, Be not drunk with wine wherein is excesse, but be filled with the spirit, &c. The reason added, that thus they might be sound and sincere Interpreters of the Law. For as Augustine saith, Vinum est blandus dæmon, dulce venenum, suave peccatum, quo qui delectatur, non facit peccatum, sed totus est peccatum, Wine is a flattering devill, a sweet poyson, and a delightfull sin, which whosoever delighteth in, doth not only sin, but is all sin. For the chiefe office of the Priests was not to kill beasts and other sacrifices, but to have knowledge, & to teach the people the difference betwixt the true God and false Idols, betwixt holy things and prophane, betwixt right prayer & wrong, concerning the Law, sinne, and grace, &c. according to the prophet Malachies speech, The lips of the Priest shall keep knowledge, and they shall seek the law at his mouth, for he is the messenger of the Lord of Hosts. But here is no thought in this Law of any proud and Anabaptisticall separation of our selves from the fellowship of our brethren, and the unity of the Church, under a colour that we are holy and others prophane. Beware we ever of such doctrine, and such Teachers.

1 Tim. 3. 3.

Chap. 5. 23. Ephes. 5. 18.

Malach. 2. 7.

Vers. 12. 13. Then Moses said to Aaron and unto Eleazar and Ithamar his sonnes that were left, Take the Meat-offering, &c. This is added to comfort and strengthen the shaken hearts of Aaron and his living sons, who might by this strange punishment have been driven into doubt, whether ever the Lord would be pleased, that they should meddle again with the Sacrifices. And we see therein a sweet and gracious God, who maketh not his promises void to all, for the faults of some, but only teacheth to beware by other mens harmes. We must therefore cleave to our calling, and even so much the more painfully goe forward therein, by how much wee see others punished for ill doing. There is a certaine reward with God for well-doing, as there is punishment for the contrary. Be taught therefore (I say) and schooled, but never be discouraged and feared from imposed duty.

Verse 17. 14. And Moses sought the Goat that was offered for sin, and loe it was burned, therefore he was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar the sons of Aaron, which were left alive, &c. Part of this Goat being a sinne-offering, should have been eaten, I meane the shoulder and the breast allotted to the Priest, but it was all burned contrary to the Law, for which Moses was justly offended, having seene so lately Gods wrath upon the other fault. The answer of Aaron you have in the 19. verse, in effect and sense, as if he should have said, I confesse and acknowledge the ordinance of God is to be kept, and we are to eate with joy of the parts allotted unto us of the Sacrifice for sinne, (the blood was not brought into the Tabernacle of the Testimony) but how could I eate with joy in so heavy and wofull a case of my children? Compelled therefore with the greatnesse of my griefe, I did what I did, &c. At which answer, saith our Chapter, Moses was content, so bearing with his infirmity, considering his great sorow, but not leaving an example to forgive them that malitiously transgresse the Commandement of God. And as Moses is said to have stayed his anger, so you see the Lord himselfe did, not punishing again this fault. It layeth open unto us the great kindnesse of our gracious God, of whom the Psalme saith, He is full of compassion and mercy, long suffering and of great goodnesse. He will not alway be chiding, neither keepeth he his anger for ever. He dealeth not with us after our sins, neither rewardeth us according to our wickednesse, &c. Secondly, you may see here how these ceremoniall lawes gave place to necessity, as David also in necessity did eate the Shew-bread, which was otherwise unlawfull for him to doe: and Ezechias admitted to the Passeover those that were not clensed. But for Morall lawes there is no dispensation for corporall necessity, but a constant course must be held in obeying them. For it is not necessary that I should live, but it is ever necessary that I should live righteously. Lastly, in that Moses admitted a reasonable excuse, we may learne to abhor pride, and to doe the like: Pride, I say, which scorneth to heare what may be said against the conceit we have once harboured. A modest man or woman doth not thus: but even for his servant or his maid, holy Iob had an eare, and did not despise their judgement, their complaint or grief, when they thought themselves evill entreated by him. The example of God himselfe is in stead of a thousand, who both heard and accepted of Abimelech his excuse for taking away Abraham his wife, I know (saith he) that thou diddest it even with an upright minde, and therefore I kept thee also that thou shouldst not sin against me, &c. Shall the Lord be thus sweet, and we so dogged, so churlish, so sterne and sowre, that no excuse may serve for a thing done amisse, if once we have taken notice of it? Beware, beware, and remember your owne frailty well. A stubborne frowardnesse hath hurt many, sweet gentlenesse and curtesie never any; but though wicked men were unthankfull, yet our gracious God was pleased. And thus much of this Chapter.

Verse 19.

Verse 20.

Psl. 103. 8, 9, 10.

1 Sam. 21. 6. Mar. 12. 4.

Iob 31. 13.

Gen. 20. 6.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

IT belonged to the Priests Office in those dayes, not only to teach true Doctrine to the people, to pray for them, and to offer sacrifices appointed by God, but also to discerne and judge betwixt things cleane and uncleane. Therefore having hitherto spoken of Sacrifices, and the Ceremonies thereof, now Moses commeth to speake of uncleane things, namely, men and women uncleane, meates uncleane; houses, garments, mariages, and such like, directing the Priest how he should judge in this behalfe truly, neither make that uncleane which was not, nor that cleane which God made uncleane. This Chapter which now you reade, speaketh of uncleane meates, beasts, fishes, and birds. Whereof, before we consider, according to the Text, we may all remember the state of this matter, concerning the difference of meate, as in the Scripture we are taught. First then in Genesis, you reade thus, Behold, I have given unto you every hearb bearing seed, which is upon all the earth, which hath life in it selfe, every green hearb shall be for meate, and it was so. No flesh as yet then granted to man. In the 9. Chap. you reade thus, Every thing that moveth and liveth, shall be meate for you, even as the green hearb have I given you all things. But flesh with the life thereof, I meane with the blood thereof shall ye not eate, &c. Here is flesh also granted as well as hearbs, and onely the blood thereof excepted. But now in this Chap. of Leviticus, many sorts of meats are forbidden as unclean. Was this perpetuall? No, it was but ceremoniall, and for a time. Wherefore the Apostle was bold to say in his time, and for all times after, Let no man condemne you in meat and drinke, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new Moon, or of the Sabbath dayes, which are but a shadow of things to come, but the body is Christ. And whereof a shadow? First, these things shadowed the duty of man, to depend upon the word and will of his God in all things, yea, even in his meat. Secondly, how carefull he ought to be to seek cleanesse of body and soul before the Lord, and to avoid the contrary, which by the fall of our first parents, was, and is so crept into all their posterity, as now our very righteousnesse, that is, our best things, are but as a foule, filthy, stained cloth. Thirdly, how God had made a difference betwixt them, and all other the Nations of the world, reputing them in his mercy as cleane, and all other people as uncleane, that is, accepting them for his people before all others. Remēber the vision of Peter in the Acts; and the meaning of it, namely, that Peter should not forbeare to goe to the Gentiles, in respect of any former difference betwixt Jew and Gentile, for this should be to call that unclean, which God had made cleane. God now had broken downe, by his Sons Passion, the partition wall, and Gentiles as well as Jewes should be accepted, the Ceremony of those meats clean and uncleane, which shadowed out this partition and difference, now having his end, and being finished. Kill and eate (now) of all meats; and goe and teach (now) all Nations: Call not any meat (now) any more uncleane, for all is cleane to them that are cleane: And put no difference (now) betwixt Cornelius and a Jew, for all are cleane: that is, In every Nation he that feareth God, and worketh righteousnesse is accepted. In the Gospell therefore there is now no difference of meats, but all meat free with thanksgiving. That which goeth into the mouth defileth not the man, but that which commeth out of the mouth, that defileth the man: saith our true teacher, Christ Iesus, and we must marke it. His Apostle (after him) S. Paul, I know and am perswaded through the Lord Iesus, that there is nothing uncleane of it selfe; but unto him that judgeth any thing unclean, to him it is unclean. Whatsoever therefore is sold in the shambles, eat ye, and ask no question for conscience sake. Nevertheless, there shall come in the latter dayes some that shall forbid to marry, and command to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving. For it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. But these forbidders and commanders, are departed from the faith: give heed unto the spirits of error, and doctrine of devils. They speak lies through hypocrisie, and they have their consciences burned with a hot iron. O note these things earnestly with your selfe, and acknowledge Gods goodnesse in thus plainly forewarning us long before, of that which we see in these dayes fulfilled. Vnto the pure (saith the same Apostle) all things are pure: but unto them that are defiled and unbeleeving, nothing is pure, but even their minds and consciences are defiled, &c. That cōmandement to abstaine from things offered to Idols, and from blood, in the Acts of the Apostles, was but for a time, and is ended also in Christ, or else it was no Ceremoniall Law. But you think peradventure with your selfe, may not the Church in these dayes also forbid some kind of meat, as flesh, &c? The answer is, that cause and circumstance must bee considered, civilly the Magistrate may, that is, for the good of the Common-wealth, in maintaining Mariners for service, in helping the young breed of Cattell, that victuall may be more cheape, by sparing the eating for a time, &c. but not for Religion and Conscience, as if one meate pleased God more than another: for (as you heard) Peters sheet with all sorts of meats confuteth that; many other Scriptures also, which you may reade your selves over. But what if one pretend the Magistrates law, being indeed Popish, and making difference of meats for Religion? you must needs confesse such an one is an hypocrite, and therefore odious to God, who hateth hypocrisie, and cannot bee mocked. And what if he doe it indeed for Religion? Then hee denyeth in effect that Christ is yet come, and

The summe of the Chapter.

Gen.1.29.

Gen.9.3,4.

Goloss.2.16.

Esay 64.6.

Deut.14.1,2.

Act.10.15.

Ephes.2.14.

Act.10.13.
Mat.28.19.
Titus 1.15.
Act 10.35.
1 Tim.44.
Mat.25.11.
Rom.14.14.

1 Cor.10.25.
1 Tim.4.1, &c.

Tit.1.15.

Act.15.20,
Act.10.
Col.2.20,&c.
Rom.14.17.
Heb.13.9.

and hath taken away this Ceremoniall Law of uncleane meates, and as the Apoſtle ſaith of Cir-
Gal.5.2. cumciſion, that if we be circumciſed now, Chriſt profiteth nothing; ſo is it true alſo, that if wee yet hold a difference of meats for Religion and Conſcience, Chriſt to us is no Chriſt, and we ſhall periſh. What if I ſincerely, in regard of the Magiſtrates civill law, for the good of the Land, forbeare to eate any fleſh upon times made by Law, yet well knowing my liberty in Chriſt? You doe well, and would God the Land had more of theſe, that would obey godly Laws according to their meaning, and abandon all ſinfull riot and liberty, contrarie to them: God would bee pleaſed, the Magiſtrate pleaſed, our Countrey profited, and wee knowne to God and man for people of government and order.

Gen.1.31. 2. But how did God in this law of his, call that uncleane which himſelfe had made and ſaw to be good, as all his workes were good? Surely in reſpect of creation, and of themſelves, nothing is evill or unclean, but in reſpect of uſe forbidden, as God hath libertie to forbid at his good pleaſure, without impeachment of himſelfe, or of his creature: even as the tree of knowledge of good
Gen.2.17. and evill, hurt not of it ſelfe, or the apple, but the tranſgreſſion after commandement, the thing in Mat.15.11. it ſelfe good, but the uſe forbidden. If you ſay, that which goeth into the mouth defileth not, and Rom.14.17. therefore not the Apple; it is true, for the Apple defileth not, but the breach of Gods commandement, You ſhall not eate. So that ever it was true, The Kingdome of God is not meat or drinke, &c.

3. How were beaſts called uncleane in the time of Noah, when they entred into the Ark, before this law was made, except of themſelves & their nature they were ſo? I anſwer you truly, they were then ſo called, not in reſpect of any fault in themſelves, or of eating, but in regard of the ſacrifices, from which God did then exclude them, as here he did from being eaten. And as well might God then at his good pleaſure, chooſe what he would have offered for ſacrifice, and what not, as now what he would have eaten, and what not, all being his, and his prerogative to doe with his own as he pleaſeth. As now therefore that which was forbidden to be meat, is called unclean, yet not ſo in nature, but in regard of uſe therof forbidden; ſo then, was that called unclean which was forbidden to be ſacrificed, and not for any evill nature at the creation, but only becauſe of the prohibition of uſe that way. Now let us a little look at the words of the Chap.

1. In the Chap. you ſee three ſorts, namely, Beaſts of the land, Fiſhes of the Sea, and Fowles of the aire, and theſe are diſtinguiſhed or noted by names, and by ſignes. The names that are here ſet down, we are not ſo wel acquainted which ſome of them, becauſe in thoſe Eaſt parts there were divers creatures not known to us in theſe countries, by their names. The ſign therfore is the beſt note for us, and in the beaſts they are theſe, dividing the hoofe, and chewing the cud, for ſo ſaith the Beaſts. Verſe 3. Text, Whatſoever parteth the hoofe, and is clovenfooted, and cheweth the cud amongſt the beaſts, that ſhall ye eat. But if he did the one, and not the other, or neither, he was unclean: read the words your ſelf. You ſaw before that theſe were but ſhadows of other things. For doth God regard oxen
1 Cor.9.9. (ſaith the Apoſtle) & careth he for dividing or not dividing the hoofe, chewing or not chewing the cud, who made them all as they are, & could have made them all of one ſort, otherwiſe than hereby to reſemble better matters? No. And therefore conſider with your ſelfe, that in this difference of beaſts the Lord ſhaddowed out a difference of men & women in this world, ſome clean and ſome uncleane. The cleane beaſts reſemble the godly and elect, which being cleanſed by faith in Chriſt from their ſins, and ſanctified by the Spirit of God, earneſtly & fervẽtly love the word of God, heare it, learne it, embrace it, night and day meditate of it, labouring to keep it by framing all their words and works, counſels and actions according to it. The uncleane beaſts re-
2 Pet.2.22. ſemble the wicked and reprobate that deſpiſe the word, and live as the Dogge that runneth to his vomit, and the Swine that walloweth in the mire; that is, wickedly, filthily, and beaſtly. This taught Ireneus lib.5. Irenæus many years ago, & both for his antiquity & worthines let us mark his words; They that have the pledge of the Spirit, (ſaith he) and ſerve not the concupiſcence of the fleſh, but ſubject themſelves to the Spirit, & reaſonably behave themſelves in all things, rightly of the Apoſt. are called ſpiritual, becauſe the Spirit of God dwelleth in them. And they that caſt away the councell of the Spirit, and ſerve the pleaſures of the fleſh, living unreaſonably, and unbridledly, following their ſinfull deſires, having no working of the Spirit, but living as dogs or ſwine, rightly hee cal-
Ier.5.8. leth carnall, becauſe they ſavour of nothing but the fleſh. And the Prophets, for the ſelfe-ſame cauſe, compared them to brute and unreaſonable beaſts, as to fed horſes neighing after their neigh-
Pſal.49.20. bors wives, &c. David alſo in the Pſalme; Man being in honor hath no underſtanding, but is cõpared to the beaſts that periſh, &c. Now all theſe things are done Figuratively, to note clean & uncleane perſons as before. For they that have a true faith, and a good life, by meditating in the word, are ſuch as divide the hoofe, & chew the cud, & they are clean. Such as do neither, or but the one, are unclean, as he that beleeveth in God, but liveth not wel, or he that liveth in an outward honeſty, but beleeveth not rightly; hee alſo that doth neither live well, nor beleeve well, all theſe are unclean. The Jews (ſaith this father) may be ſaid in ſome ſort to chew the cud, becauſe they read the Scriptures, but they divide not the hoofe, becauſe they beleeve not in the Son of God, as well as in the Father. To this effect Irenæus. Others have by clean beaſts parting the hoofe, noted the true Teachers of the word, wᶜʰ divide the ſame aright, the Law & Goſpell, Precepts & Promiſes, &c.

They

They againe, say others, may bee all called cleane, dividing the hoofe, who doe not beleeve in great or in grosse, but discerne and distinguish things; as Christ, and Moses; Nature and Grace; Truth and false-hood, &c. Not beleeving every Spirit, but trying the Spirits whether they be of God or no. Things may not be taken ever litterally: And againe, wee may not bee too bold with Mysteries and Allegories, leaving the letter. but a true wisdome is to be praied for, and used in both. He that is spirituall (saith the Apostle) discerneth all things, That, for dividing: and be wise unto sobriety, That for being too busie in divising Mysteries. For chewing the cud, they may be said to doe it, and so to be clean, who meditate of that they heare and learne out of Gods Booke, and often repeating it in their minds, ponder it in their heart, as is said of the blessed Virgin. A thing much commended in the Scripture, as in the first Psalme, Blessed is that man that meditateth in the Law of God day and night. Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be alway acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer. Isaac went out to meditate, &c. Commended also by the Fathers; Meditatio Dei dulcis est, To meditate of God is a sweet thing, saith S. Augustine. Meditatione periculа agnoscimus, oratione evadimus, And by meditation, saith S. Bernard, we know perils, by prayer we avoid them.

Iohn 4.1.

1 Cor. 2.15. Rom. 12.3.

Luke 2.19. Psal. 1.2. Psal. 19.14. Gen. 24.63. Deut. 6.7.

2. Your Chapter nameth many particulars, which were but curiositie to stand on. A few may bee touched for example sake. The Cony was uncleane, because hee cheweth the cud, and divideth not the hoofe. And by this, some have thought, were figured out such men and women as lay up their treasures in earth, because the Conies digge and scrape, and make their Berries in the earth, whereas the Scripture teacheth us not to doe thus, but to lay up our treasures in heaven, where no Theefe, nor Moth, &c. These men and women are uncleane, and God will have none of them.

Verse 5.

Matth. 6.19.

3. The Hare was also uncleane for the same cause, because hee cheweth the cud, but divideth not the hoofe. The Hare is a very fearfull creature, and therefore by him figured out fearefull men and women, despairing of grace, and shrinking from God, fearing crosses and losses, and forsaking faith. Such persons are uncleane, and excluded out of the Kingdome of God. Reade Apoc. Chap. 21. But the fearefull and unbeleeving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and Sorcerers, and Idolaters, and all lyers, shall have their part in the Lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.

Verse 6.

Rev. 21.8.

4. The Swine was uncleane, Because he parteth the hoofe, but cheweth not the cud; and of their flesh they might not eate, nor touch their carkasse, &c. Tertullian saith, Herein was figured such uncleane persons as be good for nothing, but to bee slaine. For if you consider what a creature the Swine is, he never looketh up to heaven, but hath his mouth ever in the earth and mire, caring for nothing but his belly: he serveth not to ride upon, as doth the Horse; to till the ground, as doth the Oxe; to give milke, as doth the Cow; to cloath us with his fleece, as doth the Sheepe; to watch by night for us, as doth the Dogge, &c. but he is onely nourished for the knife, and his death hath use, his life hath none. Such ought not men and women to bee, and if any bee such, they are uncleane. God would admonish the Jewes by this figure, and still wee may learne by it, to be no Swine, no Hogges, no filthie mirie creatures, wallowing in sinne and uncleanesse, without regard and feeling, loving the earth, and looking ever on the earth, rooting in it all the day, and feeding the belly with all greedinesse, nourished onely to the slaughter, and profiting no way whilest we live. A profitable meditation for Gods chidren, that they may so continue, and a profitable remembrance to others not yet called, that they may become his children. A good caveat to rich Cormorants in this world, who never profit any, till they die, with all the wealth they have. A knife therefore for the Hogge, that we may have puddings, and death for such wretches, that the Common-wealth may have use of their bagges.

Verse 7, 8.

5. From the Land, your Chapter commeth to the Water, and so from the beasts, to the fishes therein, verse 9. shewing what was cleane, and what uncleane, what might be eaten, and what might not. But fishes in particular are not named as the beasts were, and the fowles afterward are, because the most part was unknowne to the Jewes, having little use or none of fish, and few waters, or none but Jordan for fresh fish. Sea-fish was sold nearer the East, and came not to the Jewes much, where they were. By the markes therefore, God describeth them, and saith, Whatsoever hath finnes and scales in the Waters, in the Seas, or in the Rivers, them shall ye eate. But all that have not, &c. they shall be abomination unto you. By the finnes some have thought was figured faith; and by the scales, good and honest workes. These two make a cleane man or woman acceptable to God. Both hee or shee that wanteth both, or either, is uncleane. Faith without workes, is not a true faith, but a dead; and beautifull workes without faith, are the blossomes of hypocrisie, and please not God.

Fishes.

Verse 9, 10, &c.

Iames 2.17.

6. After Land and Water, Moses commeth to the Ayre, and sheweth what Fowles therein are cleane and uncleane. Wherein you may note the great mercy of God, in that most of these uncleane Fowles are indeed odious to our nature, and we eate them not, whereas hee might have restrained them from those that they loved and liked. So good is hee in all things, and carefull not to lay heavy burthens upon us. Some good Fowles are yet restrained, that man might learne learne Temperance and Obedience: For Gluttony and Exceſſe we are very prone unto. Some have conſidered the nature of every Fowle, and laboured to learne ſomewhat for amendment, but it is good to be ſober in theſe things: as for example, by the Eagle which flyeth high, they have noted mounting mindes to be a fault, and to make men uncleane, as indeed they doe, howſoever the meaning was thus to teach by making the Eagle uncleane. By the Goſhauke, men that prey upon their weaker brethren and neighbours, and gripe them ſo as they kill them, or undoe them. By the Vulture, men that delight too much in warres and contention. By the Kyte, cowardly men that are yet devourers as they can. By the Ravens, unnaturall parents, that forſake their children; unkind friends which ſhrinke away; ill husbands which provide not for their families, &c. By the Oſtritch, painted hypocrites and carnall men, that have faire great feathers, but cannot flie, &c. By the little Owle and the great Owle, ſuch as love darkneſſe, and flie the light; ſuch alſo as are unſociable with men, and love ſolitarineſſe too much. By the Seamew (which liveth both on land and water) ſuch as will be ſaved both by faith and workes, partly by the one, and partly by the other, &c. Such Ambodexters alſo as the world hath ſtore of, holding with the Hare, and running with the Hound, fire in the one hand, and water in the other, two faces under one hood, &c. By the Hawke, ſuch as are kept for others harme, whereof alſo there are too many. Wee muſt have an Oliver for a Rouland, and ſo we maintaine ſuch as the earth is weary of, and their wickedneſſe ſhall be our deſtruction, if not of our whole houſe and poſterity. By the Cormorant, all greedy covetous perſons, &c. By the Lapwing you may take occaſion to remember what the Poet ſaith, which is thus:

Fowles. Vers. 13.

The Seamew. The Swan. The Heron. The Lap-wing.

Verſe 14. Verſe 15. 1 Tim. 5. 8. Verſe 16. Verſ. 17.

Verſe 19.

Ovid. Metamor. Fab. Septima.

THEREUS King of Thracia, married Progne daughter of Pandion, which Progne having a ſiſter called Philomela, after certaine yeares, deſired her husband that either ſhee might goe to her ſiſter to ſee her, or have her ſiſter fetched unto her. The King willingly yeelded, hee would fetch her ſiſter to her, and to that end went to ſea, came to her father, and his father in law, obtained leave for her to goe with him for a while to her ſiſter. But ſee, as they were in their journey, his uncleane heart burned in luſt towards Philomela his wives ſiſter, and by force abuſed her, cutting out her tongue after, that ſhee might not tell. Thus dumbe and ſpeechleſſe he brought her home to her ſiſter; who amazed at this change in her, and not knowing more than her husband the King would tell her; in ſtead of joy, had great ſorrow in her ſelfe, no way now able to talke with her ſiſter, and to have any comfort in her. But Philomela getting a needle and ſilke, expreſſed thereby, as by writing, how her husband had abuſed her body, and cut out her tongue, as he brought her to ſee her. Then Progne all enraged with fury and wrath, caſting which way to bee revenged of him for this odious fact, caught at laſt her little ſon by him, and ſlew him, crying upon her, Mother, Mother, and claſping about her necke with kiſſes as long as he could, making meate of him for the King his father. The King liking the meat well, called for the little childe that he migh have ſome of it; when ſhee with a fierce looke told him, hee had his childe in his belly, for the good he had done to her ſiſter, and with that ſhewed him the head, flinging forth from him as faſt as ſhee could; he ſo aſtoniſhed, that he could not tell what he did. Then (ſaith the Poet) they were all three, to avoid further miſchiefe, ſuddenly changed into three Fowles; Progne, this cruell mother, into a Swallow, who carryeth red upon her breſt, to note the bloodineſſe of her breſt; Philomela her ſiſter, into a Nightingale, who keepeth in the woods, as aſhamed of the villany done to her by the King, and lamenteth it in the night by her ſorrowfull ſong: The wicked King, who was cauſe of all, into a Lapwing, which is delighted with dung and filth, to note his foule and filthy minde to his ſiſter in law, hath a long bill, wherewith he ſtriketh and hurteth other birds, noting his cruell knife, that cut out his ſiſters tongue, feathers upon the head like a crowne, noting his place in dignity, that he was a King, whereupon the Verſes were made:

Rex fueram, ſic criſta probat, ſed ſordida vita
Immundam è tanto culmine fecit avem.

The Lapwing then, may ſhadow out all foule uncleane minds, full of cruelty and luſt, full of cruelty alſo to worke the concealment of luſt, as you ſee in David, firſt luſting, and then killing. But thus to follow Allegories I forbeare, onely noting thus much, to ſhew you learned mens applications of theſe things for our good. And ſurely, although I dare not ſay, that by theſe uncleane birds and beaſts, thus much was meant, yet thus much is moſt certaine, that who ſo have theſe qualities noted in the nature of them, they are as certainly uncleane to God, as theſe birds were for uſe of meat to this people. Let us ever therfore abhorre ſuch ſpots, that wee bee cleane to the Lord, who is cleanneſſe it ſelfe.

2 Sam. 11.

8. Something is ſpoken in your Chapter of creeping things, whereby men have noted the uncleanneſſe ſhadowed of ſuch as minde earthly things too much, and particularly by the Weaſell, deceitfull perſons, becauſe the Weaſell is deceitfull and crafty. By the Mouſe, ſuch as live on others labours, and are unprofitable themselves. By the Want or Mole, such as are blinde and ignorant.

others

Lastly, that which is spoken of uncleanesse, growing by the touch of these things, and that which you reade of washing and breaking earthen vessels, you must ever take it so, that God stood not so much upon these Ceremonies, as to teach his people hereby inward truth, and cleanesse of heart, ever fit for such as belong to him, and without which none can be accepted of him. At this therefore (as I said) we must carefully ayme, that we may be holy, as our heavenly Father is holy. And among all uncleanesse, beware of that which is noted by such things, as goe upon their pawes, namely, to professe the Gospell for lucre sake. For where that is the cause, the effect will faile with the cause, and whilest it continueth and faileth not, yet is it hatefull to God for his ground. The Gospell must be loved to gaine heaven, and not to purchase the earth by it, further than God shall please to cast it as an adjacent by his promise, * Seeke first the Kingdome of God, and the righteousnesse thereof, and all these things shall be cast unto you. Saul his Armour was not fit for David, neither could he march well against Goliab, till he had put it off, no more shall men, clogged with earthly cares, couragiously and effectually goe against Satan, that proud Philistim, that would destroy them. Peter walked above the water, and Peter began to sinke under the water. Whilest thou lovest God unfainedly, thou walkest, and when thou lovest the world thou sinkest. Love not the world therefore, neither the things that are in the world, &c. saith S. Iohn, 1 Ioh. 2. 15. For it flattereth us to deceive us, it allureth us to slay us, and it lifteth us up, that it may throw us downe with a greater fall. But meditate further with your selfe what inconstancy in earthly things you have seene: and let this suffice of this Chapter.

Vers. 2, 4, &c Verse 27.
* Matt. 6. 33. 1 Sam. 17. 39. Mat. 14. 29, 30.
An vas Deum? ambulas super mare; amas seculum? absorbebit te, &c. Aug de verb. Dom. Serm. 13.
Vna hæc placida, solida, firma, & perpetua securitas, si quid in rebus humanis sublime et magnum videtur, oculis ad cœlum elatis, infra conscientiam tuam facere, possis gloriari. Cypr. Ep. ad Donat.

CHAP. XII.

IN this Chapter is contained the manner of womens purifying in those dayes after child-birth; a thing not to be forced upon us in manner and forme, as it then was used, no more than other the Ceremoniall Lawes of Moses. Yet is the Law, and honesty of nature, still and ever to be observed amongst all people. And for as much as in the Gospell there is mention made of the blessed Virgins purifying, let us briefly consider this custome, and labour to draw fit profit from it to our selves.

Luk. 2. 22.

1. Moses is willed to speake unto the children of Israel, that is, to the men, that when a woman hath brought forth seed, &c. Why should the Law for women bee published and given to the men, and not rather to the women themselves? Surely to the end that men might joyne also with the women, in a care to see it observed and kept according to the Commandement. As the lawes of Kings and Princes, which belong to labourers, are given to Lords to see them executed and performed. Let men note, what trust God reposeth in them, to see that their wives keepe his Lawes and Ordinances, and let them never be unfaithfull to one of such love towards them, to trust them, and of such power to punish their breach of trust. Let women note it, to move their hearts to thinke both of their husbands charge, and their duty. They may not breake a Ceremony, but their husbands shall be shent for it, much lesse the substance of all Religion and obedience to God. What a happy grace then, for both to joyne together, and either to strive to excell other in carefull keeping of Gods lawes?

Vers. 1, 2.

Note.

2. By this Ceremony of Purification, the Jewes (and in them all men) were put in minde of their naturall corruption, and led (as it were by the hand) to the remedie against the same, Christ Jesus. Of the former, plainly speaketh David in his Psalme, when he saith, Behold, I was shapen in wickednesse, and in sinne hath my mother conceived me. Before our birth, and in our birth we are uncleane, and from our uncleanesse, our mothers also become uncleane. Which very plainly and truely confuteth that grosse errour of Pelagius, denying the propagation of sinne from Parents to children, and affirming that by imitation onely, and not originally wee became evill. But if the birth were cleane, the mother by birth should not become uncleane, as this Ceremony of purifying did shadow that she was. God would therfore have all men know what they are by Nature and inheritance from their Parents, and what by grace through the remedy provided, Christ our onely righteousnesse and purity. Also that God had rather have them never enter into the Church, than to enter with corruption unsorrowed for, and uncared for.

Psa. 51. 5.

Imitatione non origine.

1 Iohn 1. 8.

3. But why then was the Virgin Mary purified, since the Childe shee bare had no uncleanesse or corruption in him, being neither conceived nor borne in sinne, but the immaculate Lambe, and the Sonne of God? The Answer is, that although Christ in himselfe was not onely pure, but even purity it selfe, and the Virgin Mary his Mother was not indeed properly and directy subject to this Law, because shee conceived not by mans seed, of which the Law was meant, and Christ was Lord of the law: Yet for as much as it pleased him to take upon him the person of all mankinde, which was corrupt and sinfull, so, and in that respect both hee and the blessed Virgin became obedient to the law. Hee (saith the Apostle) that he might redeeme us from

1 Pet. 1. 19.

Mat. 12. 8.

Gal. 4. 5.

from the curſe of the Law, who were indeed ſubject to it, as alſo, by this his voluntary ſubmiſſion to it: Hee might take away, abrogate, and give an end to this Ceremony, ſo that now it is not needfull to preſent any children in the Temple with an Offering, as then was uſed, but all purity and cleanneſſe is to be ſought for in Chriſt Jeſus himſelfe onely, the body and truth of all theſe figures and ſhadowes in the Law.

Col.2.17.

Verſe 5.

4. A Queſtion againe may be asked, why the time of Purification was doubled in a woman-childe, to that it was in a man-childe? And anſwer is made by ſome, that it was in reſpect of a naturall cauſe in the body, which I leave. Others, becauſe in women there is more vice and evill than in man: A hard judgement and without any warrant, for who knoweth what is in either but onely God, I meane, the greatneſſe and full meaſure of evill? Thirdly, therefore it is anſwered, and with more probability, that it was, becauſe the woman was the beginning of our fall, deceiving her husband, when ſhe was deceived her ſelfe; and ſo drawing all her poſterity into the like fall and ruine with her. But the laſt Anſwer and beſt (as I thinke) is, becauſe a man-childe was circumciſed, and not the woman, therefore the puniſhment of being uncleane was leſſened in the Male, and doubled in the Female.

1 Tim.2.14.

Verſe 8.

5. The difference of offering allowed to the poorer ſort, very comfortably ſheweth the gracious care God hath of our poverty and mean eſtate, as alſo how little he paſſeth for any of our pompe and riches, accepting as well of two Turtles, or two young Pigeons, as of a Lambe, when ability ſerveth not to bring a Lambe. Let the due meditation hereof raiſe up our hearts, if we be poore, and pull downe our ſtomacks if we be rich: for the matter accepted with God, is not glory and pompe, but a true heart fearing to doe evill, and hungring to doe well, reſting in Chriſt, and in nothing elſe, as the true medicine for all our ſores, and moſt pleaſing Sacrifice for all our ſinnes. Riches are comfortable if God given them, and grace with them, but poverty is no miſery when we feare God.

6. Laſtly, concerning the uſe with us, we muſt well conſider, that although this Ceremoniall Law of Moſes be abrogated and gone, yet honeſty of Nature, and modeſty in women-kinde, is neither abrogated nor gone. Therefore, even ſtill we retaine in our Church a lawfull and laudable cuſtome among women, that they ſhall reſt a time after child-birth, to gather ſtrength againe in their houſes, witthout comming abroad, and when God ſhall enable them to endure the ayre, then to come to Church, accompanied with their loving friends and neighbours, there thankfully to acknowledge Gods great mercy to them, in both giving the ſafe deliverance, and bleſſing them with fruit of their bodies to their comfort. But ſee the difference of the Moſaicall Law, and this our cuſtome. There the woman was put apart by God, and ſo continued uncleane forty dayes upon a man-childe, and double upon a maide: With us, neither by God nor man is ſhee put aſide for any time certaine, but as the Lord ſhall give ſtrength, ſooner or longer, ſhee is at her liberty, yet ever obſerving womanly modeſty, as is moſt fit. There ſhee was to touch no holy thing, neither to come into the Sanctuary, till that time was out: with us ſhee may touch any thing, and come to the Sanctuary when ſhe will, with reſpect above ſaid: there, was a difference betwixt a man-childe and a maide; with us none, but both alike: there was a Burnt-offering, and a Sinne-offering; with us, neither the one nor the other: there, an atonement was made for her; with us, no ſuch thing: laſtly, there, ſhee was uncleane till all was ended, with us never uncleane at all. And doe we then retaine ſtill a Jewiſh purifying? Farre bee from us both untrue ſpeech and falſe judgement. Our cuſtome, you ſee, differeth greatly from this Jewiſh Ceremonie, and is nothing but a needfull thing in regard of weakneſs, a modeſt Ceremony in regard of woman-hood, and a Chriſtian duty in regard of mercy and comfort received, to come to the Church, and give thankes moſt humbly to God, that hath dealt ſo kindly and mercifully with us. Let us therefore love to be obedient to good things, hate to be contentious and troubleſome in a peaceable Church, and let modeſty ever make us eſteeme better of our Governours, than of our ſelves. There was never the thing ſince the world was made, which an evill heart and a lawleſſe tongue may not carpe at; but the Apoſtles words muſt rule the Apoſtles Schollers, We have no ſuch cuſtome, neither the Church of God. Women in womens matters may have authority to diſcerne what is fit, and why ſhould any immodeſt minde meddle with them, ſo much as to raiſe ſtirres, and breake peace in things eſtabliſhed by law, by honeſty, by modeſty, by long continuance, and all good approbation? I truſt what is paſt is dead, and will never revive againe. God make us thankfull for our Government and lawes, and for the happy peace both of Church and Common-wealth, and let us never bee the breakers of it. Amen, Amen. And ſo no more of this Chapter.

1 Cor.11.16.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIII.

The ſumme of the Chapter.

YOu have in this Chapter another kinde of uncleanneſſe ſpoken of, namely, the leproſie, a diſeaſe very fearefull and ugly: Whereof three ſorts are named, to wit, Of the body, of the garments, and of the houſe; for all theſe might bee infected and uncleane. And learned men are of opinion, that after ſome ſpeciall and peculiar manner, unknowne this day to us, the Jews were troubled and afflicted with this diſeaſe. For profit and uſe to us, when we reade theſe things (which is all my drift) thus we may better our ſelves, and gather good. Firſt, let us marke who were appointed Judges hereof, to tell when any man was infected with this malady, ſurely not Verſe 1. all the Levites, but Aaron onely and his ſons, who were Prieſts. By which, our Popiſh Teachers would gather an argument for their Auricular Confeſſion and Eare-ſhrift, that as theſe Prieſts were made Judges of this contagion of body, by viewing and looking on it, ſo they ſhould be Judges of the Leproſie of the ſoule, by hearing confeſſions of men and women, and judging of the qualities of their ſeverall ſinnes. But alas, it hangeth together as the ſand doth, the one having expreſſe warrant, and the other none. And if it were good to gather arguments in this ſort, wee might rather conclude the contrary, That for as much as Aaron and his ſons were not made Judges of any ſecret matter, but onely when it was broken out into plaine apparance of a ſwelling in the skin, or of a ſcabbe, or a white ſpot, &c. Therefore neither muſt theſe Romiſh Maſters meddle with hidden and ſecret things, as they doe, but onely with matters publike, and Verſe 2. publikely. Let this idle collection therefore of theirs goe, and wee truly and rightly learne by this, that herein was figured, not that Romiſh Prieſthood, but the pure and holy Prieſthood of our bleſſed Saviour, who doth ſee and know, handle and touch, regard and heale all our ſpirituall ſpots, as theſe Prieſts here dealt with this bodily infection. So that if we be uncleane wee cannot deceive him, but full well he ſeeth, and knoweth us to be ſo, he judging us ſo, putteth us apart for ſuch, and till ſorrow ſinking into our hearts for the ſame, wee repent and take hold of him by faith, that we may be healed by him, we never recover any health; and when we doe, then are we cured, and ſo pronounced by him to our eternall joy and comfort. Away therefore with our figge-leaves, for they cannot cover us: if I be a ſwearer, an uncleane liver, a drunkard, an envious perſon, a ſlanderer, or ſuch like, I am a Leper, a ſpirituall Leper, and Chriſt is Judge, whom I cannot mocke; he will never ſay I am cleane, till indeed I be ſo, and ſo without amendment of life, I muſt out of the Hoſt, that is, out of the Church and number of his choſen, to die for ever in my impurity. Thinke, thinke of it while you have time.

2. When you reade in the fourth verſe, of ſhutting up the party for ſeven dayes, and then to looke on it againe: you may note with your ſelfe, how greatly God hateth haſtie, raſh, and uncharitable judgement. A thing which many men and women, otherwiſe honeſt and good, are carried away withall, to their owne great hurt, not onely in ſoule, but in worldly reputation alſo, and to the bitter and biting diſcomfort of thoſe, whom they ought to love and judge well of. Nay, you may reaſon further with your ſelfe, thus: That if in a matter thus ſubject to the eye; as theſe ſores were, yet God would have no haſte, but a ſtay for ſeven dayes, and longer as occaſion ſerved, before any judgement ſhould be given that the partie was uncleane. O how much more doth he abhorre haſte, and love leiſure, in pronouncing of the hearts and thoughts of our friends and neighbours, which are not ſeene, nor ſubject to an eaſie cenſure? be admoniſhed therefore and bettered by this, as long as you live, in this matter, and you ſhall much pleaſe both God and man. The more to ſtrengthen you in this courſe, often remember what holy Fathers and vertuous men have done in their times. What doth Peace (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) in this Aug. in Pſal. 147. Pilgrimage of our mortality, wherein no mans heart can be knowne or diſcerned what it is? I will tell you (ſaith he) what it doth: It judgeth not of uncertaine things, it confirmeth not unkowne matters: It is more proane and readie to beleeve well of a man, then to ſuſpect evill. It grieveth not much, if haply ſometimes it erre by thinking well of one that deſerveth it not; but it feareth much to erre in thinking ill of one that deſerveth well. Quid perdo, ſi creda quia bonus eſt, ſi incertum eſt, utrum ſit malus? What loſe I, if I judge one good, when it is uncertaine that hee is ill? Although thou beware, for feare it be true, yet thou mayeſt not condemne him, as if it were true. This Peace requireth, and follow Peace and enſue it, &c. Saint Bernard againe notably: Beware ever to bee a curious ſcanner of other mens lives, or a raſh judge, although thou ſee ſomewhat amiſſe, but rather excuſe his meaning, if thou canſt not defend his act, as that he did it ignorantly, &c. And if the matter admit no excuſe, then ſay to thy ſelfe in thy heart, O it was a vehement and ſtrong temptation, and what would it have wrought in me, if it had aſſailed me, as it did him? Againe, there are none ſo ready to judge others, as they that never judge themſelves. But could that veyle be removed from their eyes, and they made to ſee themſelves, though they could live an hundred yeeres, and the Flood Jordan be turned into teares flowing from their eyes, they would thinke all too little to bewaile their owne ſpots, and never buſie themſelves with other mens. I have noted ſorrow, and I never saw so much as a step of detraction or condemnation of others in it,&c. Againe, as onely pride is enough to condemne a man, without any other vice with it; so is this sinne of judging. For by this the Pharisie was condemned. A wise gatherer of Grapes,gathereth but the ripe and good Grapes,and medleth not with the sowre and ill Grapes:and even a good man or woman noteth mens vertues, and speaketh of them, when a foole will be medling with their imperfections. Saint Chrysostome followeth also this way, and hath these words : As it is hard for one that is good himselfe, to judge another to be naught; so it is againe,as hard for one that is naught himselfe, to judge another to be good. Every man may by himselfe judge others. The Fornicator thinketh no man chaste; but the chaste man so easily suspecteth not the Fornicator. The proud man thinketh none to be humble:but the humble man thinketh none to be proud. It was Æsops speech, That every one hath a Wallet on his shoulder, and into the end that hangeth before him, putteth other mens actions, but his owne ever into the end behind him, and out of his sight: It was Tully his speech, That as every one is good himselfe,so he hardly conceiveth others to be evill. And contrariwise, how hardly evill persons doe thinke well of others; consider in them that could not beleeve that David sent his Messengers in love and kindnes, as he did, but rather as spies to some evill purpose, and thereupon they abused them as they did, by shaving their beards, and cutting their clothes : which lewd suspition turned to the overthrow of them and theirs, yea, of the whole Kingdome, that by such a punishment wee might ever learne to hate such a vice, as false suspition is. You see now the practice and doctrine of the wise, let it move you, let it smite you, let it better you till your death.

Dicito apud teipſum, vehemens fuit tentatio, quid de me illa feciſſet ſi accepiſſet in me ſimilem poteſtatem? Bernard. Notavi luctum, nec ullum in eo detractionis aut condemnationis veſtigium inveni.

Luk. 18.11.

Bern. Clim. Grad.

Chrysost. in Mat.

Cic. ad Q. fratrem. Vt quisque est vir optimus, ita difficilime esse alios improbos suspicatur.

1 Chron. 19.

3. In the seventh verse you have an example, how one quit and pronounced cleane, may yet be viewed after againe,and be found uncleane,which may thus profit you,to make you remember two judgements, the one of man, the other of God : By the former we may be cleared, and by the latter we may be condemned. Therefore ever look how all is in his eyes that knoweth all, and make peace with him by true repentance and amendment of life,little joying in mans judgment, who taketh me for a Saint, if this righteous Judge of all know me for a Devill. Let us search and trie our wayes, (saith the Prophet Ieremie) and turne againe to the Lord, let us lift up our hearts with our hands unto God in the heavens, &c.

Verse 7.

Ier. Lament. 3.40.41.

4. When the leprosie brake out and covered all his flesh, the Priest pronounced him cleane, and not to be put apart, because, saith your Marginall note, this was not that contagious leprosie which infected,but a kinde of a skirfe,which had not the flesh raw, as the leprosie had. This diversity of sores, may put us in minde of the diversity of sinnes, and punishments to be imposed upon men for them, and make us more wise in chastising others, and patient when we are corrected our selves, the punishment being fitted to the fault. But most notably it may strike us with a thankfull consideration of that mercy, that among this diversity of sores, layeth neyther one nor other upon us, but granteth health and freedome from all. The Lord of his goodnesse make us ever thankfull for our selves and ours, and continue this favour to us.

Vers. 23. &c.

5. The Leper also, saith your Chapter, in whom the plague is, was to have his clothes rent, (in signe of sorrow and lamentation) and his head bare, and must put a covering upon his lips, (either in token of mourning,or for feare of infecting others (and should say, I am unclean, I am unclean. So carefull was God to have uncleane persons knowne and discerned from others in those dayes. And wee may take occasion to wish,that with us also in these dayes,all bold and presumptuous mislivers, being most uncleane before God and all good men,were distinguished from them that hate their wickednes, by some such open markes as these were, to the end that others might both avoid them, and they themselves be striken with some shame to amendment of life and saving of their soules. In former times Harlots had obscure and remote places to dwell in, and by their habitation they were discerned : but now it is to bee feared, both in dwelling, in apparell, and other things they compare with, and farre exceed too, those whose shooes they are not worthy to beare. But yet God knoweth them, and he is just if they amend not. No gaudie gallants can deceive him, but his eyes pierce through all maskes and colours whatsoever. Allegorically, some have said,these things in the Leper, shadowed the state and case of all wicked men and women. As the rent clothes, that they are vile and odious before God; his bare head,that in Christ their head they have no portion,but are deprived of him; his lips or mouth covered, that such graceless persons cannot open their mouthes before God in any prayer to be heard; his shutting out of the Campe, that such are to be excommunicate from the number of the faithfull, and are deprived of the heavenly inheritance,&c. See more in the two and twentieth Chapter.

Verse 45. He dwelt alone out of the tents, and if he were a Priest, he did eate no more of the holy things. Chap. 22.

Vers. 47. &c.

6. In the seven and fortieth verse you reade of the Leprosie of garments, &c. Which kind of contagion and infection, the Lord in his infinite mercy hath made us ignorant of. The washing commanded here of such Garments admonished them, and in them still us, that our duty is to abstaine from all uncleanes, and to purge our selves from all pollution both of body and spirit. If Garments may have such things laid upon them by God, how much more our flesh and our bodies, and therefore againe thinke with all thankfull thoughts of the blessing of health, and of the meanes vouchsafed of God for health, as Prayer, Physitians, Chirurgians, Hearbes, and and Medicines many, whereof the wiſe Syrach ſpeaketh in his eight and thirtieth Chapter, reade it often, and with feeling. One ſight of your face in a glaſſe, as the Lord could ſmite it in a moment, would make you feele and ſee what God doth for you in giving health and freedom from ſuch ſtrange ſores. Exod 38.

7. Much more might be noted in this Chapter, but it is fitter for Phyſitians, and therefore I paſſe it over. Onely I will remember a Queſtion moved, whether for any ſuch fearefull infections a man and wife may be divorced: and leaving all large diſcourſe, which they that are fit may have in many Writers, I anſwer briefely, that more cauſes of divorce than wee reade in Scripture, wee may not preſume to make, and that is but in the caſe of Adultery: This excepted, the Rule ſtandeth firme, Whom God hath joyned together, let no man put aſunder. Secondly, it were a kinde of bitter cruelty to adde ſuch affliction to the afflicted ſo ſore already, as to take Husband from Wife, or Wife from Husband, who mutually ſhould comfort each other in all extremities and croſſing woes of this changing world, and with that condition have beene joyned, and plighted their troth one to the other, That in ſickneſs as well as health, they would cleave together, forſaking all others, till the death of one of them. But then againe on the other ſide, as cruell and inconvenient it were, to binde the party cleane, to company and due benevolence with the infected: For this were evident danger to the cleane, and to the ſeed that ſhould come of them in that caſe, and ſo conſequently to the Common-wealth alſo, by the ſpreading of ſuch a fearefull maladie in it. Wherefore the middle way is beſt for all parties, namely, that the knot of mariage remaine unbroken, and the party cleane performe all offices of helpe and comfort to the uncleane, ſaving conjunction of bodies, that the party infected ſee how he is called of God unto Chaſtity during this caſe of his; and therefore by dyet, watching and prayer, and all good meanes, endeavour to keepe his body under from ſuch deſires, laying his ſins to his heart, for which this and much more is due unto him, (although haply impoſed upon him, not for his ſin, but for his triall and the glory of God) and yet taking a true and comfortable hold upon his God, whoſe mercy hath neither bottome nor meaſure, and who hath promiſed moſt graciouſly that he will never lay more upon any childe of his, than hee ſhall be able to beare, but will give an iſſue to the temptation and triall, that he may beare it. Thus God hath his time to heale, as well as to ſtrike; to comfort, as well as to afflict; and to wipe all teares away, as well as to cauſe them any way. Looke up then to him, and ever truſt in him. Say with Iob in a holy cheerefulneſſe, If the Lord ſhall kill me, I will not ſhrinke from him. With Heli and David, it is he, it is he, let him doe his good pleaſure. His correction hath an end, but his love ſhall never have an end, if I ſubmit my ſelfe and be patient. Let friends alſo be full of comfort to ſuch a one, and not by the leaſt looke, word or action, adde griefe unto griefe: God will ſee it, and reward it. Mat. 19.6. 1 Cor. 10.13. Iob. 13.15. 1 Sam. 3.18.

CHAP. XIIII.

NOw, that it is moſt true, God hath a time to heale, as well as to ſtrike, and to comfort, as well as to grieve: behold your ſelfe in this Chapter, where you ſhall reade, that many thus afflicted, were in God his goodneſs healed againe, and reſtored both to their houſes in the hoſte, and their places in the Tabernacle, as ſound as ever they were. The ceremonies of this reſtitution are here alſo appointed, both to the one place and the other, whereof let us labour to make ſome good uſe to our ſelves. The Summe of the Chapter.

1. He was brought unto the Prieſt, as to him that muſt judge whether he was cleane or no, and why the Prieſt was ſo appointed to be Judge, you had the reaſon in the beginning of the former Chapter. But where muſt hee bee brought unto the Prieſt? Into the Campe and Congregation where the Prieſt was? No, but the Prieſt, ſaith the Text, ſhall goe out of the Campe, and conſider him. So is it ſtill the duty of all faithfull Miniſters to goe to the ſicke, to ſee them, and conſider their eſtate toward God, miniſtring comfort to them in due ſeaſon, whileſt their hearing is good, their underſtanding good, and their memory good. For when theſe things are decayed, wee labour often to little purpoſe: And would God both they that are ſicke had more care often to ſend for the Miniſter to them in due time, and the Miniſters when they know it, to go, and with all care and diligence to labour with them whileſt time ſerveth. For it is too late for both parties, when death hath ſtriken his ſtroke. Verſe 2.

2. If the Prieſt thus comming to him, found him cleane, then did hee ſo pronounce him to be, and appoint him to offer his gift, &c. But except he were cleane, the Prieſt durſt not pronounce him cleane. Thus remained the glory of his health to GOD that had given it, and to the Church the uſe of the Miniſtery both for order and comfort. See herein the manner of our Abſolution reteined in the true Church of Chriſt, and practiſed. We do not heale the ſinner from his ſpirituall diſeaſe of ſoule, by forgiving his ſin, as the Prieſt here healed not the reall diſeaſe of the body by making him ſound, but when we ſee hearty repentance, and a lively faith in the promiſes of God made to penitent ſinners for Chriſt, then wee pronounce him according to our warrant to be forgiven, even as the Prieſt did here him, that indeed by Gods mercy to him was now healed of his Leproſie. So have we the Miniſtery of reconciliation, committed unto us for the comfort of the penitent, but challenge not the power to forgive, which belongeth to God onely, as that man of ſinne doth, who in his blaſphemous Pardons taketh upon him to forgive both Pœnam & Culpam, the puniſhment and the ſinne. In regard then of this order and uſe of the Miniſtery it was, that Chriſt bade the Leaper, whom he had cleanſed, go ſhew himſelf to the Prieſt, becauſe till the Prieſt upon view ſaid he was cleane, hee might not bee admitted into the Congregation. The Fathers alledge other cauſes which alſo may ſtand with this, and with profit be obſerved, as for that he would have all honour preſerved to the Prieſts, that God hath beſtowed on them, and himſelfe be no example of taking any jot away. Now to be Judge was an honour, and therefore he will have it preſerved: That thus the Prieſts might be drawne to beleeve on him, and ſo to be ſaved, or elſe to be made inexcuſable for their contempt; that hee might not ſeeme a breaker of the law, as often he was accuſed to be: That he might be thankfull to God who had ſo mercifully healed; a thing often promiſed in ſickneſſe, but ſeldome performed after recovery, &c. Vt doceret civiles & legitimas rerumpub. ordinationes in unaquaq; politia obſervandas eſſe, ſeque non veniſſe ut eas abrogaret, cum regnum ejus non ſit de hoc Mundo: That he might teach the duty of men to obſerve civill and lawfull ordinances in every Commonwealth, and that he was not come to breake them, ſeeing his Kingdome is not of this world.

Mat. 8. 4.

Hieron. in Mat. Tertul. lib. 4. cont. Marcion.

Chryſoſt. hom. 26. Operis imperfecti in Mat.

3. For Ceremony, further there muſt be taken for him that was cleanſed two Sparrowes alive (or little birds) cleane, that is, ſuch as were permitted to be eaten, and Cedar-wood, and a skarlet lace and Hyſſope. And the Prieſt ſhould command to kill one of the birds over pure water in an earthen veſſell. After he muſt take the live Sparrow with the Cedar-wood, and the skarlet lace, and the Hyſſope, and muſt dip them and the living Sparrow in the blood of the Sparrow ſlaine over the pure water, and he muſt ſprinckle upon him that was cleanſed of his Leproſie, ſeven times, and cleanſe him, and then let go the live Sparrow into the broad field, &c. Euſebius Emiſſenus, in one of his Homilies, ſaith, Theſe things might ſeeme light, if they had not beene appointed by him, whoſe leaſt commandement is not light. By the two Sparrowes therefore (ſaith he) the cleanſed perſon might be put in minde, to offer unto God both ſoule and body a living ſacrifice, no more to ſerve the world and the pleaſures of this life, but the God of goodneſſe and mercy, that had cleanſed him from ſo great and grievous a malady. The Cedar-wood, being a wood that will not eaſily corrupt, and that hath alſo a good and pleaſing ſmell, might ſhadow out unto him alſo a holy life, ſweet manners, and incorrupt actions, how pleaſing to God, how fit for him that thus was cleanſed. The ſcarlet lace being red, and of the colour of fire, might tell him how due from him were hot thoughts of hearty thankfulneſſe from a burning heart to God, and true love and charity to all his neighbours. The Hyſſope growing uſually in the rocke, how rooted hee ought to bee in Chriſt the Sonne of the true Rocke. The Sparrow ſlaine, might teach him the neceſſity of mortification in the body, which indeed is an earthen veſſell; the killing of it over pure water, that nothing more worketh this mortification, than pure water of Gods word contained in the Scriptures. The living Sparrow letten flye abroad, might ſhadow the ſoule living unto righteouſneſſe through the grace of God, and ſet at liberty to mount aloft when the body is dead. Thus Euſebius too curiouſly and nicely ſkanneth theſe things. But having noted therein the fancies of men otherwiſe grave and wiſe, and learned: I hold it better that we gather but thus much, that by the blood of Chriſt we are truly cleanſed and ſet at liberty, not otherwiſe: as here the live Sparrow, dipped in the blood of the ſlaine Sparrow, is ſet free. The ſeven-fold ſprinkling might happily ſhadow an earneſt and continuall meditation of Gods goodneſſe to him that thus was comforted, and not for a day or two, and then no more. Surely our thoughts of his mercy vouchſafed to us, are ever too ſhort and tranſitory, and therefore ſeven ſprinklings are little enough to teach us our duty herein: God for his mercy ſo ſprinkle us over and over, that wee may ever remember his kinde goodneſſe towards us a thouſand wayes: Saying with the thankfull Prophet to our ſelves and ſoules often, Praiſe the Lord, O my ſoule, and forget not, forget not all his benefits: his infinite benefits, his ſweet benefits, his moſt undeſerved benefits on our parts. The ſhaving and waſhing mentioned alſo, ſhadowed truly unto him his new life, in the obedience of God, as well as his perfect and full curing from the Leproſie. The care that God hath ſtill of the poore in allowing a difference of Offering for them, is ſtill to bee noted, how often ſoever it commeth, that we may ſee his goodneſſe, and be ſoundly rooted in our hope in him, be we never ſo poore. The Oyle, as before in this Booke hath been noted, ſhadowed the holy Spirit of God, purchaſed for us, and to us by Chriſt. And the anointing of his right eare and thumbe, &c. That our eare ought to heare, and all our might performe the bleſſed will of him that cleanſeth us from our foule diſeaſes.

Theodoret. Ad duas in Chriſto moriente naturas accommodat. Dialog. 3.

Pſal. 103. 2.

Verſe 4.
Verſe 5.
Verſ. 6.
Verſ. 7.
Verſe 8. &c.
Verſe 21.
Verſe 10.
Verſe 14.

Verſe 34.

4. Now having thus ſpoken of the Ceremonies of cleanſing men and women, hee commeth in the foure and thirtieth verſe, to ſpeake of cleanſing of Leprous houſes. Where remember againe, that this kinde of Leproſie is unknowne unto us, and God make us thankfull for it. But when

when it was, and where it was, the Text ſaith, God ſent it; and it well ſheweth, that even the well being of our houſes is a mercy, and not a little one, although we too little thinke of it. And if the walles of ſtone or timber may be thus ſmitten with ſuch a diſeaſe, O what can he do with theſe bodies of ours! Theſe pampred and dainty bodies of ours, upon which we ſpend all our care and coſt, never thinking on the Soule, till it be too late; I ſay what, what can God lay upon them in the twinckling of an eye, if he be angry, and turne the comfort of his face from us? Wherefore meditate of his mercy in giving health both to body and houſe, and let it never be unthought upon, ſometime, at leaſt every day. The markes whereby this Leproſie was diſcerned of the Prieſt, you have in this Text, Deepe ſpots greeniſh or reddiſh, which ſeeme to be lower than the wall. Alſo how the Prieſt might not raſhly condemne the houſe, but muſt ſhut it up a time, and then looke upon it againe; and yet wee can haſtily and raſhly condemne our brethren, our equals, our betters, that they are thus and ſo. There was an eaſier cleanſing by ſcraping and changing the infected ſtones, and a harder cleanſing by quite pulling it downe. God gently dealeth with ſinners, if it may ſerve, and quite overthroweth the incurable. The Expiation ſheweth we ought to have cleane houſes; and the Offering noteth from whom all health is, even from God.

Verſe 34.

Verſe 37.

CHAP. XV.

SOme other uncleanneſſe incident to man and woman, is mentioned in this Chapter, whereof modeſtly you may thinke as you reade it, Vnto the ninth verſe he ſpeaketh of man, and then, verſe 19. of the Woman. For uſe unto your ſelfe firſt conſider by occaſion of theſe things, that originall corruption which is gotten into our Nature by the fall of our firſt Parents, through which we are moſt uncleane many wayes in the eyes of God. The Lord hath a great care to worke this meditation in us ſtrongly, when he ſo amplifieth theſe naturall uncleanneſſes in us, as that every thing is made uncleane which toucheth him in that caſe: Every bed whereon he lyeth, every thing whereon he ſitteth, whoſoever toucheth the bed, ſhall waſh his cloathes, &c. Hee that ſitteth upon the ſeate where he ſate: The ſaddle that he rideth on, yea, the veſſell that he toucheth, and ſo forth. So alſo of the Woman in the latter part of the Chapter, modeſtly reade and bee edified. Thinke of the Scriptures that note this corruption in us, telling us, that all the imaginations of the thoughts of our hearts are onely evill continually: That in us, that is, in our fleſh dwelleth no good thing: For to will is preſent with ſome (as with the Apoſtle that ſpake it, and yet he hath no meanes to performe that which is good.) For he could not doe the good which he would, but the evill that hee would not, that did he, and ſo forth, as followeth in that Chapter moſt notably. That they which are in the fleſh, ſavour the things of the fleſh. That the naturall man perceiveth not the things which are of God, but they are fooliſhneſs to him, &c. Thinke what particular parts of us are charged with this corruption, and ſee if they be not the very chiefeſt, as the underſtanding, the will, the heart, the eyes, the eares, and ſo forth. Be mooved with it, and renouncing your ſelfe, ſeeke for remedy, where it only is, and not in your ſelfe. Follow the counſell of the Apoſtle, and take his words as an explication of the end of this ceremony; Namely, that wee indeavour to cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of the fleſh and ſpirit, and that we finiſh our ſanctification in the feare of God. To this end the Lord hath ordained holy Matrimony, and taught that it is honorable among all men. To this end hee forbiddeth all uncleane luſts, and taught us that Whoremongers and Adulterers he will judge. For this is the will of God, (ſaith the Apoſtle) Even your Sanctification, and that ye ſhould abſtaine from Fornication; That every one ſhould know to poſſeſs his veſſell in holineſs and honour: And not in the luſt of concupiſcence, as the Gentiles which know not God. And bleſſed are the cleane in heart, (ſaith our Saviour Chriſt) for they ſhall ſee GOD. Strengthen your ſelfe therefore in this holy courſe by theſe Scriptures and the like. Conſider often the Commandement of God, is whoſe hand is death, if you diſobey. Conſider his Nature, that he is puritie and cleanneſs it ſelfe, and as he is our heavenly Father, ſo ſhould we bee his children and ſervants. Conſider how it is impoſſible to pray to him aright with an uncleane minde, for any want we have. Conſider what hope we can have of eternall life, if we love uncleanneſs, when the Rule is thus, Follow holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord. Conſider the hurt of example; the danger that groweth to a Common-wealth, when for ſuch filthineſſe the Lord often overthrowes a whole State, as the licentious life of one Paris did Troy. And finally, think what ugly diſeaſes and maladies, what rotting and burning, what ſhame and confuſion the Lord layeth even in this life upon uncleane perſons, beſides the fearefull fall eternall, that is aſſured afterward when this life is ended. Meditate, I ſay, of theſe things, and pray continually for grace and ſtrength. Say with the good old Father, when any wicked motion peepeth up: O Domine, vim patior, ſuccurre, ſuccurre, &c. O Lord helpe, O Lord ſtrengthen, for I ſuffer violence, and am aſſaulted, &c.

Gen. 6.5. Rom. 7.18. Rom. 8.5.

1 Cor. 2.14. Deut. 29.4. Epheſ. 4.18. Chap. 5.8. Rom. 3. Pſal. 19.

2 Cor. 7.1.

1 Theſ. 4.3,4,5.

Mat. 5.8.

Heb. 12.14.

2. In the waſhing here mentioned, and in the atonement, note the mercy of God towards all miſerable ſinners, and ſee with comfort, that although the fall of our firſt parents hath thus blotted us and ſpotted us, that indeed we are moſt uncleane, yet ought we not to deſpaire, but take hold of him by a lively faith, Who will not the death of a ſinner, but rather that he ſhould repent and live, diſliking himſelfe for his manifold ſinnes, and cleaving to his God for his manifold mercies. And when you reade thus often of water, cleave not in the element or creature of water, but remember Saint Iohn, That Ieſus Chriſt came by water and blood, and it is he onely that waſheth away our ſpots, and ſaveth us from our ſinnes. Water cannot do it, nor any worke of ours, but if we waſh our ſelves with ſnow water, as Iob ſaith, and purge our hands moſt cleane; Yet ſhall he plunge us in the pit, and our owne cloathes ſhall make us filthy. And by the offering of the Turtles it was plainely figured, that not in themſelves but in ſome other they muſt bee made cleane from all their impurities. I remember the ſpeech of a good Writer, yet a Fryer, and I pray you marke it; Sunt qui ſtatim ſe mundos putant, ſi peccata defleant, jejunia multiplicent, eleemoſynas largiantur, Bona ſunt hæc, fratres, ſed debitum peccati non adæquant. There are ſome, ſaith he, that thinke themſelves by and by made cleane, if they ſhed a few teares, and bewaile their ſins, multiply their faſts, and give almes, &c. But my brethren, although theſe be good things, yet they are not equivalent to our ſinnes. Thus breaketh truth out of them that otherwiſe affected Rome. See then how Popery wrongeth the ſoules of men in ſending them to the things that cannot helpe, and drawing them deceitfully from the true and perfect ſanctification and ſatisfaction of Chriſt. Remember the words of one of theirs; Fiducialiter ad Sanctos currimus, ut eorum meritis & precibus ad immortalitatem perveniamus. Wee runne with great boldneſſe to the Saints, that by their merits and prayers, we may come to immortality. Come unto her all yee that travel and are heavy laden (meaning the Virgin Mary) and ſhee ſhall refreſh and comfort your ſoules. What is it to leave the fountaines and ſprings of God, and to dig unto our ſelves Ciſternes that can hold no water, if this be not? S. Iohn telleth us, he, he, not ſhe, ſhe, is the propitiation for our ſinnes. And therefore come unto him all that travell, not unto her, &c. But thus ſeeing our manifold uncleanneſs, and the right remedy of it by modeſtly and chaſtly reading over this Chapter, I wade no further in it. This is a taſte of the uſe of it. More will follow in the next Chapter, and Chap. 23.

Ezech. 18.

1 Iohn 5. 6. Iob. 9. 30, 31.

Gabriel. in Can. Miſſæ Venite ad eam (Mariam) omnes qui laboratis et onerati eſtis, et dabit refrigerium et ſolatium animabus veſtris.

Chap. XVI.

1. STill the Lord goeth on to note mans imperfections, and how he is freed from them, ſeeing herein conſiſteth all, that we truly know our ſelves to be as we are, and the way of God appointed for our remedy. Verſe 2. Firſt, he forbiddeth Aaron at all times to enter into the holyeſt of all, whereby may be learned, that even Miniſters as well as other men are not raſhly to enter into all the things of God, but to ſtand in reverence of ſome myſteries, either dealing not at all, or very adviſedly and ſparingly with them as their nature requireth.

Verſe 3. 2. It is ſhewed how hee ſhould come in, when hee did enter; Namely, with a young Bullocke for a ſinne-offering, and ſo forth. Learne wee may by it with what ornaments men and women ſhould come before God. It is not ſilke nor velvet that he careth for, neither the coſtly Jewels of pearle and ſtone that we thinke ſo highly of, but come with a ſinne-offering, that is, come with an humble acknowledgement (as this ſinne-offering figured) that thou art a ſinner, confeſſe it to God with a grieving heart, and bring Jeſus Chriſt in thy ſoule with thee, offering him by thy true faith to God his Father, as a ſure ſafety for all ſinners againſt deſerved wrath and puniſhment.

Verſe 4. 3. He muſt alſo put on the holy linnen coate, &c. Another ſhadow of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, wherewith we muſt be cloathed and covered if we ever finde acceptance with God. For to that end Aaron did change his garment, to ſhew that he figured another perſon, who was holy, hee himſelfe being but a man ſubject to imperfection and ſin. To which end tended alſo his waſhing and ſacrifice here mentioned.

4. This likewiſe ſerved, to beate into the people their corruption, when they ſaw Aaron thus changed, that was the Prieſt choſen of God, and anointed with the holy Oyle. For if hee might not enter but in ſuch ſort, how much leſſe might they appeare at any time before God but in Chriſt, and by Chriſt, ſhadowed in all theſe ſacrifices. And concerning this once entring into the holy place, you have had the figure of it before, and the place to the Hebrewes noted Chapter 9. verſe 8. Aaron entred but once a yeere, and Chriſt but once, the Tabernacles divers. Aaron by blood, Chriſt by blood, but the blood divers. Aaron made an atonement, Chriſt made an atonement, but in differing manner. Aaron outwardly, or civilly, as touching the ſight of man; Chriſt, of the conſcience truly and rightly as touching God. Heb. 9. verſe 9. and 23. Aaron often, Heb. 10. 11. Chriſt but once, verſe 12, 14. Aaron confeſſed ſinnes, and laid them upon the Goate, but his owne ſinnes, as well as the peoples; Chriſt had no ſinnes of his owne, and ours hee bare himſelfe, and laid them upon himſelfe, not upon any creature whatſoever.

Heb. 9. Verſ. 9. & 13 Eſay 53. 4.

5. The

5. The two Hee-goates being presented, lots were to be cast over them, one lot for the Lord, and another for the Scape-goat. Thus was it shadowed, that in a sinner there is nothing to make him worthy of God his choyce. And therefore as God would not choose eyther the one Goate or other, but by lot the one was appointed, and not by choyce; so we are accepted whensoever we finde favour, without all merit or matter, worth or dignity in our selves to moove the Lord to such goodnesse. Verse 7 8.

6. The Goate upon which the Lords lot fell, was offered for a sin-offering; And Incense cast upon the fire to make a cloud to cover the Mercy-seat, that Aaron dyed not. The one shadowing the death of the Son of God; and the other with what feare and reverence we ought ever to come before God. For if to Aaron the Majesty of him were so dangerous, how much more to others, not to be compared to Aaron? Would God we thought of this ever, when wee come to Church to doe our duties to him. Then would there not, in that place, be so much light behaviour and sleepie usage of our selves as is, by which things the holy place is defiled, verse 16. Homines ita contaminant Dei sacra, ne quid tamen discedat eorum natura, nec dignitas violetur. Quare diserte exprimit Moses purgari Sanctuarium ab inquinamentis non suis, sed Filiorum Israel: Men doe so pollute the holy things of God, that nothing departeth from their nature, neither is their glory violated. Therefore plainly doth Moses lay downe, that the Sanctuary is to bee purged from pollutions, not of their owne, but of the Children of Israel. Vers. 9. Verse 13. Verse 16.

7. But as touching the other Goat (called the Scape-Goat) it was brought alive: And Aaron (saith God) shall put both his hands upon the head of it, and confess over him all the iniquities of the Children of Israel, and all their trespasses in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the Goat, and shall send him away (by the hand of a man appointed) into the wilderness, so the Goat shall beare upon him all their iniquities into the Land that is not inhabited, &c. From this Law of God, no doubt did spring that custome among the Heathens, who offering sacrifices, (as Herodotus witnesseth of the Ægyptians) used to banne and curse the head of the beast offered in sacrifice, with these words: That if any evill be to come, either upon the sacrificers themselves, or upon the whole Countrey of Ægypt, it would please the gods to turne all upon that head. Verse 21. Verse 22. Herodotus in Euterpe. Εἴ τι μέλλοι ἢ σφέας τοῖσι θύουσι, ἢ Αἰγύπτῳ τὴν συναπάσῃ κακὸν γενέσθαι, ἐς κεφαλὴν ταύτην τρέπεσθαι. Verbenis, vestibusque sacris ornatum. ἀποτρόπαιον ἡμῖν γενέσθαι.

The Massilians also yearely used to make an atonement or Expiation for their City with some holy man, whom decked and set out with holy garments, and with garlands, after the manner of a Sacrifice, they led thorow the City, and putting all the evils upon his head, that might any way hang over their City, they cast him into the Sea, sacrificing of him so unto Neptune, speaking these words with great solemnity: Sis pro nobis piaculum, Be thou an expiation for us. Thus the Heathen catched at things, but not in a right manner; whereby we may well see what a darkenesse it is to be deprived of the light of the word of God. In like manner receiving it from the doctrine of the old Fathers, by the tradition of Noah his sonnes, that there should in time come a Man, who taking upon him the sinnes of all men, should become a Sacrifice for the salvation of all men, and not understanding the manner how this should be, they used in great extremities and perils, as plagues, famine, war, &c. to offer up men to their gods to appease their wrath thereby. So in Livie we reade, Quintus Curtius did in a time of pestilence: The Decii, father and sonne, in a time of hard warre with the Latines and Samnites; Codrus, King of the Athenians, in Lycurgus; Menœceus in Euripides, and the daughters of Erelleus offered themselves to be sacrificed for their Countrey. So Achas, 2 King. 16. Manasses Chap. 21. and the King of Moab, Chap. 3. their owne sonnes. This was a great mistaking you plainely see, and therefore let it move you to send up thankfull thoughts to God for your better knowledge and understanding. What a notable figure againe this Scape Goat was of Christ you see, upon his head all the sinnes of mankind were laid, he bearing them himselfe, and removing them away from us. Esay 53. 4. Of the resurrection of Christ, who though he bare our sinnes, yet remaineth alive.

8. Well may you also marke here, when Confession was made over the head of this Goate, what diversity of words are used, as all iniquities, all trespasses, all sinnes. Why so many words? but to teach that confession of sinnes must not be light and formall onely, but earnest, vehement, hearty and zealous: And indeed never can a good child of God satisfie himselfe herein, but still wisheth he could more bewaile his sinnes, and more earnestly expresse with words what his soule feeleth in this behalfe: Saying, as I heard a dying woman once say, to the good profit of all about her: O Sir, I am sory, and sory that I can be no more sory.

9. And he that carried forth this Scape-Goat, shall wash his cloathes and his flesh in water, and after that shall come into the Hoast. If such a thing did separate a man in some sort from the Church, how much more doth that sinne that is our owne, cleaving to us, and resting in us, make a divorce betwixt God and us, and the Church and us? See therefore the use of these Figures, to worke a touch in them of the effect of sinne, and let our corruption be displeasing unto us, that wee in Christ may be pleasing to God. Verse 26.

10 A certaine day they named here, The tenth day of the seventh moneth, but wee have now no one day, and therefore all our life should be a time of true humbling of our selves before God: Not of bowing downe our heads like Bull-rushes, but of humbling our soules, even our inward soules,

Verſe 30.
Verſe 32.
Verſe 33.

ſoules, as here is ſaid and repeated. And this often iteration, That the Prieſt, and none elſe ſhould make the atonement; ſhould put on the linnen cloathes and holy Veſtments, ſhould purge the holy Sanctuary and the Tabernacle of the Congregation. ſhould cleanſe the Altar, and make atonement for the Prieſts and people, this I ſay, manifeſtly noted out the graces of the Meſſiah, Chriſt Jeſus, and directed all to him to find remiſſion and pardon in him of all impurities and defilings whatſoever. Thus have you ſome taſte of the uſe of this Chapter, meditation with prayer will yeeld much more.

CHAP. XVII.

The ſumme of the Chapter.
Verſe 4.

IN this Chapter you have two ſeverall Lawes given, which you may obſerve. The fifſt, that every ſacrifice ſhould be brought to the doore of the Tabernacle, and no man ſhould dare to offer it otherwiſe. The ſecond, againſt eating of any blood. Concerning the firſt, the words are ſharpe; Namely, That the Lord will impute blood unto him, that he hath ſhed blood, and that he ſhall be cut off from among the people.

The reaſons both of this Law and this ſeverity, were theſe, and ſuch like. Firſt, becauſe it ſerved for the preſervation of the Miniſtery which God had ordained, and that every man ſhould not be his owne Prieſt. Secondly, becauſe it was a chiefe meanes to keepe them from Idolatry, and offering the honour due unto God to Devils as the Heathens did, or to other creatures to whom it was not due. Thirdly, becauſe thus they were taught that all worſhip of God ought to be guided and directed by his word and commandement, not by the private wils of men, as often before yee have ſeene, Deut. 12. That which I command, that onely ſhall yee doe. Yea, in this place note it, and ever thinke of it, to follow my owne fancy and not Gods preſcription, is to become as odious to God as if I had killed a man, Eſay 66. He that killeth an Oxe is as if he had killed a man, (meaning when hee killeth not the Oxe according to the manner appointed of God.) Yet, yet, will ſome men teach, and ſome unwiſe people beleeve, that a good intent will beare out all, and we are not tyed to the Word of God; but reade and remember ſuch places as theſe. Fourthly, becauſe hereby was ſignified that onely in the Church, by faith in the chiefe high Prieſt Chriſt Jeſus, our ſacrifice and ſervice accepted of God, is, and can be offered and done, and no where elſe, 1 Pet. 2. verſe 5. Heb. 13. 15.

2. But you will ſay the Scripture doth often mention that ſacrifices were offered elſe-where, and not brought to the doore of the Tabernacle. Which is very true, but then marke you the complaints that God maketh againſt ſuch perſons and their doings, Iehoſhaphat did that which was right in the ſight of the Lord, but the high places were not taken away, the firſt of Kings 22. verſe 43. The like of Ioas, the ſecond of Kings 12. 2, 3. Of Manaſſes marke what is written, 2 Chron. 33. 16, 17. Of Iſrael, the ſecond of the Kings 17. 32, 33. Of Iuda, Ier. 44. &c. For in all theſe places you may ſee that no good meanings or intents, no colours nor covers will ſerve, but for as much as the preſcript forme of bringing their ſacrifices to the doore of the Tabernacle, and offering them according to the rules given by God were not obſerved, therefore both they and their worſhip diſpleaſed God, and that ſo highly, as grievouſly he puniſhed them for the ſame. And is it not a moſt ſtrange dotage, to thinke that God ſhould not appoint his own worſhip, but we out of our idle and darke braines doe what ſeemeth good to us? Let it move you and ever worke with you to your good.

3. Yet you will ſay againe, not onely theſe, but the Prophets that knew their duties, and were carefull to do it, did not bring the Sacrifice to the Tabernacle, but offered in other places, as Samuel in Miſpah, 1 Sam. 7. and Elias in Mount Carmel, 1 Kings 18. You muſt anſwer your ſelfe thus touching theſe men; That all this in them was extraordinary, and wee may not follow extraordinary matters without ſome ſuch perſonall and ſpeciall vocation, as no doubt they had. For we do not live by examples, but by Lawes. And thus much of the firſt Law in this Chapter.

Non exemplo ſed legibus.
Verſ. 10.

Concerning the ſecond Law, of abſtaining from eating of any blood, It was firſt given to Noah, Geneſis 9, then repeated againe, as you ſaw in the third and ſeventh Chapter, and ſhall ſee in the nineteenth Chapter of this book of Leviticus. The Lord by his Law would teach men to abſtaine from murder and bloodſhed, the blood of man being Vehiculum animæ vitalis: for the vitall Spirits which yeeld unto man through his whole body, heate, motion and action, are begotten of blood by the power of the heate, and therefore mans life, and the life of every other creature, is ſaid to bee in the blood. Secondly, becauſe the Lord had ordained blood to be uſed in the atonements made for ſinnes, as a plaine figure of the blood of Chriſt, the onely able thing to purge and waſh away our ſinnes and offences, therefore he would have blood regarded as a holy thing, and not uſed by man as other meates might bee. Thus God in his Law, would not ſuffer man to eate the blood of a beaſt, becauſe it figured the blood of his Sonne, and in Popery wee are taught to make no bones at Chriſts owne blood, but to beleeve that the

Verſe 10.
Purpuream vomit ille animam.
Virgil.

Wine

Wine in the Sacrament is turned into his very blood really, and then to drinke the ſame boldly. The Goſpell ſhall not yeeld ſo much reverence to Chriſt, as the Law did: is it to be taught and beleeved? God forbid.

2. You may remember how the Apoſtles continued this Law, Acts 15. 29. and aske why being a Ceremoniall Law, it was more continued than others? to which anſwer is made, that chiefely for three cauſes they did it; Propter Scandalum, propter Confeſſionẽ, propter Diſciplinam. Firſt, to avoid offence in the mindes of ignorant people not yet taught, nor of the ſudden apt to heare of the abrogation of ſo ancient a Law ever ſince Noahs time. Secondly, that thus they might ſhew that their doctrine was no other, but even the old ancient doctrine ſince the beginning of the Church. And thirdly, for Diſcipline, that men might ſtill bee affraid of murther by this continued ceremony. After, when God had vouchſafed to his Church further knowledge, this alſo was abrogated, and men left to their liberties to eate blood as well as the fleſh.

CHAP. XVIII.

The ſumme of the Chapter.

IN a godly Common-wealth two things are neceſſary, right Religion according to Gods word; and holy honeſty of Matrimony. The firſt the Lord hath laid downe both in the ten Commandements. Exod. 20. and in theſe ſacrifices thus paſſed over. Now therefore it pleaſeth him to come to the ſecond, unſpotted mariage. Where he firſt uſeth a preface to move them to diligent obſervation of what herein he ſhould ſay, and then he commeth to the matter it ſelfe. The firſt is contained in the five former Verſes, And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, Speake unto the Children of Iſrael, and ſay unto them, I am the Lord your God. After the doings of the land of Ægypt wherein yee dwelt, ſhall yee not doe; and after the manner of the land of Canaan, whither I will bring you, ſhall yee not doe, neither walke in their ordinances. But doe after my judgements, and keepe my ordinancet, to walke therein: I am the Lord your God, &c. This Preface of ſome is taken generally to concerne all the Lawes of God, the obſervation whereof, is ever the ſure ſafety of a ſtate publike or private. For it is not the munition of walles, leagues, and aliance with forraigne Princes, largeneſſe of confines, plenty of treaſure, or ſuch like, that preſerve a Common-wealth, but carefull and diligent obſervation of publike Lawes ordained of God for the good of man. It is ſaid that Lacedemon flouriſhed whilſt Licurgus his Lawes were obſerved, much more any Common-wealth when Gods bee kept: for what compariſon betwixt mans Lawes and Gods? Demoſthenes ſaith, it was the manner of the Locrenſes, that if any man would publiſh and deviſe a new Law, he ſhould put his necke into a halter ready to be put to death, if the Law were not good; by which meanes they made men more carefull to obſerve old and ancient, tryed and knowne Lawes, than with buſie heads to make new. Now what Lawes ſo old and ſo approved good, as Gods lawes? Ever therefore are they to be regarded and hearkened unto. Others take this Preface particularly of theſe lawes concerning mariage now following, that if they be carefully kept, a Kingdome long flouriſheth, and if not, ſoone it commeth to a fearefull fall. For ſo odious and abhorred of God is the unlawfull mixture of man and woman, that the Lord cannot long withhold great Judgements. And thus much remember as you reade them ever, that theſe lawes do not concerne the Jewes onely, as the ceremoniall lawes now ſpoken of, and Judiciall did, but theſe lawes belong to all men and women, and to all ſucceeding times, being eternall, immutable, grafted by God in mans nature, and given by him for holineſs ſake. Note all the words well, that God would not have them like either the Ægyptians or Canaanites, and wiſh with me, that there were a like law againſt our being like forreigne nations neere us, with Ruffes dipped in the Devils liquor called ſtarch, burſten-belly doublets, garded as the French, fringed as the Venetian, Turkiſh heads, Spaniſh backs, Italian waſtes, &c. giving daily occaſion to the mockers that ſay, French nets catch Engliſh fooles.

Verſe 1.
Verſe 2.
Verſe 3.
Verſe 4.
Rom. 10. 5.

2. The Preface ended, God commeth to the matter it ſelfe in the 6. verſe, ſaying, None ſhall come neere to any of the kindred of his fleſh to uncover her ſhame; I am the Lord. Kindred is of two ſorts, by ſociety of blood, which is called conſanguinity, or by carnall conjunction of man and woman, which is called affinity. That Popiſh kindred which they called ſpirituall kindred ariſig by Baptiſme or Confirmation, this Chapter knoweth not, neither any other part of Gods Booke, it was onely deviſed for Popes gaine.

Verſ. 6.
Verſe 7.
Lot his inceſt. Gen. 19.
Inter Pelopeiam et Thyeſtem patrem unde Ægiſthus natus eſt. Inter OEdipum et Iocaſtam matrem, unde Eteocles et Polynices procreati ſunt. Inter Neronem et Agrippinam, &c.

3. The greateſt conſanguinity is betwixt Parents and Children, and therefore that is forbidden in theſe words. Thou ſhalt not uncover the ſhame of thy father, nor the ſhame of thy mother. for ſhee is thy mother, &c. The very Heathens abhorred this wickedneſſe as moſt unnaturall and vile. Yea, the Camels (ſaith Ariſtotle) abhorre it by nature, and the Colt will not come neere in this ſort to the dam; God being pleaſed in bruite beaſts to give an example againſt this thing. Hermione in Euripides could crye, it was barbarous. Now, when thus he nameth father or mother, ther, you muſt not tye the words to our immediate parents onely, and to immediate Children, but the words ſtretch to all the right line of Conſanguinity either aſcending or deſcending. For as it is unlawfull for the daughter to marry with the Grandfather, or ſo upward in the ſtreight line; ſo is it for the father to marry the Neece, his Neeces daughter, or her daughters daughter, or any other downeward againe in the right line. For all theſe if you reckon ten thouſand of them are ſaid to bee as parents and children in reſpect one of another. And by the Law of Nations it was ever accounted inceſt, to marry upward or downeward in the right line.

Ex iis qui infra aut ſpeciatim nominantur uſque ad verſ. 17. aut ex illorum comparatione, per analogiam intelliguntur. Tremel & Iun.

4. The next Law is, The ſhame of thy Fathers wife ſhalt thou not diſcover, for it is thy Fathers ſhame. He meaneth the wife of my father, that is, my ſtep mother, not mine owne Mother. Which indeed properly is but affinity, but becauſe ſhe is a kind of mother, it is put here amongſt thoſe that are of conſanguinity. The Heathens deteſted this uncleanneſſe, and therefore Saint Paul ſpeaking of it, ſaith, It is heard certainely, that there is fornication among you, and ſuch fornication as is not once named among the Gentiles, that one ſhould have his fathers wife. Wherefore more monſtrous was the ſaying of the ſtep-mother of Anthony Caracalla, for when Anthony was ſo bewitched with her beauty, that hee deſired to mary her, and ſighing ſaid, Oh ſi liceret! Oh if it were lawfull! She ſhamefully anſwered, Si libet, licet: Principes enim dant leges, non accipiunt. If thou liſt it is lawfull, for Princes give Lawes and take not. A moſt untrue ſpeech in things concerning the Law of nature, as well confeſſed Dionyſius, when his mother would have maried otherwiſe than became her age, ſaying, O mother, the civill Laws of man may be changed and altered, but the Law of nature may not. The Apoſtle urgeth this Law, you know, in a ſmall matter as unchangeable, ſaying, Doth not nature tell you it is a ſhame to a man if he have long haire, &c. Much more then are the waighty points of natures Lawes not to bee altered and changed, as by theſe wicked mariages they are. Remember Rubens inceſt with Bilhah; and Abſalons with his fathers Concubines, and ſee the end.

1 Cor. 11. 14.
Gen. 35. 22.
2 Sam. 16. 22.

Verſe 9.

5. Thou ſhalt not diſcover the ſhame of thy ſiſter the daughter of thy father, or the daughter of thy mother, whether ſhe be borne at home, or borne without; thou ſhalt not diſcover their ſhame. This belongeth to the collatterall line, wherein mariage is not ever forbidden as in the ſtreight line. This Law forbiddeth the ſiſter by both parents, that is, the full ſiſter, or the halfe ſiſter, the full by both, the halfe by one. Alii domi genitam interpretantur in conjugio legitimo, &c. Foris genitam extra conjugium. For, by borne at home, is underſtood the ſiſter borne of another wife in thy fathers houſe, and by borne without, the ſiſter of thy mother maried to another man out of her houſe, where ſhee dwelled before. Ammons inceſt with Thamar, his ſiſter, was againſt this Law, and many other like matches. Herodotus writeth, that Cambyſes King of Perſia coveting to mary with his his ſiſter, asked his Counſellers, whether there was any Law to permit the brother to mary with the ſiſter? they anſwered after deliberation, that they could find no Law commanding ſuch mariage, but they found a Law whereby it was permitted to the King of Perſia to doe what he liſt. A moſt vile anſwer, when the queſtion was of the Law of nature. But you will ſay in the beginning it was thus, that brethren and ſiſters maried, and ſuch like. S. Auguſtine anſwereth, Quanto antiquius compellente neceſſitate: tanto poſtea factum eſt damnabilius prohibente Religione. True it is, becauſe of neceſſity, there being then no choyce. But the older this thing may bee ſaid to bee in regard of ſuch neceſſity, the more damnable it is now, becauſe Religion forbiddeth it.

2 Sam. 13. 14.

Verſe 10.
Verſ. 11.

6. The ſhame of thy ſons daughter, or of thy daughters daughter, thou ſhalt not, I ſay, uncover their ſhame; for it is thy ſhame. This is the right line againe, wherein never mariage is lawfull, and was touched before, verſe 7.

7. The ſhame of thy fathers wives daughter, begotten of thy father (for ſhe is thy ſiſter) thou ſhalt not, I ſay, diſcover her ſhame. This is a repetition, as men thinke, of the Law before, ver. 9. to ſhew that that Law was to be underſtood of a ſiſter by the one parent or other, and not of a ſiſter by mariage of father and mother. For the husbands ſon by another wife, may marry with his wives daughter by another man, albeit they be brother and ſiſter in Law.

Verſe 12.
Verſe 13.

8. Thou ſhalt not uncover the ſhame of thy Fathers ſiſter: for ſhee is thy Fathers kinſwoman. Thou ſhalt not uncover the ſhame of thy Mothers ſiſter: for ſhee is thy Mothers kinſwoman. Theſe two Lawes concerne the aunt by Father or Mother. It is a Law of Nature. And as it is not lawfull for the man to marry his mothers ſiſter, ſo it is not for the woman to bee maried to her mothers brother, becauſe theſe perſons bee as parents. So goe on to the great aunt by father or mother.

Verſe 14.

9. Thou ſhalt not uncover the ſhame of thy Fathers brother: That is, thou ſhalt not goe in to his wife, for ſhe is thy aunt. Now he commeth to affinity, as the unckles wife by either father or mother that is, either my fathers brothers wife, or my mothers brothers wife, for theſe are as ſtep-father, or ſtep-mother.

Verſe 15.

10. Thou ſhalt not diſcover the ſhame of thy daughter in law, for ſhe is thy ſonnes wife; Therefore ſhalt thou not uncover her ſhame. This is the neereſt affinity that is, of the father to his daughter in in Law, and the mother in law to her ſonne in law. Therefore it is no mariage lawfull. Reade *Chap.*20. verſe 12.

11. Thou ſhalt not diſcover the ſhame of thy Brothers wife: for it is thy Brothers ſhame. This was to be underſtood then, during the life of his brother, and ſo in the next Chap. verſ. 21. For otherwiſe in thoſe dayes, it was lawfull for the brother to raiſe up ſeed to his brother, *Deut.*25. But now it bindeth us ever, as appeareth by Iohn to Herod, It is not lawfull for thee to have thy brothers wife. Verſe 16. Mat.6.18.

12. Thou ſhalt not diſcover the ſhame of the wife and of her daughter, neither ſhalt thou take her ſons daughter, nor her daughters daughter, to uncouer her ſhame; for they are thy kinsfolkes, and it were wickedneſs. Theſe horrible inceſts are well knowne to any, and therefore need no further ſpeech. God give grace and ſtrength to avoid them according to our knowledge. Verſe 17.

13. Thou ſhalt not take a wife with her ſiſter, during her life to vexe her, in uncovering her ſhame upon her. Know that Moſes here hath written but a briefe of theſe matters, not naming all, but leaving to naturall reaſon, by theſe examples to underſtand all others, which by the ſame Law of Nature are forbidden. Moſes nameth not the uncle by father, or uncle by mother. But as in Genealogies, commonly the mention is of men: ſo in theſe deſcriptions of mariages, lawfull and unlawfull, mention is made but onely of women. But the ſame degrees reſtraine both men and women. If any man thinke of ſome mariages of holy men in Scripture contrary to theſe Rules, let him remember, that we live now by lawes, and not by examples. What God then either approved or tolerated, let us neither raſhly condemne, nor unadviſedly follow, but obediently tarry within the precincts of the Law of nature. And againe, in theſe caſes let it ever bee remembred, as good reaſon is it ſhould, not onely what is lawfull, but what alſo is convenient and fit to be done. For many things are lawfull which are no way yet expedient, but moſt unfit in regard of ſome circumſtances. Verſ. 18.

14. Thou ſhalt not goe to a woman to uncover her ſhame, whilſt ſhee is put apart for her diſeaſe. Neither ſhalt thou give thy ſelfe to thy neighbours wife, to bee defiled with her by carnall copulation. Here he deſcendeth to other foule and ungodly mixtures, which very nature ſhould teach men alſo to abhorre, and the firſt, is that which is with a woman when ſhe hath her naturall courſe, repeated in the 20. Chapter verſe 18. and a penalty of death ſet upon it, both for the man that doth it, and the woman that will ſuffer it to be done to her in that caſe; ſo God loveth purity, and would have all us to love it. The ſecond is adultery, which likewiſe by the Law then, was death, and ſhould have ſome ſharper puniſhment than in our dayes it hath among us. Verſe 19. Verſe 20.

14. Alſo thou ſhalt not give thy children to offer them unto Molech, neither ſhalt thou defile the Name of the Lord thy God, for I am the Lord. Some thinke Molech was a hollow Image, wherein the children were put, and fire under, ſo to burne them as pleaſing ſacrifices to their gods. Others thinke they were two fires, betwixt which they went. Reade your marginall note in your Bible, which is large. This after a ſort did they, that gave their children ever to be cloyſtered up, there to burne in finfull luſts, to the loſſe of both body and ſoule, whereas the other fire burned but the body. Verſe 21.

16. Thou ſhalt not lye with the male, as one lyeth with a woman: for it is abomination. Thou ſhalt not alſo lye with any beaſt to be defiled therewith, neither ſhall any woman ſtand before a beaſt to lye down thereto: for it is abomination. Yee ſhall not defile your ſelves in any of theſe things: for in all theſe the Nations are defiled which I will caſt out before you. And the land is defiled: I will viſit therefore the wickedneſſe thereof upon it, and the land ſhall vomit out her inhabitants. Of theſe moſt ugly pollutions the leaſt thought is too much. God and nature abhorre them, and the fearefull fire of God upon Sodome and Gomorrah biddeth all fleſh beware them. Reade the firſt to the Romans, verſe 28. *Verſ.*22. Verſe 23. Verſe 24. Verſe 25. Gen.19.24.

17. From the 26. ver. to the end, you ſee the penalty of the breaking theſe holy laws of a pure God, as in the beginning you ſee the profit of keeping of them. Learne then, that not forreigne foes onely may bring a land to deſolation and deſtruction, but much ſooner and ſorer, theſe home-bred impurities, which if a godly Magiſtrate, Maſter, Father, or Mother keepe downe, they procure the peace and ſafety of the land or houſe, more than if they reſiſted violence with armes and weapons. To vomit out her inhabitants, and to ſpue out her people, are the termes of great vehemency in God, and therefore moſt great ſhould mans feare be, leſt he ſhould provoke him to ſuch vengeance. Sit but with your ſelfe, and meditate of great men, and great houſes, meaner men and meaner houſes, and you will remember great examples of the effect of an uncleane life in men and women. Happy are they whom other mens harmes doe make to beware.

18. Although I might here ſtay upon theſe things, that have beene thus briefely noted, concerning this Chapter, and leave you not without ſome profit: yet foraſmuch as upon theſe Lawes concerning lawfull and unlawfull mariages, many points fall often to bee ſpoken of, I will a little further proceed, and acquaint you with the good labours of ſome writers, which you by your ſelfe, peradventure, otherwiſe ſhall not obtaine and get knowledge of. And firſt, concerning concerning mariage it ſelfe, in generall, let it ever be duely conſidered, that as unlawfull and impure conjunction of man and woman is deteſted of God, ſo is holy and lawfull matrimony with him ever accepted and allowed, and crowned with many bleſſings of his favour and love, being honourable among all, and the bed undefiled. The Scriptures are full of the praiſes of it, and of all good advice given to maried perſons, we have all beene borne by it, and as God ſhall appoint, may come to it. Let therefore no croſſes worldly, abate the reputation of it in our hearts. Let no Popiſh Paraſite trouble us, that with a foule mouth from a foule heart, calleth that uncleane, which God hath ſanctified. Deceitfull time-ſervers, God in time will diſcover, together with their impurities covertly committed, by contempt of his ordinance appointed for their good, nothing caſting out ſuch an ugly ſent into his noſtrils, as their forced chaſtity indeed very monſtrous villany doth. Till then ſcorne them that ſcorne God, and if they thinke you incumbred, know you them to be tormented within and without, a further torment tarying for them, when Gods time ſhall be. In policy to deſtroy piety, will prove but policy in the end, if this Chapter be true, which we know cannot deceive. But mariage muſt be according to theſe rules of conſanguinity and affinity, about which if any doubt ariſe, that by this Chapter you plainly cannot diſcuſſe; it ſhall be ſafe to confer with men learned in the Laws of God and men. The Civill Law reckoneth degrees one way, and the Common Law another way. The Civill keepeth this rule ſtill, that looke how many perſons there are, ſo many degrees there are, taking one away, to wit, the roote. The Common law ſtretcheth reſtraint further than Gods word doth, therefore idle in that reſpect, there being no tranſgreſſion where no Law of God is. Concerning mariage, many queſtions happen by occaſion to bee both thought of and ſpoken of, whereof I will give you a taſte.

Heb.13.4.

Quot ſunt perſonæ, tot ſunt gradus, una dempta, ſcilicet ſtipite.

First, ſeeing nothing is more contrary to mariage than want of conſent, Mariage, indeed, being but a conſent of two fit perſons to goe together in ſuch ſort, according to the will of God, and nothing more contrary to conſent, than error and compulſion; of both theſe, there ariſeth queſtion. And firſt of error and miſtaking, whether it doth make a mariage void or no? Anſwer is made, that error or miſtaking is of foure ſorts; Namely, of Fortune, of Quality, of Perſon, and of Condition. And for the two firſt, the rule is, that error of fortune or quality, excludeth not conſent of mariage. But the error of the two latter, namely, of perſon and condition, doth. Now error or miſtaking of fortune, is when the man taketh his bride, or ſhe her bridegroome, to bee richer than he proveth to be. Error of quality, when the bride is thought to be honeſt, chaſte, modeſt, painfull, and a good houſewife, when indeed, ſhee is defiled, drunken, ſlothfull, and a waſter. Error of perſon is, when to the woman is betrothed the eldeſt ſon, and the yongeſt by deceit given her. This was Iacobs caſe, who expected Rachel and had Leah, but his conſent after made it a mariage. Error or miſtaking of condition is, when the man or woman is thought free, and indeed is bond, which in old times was wont to diſſolve matrimony, but if the man knew it before, it was no cauſe of breach: Yet if his hap was to light of a woman defiled in ſtead of an honeſt, it might not diſſolve the mariage, although the error was a great deale worſe, then than to marry a bond-man in ſtead of a free. Nevertheleſſe in ſome Conſiſtories of forreign Countries, if a man finde ſuch an error, and accuſe her, and pray to bee ſeparated, this order is kept. Firſt, if the woman deny it, and the man cannot plainly prove it, although he have ſhrewd ſuſpitions, he ſhall not put her away, the 22. of Deut. plainely forbidding it. But if the fact bee evident by being with childe, &c. Then the Iudge firſt perſwadeth a reconciliation, willing the woman with all ſubmiſſion to pray pardon and forgiveneſſe at the mans hands, and wiſhing the man compaſſionately to remit it upon a new life, it being not done in his time. If the man will not be moved ſo to doe, then in the third place, the Iudge diligently enquireth, whether after it was knowne, the man had ever knowledge of the womans body, and if he had, then ſhall he be remedileſſe and take her; if he had not, the next queſtion is whether ſhee was abuſed after ſhe was betrothed to the man or no? if ſhe were, then as an adulterer ſhe is judged, if it were before ſhe were betrothed, and the man, after he knew it, touched her not, neither can be perſwaded to remit it, as an adulterer alſo ſhe is ſentenced, the 22. of Deut. requiring her to be put to death, who being defiled, yet after marieth as a maide and ſo deceiveth him that knew not of it. Thus did even the honeſter Heathens alſo cenſure ſuch women, as you may ſee in the Tragedy of Euripides, called Ion. And thus of error in miſtaking.

Fortuna.
Qualitatis.
Perſonæ.
Conditionis.

Gen.29.23.

Question againe is ſomewhat moved, touching a vow, whether that doe hinder mariage or no? And true anſwer is made, that a vow made by man or woman to live ſole and chaſte, who finde not that power and gift given them of God, hindreth them not from the remedy and ordinance of God againſt Gods will, may not binde, and Gods will is, that ſuch as feele cauſe ſhould marry, 1 Cor. 7. Againe, if a vow in a thing poſſible and lawfull, might not binde againſt the will of an earthly father or ſuperiour, how much leſſe muſt it hold againſt the heavenly father our God and maker, and become ſo a bond of iniquity to us? Plainely therefore, ſaith Cyprian, Some affirme them to be adulterers that marry after a vow, But I tell you they grievouſly offend that ſeparate ſuch.

Vow.
Vinculum iniquitatis.
Quidam nubentes poſt votum aſſerunt adulteros, Ego autem dico vobis, quod graviter peccant, qui tales dividunt.
lib. 1. Epiſt. diſt. 28.

A third Queſtion. Whether ſpirituall kindred, (as they call it) growing by Chriſtning a childe, or being God-father at the Biſhop,&c. hinder mariage? the anſwer is, that God hath no ſuch Law, but mans covetouſneſſe was the inventor of it; making many reſtraints, to get fee thereby of many diſpenſations. We are all the ſpirituall ſonnes and daughters of God, and yet marry, except in caſes by him forbidden, whereof this is none, that if ſhe and I chriſtned a childe together, or if I were God-father to her childe, I may not after marry with the mother of the childe, and ſo forth.

Fourthly, whether a man may marry her whom formerly he hath adulterouſly abuſed in her husbands life time? Anſwer. No, by the Canon Law, and ſurely they had much reaſon to diſlike of ſuch matches. * Yet in ſome Countries after penance and puniſhment, they ſuffer it, to avoid other inconveniences, and they ground themſelves upon Davids marying of Vriah his wife, whom he had wronged in her husbands life.

Fifthly, diverſity of Religion, whether doth it breake mariage? The anſwer is, no, and theſe Scriptures ſo teach us, If any brother have a wife that is an unbeleever, and ſhe conſent to dwell with him, let him not put her away. And if any woman have an unbeleeving huſband, who conſenteth to dwell with her, let her not put him away. For the unbeleeving huſband is ſanctified by the wife, and the unbeleeving wife is ſanctified by the huſband, 1 Cor. 7. If any man come unto me, and doe not hate his wife and children, and brethren and ſiſters (to wit, thinking ill in Religion, or going about to draw him away) he cannot be my Diſciple, Luke 14. 26. Therefore ſuch a wife a man may have, and yet his wife. Let the wives be ſubject to their huſbands (meaning although haply differing in Religion) that even they which obey not the Word, be wonne by the converſation of the wives, 1 Pet. 3. 1. After, the Church forbad ſuch mariages to bee made, as the Iſraelites were forbidden to marry with ſtrangers, leſt by ſuch wives they might be allured and drawne from God unto Idolatry, as was the wiſeſt man that ever was, Solomon. Reade Deut. 7. Exod. 34. Ioſhua 23. Eſra. 10. Nehem. 13. &c. And ſtill it is good to continue this care, for it is the chiefe band of love, when both hearts bee knit in God. And how can there be an agreeing love, where there is a diſagreeing faith? ſaith Saint Ambroſe. And therefore beware, O Chriſtian, how thou giveſt thy daughter to a Gentile or a Jew. But when two are already maried, diſſenting in Religion, they may not by colour thereof be put aſunder, as Anabaptiſts uſe to forſake their wives. The ſafe way is to looke before hand, and ſo may you prevent many a twitching griefe in the heart, that will ariſe if you draw two wayes. Examples there are too many knowne unto you of this thing. Inward woe, and outward ſhame, with much charge and coſt, ſome endure by their wives wilfulneſſe, when their children might alſo bee better brought up, but I ſtay my ſelfe. It is a biting thought to conſider, that one halfe of men daily ſerveth the devill.

Sixtly, yet force and compulſion, you will ſay, is contrary to mariage, becauſe it is contrary to a free conſent. Indeed it is a great wrong, to compell children againſt their wills to marry with ſuch as they abhor. For what peace can be where love is not? Nay, what miſchiefe will not there creep in, as brawlings, raylings, hatred, neglect of childrens education, of houſhold affaires, and many times, unfaithfulneſſe of the one towards the other, which God plagueth, and the world ſpeaketh ſhame of? In a word, what comfort either in ſickneſſe or health, or any way? But yet, if a mariage be thus made, although the childe (if at liberty) would not have ſo maried, it is a mariage and muſt ſtand.

Seventhly, for one that is violently taken away, what ſhall we ſay? Surely, the Civill Law appointed, that a maide taken away ſhould never marry with the perſon that ſo did take her; but ſhould have all his goods. And if ſhe did marry with him, then ſhould ſhe never bee capable of any goods of his, and if the father would conſent to ſuch a mariage, he ſhould be baniſhed. But the Canon Law determineth otherwiſe. Namely, that if the maide taken away willingly conſented, and the parents alſo afterward; then hee that ſtole her away, after penance done, might marry her.

Eighthly, for matter of contract before mariage, you may here take occaſion to thinke of it, and to remember, that it is a very ancient and commendable thing in the Church of God, thus to be betroathed with conſent of friends, before the day of full mariage. There are divers Treatiſes of it which you may reade. With conſent of friends, I ſay, becauſe ſo the Scriptures teach and much urge, giving the Father authority to deny his Childe; although ſhee hath beene carnally knowne, if hee doe not like, Exodus 22. and if hee will conſent, the offender ſhall both marry her and endowe her, whether hee will or no, ſuch a thing is the Parents authority in mariage. Sampſon though a man growne, yet ſpeaketh to his parents for a Wife, Iudges 14. Of Abraham for his ſonne Iſaac, and Iſaac for his ſonne Iacob, what doe you reade? As alſo how it grieved them that Eſau was ſo diſobedient as to marry without their conſents. And as was noted before in the queſtion of a vowe, if a promiſe made by a childe to God, without conſent of father might not ſtand, much leſſe muſt a promiſe made to man be good without parents allowance. For the civill Lawes of men ſurely,

* Concil. Triburienſe in Germania, Anno 895. Can. 40. Iale connubium anathematizat. Aug. to. 7. de nuptiis & concupiſ. lib. 1. cap. 10. Damnati. 1 Cor. 7. 12. Verſe 13. Verſe 14. Quomodo poteſt congruere charitas, ſi diſcrepet fides? &c.

Romani Sabinas, &c. apud Herod. pag. 1. alia exempla.

Sponſalia, Sponſus, et Sponſa, à ſponte ſpondendo.

Gen. 28. 26.

Numb. 30. 6.

surely, so did they insist upon this consent, that if the father be absent, and it unknowne either whether hee is dead, or whether hee bee alive; yet require they, that the childe stay three yeares to see if hee may bee heard of, and his consent had. And they will not admit that childe that is borne of one maried without this consent, unlesse it be such a match as is apparent the father would not have misliked, if hee had beene present. The Canons in like sort, altogether confirme this Consent of Parents, alleadging the example of Rebecka, and saying, Honorantur Rebeccæ parentes muneribus, consulitur puella, non de sponsalibus (illa enim expectat judicium Parentum, non est enim virginalis pudoris eligere maritum) sed jam desponsata viro, de profectionis die consulitur, &c. The Parents of Rebecka are honoured with gifts, and the maide is asked, but not touching the mariage, (for therein she rested upon the judgement of her parents, it is not agreeing with a maidens modesty, to chuse a husband) but being promised to a man, shee is asked concerning the journey, &c. In Euripides also, whersoever hee had it, a maide is brought in saying, Touching my mariage, my Parents will take care, for this thing belongeth not to me. Which saying, Luther very fitly, with change but of two words applyeth unto Faith, not disputing in temptation of the greatnesse and multitude of sinnes, but simply and wholly relying upon the mercy of God, in Christ, and saying: * Of sinnes my Saviour taketh the care, and that care belongeth not to me. Very naturall reason againe telleth and teacheth, that a childe, bred up with such care and charge of parents many yeares, should not at the end requite all their love so, as to dispose of himselfe, or her selfe, in a state that dureth to death, without their privity, advice, and consent. And the most undutifull childe that ever was, if hee or shee live to have a childe, would not be so served by that childe. Let then Gods Law, and mans Law, naturall reason, and common honesty, prevaile with all good children, to performe this duty to their parents, and let good parents againe, not neglect in due time to provide fit matches for their children, whereby their vertue and good report may remaine without blot or blemish, not standing ever upon the heapes of trash to bee had, but chiefly of Religion and honesty. Such parents as are faulty this way, being very well able to give that which is convenient for the preferment of their children, it is to bee wished, that the Christian Magistrate would compell them, as hath beene used in good governments and States. Certainly, it is a tyranny over their children, that is most worthy of punishment and amendment. The disparagement that hath growne to good houses this way, is too well knowne; and the spoile of those that might have been a comfort to their friends by well doing, if their parents would have done their duties, is to be lamented as often as it is thought of. Had I wist, (saith the olde Proverbe) commeth ever too late: And I pray God worke in the hearts of all parents to thinke of it, whilest they have time to prevent evill.

Ninthly, touching secret contracts, they have ever beene odious to God and his Church, and therefore, as many as regard either, will beware of them and avoide them. And if any such thing be done, discreet governours have held this course according to good Lawes. First, if a party claime a promise denyed by the other party, and have no proofe at all of it, not so much as one witnesse, but onely offereth to sweare it, in that case no oath shall be taken, neither shall the party proceede, to vexe the other, but must simply give over and be quiet. But if he or shee can prove it by due testimony, a day is appointed for both to appeare, and first the complainant is to be heard apart, and his tale laid downe with all circumstances, then is the Defendant called, and required to answer every point to the former tale, and if so truth cannot appeare, then two Witnesses, &c. The Canon Law is much to blame in this point, yeelding more to these secret contracts than it should doe, so crossing both the Law of God and Nature, as also of good Emperours and Governours in their time. Contracts before mariage, are made either by words of a future time, or present time: either publikely, or secretly: either with consent of parents, or without; either pure, or conditionall; either certaine, or uncertaine; &c. Words of the present time, when it is said, I doe take you for my husband; I doe take you for my wife. Words of the future time, when it is said, I will take you. The first of these formes doth binde, so that if either part breake and marry elsewhere, that actuall mariage is to be dissolved, and the former contract ratified, yea, although they have lyen together; but the latter form bindeth not, but may be altered, and the parties marry otherwise, if they dislike before mariage. Publique contracts are when the Minister and other honest friends and witnesses are present; Secret when none but the parties either to other passe promise, the former hath consent of parents, the latter hath none, and therefore is wicked and sinfull. Conditionall contracts are with conditions honest and lawfull, or otherwise: honest and lawfull conditions performed, make the contract good; dishonest and unlawfull, although performed, make no lawfull mariage, &c. Certaine contracts are when the party is certain, as this daughter by name; uncertaine when the party is uncertaine, as I will marry one of the Daughters, naming none. Of all which points, the Law hath large discourse, and many questions, which you may best learne of them that are professors of that knowledge, unto whose good advice, (as I said before) I hold it the safest way ever to have recourse upon any occasion. For a building well made and upon firme ground, will

* Νυμφευμάτων μὲν πρὸ ἐμῶν πατὴρ ἐμὸς μελήσει· ἐμοὶ δ' οὐ προσήκει τάδε. Conjugiorum meorum pater meus curam subibit. Et non est meum statuere hoc.

* Ἀνωδίνων μὲν πρὸ ἐμῶν σωτὴρ ἐμὸς μελήσει· ἐμοὶ δ' οὐ προσήκει τάδε.

Sponsalia, De futuro, de præsenti, publica, clandestina: cum cõsensu, sine consensu parentum: pura, conditionalia: certa, incerta, &c. Ego accipio te in meum. Ego accipiam te in meum.

will ſtand with comfort againſt all aſſaults and objections caſt out either by Satan deſirous to trouble our conſciences, or by evill tongues envying our peace.

Tenthly, touching Polygamy, whether it is lawfull for any man at once to have two or more wives; the truth is plaine: No, for God made but one Adam and one Eve, that neither man might expect moe wives, nor woman moe huſbands at once than one. And in this firſt inſtitution expreſly it was ſaid, A man ſhall leave father and mother and cleave to his wife, not wives, and they two, not they three or more, ſhall be one fleſh. Alſo when Lamech brake this Law by having moe wives, and after him both Jewes and Gentiles followed this liberty; Chriſt the true teacher calleth them the firſt inſtitution, and plainly ſaith, From the beginning it was not ſo; repeating the former Scripture, They two ſhall be one, &c. The Apoſtle Saint Paul following this truth, ſaith, for avoiding of fornication, let every man have his wife, not wives; and let every woman have her owne huſband, not huſbands. Again, let the huſband give to his wife due benevolence, not to his wives; And the wife hath not power of her owne body, but her huſband. Let a Biſhop be the huſband of one wife, not of many, as then was uſed of too many; ſtill and ever uſing (as you ſee) the ſingular number, not the plurall. Further, you know that mariage repreſenteth the covenant betwixt Chriſt and his Church, and therefore is called a Myſtery; but Chriſt hath onely one Church, and the Church hath only one Chriſt, therefore plurality of wives or husbands is a fault, and may not be endured. The good peace and unity that ought to be in maried couples is thus broken, and the houſe filled with brawlings, and heart-burnings, factions, diviſions and all ungodlineſſe. Therefore very reaſon teacheth us to abhor Polygamy. Good Governours moved herewith, have ever by their imperiall and godly Lawes puniſhed it and forbidden it, as might be ſhewed if it were fit.

But you will ſay, the godly Fathers in the old Teſtament had many wives, and God ſuffered it, &c. You muſt then againe conſider with your ſelfe touching them, that ſuffering and allowing, or commanding differ much. Suffered it was, commanded or allowed ſimply never. Secondly, latter lawes take away former, and Chriſt by calling them to the firſt inſtitution of mariage tooke away that permiſſion and ſufferance of Moſes. Thirdly, Priviledges doe not overthrow a rule. And therefore, although God having promiſed to make Abrahams ſeed as the ſtars of heaven for multitude, was pleaſed to ſuffer varieties of wives for a time, as a fit meanes ſpeedily and greatly to increaſe that poſterity and off-ſpring; yet it was not a taking away of his certaine rule, but when the cauſe ceaſed by a multitude proceeding from Abrahams loynes; the things ſuffered only for that end, ceaſed alſo, and may not any further be allowed.

Fourthly, we truly anſwer again, that we live by lawes, and not by examples. And touching faults in the Fathers, we well muſt remember the words of God to the Jewes by Ezekiel his Prophet, In Præceptis meis; In my Commandements you ſhall walke, and not in the commandements of your Fathers. And againe in this Chapter; After the doings of the Land of Ægypt wherein yee dwelt, ſhall ye not doe, neither after the manner of the Land of Canaan whither I will bring you, &c. But after my judgements ſhall ye doe, and you ſhall keep my Ordinances to walke therein, for I am the Lord, &c Thus of mariage making and keeping. Now a little of divorce and ſeparation might be added, if there were not more cauſe in theſe ſinfull times, to exhort all maried couples to mutuall love and faithfulneſſe, to patience and quietneſſe, and to the utter abandoning of all vaine wicked imaginations, ſuſpitions, and jealouſies, than to ſpeak of breakings, and departing the one from the other, to the great offence of God, griefe of friends, and ill example to others, ever more apt to learne what is evill than what is good. I will therefore ſpare this paines, and rather intreate all thoſe that feare God, often to remember yong Tobies prayer, that God in mercy would grant to him and his wife that they might become aged together, to which ſhe ſaid with him, Amen. We reade of the Indian women, that though their husbands have divers wives, yet they did by all meanes endeavour to continue in love with him, and when he dyeth, ſhe that was beſt beloved, with great joy and glory that ſhe was ſo, goeth into the fire with his corps, and burneth with his dead body. Such continuing affection in thoſe that know not God, muſt needs be a condemnation to all fickle tickle ſtarting aſide, in ſuch as know God, and his Commandement in this behalf. Holy, conſtant, and continued matrimony is like (ſay ſome) to that little City Zoar, where Lot was ſaved, when to the mountain he was unwillingly to go, and in filthy Sodom could not be ſafe. To live licentiouſly, is to live in Sodom, to live ſingle (having the gift) is to eſcape the mountain. Such as flying from the one, cannot attaine to the other having not the gift given of God, in little Zoar, that was betwixt both, that is, in holy wedlock, which is the middle eſtate, may be ſaved. Ever therfore make much of it, and lightly and unjuſtly break not in ſunder that holy knot. Sweetneſſe is the ſiſter of love, as bitterneſſe is the ſiſter of hatred. Mariage-love then being an holy love, will in all troubles taſte contentment and comfort, though not one way, yet another, ſtill to the preſerving of the knot, and of Chriſtian cohabitation. The two Kine that caried the Arke of God, kept one path, and turned neither to the right hand, nor to the left: ſo ſhould maried couples doe, ſaith Saint Gregorie, ſeeing by the profeſſion of the Chriſtian faith they alſo carry the Arke. If the Glaſſe which you looke in ſhould returne your countenance ſad

Gen.1.26. Gen.2.22. Gen.2.24. Gen.4.19. Mat.19.8. Mar.19.5. 1 Cor.7.2. Verſe 3. Verſ. 4.

1 Tim.3.2.

Epheſ.5.32. Reade Euripides in Andromache. ὡς χρηστὸν δυοῖν γυναικῶν ἀνὴρ ἓν' ἦνκας ἔχειν, &c. Againe, Κακὸν ἔστιν ἓν' ἀνδρὶ δοῦναι ἔχειν λέχη.

Privilegia non evertunt regulam Gen.22.17.

Legibus non exemplis Sancti non fuerunt. ἀναμαρτητοι.

Ezek.20.18,19

Tobit.8.7,8,9, 10.

Solinus lib.10. Cap.5. Cic. Tuſ. 4.5.

1 Sam.6.

when you are merry, or merry when you are ſad, were it not a great fault in the glaſſe? Certainly ſo is it, if maried couples differ, and be not merry together, ſorry together, contented together, and either of them ever as a true glaſſe to the other, ſhewing ſuch agreement as is fit for them, till God and time ſhall breake their dayes off, and take the one of them to him. The wife of Auguſtus Caſar, Livia, being asked of one how ſhee did live in ſuch peace with her husband the Emperour, who had his infirmities ſome way to worke anger? anſwered, Caſtitatem meam curatè tuendo; quicquid ille vult alacriter faciendo, nullas res ejus curioſe veſtigando, &c. By preſerving mine owne chaſtity carefully: by doing whatſoever he willeth cheerefully: and by not prying into, or medling with any matters of his curiouſly or buſily, &c. Three notable vertues in a wiſe woman, to continue love and peace betwixt her and her husband, the contraries wherof, are cauſes of many fires and flames where they ſhould not be. For theſe points of rare wiſdome; and for that ſhe had beene a meanes to preſerve many a Senators life, and others that were queſtioned and in danger in her time, had not ſhe graciouſly wrought for them; and for that ſhe had brought up many a mans childe by her charity; and maried many a poore maiden by her liberality; ſhe was mourned for a whole yeare, by all the Matrons and women in Rome, when ſhe was dead, by a ſpeciall decree of the Senate. So will vertue private and publike have his due honour, with thankfull hearts at laſt. Chaſte ſhe was you ſee, and no envy of man or devill can bury that vertue ſo, but that it will riſe and live with renowne in deſpight of all devils. Matronis dos pulcherrima vita pudica. O, it is a dowrie of dowries to a woman, a chaſte and vertuous carriage of her ſelfe; if ſhe be hard of favour, yet when ſhe looketh in a glaſſe, ſhe may cheerefully ſay to her ſelfe, Woman comfort thy ſelfe, for thy beauty is inward, thou art honeſt, and it is a great and approved beauty of all men. If ſhe be faire and not chaſte, ſhe may ſigh and ſay, O how faire ſhouldeſt thou have beene if honeſt? Nulla reparabilis arte, lapſa pudicitia. No art of man and wit, can make whole again decayed and broken vertue in this point; therefore with all power and ſtrength of will, wit and prayer, preſerve it and leave the report of it to the comfort of your poſterity and friends. Obedient alſo, you ſee, was this worthy Livia to her husband, not only doing, but doing cheerfully, that is, without any manner of croſſing or ſtopping, grudging or grieving, whatſoever he required. A vertue againe that will not die, but force forth praiſe even from very enemies. Vir à vi dictus, mulier à mollitie: A man hath his name of ſtrength and force; a woman of ſoftneſſe, becauſe in all things towards her husband, ſhe is ſoft and gentle, and moſt readily obedient and tractable. Gods Law hath ſo appointed that they ſhould obey, and all vertuous women deeply regard it. Very Ariſtotle an heathen man could write and teach, that a good woman taketh her husbands will to be a law to her, which ſhe will obſerve and not violate. The Stars all have their light from the Sun, and if you aske them, they will very thankfully acknowledge it. The body hath his grace from the head, and will be ruled by the head in all things without gain-ſaying. The man you know, is the womans head, Epheſ.5. Women had their veiles, and ſtill have their long haire, to note this holy order of obedience and ſubjection to their husbands, and therefore it was ſaid, Etiam Anathema ſit mulier, quæ comam ſibi amputat, quam Deus ad memoriam ſubjectionis illi dedit: Even accurſed let that woman be which cutteth off her haire, given her of God to remember her of obedience and ſubjection to her husband. Vaſhti, her refuſall to come when the King ſent for her, turned to her hurt you know, and the example of ſuch diſorder is deſired by all the wiſe to be prevented. Sara is propoſed to all vertuous women to be followed in her ready, loving, and conſtant obedience to her husband Abraham, calling him Lord, &c.

The third vertue of renowned Livia was, you ſaw, that ſhe buſily pryed not into her huſbands actions, neither medled with his matters, but left his place and the workes of it unto him, her ſelfe dealing with her owne duties. And what a thing is this to preſerve love and peace ever betwixt couples? Ieſabels ſuch medling with the matter of Naboth, wounded Ahab, overthrew her ſelfe, and the ignominy of it liveth and will never die. Stories doe yeeld us many other examples, and I would our owne times yeelded us none.

I ſpeake of unfit curioſitie, and not of any good concurrence in well doing. For we all know, Pilate had beene happie, if in that matter of his office and of juſtice hee had hearkened to his wives dutifull wiſh, and not proceeded as he did, againſt the Lord Jeſus. Thus remaineth honourable Livia the Empreſſe, a worthy example to all of her Sexe, how to live in love and peace with their husbands, ſo that no divorce ſhall bee either ſpoken or thought of during life, but longing wiſhes for continuance many yeares, and either to bee the former of the two, that goeth to the earth. For ſuch wives, as they were worthy ones whileſt they lived, ſo will they bee miſſed, and many times thought of, when they bee gone. Here might I ſtay, but ſince I am entred into this matter, give mee leave to adde two or three things more, being ever-ſhining vertues in women, and great meanes of love, amity, and unity betwixt maried couples. Faithfulneſſe to their Husbands is one. I meane a true conſtancy of heart, preferring their well-doing, before all men and matters whatſoever worldly. Such as was in Zipporah Moſes his wife, who moſt tenderly loving her Childe, and therefore very Bias: & Plautus in Auſph. Plutarch. in præceptis Conjugalibus. Ovid. Epiſt. 5.

Varro. Lactant. Gen. 3.

1 Pet. 3. 1. 1 Cor. 7. 4. Epheſ. 5. 22. Col. 3. Verſe 18. In Oeconom. 2. cap. 1.

Heſt. 1.

1 Kings 21. 7.

Mat. 27. 19.

Exod. 4. 25.

very loath to ſhed any of his blood, yet when ſhe ſaw her husband in danger, for omitting that Circumcision, rather than he ſhall miſcary, ſhee addreſſeth her ſelfe, and that ſpeedily to doe that duty, whereby her husband might live, although her childe ſmarted. And ſhe did it not in a fury (as ſome have taken the place) but in a moſt faithfull affection, to the preſervation of her husband, like a loving wife. Neither doe her words, (Sponſus tu mihi es ſanguinum, Thou art a husband of blood unto me) ſound forth anger and choler, but ſweetneſſe and love; as if ſhee had ſaid, My love to thee hath been ſuch (deere husband) as that it hath made me forget womanhood, to lay aſide all motherly affection, and to redeeme thy life, and continuance to mee, with the blood of my childe, &c. Such againe was that in Michal to David her husband, when ſhee let him downe at the window, to eſcape from her fathers fury, and laid an Image in the bed, as if hee had beene there ſicke. Such the care of Abigail, when ſhee heard her husband had over-ſhot himſelfe towards Davids meſſengers, rather than any hurt ſhould come to him for ſuch unadviſed ſpeeches, ſhee prepared a very honourable preſent, and goeth her ſelfe to prevent anger, which ſhe did indeed to the ſafety of her husband, and all his. Such the love of Theopompus his wife, who when her husband was taken and put in priſon by his enemies, getting leave to goe into the priſon to him on a time, gave him her clothes to eſcape in, and ſhee taking his, remained in his place, to abide any danger that might enſue, rather than hee ſhould bee oppreſſed by his foes. Such thoſe worthy women, that when the City was beſieged by Frederick Barbaroſſa, and at laſt licence given to the women, that they might depart, taking onely ſuch things with them as they could themſelves carry, in ſtead of any worldly riches which they enjoyed, they tooke upon their backes, and under their armes, their husbands and children, parents and kinsfolkes, to the eternall praiſe of their vertue, and the great aſtoniſhment of their enemies, that looked on and ſaw it. Unfaithfulneſſe and treachery to husbands, hath left another report in Stories, if I ſhould enter into it: but ſuch hatefull things are better forgotten and never knowne. Theſe gracefull vertues let all gracious women thinke of, and leave behinde them the like praiſe. Silence againe, or little ſpeech, what a vertue? what a preſerver of peace if a woman be bleſſed with it? The contrary, what hurt and by-words hath it wrought? Proverbio dicitur, Tres mulieres nundinas facere, The Proverbe ſaith, That three women make a faire. And words are wanting to women, as ſinging is to the Nightingale, who is ſaid, to bee onely a voice, in reſpect of the ſound ſhee giveth forth being ſo little a birde: as Verſes are wanting to a Poet; Figures of ſpeech to an Orator; or falſe arguments to a Sophiſter, that is, they abound with them, and often ſuperabound. Few words in a woman is a great ornament. Tacita quæq; melior eſt mulier ſemper, quam loquens. And many a woman holding her peace, is better thought of, than when ſhe ſpeaketh. Loquitur aut viro, aut per virum. A woman ſpeaketh either to her husband, or by her husband. To her husband, orderly and neceſſarily; by her husband, as unwilling to tattle much with ſtrangers, ſeeking the praiſe of a rowling tongue, and loſing peradventure the renowne of modeſty and wiſdome. Looke how milke is ſaid to kill the force of Gunpowder, and ſo be ever aſſured that ſoft words or ſilence will doe to anger betwixt man and wife. And let theſe things worke a love of little ſpeech, not multiplying words with your husband, eſpecially when he is moved and grieved with ſome other matters, vying and revying, and will he, nill he, ſtill having the laſt word; For ſurely that doth no good. The olde Painters, if they pictured a woman, were ever wont to put under her foote a Snayle, aſwell to remember this vertue of ſilence to her, which is in the Snaile, as of carying her houſe upon her backe, as the Snaile doth. Yet ſuch ſilence is meant, as doth not abandon affability and courteſie when there is cauſe, for this alſo is another great preſerver of love and amity, in ſo much, that the Wiſe man ſaith, Mulier comes exhilarat maritũ, & cum humaniter illum tractat cor illius reficit ac recreat. A gentle and milde woman maketh glad her husband, and when ſhe dealeth courteouſly with him, ſhe refreſheth and recreateth his very heart. Loving ſpeech is a Phyſitian to the mind, to cleere it and cleanſe it from much griefe. He that will take birds, may not come to them with a ſtaffe (ſaith the old Proverb) but a ſweet ſounding pipe is more availeable, and think you that ſhe which will have her husbands liking, muſt uſe harſh and bitter words? What a power had wiſe Abigail over that fierce anger of valiant David, with her ſoft words and milde ſpeech, even when he had but death and blood in his heart towards her husband and his family, for the great contempt ſhewed unto him? Could rough and ſowre ſpeeches have ſo prevailed? No, no, you know fire is not quenched with fire, but with cold and ſoft water. Pax & manſuetudo characteres animæ piæ, Peaceableneſſe and mildneſſe they are the notes, markes, and prints of a good minde, and of a holy and Chriſtian ſoule. But this is enough, I will goe no further. Try me and truſt me, you ſhall not repent it: Let the weapons of a woman be either ſoft words, or modeſt ſilence, with a dropping teare if there be wrong done, and it ſhall pierce a heart of ſteele, working ſuch effects as all the hot ſpeech that an unbridled tongue can utter ſhall not bring forth. Wiſdome and diſcretion againe in a wife, O powerfull meane to make love, and to doe much good. A wiſe woman (ſaith the Holy Ghoſt) buildeth her houſe: but the fooliſh deſtroyeth it with her owne hands. By a wiſe woman her husband is knowne in the gate, when he ſitteth with the

1 Sam. 19. 11.

1 Sam. 25.

Chiliad Eraſm. 3. Centur. 6. Proverb. 77.

Plutarch. in præceptis conjugalibus.

Baſil.

Verſe 24,25. Elders of the Land. Strength and honour is her clothing, and in the latter day he ſhall rejoyce. She openeth her mouth with wiſdome, and the law of grace is in her tongue, &c.

Community of things betwixt couples, worketh amity; and mine and thine betwixt them ſhould not be heard. They are yoke-fellows (and which is much more) they are one, therefore their divided goods may not divide them, but what the one hath, the other ought to have, and be joynt-poſſeſſors of whatſoever God granteth.

Let not the man deny what is fit to his wife, for ſhe hath a right; and let not the wife grudge her husband hers, for he hath a preheminence. If you put water into wine, and the water bee more, yet it is ſtill called wine: And even ſo the womans portion, put to the mans, is called his, although hers is the greater. If uſe bee common, and love hearty, for names and titles of order and cuſtome, wiſe couples will not any way contend, to the quenching of one ſparkle of Love.

Laſtly, an houſewifely care of her family, and all things belonging thereunto, cleanlineſſe, order, and ſuch like, as it beautifieth a woman, ſo pleaſeth it a man, and the effect of it is love and liking. If theſe be not, the contrary followeth. For the firſt, we all know, unleſſe a getter without have a keeper within, he ſhall be like one that filleth a veſſell, at the other end whereof one draweth out as faſt as he putteth in. For the ſecond, it both delighteth and profiteth, things pleaſing more that are freſh and well kept, and laſting longer being not daily uſed. The third thing, order, what a praiſe it is, may appeare by the conſideration of your graine only; what a thing it were if all ſorts ſhould be put together, Wheat, Rye, Oates, Barley, Peaſe, Beanes, and not every kinde laid by it ſelfe, it would overthrow the uſe and good, even of all; or elſe procure a worke to ſever them againe. Theſe things then, and ſuch like, will work ſuch amity, unity, and love betwixt man and wife, that the matter of divorce ſhall never come in any queſtion, no not in thought, by any man indued with either piety or reaſon: Wherefore I have rather choſen briefly to note them, than to ſpeake any thing of Divorce.

But what may ſome ſay? I have touched many things how a woman ought to behave her ſelfe to worke and continue liking in her husband, and I have ſaid nothing or little of the mans duty to the woman. Indeed it is true. Firſt, and more I have ſpoken of women, becauſe as they are the weaker, ſo they are often the workers of diſcontent, either through wilfulneſſe, or at the leaſt through want of care to doe otherwiſe; but yet I acknowledge there is a law alſo for the man which he ſhould regard and not breake, delivered in the Word, and eaſily to be remembred by good minds: Be not as a Lion in thine owne houſe (ſaith wiſe Syrach) nor oppreſſe them that are under thee. Huſbands love your wives, and be not bitter to them, (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul.) And dwell with them (ſaith S. Peter) as men of knowledge, giving honour to the women, as the weaker veſſels, even as they are heires together of the grace of life, that your prayers may not be interrupted. Her Parents and friends have committed her to thy truſt, and ſhe her ſelfe forſaking Father and Mother, and all the world, hath given her ſelfe unto thee; how then may ſhe be uſed ill? So could S. Chryſoſtome reaſon. Ariſtotle himſelfe being but a Heathen, could finde fault (and moſt juſtly) with certaine that made no other of their wives than of ſervants. Shall a man contend with his wife? Non habet victoria laudem: there is no praiſe in the victory, ſaith one well. By ill dealing, Morbus non tollitur, ſed augetur, & exaſperatur; the diſeaſe is not taken away, but increaſed and exaſperated. Wherefore in old times, they did uſe at mariages to place Mercury by Venus, and the goddeſſe of eloquence and delectable ſpeech, to note that whatſoever maried couples will obtaine one of the other, it muſt be done, not by any unkinde courſe, but by good perſwaſion and loving ſpeech. And when they offered ſacrifice, they pulled out the gall of the ſacrifice and caſt it away: to ſignifie likewiſe, that in mariage no bitterneſſe ſhould be uſed. Thus are men alſo adviſed by all meanes to loving cariage of themſelves in all things towards their wives. Wherefore ſince God commandeth it, and man perſwadeth it, who is he regarding either God or man that will forget it? Away then with all thoughts of divorces, and as men and women that make account of a judgement day, let either part beare with the weakneſſe of the other, and abhor ſuch crimes as ſhould ſtir up to any ſeparation. God in mercy ſtrengthen us all. Amen.

Ephes. 4.30. Col. 4 19.

Hom. 26. in 1. Cor.

Ariſt. polit. 1. in ca. 1.

CHAP. XIX.

The ſumme of this Chapter. Verſe 2.

THis Chapter containeth a repetition of Lawes, formerly given and compriſed in the Decalogue, to the end that by this ſecond rehearſall they might the better be explained, and received with greater care and regard of them. The firſt is generall, Ye ſhall be holy, for I the Lord your God am holy: where by holineſſe is meant true piety towards God, and juſt dealing towards our neighbours, in ſuch meaſure as we are able in this mortality to attaine unto. For here wee ſee but in part, know but in part, and are regenerated but in part, being nevertheleſſe juſt by imputation, and labouring to perfection. Theſe words are by Romiſh Teachers applyed to Miniſters, niſters, and urged to prove that they ought not to marry. But doth the Text here ſo ſay, or you ſee with your eyes, that God ſpeaketh theſe words to all Iſrael, and Peter alleaging them in his Epiſtle, applyeth them to all in generall. If therefore they forbid mariage as a breach of holineſſe, ſure they muſt forbid it to all men and women, as well as to Miniſters. But woe to that doctrine that oppoſeth Gods ordinance to holineſſe, when no unholineſſe can be ordained by him, and the end of mariage is to preſerve holineſſe, and to aboliſh uncleanneſſe both from man and woman. The reaſon alleaged, Our heavenly Father is holy, ſhould much move us. For doe wee not ſee here among us daily, how they that ſerve wicked and ill diſpoſed men, will labour to pleaſe them even in evill? How much more then ſhould we with our beſt care endevour to pleaſe him in holineſſe, that is moſt holy himſelfe, and will crowne it with eternall comfort in us. 1 Pet.1.16.

Imputatione et inchoatione.

2 The reverence of Father and Mother; The keeping of the Sabbaths; The avoiding of Idolatry and molten gods; A free heart in all offerings, and a due regard of commanded circumſtances in the ſame; theſe are all, Law, which have beene ſpoken of before, and therefore to that, and to my Treatiſe upon the Commandements I referre you. In the ninth verſe you reade thus, When you reape the harveſt of your Land, you ſhall not reape every corner of your field, neither ſhalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harveſt. Thou ſhalt not gather the Grapes of the vineyard clean, neither gather every Grape of thy vineyard, but thou ſhalt leave them for the poore, and for the ſtranger: I am the Lord your God. A worthy Law, ever to teach us both what care the Lord hath of the poore, and what care we muſt have. If we have it, there are many bleſſings promiſed to it, if we want it, as fearfull curſes. Yet what coldneſſe poſſeſſeth mans heart who ſeeth not? But when the Lord commanded ſomething to bee left in the field for them, was his meaning, that of that which came home, and was put into the barne, they ſhould have nothing? No, no, both in the fields, and out of barne and houſe, the poore muſt ever be remembred, if we meane to heare that joyfull ſpeech one day, When I was hungry you fed me, and when I was naked you cloathed me. But the Lord willed here preciſely ſomewhat to be in the field, becauſe hee knew our corruption, which more hardly parteth with a thing already houſed and brought in, than when it is yet abroad in the field. A purſe once tyed upon knots will not eaſily open when it ſhould; and therefore to meet with this hardneſſe, and to provide the better for them, he commandeth a care in the field before it come in, and yet expecteth the other too as need requireth. O where is this care with worldly men that rake and over-rake their fields with greedy mind, to have even the uttermoſt they can get from it, that gather their fruits ſo, as if they ſee but one Apple left upon the tree, will rather ſet a Ladder of purpoſe to fetch it downe, than they will goe without it? If any poor come, they are rated and reviled, and driven away, as if they were dogges rather than men and women as we be, children of the ſame father, heires of the ſame promiſes, and redeemed with the ſame price, the precious blood of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour. Will God ever winke at this wickedneſſe, and proſper theſe thus gotten goods upon our poſterity? Thinke of it but in reaſon, and tell mee what your conſcience ſaith? The example of Boaz God hath left us in his Word, for a good rule in this kinde, worthy a religious and carefull following. Into whoſe field when Ruth came to gleane a few eares of corne for her reliefe and her mother in law Naomi, firſt, an honeſt ſervant appointed over the reapers (let all ſervants and overſeers marke it) gave her leave without rebuke and checke. And then Boaz himſelfe comming, called her, when he knew ſhe was a poore ſtranger, and ſaid unto her, Heareſt thou, daughter, goe to no other field to gather, neither goe here-hence, but abide here by my maidens; Let thine eyes be upon the field that they doe reape, and goe thou after the maidens. Have I not charged the ſervants that they touch thee not? Moreover, when thou art a thirſt goe unto the veſſels and drink of that which the ſervants have drawne. At the meale-time come thou hither, and eate of the bread, dippe thy morſell in the vinegar. He alſo bad his ſervants not onely to ſuffer her to gleane, but of purpoſe to let fall ſome of their ſheaves for her, that ſhe might take it, &c. Here is mercy and pitty to a poor ſtranger chronicled up in this Booke of God, that his fame may never dye who ſhewed it, that it may teach us that live, and that it may condemne all churliſh greedy gripple Natures to the worlds end. O, let it profit you, and let the poore man bow before you, and bleſſe you for your comfort, as ſhee did here Boaz. Ruth.2.1. Verſe 3. Verſe 4. Verſe 5. Verſe 6,7,8. Verſ. 9. Verſe 10. Verſe 8. Verſ.9. Verſ.14. Verſ.15. Verſ.16.

Againe, foraſmuch as harveſt time is the time of your receiving at Gods hands a great largeſſe and bountifull Almes, your fruits of hay and corne, or grapes and all gatherings, therefore at that time eſpecially the hand that receiveth ſhould give, thankfully towards God, feelingly in it ſelfe, and cheerfully towards the poore receiver. So ſhould all bee well, and God both give more, and proſper upon poſterity what he giveth, which otherwiſe by all the Lawyers in the world, and all the perpetuities in the world cannot be ſo tyed to your ſeed, but that God will blow both it and them away. And when we thus ſpeake of giving the poore their part, doe you then thinke God his owne part muſt bee imbeſſelled and taken away, I meane your due and true tythe? No, no, if the creature muſt not bee defrauded, much leſſe muſt the Creator bee robbed. Reade the Prophets words, and pray for a feeling heart and an open hand according to duty

Mal.3.2,9,10. dutie and right. I cannot forbeare to tell you (in this place) of a fearefull judgement of God, ſhewed not many yeares agoe in theſe parts, upon a greedy grudger of his Tythe to them, to whome it was by law due. A Gentleman of good ſort, our neighbour hereby, and well knowne to all this Countrey, had the Tythes of a Parſonage, and by the right thereof, demanded Wooll, of a man alſo rich, and the owner of many hundreds of Sheepe. This hard hearted man ſent a ſmall quantity; the ſervants ſhewed it their maſter. He willed upon the holy day next it ſhould be brought to the Church, that the neighbours might ſee it, who all upon ſight knew the wrong. The Gentleman demanded his due; the other denyed any more, and withall vowed in choler, out of a naughty heart, that if he were forced to pay any more, hee would never keepe any more Sheepe, but deprive him of that profit from him. The Law forced him, and he thereupon put away his Sheepe, ever after falling ſo in decay (God following of him with his wrath for his wicked minde) that the day when the Gentleman was buryed (being not very long after) he among the reſt of poore people, ſtood to receive ſuch Almes as was given at the Funerall. Let it ſtrike, ô let it move us to thinke with our ſelves, what it is to grudge God his Tythe, or any man his due in this ſort, to whom the Lawes wee live under, juſtly give it, and ever pray wee againſt a naughty heart, choaked and poyſoned with the love of this world, above all, care to be ſaved in the great and fearfull day.

Note well.

3 The law againſt ſtealing, hath an explanation here added worthy marking, in theſe words, Neither deale falſly, nor lie one to another; as if he ſhould have ſaid, Miſtake not the matter of ſtealing, neither judge better of your ſelves thã there is cauſe, but know it ever for a truth, that although yee breake no houſes, nor robb upon the way, &c. yet if you deale falſly one with another, in buying and ſelling, or any way, and lye one to another by affirming it coſt ſo, and ſo, or by denying any thing committed to your credit and cuſtody, aſſure your ſelfe you are a ſtealer, and guilty of that Commandement, Thou ſhalt not ſteale. An other Branch followeth in the thirteenth verſe, The Worke-mans hire ſhall not tarry with thee till the morning; whereof reade the foure and twentieth of Deuteronomy: And Syrach 34. For this alſo is ſtealth and a great ſtealth, little thought of, to robbe the Labourer of his hire. God grant it bee not found in many that make great ſhew of Religion, great Gentlemen, great Merchants, great Clothiers, &c. Never is the poore Work-man brought low enough, never is his payment ſlow enough. Shall not God viſit for theſe things? Thinke of it more, and bee well aſſured you cannot thinke of it too much. Iob ſaith, his land cryed not againſt him, neither the furrowes thereof complained together. Take heed it be ſo with you in your land, in your merchandiſe, in your cloathing: Let them not crie, for their crie is ſhrill and fearfull. You may ſow, and an other eate for this wickedneſſe, and your plants be cleane rooted out. Iob ſaith (and doe you marke it as you feare your God) If I reſtrained the poore of their deſire, or have cauſed the eyes of the widow to faile, or have eaten my morſels alone, and the fatherleſſe have not eaten thereof, (For from my youth he hath growne up with me as with a Father, and from my mothers womb I have been a guide unto her) If I have ſeene any periſh for want of cloathing, or any poore without covering, If his loynes have not bleſſed me, becauſe he was warmed with the fleece of my ſheepe, If I have lift up mine hand againſt the fatherleſſe, when I ſaw I might helpe him in the gate: Then let mine arme fall from my ſhoulder, and mine arme be broken from the bone. How much leſſe then would Iob pinch and wring, and grinde the faces of the poore widowes and children that riſe up early, and goe late to bed, eating the bread of carefulneſſe, and giving away their beloved ſleepe, all to make him rich, and his houſe gay, and his poſterity ſtrong; O how much leſſe I ſay againe, would hee have pinched them, and twitched them, either by an unconſcionable price for their worke, or by an ill paiment? You ſee it, you muſt worke it, and to your ſoules I leave it.

Verſe 13.

Iob 31.16. Verſe 17. Verſ.18. Verſ.19. Verſ.20. Verſ.21. Verſ.22.

4 Thou ſhalt not curſe the deafe, neither put a ſtumbling block before the blinde, but ſhalt feare thy God, I am the Lord. It was ever eſteemed a barbarous cruelty to inſult over a mans imperfection, and the children of God muſt beware of it. By the Deafe, here are alſo meant men and women abſent, who though they could heare being preſent, yet being not there, they are deafe, and hear not. Such would not bee curſed, that is, evill ſpoken of, becauſe they are not preſent to heare and anſwere. God (you ſee) hateth and forbiddeth this wrong, and as many as are Gods will forbeare it for their good. Baſe and bad perſons ſpend their time in carping, ſlandering, and ill reporting, as though they were ſo much better, by how much they make others worſe. So did S. Auguſtine that worthy Father abhorre this vice, that over his Table where he dyned he wrote two * Verſes, to tell all them that ſate with him, If they carped at any perſon abſent, that Table was not for them, nor they welcome Gueſts to him. By the Blinde, are alſo meant ſuch as are ignorant and unskilfull in any thing, as an ignorant Buyer, Learner, Trader, &c. Before whoſe eyes you may not lay a ſtumbling blocke, deceiving them, either by falſe Doctrine, badde Life, crafty cunning, or the like. For as pittifull or more is the blindneſſe of minde, as the blindneſſe of body, and therefore any way to abuſe the one or the other by ſtumbling blockes, is hatefull and damnable.

* Quiſquis amat dictis abſentem rodere vitam, Hanc menſam vetitam noverit eſſe ſibi.

5 Yee ſhall not doe unjuſtly in judgement. Thou ſhalt not favour the perſon of the poore, nor honor the perſon of the mighty, but thou ſhalt judge they neighbour juſtly. A good law againſt a great evill in the Common-wealth, touched before in Exodus, whither you may turne and ſee the evill. Who can be ſafe in life or limbe, in lands or goods, if Affection be Iudge? Booteth it to be honeſt or juſt, or blameleſſe, if not Truth, but Faxcie trie mee? No, no. And therefore bleſſed bee God for Law and Iuſtice, and Woe to the Land where Affection ruleth. Honeſtius eſt cum judicaveris amare, quàm cum amaveris judicare: It is farre better to love when thou haſt judged, than to judge when thou loveſt. Clamat pauper, & nullus exaudit; clamat dives, & quilibet applaudit: The poore man cryeth, and no man heareth; the rich man cryeth, and every man praiſeth and ſmootheth. O heavy Countries caſe, where thus it is! Doe the thing that is juſt therefore to the Rich and Poore, and that ſhall give thee peace at the laſt. Honored men may be for their Wealth, and feared greatly for their Strength, but onely Iuſtice is that which getteth Love and a good Report, with all men that can ſpeake well for any cauſe, and have not ſold their Tongues and Soules too, unto Envie.

Verſe 15.

Exod. 23. 3.

6 Thou ſhalt not walke about with Tales among thy people. Thou ſhalt not ſtand againſt the blood of thy neighbour; I am the Lord. Both theſe are branches of Murder, and in the Commandement ſee more of them. A great miſchiefe in either Kingdome, Countrey, or Houſe, is a Tale-teller, and hee that is wiſe will beware him. It is a ſhrewd blow that killeth three at a blow, and that not in body onely, but in ſoule alſo. The Tale-teller killeth himſelfe, and peradventure twenty more that heare him, and thereupon raſhly condemne the innocent. The Spirit of God ſtirreth up David that holy man, to begge of God, that he would root out all ſuch deceitfull Lippes and Tongues that ſpeake proud things. Deceitfull Lippes are thoſe that ſpeake ſmoothly, and thinke wickedly, and thoſe alſo that ſpeake falſely and ſlanderouſly of their brethren: Both ſhall bee rooted out in Time, but untill then they vexe the ſoules of thoſe that deſerve it not at their hands.

Verſe 16.

Reade Ezekiel 22. 9.

Pſal. 12. 3.

7 But what if I be ſo wiſe, that I can hold my tongue from ſpeaking evill, and yet ſecretly hate him in my heart? See what followeth in your Chapter, Thou ſhalt not hate thy brother in thy heart: But thou ſhalt plainly rebuke thy neighbour, and ſuffer him not to ſinne. Secret hate then, is murder of the heart, and againſt the Commandement. Uſe it therefore at your perill, and ſay, God either ſeeth not, or regardeth not: Your judgement at laſt ſhall teach you, He doth both, for the Law is not idle, nor any Law Hee giveth to the ſonnes of men.

Verſe 17.

8 Thou ſhalt not avenge, ſaith the next Law, and why? In another place, we reade, For vengeance is mine, and I will repay. Wreſt not Gods Sword therefore out of his hand; ſit not downe in his ſeat, nor make thy ſelfe a god, for feare of the end. Well, let him goe then, I will not Avenge, but ſure I will Remember him: Forgive I may, but never Forget, &c. See what followeth in the very next words of this verſe, Neither ſhalt thou be mindfull of a wrong againſt the children of thy people. Remembring then (you ſee) is condemned as well as Avenging, and therefore it ſtandeth you upon, both to Forgive, and to Forget; or elſe the Lord ſhall Forget you out of his Book of Life. Nay, ſee more: All this is not yet enough, but we muſt love alſo our neighbours, and that even as our ſelves; or elſe we periſh. For, I am the Lord, (ſaith the verſe) that is, One that ſeeth, and hateth, and will ſmite thee, in that ſtrength, that thou canſt not reſiſt nor endure. Fooliſh politicke, then thinke of Piety, and abhorre that Policie that devoureth Piety, and deſtroyeth thee: Thou canſt not live ever, but muſt die, and come unto judgement.

Verſe 18.

Loco divitiarũ, quidam odia ſua filiis relinquunt.

Deadly feude.

9 Thou ſhalt not let thy Cattell gender with others of divers kindes. Thou ſhalt not ſow thy field with mingled ſeed: Neither ſhall a garment of divers things, as Linnen and Woollen, come upon thee. God will have his creatures uſed in their kinde, as he hath created them, and his ordinance neither overthrowne, nor corrected. With divers ſeeds they ſow their ground, which follow divers doctrines in Religion. And linnen and woollen garments are forbidden, either becauſe the Gentiles uſed them, to whom God would not have his people like; or to note, how hatefull to God is a fantaſticall head, carryed about with toyes and idle devices. Hee that is a Papiſt here, and a Proteſtant there, he that taketh part with both ſides in a quarrell or matter worldly, as a plea of law, or ſuch like, you may rightly thinke odious by this Law, &c.

Verſe 19.

A Linſy-woolſey Lawyer.

10 Whoſoever medleth with a woman that is a bond-maid affianced to a huſband, and not redeemed nor freedome given her, he ſhall be ſcourged, but they ſhall not die, becauſe ſhe is not made free, &c. With God there is no reſpect of bond or free, but in ſeats of Juſtice, and execution of puniſhments there is, and ought to be great difference, becauſe there commeth not ſo much hurt to the Common-wealth by one, as by another. The Law of the Free-woman you had in Exod. 22. 16. And leſt any ſhould thinke this fault to be little, becauſe they are but ſcourged, there is a ſacrifice appointed to make an atonement, ſo ſhewing that it is a ſinne not to bee done away, but by Chriſt. And as well doth Fornication ſhut out from the Kingdome of GOD, as Adultery.

Verſe 20.

11 Alſo when ye ſhall come into the Land, and ſhall have planted every tree for meate, you ſhall count the fruit thereof uncircumciſed three yeares, and it ſhall not be eaten, &c. A mercifull providence for poſteritie: for if a Tree bee ſuffered to beare too ſoone, as the firſt, ſecond, or third yeare, Verſ. 21. 1 Cor. 6.

yeare, it doth not usually endure long, but decayeth sooner than otherwise it would, the fruit draweth away the nourishment, which should make the roote and Tree strong. Secondly, it restraineth covetousnesse in the Jewes, and taught them how God hateth scraping all to a mans selfe for his time, and nothing caring for posterity. Such are they that will take the heart out of the land, before their tearme end, cut downe the wood, Fruit-trees, hedges, destroy the game, and doe all the mischiefe they can and dare doe. The Lord seeth them, and thinketh of them, though they little thinke of themselves, and of their malicious actions. Thirdly, it shadowed how little worth the fruits of youth usually are, either to the Church or Common-wealth, till yeares have bred strength of judgement, and made them both see and doe what is profitable.

Psal.25. Even as uncircumcised fruits, so are the Actions of youth; and therefore David prayed for pardon in this case.

Verse 24. Vers.25 12 But the fourth yeare all the fruits thereof shall be holy, to the praise of the Lord. And in the fift yeare shall ye eate of the fruit thereof, &c. Three yeares they must forbeare, to suffer the fruit to grow as neare as they could, to the end the Tree might bee strong, and endure to posterity. The fourth must now bee consecrated to the Lord, and the fift they might begin to eate. This consecration of one yeare to the Lord, sheweth how due from man, and accepted of God, true and hearty thankfulnesse is. Secondly, that God would have them acknowledge the fruits of trees, as well as of the earth by corne, to proceed of Gods goodnesse, mercy and providence, without all desert or merit of theirs. Thirdly, that they were to use them as all other his good gifts, soberly, temperately, and orderly; not riotously and wantonly, as too many now a dayes doe, giving so, and so much for a few Cherries, or such like, when there is no cause in Physick for health, or so forth; but onely wantonnesse and luxury, little thinking how vile themselves are, if God should looke upon them in Justice, or how many needy naked soules, as deare to God as they, want, and would be glad of one penny or halfe-penny of that money, so wantonly without cause bestowed upon their belly.

Deut.19.

Verse 25. 13 Ye shall not eate flesh with the blood: ye shall not use witchcraft, nor observe times. The first Part was spoken of in the first Chapter, verse 10. in the seventh Chapter, verse 26. Contrary to which they offended, 1 *Sam.*14.32. Touching the latter Part, you may know that the Gentiles observe Fowles after two sorts; Either their [a] Crying, or their [b] flying. And neither of these is forbidden, as farre as there is any naturall reason and cause; which is in fore-shewing of raine, tempests, and alteration of weather. For long observation hath found it, and good Writers agree of it, that the continual crying of the Night Owle all the night long, prognosticateth death: the gathering together of many Ravens, playing and crying, fore-tell faire weather: Chickens crying loud, [c] Swallowes flying about the waters and pooles, crying, shew it will be raine, &c. These and the like may be observed, and it is lawfull wisedome, no offence at all: but either by flying or crying, to gather the argument of good successe or ill, in your actions and businesse, this is wicked and damnable: and therfore the art and skill pretended of such Wizards, unlawfull, what feats so ever they play to confirme the credit of it; as one with a Razour cut a whetstone in peeces to confirme his Art. You may be sure it is either a jugling cast deceiving the eye, or the power of Satan, which may not leade us to prohibited things. And wise men in all times have noted the folly of these toyes.

[a] Ex garritu.
[b] Ex volatu Aspicium.
[c] Et studiose quærentes pedunculos.
Actius Navius.
Deut.13.

Iosephus telleth, how one Mosselanus, a Jew, a valiant Souldier in the Campe of Alexander the Great, when the march suddenly stayed, asking what was the cause, was told that it was to take notice by such a Fowle, shewing the Fowle, whether they should goe forward or no; for if shee tooke her flight before them, then should they march on; if not, then returne. Wherewith he mightily displeased, saying nothing, tooke his bow, and with an arrow presently strake the Fowle dead. Whereat, when the Southsayer, and many of the Hoast were offended, he answered, That it was a foule shame for so many worthy men, to seeke knowledge of her, that knew not what should happen to her selfe; for if she had, she would not have come there, or not sitten till he had shot: and so the matter was laughed out, and the feare gone.

contra Appion.

Augustus Cæsar was wont to make a great observation of it, if his left shooe came in stead of his right, in the morning; and among us, if the Salt fall at the table, &c. These are Follies, and as follies they must be rejected. Yet touching Times, there is a lawfull observation of Holy-dayes, and Festivall dayes, of Fasting dayes, &c. And there is a naturall and physicall observation, for Planting, Sowing, Mowing, &c. For Purging, Blood-letting, Bathing &c. All lawfull, and not forbidden here: Onely superstitious observations, devised by Satan, without any Christian or naturall reason, are here prohibited, and must of us still be abhorred, in which kinde the Heathens abounded, for want of knowledge. Remember the eight and twentieth of Deut. To feare God rightly and truly, and then blessed at home, and abroad, in the Towne, and in the Field, in thy Basket, and in thy Dough, in thy Sheepe, and in thy Kine, &c. Contrariwise, for want of Religion, and not because the Crow sate on that hand, or the Hare crossed the way, &c.

His morsel out of his mouth, his staffe out of his hand, &c.
Sub cane & ante canem periculosæ purgationes, &c.

Vers.27. 14 Ye shall not cut round the corner of your heads, neither shalt thou marre the tufts of thy beard. Many time it hath beene noted, how carefull the Lord was, not to have his people imitate the Fashions

Fashions of the Gentiles, for feare one thing will draw on another; and in the end, even Idolatrie and false worship. We in these dayes are wholly given to Forren fashions, the Lord in mercie save us from forren superstition, and continue his Gospell and peace upon Israel, preventing and confounding their purposes, that craftily endeavour the supplanting of both Truth and Peace, under the colour of Policy and Safety, &c. The cutting and marking of their flesh, was also Heathenish.

Apud Herodotum, Ægyptii tondent in funere barbam, Alii capita Persæ et se, et equos, et jumenta. Popish shaving is Heathenish.

15 Thou shalt not make thy Daughter common, to cause her to be a Whore, lest the Land also fall to Whoredome, and the Land be full of wickednesse. This is a branch of the Commandement against Adultery; admonishing Parents to looke to their Houses, and Magistrates to looke to the Land, that there be no Stewes, nor other places of sinne suffered for any colour whatsoever, as is in Rome for gaine, even a yearly Revenue. The power of Satan over the Heathens in this matter, was fearefull, and therefore the Lord admonisheth his people to beware of their Fashions and sinnes. The Cyprii (say our Bookes) before the mariage of their Daughters and Maidens, appointed certaine dayes and places, when and where they were to come together, so to raise a dowry and mariage portion for them. The Locrenses thought it was a way to please their gods, to prostitute their Virgins, and therefore in any distresse and danger, of warre and the like, they would make vowes, that if they might have victory and be delivered, so and so many Maydens, upon a solemne Feast appointed for that purpose, should bee prostituted. These horrible things serve to shew us the corruption of our nature, and the blindnesse entered into our understanding by the first fall, till God renue us by his holy Spirit, and give us the light of his Word, as also to stirre us up to thankfulnesse to our most gracious God, for better knowledge vouchsafed to us, whereby we are kept from being such beasts and monsters, as these Heathens were, and men still are, without him. Verse 28. Verse 29.

16 You shall not regard them that worke with spirits, neither Southsayers, you shall not seeke to them, to be defiled by them, I am the Lord your God. Conferre this with Deut. 18. and with that which hath been said in the Commandement against Witches, &c. Verse 31.

17 Thou shalt rise up before the hoarehead, and honor the person of the old man, and dread thy God; I am the Lord. A branch of the Commandement, for these old men are in stead of Fathers: And therefore the Apostle willeth them to bee exhorted as Fathers. Againe, old age is a blessing of God, and therefore it should bee reverenced. The contempt of it, is the contempt of God, and so taken by him, as these words shew here, and dread thy God. This honor to bee done to them, must also teach them so to live and behave themselves, as they may be worthy of all honor and reverence. Verse 32. 1 Tim. 5. 1.

18 And if a stranger sojourne with you in your Land, you shall not vexe him. But the stranger that dwelleth with you, shall be as one of your selves, and thou shalt love him as thy selfe. For ye were strangers in the Land of Ægypt, &c. A gracious God thus every way to meet with our corruption, and to restraine it by his wise and holy lawes. He knoweth, and we should learne, to feele the aking heart in a stranger that is out of his Countrey, and farre from his friends, wanting many things that hee is ashamed to speake of, and knoweth not how to get them. Therefore not further to be vexed with our churlish and unkinde words or deeds. But we to remember the old saying, Aut fuimus, aut fuimus, aut possumus est quod hic est: Either we are, or have beene, or may bee that which he is. God make us thankfull for his comforts. Verse 33. Verse 34.

19 Ye shall not doe unjustly in Judgement, in Lyne, Weight or Measure: You shall have just Ballances, true Weights, &c. God is truth, and requireth truth in us. Againe, evill gotten goods the third heyre shall not enjoy, and therefore truth is best. These are the lawes of a righteous God, and we must regard them, if ever we meane to be regarded of him. Happy shall we be if we doe it: And let this suffice of this Chapter. Verse 35. Verse 36. Verse 37.

CHAP. XX.

The summe of this Chapter.

THis Chapter repeateth Lawes mentioned before, adding punishments to the breakers of them, which before was not done. It shall not therefore be needfull to goe over them all againe particularly, but leave you to conferre them your selfe, which you may doe by help of the Quotations in the margent of your Bible, referring you to the former places where the same Lawes were mentioned, without addition of that punishment which here now is laid downe. Onely for order sake, I will give you these few observations.

1 In laying downe severall paines and punishments for the breakers of his Lawes, the Lord teacheth, that Common-wealths and Governments doe stand and are preserved, as well by punishments of the evill, and by rewards of the good, and that as needfull therefore is the one, as the other. If either reward or good examples of such as love obedience would serve, it were best, but it never would, nor will, the lesser part being ever so led, & the greater by feare of paines. The saying is old and true, It is as great a vertue to keepe what is gotten, as first to get it; and even so, ſo, is it a duty in a Magiſtrate to ſee Lawes kept, as at firſt to make them. And ſince they will not be kept of all without puniſhment, therefore puniſhments are moſt neceſſary. Idle then and abſurd was it in thoſe Heretikes, that argued God not to bee Author of the old Teſtament, becauſe there are ſo many puniſhments mentioned and executed. For it is no fault in a Chirurgion, to cut off a corrupt part for the ſaving of the whole. So in the Magiſtrate, it is no crueltie, but vertue, to preferre the ſafety of many, before the will and liking of one.

Verſe 2. 2 The puniſhments here threatned and appointed for Idolatry and Idolaters, is very worthy noting. Whoſoever (ſaith God) ſhall give his children to Molech (an Idoll of the Ammonites, as you ſaw before, unto whom they burned and ſacrificed their children, 2 *King.*23.verſe 10. and by this one kinde, the Lord underſtandeth all kindes of Idolatry) that perſon ſhall the people of the Land ſtone to death. But what if they be negligent? See the ſeverity of God againſt this ſinne. Verſe 3. Then will I (ſaith God) ſet my face againſt that man, and cut him off from among his people. Verſe 4. Yea, I ſay againe, If the people of the Land hide their eyes, and wink at that offender, and kill him not, Verſe 5. then will I ſet my face againſt that man, and againſt his family, and will cut him off, and all that goe a whoring after him, &c. Why Lord, why ſo? Becauſe hee hath defiled my Sanctuary, and polluted my holy Name. See, in theſe tearmes, the nature of Idolatry: yet here is mercy with the Lord, and great patience. Tempt him not therefore, but meditate of theſe Examples. Salomon fell to Idolatry, and what a judgement did God ſhew upon his Houſe in his ſonnes entrance, Roboboam, by cutting off for ever from him, ten of the Tribes? Manaſſes was an Idolater, the people followed him, and what did the Lord to him, till he ſaw his fall, and moſt ſorry for it? The whole ſtate of the Jewes, how it was overthrowne for this wickedneſſe? Reade that notable Chapter of Ieremie the Prophet, from the eight and twentieth verſe forward. It is true, may ſome ſay, Idolatry grievouſly offendeth God: But what is Idolatrie? Let that perſon know, that every worſhip, not commanded of God, is Idolatry. and the worſhip alſo that is commanded, if it be done in other manner than is commanded. To make it plaine, the worſhipping of God, in, and under the ſimilitude of a golden Calfe, was therefore Idolatry, becauſe God commanded and appointed no ſuch thing, were their intent never ſo good, and their diſtinction betwixt God and the Calfe never ſo plainly made. Againe, to offer thoſe ſacrifices which the law appointed, and by God were commanded, with affiance in the outward worke done, was Idolatry; becauſe in a thing commanded, they did not uſe the manner commanded. So, ſo, (and God make it enter) is the reading of Leſſons of Scripture, ſaying of Prayers, ſinging of Pſalmes, Faſting, and ſuch like, very offenſive to God, and plaine Idolatry, when they are uſed with an opinion of merit, and the Lord Jeſus robbed by them of that praiſe that is onely due to him, for meriting our reconciliation with God, and eternall ſalvation. Beware, beware we then how we kindle the wrath of him againſt us, that hath here vowed to ſet his face againſt ſuch perſons, to cut them off, and their Families alſo with them, although the Magiſtrate winke, and will not ſee what the Lord hath willed him both to ſee, and to puniſh. Yea, the Lord will himſelfe be revenged both of Doer and Sufferer, bee hee Father, Husband, Maſter, Magiſtrate, or whatſoever, bound by Place and Office to looke to ſuch things, and reforme them. And therefore beware of winking at, and ſuffering what you are able to amend. Great is the good that a willing Superiour may doe, although not ever what he would, through the envie and practices of ſome that ſhould not hinder. For it is true, that either ſincerely, or at leaſt ſeemingly, inferiours will frame to his will that is over them: and ſeemingly, I ſay, becauſe all is not ever gold that gliſtereth. And I remember, when certaine Embaſſadours praiſed the Lacedemonian Souldiers for being ſo oderly, who before had beene ſo injurious: one of them anſwered, No, no; the praiſe is not ours that we are thus changed, for we are the ſame men ſtill, but we have now another Captaine, and he it is that ordereth us, &c. Thus goe over your Chapter, and ſee the ſeverall puniſhments annexed to every law, and feare his wrath that is ſo ſtrong and juſt.

Ieremi.

Nos iidem ſumus qui et nuper, ſed alius nunc dux eſt, &c. Xenoph.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXI.

Three principall heads are contained in this Chapter.

The Priests mourning for the dead.
His Mariage.
His bodily qualities.

1. CONcerning the first, the Priests in the Law might not lament and mourne for every one, but for such as here are mentioned, namely, His Kinsman that is neare unto him, by his Mother, or by his Father, or by his Son, or by his Daughter, or by his Brother, or by his Sister; a Maid that is neare unto him, which hath not had an husband; for her he may lament, &c. The drift of this whole matter in short, was to restrain them from such Heathenish fashions as were then used among the Gentiles round about them: who used to cut themselves, to teare their clothes, to beate their heads, and foolishly many wayes to use themselves. 1 Cic. Tusc. 3.

In the nineteenth Chapter before, this was touched. Ezek. 44 you may reade of it, and in the sixt of Baruch, directly contrary to this Law, did the Priests mourne. Yet even Gentiles did see the folly of much of this, as Bion his speech sheweth, who jested at Agamemnons furious pulling off his haire, and said, he plucketh it off, as though baldnesse were an excellent remedy to asswage a griefe.

2. That of following his Sisters funerall not maried, and not following if shee were maried, was not to derogate any thing from that holy Ordinance of God, but because his Sister maried, was ingrafted into another House and Family, and so was not the next of kinne in that respect.

3. The High Priest might neither follow father nor mother, nor any. A thing that God would have to distinguish the Priests among themselves, and so to shew how he not only liketh and alloweth of degrees among them, but even hee maketh the same degrees, and appointeth some higher, and some lower, and some to doe this, others to doe that, that reverence may be among themselves one to another, and of all the people to them all. Allegorically this restraint of the High Priest from that which was then a legall pollution, noted, that in Christ was no spot, nor blot, nor pollution of any sort whatsoever. And the suffering of others to goe, that in them also touching themselves, there was originall corruption as well as in others, howbeit their Office was more excellent, and gave them preheminence above other men. Popish Priests say, their Priesthood was shadowed by this in the Law, yet they use shaving and going to Funerals, &c.

2 Of the second point concerning their Mariage, your Chapter saith, They shall not take to Wife an Whore, or one polluted, neither shall they marry a Woman divorced from her Husband, for such a one is holy unto his God. Thou shalt sanctifie him therfore, for he offereth the bread of thy God, he shall be holy unto thee, &c. All which things are thus laid downe, to give credit to his Office and Function, and to shadow out, that the Church, which is the Spouse of the great High Priest, Christ Jesus, is and should be without wrinkle, a chaste Virgin, holy and undefiled by imputation through Christ. If Mariage had been such an unfit thing for the Priests, the Lord could as easily have simply forbidden them to marry at all, as thus to have limited them what manner of women they should marry. But never shall they see, whom God in wrath blinded. How plainly here doth God require reverence to them, and magnifieth their Office, that they offered the Bread of God, and were holy, yet maried: but I will not enter into this matter, it hath beene touched before, that Mariage ever was honourable among all men, and the bed undefiled. And Let every man have his wife, and every woman her husband, &c.

The heaven and earth were shamed (when time was) of their holinesse, that under the colour of holinesse forbad Mariage, and the Lords wrath is upon the houses where they dwelt to this day, &c.

3. The third point concerning bodily qualities in the Priests, beginneth in your Chapter here at the seventeenth verse, making exceptions against all Blemishes, and particularly making mention of divers, which may not be so taken, as if God respected the outward favour and personage of any man. For when Samuel went to anoint David, and saw the elder brother a goodly tall man, thinking in himselfe, This is he; God plainly told him, He looked not as men doe, upon the outward shew, and therefore bade him not looke upon the same. But this was done to preserve the dignity of the Calling, in that Infancie of the Church, which otherwise might have come into contempt, together with the holy things they dealt withall, for the contemptible shew of the Priests. 3. Primum ipsa species digna imperio fuit, nunc autem etiam digna Sacerdotio. Dist. 36. c. illiteratos.

Yet thus much we may learne by it further, That if these infirmities of body, which they could not helpe, made them unfit then to be Priests unto the Lord, may not now, wilfull impiety

(being a blot in ſoule and minde) diſable a man from being a Miniſter to God in his owne conſcience, although he have the outward Calling of men? Yes, yes, and that will ſome know one day, that think full well of themſelves now, and ſit in judgement upon their brethren, deſpiſing in a haughty pride all that they doe, and deeming no man worth any thing but themſelves, when indeed there is no man leſſe worth than themſelves.

Vide quomodo bene pædagogium, Pontifices jam ſub Evangelio obtrudere velint, cùm hæc lex quoad litteram nihil ad nos. Diſt. 49. hinc etenim de animi vitiis. Gratior eſt pulchro veniens in corpore virtus.

2. Yet for outward feature and comelineſſe of body, if it may be had, it is the bleſſing of a good God, and more acceptable is (ſaith the old Proverb) Vertue comming in a comely body. Example might be ſhewed, both in Eccleſiaſticall men, and Temporall: But if it cannot be had, good Miniſters muſt be preferred rather than Fine. According to that which we read of the men of Sparta, who when Ageſilaus was deſired to bee their Captaine that were muſtred out againſt the Perſians, being indeed very fit for war, but lame of one foot: They long conſulted whether they ſhould hearken to that deſire or no; but at laſt concluded, That it was better the Captaine ſhould be lame of a foot, than the armie of a Captaine, And ſo let him goe. Even in the like ſort may it truly be ſaid, It is better that a good Miniſter ſhould want an eye, or ſuch like, than that the Church ſhould want a good Miniſter.

Blinde.
Lame.

3. Saint Gregory in his Paſtorall, learnedly and largely applyeth theſe blemiſhes here mentioned, to the vices and blemiſhes of our mindes. As, Blinde is he, who wanting light from above, is wholly drowned and overwhelmed with the darkneſſe of this world, &c. Lame is hee, who ſeeing whither he ſhould go, yet is not able (through weakneſſe of mind) to go thither, but fainteth and faileth, ſtumbleth and trippeth in his going, and commeth ſhort of his right end. To whom may be applyed that of the Apoſtle, Liſt up your hands which hang downe, and your weake knees, and make ſtreight ſteps unto your feet, leſt that which is halting be turned out of the way, &c. Heb. 12. 12. By a flat-noſe may be noted a weakneſſe in diſcretion and judgement, becauſe the noſe diſcerneth good ſavours from evill, as the minde ſhould alſo doe things fit and unfit.

A flat noſe.

Cant 7.4.

In the Canticles, among the praiſes of the Spouſe, it is ſaid, Her noſe is like a Tower in Libanon, becauſe by judgement, ſhe diſcerneth afar off temptation and evills comming, as out of a Tower. There are ſome againe, that are too quick and buſie, ſearching and prying further into many matters than they ſhould, and ſo by their buſie factions and ſeditious heads, by their turbulent and unquiet wits, overthrowing the praiſe of their actions, and theſe are ſaid to have great noſes or crooked: a blemiſh, and that a great one, unfit for all men, but moſt foule in a Prieſt; and therefore ſuch not admitted to the Altar of God. In theſe dayes, what out-cries by the Secular Prieſts againſt the Jeſuits, for this unquiet humour are publiſhed, you cannot but underſtand. They are therefore not ſo fit for the Altar, as for the old Proverbe, Buſie muſt have a hand, and over-buſie muſt be hanged. By broken foote or hand, ſuch as have no goodneſſe at all in them, not lame, as before, but flat without. A crooked backe hath hee, who is bowed and preſſed down with the care of earthly things, ſo that he looketh not up to heaven and future joyes; but if he heare any thing thereof, preſently the other plucketh him to his bias againe, like to that ſeed ſown in ſtony ground, which is choaked by earthly and worldly cares. A bleared eye hath he, who having ſome ſenſe and knowledge of good things, yet by an ill cuſtome of bad behaviour, is diverted and overthrowne. For in bleared eyes, the candle or ſight of the eye is ſaid to be good, but by a bad humour diſtilling downe, the eye-lids are hurt and made out of order, ſo grieving and hindring the ſight of the eye. A Blemiſh in his eye he is ſaid to have, who puffed up with pride and arrogancy, ſeeth not indeed what he is: but as a ſight that is able to ſee, by a white skinne growing over is hindred; ſo a man able to ſee and diſcerne good things, for his wiſdome, learning, and good naturall parts, through a vile whiteneſſe growing in his eye, that is, a proud conceit in his minde, of his whiteneſſe above other men, is made ſtarke blinde, and fooliſh, and abſurd to all wiſe men. To ſuch therefore it is good counſel which the Lord giveth, To anoint the eyes with Eye-ſalve, that they may ſee, &c. The Skirvie is a heate comming from the Inwards, to the outward skin, and therefore ſuch men noted, as have inward concupiſcence and heate breaking forth into the outward act of uncleanneſſe, moſt unfit for ſuch as are and ought to be holy unto God. The Scab, is a foulneſſe ariſing of an Itch, and ſpreading broader and greater, if it be not looked unto, and thereby is noted the vice of covetouſneſſe, which firſt beginneth with an itching deſire, and afterward for want of looking to, ſpreadeth to a great foule vice, deforming any man, and moſt unſeemly in a Prieſt, who ought to bee cleane. Covetouſneſſe (ſaith the Apoſtle) is the roote of all evill. Laſtly, by him that hath his ſtones broken, ſuch are noted as though they did not the act, yet have ever in their minde, lewd and unclean thoughts, whereby they are ſo ſinfully caried away, as pure and cleane, and holy meditations can take no place. A fruit too well knowne to grow from forced chaſtity: This burning fire of hell in any man is damnable, and therefore our gracious God hath provided a remedy. In a man conſecrated to God, to meditate in his Word day and night, it is moſt odious. And therefore for no worldly reſpects to be ſuffered by the contempt of Gods ordinance, if God vouchſafe not the gift of Continency, which is vertue in the minde, and not an outward reſtraint of the body only. Curſed are thoſe policies that deſtroy both body and ſoule in hell fire. Theſe are the blemiſhes mentioned tioned in your Chapter, which God would not have in his Prieſts, and therefore ſuch as had them, were not admitted to his Altar. How learned men have laboured to apply them to Morall vertues you ſee, and it is very certaine, that ſuch vices of the minde, as have been noted, neither then were, nor now are for ſuch as offer the bread of God, but are to be prayed againſt, and taken heed of, to the uttermoſt ſtrength that God giveth, yet haply not intended by the Law. And therefore, I rather like to leave theſe applications as the conceits of men, and to learne by all theſe blemiſhes forbidden, that the Iewes were then taught, (which wee have learned and beleeve) how no mortall man could be able to worke our peace and reconciliation with God, but onely Chriſt Ieſus. For in all men are ſome or other blemiſhes, and it became us to have ſuch an High Prieſt as is holy, harmeleſſe, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens, &c. In him then there was no blemiſh, but he was the immaculate Lambe of God, able to ſave us, willing to ſave us with the beſt blood he had, and he hath thus ſaved all thoſe that beleeve on him, and we reject all other ſaviours whatſoever. This was certainly the drift of this Law, and therefore we may boldly gather this fruit from it. Heb. 7. 26.

A great noſe.

A broken foote and hand.

Apoc. 3. 18.

Laſtly, theſe perſons having ſuch blemiſhes, albeit they might not performe this duty, to ſtand at the Altar, yet were they allowed to eate of the Sacrifices, and ſuch things as the Prieſts did eate of, and allowed to be in the Congregation: ſo ſay ſome, ſhadowing that the Church, although blemiſhed, nevertheleſſe is admitted to the communion and participation of thoſe things, which Chriſt by his eternall Sacrifice hath obtained for it. And my ſelfe would gather this comfort from it, that albeit ſome one or other infirmity may juſtly diſable mee, for ſuch a place in the Church or Common-wealth; yet for a place with the Elect, either here, or for ever, it ſhall not hinder me: No, ten thouſand blemiſhes, nor any blemiſhes ſhall hinder mee, if grieved with them, and fighting againſt them, as the Lord enableth me, I take hold of my ſpotleſſe Saviour, as my helpe and ſafety againſt them all. Thus then doe you meditate of this Chapter, and be bettered by it, reading it over with theſe Notes, and praying in your heart for the helpe of his working Spirit, to make the Word profitable unto you. My labour is but to draw you to reade by a taſte, and to pray that God may worke with you further than my Labours. The Word being a Well, the bottome whereof no man can come unto, but there will be ſtill more water to draw.

CHAP. XXII.

HAving in the former Chapter noted what ſhould hinder from the Miniſtery, now it pleaſeth the Lord to note what ſhould diſable them to eate of the holy things, mentioning againe ſuch uncleanneſſes in men, as before in the other Chapters of this Booke were mentioned. If this queſtion ariſe in your minde, why God having before forbidden all men that had theſe pollutions, to eate of holy things, ſhould now againe particularly forbid the Prieſts? Anſwer is made, becauſe men in any authority and place, are often apt to exempt themſelves by one excuſe or other, from ſuch obedience, as they are content others ſhould be bound unto. The Lord alſo threatneth puniſhment to the breakers of this Law, that feare may reſtraine, where love will not.

2. The particular uncleanneſſes I will not goe over here, but leave you to looke backe to the ſeventh Chapter, the thirteenth and fifteenth Chapters, with ſuch like. Thus much doe you note againe, and let it be ever yours, that polluted ſinners remaining in their uncleanneſſe without remorſe and amendment, have no right to the merits of Chriſt, but ſhall die and periſh in their filthineſſe. Cleanſed therefore we muſt be, by newneſſe of life and faith in Chriſt Jeſus, that we may be ſaved.

3. The Stranger is forbidden to eate, &c. verſe 10. To tell us the ſtate of Turkes, Heathens and Infidels, till the Lord reduce them to his fold. To prevent covetouſneſſe in the Prieſts, by ſelling; and contempt of holy things, by being ſo common.

4. The qualities of Sacrifices to be offered againe, teach us the excellency of Chriſt his Sacrifices being without all fault. Secondly, what living Sacrifices holy and acceptable unto God we ought to be, 1 Pet. 2. and Rom. 12. &c. Thirdly, what manner of gifts we ſhould ever bring to the Lord and his Miniſters; namely, our better, not our worſt, as now adayes is uſed. The old verſe teaching men right in this behalfe; Qui dare vult, bona det, ſua vel ſibi munera ſervet; He that will give, let him give what is good, or keep his gift to himſelfe. Malach. 1.

CHAP. XXIII.

The ſumme of this Chapter.

THis Chapter entreateth of the holy Feaſts and Dayes obſerved of the Iewes by God his appointment, either weekly or yeerely. Weekly, as the Sabbath: Yearely, as the Feaſts of Eaſter, of Trumpets, of Tabernacles, of Pentecoſt, &c. Of all which in Exodus 23. Numb. 28. and 29. and Dent. 16.

1. Theſe Feaſts, you may ſee, were in remembrance, for the moſt part, of ſome benefits and mercies of God, and therefore plainly teach us, what a duty from us to God it is, to remember carefully and thankfully his loving favours ſhewed unto us at any time, upon any occaſion.

Exod. 13. 14. &c. Thou ſhalt ſhew thy ſonne, ſaith God, in that day, ſaying, this is done becauſe of that the Lord did unto me, when I came out of Ægypt. And it ſhall be a ſigne unto thee upon thine hand, and for a remembrance betweene thine eyes, &c. Likewiſe thoſe ſtones commanded to be ſet up by Ioſhua, they ſhal ſerve (ſaith God) for a ſign among you, that when your children ſhall aſk their fathers in time to come, ſaying, what mean you by theſe ſtones? Then ye may anſwer them; When the Arke paſſed thorow Iordan, the waters were cut off, and theſe ſtones are a memoriall for ever of the ſame. David knowing this to be a due duty, cryeth to his ſoule to praiſe God, and never to forget his benefits. And to others, to remember the marvellous workes that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgements of his mouth. A thankfull remembrance worketh love, and deſire to pleaſe God, but other fruits come of forgetfulneſſe, as you may ſee, Pſal. 78. ver. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Beneficiorum Dei memoria, Magiſtra ad vitam: The remembrance of Gods benefits, is the Miſtreſſe of good life, ſaid S. Chryſoſtome in his time. And Dona Dei, bona non ſunt, niſi Dei eſſe confiteamur: The gifts of God are not good, except we acknowledge them to come from God, ſaid S. Auguſtine.

Verſe 2. 2. In that they were called the Feaſts of the Lord; Men were taught in him to ſeeke and attend ſuch things as belonged to God, and not their owne matters, pleaſures and ſports, &c. To this end ſtill are Holidayes kept, and therefore thinke of the right uſe of them.

Verſe 3. 3. When he ſaith, It is the Sabbath of the Lord in all your dwellings: Learn (ſaith S. Auguſtine) that no place priviledgeth thee to breake Gods Law, but as being a ſinner whereſoever thou goeſt, thou carieſt the yoke of ſin, ſo being the ſervant of God, in all places obey his will, &c.

Verſe 4. 4. When they are called holy Convocations, thinke in your conſcience whether gadding and rioting, and wanton dancing, with ſuch like, be holy exerciſes, and meet for a holy Convocation.

Verſe 5. 5. For the Feaſt of the Sabbath, in the Commandement it is handled, and thither I refer you. It had uſe to preſerve the Doctrine of Creation, againſt all idle Philoſophers dreames of an Eternity. To confirme Faith in the article, Maker of heaven and earth, and to refute all heretical aſſertions touching the ſame: To be a refreſhing to the bodies both of man and beaſt, which without reſt cannot endure. To give time for men to ſerve God, who all the weeke long, and ever doth ſerve them. Finally, to prefigure, and in ſome ſort to lay before us, our aſſured eternall reſt in heaven, when the ſix daies of this life ſhall end, and that joyfull ſeventh day ſhall come.

Eſay 55. Heb. 4. Verſ. 6. 6. The Feaſt of the Paſſeover or Eaſter, you know was kept in remembrance of their deliverance out of Ægypt. And it was a figure to foretell them their deliverance from ſinne, by the death of the true Lambe, &c. See Exod. Chap. 12. and 13.

Verſe 10, &c 7. The Offering of a Sheafe, with the Ceremonies mentioned, taught them to acknowledge, that the bleſſing of New corne every yeare, commeth neither from the fertility of the ground, nor the labour and induſtry of man, but from the Lord. Secondly, this Feaſt having his time aſſigned, they could not enter upon their Harveſt before it was full ready, which by this time it would be, unleſſe they would either reape before they offered this firſt ſheafe, or offer it before the day appointed.

And ſo you ſee, it had an uſe to reſtraine ill husbands, and to make them more carefull, that old Corne might be governed to bring in new. A gracious God, that will ſo care for ſinfull Man. Thirdly, it ſerved to direct them to the time of Pentecoſt, for from this day they reckoned ſeven Sabbaths, &c. As you reade, verſe 15. Laſtly, being but one ſheafe, it might ſtrike their hearts with a fit feeling of his goodneſſe, that Giveth ſo much, and Taketh ſo little; that Giveth without meaſure, and Taketh by meaſure: So let it ſtill profit us to this day; for even Now alſo, we receive much, and give little; would we give that thankfully and cheerefully, what a comfort would God take in it? though he need none of our goods, onely ſeeking to exerciſe our obedience and love.

Verſe 2. 8. And they might not eate till they had brought an offering unto God; verſe 14. Then God was firſt, but now is laſt with us, yet as good to us, as ever to them; and we as deeply bound to him for infinite mercies: Will not our ſinfull hearts, in making God laſt, and giving him the worſt, one day condemne us?

Rom. 11. 16. 9. Till they have brought, are the words, verſe 14. and note them, They then brought, to ſhew their willingneſſe; wee will bring none, but thinke we deale well, if our Miniſter may have it for fetching, &c.

10. The

10. The Feaſt of Pentecoſt ſometimes called the Feaſt of Weekes, was a remembrance of the Law given, and ſo of their received liberty by Gods out-ſtretched Arme, having now a Law and government of their owne; when before they were ſubjects and ſervants to the Egyptians, and their lawes. So ſtill you ſee theſe holy dayes were to remember mercy, and to give thankes. Againe, this Feaſt figuratively foretold them, there ſhould come a Pentecoſt, when the firſt fruits of the Spirit ſhould be given to men; Fulfilled, when Chriſt ſent the holy Ghoſt upon his Diſciples, aſſembled at Jeruſalem, at the Feaſt of Pentecoſt. Acts 2.

11. The Feaſt of Trumpets, here alſo appointed, had many uſes, as firſt in the opinion of ſome Hebrew Doctors, for a remembrance of the deliverance of yong Iſaac, from being ſacrificed, God giving a Ramme faſt in the Buſhes, for him. Secondly, in the opinion of others, for a remembrance of the Creation of the World, which in ſome probability was about this time. Thirdly, for a remembrance (ſaith one) of the pardoning of that grievous Idolatry, committed by erecting and worſhipping the Golden Calfe; which is thought, was about this time. Fourthly, for a remembrance that this Moneth was once the firſt Moneth. Fifthly, that they might learne Holy aſſemblies, to be appointed by the voice of God. And if they then, when they heard theſe Trumpets blowe, might thinke God called for them to the Meeting: Why ſhould not wee now, having our Bells for their Trumpets, thinke God calleth for us to the Church and aſſembly of the Faithfull, when we heare them Ring in our eares? Surely, I know a feeling heart doth, and thereupon cannot be quiet without going. Sixthly, that they might learne their duties, to be through their whole life to follow God, when, and whither ſoever he ſhould call. Laſtly, (as our Marginall note ſaith) to put them in remembrance of the many Feaſts in this Moneth, being the fitteſt time indeed after all Fruits and Bleſſings gotten in, to meet and praiſe God for them; praying alſo for grace, ſoberly and orderly to uſe them to his glory, and their owne comfort, with all theirs, whom God would have alſo cared for, Children, Servants, Poore, &c. I forget to tell you, that one ſaith, this Feaſt alſo was a figure, ſhewing how Chriſt by the preaching of the Goſpell, as by a lowde Trumpet, ſhould bee ſpred over all the World, and our ſalvation by him. In regard whereof, Iohn was called the voice of a cryer, and the Prophet biddeth other cryers, lift up their voices like Trumpets, &c. Verſe 24. Gen.22.3. Exod.32.4. Mat.3.3. Eſay.58.1.

12. In the 27. verſe, the feaſt of Reconciliation is mentioned; Of which more fully before in the 16. Chapter. Verſ. 27.

13. Of the feaſt of Tabernacles, verſe 34. The uſe was, to remember them of their eſtate, when they had no Houſes, but lived in Tents, or Tabernacles, or Boothes, made with Boughs; no Fields, no Lands, but lived in the Wilderneſſe, and ſo to ſtir up a thankfulneſſe for their happy change. Secondly, to remember them of the Lords great workes, in driving out the Canaanites, and giving that fruitfull Land unto them: Then they were a prey to all men, but now a terrour to all men, whereſoever the fame of them came. Thirdly, it ſerved to preach unto them the Doctrine afterward delivered by the Apoſtle, to wit, that here we have no biding City, but ſhould reckon of our houſes, as but of Tabernacles for the time, our true hope being for houſes and dwellings, and everlaſting Tabernacles not made with hands in heaven, &c. And may not we conſider on our feaſt dayes all theſe things, although wee have not now the ſame ceremonies? May not we remember our ſtate paſt under ſuperſtition, cruelty, and bondage? May not wee remember burnings and killings, and moſt hatefull handlings of bloody Butchers and perſecutors? May not we remember great wars and diſſentions in this our native Countrey, the fall of our friends, and the change of many houſes? May not we remember great impoſitions and payments, and in a word, very many miſeries and calamities? Laying them to the preſent times, wherein we enjoy truth, and liberty of conſcience, without either death or danger, or ſo much as any feare: what a change is this to a man or woman, that knoweth and feeleth the bleſſing? O that we may ſend up to God moſt thankfull thoughts for it while we live! Now againe we enjoy peace: ſuch as no Nation hath had the like. Wee are not eaten up with heavy and continuall payments, but we live as in heaven, by compariſon of former times. The Lord hath driven away the Canaanites that would have invaded and conquered, had not hee reſiſted for us, and overthrowne them. He hath made us a terrour to our foes, and a refuge or ſanctuary for our friends, when earſt forreigne Nations were Lords over us. And for the laſt point, we have no more certainty of abode here than they had, but looke for the ſame end of faith, an enduring houſe in heaven. Let us then doe what we ought to do, and what they did, thanke God moſt heartily for change, and beſeech him in his bottomleſſe mercy, to continue his favours to us, that in peace we may live, in peace die; and in peace that never endeth, live with him for ever, God for his Sons ſake grant it to us. Amen, Amen. Verſe 34.

Chap. XXIIII.

Verſe 1. IN this Chapter the firſt thing ſpoken of, are the Lights uſed in the Tabernacle, whereof mention was made alſo before in the ſeventeenth Chapter. Theſe Lights were not ordained for our imitation now under the Goſpell, but in thoſe times of Shadowes and Figures they ſignified, that while they were thus uſed, the true Light was not yet come, by which all true beleevers ſhould be delivered from the darkneſſe of death, as S. Paul ſpeaketh of the Tabernacle, Heb.9. Papiſts lights now uſed ſtill in their Churches and Maſſing places, are evident ſignes that themſelves ſee not the true Light, and as much as lyeth in them, they thus confirme that Jewiſh expectance of the true Light Chriſt, as if yet he were not come. I know they have their excuſes or reaſons for every thing, but who is able to abide moſt of them? As is this particular, why uſe they lights? Forſooth in the repreſentation of the Trinity: the Waxe repreſenting the Father, the Wicke the Son, and the Light the Holy Ghoſt. This boldneſſe is fearefull, and ſinfull, having neither warrant, fitneſſe, nor reverence. Away with theſe Lights therefore, and embrace we the true Light, who lightneth all that come into the world, &c.

Iohn 1 9.

Looke Chap. 27. Verſ. 2. 2. This Light alſo was a figure of true Doctrine, which ever muſt ſhine in the Church and Tabernacle of God. The oyle Olive which they are commanded to bring, you ſee here muſt be pure, to note that Doctrine muſt have no mixture of mans devices, but be pure. The Prieſt is the man that hath charge of theſe Lights, and God his Miniſters ſtill are the Miniſters of Light, and have the charge of it in the houſe of God. Happy they, if they be carefull of it to their beſt ability, that they may one day heare that joyfull voice, Come, come, thou good and faithfull ſervant, thou haſt been faithfull over little, and therefore now I will make thee ruler over much, Enter, enter, into thy Maſters joy, &c.

Verſe 5, &c. Pſal.145.15,16 3. The next thing ſpoken of, is the Shew-bread, ſpoken of alſo before. It likewiſe repreſented, that as yet the true bread from heaven was not come. That it is God, upon whō the eyes of all things wait, and that openeth his hand, feeding both man and all his creatures with his bleſſings. That God ſo loved the Iewes, as he had them continually at his Table with him: yea every Tribe particularly he loved, there being twelve Cakes, for every Tribe one, &c. More you may ſee, Chapter 25.

Verſe 10. Verſe 11. Verſ.12. Verſe 13. Verſe 14. Verſ.15. Verſe 16. 4. The third thing touched in this Chapter, is the matter of Blaſphemy, ver. 10. wherein your words are theſe, And there went out among the childrē of Iſrael the ſon of an Iſraelitiſh womā, whoſe father was an Egyptian; & the ſon of the Iſraelitiſh woman, & a man of Iſrael, ſtrove together in the hoſt. So the Iſraelitiſh womans ſon blaſphemed the name of God, & curſed, & they brought him unto Moſes. And they put him in ward, til he told thē the mind of the Lord. Then the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, Bring the blaſphemer without the hoſt, & let all that heard him put their hands upō his head, and let all the Congregation ſtone him. And thou ſhalt ſpeak unto the children of Iſrael, ſaying, Whoſoever curſeth his God, ſhall beare his ſin. And he that blaſphemeth the name of the Lord, ſhall be put to death; as well the ſtranger, as he that is born in the land; when he blaſphemeth the name of the Lord, let him be ſlaine. What this blaſphemy was, if you looke your Marginall note, it ſaith, by ſwearing or deſpiting God. Interpreters mention divers opinions, and ſcan both the Hebrew words, and the Greek tranſlation of them, all which I omit, as ſtill mindfull for whom I labour, and I joyn with him that ſaith, Ego hunc locū ſic intelligo, quod filius viri Egyptii male peccatus ſit alteri in jurgio, ut fieri ſolet, & exoptaverit ei exitiū aut calamitatem, idq; non ſimpliciter, ſed per nomen Dei. Non dixit tantum, exopto tibi malum, ſed addidit ac diſerte nominavit Deum, aut nomen Domini, inquiens, dominus det tibi malū, & perdat te perpetuo. I underſtand this place thus, the ſon of the Egyptian father, curſed the other in chiding, as the maner is, wiſhing deſtruction, or ſome cala mity, to him, and that not ſimply, but by the name of God. For he ſaid not only, I wiſh thee evill, but added, and plainly named, God, or the name of God; ſaying, the Lord give ſome evill to thee, and utterly deſtroy thee. Our fearefull damned phraſes are, Gods curſe light on thee, the Plague of God take thee, &c. Which kinde of ſpeaking, is moſt grievouſly to abuſe the name of God, and to prophane it, being not onely a breach of the ſecond Table, concerning the love of our neighbour, but a breach alſo of the firſt Table, by taking his moſt holy name in vaine. This grievous offender therefore, is not winked at by them that heard him, neither yet puniſhed by them that had no authority, out of a colour of zeale, but he is orderly, and by a right zeale, caried to Moſes the Magiſtrate, and his offence opened there. Moſes againe (although ſuch a man) yet will doe nothing haſtily in judgement, and eſpecially touching life, but hee will bee adviſed by God, who then ſpake from betwixt the Cherubims, Exod.25. and Numb.7. And in the meane time committeth him to ward. The Lord anſwereth him, and commandeth that he ſhall be ſlain, giving a law alſo in general, that whoſoever ſo offendeth ſhall die, the whole cōgregation ſtoning him, and the witneſſes putting their hands upon his head. By which Ceremony, the Lord made the witneſſes carefull what they ſaid. For it taught them, that if they bare falſe witneſſe, then were they guilty of the blood of him ſo ſhed by their teſtimony: but if they ſpake truly, then as hee that offered a Sacrifice by laying his hand upon the head of it, caſt his ſinnes upon the beaſt: ſo they by by that Ceremony laid his blood upon his owne head,and they remained cleare and blameleſſe: Yea, the whole Congregation by ſuch execution of juſtice, as by a Sacrifice, is clenſed and profited. So that when Phineas had ſlaine the wicked perſon, it is ſaid, he turned the wrath of GOD from the land. And the ſlaying of the wicked, by the Prophets is called, Victima Dei, the Sacrifice of the Lord. For further uſe of it, you may thinke with your ſelfe, how the father of this offender was a ſtranger, an Ægyptian, and yet God would not ſpare him: how much leſſe then his own people, I mean now a Chriſtian by father and mother, brought up in his feare, baptized in his faith, a hearer of his Word, a profeſſor of it, &c. Secondly, this man was angry, and in his anger he committed this fault, yet God ſpareth him not: how then doe we excuſe our offences by our anger, ſaying, it was in my wrath that I ſaid ſo, or did ſo. For firſt, that anger or fury, and deſire of revenge is naught, then to uſe God in it, and to make him a partie, or an executioner of your rage, ſeeking and wiſhing that he may curſe and plague, where you will (hee being all juſtice, all mercy, all goodneſſe, &c.) ô what an increaſe of your ſinne is this! Ever therefore ſettle it and ſinke it in your heart, what it is thus to abuſe God, to abuſe Chriſt, his wounds, his Paſſion, whereby we are ſaved; and by his grace you ſhall abhorre ſwearing, raging, and ill wiſhing, to any man, and eſpecially to ſeek of him to do evill, and to uſe his name to that end. Thirdly, when the Lord will have the whole Congregation to ſtone him, hee taketh tryall of the zeale of All, and teacheth All to concurre with the Magiſtrate in love and liking of juſtice, and in furthering of it ſo farre as belongeth to every mans place. Whereas now adayes, wee have ſuch factions, ſuch affections, ſuch corrupt humours in us, out of which iſſue ſuch diſlikes, carpings and bad cenſures of Magiſtrates, as they are grieved with, juſtice is hindered, and God provoked to that which will ſmart, if he ſtay not. Fourthly, he is carried out of the Hoaſt to be ſlain, as a token of deteſtation of his ſinne, by which he was unworthy not onely to live in the Congregation, but alſo to die in the ſame, he was vomited or ſpued out, that all others might ſee, and feare, Eſa 14. reade it. Fiftly, by curſing of God, and blaſpheming of his Name, underſtand not onely ſwearing and ſuch evill ſpeaking as now hath beene noted, but all other unſeemely, unreverent, and wicked words, prophane jeſts, of Him, his Name, his Word, his Attributes, Mercy, Juſtice, Anger, Providence, Knowledge, Patience, and ſuch like. For all theſe ſhall come into judgement, and finde wrath. If the law of man paſſe them, God will never paſſe them. The tongue we have, was given to bleſſe, not to curſe. And the name of God (ſaith Salomon) is a ſtrong tower: The juſt ſhall runne to it and be exalted. For whoſoever calleth upon the Name of the Lord ſhall be ſaved. His name ſerveth for faith, for prayer, for thankeſgiving, for deliverance in danger, to obtaine all good, and to avoid all evill. To abuſe this then in our furies, to our corrupt and ſinfull deſires; ô what a ſinne is it, and how provoketh it God to plague us! So are his precious wounds our Plaiſters, his bleſſed Paſſion our ſalvation, his Sacraments our comforts and Seales of mercy, his Scriptures our light, and by no meanes to be prophaned in earneſt or jeſt. Wee may not pervert his nature, making him (as much as lyeth in us) of a Benefactor a Malefactor, of a Saviour a killer, of an Helper an oppreſſour, neither may we abuſe theſe holy things, &c.

Num.25.6. Eſa.34. Ier.46.

Pro.18.10. Act.2.21.

5 The fourth and laſt point of this your Chapter, beginneth at the ſeventeenth verſe, concerning the law of Talio, that is, that looke what a man doth, or intendeth to his neighbour, the like ſhould be done to him, life for life, breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, ſuch a blemiſh as he hath made in any, ſuch ſhall be repayed unto him, verſ. 20. Of this you have heard, Exod. 21.

Verſe 17, &c

6 One law for the ſtranger, as for the borne borne, verſe 22. Which both reſtrained that pride which otherwiſe might have beene in the Jew, and ſheweth the common care of God for all men, as well as for the Jew. If therefore a Jew hurt a ſtranger, looke what he had done, that ſhould he ſuffer, as well as the ſtranger ſhould, if he had hurt the Jew. This indifferency is a bleſſed vertue to bee learned from our God: For ſurely, we are altogether affectionate, if God guide us not. If other mens children, ſervants, or friends hurt ours, fire and ſword for them; but if ours hurt them, no ſuch matter, all muſt be boulſtred out, or bought out, or borne out, and juſtice may not be done. Among our owne againe, one muſt be crucified, and another not touched, one made a Saint, another a devill. Who ſo is wiſe will note God and his Law here, and labour to follow it, ever with ſuch indifferency, as is fit for his place in Church, Common-wealth, or Family. It comforteth the Subject, it hearteneth the Childe, it encourageth a Servant: and the want of it, doth infinite much harme to all theſe. Finally, God is pleaſed with it, and you are graced by it your ſelfe, it getteth you love and all good report farre and neare, among as many as are to be cared for. Thus much of this Chapter.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXV.

The ſumme of the Chapter.

YOu have heard the obſervation of certaine dayes, now will this Chapter ſpeake of the obſervation of yeares, namely, every ſeventh yeare, and every fiftieth yeare. Firſt, of the firſt, and then of the ſecond, Every ſeventh yeare was the Sabbath of the earth, or the reſt of the Land, becauſe that yeare they might neither plow, nor ſow, nor dreſſe their Vines, but take what did grow of it ſelfe, and that muſt be common to all. For ſo is the firſt verſe to be underſtood. That which groweth of it owne accord of thy harveſt, thou ſhalt not reape, &c. That is, to thy private uſe, and for thy ſelfe alone thou ſhalt not reape it, and gather it, but with others and among others, they with thee, and thou with them, the fruits of the yeare ſo ſpringing ſhall bee common. True therefore we may ſay it is of the Land alſo and earth; Quod caret alterna requie durabile non eſt, That which lacketh mutuall reſt cannot endure. Whereupon among us we have an uſe to let land reſt, ſome more, ſome leſſe, according as it is in ſtrength and goodneſſe. And that land that ſhould continually beare without want ſixe yeares, we would ſay were good land. I remember the ſpeech of one out of a good feeling, to ſome wretched minded men that have never enough: Quid das tu terræ pro tot meſſibus, mari pro tot piſcibus, cœlo pro pluvia, ſtellis pro luce, &c. Si nihil das, invides requiem? &c. What giveſt thou the earth for ſo many harveſts, the ſea for ſo many fiſhes, the heavens for raine, the ſtarres for their light, &c. If thou giveſt nothing, doeſt thou envy a reſt? &c. This therefore was a politicall cauſe of this Sabbath of the land the ſeventh yeare, that it might continue and endure fruitfull. Secondly, it had a Ceremoniall uſe, thus to put them in remembrance of that ſinne and fall which caſt us all out of Paradiſe, and brought men to labour, and the earth to need labour: whereas if we had ſtood, the earth ſhould have yeelded of it ſelf fruits and profits, as in ſome glimpſe they might ſee by the 7. year. Againe, it ſhadowed out the true Sabbath and reſt in heaven, where ſhall be no labor, and yet no lack, but all comforts & joyes above the reach of our hearts, now to feel or imagine. Read Eſ. 65. Behold, I create new heavẽs & new earth, &c. Somewhere alſo I have read, that this reſt of the earth might rebuke the wicked cruelty of ſome maſters, who have no pitty of theſe ſervants or cattell, but ever are laboring them, & ſorry that their bodies be not braſſe, that they might never ceaſe, when as a gracious God hath pitty upon the very earth, and will have that to have a Sabbath and reſt.

Verſe 5.

2 In this 7. yeare it was not lawfull to require their debts. For ſo you may reade, Deut. 15. But ſome difference of opinions men have touching this. Some ſay their debt was clean loſt, others ſay no, but for that yeare deferred and forborne, after demanded lawfully, & paid willingly, which is more likely, for as much as theſe politike lawes of God were not ordained of God to overthrow Juſtice, but to preſerve it, and direct it in a commendable and fit manner among men: now it is juſtice to let every man have his own. Then again, the Hebrew text in Deut. 15. is, Ab extremitate, &c. From the extremity of the ſeventh year thou ſhalt make remiſſion: Now the extremity is the beginning and the end; betwixt theſe it was not lawfull to aske a debt, but before or after. Becauſe for that yeare there was no tillage to make mony of, but after that returning to his uſe, the right of the creditor returned alſo, and the Lord graciouſly requited his forbearing, if he did not withdraw his helpe, becauſe the ſeventh yeare approached. A right and true application of this may every feeling heart make in thoſe Cities and Townes within this Realme, where it hath pleaſed God to lay his ſore viſitation of plague & infection, thereby ſtopping the trade whereby every man was enabled to get for his maintenance, and the diſcharge of ſuch debts as were due from him to others. God forbid but mercy ſhould bee found towards their brethren in thoſe that looke for mercy at Gods hands to themſelves. When men cannot receive money, they cannot pay, and no diſhoneſt meaning giving the ſtop, but onely the Lords hand ſtaying Trade, who will be rigorous in ſuch a caſe, and ſay he feareth God? When the earth reſted, and there was no tillage to raiſe money by, you ſee the mercy of Gods law here, and is it not all one when Trade ceaſeth? Let your bowels then ſhew whoſe childe you are. If the Image and ſuperſcription of God be upon you, ſurely you will ſhew mercy, and give ſome fit time to your debtor that meaneth truly. Reade over and often, I pray you, what God ſaith, Eſay 58. verſe 3. and ſo on: and remember he is the ſame God ſtill.

Verſe 8, 9.

Jubileus à Jobel, quod ſignificat buccinam.

3 There was then another great Sabbath yeare beſides this ſeventh yeare, namely, every fifty yeare, and it was called the Jubile, for ſaith your Chapter, Thou ſhalt number ſeven Sabbaths of yeares unto thee, even ſeven times ſeven yeares, and the ſpace of the ſeven Sabbaths of yeares will bee unto thee 49. years. Then thou ſhalt cauſe to blow the Trumpet of the Iubile, &c. Upon which blowing, it had his name of Jubile. The Ceremonies of this yeare were divers and great: for it was a great yeare. Firſt, it was unlawfull againe in this yeare to till the ground, or to require debts, but a generall reſt and ceſſation was given this way, as in the ſeventh yeare you have heard. Secondly, all Iſraelitiſh ſervants in this yeare were free, and lands, the profits whereof were ſold, returned againe to the Tribe and Family for the preſerving of that Law, Numbers 36. Ne transferatur à Tribu ad Tribum, That it might not bee alienated from Tribe to Tribe, leſt ſo the Tribes

Tribes might have beene confounded, and the truth not ſo certainly have appeared, of what Tribe Chriſt came. This yeare of Jubile kept the diſtinction moſt ſure, and yet had they power to ſell from Jubile to Jubile as their need required. Thirdly, this yeare was an excellent figure of that true Jubile and freedome, which by Jeſus Chriſt the body of all ſhadowes, ſhould by trumpet bee proclaimed to all that truely ſhould beleeve in him. And ſee the reſemblance. This Jewiſh Jubile was proclaimed by trumpet: ſo ſhould the Chriſtian freedome bee by the trumpet of preaching the Goſpell, which is the moſt notable trumpet. In this Jubile of the Jewes there were no debts demanded, and ſuch things as grew of themſelves were common: ſo in the Chriſtian Jubile is a freedome proclaimed by Chriſt, Satan hath no power to demand what by ſinne we owe him, to wit, either ſoule or body, and all the graces of Chriſt which grow of themſelves, that is, freely are beſtowed upon us, and common in Chriſt to all, there being with him no reſpect of perſons, but all accepted that feare him and worke righteouſneſſe. Of this freedome ſpeake the Scriptures comfortably every where. As by the Prophet Eſay 61. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, &c. He hath ſent me to preach good tydings to the poore, to binde up the broken hearted, to preach libertie to the captive, and to them that are bound, the opening of the priſon, to preach the acceptable yeare of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God, to comfort all that mourne. The Angell at his birth, Behold, I bring you tydings of great joy that ſhall bee to all the people, that is, that unto you is borne this day in the City of David, a Savior, which is Chriſt the Lord. Why a Saviour? Another Angell told the bleſſed Virgin, becauſe he ſhould ſave his people from their ſinnes; This is the true freedome and Chriſtian Jubile we ſpeake of. If the Sonne make you free, you ſhall be free indeed. Be it knowne unto you therefore (ſaith the Apoſtle) men and brethren, that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveneſſe of ſinnes. And from all things from which ye could not be juſtified by the Law of Moſes, by him every one that beleeveth is juſtified. Thus Rō.6. Gal.3. and in many moe places. Thirdly, in this Jewiſh Jubile there was a returning to their lands and former poſſeſſions which were alienated from them; ſo by this Chriſtian Jubile, even this freedome proclaimed by Chriſt, we returne to our old Paradiſe againe, from whence wee were caſt by ſinne, that is, to the inheritance of the Sonnes of God in Heaven, the true Paradiſe, from which wee ſhall never bee removed any more. O joyfull Jubile then if wee feele it, that by the trumpet of the Word is preached unto us in Chriſt! He that hath eares to heare let him heare.

Eſay 61.

Luke 1. Mat. 1.

Ioh. 8.36. Acts 13.38,39.

4 Beſides theſe two Jubiles thus inſtituted of God, you have a third in theſe dayes inſtituted of the Pope, to get unto him from fooliſh people great ſummes of money. The firſt Author whereof was Boniface the eight, who deviſed to promiſe unto all them that would come to Rome in the yeare 1300, and after that every hundreth yeare, to ſeek pardon for their ſinnes, a full remiſſion of all their ſinnes. After him Clemens the ſixt (who was made Pope in the yeare 1342.) finding the ſweet of this device, and thinking every hundreth yeare too long, cut it off in the middeſt, and according to this Moſaicall Jubile, made his Romiſh jubile every fiftieth yeare, promiſing like pardons and indulgences to all commers. After him, came Sixtus the fourth in the yeare 1473. and hee thought fifty yeares too long alſo, and cut it off once againe in the middle, appointing every five and twentie yeare a jubile. But ſee the deſire of money in theſe holy Fathers. When this time was alſo too long to tarry for pardon-money, and they were aſhamed to ſhorten it againe; they deviſe that certaine appointed perſons ſhould goe into all Countries, with pardons to ſell and offer to fooles that would buy them, by which pardons they ſhould receive as full remiſſion of all ſinnes, as if they had come in the yeare of jubile to Rome to fetch them. Which groſſe abuſe was the meanes (God ſo having appointed) to ſtirre up Luther to preach againſt that abuſe, and ſo was drawne on to other points, till light brake out of darkneſſe, &c.

The Romiſh Iubile.

5 In the 20. Verſe the Lord meeteth with an objection of ſome men that might happely ſay, What ſhall wee eate the ſeventh yeare, for we ſhall not ſow nor gather in our encreaſe, &c. And moſt gloriouſly and comfortably hee anſwereth it, I will ſend my bleſſing upon you in the ſixt yeare, and it ſhall bring forth fruit for three yeares, &c. The like ſweet promiſe, verſe 19. See then, and ſinke it into your heart ſoundly, what God is able to doe for you touching all worldly neceſſaries, if you will obey him and truſt in him. Such a promiſe in Exodus hee made alſo, to keepe all things in ſafety for them at home, while they were at Hieruſalem ſerving him according to his Law. And what loſſe had the Shepheards when they left their flocks in the fields, and went to the Child Ieſus, according as the Angell had told them? Let this place againe ſtrengthen your faith, againſt all objections of fleſh and blood, made from naturall reaſons, and cauſes, as they ſeeme to men. For if the Lord be able, even then when the earth is weakeſt, having beene worne out with continuall tillage five yeares together, to make the ſixt yeare bring forth a triple bleſſing, enough for that yeare, for the ſeventh yeare, and for the eight yeare, till harveſt were ready; what unſeaſonable weather, what barrenneſſe of land, what this, what that, ſhall make a man deſpaire of Gods providence for things needfull? Leave God to himſelfe, and to his Almighty power: doe you your duty, feare him, love him, ſerve him, obey him with a true true heart, call upon your children and ſervants to doe the like, and you ſhall ſee the loving kindneſſe of the Lord to your comfort, theſe things ſhall be caſt upon you, and hee that knoweth your charge, and gave you that charge, will never faile you nor them of what is fit. You ſee here what he can doe, and let it profit you. I will tell you the feeling of my heart further in this point, and thus I reaſon; Can God bee thus ſtrong when the land is weake, and will hee bee thus ſtrong to the comfort of his ſervants? Why then cannot hee bee, or why will he not bee ſtrong in my weakneſſe, in your weakneſſe, and in every man and womans weakeneſſe that beleeve in him? Away feare, away, I may not hearken unto thee, when I am weakeſt he will be ſtrongeſt. For his power is beſt ſeene in weakeneſſe, and I will put my whole truſt and confidence in him, drawing an argument with David from my weakneſſe to move him, and not to diſcomfort me, Heale me, ô Lord, for I am weake. My weakneſſe ſhall drive me unto thee, not from thee, and I will tarry thy good leiſure. Lord ſtrengthen me, Lord comfort me, and under the covering of thy wings, let me be ſafe from all temptations diſpleaſing thee, and hurting me. Amen, Amen.

Verſe 20.

Exod. 34.

Mat.6.33.

2 Cor.12.9.

Pſ.6.2.

Verſe 29. 6 In the 29. verſe, if a man ſell a dwelling houſe in a walled Citie, he may buy it out again within a whole yeare after it is ſold, &c. Firſt, this and ſuch other laws confirme our trading and dealing one with another by buyings and ſellings, aſſuring us that ſuch contracts are lawfull, and with a good conſcience one man may uſe them with another. Secondly, we ſee and learne that God doth not onely know and regard the greater matters of Kingdomes and Princes affaires; but even the meaner actions alſo of men, and the very ſmalleſt things are not hid from him. Therefore doe juſtly in all trading, knowing that Gods eye is upon thee, and then looke for a bleſſing, hee ſhall not faile thee.

Verſe 35. 7 Moreover if thy brother be fallen in decay, and impoveriſhed with thee, thou ſhalt relieve him, &c. It is not enough to abſtaine from taking that which is not mine owne, but I muſt give that which is mine owne where need is: for mercy and humanity, to diſtreſſed perſons ſmell ſweet in the Noſtrils of the Lord, and have many bleſſings aſſured.

Verſe 38. 8 If thy brother impoveriſhed ſell himſelfe unto thee, thou ſhalt not compell him to ſerve as a bond-ſervant; but as an hired ſervant, and as a ſojourner ſhall he be with thee, hee ſhall ſerve thee unto the yeare of Iubile. Before it was ſaid, that ſervants ſhould goe free at the ſeventh yeare, here that this ſold man ſhould ſerve till the Jubile, how agree theſe together? Surely it is to be underſtood of ſuch, as having their eares boared, have made themſelves ſervants, unwilling to depart. Who therefore in regard of longer aſſurance of them, might haply have beene hardlier uſed of ſome Maſters, than they that ſhould be free ſooner.

Verſe 42. *Verſ.*43. Laſtly, when it is ſaid, Verſe 42. For they are my ſervants whom I brought out of the land of Ægypt, they ſhall not be ſold as bondmen are ſold. Thou ſhalt not rule over them cruelly, but ſhalt feare thy God. Let us remember, that albeit Moſes Law in theſe things hath his end for forme, yet the equity ſtill bindeth in theſe things, and the eſtate of ſervants under the Goſpell brought and bought out of ſpirituall Ægypt and bondage of ſinne by Chriſt the Lord, may not bee worſe than it was under the Law, when you ſee they might not bee cruelly ruled and dealt with. To this end the Apoſtles exhortation tendeth. *Epheſ.*6.9. And let thy ſoule love a good ſervant (ſaith the Wiſe-man) and leave him not a poore man. Other things in this Chapter I leave to your owne reading, and theſe ſerving for a taſte of the fruit of it, I ſtay here.

Eccleſ.7.

CHAP. XXVI.

The ſumme of this Chapter. HAving now made an end of his Lawes: in this Chapter the Lord moſt effectually exhorteth to the obedience of the ſame. Firſt, by his gracious promiſe of bleſſing if they ſo did: and ſecondly, by a fearefull threatning of puniſhment if they did otherwiſe. His bleſſings which hee promiſeth, are theſe: firſt, fruitfulneſſe of the ground in the 4. and 5. verſes, I will ſend you rain in due ſeaſon, and the land ſhall yeeld her encreaſe, and the trees of the field ſhall give their fruit,

Verſe 4. Verſe 5. and your threſhing ſhall reach unto the Vintage, and the vintage ſhall reach unto ſowing time, and you ſhall eate your bread in plenteouſneſſe, and dwell in your land ſafely.

2 Secondly, foraſmuch as the fruitfulneſſe of their ground ſhould bee little worth, if the enemie came in and ſpoiled it, or evill beaſts devoured either it, or them, therefore the Lord promiſeth them peace and publike tranquilitie both from man and beaſt, ſaying, I will ſend peace in the land, and you ſhall ſleep, and none ſhall make you afraid; alſo I will rid evill beaſts out of the land, and the ſword ſhall not goe through your land.

*Verſ.*6.

Verſe 7. 3 The third bleſſing promiſed is victory over their enemies, when he ſaith, And you ſhall chaſe your enemies, and they ſhall fall before you upon the ſword. And five of you ſhall chaſe an hundred, and an hundred of you ſhall put ten thouſand to flight, and your enemies ſhall fall before you upon the ſword.

Verſe 8.

4 The

4 The fourth blessing is the increase of the fruit of their bodies, in these words, For I will have respect unto you, and make you increase, and multiplie you, and establish my Covenant with you. Vers. 9.

5 To this increase of people, he will also give increase of food, without which, the more populous the more miserable; Ye shall eate old store (saith hee) and carry out old because of new. Verse 10.

6 Finally, in few words is much, I will set my Tabernacle among you, and my soule shall not loathe you. Also I will walke among you, and I will be your God, and you shall be my people. I am the Lord your God, which have brought you out of the Land of Ægypt, that ye shall not bee their bondmen, and I have broken the bonds of your yoke, and made you goe upright. This, I say againe, in few words is much, nay, all, all. For what can want to that people, nation, towne, or house, where God dwelleth, and walketh being their God, and they his people? If I walke in the shadow of death, (saith David) I will not feare, for thou art with me, &c. See and reade with this Chapter the 28. of Deut. Upon these grounds, are all the exhortations of the Prophets. Verse 11. Verse 12. Vers. 13. Psa. 23.

7 Yet take it not, as though ever where these outward blessings are, there were Gods favour and love. For by these things (saith the Scripture,) No man knoweth love or hate, And, The wicked swimme in wealth, (saith David) and have no misfortunes like other men. The Lord suffereth both his raine to fall, and his Sunne to shine as well upon the evill as the good. Blessed are the people that be in such a case, but rather blessed are they that have the Lord for their God. And therfore one truely instructed, saith againe with David, The greater sort of people doe wish these things, but Lord lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon me, &c. Secondly, touching these promised blessings, you must ever beware of appointing God a time, or of fainting and slipping from God, if by and by your expectation and desire bee not answered. But, though hee tarry, waite, waite; for he shall surely come, and shall not stay. Your prayer is daily, Thy will be done. Thus of blessings promised. Eccles. 9. 1. Psal. 73. 5, &c. Mat. 5. 45. Psal. 144. 14. Psal. 4. 6, 7. Psal. 4. Abac. 2. 3.

1 The Lords second argument (as I said) is drawne from punishments assured if they would not obey his Lawes, verse 14. and so forward, where first you may doe well to observe how the word My is repeated in the 15 verse; Mine Ordinances, my Lawes, my Commandements, my Covenant. It teacheth us that it is sin indeed which is committed against Gods Commandements, not against I know not what superstitious traditions of men, as neither is the obedience to them any obedience cared for of God. 2 Verse 14. Verse 15.

2 As before we were not to conclude, favour and love upon the outward blessings named, so neither now may we reason from these afflictions ever to hatred or dislike. For as outward blessings befall the evill, so outward crosses befall the good, and divers are the ends why God afflicteth his children, not ever for sinne, nor in anger, but whom the Lord loveth he chastiseth, &c. Abel was slaine that the lot of the godly might be noted in him. Iob sore afflicted for the tryall of his faith, and the Churches instruction. Ioseph imprisoned and much wronged, that first he might be humbled, and then exalted. The blinde man in the Gospell, neither for his own sinnes nor his parents, but that Gods glory might appeare. The Apostles afflicted that they might learne, and we know our Masters Kingdome is not of this world. By impietie judge of crosses, not by crosses of impiety.

3 The punishments in particular threatned to all wilfull contemners of Gods will, it is better for you to reade as they lie in the Text, than for me to stand upon. They are many: they are fearfull: many and sore diseases: Invasion by enemies, whereof see example Iudge 6. and 10. and 2 Chron. 12. Barrennesse of the earth, see example, 1 King. 17. Esay 5. Amos 4. &c. Evill Beasts see Deut. 32. and Ezek. 5. Besieging of foes, plague and pestilence, see 2 Kings 6. Lament. 4. &c. O tremble to provoke this God against you.

4 But after all these dreadfull and terrible threats, see what you reade, verse 42. Then I will remember my covenant with Iacob, and my covenant also with Isaac, &c. The land also, in the meane season, shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her Sabbaths, whilest she lyeth waste without them, but they shall willingly suffer punishments of their iniquitie, because they despised my Lawes, &c. Yet notwithstanding this, when they shall be in the Land of their enemies, I will not cast them away, neither will I abhorre them to destroy them utterly, nor to breake my covenant with them, for I am the Lord their God. But I will remember for them the covenant of old, when I brought them out of the Land of Ægypt in the sight of the Heathen, that I might be their God, I am the Lord, &c. Some are of opinion, that the words were fulfilled in the captivitie and deliverance out of Babylon. But the Jewes perswade themselves, that this promise of regard when they should bee in the land of their enemies, is not yet accomplished, but that they shall by vertue hereof, bee delivered one day out of this estate they are now in, scattered and dispersed into many places. The which conceit of theirs, others thinke to bee but an idle dreame, alledging that the Law and the Prophets were unto Iohn, and that the Jews shall never have any more government as they had. They apply therefore this promise to a true penitent sinner, who shall ever be respected upon his conversion, albeit he neglected the time of grace offered. Yet this is no imboldening to presume, but a comfort when repentance is true. Verse 42. Verse 43. Verse 44. Vers. 45.

5 Wayes

5. Wayes yet of God his delivering penitent ſinners are divers, and to bee obſerved that we erre not. For ſome, upon their ſorrow God not onely receiveth to mercy and favour, but
2 Chron.33. alſo delivereth them out of their preſent affliction. So did hee Manaſſes the King, when being for his ſinne bound in iron, and carryed away captive, the Lord upon his remorſe in thoſe irons not onely forgave his ſinne, but releaſed thoſe bands, and brought him to his Kingdome again. Others he receiveth unto favour, and forgiveth their ſinne, but yet ſuffereth them to fall by their outward affliction. So did he to the penitent theefe upon the Croſſe, hee received him into Paradiſe, but ſaved him not from that temporall death. The due remembrance of this, is a great comfort againſt the loſſe of friends in warres, and plagues, and ſuch like calamities, when others eſcape and doe well. Let us therefore cleave faſt unto God, beleeve his mercy, feare his juſtice. So whatſoever hapneth unto us, ſhall happen for our good one way or other.

In the 28. of Deut. theſe bleſſings and curſings are repeated againe, moſt effectually to move any heart that hath grace. Wherefore I often exhort all that deſire to live godly, to reade it often, that it may powerfully perſwade them to be wiſe, and to take time while time ſerveth, to turne to the Lord, while his arme is ſtretched out to receive them. For with the fooliſh Virgins to come too late, will bee woe without comfort, and deſtruction without helpe. Make no
Eccleſ.5.7. tarrying (ſaith Eccleſiaſticus) to turne unto the Lord, and put not off from day to day, for ſuddenly ſhall the wrath of the Lord breake forth, and in thy ſecurity thou ſhalt bee deſtroyed, and thou ſhalt
Aug. in Exod. periſh in time of vengeance. Hoc in multis impletur, ſed nemo intelligit, nec quiſquã adverſa ſuſtinens malis ſuis æſtimat irrogari, ſed quod pertulerit, conſuetudinis potius putat eſſe quam criminis, &c. This (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) is fulfilled in many, but none underſtandeth, neither doth any man when he ſuffereth evill, perſwade himſelfe that his ſinne is puniſhed, but attributeth ſuch haps rather to cuſtome than to crime, &c. This is a great blindneſſe, and therefore pray againſt it, and beware of it. This Chapter will ever aſſure us, ſinne will have plagues firſt or laſt, and therefore when they happen, complaine of ſinne, and not of God, remembring that true and good ſaying, Quæ ratio eſt ut doleamus nos non audiri à Deo, cum ipſi non audiamus Deum? Et ſuſpiremus non reſpici à Deo terras, cum ipſi non reſpiciamus in cœlum, & moleſtum ſit deſpici à Deo preces noſtras, cum præcepta ejus deſpiciantur à nobis? What reaſon is there we ſhould grieve that God will not heare us, when we our ſelves will not heare God? Or why ſigh we that God will not looke downe to the earth, when wee our ſelves will not looke up to heaven, we can deſpiſe his precepts, and yet he may not deſpiſe our prayers. Wee beate our Servants if they offend us, being but men as they are, and God may not beate us for our faults, hee being our Creator, and we but duſt. Thus make uſe of theſe curſes, and in ſtead of them, God ever vouchſafe us, for his Sonnes ſake, his bleſſings.

CHAP. XXVII.

This is the laſt Chapter of this Booke, and containeth two generall Heads.

The matter { Of Vowes. / Of Tythes.

Votum ſignificat deſiderium, unde, pro voto ſucceſſit & voti compos ſum, &c. Significat etiam promiſſionem Deo factam. Si enim quid Deo promittitur, dicitur votum: ſi homini dicitur promiſſum. Pſa.50. Matt.15.

TOuching the firſt, a Vow properly ſignifieth, a promiſe made to God willingly and adviſedly in a matter lawfull and poſſible. In the Booke of Numbers, Chapter thirty, you may ſee what Vowes were lawfull, and what not; here, how lawfull Vowes are to be performed, or redeemed being of that ſort that might bee redeemed. For of Vowes, ſome are commanded of God, and cannot be redeemed, but muſt needs bee performed: ſuch a Vow is the Vow of Baptiſme, of faith, and of newneſſe of life in the Lords Supper. Of which ſort of Vowes, the Pſalme ſaith, Offer to God the ſacrifice of praiſe, and pay thy vowes to the moſt High. If thou vow, pay it, &c. Eccleſ.5. Some vowes are ſimply unlawfull, being either ſinnes when they are made, or not to be performed without ſinne. Some are neither forbidden, nor commanded, but indifferent. And in theſe we muſt take heed, that wee make them not as any ſervices of God, or merit to our ſelves. For true it will ever be, that, In vaine doe men worſhip God teaching for doctrine mens precepts. In this Chapter obſerve ſundry particulars of things named that might bee vowed to God.

{ Perſons. / Beaſts. / Houſes. / Fields, &c.

Concerning Perſons, a man might then vow either himſelfe, or ſuch as were ſubject to his authority and power, unto the ſervice of God. Thus Anna vowed to God the male-child which God

God ſhould give her, if he in mercy would vouchſafe to give her one, according to her great and earneſt deſire. And ſhe accordingly performed her vow, when God graciouſly gave her Samuel her Sonne. But in caſe a perſon thus vowed had a deſire to be free againe, the Lord permitted that there might be a redemption made according to ſexe and age with money. And if the party were ſo poore that ſuch a rate could not be performed, then was the Prieſt to nominate and appoint the quantity or ſumme that ſhould be paid. The proportions named in your Chapter are theſe: 1 Sam. 1. 28. See Exod. 30. 13. twenty Gerahs. Thus might Jephtah have redeemed his daughter, and therefore his ſin the greater.

Verſe 3. A Male from 20. yeares to 60. was valued at 50. ſicles, that is 50. pounds.
Verſe 4. A Female at 30. ſicles, that is, 30 pounds, after 5. ſhillings the ounce ſterling.
Verſe 5. From 5. yeares to 20. the Male at 20. ſicles, the Female at 10.
Verſe 6. From a moneth to five yeares old, a Male at 5. ſicles, a Female at 3.
Verſe 7. From 60. yeares upward, a Male at 15. ſicles, a Female at 10.
Verſe 8. If any could not pay this, then the Prieſt rated as I ſaid.

Et hæc redemptio fit, ut quæ morte propria non expletur, ſaltem pretio voventis devotio compleatur: And this redemption is made (ſaith one,) that the devotion which was not made by death, at leaſt might be made by the commutation which the Vower ſhould give.

2. The ſecond ſort of things that might be vowed were beaſts, Verſe 9. where you ſee if it were a beaſt that lawfully might be offered in ſacrifice, then was there no redemption allowed of it. But if it were any uncleane beaſt of which men doe not offer a Sacrifice unto the Lord, then it might be redeemed, and in caſe the party would not redeem it, the Prieſt might ſell it. Delicti ſpeciem habuit, & in expiatione delicti, quinta pars dabatur, Chap. 6. If there were a redemption made, Then was a fifth part more above the valuation to be given, becauſe it was a kinde of fault (at leaſt in ſhew) to take that backe againe, which was once given to God, and retaine to a private uſe what was given to a religious and holy uſe. Verſe. 9. Verſ. 11.

3. The third ſort were houſes, Verſe 14. When a man ſhall dedicate his Houſe to be holy unto the Lord, then the Prieſt ſhall value it, whether is be good or bad, and as the Prieſt ſhall priſe it, ſo ſhall the value be. Here alſo lay a redemption, as you may ſee in the next verſe. The fourth ſort were fields, whereof ſome were by inheritance, ſome by purchaſe. If the field were by inheritãce, then was there one manner of redemption, verſe 16. &c. if by purchaſe, then another, verſe 22. &c. Verſe 14. Verſe 15. Verſe 16. Verſ. 22.

4. Verſe 26. Notwithſtanding the firſt borne of the beaſts, becauſe it is the Lords firſt borne, none ſhall dedicate ſuch, be it Bullock or Sheep, for it is the Lords, &c. You know the firſt borne were the Lords by another Law, and no redemption might be made of ſuch, but they muſt be left to the ſervice of God, as they were appointed, either to be offered in Sacrifice, or to be to the uſe of the Prieſts, &c.

5. There were of vowes againe two kindes, one ſimple, whereof you have ſeen theſe particulars; another which had an execration or curſe joyned to it, if the thing vowed ſhould bee changed from the uſe and end allotted, whereof now your Chapter ſpeaketh in the next place: ver. 28, 29. Notwithſtanding, nothing ſeparate from the common uſe, that a man doth ſeparate unto the Lord of all that he hath (whether it be man, or beaſt, or land of his inheritance) may be ſold nor redeemed: for every thing ſeparate from the common uſe, is moſt holy unto the Lord. Nothing ſeparate from the common uſe, which ſhall be ſeparate from man, ſhall be redeemed, but die the death. Where you muſt underſtand by ſeparate, ſuch a ſeparation or vow as is made with a curſe if it be altered. In which there was no redemption allowed, or ſale, or alienation any way. In this ſort, if men were vowed, they muſt die and not be ſpared. But then not innocent men muſt be vowed, but malefactors that by evill doing deſerved death. Such were the men of Jericho, Joſhua 6 and Achan, Joſhua 7. the Amalekites, 1 Sam. 15. and ſuch others, which made the ſin of Saul and the people very great, when they ſpared Agag the King, and the better Sheep and Oxen, and the fat beaſts, and the Lambes, and all that was good, and would not deſtroy them. And here-hence ſprang that kinde of giving thankes to the Church for the ſervice of God, that you ſee in many old Charters in England, with a grievous curſe upon all thoſe that ſhould alter and change thoſe things from that uſe, wherein they ſhewed their earneſt deſire to have things continue as they were given. Verſe 28. Verſe 29.

6. Now if you aske why God ordained theſe kinde of Vowes? The anſwer is, that he did it in two reſpects. Firſt, that his people might not follow the faſhion of the Idolatrous Heathens round about them, who had their faſhion of Vowes wicked and ſinfull, but might be directed in a good ſort, ſeeing they would follow ſome ſort. Secondly, that here-hence might ſpring ſome maintenance for the Miniſter, whereof in all things, and by all meanes, hee ſhewed his gracious care.

7. They of the Romiſh Religion, as from theſe Rites and Cuſtomes of the Old Teſtament, they have borrowed many things, ſo have they vowing, and many ſtrange Vowes, namely, Pardons, and diſpenſations, matters of no ſmall profit to them. But the Leviticall Prieſthood being ended, and all theſe Ceremonies, Rites, Cuſtomes, and Lawes that were not Morall, by the comming of the Lord Jeſus the truth of all figures and ſhadowes, and man having no power of his owne head, to erect and deviſe any worſhip of God without his warrant in his word, eaſily may we ſee and all men with us, what ground their vowes have, and how pleaſing they are to God. Their owne friends and favourites doe ſay and write, In malis promiſſis reſcinde fidem, in turpi voto muta decretum: In evill promiſes ſpare performance, in a foule vow change thy determination. Quod incaute voviſti ne facias: What unadviſedly thou haſt vowed, accompliſh not. Et non erit hæc prævaricatio, ſed temeritatis emendatio: And this ſhall not bee any unfit varying, but a moſt fit reformation of raſhneſſe. Melius eſt non vovere, quam vovere id, quod ſibi is cui promittitur, exolvi nolit: Better it is not at all to vow, than to vow that, which he to whom the promiſe is made, will not have paid to him. Virginitas carnis non ſervatur mente corrupta: intactis corporibus, fugit caſtitas de moribus: Virginity of the fleſh is not kept when the minde is corrupt: Though the body be never touched, yet chaſtity often flyeth from a man and womans manners. With many ſuch like ſayings worthy noting.

Another diviſion of vowes.

8. Yet let us know that there are two ſorts of vowes, civill vowes, and religious vowes. Civill vowes are ſuch as men make to men in honeſt, lawfull, and poſſible things, binding themſelves thereby to a performance of what they promiſe. And thoſe in honeſty ſtand firme, untill they be either performed or releaſed by him, or them, to whom they were made. Religious vowes are ſuch as are made to performe thereby ſome worſhip to God, and they are of two ſorts: either ſuch as are vere religioſa, truly religious; or ſpeciem habent, or ſuch as have a ſhew of Religious vowes. Truly religious are they, that binde to the performance of things commanded, as that in baptiſm named before, and in the other Sacrament of the Lords Supper, with ſuch like. In Prayer alſo and thankſgiving, unto which uſually vowes were annexed: in Prayer ſhewing their moſt earneſt deſire to obtaine their requeſts at Gods hand; and in thankſgiving ſhewing their due feeling of his goodneſſe, and in regard thereof promiſing to doe this or that lawfull thing when they ſhould come to the place where ſacrifices onely were to be offered, all places as you know being not allowed, but the place which God did chooſe, from which many Jewes dwelled farre, and came but at times. And as prayers were made in perill of ſickneſſe, of Sea, of War, and ſuch like; ſo were vowes. Such as have a ſhew of religious vowes, are thoſe that are deviſed for the honouring of God, but have no warrant from him, neither indeed are allowed of him. And theſe againe may be ſaid to be of two ſorts. For ſometimes they are directly againſt and contrary to the word, as to vow any mans death, as they did Pauls in the Acts, to vow to call upon Saints and Creatures in our prayers, with ſuch like. Sometimes they are not contrary, yet not expreſly commanded, but indifferent. And theſe things being drawne by a vow from their true nature of indifferency, and made neceſſary to ſalvation and to Gods ſervice, there is a will-worſhip diſpleaſing to God. But becauſe this matter of vowes will come in a more fit place to be ſpoken of (if God pleaſe) in the Booke of Numbers, therefore I will leave the orderly treatiſe of them to that place.

Gal. 5. 1.

9. The reference here made to the Prieſt, how farre it is from eſtabliſhing any popiſh careſhrift, every childe may perceive, and therefore weake is that doctrine that leaneth upon ſuch weake grounds. I have elſewhere ſufficiently diſproved this error, and therefore ſtand not upon it here.

The ſecond part of this Chapter.

THe ſecond part of this Chapter is concerning Tythes, which matter hath beene alſo ſomewhat touched before. With this people of the Jewes there were three kindes of Tythes: One that was yearely given to the Levites of all Corne and Cattell: Another, that the Levites paid to the Prieſts out of thoſe which they received of the people, which Tythes were called Tythes out of Tythes, whereof you reade in Numbers 18. 26. Speake alſo unto the Levites, and ſay unto them, when ye ſhall take of the Children of Iſrael the Tythes which I have given you of them for your inheritance, then ſhall ye take an heave offering of that ſame for the Lord, even the tenth part of the Tythe. A third that was payed every third yeare, beſide the generall Tythes out of all fruits growne upon the earth, and laid up to the reliefe of the poore, and of the Levites and Strangers; which Tythes were called the poores Tythes, whereof you reade Deuteronomy 14. 28. At the end of the third yeare, thou ſhalt bring forth all the Tythes of thine increaſe of the ſame yeare, and lay it up within thy gate, &c. Reade the Marginall Note there in your Bible. The like againe in the 26. Chap. The paying of Tythes well taught them, that life and all the nouriſhments of life which the earth yeeldeth, are the gifts of a gracious God, that over and above all deſervings, powreth his mercies upon men. They maintained the Miniſtery, relieved the poore, &c. as hath beene ſaid, and they ſhadowed Chriſt the inheritance of the Levites, and as yet of all Miniſters, and the comfort of all men that depend upon him. The number of tenne is a perfect number and abſolute, beſide which there is no other which is not contained in it: So is Chriſt the beginning and end of all. And they taught that a part being made holy by dedication to God, all the reſt ſhould bee holily uſed, and neither ſpent in ryot and ſinne, nor Decimam partem decima.

hoorded

hoorded up to make a dearth and famine, to the destruction of poore, &c.

2. There are spirituall Tythes, which the godly have a care ever to give unto God, by referring all the gifts of body and minde which the Lord had bestowed upon them to the service and glory of his name. Which Tythes Pharaoh paid not, when he said, Who is the Lord that I should obey him or heare him? Neither Asshur, when he boasted of his strength and power against God; whereof Esay 10.7. and so on, reade it I pray you. Neither Nabuchadnezzar, Antiochus; and others, that being wormes meat and dust, yet insulted over God, and forgot themselves. God keep us out of the company of them, and the ranke with them, and God grant that wee may carefully, as we are able, give the Lord Tythe of our severall abilities any way. My Brethren the Ministers of his holy word and Sacraments by teaching and labouring every way to save soules, and to bring men to the fold of Christ, never caring what evill men may say of their

[illegible] faintheartednesse of it, manner of it, or such like: but pitching their eyes his Sons praise of hee shall admoni-nd pitch in the be-handled.

art. Hee pleasure, ents they with that rtion, and e like the es far off.
he like to th of the me for the
For, non care is no
tle, Bonum
, I trust no et no man ge, and hee ncouraged teth faith-or, because ill say no eth or wa-as I wish

In Ezech. Hom. 3.

Epist. 82.

Laus Deo.

AN ADMONITION TO ALL SVCH AS SHALL INTEND hereafter to enter the ſtate of Matrimony godly, and agreeably to Lawes.

FIrſt, That they contract not with ſuch perſons as be hereafter expreſſed, nor with any of like degree, againſt the Law of God and the Lawes of the Realme.

Secondly, that they make no ſecret contracts, without conſent and counſell of their Parents or Elders, under whoſe authority they be; contrary to Gods Lawes and mans Ordinances.

Thirdly, That they contract not anew with any other, upon Divorce and Separation made by the Judge for a time, the Lawes yet ſtanding to the contrary.

MAriage is honourable among all men, and the bed undefiled: but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge, Heb. 13.4.

To avoid fornication let every man have his wife, and let every woman have her husband. He that cannot containe let him marry: For better it is to marry, than to burne, 1 Cor. 7.

Vnto the maried I command, not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband: but if ſhe depart, let her remaine unmaried, or be reconciled unto her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife, 1 Cor. 7.

LEVITICUS 18. 6.

None ſhall come neare to any of the kindred of his fleſh to uncover her ſhame: I am the Lord.

A man may not marry his			A woman may not marry with her
	Secundus gradus in linea recta aſcendente.			Secundus gradus in recta linea aſcendente.
Con.	Avia.	1 Grandmother.	1 Grandfather.	Con. Avus.
Aff.	Avi relicta.	2 Grandfathers wife.	2 Grandmothers husband.	Aff. Aviæ relictus.
Aff.	Proſocrus, vel ſocrus magna.	3 Wives Grandmother.	3 Husbands grandfather.	Aff. Proſocer, vel ſocer magnus.
	Secund. gr. inæqualis, in linea tranſverſali aſcend.			Secund. gr. inæqualis, in linea tranſverſali aſcend.
Con.	Amita.	4 Fathers ſiſter.	4 Fathers brother.	Con. Patruus.
Con.	Matertera.	5 Mothers ſiſter.	5 Mothers brother.	Con. Avunculus.
Aff.	Patrui relicta.	6 Fathers brothers wife.	6 Fathers ſiſters husband.	Aff. Amita relictus.
Aff.	Avunculi relicta.	7 Mothers brothers wife.	7 Mothers ſiſters husband.	Aff. Materteræ relictus.
Aff.	Amita uxoris.	8 Wives fathers ſiſter.	8 Husbands fathers brother.	Aff. Patruus mariti.
Aff.	Matertera uxoris.	9 Wives mothers ſiſter.	9 Husbands mothers brother.	Aff. Avunculus mariti.
	Primus gradus in linea recta aſcendente.			Primus gradus in linea recta aſcendente.
Con.	Mater.	10 Mother.	10 Father.	Con. Pater.
Aff.	Noverca.	11 Stepmother.	11 Stepfather.	Aff. Vitricus.
Aff.	Socrus.	12 Wives mother.	12 Husbands father.	Aff. Socer.
	Primus gradus in linea recta deſcendente.			Primus gradus in linea recta deſcendente.
Con.	Filia.	13 Daughter.	13 Sonne.	Con. Filius.
Aff.	Privigna.	14 Wives daughter.	14 Husbands ſonne.	Aff. Privignus.
Aff.	Nurus.	15 Sonnes wife.	15 Daughters husband.	Aff. Gener.
	Primus gradus æqualis in linea tranſverſali.			Primus gradus æqualis in linea tranſverſali.
Cor.	Soror.	16 Siſter.	16 Brother.	Con. Frater.
Aff.	Soror uxoris.	17 Wives ſiſter.	17 Husbands brother.	Aff. Levir.
Aff.	Fratris relicta.	18 Brothers wife.	18 Siſters husband.	Aff. Sororis relictus.
	Secundus gradus in linea recta deſcendente.			Secundus gradus in linea recta deſcendente.
Con.	Neptis ex filio.	19 Sonnes daughter.	19 Sonnes ſonne.	Con. Nepos ex filio.
Con.	Neptis ex filia.	20 Daughters daughter.	20 Daughters ſonne.	Con. Nepos ex filia.
Aff.	Pronurus, i. relicta nepotis ex filio.	21 Sonnes ſonnes wife.	21 Sonnes daughters husband.	Aff. Progener, i. relictus neptis ex filio.
Aff	Pronurus, i. relicta nepotis ex filia.	22 Daughters ſonnes wife.	22 Daughters daughters husb.	Aff. Progener, i. relictus neptis ex filia.
Aff.	Privigni filia.	23 Wives ſonnes daughter.	23 Husbands ſonnes ſonne.	Aff. Privigni filius.
Aff.	Privignæ filia.	24 Wives daughters daughter.	24 Husbands daughters ſonne.	Aff. Privignæ filius.
	Secund. gr. inæqualis in linea tranſverſali deſcen.			Secund. gr. inæqualis, in linea tranſverſali deſcen.
Con.	Neptis ex fratre.	25 Brothers daughter.	25 Brothers ſonne.	Con. Nepos ex fratre.
Con.	Neptis ex ſorore.	26 Siſters daughter.	26 Siſters ſonne.	Con. Nepos ex ſorore.
Aff	Nepotis ex fratre relicta.	27 Brothers ſonnes wife.	27 Brothers daughters husb.	Aff. Neptis ex fratre relictus.
Aff.	Nepotis ex ſorore relicta.	28 Siſters ſonnes wife.	28 Siſters daughters husband.	Aff. Neptis ex ſorore relictus.
Aff.	Neptis uxoris ex fratre.	29 Wives brothers daughter.	29 Husbands brothers ſonne.	Aff. Leviri filius, i. nepos mariti ex fratre.
Aff.	Neptis uxoris ex ſorore.	30 Wives ſiſters daughter.	30 Husbands ſiſters ſonne.	Aff. Gloris filius, i. nepos mariti ex ſorore.

1 IT is to be noted, That thoſe perſons which bee in the direct Line aſcendent and deſcendent, cannot marry together, although they be never ſo farre aſunder in degree.

2 It is alſo to be noted, That Conſanguinity and Affinity (letting and diſſolving Matrimony) is contracted as well in them and by them which bee of kindred by the one ſide, as in and by them which be of kindred by both ſides.

3 Item, That by the Lawes, Conſanguinity and Affinity (letting and diſſolving Matrimony) is contracted as well by unlawfull company of man and woman, as by lawfull Mariage.

4 Item, In contracting betwixt perſons doubtfull, which be not expreſſed in this Table, it is moſt ſure firſt to conſult with men learned in the Lawes, to underſtand what is lawfull, what is honeſt and expedient, before the finiſhing of their contracts.

5 Item, That no Parſon, Vicar, or Curate, ſhall ſolemnize Matrimony out of his or their Cure or Pariſh Church or Chappell, and ſhall not ſolemnize the ſame in private houſes, nor lawleſſe or exempt Churches, under the paines of the Law forbidding the ſame. And that the Curate have their Certificats, when the parties dwell in divers Pariſhes.

6 Item, The banes of Matrimony ought to be openly denounced in the Church by the Miniſter three ſeverall Sundayes or Feſtivall dayes, to the intent that who will and can alledge any impediment, may bee heard, and that ſtay may bee made till further tryall, if any exception be made there againſt it upon ſufficient caution.

7 Item, VVho ſhall maliciouſly object a frivolous impediment againſt a lawfull Matrimony, to diſturbe the ſame, is ſubject to the paines of the Law.

8 Item, VVho ſhall preſume to contract in the Degrees prohibited (though hee doe it ignorantly) beſides that the fruit of ſuch copulation may be judged unlawfull, is alſo puniſhable at the Ordinaries diſcretion.

9 Item, If any Miniſter ſhall conjoyne any ſuch, or ſhall be preſent at ſuch Contracts making, he ought to be ſuſpended from his Miniſtery for three yeares: And otherwiſe to be puniſhed according to the Lawes.

10 Item, it is further ordained, That no Parſon, Vicar, or Curate doe preach, treat, or expound, of his owne voluntary invention, any matter of controverſie in the Scriptures, if he be under the degree of a Maſter of Art, except he be licenced by his Ordinary thereunto, but only for the inſtruction of the people, reade the Homilies already ſet forth, and ſuch other forme of Doctrine as ſhall be hereafter by authority publiſhed. And ſhall not innovate or alter any thing in the Church, or uſe any old rite or ceremony, which be not ſet forth by publike authority.

Set forth at the firſt by the moſt Reverend Father in God, Mathew Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Primate of England, and Metropolitane.

This may be placed after the 18. Chapter of Leviticus, betweene the Pages 402. and 403.

power of his owne head, to erect and deviſe any worſhip of God without his warrant in his word, eaſily may we ſee and all men with us, what ground their vowes have, and how pleaſing they are to God. Their owne friends and favourites doe ſay and write, In malis promiſſis reſcinde fidem, in turpi voto muta decretum: In evill promiſes ſpare performance, in a foule vow change thy determination. Quod incaute voviſti ne facias: What unadviſedly thou haſt vowed, accompliſh not. Et non erit hæc prævaricatio, ſed temeritatis emendatio: And this ſhall not bee any unfit varying, but a moſt fit reformation of raſhneſſe. Melius eſt non vovere, quam vovere id, quod ſibi is cui promittitur, exolvi nolit: Better it is not at all to vow, than to vow that, which he to whom the promiſe is made, will not have paid to him. Virginitas carnis non ſervatur mente corrupta: intactis corporibus, fugit caſtitas de moribus: Virginity of the fleſh is not kept when the minde is corrupt: Though the body be never touched, yet chaſtity often flieth from a man and womans

Another diviſion of vowes.

8. Yet
Civill vo themſelv untill the ous vowe ſorts: eit Religiou
as that in
In Prayer their moſ their due thing wh as you kn dwelled f
War, and deviſed f
of him.
gainſt and vow to c contrary, vow from there is a more fit p
the orderl

Gal.5.1.

9. The ſhrift, eve weake gr on it here.

THe ſe
what
One that paid to th

Decimam partem decimæ.

Tythes out of Tythes, whereof you reade in Numbers 18. 26. Speake alſo unto the Levites, and ſay unto them, when ye ſhall take of the Children of Iſrael the Tythes which I have given you of them for your inheritance, then ſhall ye take an heave offering of that ſame for the Lord, even the tenth part of the Tythe. A third that was payed every third yeare, beſide the generall Tythes out of all fruits growne upon the earth, and laid up to the reliefe of the poore, and of the Levites and Strangers; which Tythes were called the poores Tythes, whereof you reade Deuteronomy 14.28. At the end of the third yeare, thou ſhalt bring forth all the Tythes of thine increaſe of the ſame yeare, and lay it up within thy gate, &c. Reade the Marginall Note there in your Bible. The like againe in the 26. Chap. The paying of Tythes well taught them, that life and all the nouriſhments of life which the earth yeeldeth, are the gifts of a gracious God, that over and above all deſervings, powreth his mercies upon men. They maintained the Miniſtery, relieved the poore, &c. as hath beene ſaid, and they ſhadowed Chriſt the inheritance of the Levites, and as yet of all Miniſters, and the comfort of all men that depend upon him. The number of tenne is a perfect number and abſolute, beſide which there is no other which is not contained in it: So is Chriſt the beginning and end of all. And they taught that a part being made holy by dedication to God, all the reſt ſhould bee holily uſed, and neither ſpent in ryot and ſinne, nor hoorded hoorded up to make a dearth and famine, to the deſtruction of poore, &c.

2. There are ſpirituall Tythes, which the godly have a care ever to give unto God, by referring all the gifts of body and minde which the Lord had beſtowed upon them to the ſervice and glory of his name. Which Tythes Pharaoh paid not, when he ſaid, Who is the Lord that I ſhould obey him or heare him? Neither Aſſur, when he boaſted of his ſtrength and power againſt God; whereof Eſay 10.7. and ſo on, reade it I pray you. Neither Nabuchadnezzar, Antiochus; and others, that being wormes meat and duſt, yet inſulted over God, and forgot themſelves. God keep us out of the company of them, and the ranke with them, and God grant that wee may carefully, as we are able, give the Lord Tythe of our ſeverall abilities any way. My Brethren the Miniſters of his holy word and Sacraments by teaching and labouring every way to ſave ſoules, and to bring men to the fold of Chriſt, never caring what evill men may ſay of their preaching and writing, of the plainneſſe of it, manner of it, or ſuch like; but pitching their eyes and hearts upon God and his people, Feed, feed, feed his Sheep, his Lambs, the price of his Sons blood, with all their love and ſtrength, thinking, whilſt there is time, how much the praiſe of man for curioſity, eloquence, and affectation, ſhall differ from the praiſe of God when hee ſhall ſay, O good and faithfull ſervant, &c. What ſhould I adde? Some men will ſcorne all admonition, yet all, neither doe nor will. So to flie a pitch here, as a man may both flie up, and pitch in heaven hereafter, is an happy thing. And I ſay no more.

Thus much ſhall ſuffice of this Booke called Leviticus, the uſe whereof I ſhewed in the beginning, and I hope have now fully made manifeſt by the particulars that have beene handled. My poore labour I humbly commend to him that made my heart, and knoweth my heart. Hee hath bleſſed, and can bleſſe every mans endeavours, according to his gracious will and pleaſure, In which had I not reſted, too well I know theſe dayes and times what diſcouragements they yeeld many wayes, then in them to have gone forward any further, but to have ſtaid with that which I began when things were better taken. Yet bleſſed be God, hee hath his portion, and wiſdome is juſtified of her Children. The Preacher, ſaith Saint Gregory, ſhould be like the Smiths burning iron, which not onely heateth thoſe that are neare, but caſteth ſparkes far off. The Sun (ſaith another) is content not onely to ſhine unto us preſent, but will doe the like to thoſe that ſucceed when we are gone: and ſo ſhould the Preacher doe. Et paucis natus eſt qui populum ſuæ ætatis tantummodo cogitat: And he is borne but for a few, that onely thinketh of the people preſent when he liveth, ſaith wiſe Seneca, Homo naſcitur reipub: A man is borne for the Common-wealth, ſaith the Civill Law, and not for the time onely, where he liveth: For, non minoris curæ eſt mihi, qualis poſt mortem meam Reſpub. fuerit, quam qualis hodiè: My care is no leſſe for the time to come after me, than for the preſent, could Tully ſay, And Ariſtotle, Bonum univerſale divinius eſt: The good that is generall is more excellent. All which ſayings, I truſt no man will deny, may as rightly be applyed to the Miniſter of God and his Church. Let no man therefore accept with the left hand what is given with the right. We have all a Judge, and hee is righteous. We muſt give an account one day, both how we have laboured, and encouraged or diſcouraged others to labour. Our abilities are not alike, but the God of mercy accepteth faithfulneſſe in the meaneſt. The hearb that is good is not rejected in the uſe it ſerveth for, becauſe the Gardiner that planted it was inferiour to many Gardiners more excellent. I will ſay no more, but with eyes and heart caſt to him that onely giveth increaſe, whoſoever planteth or watereth, beſeech him for his Sons ſake, to make theſe my poore endeavours profitable, as I wiſh them to his Church.

In Ezech. Hom. 3.

Epiſt. 82.

Laus Deo.

AN ALPHABETICALL TABLE TO THE NOTES UPON THE BOOK OF LEVITICUS.

A

ADdition or diminution in Gods precepts unlawfull. 351

Ashes carried out of the Hoast figured the suffering and buriall of Christ. 367

Aaron and his sons consecrated into the Priests office, 371. they are the types of Christ, 372. and a figure of the Church, ibid. not hated of God for his sonnes faults. 377

Admirable change of worldly matters, expressed in Nadab and Abihu, Aarons sonnes. 376

Absolution retained by us as it was practised in the true Church of Christ. 387

Adam taught of God to sacrifice. 349

B

BUrnt-offerings, with the manner and circumstance of them. 351

Three sorts of Burnt-offerings. 351

Cleane and uncleane beasts what they resemble. 380. &c.

Blood used in atonements made for sinnes. 392

Blasphemy how dreadfull. 414

Blessings often befall the evill, and crosses the good. 419

Blemishes of the body resembled to the blemishes of the minde. 409

C

CEremonies of good and profitable use, if well understood. 353

Ceremony of Trespasse-offering a shadow of Christs blood sprinkled by preaching. 368

Ceremony of cleansing men and women. 388

Ceremony of cleansing leprous houses. ibid. &c

Christians burnt-offerings. 371

Christ is the remedy against all hunger. 356

Christ obtained not heaven for himselfe, but for his Church. 359

Christs satisfaction for sinne, endureth good for ever. 355

Christ sanctifieth none but such as take hold of him by true faith. 371

Christs blood profiteth none out of the Church. 368

Comfort of women. 359

Covenant of God. 367

Cleane beasts parting the hoofe, a note of the true Preachers of the Word. 380

Churching of women a lawfull and laudable custome in the Church. 383

Common-wealths flourish, when Gods lawes are kept. 393

Children not to bee compelled to marry where they abhorre. 397

Contracts that be secret, odious to GOD. 398

Two things necessary in a godly Common-wealth. 393

Chaste carriage in a woman a great dowrie. 400

Church Christs Spouse. 409

Comelinesse of body the blessing of God. 410

D

DEformities and diseases, with their applications. 410.411

Every one may bee said to have three dayes. 370

E

EXamples of the fishes of the sea, and fowles of the ayre shew the great mercie of God. 381

Easter wherefore kept. 412

F

FAithfull friends alwayes secret. 377
Flesh-eating how farre lawfull, and how far not. 379
What is meant by offering the fat. 359
A merry tale of the god fire. 365. &c.
Feasts observed of the Iewes by Gods appointment. 412

G

GOd never respecteth the poore. 361
Gods continuall care for the Ministery. 368
Gods regenerate Spirit compared to leaven. 362
Gifts of small value offered to God with true zeale are as acceptable to him, as those of more cost. 355
Great sinnes require great expiation. ibid.
Gregory Bishop of Rome (the best of all that followed him) his decree for supplications to Saints (contrary to Gods Commandement) how punished. 375

H

HOney sweet in taste, but bitter by effect. 357
High Priest a figure of Christ Iesus. 361
Home-bread impuritie sooner spoile a kingdome than forraigne foes. 395
Hate that is secret murthers the heart. 405

I

INtents not agreeable to the Word ever punished. 376
Iewes had little use of fish. 381
Incest abhorred in nature by bruit beasts. 393
Idolatry and Idolaters punished. 408
Jubile instituted of God, what it signifieth. 417

L

LUcians prophane scoffe at Gods worship by blood, refuted. 349
Leaven what it signifieth. 367
Leviticall Priesthood a shadow of Christs Priesthood. 373
Latine Prayers and Invocation of Saints not to be proved lawfull. 376
Leprosie a disease fearfull and ugly 385. it signifies the state of all wicked men and women, 359. whether man and wife may be divorced for it. 387
Leaven in the Scripture taken both in ill part and in good part. 369
Livia wife to Augustus Cæsar, commended. 400
Lights in Churches not ordained for our imitation under the Gospell. 414

M

MUltitude of offenders excuse not the offence. 361
Ministers so loved of God, that he requireth they be honestly and liberally maintained. 364
Mariage feasts restrained. 370
Whether error or mistaking maketh mariage void or no. 396
Contract before mariage very ancient and commendable in the Church of God. 398
Man must live by his owne faith, not by anothers. 371
Moses obedience, and the people under him, a good example for us. 373
Mans duty is to depend upon Gods will in all things. 379
Men put in trust by the Lord to see that their wives keepe his lawes and ordinances. 383
Mary the mother of Christ obedient to the Law. ibid.
Massilians attonement or expiation for their City. 391
Mans duty to his wife. 402
Mossellanus a Iew, a contemner of Augury. 406

N

NO power in man to please God, but our high Priest Christ. 353
Night in the Old Testament, Day in the new. 371

O

ORder is very pleasing to God. 354
Oblations that reconcile mẽ to God. 361
Obstinacy in refusing mercy offered, a signe of fearfull judgement. 374
Originall corruption what it is. 389
Obedience to Gods law commanded. 418

P

PRiesthood a note of Christs office. 365
Prayer availeth not, but in Christ and by Christ, our high Priest. ibid.
Peace-offering, what it signifieth. 369
Priests are as brests and shoulders to the people. 371
Presumption in man abhorred by God. 374
The office of the Priesthood was not of man, nor from man, but instituted by the Lord, 371 the honor and reputation of it confirmed, and the contempt thereof fearfully punished. ibid.
Popery wrongeth mens soules in misleading them. 390

Popish shaving heathenish. 407
Penticost what it signifieth. 413

R

ROttennesse the companion of gluttony. 360
Rash swearing, and foolish vowing, neither lawfull nor in our power. 363

S

SAcrifices of the old Law not instituted for perpetuity. 350
Sacrifices abhorred by the Lord, when we runne on in sinne. 363
Sacrifices were not devised by man, but taught by God to Adam. 349
Sacrifices not offered according to Gods rule punished. ibid.
Salt of Gods covenant, 358. it and the Sunne the most profitable things. ibid.
Seasoning which finds grace with God, is found in the Word. 358
Supplications to Saints devised by Gregory Bishop of Rome. 375
Sinnes not to be divided, but all burnt. 355
Sinne how hatefull a thing. 364
Silence in women much commended. 401
Slandering abhorred. 404
Strangers to be gently and kindly used. 407
Shew-bread what it signified. 414

T

THings indifferent are indifferently to bee used. 355
Thankfulnesse required by God for his benefits. 359
Times divided into three days, 370. and the application thereof. ibid.
Thirius King of Thrace his History. 382
Tythes (Gods owne part) not to be embezelled, 403. they are the gifts of God. 422
Talio his law what it meaneth. 415

V

VErtues of the holy Fathers of ancient times 385
Vowes whether they hinder mariage or no, 396 sometimes lawfull, sometimes unlawfull, 421 two sorts of vowes. 422

W

WHy God did institute such a kinde of service in the old Law, as thereby seeming to be delighted in slaughter. 349
Why God tyed the Israelites to offer their Sacrifices in a set place, 352. and on the North side. 354
Will-worship. 404
Word of God not to bee turned to popular applause. 358
Wayes of delivering penitent sinners divers. 420
Wine a flattering devill. 178

Z

ZIpporahs obedience to her husband in respecting him more than her childe. 400

The end of the Table of the Notes upon LEVITICUS.

COMFORTABLE NOTES VPON THE BOOKES OF NUMBERS AND DEVTERONOMIE.

VVITH AN ALPHABETICALL TABLE OF THE PRINCIPALL MATTERS contained in them.

BY

The right Reverend Father in God, GERVASE BABINGTON, late Bishop of Worcester.

LONDON,
Printed by M. FLESHER.
1637.

THE PVBLISHER TO THE READERS.

HAVING found by experience, how deare are the Writings of this Right Reverend and godly Father, Gervase Babington, late Bishop of VVorcester; and how much esteemed by your religious affections, in that you have bought up the former Impressions of his Labours, and still seeke for more: I was encouraged as wel by your pious desire, which can scarcely be satisfied, as more especially by this happy supply of New-Labours, now lately come to my hands, to make a New and New-inlarged Impression. I doe not presume to commend them unto your judicious eyes; lest, either I should seeme to suspect that Spirit whereby you have loved the former, and so must needs esteeme the latter; or else I should, the learning of the Man, the piety of the Christian, the deepnesse of the Divine, the sincerity of the Bishop, (as the Poet saith) Culpa deterere Ingenii: I should (I say) vilifie these his vertues by my mediocrity: Onely I am to signifie thus much: you have here which you had before, Notes upon Numbers and Deuteronomie, written by like Spirit and Conscience, as those you had before: and more than all this, a found and learned Exposition of all the Articles of Christian Faith: wherein as in other things he passed others, so herein, I thinke, he passed himselfe. That I may not presse my Iudgement beyond the Presse; reade him for a taste, but upon the descent into Hell, and your selves will finde, with what Piety, with what Charity, with what Science, with what Conscience he writes; much better than I can prescribe: Commending therefore these Workes of Charity to your Charitable acceptations, I leave you to him who is Charity it selfe.

COMFORTABLE NOTES VPON THE BOOKE OF NUMBERS.

THis is the fourth Booke of Moſes, wherein you may conſider the Title, or Name, the Argument, the Parts, the Authority, and the Uſe. The Title or Name with the Hebrews is of two ſorts. It is called of the firſt word of the Booke Vaiedabber, which is, Locutus eſt, He ſpake: as Geneſis is called Bereſhith, in principio, in the beginning: Exodus, Veelleh Semoth, Nomina hæc, theſe Names: Leviticus, Vaijera, vocavit, he called; or it is called, Bemidbar, in Deſerto, in the Wilderneſſe, either becauſe this word is uſed alſo in the beginning of this Book, or elſe becauſe the things herein contained, are ſuch things as were done in the Wilderneſſe by the ſpace of eight and thirty yeares and better. Of the Grecians it is called Numbers, and ſo of the Latines, and in our Engliſh. The reaſon hereof, becauſe in it are contained divers numbrings. As firſt, two numbrings of the people; one in the Wilderneſſe of Sinai, contained in the firſt Chapter; another in the plaine of Moab by Iordan, contained in the 26. Chapter. Secondly, the Levites are numbred by themſelves for the ſervice of the Tabernacle and the Prieſts office, Chap. 4. Thirdly, the offerings of the Heads and Princes of Iſrael at the ſetting up of the Tabernacle, and at the dedication of the Altar, are rehearſed, or numbred. Fourthly, the reſting or pitching places where they ſtayed, in their going towards Canan (which were 42.) are numbred, Chap. 13. Fifthly, many perils, many puniſhments, many favours and benefits beſtowed upon this people, are numbred and reckoned up in this Booke. In regard of all which, it is called fitly the Booke of Numbers. And thus for the Title and Inſcription.

Touching the Argument or matter; many looking at the name, thinke it cannot bee greatly for edification or profit of the people. But they are deceived. For over and beſides theſe numbrings, it containeth many excellent, and even chiefe points of Doctrine as will appeare in place. It containeth the parts of a good man, whether he be a teacher in the Church, a governour in the Common-wealth, or an obeyer in both.

The parts of this Booke may be ſaid to be two, chiefly or generally. The firſt, from the beginning to the 20. Chapter, containing a ſtory of almoſt 39. yeares, of things done, and Lawes given to this people of God, from the beginning of the ſecond moneth of the ſecond yeare after their comming out of Ægypt, to the beginning of the 11. moneth of the 40. yeare, which was the laſt. The ſecond, from the beginning of the 20. Chapter to the end of the Booke, of things done in the laſt yeare.

The authority of this Booke appeareth by the allegations out of it in the New Teſtament, as of other Bookes alſo of the Old Teſtament. For when we ſee places alledged out of Geneſis, Exodus, Leviticus, this booke and others by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, plainly we ſee the account which was made of them, and that the authority of them is good. That in the ſecond of Luke, of opening firſt the wombe it was taken out of this Booke Chap. 8. 16. That in the third of Iohn, of the braken Serpent, was taken out of this Booke, Chap. 21. 9. That in the 19. of Iohn, of not breaking a bone of him, do we not reade it in the Book of Numbers, Chap. 9. 12. That of Balaam ſo often repeated in the New Teſtament by Peter, Iude, the Apoc. &c. we know well it was had here-hence, being mentioned at large in this Booke, Chap, 22, 23, 24. Many ſuch other Quotations and allegations may you obſerve out of this Booke, to ſhew the ſacred authority of it.

Laſtly, for the uſe it is moſt excellent both unto faith and manners, as will appeare to you in your reading. And therefore with zeale and care goe over it as you may at times, even againe and againe. And thus of the whole Booke in generality.

CHAP. I.

The heads of this Chapter are chiefly two.

{ The numbring of the People.
{ The circumſtances, which are five:

{ Where they were numbred.
{ Why they were numbred.
{ How they were numbred.
{ How many, or which.
{ By whom.

FOr the firſt, Where; It was in the Wilderneſſe: which yeeldeth us this comfortable note, that in no place the Lord is unmindfull of his Church; in no place the Lord forgetteth his people, or any man or woman fearing him and depending upon him. The haires of your heads are numbred, ſaith our bleſſed Saviour: And be aſſured of it, ſaith the Ancient Father, when the devill cannot touch the briſtle of a Swine without the Lords leave. He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye. And what man forgetteth his eye, or feeleth not if the apple thereof bee touched? Feare not little flocke, for it is your fathers pleaſure to give you the Kingdome. And if ſo, then may we be aſſured, that in no place will he forget us. Thou art he that tooke me out of my mothers wombe, Thou waſt my hope when I hanged upon my mothers breaſts, &c. ſaith David. And will he forſake him or forget him when he is gray-headed? No, no, though a mother could forget her childe, which we know is hardly done, yet will not, yet cannot the Lord forget the pooreſt ſoule in this world, that truſteth in him, and ſerveth him. Wherefore, let the place where he numbred his people, even the Wilderneſſe thus profit us.

2. Why they were numbred? there were two reaſons: Firſt, (ſaith Theodoret) that the truth of the Lords promiſe, made Geneſis 15. to Abraham might appeare, for the the multiplying and encreaſing of his ſeed and poſterity: which we all ſee here was moſt fully and wonderfully accompliſhed. For what an admirable increaſe is here of ſeventy ſoules that came firſt with Iacob into Ægypt? ſo, ſo, and ever ſo, ſhall the Lord performe what he pleaſeth to promiſe. And therefore looke what promiſe of his you finde moſt comfort in, and, as he is God, hee ſhall not faile you in it. No, heaven and earth ſhall paſſe, but not any jot of Gods ſweet and comfortable promiſes made to us his poore ſervants that waite upon him. Therefore be comforted with it, and make continuall uſe of it.

Secondly, they were thus numbred, that the Tribes might be kept diſtinct, and ſo the birth of Chriſt certainly knowne to have been, according to the Scriptures, of the Tribe of Iudah. Here you may alſo conſider and ſee, why David was puniſhed for numbring the people; even becauſe he had no commandement from God for it, as here was, neither any good cauſe, as here alſo was, but in meere pride and vanity did it, that his power and ſtrength might appeare.

Further uſe you may likewiſe make thus: Numbring, with men, is a ſigne of care and love; as when they number their money, their Cattell, &c. So is the Lords numbring of his people a token of his care and love towards them: for which we ought ever to render love againe in the greateſt meaſure that hee ſhall enable us unto. For certainely, to God much more is it due. Cupit omnis dilectio redamari: Every love would have love againe. So God loved the World, &c. Wee may againe learne of theſe gracious numbrings of his people, to number often with our ſelves his mercies and benefits vouchſafed unto us, that wee may ſend up thankfull thoughts to his Majeſty for them. Such an holy numbring uſed Iacob when hee ſaid: O Lord, with my ſtaffe came I over this River, and now I returne with much wealth. Nothing but my ſtaffe had I when I came this way firſt, but now the caſe is altered, and my riches great.

great. How many great men of all callings, may thus number Gods favour towards them, ſince their firſt beginning, in Cities and Townes, where little ſtockes have growne to great ſummes. What a fit meditation is this? and how ſhall the Lord like this kinde of numbring? We may alſo remember what the Pſalme ſaith, and learne to number our dayes, that wee may apply our hearts unto wiſdome. But you may ſay this numbring was reſtrained to the Jewes. And even ſo was Gods love in ſome ſort, for a time: but when Chriſt came, then there went out a decree from Auguſtus Cæſar, that all the world ſhould be taxed; which could not bee without numbring of them. And therefore by Chriſt the partition-wall is broken downe, and the comforts of Gods numbring of them imparted to us, and to be approved by us to our joy; praying with him that ſo prayed: Grant, good Lord, that in thy numbrings of thy people I may bee ever one.

3 The third circumſtance is, How they were numbred: which in the ſecond Verſe is mentioned by their Families, by their Houſes, and by their Names. Wee may take occaſion by it to looke at the Lords courſe ever, not to have a parity and equality either in Church or civill eſtate, but as in the one, ſo in the other, there were certaine ſuperiorities among them; and their ſeventy Elders and ſupreme Councell conſiſted not of all that were and would bee preſent, but of certaine of the chiefe, who, for their nobility and authority, were preferred above the reſt, and admitted to be of that number, &c.

4 The fourth circumſtance, Who was numbred; even all the males, man by man, from twenty yeares old and above, ſaith the Text, verſe 3. therfore no woman nor childe: and which goe forth to the warre in Iſrael, therefore no decrepit and lame perſons, unfit for the warres. Whereby we may make this uſe.

Firſt, that as there is time of fitneſſe and unfitneſſe for the warre, and that knowne to God, even ſo is there of other things. There is a time of fitneſſe and unfitneſſe, to learne, to labour, and to doe any thing that belongeth to man to doe in this life. When Timothy was a childe, and young, hee was apt to bee taught the things that concerne vertue and goodneſſe: therefore by the worthy care of his Grandmother Lois, his mother Eunice, or other of his friends, hee was brought up, even from his infancy, in the knowledge of the Scriptures. And the Jewes were often commanded by God to teach their children, whileſt they were children, the meaning of ſuch and ſuch things. So for labour, is there not a fitneſſe and an unfitneſſe in man for it? Should men looke for fruit upon trees in winter? No, wee know that is not the time. Can the moſt cunning Taylor that ever was, doe that with cloth cut that hee could doe with cloth whole? Did not the painfull Ant right well anſwer the idle Graſhopper when hee bid her dance in winter, ſeeing ſhee had done nothing but ſing in ſummer, for victuall of her ſhee ſhould have none, neither feed upon her labours. How then ſhould every one have care of this thing. There is a time when neither fruit is good for the taſte, nor for the ſtomacke, and there is a time when it is good for both. It is an old ſaying and wiſe, to note the difference of times; Iuvenis unguentum fragrans, ſenex unguentum ſanans; A young man is like an oyntment that ſmelleth well, but an old man is like an oyntment that healeth well; the one pleaſing, the other ſoveraigne and helpfull. Let both youth and age thinke of it, and while wit and memory, ſpeech and utterance, ſtrength and health doe ſerve, the Lords worke may goe forward, and that griefe bee thought of, which will otherwiſe twitch their hearts, and torment their ſoules, when age and imperfection ſhall come on, and wholly, or greatly, diſable to this duty.

Secondly, by this regard which the Lord hath of a fit time for warres, wee plainly ſee hee alloweth of warres, and of Chriſtian ſubjects obedience to their Princes, and of all that live under the authority of others, to ſuch as God hath appointed to governe them; contrary to that fooliſh frenſie of the Anabaptiſts, that thinke otherwiſe.

Thirdly, in leaving out of women when he numbreth his people, although wee may not gather any want of care or love in the Lord towards them, ſeeing in Chriſt there is neither male nor female, but we are all one: yet we may thus profit, that ſurely God loveth neither man nor woman that hath thoſe faults which uſually, or at leaſt, too much are in women; as unfit feare, levity, inconſtancy, and ſuch like: but he would have both men and women to bee men, that is, ſtrong and ſtout in the wayes of vertue and godlineſſe, conſtant and immoveable, never putting the hand to the plough, and looking backe. Non ætatem, ſed virtutem etiam requirit Deus: God (ſaith Origen) doth not onely require youth and aptneſſe of age for the warres, but that he goe forth alſo, when time ſerveth, to the ſame. And as in this thing, ſo in all other duties laid upon us, and required of us.

Laſtly, if the Lord reſpect times and ſeaſons thus, when wee are fit and unfit for labour and paines, let all Chriſtian Maſters doe the ſame, and allow to their ſervants, as well a time to reſt, and to ceaſe from labours, as to goe to them: for every thing hath a time; and above ſtrength, neither can wee, neither ſhould we, be put to undertake by or for the greedy getting of this fading world.

5 The

5 The fifth and laſt circumſtance is, By whom they were numbred: Which is contained in the fourth verſe, and ſo to the eighteenth verſe; to wit, by Moſes and Aaron, taking to them other chiefe perſons, that were the heads of the houſe of their Fathers of every Tribe. And why muſt theſe men bee joyned in commiſſion with Moſes and Aaron? Surely, in all probabilitie, to avoid envy, that gnawing Snake in every place, againſt every man and matter that is good. You may remember that ſpitefull ſpeech of thoſe repining wretches: Moſes and Aaron you take too much upon you. So haply would they have ſaid here, if this order had not beene taken. And therefore the Lord hating this poyſon of envy among men, preventeth it, and ſo teacheth us all to abhorre it, and to labour ever to bee free from it. Cain envied Abel his owne brother, and what followed? he did not refuſe to ſhed his blood whom he ſpighted. Sore eyes cannot abide the cleareneſſe of the Sunne, and an evill ſtomacke turneth the beſt nutriment to hurt. The greener the leafe is, the ſooner the wormes bite it. Rachel a good woman, yet hath this weakneſſe, that if her owne ſiſter have a bleſſing of child-bearing before her, ſhe will grudge at it. Iohns Diſciples envy Chriſt and his Diſciples; and the very Church is not free from this venome: Would God many of them exceeded not fearfully in this ſinne. So preach wee often to others, and not to our ſelves. Thus of the circumſtances of this numbring.

6 Other good leſſons wee may learne alſo out of other places of this Chapter: as when the Lord nameth thus every man by his name, that ſhould bee a Commiſſioner in this buſineſſe; ſaying, Theſe are the names of the men that ſhall ſtand with you; Of the Tribe of Ruben, Elizur the ſonne of Shedeur; of Simeon, Shelumiel the ſonne of Zuriſhaddai, &c. I ſay, herein wee may note, what a particular knowledge God hath of every man, knowing his Name, his Family, his Houſe, and every circumſtance of every thing. He knew that Simon was a Tanner by trade, and what gueſts lodged in his Houſe. Hee knew, that Cornelius was a Captaine, what his diſpoſition was, and when hee prayed. He knew who ſhould goe meet the Diſciples, going to provide a place for the Paſſeover; that hee ſhould have a Pitcher of water in his hand, and that hee ſhould ſhew them an upper Chamber, and not a nether, and that trimmed or furniſhed, &c. What then is hid from this Gods eyes? Let it worke feare in us to offend, and an holy care to walke unblamably in this world, as by any obtained ſtrength wee ſhall be able.

7 In the eighteenth Verſe they ſhew their Pedigrees and Deſcents. So teaching us, that theſe things are lawfull, if they ſhoote at a good end, and bee uſed in meaſure. But if pride and vanity poſſeſſe our heads, or more care bee taken to finde how we are written in theſe Bookes, than in the Booke of Life; what, well uſed, were lawfull, thus abuſed, is unlawfull: and being blotted out of the roll of Heaven, theſe rols on earth will not profit us at the parting houre, when we would be moſt glad of comfort. O, that my wiſh in this behalfe might take good effect, where I know there is a fault this way; and that now while there is time, a courſe might bee taken to get his love, who muſt judge us in that great day, either with a woefull Goe, or with a joyfull Come.

8 In the numbring of the off-ſpring of Ruben, wee ſee was found to bee fixe and forty thouſand, and five hundred: the off-ſpring of Simeon, nine and fifty thouſand and three hundred: the off-ſpring of Gad five and forty thouſand ſixe hundred and fifty: the off-ſpring of Iudah threeſcore and fourteene thouſand and ſixe hundred, &c. Of the reſt, the totall Summe of all, ſixe hundred and three thouſand five hundred and fifty. A moſt admirable encreaſe we all ſee; yet the greater, if wee conſider the number that came into Ægypt, and the time they encreaſed in. For the firſt, you remember what is ſaid in Geneſis, All the ſoules of the houſe of Iacob, which came into Ægypt, were ſeventy ſoules, Chapter 46. Verſe 27. And for the ſecond, the time from the birth of Iſaac to this numbring, about foure hundred and ſeven yeares. In which ſpace, of threeſcore and ten perſons ſuch an encreaſe to come, judge what a worke of God it was: and turning your eyes from nature to his omnipotency, be comforted in your ſelfe with this Meditation, and confirmed ever in your faith, what God will, hee can; and what hee hath promiſed, he will. Looke againe at the ſuſtentation of ſuch a multitude in the Wilderneſſe, by the ſpace of forty yeares, and doth it not ſhew a mighty God? It paſſeth mans power to ſuſtaine an army of one hundred thouſand in a fruitfull Land, not in a Wilderneſſe, but one halfe yeare; and here were ſixe hundred and three thouſand five hundred and fifty, beſide women, children, and the whole Tribe of Levi, which was not numbred.

Great is the Lord therefore, and great is his power, and hee for his mercy ſake ever encreaſe our faith in him. Certainly, if wee ſeeke the Kingdome of God firſt, and the righteouſneſſe thereof, he both can and will caſt worldly matters to us for our need, as ſhall bee fit. Yea, you ſee, and forget it never, that were your children and charge as many as all theſe, yet there is no cauſe for you to be caſt downe, but cheerfully to depend upon him, and to know his power, to give every mouth meat forty yeares together in a barren Wilderneſſe.

9 But ſhall I note unto you a moſt fearfull thing: O note it, with mee, and meditate of of it even a whole yeare together, if it were poſſible. Of all theſe thouſands, how many entred into the Land of Promiſe? O fearefull I ſay againe: Surely but two; Caleb, and Ioſhua. So did they murmure, So did they repine, for every ſmall matter, and ſo did they ſinne againſt God, that he ſware in his wrath, they ſhould not enter into his reſt. Let it, let it remember us fruitfully of that ſaying in the Goſpell, Many are called, but few are choſen. And let it make us carefull to looke narrowly to our ſelves, leſt whileſt we thinke our ſelves ſure of the true Land of Promiſe, eternall life in the kingdome of heaven, whereof this earthly Canaan was but a figure, we ſhall fall ſhort, as theſe Jewes did here.

10 The Levites I ſaid before were not numbred; and now ſee in the ſeven and twentieth verſe what is ſaid: But the Levites after the Tribes of their Fathers, were not numbred among thē. And in the nine and fortieth verſe again: Only thou ſhalt not number the Tribe of Levi, neither take the ſumme of them among the Children of Iſrael. The reaſon followeth: But thou ſhalt appoint the Levites over the Tabernacle of the Teſtimonie, and over the Inſtruments thereof, &c. The others were numbred to goe forth to warre when occaſion ſerved, The Levites ſerving in the Tabernacle, were to be freed from the warres, and therefore not numbred among them. And when the Tabernacle goeth forth (ſaith your Chapter) the Levites ſhall take it downe; and when the Tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites ſhall ſet it up: for the ſtranger that commeth neare ſhall be ſlaine. The Levites alſo ſhall pitch round about the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony, leſt vengeance come upon the Congregation of the Children of Iſrael, &c.

See (I pray you) how the Lord diſtinguiſheth Church-men from Secular perſons: and yet, Proh dolor, ſicut Secularis, ſic Sacerdotes; Alas (ſaith one) as the Lay-men, ſo is the Prieſt; no difference, no diſtinction, and all through the fault of the Prieſt: His Apparell, his Buying and Selling in Faires and Markets, and all his actions are Lay-man like, &c.

Another uſe: They had the charge of the Tabernacle; and ſo have wee at this day. They might not loſe a pinne, but it was a fault; and may we loſe ſoules without touch and feeling? Might not they neglect the leaſt things, and may we neglect the greateſt? Their houſes were appointed round about the Tabernacle, to put them in minde of their charge: and ſhall we alſo dwell neare, and yet let all goe awry?

Now is the time to bee wiſe for ever; and neglect the Lords buſineſſe now in this life, who ſhall be able to abide it when he ſhall judge? requiring the blood at our hands of all that by our fault have periſhed and goe away from the Lords will. Our gotten goods will not then helpe us; our friends, though never ſo many, or great, cannot plead for us; neither any thing in heaven or earth appeaſe his wrath, who committed his Lambes unto us, and looked for faithfulneſſe: Soules wee have ſlaine, that we ſhould have endevoured to ſave, and our ſoules muſt die for it, with that death that endeth not for ever.

Policy, Policy, a ſtraw for that Policy that pleaſeth men, and provoketh God to an eternall caſting us off. Leave Lay-duties to Laymen, and follow, Miniſters of the Tabernacle, the care of the Tabernacle. Government may not extinguiſh thy Preaching: Flatter that liſt: Nor did it in the graveſt and worthieſt Fathers of the Church. But I goe too farre. Thus may we profit by this Chapter.

CHAP. II.

IN the former Chapter you have ſeene the number and chiefe Head of every Tribe. Now you ſhall ſee what Place the Lord giveth to them of Precedency one before another; that this being by himſelfe ordered and appointed, all contention and quarrell among them, for this matter, might be prevented. For who knoweth not what miſchiefe Satan worketh among men and women in this world, about this goodly matter of going over the Style firſt.

Firſt, the Lord rangeth them under foure principall Standards, three Tribes to a Standard: Iudah, Iſhakar, Zabulon, under the Lyon; Ruben, Simeon, Gad, under the Mandrake; Ephraim, Manaſſes, and Benjamin, under the Oxe; Dan, Aſher, and Neptali, under the Serpent. And if you object, that thus there were twelve Tribes beſide Levi, who was not here numbred; the anſwer is ready, That Ioſeph made two Tribes, Ephraim and Manaſſes. Of other leſſer Enſignes under theſe foure great ones, there were many, as daily is ſeene in great Armies and Hoſts of men.

1 To make uſe of theſe things, we may note firſt, how deare unto the Lord Peace and Amitie, Concord and Unitie, hath ever beene, and ever will bee, among ſuch as will beare his Name, and be called his People, Servants and Children. The Lord that made us, knoweth our mould, how corrupt we are become by the fall of our firſt Parents, boyling and burſting out one againſt another many times for ſmall matters, and ſo breaking that Silver thred of Love, wherewith we ſhould be ſowed together, while we live in this world, to the great glory of our heavenly Maker, the profitable example of all beholders, and the ſweet peace and comfort of our owne hearts.

hearts. And in no one thing ſo ſmall, more than in this matter of Place. Wherefore in his great goodneſſe he deſcendeth to our weakneſſe, and ordereth it here among theſe his ſervants, as we ſhall after obſerve.

Shall he then love Peace, and we Warre? he Amity, and we Hatred? he Concord and Unity, and we Contention and Strife? Let us thinke of it, and carefully looke unto our wayes. Dulce nomen pacis, Sweet is the name of Peace; Pacem te poſcimus omnes; and wee all deſire Peace, muſt we ſay and thinke, if we be the Lords. Qui fingit ſe amicum, & non eſt, peior eſt eo qui fingit falſam monetam; He that counterfeiteth himſelfe to be a friend, and is not, is worſe than he that counterfeiteth the Kings Coyne. And if then to ſeeme to be, and not to be, be ſo grievous, what is it neither to be nor ſeeme to be, &c.

2 How effectuall to this purpoſe is Order in a Kingdome, in a City, in a Houſe, in the Church? As on the contrary ſide, Confuſion and Diſorder is the greateſt breaker and troubler of Peace that may be in all theſe places. Omne ordinatum pulchrum; Every well ordered thing is moſt Beautifull, even for his order, did Saint Auguſtine ſay. And the Apoſtle ſharply rebuked thoſe that walke inordinately, 2 *Theſſ.*3.6. To the Galathians againe: As many as walke accorcording to this rule, peace ſhall be upon them, and upon the Iſrael of God, *Gal.*6.16. where the word that ſignifieth to walke, noteth a preciſe walking, according to an order, &c.

Let it ſtirre up the hearts of Rulers to be carefull of Order, and all that are under to obey Order, ſeeing it ſo furthereth to Peace and Quietneſſe, to Love and Unity, as it doth. And let it well be conſidered, that if in any place it be thus, certainly, in the Church it is moſt ſo. I might goe farre in this note: but I content my ſelfe to point at that, which another willing to enlarge it, may ſay.

3 In that thoſe Standards were Eaſt, Weſt, North and South, as appeareth in the Text, wee may obſerve the ample and large extent of the Church, not tyed to any Angle or Corner of the World, much leſſe to one City; but diſperſed farre and wide over the face of the whole Earth, according to the Scriptures: Many ſhall come from the Eaſt and Weſt, And ſhall ſit downe with Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, in the Kingdome of Heaven. Againe, He ſhall ſend his Angels with a great ſound of a Trumpet, and they ſhall gather together his Elect from the foure Windes, and from the one end of the Heavens unto the other. Goe and teach all Nations, baptizing them, &c. All Nations, not this, or that alone.

Mat.8.11. Mat.24.31. Mat.28.19.

There was a time of ſpeciall tender of Mercy and Goodneſſe to the Jewes, before the Gentiles, and the Church for a time was, as it were, confined within a Precinct: But he is our Peace (ſaith the Apoſtle) which hath made of both one, and hath broken the ſtop of the partition-wall, &c. So that the Church now is Catholike, as well in reſpect of Place, as in reſpect of Time or Perſons. This we may note againe in the twelve Gates of that great City, that holy Jeruſalem, ſpoken of by Saint Iohn in his Revelation. Wherefore, moſt vainly, and moſt falſely hath the Synagogue of Rome abuſed the World in this Point, &c.

Epheſ.2.14. Apoc.21.12.

Verſe 17. 4 The Tabernacle in the midſt, as a type of God in the midſt of them: for their comfort againſt all Feares and Frights, Perils and Dangers, Practice and Attempts of Foes or falſe Friends whatſoever: for their Caution to looke to their wayes, and not to doe the thing that might offend him who was in the midſt of them, and beheld all their actions. Such preſence ſtill he hath at this day in his Church, and among us: Let us make the like uſe, and enjoy him for ever. Againe, let us learne why the Lord hath ordained Kingdomes and Governments, States and powers, even for his Church, that they might be Nurſes and Nouriſhers of his Tabernacle, Receivers of it, Guards and Defences to it; ſo as in peace his people might aſſemble together to ſerve him according to his will. Of which the Kingly Prophet ſpeaketh in his Pſalme, ſaying: When the people ſhall be gathered together, and Kingdomes, to ſerve the Lord. And againe, Ieruſalem is builded as a City that is at unity in it ſelf: Thither the Tribes goe up, even the Tribes of the Lord, according to the Teſtimony of Iſrael, to praiſe the Name of the Lord.

2 Cor.6.16. Pſal.102.22. Pſal.122.3.

Which if Kingdomes and States doe, then is the bleſſing of God upon them, and they proſper: For true Religion ever is and ſhall be the glory and ſafety of any Government, as the contrary hath a contrary effect, *Pſal.*1. *Pro.*14.11. Potiphers houſe for Ioſeph; Laban for Iacob, &c.

5 It is worthy obſervation, how the Lord appointeth to every Tribe his place, according to his owne good will and pleaſure, and not according to outward reſpects in them, as happely man would have thought meete and fit. For Ruben, though hee were the eldeſt, yet had not the firſt, but the ſecond place. Manaſſes alſo was the eldeſt, and yet came after his younger brother. The Children of the Hand-maids had place before ſome of Leahs children, who yet was firſt wife to Iacob. Ioſeph was their yonger brother, yet God maketh two Tribes of him, when they made but one. So hath God ever diſpoſed of his owne at his owne will, and his children truely inſtructed, never grudged and grieved at it, but willingly and thankefully ſubmitted themſelves to it. Content with the ſecond, content with the third, and ever content with any place vouchſafed unto them; acknowledging humbly, that the very laſt and loweſt was more than of debt was due unto them. Which content of theirs hath alwayes beene as pleasing to the Lord, as it was well beseeming and befitting them. That Parable of the Trees in the Booke of Iudges, is many and many times to bee thought of against the tempting pride of our nature, still thrusting forward, and looking upward, seldome or never contented with our places. The Olive Tree being desired of the Trees to bee King over them, would not, but answered the Trees, Shall I leave my fatnesse, wherewith by me they honour God and man, and goe to advance me above the Trees? Then said they to the Figge-tree: Come thou and be King over us. But the Fig-tree answered them: Shall I forsake my sweetnesse and my good fruit, and goe to advance me above the Trees? The third time they moved the Vine, but the Vine also with like words refused it. Then they moved the Bramble; who readily shewed as great liking to be aloft as they could wish. So from the beginning, and to the end, it hath and will be seene, the baser the body, the prouder the minde, and the better birth or education any man or woman hath, the more lowly or contented will they shew themselves in, and with any place vouchsafed unto them by Almighty God. They thankfully say with David ever, The lot is fallen to me in a faire ground; I have a goodly heritage, my cup doth over-flow. They are not sicke with Absolon, for their Fathers places, with Adoniah for their brothers places, with Siba for their Masters places. They pray with the godly, Thy Kingdome come; and not with the wicked, My Kingdome come.

alwayes

O, what mischiefe in the world hath fooliſh pride wrought and brought to thousands of men? Iacke will bee a Gentleman; and what stirres of this? Pompey and Cæsar what blood shed they? Silla and Marius, how mercilesse? Two Dukes wives in England, what faults procured they to their husbands, &c. They had forgotten a blessed speech of a blessed woman? He hath regarded the lowlinesse (the lowlinesse) of his handmaid, &c. Never had pride praise, nor ever shall have but from teeth outward; but Humility stealeth the hearts of all that see it, and the praise of it is with God and man. Strive to be low, and be content to be last, you shall see it will exalt you, will you, nill you: but haste to be first, and frowne to be last, you shall finde it will cast you downe, both alive and dead, in opinion and speech, where you willingly would bee better thought of. Remember then often this note, how God disposed of their places, how contented they were with the Lords will, and now they are cronicled for examples to us. So shall naturall corruption be reformed, and you shine, as you ought, for such vertue.

6 Consider again here the forme of their pitching about the Tabernacle; it was square, to the East, to the West, to the North, and to the South. So was the Tabernacle, and of things there in the Arke, the Table, the Altar, &c. So it is said of that City of God in the Apocalypse, that it was foure-square. All this is to shew the stability and firmnesse of the Church. For what forme so sure, fast and stable, as that which is square. Of which stability of the Church, that is spoken by Christ our Saviour, The gates of Hell shall not prevaile against it, &c. Mat. 16. 18.

Happy were we that say, we are in this Church, and of this Church, if wee also were stable as the Church is stable: stable (I say) in Faith and Goodnesse; not carryed away with every puffe of vaine perswasion, not onely without the Word, which is the rule of Faith and Manners, but even contrary to the Word, and to the expresse letter of the Word litterally to bee understood. Against which levity, and unto which stableneſse, wee are so often, and so earnestly perswaded by Almighty God. He that endureth to the end, be (he) shall be saved. Mat. 15. 10. They that runne in a Race, and give over in the way, get not the Prize; Hee that putteth his hand to the Plough, and looketh backe, is not fit for the Kingdome of God. Luke 9.

Iohn was not a reed shaken with the winde, and yet the praise of it endureth to this day, and shall for ever. The reed is hollow, and without pith, every little puffe therefore shaketh it to and fro. Gods Children may not be so. Adam (saith Chrysostome) was a reede shaken with the wind, when the little hissing of the Serpent blew him from God. But my beloved brethren, (saith the Apostle) bee stedfast, bee unmoveable, abundant alway in the worke of the Lord, for as much as you know, that your labour is not in vaine in the Lord. And to the Ephesians: For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, &c. that he might grant you, according to the riches of his glory, that ye may bee strengthened by his Spirit in the inner man, rooted, grounded, &c. So to the Colossians: Christ hath reconciled you in that body of his flesh, to make you holy, unblamable, and without fault in his sight: (but now marke) if you continue grounded and stablished in the Faith, and be not moved away from the hope of the Gospell, &c. You are they that have abidden with me to the end (saith the Lord Jesus;) and what eternall joy doe they now enjoy? It is good for me (saith David) to hold me fast by God; fast, fast, that no flattering World, or frowning Devill, may move me away. In truth to be constant, O, what a grace! in Error to be wilfull, stubborne and peevish, O what a punishment! what a judgement and wrath of God! Open mine eyes, that I may behold the wonderfull things in thy Law, prayeth the holy Prophet earnestly, abhorring to bee without either eare to heare, or eye to see, what is in Gods Booke, charme the Charmer never so slyly, subtilly and deceitfully. Speake on Lord, thy servant heareth, was young Samuel taught to say: and it is a fitting speech for all that ever wish to be saved. For the things concerning this life, given unto us by our friends, we get their Wils, we read their Wils, wee studie them, wee take

Luke 22. Psa. 73. 28.

1 Sam. 3. 9.

counsell

counſell of them: And whoſoever ſhould either with-hold them from us, or forbid us to reade them, and to be acquainted with them, we quickly would ſuſpect him, that hee meant us not well. But for eternall comforts and bleſſings, ſuch as no eye hath ſeene, no eare hath heard, nor ever can enter into a mortall heart, bequeathed us in his Teſtament by our deareſt God, O, our coldneſſe, our thrice-damning coldneſſe, if the Lord awake us not. Wee have not his Will, wee reade it not, we eſteeme it not: but, alas, by every wicked ſpirit are made beleeve it belongs not to us, and ſo blinded, are led to eternall deſtruction both of body and ſoule.

The All-powerfull hand of God ſmite our hearts with a feeling of this ſinne, and lighten our eyes, to diſcerne this ſpirituall Witch-craft. Amen, Amen, for his Chriſts ſake.

CHAP. III.

This Chapter hath three ſeverall parts:

1. A repetition of the death of Nadab and Abihu, ſonnes of Aaron, verſe 4.
2. The Numbring, Diſtinction, and Office of the Levites, verſe 15.
3. The taking of the Levites into the place of the firſt-borne, verſe 40.

Verſe 2. THeſe are the Generations of Aaron and Moſes. In the moſt places where theſe two be named, Moſes is put before Aaron, but here Aaron is put before Moſes, as you ſee; ſo ſhewing unto us, that as there is a priority of the Magiſtrate before the Miniſter, ſo there is the like of the Miniſter before the Magiſtrate; namely in his Office of the Miniſtery. Which if it might have contented the brood of Rome, all this ſtirre about Primacy needed not: For the greateſt Kings and Emperours Chriſtian have beene contented, in the true and right Office of a Biſhop and Miniſter, to ſubmit themſelves, to heare the Word of them, to bee rebuked, admonished, adviſed, counſelled, and comforted by them, as the courſe of that holy Office yeelded warrant to them to doe. And then in the Magiſtrates Office all godly Biſhops and Miniſters ſubmitted themſelves in the Lord againe as ſervants to them, ſubject unto them, ſuppliant to their Perſons, obedient to their Lawes, &c. Continuing thus eight hundred years, and above after Chriſt, never wreſting the ſacred Scriptures out of their true ſenſe, to ground any uſurped and ſinfull preheminency over their Rulers and Governours, the Lords annointed Deputies and Lieutenants here in earth. The place of Ieremy they rightly underſtood, That God ordained him a Prophet to denounce, not a Prince to depoſe; that he put his words in his mouth, not a ſword in his hand; that he ſet him over Nations and over Kingdomes, to pluck up, to root out, to deſtroy, to throw downe, to build, and to plant. But how? By that word which he put in his mouth, not by that ſword that he never gave him: By the Word to beate down whatſoever liſteth it ſelfe up againſt God, and to plant, and aſſure the humble, and ſuch as give themſelves to the obedience of Gods Word, 2 Cor. 10.4. Heb. 4.12. Theſe are the Keyes which Chriſt hath left to binde and to looſe, Mat. 18.18. To root out (ſaith Lira) is to foretell as a Prophet, that they ſhall bee rooted out if they amend not. Diſce Sarculo non Sceptro tibi opus eſſe; Learne therefore (ſaith Bernard) that thou haſt need of a weeding Hooke, not of a Scepter, to doe this Office withall. Thus the holy Prophet tooke this Office, and executed it, denouncing the judgements of God againſt Jewes, Ægyptians, Philiſtims, Moabites, Ammonites. But no King did he ever depoſe: His Office was to Propheſie, not to practiſe, &c.

Ier. 1.10. Verſe 5. Verſe 9.

Verſ. 4. 2 Nadab and Abihu dyed before the Lord, &c. The ſtory is in Leviticus, the Tenth Chapter, where I have noted the uſe of it, but it is repeated in divers places of the Scripture, that it might work a terrour in all Miniſters of the Word, that ſerve at the Altar, even to the end of the world, how they digreſſe from their duties preſcribed by God, ſeeing the Lord ſo ſeverely puniſhed it in theſe: yea, it may work feare in all to doe ill, ſeeing the world holdeth ſuch a remembrance of our tranſgreſſions, &c. VVell againe may it ſhew us the bottomleſſe mercy of God, who thus ſeverely dealeth not with our ſinnes, but ſparing us, paſſeth over many and many our great and grievous faults, expecting graciouſly our repentance and converſion. Happy, happy we, if wee know that time of our viſitation, &c.

Verſ. 6. 3 Bring the Tribe of Levi, and ſet them before Aaron the Prieſt. And in the ninth verſe; Thou ſhalt give the Levites to Aaron, &c. Words noting difference of Degrees in the Church: Reverence, Obedience, ſubjection of Inferiors to Superiors, God ever being the God of order both in Church and Common-wealth, and never the God of Confuſion, which equality maketh, &c. Aaron was the High Prieſt, his ſonnes the Prieſts ſerved in the Sanctuary, in praying for the People, and offering Sacrifice: the Levites ſerved for the inferiour uſes in the ſame.

The

The ſecond part.

1. Number the children of Levi after the houſes of their Fathers, &c. In the firſt Chapter, ver. 49. Moſes is forbidden to number the Levites: here he is commanded to do it. What reaſon of this difference? Anſwer may be made, that there the Lord numbred ſuch as he would uſe in warres, and therefore tooke them not under twenty years, but from twenty yeares and above, Chap. 1. 3. Here he hath reſpect unto his Tabernacle and Service, wherein being pleaſed to uſe the Levites, he now numbreth them, whom before he had ſpared. Verſe 15.

2. That he taketh them from a moneth old, is a thing of good uſe, and we may note it: for it notably ſheweth, that we may deſtinate our children to God, before they be fit for any other courſe of life. In the Goſpell, thoſe parents that brought little children to Chriſt, are chronicled up for an eternall praiſe of them, and for an example to all parents to the end of the world. Matthew calleth them little children; Luke calleth them Babes, even ſuch as yet hanged upon the breaſt; effectually noting how ſoone we ſhould bring them to Chriſt. Satans envy even againſt theſe Babes to be brought to Chriſt, appeareth there; and our Saviour his unſpeakable good againſt that malice, commanding them to be brought unto him, and not to bee hindered, taking them in his armes, putting his hands upon them, bleſſing them, and graciouſly affirming, That of ſuch is the Kingdome of God. A naturall Parent wiſheth all good to his childe; and, as he is able, procureth it, even as the roote ſpreadeth his ſappe to the branches, without grudging or exception: and a religious parent, above all worldly good, careth for Gods holy feare to be planted in his childe. For the effecting whereof, ſoone he bringeth him unto Chriſt, knowing that the firſt liquor put into a veſſell, is of great force ever in the ſame. Alas, what will the whole world profit them, were we able to give it them, if eternally they be damned in the Lake that ever ſmoketh with unſpeakable torments, yea, they and we both: they for not knowing Chriſt, and we for not bringing them to Chriſt. Wherefore earneſt is that commandement of the holy Ghoſt; Fathers bring up your children in inſtruction and information of the Lord. Abraham is regiſtred up for this care; and whileſt this Booke of God remaineth, it will be found written to their praiſe, That Timothy his Grand-Mother and Mother brought him up in the knowledge of the Scripture from a childe: Natalium ſplendor res eſt preclara, at bonum à Majoribus profectum; to be well borne is to be eſteemed; but this good commeth from my Anceſtors, and is their praiſe, not mine. Riches to be regarded, but quickly taken away from them that had them, and given to them that looked not for them, as little alſo peradventure deſerved them, more common to the wicked then to the godly. Honour may ſhine, and Glory may gliſter, but how ſoone covered with a cloud? Beauty much wiſhed, but permanent with neither wiſhes nor wiſdome whatſoever: Only the good gotten by bringing children to Chriſt, remaineth for ever in his reward. And therefore let religious parents have a care of it, even ſoone, ſoone, remembring this place, That the Levites appointed for his Service, he would have numbred from a moneth old. Often have I touched this matter in other places; and never can any ſpeech be too much, ſo great is the ſinne of men in neglecting of it. Hee that hath care of his Hawke, of his Horſe, of his Dogge, of his Swine, hath none of his Childe, as we daily ſee. But I ſtay. Mat. 19, 13. Marke 10. 14. Epheſ. 6. 4. 2 Tim. 3.

3. Obſerve we againe with comfort, what exchanges God maketh with men. He taketh a childe of a moneth old, and forgoeth a firſt-borne of ripe yeares: Such is his manner and moſt gracious goodneſſe; he giveth more than he wanteth, and gainers ever are his children by him. Iob had a bitter triall and a heavy loſſe, yet marke the end, and the Lord made him greater than ever he was, The Lord bleſſing the laſt dayes of Iob, as the Text ſaith, more than the firſt, &c. reade the place. Davids Childe was taken away, but a farre better was given againe, even Solomon, the wiſeſt ſonne that ever Father had. A Cake was taken of the poore Widow of Sarepta for his Prophet, but what a requitall made God unto her? The meale in the barrell, and the oyle in the cruce decayed not till other comfort grew. Another kindneſſe done by the Shunamite, was it not recompenced by that bleſſing that was ſo vehemently wiſhed, even a Son; firſt given, and after revived from death to life againe? Thinke of the ſaying in the Goſpell concerning this point: Verily I ſay unto you, there is no man that hath forſaken houſe, or brethren, or ſiſters, or Father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my ſake and the Goſpels, but he ſhall receive an hundred fold now at this preſent, houſes, and brethren, and ſiſters, and mothers, and children, and lands with perſecutions, and in the world to come life everlaſting. See the change, and marke the gaine for your exceeding comfort. Such a God is our God, that not a cup of cold water can bee given, but he will yeeld a far greater gift for it. We cannot viſit him, feed him, clothe him, &c. in his poore members, but he will acknowledge it before the hoſt of heaven, and give that which paſſeth ten thouſand worlds, eternall joy in heaven. Iob laſt chapter verſe 12.

4. The Lords love to his Miniſters appeareth in this, that he chuſeth him a Child, before a man of ripe age. The diſcomforts of Miniſters in this world are many: but in the Lords love is more more comforts than tongue can expreſſe. Let us feelingly apply it to our griefes, and expect his pleaſure with patience.

Verſe 39. 5. The totall ſumme was two and twenty thouſand; a leſſe number then the firſt borne, by 273. The Lord affecteth not ever the greater, but chuſeth the weaker, and omitteth the ſtronger. God hath choſen (ſaith the Apoſtle) the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe, and God hath choſen the weake things of the world to confound the mighty things. And the things of this world, and things which are deſpiſed hath God choſen; and things which are not, to bring to naught things which are, that no fleſh ſhould rejoyce in his preſence. Hee choſe Iacob before Eſau, David before his elders: The Publican pleaſed him before the Phariſie, and the bleſſed Virgin Mary more than all the great Queenes of the earth, &c.

6. Verſe 41. And thou ſhalt take the Levite to me for all the firſt borne, &c. What had the Levites done to deſerve this gracious choyce? Certainely nothing: But as ever, ſo in this the Lord chooſeth according to the good pleaſure of his will, freely, freely, without any merit in man. Truth it is, that the Levites were zealous for the Lord againſt the idolatry of the Calfe: and as true it is, that he that honoreth God, God will honor him, and never ſhall our love bee loſt with him, but ſtill freely of mercy and not of merit. Caleb and Ioſua ſtood for the Lord: Phineas heate was afire to ſee the Lord diſhonoured, and they loſt it not. Elias was jealous for his God, and a fiery Chariot carryed him into heaven. With God ſhall he dwell, and no longer with men, for the Lord was zealous againſt the ſinnes of men, &c.

Ephes. 1.

Laſtly, And the Cattell of the Levites, for all the firſt borne of the Cattell of the children of Iſrael. How may the Levite aſſure himſelfe, God reſpecteth him, when hee hath an eye unto his Cattell! O bone Domine, quis non miniſtrabit tibi, qui tanti facis etiam jumenta miniſtrorum tuorum. O good God! (ſaith one) who will not ſerve thee, when thou haſt a gracious eye even unto the Cattell of thy Miniſters?

Theſe things that are ſpoken here of the offices of the Levites, may be referred to the next Chapter, and this ſuffice to give us ſome uſe of this Chapter.

CHAP. IIII.

A proceeding with the deſcription of the Office of the Levites, begun in the former Chapter.

1 A commandement to number from thirtie to fiftie yeeres, with a declaration of every ones office.
2 Moſes obedience in performing.

1 LEt the age be noted at which they ſerved, to wit, at thirty yeeres here, at five and twenty in the eight Chapter, and learne by it, how in them that ſerve in the Miniſtry, more judgement and wiſdome, more ſtrength and diligence is required then in other callings; for they might be numbred to the warres at twenty yeeres old. Chriſt our Saviour, in whom was all perfection, yet was pleaſed to ſtay entring upon his vocation fully, till hee was about thirty yeeres old, to tell us as much. Iohn Baptiſt was about the ſame age when he began to baptize. Of Ioſeph it is ſaid, he was thirty yeeres old when hee ſtood before Pharaoh. Of David, that he was thirty yeare old when he began to raigne, &c. All which places ſhew, that this is a time of ripeneſſe for ſtrength, both of body and minde; and therefore a good time for men to manage affaires, Eccleſiaſticall or Civill, requiring vigour or ſtayedneſſe, wiſdome and judgment, gravity and temperance, fit for the places enjoyed. And they make mee remember what Hierome ſaith in his Preface to his Commentaries upon Ezechiel. Niſi quis apud Hebræos ætatem ſacerdotalis Miniſterii, ideſt, triceſſimum annum impleverit, nec principio Geneſeos, nec Canticum canticorum, nec hujus voluminis exordium & finem legere permittitur: ut ad perfectam ſcientiam & myſticos intellectus plenum humanæ naturæ tempus accedat: Among the Hebrewes, till a Prieſt bee full thirty yeares old, hee is not permitted to reade either the beginning of the booke of Geneſis, or the Canticles, or the beginning and end of the Propheſie of Ezechiel. Becauſe unto ripe knowledge and myſticall matters, the ripe time of age is fit, which is thirty yeeres. The uſe of this is not to tye either God or man to preciſe time, but to teach man by the Lords courſe, that a fit time would bee obſerved in the Church. Whereupon the Canons of the Church have provided, for orders ſake and comlineſſe, in places of charge of ſoules a greater age, and in places without charge a leſſer age to be obſerved. So in the inferiour and ſuperiour degrees of the Miniſtery. If any deſire more particularly to enlarge this point, let him reade what Duarenus writeth. Wee all ſee and muſt confeſſe, that an aged man ripe in judgement and experience, is more fit for government than a yonger, deſtitute of ſuch mature Luke 3 23. Gen. 41. 46.

wiſdome

wiſdome and knowledge, bee the place Eccleſiaſticall or Civill. Whereupon Silla ſaid of Marius the younger, Debere juvenem prius remo quam gubernaculo admoveri: That a yong man was firſt to be appointed to the Oare, and then to the ſterne, Fruit that is not ripe will ſerve ſo well neither for uſe nor ſtore, as ripe fruit will. The untimely fruit of a woman is a cauſe of griefe, and not of comfort.

The young Fowles that are not fledge cannot flie, and greene walles of any building ſhould have no weight laid upon them till they were ſetled and ſound. Non difficulter delectabit oratio magis ornata quam ſolida, &c. Sed difficillime ut oportet, docebit, &c. Eaſily may a ſpeech that hath more beauty than ſubſtance pleaſe, but never ſo well teach as that which hath matter and ſubſtance in it. The one uſually is the ſpeech of young men, the other of elder. Looke, ſaith Plutarch, how a dart differeth in his piercing, according to the ſtrength of the arme that caſt it, ſo differeth the word of a young and old man. The one commeth from a weaker ſtrength, and ſo pierceth leſſe: the other from a ſtrong ability, and ſo entreth even through and through. The old mans ſpeech, ſaith the ſame Author againe, is like to a ſtrong and ſweet oyntment, that filleth all the roome with his ſweetneſſe. Oratores novi, &c. Yong Orators, &c. were miſliked in compariſon of yeeres, not ſubject to like folly even among Heathens. More if any deſire of this, let him reade Aug. Chryſoſt. Greg. &c.

Yet let it bee remembred againe, that this tendeth not to tye the Graces of God to yeeres, but leaving the Lord to his owne good pleaſure, to commend a ſeemely order in the Church, to be obſerved for the moſt part; for we wel know that the Lord was pleaſed to beſtow great gifts upon young Timothy, and that the Apoſtle giveth expreſſe charge, that no man ſhould deſpiſe his youth. Athanaſius had extraordinary grace in yong yeeres. So had Origen, Euſeb. Hiſtor. Lib. 6. cap. 2. So had Baſil, as Gregory Nazianzen teſtifieth, writing of him, which is ſet before Baſils worke. That the Apoſtle will not have him a young Sholler, underſtand it rather of faith and knowledge, than of yeeres: and yet praiſe the wiſdome of the Church, that hath a wiſe care of the age of a Miniſter: for the idle bragges of Seminaries, let them know that wee know it, and bleſſe God in our ſoules for it, that neither for youth nor age this flouriſhing Church of England is inferiour to the proudeſt of them: And yet ſtill they will cracke of ſhortneſſe of time, wherein they prove ſo learned, as vainely they perſwade themſelves they are. Let them well remember what Tertullian ſaith; Nuſquam citius proficitur quam in caſtris rebellium, ubi ipſam illic eſſe, eſt promereri: There is ſuch ſpeedy progreſſe no where, as in the Tents of Rebels, where the very being is accounted profiting and meriting. But I urge this note no further.

2. As the time of beginning is by God appointed, ſo the time of ceaſing, to wit, at fiftie: Literally the meaning might be, in regard of ſtrength then beginning to faile: For at fiftie wee go downe the hill againe, and every day grow weaker and weaker, unfit to carry the burthens appointed to them, when the Tabernacle removed. But rightly and profitably alſo Calvin noteth the care of God, that the matter of his ſervice might not be neglected, or impeached by the coldneſſe, weakeneſſe, wants and infirmities any way of declining age. Let it in theſe dayes ſtirre up elder yeeres, to be careful that no offence grow to the cauſe for them, and yet let hot ſpirits obſerve the ſweet goodneſſe of God, ſo graciouſly conſidering that fifty yeeres cannot do what thirty yeeres did. Were there this care on both ſides, O how ſweetly would it cheeriſh love, peace and paines in the Church; the one ſort ſtriving ſtill to doe according to ſtrength, and the other ſort charitably and lovingly conſtruing all things, though not now as in former time, when body without and memory within had greater vigor.

At fiftie yeeres theſe Levites did not quite give over, but they ſtill helped their Brethren, In minus gravioribus muneribus & officiis, In the lighter labours, offices and duties, according to their power and ſtrength: and this Something was not judged Nothing, but accepted and liked, as remembring well they had beene young and able to do more; and others would be old, and able to do as little. Sweet, ſweet is the Lord in all his government, in all his orders and wayes: And who teacheth us to be ſowre, bitter, ſterne, and truly Phariſaicall, laying too heavy burthens upon others backes, and by ſome pretty colour or other favouring our ſelves. O thinke of this place often, and make uſe of it, to the dulcing of our tart diſpoſitions, in cenſuring our elders, &c.

3. There may bee drawne from hence a remembrance to be mercifull to ſervants or others, who are not able to do as they could in yonger and ſtronger yeeres. God doth this to his Servants, and ſhall it not teach us. Wee pray with the Prophet David for our ſelves, That the Lord would not forſake us when we are gray-headed, nor caſt us off when our ſtrength faileth: And ſhal we meaſure that meaſure to others, that we deſire not to receive our ſelves. The rule is firme, and may not be altered; Quod tibi fieri non vis, alteri ne feceris: Do as you would be done unto, and never, never provoke the Lord to reward you according to your unkindneſſe, or cruelty towards others, &c.

4. In the fourth verſe, and ſo on, obſerve the office of every ſort when the campe removed.

The Prieſts they take all downe and wrap them up, according to the order delivered by God unto them, and then to the Coathites are given to carry ſuch and ſuch things, to wit, the principall; to the Merarites and Gerſonites, other inferiour parts of the Tabernacle. Reade your ſelfe the particulars in the Text: and then, in that God is ſo carefull to have every thing foulded up from the ſight of them that carried them: Note the great care God hath to maintaine reverence of holy things in mens hearts, knowing the corruption of man, in ſoone deſpiſing that which is common. And when he ſo wiſheth reverence, ſhall man be careleſſe of it? Let it ſinke into our hearts, and it will reforme in us many faults in our carriage within the Church, without the Church, in our actions, in our ſpeeches, in our ſecret thoughts, and every way. What prophaneneſſe irreverent uſage of holy things hath bred in mens hearts, would be long to tell, as likewiſe what love and liking, what zeale and piety hath ſprung from holy reverence in all the ſorts named. Certaine it is, and our ſoules muſt confeſſe it, will we, nill wee, that there is no wiſdome to the Lords wiſdome: and therefore if he ſo carefully provide for reverence, out of all queſtion there is much in it to the working of acceptable duty, and much in the contrary to doe hurt, &c.

5. How notably againe doth this Commandement of hiding and foulding them up, teach us to beware of curioſity in things not revealed. What God is pleaſed wee ſhould know, that ſafely we may ſearch for and ſeeke to know, but further we may not go. Wee muſt not have an eare to heare, when God hath not a mouth to ſpeake. To eate much Hony (ſaith Salomon) is not good: and to ſearch out curiouſly Gods Majeſty, is to endanger my ſelfe to bee oppreſſed with his glory. 25. Seeke not out things which are too hard for thee, neither ſearch the things raſhly which are too mighty for thee, ſaith wiſe Syrach. But what God hath commanded thee, thinke of that with reverence, bee not curious in many of his workes: for it is not needfull for thee to ſee with thine eyes the things that be ſecret. Be not curious in ſuperfluous things, for many things are ſhewed unto thee above the capacity of men. The meddling with ſuch hath beguiled many, and an evill opinion hath deceived their judgement. Thou canſt not ſee without eyes, profeſſe not therefore the knowledge that thou haſt not. Thales the Philoſopher gazed ſo upon the ſtarres, that he fell into the ditch before him, and his maid mocked him. Seneca wiſely complained, that a great part of our life was ſpent in doing nothing, a greater part in doing ill, and the greateſt part of all in doing that which appertaines not to us. This is curioſity in other mens buſineſſe, and fooliſh medling with needleſſe things.

Cap. 3. 22. &c.

Socrates was wiſe, and ſaid it wiſely; Quæ ſuper nos, nihil ad nos: Matters that are above us, belong not to us. David, a man indued with another light then Socrates had, profeſſeth we know, as he was not high minded, neither had any proud lookes: ſo he did not exerciſe himſelfe in matters that were too high for him. But he did weane his ſoule, and keepe it under even as a young child, &c. Bernard taxeth this foule fault in theſe words, Multi ſtudent magis alta quam apta proferre: Many ſtudy to utter rather high matters than fit matters: Let us avoid this fault, and I urge it no further.

Verſe 25. Verſe 31.

6. After the Coathites came the Gerſonites, and what they ſhall carry is expreſſed. They ſhall beare the Curtaines of the Tabernacle, and the covering of Badgers Skinnes, &c. Thirdly, the Merarites, and they carry the boords of the Tabernacle, with the barres thereof, his pillars and his ſockets, &c. Plainly wee ſee here a diſtinction of degrees among them that ſerve in Gods Tabernacle. The Coathites had the chiefe place after the Prieſts; the Gerſonites the ſecond; and the Merarites the third. The Prieſts among themſelves had alſo degrees, as appeareth: To teach parity therefore is to teach Anarchy, and to overthrow the wiſdome of our Creator. To the Coathites were committed the more precious things; ſo ſtill the Lord vouchſafeth ſome a greater meaſure of gifts than to others. More excellent knowledge is beſtowed upon ſome then others. The Coathites fold up and hide as they are commanded, and men of great gifts withhold from their Auditors what is not fit for them, things above their capacity, out of their reach, and not for their edification. The Lord ſo pleaſed, that to ſome ſhould bee given but milke, when others may have ſtronger meate. Judgement and diſcretion pleaſeth the Lord in theſe things, that there may bee a holy profiting in the knowledge of God and holy things. The bottle that hath a narrow mouth muſt bee filled by leaſure, ſoftly, a little and a little, or elſe more will bee loſt than put in. Iacob was carefull not to over-drive his cattell by a faſter pace than they were able to goe. And ſtill, ſtill it muſt bee the courſe of a wiſe and carefull teacher, &c.

7. Though the office of the Gerſonites and Merarites were not ſo high as the Coathites, yet did they as willingly and gladly undertake them, as if they had beene higher: ſo leaving an example, that whatſoever place the Lord vouchſafeth any of us in this world, wee take upon us the ſame without murmuring, repining, envying, cheerefully, heartily and thankfully, acknowledging in our ſoules to our good God, that even that is more than we are worthy of, ſhould he not looke upon us in goodneſs and mercy: then ſhall we heare in the appointed time, that ſweet and heavenly voyce, to the eternal joy of our ſoules. Come, come thou faithfull ſervant & good, thou haſt haſt beene faithfull over little, I will now make thee ruler over much, enter into thy Lords joy.

8. And as men in meane place ought not to envy them that have higher: ſo let them to whom great grace is given, beware, and againe and againe beware, that they be not proud, high minded, arrogant, and ſcornefull, diſdaining their inferiours, but know, that as their gifts are, ſo is their charge, and ſo will be their account in the great day before a great Judge, that ſhall with as comforting an eye looke upon his poore ſervant that had but little committed to him, yet hath beene faithfull in that little, as upon the great Rabbies that have much more.

9. See againe and marke it, how in the diſtribution of the charge of the Tabernacle, all is not committed to any one, but there is a diviſion, and a parting it among many, that ſo the worke may be fit for ſtrength, and much the better performed. Good therefore it is and agreeable to this moſt holy wiſedome of God, that every man conſider his owne ability, and neither proudly take upon him too much, nor idly and ſlothfully too little. There be that ſin in both: a word to the wiſe is enough, I know what I ſay. The Muſitian deſpiſeth or leaveth out no ſtring of his inſtrument, but in time and place toucheth all, hearing what every ſtring doth ſound, and kindly tuning it, if it ſound amiſſe. Yea, what ſtring is more uſed many times, than the poore, low, and courſe Baſe. Certainely the fine Minikin would make but little muſicke without it. Such harmony in Gods houſe, will the indifferent uſing of all mens gifts, without ſcorne and contempt, make. The Gardiner ſometime ſpake fit things, &c.

10. Let againe this ſharing of the parts of the Tabernacle among ſo many, and every mans bearing of his portion along the Wilderneſſe, till the Lord gave reſt in the land of Canaan, the place where they journied unto, chalke as it were out before us, the carrying of the croſſe in this world. Wee ſee how the Lord parteth it among his children, leaving none out from ſome part or other: for as many as will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, muſt ſuffer leſſe or more; and through many tribulations muſt we enter into the kingdome of Heaven, Hee that will follow me (ſaith the Lord Jeſus,) let him take up his croſſe and follow me, &c. Wee muſt carry our parts till the Arke reſt, and grieve not, nor grudge not at the Lords diſtribution. If it bee little, thanke him; if it be more, it is ſtill the Lord, and his will bee done. Hee will never lay more upon us, than hee will make us able to beare, and that is a ſweet comfort; yea, an unſpeakeable comfort. The time will come that our God will free us, and then wee ſhall receive an eternall reward. Remember what you reade: The Lord God of Iſrael, ſaith David, hath given reſt unto his people, that they may dwell in Hieruſalem for ever, and the Levites ſhall no more beare the Tabernacle, and all the veſſels for the ſervices thereof. So, ſo ſhall it be ſaid one day of you, of me, of al the members of the Lords body. The Lord hath given reſt, and we ſhall no more carry our burthens and portions of woe in this world, but live in the heavenly Hieruſalem for ever. O wiſhed reſt, and ten thouſand times welcome when God is pleaſed! Doe men feare a ſafe harbour in a mighty ſtorme? Doe men grieve to come home to their owne houſes after a long and painfull journey? No, no, we know; and no more ſhould we ſhrinke to find heavenly reſt.

Coloſ.1.24.

1 Chron.23. Verſ.25,26.

11. The Levites you ſee carryed things they ſaw not, and let it teach us to obey lawfull government, though ever wee ſee not Princes ſecrets. Peace and warre are juſtly diſpoſed of by Governours, and every particular perſon is not to ſearch into the reaſon of the Kings will. Wiſe obedience pleaſeth God and man. No government could ſtand ſhould there be no obeying, till every one were ſatisfied, &c.

12. They carried the ſmalleſt and meaneſt things that belonged to the Tabernacle, and nothing was to bee loſt; Pinnes, Fleſh-hooke, Beeſomes, &c. Let it teach, how carefull every one ſhould be to preſerve unto Gods houſe the things that belong to it, and how hatefull the robbery and ſpoyle of that place is. Let Patrons of benefices ſinke it in their hearts, and beware of ſowre ſauce to ſweet meate: not a Pinne, not a Beeſome ſhould be purloyned from the Tabernacle, &c. Let Miniſters alſo beware how they ſatisfie ſuch robbers: What is committed to them to carry, they ſhould carry and loſe nothing. They are not forced by any law, but a fearefull oath do they take to the contrary: Follow this further to your owne uſe, and gather ſtrength againſt paſſed weakeneſſe, if any hath beene.

The ſecond Part.

THe other part of this Chapter, is Moſes obedience to Gods Commandement, in remembring them, &c. as he was willed. Marke for your good, how ſtill hee maketh mention of Gods Commandement; thereby to ſhew that he did nothing of his own head: giving ſuperiour places where he liked beſt, and inferiour places where he liked leſſe; but all was done according to Gods appointment. Such faithfulneſs ſtill becommeth Gods ſtewards, laying aſide their owne humours, and following carefully the preſcribed way. What blinde bargaines doe our affections often make to the hurt of the Church, to the hurt of the Common-wealth? Moſes was faithfull in all the Lords houſe, and the praiſe of it remaineth now, and for ever ſhall remaine.

Againe, ſee the care and wiſedome of Moſes in avoyding the cauſe and meanes of any contention and ſtrife among them, by telling them ſtill, that ſo and ſo, the Lord ſpake and appointed. Truly in ſuperiours an equall hand, a juſt hand, an indifferent, and an impartiall hand is a great praiſe, and a great cauſe of much evill, the contrary. But I ſtay. Thus much may make this Chapter, when we reade it, profitable and comfortable to us, God grant it.

CHAP. V.

The ſeverall numbrings being ended, the fifth Chapter followeth; wherein are contained foure ſeverall Lawes.

1 Of perſons to bee put out of the Tents: Verſe 2.
2 Of Expiation after a ſinne committed: Verſe 5.
3 Of firſt fruits: Verſe 9.
4 Of Iealouſie and purgation: Verſe 12.

1 TOuching the firſt Law. There are you ſee in the ſecond Verſe, three kinds named. The firſt every Leper: The ſecond, every one that had an iſſue: The third, every one defiled with the dead. Theſe were to be removed and put out of the Hoſt. Of the firſt, reade Leviticus 13. Verſe 45. Of the ſecond, Levit. 15. Verſe 2. Of the third, Levit. 21. Verſe 1. Ab exiguis inſtruit nos ad majora. Si enim leproſum corpore, quanto magis anima, &c. By ſmall things, ſaith Theodoret, the Lord inſtructeth us to greater. For if the Leper in body be to be removed out of the congregation, how much more the lepers in ſoule, &c. Whereupon ſome interpreters ſay, by the leper is meant the infected perſon with great and grievous ſinne, as hereſie and the like; alledging that to Titus, Chap. 3. Ver. 10. Reject him that is an hereticke after once or twice admonition. By him that had an iſſue, carnall uncleanneſſe, or perſons given to concupiſcence of the fleſh. By him that was defiled by the dead, ſuch as converſed with wicked livers, alledging 1 Cor. 5. The reaſon given why theſe ſhould be removed, you ſee Verſe 3. That they defile not their tents among whom I do dwell. The Lord ſtill dwelleth among his people, and his Church; ſo that ſtill there muſt be care, (if wee be his) of our actions, leſt wee grieve the Lord with any foulneſſe, unfit for his ſervants. The due and holy conſideration whereof, would make a great change in us, did we uſe it. Againe, what a comfort ariſeth of it againſt all practiſes and attempts of foes. If the Lord dwell with us, he will defend and keepe us from all their devices.

2. In the fourth verſe, obſerve the obedience given to this Commandement, when it is ſaid, And the children of Iſrael did ſo, and put them out of the Hoſt, even as the Lord had commanded Moſes. Sweet and acceptable was ever obedience to God, and powerfull to draw downe more and more mercy from the bottomleſſe treaſure of his. Bitter and grievous the contrary, and to men ever hurtfull. To ſtirre up your ſelfe to this duty, often thinke you here on thoſe vehement words of God in Deuteronomy: O that there were ſuch an heart in them, to feare, and to keepe all my Commandements alway, that it might go well with them and with their children for ever! Often remember Abraham and his obedience; To go out of his native Country, to ſeeke new dwellings among ſtrangers that knew not God, how abſurd to fleſh and blood; yet the Lord commanding, he caſts away all objections and doubts, and obeyed. How farre more ſtrange was it, that hee ſhould ſacrifice that ſonne, that by ſo many circumſtances was deare unto him? Yet the Lord requiring it, he was readie to obey. The Lord juſtly preferreth Obedience before Sacrifice, ſaith Gregory in his Morals, Quia per victimas aliena caro, per obedientiã tua propria voluntas mactatur: Becauſe by ſacrifice the fleſh of the creature ſacrificed is offered, but by obedience thine owne will is ſlaine. In the Goſpell you ſee Peters obedience to caſt out the net at Chriſts commandement; although he had laboured all night, and caught nothing. And what gaine was to him and his fellowes, when they were faine to call for helpe, the draught was ſo great. So, ſo, ſhall obedience ever be profitable to the ſervant of God. Let the words therefore of David, ever be in our mouth from the truth of our heart; O my God I am content to do it, &c. Obedientia omnium virtutum cuſtos & mater: Obedience is the mother to breed and preſerve all vertues, ſaith Saint Auguſtine. It is written of Scipio his ſouldiers in Sicilie, Nullus horum eſt qui non conſenſu, turri ſe in mare præcipitabit, &c. There is not one of them all, that if the Generall command, will not get up into any Tower or high place, and caſt himſelfe downe into the ſea. A dead palſie in that member of the body that obeyeth, and may wee not apply it to the thing we ſpeake of? God keepe us from theſe ſpirituall palſies, &c.

Deut. 5. 29.

Gen. 12.

Gen. 22.

Pſal. 27.

The

The second part.

THe second Law of this Chapter is touching expiation after a fault committed, and it is said when a man or woman shall commit any sinne that men commit; Peccatum hominis ubi multi socii: The sinne that men commit, saith Calvin, may be such as not one or two but many commit at all times. You may make reference to the sixt of Leviticus, and observe what faults are there named: Verse 2. and 3. Those may bee called the sinnes that men commit. Out of which phrase this observation ariseth, that number and company maketh not sin to bee no sin, but still it remaineth in his blackness, bee they thousands that commit it. Broade is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there bee that finde it. The number of them that find it, changeth not the nature of the way, but still it is the way of destruction. So was the sin of the whole world, for which the flood came, not altered by the number of delinquents. The multitude that offended in Sodome, changed not the fault, &c. On the other side, paucity and want of company, maketh not a vertue to be no vertue. But that one was to be praised, that returned to give thankes, though he were but one, and had no fellowes. Amplifie this further by your owne remembrance. Gen. 6. Luke 17.

2. They shall confesse, saith the text, &c. Novit Deus omnia, vocem tamen tuam expectat. Si taces Secretarius es Diaboli; The Lord knoweth all, saith Ambrose, yet hee expecteth the voice to confesse: And if thou hold thy peace, thou art the Devils Secretary. Fides radix; Confessio fructus: Faith is the roote; Confession is the fruit, saith Chrysostome; Si sufficeret corde credere, cor tantum tibi creasset: If it had beene sufficient onely to beleeve with the heart, God onely would have created to thee a heart. Iosua bid Achan confesse, and to give glory to God, &c. Where is this conscience now? When not onely by word, but even by oath to deny a truth is common. Shall not God in his time strike for such sinnes? Wee cannot doubt of it. After the acknowledgement of his fault, he was to restore the damage, and to put a fift part more to it, and give it to him against whom he had trespassed, &c. which one noteth thus; Verse 7. Ambr. de penit. lib. 1. cap. 27. Iosua 7.

Fatebitur: hoc est, Pietatis.
Restituet: hoc est, Æquitatis.
Dabit ei: hoc est, Charitatis.

He shall confesse, and this is Piety. He shall restore, and this is Equity. And he shall give it to him, which is Charity.

3. But if the man have no kinsman to whom he should restore the damage; then the same shall bee restored to the Lord for the Priests use. See the reputation which the Lord made of his Priests. What was given to him must be given to the Priests, and what was given to the Priests was esteemed as given to him, such consideration in mens hearts would keepe them from that bitternesse that dayly sheweth it selfe against the Church, from that poling and pilling, that robbing and holding, which now almost no man maketh conscience of, &c. Againe, it may teach us, that injuries done to our neighbours are done to God; and therefore if there be not a man to make recompence unto, the Lord will have the recompence given to him, to the use of the Priests, &c. Verse 8.

The third Part.

THe third Law is concerning first fruits; And every offering of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the Priests, shall be his. And every mans hallowed things shall be his; that is, whatsoever any man giveth the Priest, shall be his. It is one of the wayes which God appointed for the maintenance of his Ministers, of whom still he hath care; and such Christian States as are in the world make provision for them. For he that serveth at the Altar, is to live of the Altar; He that taught in the word (saith the blessed Apostle) let him make him that teacheth partaker of all his goods, &c. The words of our Saviour Christ concerning an hireling, are not contrary to the Ministers maintenance. But hee is an hireling indeed according to our Saviours sense, qui mercedem ut scopum sui laboris spectat: Which looketh at his reward as the principall thing he aymeth at, and laboureth for, flying from his charge, or hiding himselfe in silence, or changing his voyce when the Woolfe commeth, for his owne safety; or in a word, which seeketh his owne things, and not the things that are Christ Iesus. Phil. 2. 21. Such shall one day know the price of a sinfull course, unto which we leave them. Verse 9. Iohn 10. 10.

The

The fourth Part.

THe fourth Law as you ſaw by the diviſion, was as the Law of jealouſie; which now followeth in theſe words; Speake unto the children of Iſrael, and ſay unto them, if any mans wife turne to evill, &c. In which Law obſerve two points.

{The cauſes of it.
{The forme and manner of it.

Neſcirent viri. The cauſes were chiefely two: Firſt, to provide a remedy againſt ſuſpition, leſt a wicked man out of the wicked ſuſpition and jealouſie of his head, ſhould abuſe an honeſt and innocent woman. Why but the Lord forbiddeth jealouſie, and ſuſpition, why then would he make this Law? You were anſwered before; To avoyd a greater miſchiefe. Divorce is moſt contrary to the holy knot of mariage, and diſpleaſing to the Lord; yet for the hardneſs of their hearts, that is, to avoyd ſuch miſchiefes, as by ſuch hard and ungodly hearts would have light upon blameleſſe women, he ſuffered it: So this Law was a mercifull ordinance, albeit ſuſpition be moſt hatefull and helliſh. The Lord knew the diſpoſition of thoſe Jewes, that it was often feare and cruell running from ſuſpition to rage and fury; and therefore graciouſly provided for guiltleſs women, whoſe hap ſhould be to have ſuch husbands.

Deut.24.

A ſecond cauſe of this law, was, to keepe wives in their vertue conſtant and firme, abhorring ever all allurements to the contrary. For, when they ſaw ſuch a courſe appointed, to find out their fault if they tranſgreſſed; it was neceſſary to looke to their carriage, as well knowing that God could not be mocked. Theſe were the cauſes chiefly of this law. Which offer to our meditations two things: Firſt, how vile a thing ſuſpition and jealouſie is: and ſecondly, how hatefull to God a wives unfaithfulneſs to her husband, and how ſweet and pleaſing the contrary. Touching the firſt, remember what you reade. Abraham firſt ſuſpected ill meaſure, and then made a lye; ſaying, his wife was his ſiſter, and ſo he caſt her into more danger than a husband ſhould. Vpon a wrongfull ſuſpition, the whole congregation of the children of Iſrael gathered them together to go up to warre againſt their brethren, for an Altar that was made to a lawfull and commendable end.

Gen.20.11.

Ioſua 22.11.

Old Eli the Prieſt by ſuſpition conceived moſt injuriouſly of Anna, that holy woman, the mother of Samuel, that ſhe was drunken. Suſpition conceived moſt vilely of David, that hee would trecherouſly behave himſelfe in the warre, and thereupon the Princes of the Philiſtims prayed that hee might bee ſent backe againe, and not goe downe with them againe to the battell. Hatefull ſuſpition conceived Davids princely kindneſs, in ſending to comfort the King of Ammon, after the death of his father, to bee nothing but trechery; ſending not to comfort, but to ſearch the City, and to ſpye it out, and to overthrow it. Whereupon villany was done to the meſſengers, and ſuch a revenge made by David, as all fleſh may ſee how God abhorred that unjuſt ſuſpition. David came upon them with his power, and deſtroyed them with a fearefull deſtruction. The Aramites that came to helpe them, were overthrowne; ſeven thouſand chariots, forty thouſand foot-men, and Shophach the Captaine of the Hoſt. And for the Ammonites, David tooke the crowne from the Kings head, weighing a talent of gold with precious ſtones in it, and put it on his owne head, and brought away the ſpoyle exceeding much. The people were carried away, and cut with Sawes, and Harrowes of Iron, and with Axes. This was the effect, that unjuſt ſuſpition brought out. Enough, were there no more in Gods Booke to make all feeling hearts abhorre it. Truly therefore, ſaid hee, that ſaid it; Suſpitio grave eſt hominibus malum: Foule ſuſpition is a grievous evill to mankind. Quis non dedit errori locum qui dedit ſuſpitioni? Who hath not given way to error, if hee hath given place to ſuſpition, ſaith Ambroſe? Innocentiam præſtare poſſum: quid homines de me loquuntur non poſſum: I may bee able (through God) to be innocent, but to tye mens tongues from ſpeaking, lyeth not in my power, I cannot limit them. But innocent or not innocent they will have their prattle, &c. ſaid Eraſmus. But let it be obſerved and remembred for a truth; Sicut difficile aliquem ſuſpicatur malum, qui ipſe eſt bonus; ſic difficile ſuſpicatur bonum, qui ipſe eſt malus: As he that is good himſelfe hardly doth thinke another man bad: ſo as hardly againe will he thinke another good that himſelfe is nought. Suſpitio amicitiæ venenum: Suſpition is the cut-throat and poyſon of all love and friendſhip. For ſuch a tainting vice it is, that Suſpitiones ſuas quiſq; fere cognitiones putat: Every ſuſpitious body thinketh their ſurmiſes and imaginations to bee almoſt perfect and ſure knowledges, ſaith Auguſtine: let then as many as feare God, bee carefull to avoyd this hatefull vice, whoſe effects be thus foule and dangerous, remembring the holy Ghoſts words often; Charitie is not ſuſpitious. And on the other ſide againe, let every carefull Chriſtian labour by all meanes, to ſhunne all occaſions of ſuſpition, even as S. Auguſtine wiſely adviſeth, ſaying; Non tantum curemus habere bonam conſcientiam, ſed quantum poteſt noſtra infirmitas, quantum vigilantia humanæ

1 Sam.1.13.

1 Sam. 29.4.

2 Sam.10.3.

1 Chron.19.18

Epiſt. 54.

1 Cor.

humanæ fragilitatis, curemus etiam nihil facere quod veniet in malam ſuſpitionem infirmo fratri: let us not be carefull only to have a good conſcience to our ſelves, but as much as our infirmity may, and as much as the watchfulneſs of humane frailty can, let us bee careſull to doe no thing which may come into evill ſuſpition to our weake brother. Arbitror enim eſſe boni viri etiam falſam infamiam metuere. For I take it to be the part of a good man to feare even a falſe report. Now if this ſerpent ſuſpition be ſo hatefull in any: O how much more odious is it betwixt man and wife? For where ſhould be truſt without ſuſpition, if not betwixt them, whom the Lords holy ordinance, of two hath made but one? But becauſe mans corruption is great, and Satans malice againſt that holy ſtate, moſt bitterly worketh, whereby bones are caſt ſometimes to breake this confidence, that man ought to have in his wife, and wives ſometimes by temptation fall, leſt the innocent might be wronged, and falſe ſuſpition bee perpetuall finding no end. Behold here a courſe laid downe in the heavenly wiſdome, both to keepe innocency from continuing injury: and fraile women from temptation, working them to diſhoneſty. There ſhall bee a tryall taken if otherwiſe ſatisfaction cannot be had: and the Lord that knoweth all ſecrets, and cannot bee mocked, will diſcover what is truth, either to the clearing, or convicting of the ſuſpected. The forme is full of points worthy the marking, and therefore let every particular be obſerved. No man by any law can preſcribe a forme of purgation as well as God can, and therefore his Law and his forme, above all others ſhould be noted.

The Forme.

1. He ſhall bring her to the Prieſt, who ſupplying Gods place as his Prieſt, puts her in mind, and all the congregation alſo, that hatefull to God is the unfaithfulneſs of a woman to her huſband; and ſo deare chaſtity and truth betwixt them, as that where no witneſs can be had, nor ſhe taken with the manner, God himſelfe will be witneſs and diſcover truth, for or againſt the ſuſpected party, rather than either the offender ſhould eſcape unpuniſhed, or the innocent and blameleſſe woman ſuſtaine hurt by unjuſt jealouſie. Surely it is a thing moſt worthy marking for wicked couples. For the Lord is the ſame ſtill, as fully hating this ſinne as then: and as carefully regarding vertue in mariage as ever, albeit this forme of tryall now ceaſe. Hee hath ſtill judgements many and fearefull to lay upon offenders, and he hath ſtill hell to throw them into: he hath mercy for innocency in this life, and eternall joy in the world to come. Let none therefore be ſecure, by his deferring to ſtrike: for as hee cannot be mocked from knowing truth, ſo he never can be unjuſt, but in the end will render to faithleſs couples the deſerved puniſhment of unfaithfulneſs.

2. There muſt be brought with her an offering, the tenth part of an Ephah of Barlie meal: not of Wheate meale, but of Barlie meale: caſting into her minde if ſhe were guilty, how now ſhe was become of a woman a beaſt, a foule ſenſuall beaſt, preferring the filthy pleaſure of the fleſh before holineſs to God, and truth to her husband. Barly is the food of beaſts, and a beaſtly fall is the ſinne of unfaithfullneſs in mariage.

3. No oyle or incenſe muſt be put on, becauſe it is an offering of jealouſie: an offering for a remembrance, calling the ſin to mind. Oyle noteth gladneſs, and here was nothing but heavineſs and wo. Incenſe noteth ſweetneſs, and here was nothing but an odious ſavour to the Lord, if the party were guilty. O how little do the worlds wantons thinke of this: glutting themſelves with that as both ſweet and gladſome, which the God of heaven ſo abhorreth! It is no matter, ſelfe do, ſelfe have, as the proverbe is. Their joy ſhall be woe, their ſweet ſhall be ſowre, and all their filthy pleaſure paine and torment incomprehenſible for ever. For the Lord hath ſaid it, whoſe word can never faile, ſuch filthy creatures, as whore-mongers and adulterers bee, ſhall never enter into his kingdome.

4. The Prieſt muſt bring her and ſet her before the Lord, to wit, at the Altar, for a terror to her conſcience, who now muſt be made knowne by the Lord himſelfe, the judge of truth, and for an abaſhment to her before all the congregation, being plucked out from among them, ſingled, and ſevered from them all, for all eyes to gaze upon, expecting Gods judgement upon her being guilty. Fearefull aſſuredly was this among men, but not comparable to that ſeparation which ſhall be made of ſuch filthy creatures at the laſt day before all the hoaſt of heaven, &c. Verſ. 16.

5. The Prieſt muſt take the holy water, to wit, either that wherewith they that were uncleane were ſprinckled and purified, whereof you reade chap. 19. verſe 9. or (which is more probable) that which was in the brazen Laver, ever ready in the Temple for ſuch uſes as they had of water. This hee muſt have in an earthen veſſell, to lay to her eye the conſideration of her frailty, and he muſt take of the duſt of the floore, and put into it, to ſhadow to her, her vileneſs and contemptible eſtate by her ſinne and fall, if ſhe were guilty. Chriſt ſtooped downe, ſaith one, and writ in the duſt, or upon the earth with his finger, to ſhew the ſinfulneſſe of as well them that brought her, as of the woman taken in adultery. And that as heaven is the place where the names of the godly are written: ſo earth is the beſt habitation the wicked ſhall have.

Pulvis

Pulvis deteſtationis argumentum, Duſt was an argument of deteſtation, ſaith Calvin.

6. The Prieſt muſt uncover the womans head. Idcirco illam aperto capite Deo præſentari jubet, docens omnia munda & aperta eſſe in conſpectu ejus, & nihil eorum quæ gerimus illum latere. Therefore doth the Lord command, ſaith Theodoret, that ſhe ſhould be preſented bare-headed, to ſignifie that all things are naked and bare before him, and nothing of all wee doe unknowne to him. Againe, to the humbling and abaſhing of her, it being a ſhame to a woman to be bare-headed.

Theodoret. in Numb. cap. 5.

7. He muſt put the offering into her hand, to caſt into her heart a piercing feeling of what ſhe had done, thinking with her ſelfe of the caſe ſhee was in. If guilty; O woe, O ſhame, O confuſion before men and Angels, before Earth and Heaven! Now would the Lord lay open that was hid, and make the whole multitude know what was wickedly done in a corner forgetting God.

8. The bitter water the Prieſt had in his hand, called bitter, not for the taſte, but for the effect, becauſe it declared the woman to bee accurſed and turned to her deſtruction. Hee charged the woman by an oath, ſaying; If no man have lyen with thee, neither thou haſt turned to uncleanneſs from thy husband, be free from this bitter and curſed water. But if thou haſt turned from thy husband, and ſo art defiled, and ſome man hath lyen with thee beſide thy husband, The Lord make thee to bee accurſed and deteſtable for the oath among thy people, that is, as well for thy fault, as for thy forſwearing it, the Lord lay his judgement upon thee, and the Lord cauſe thy thigh to rot, and thy belly to ſwell. And that this curſed water may go into thy bowels to cauſe thy belly to ſwell, and thy thighes to rot. And the woman ſhall anſwer, Amen, Amen. After the Prieſt ſhall write theſe curſes in a booke, and ſhall blot them out with the bitter water, that is, waſh the curſes or Letters of the curſe into the water, and ſhall cauſe the woman to drinke them, even the bitter and curſed water, and the curſed water turned into bitterneſs ſhall enter into her. And if ſhe be defiled and have treſpaſſed againſt her husband, then ſhall the curſed water turned into bitterneſſe enter into her, and her belly ſhall ſwell, and her thighes ſhall rot, and the woman ſhall be accurſed among her people. But if ſhe be not defiled, but be cleane, ſhe ſhall bee free, and ſhall conceive and beare. This was the forme of purgation in the cauſe of jealouſie, preſcribed and appointed by the wiſedome of God, to keepe women, as I ſaid before, from yeelding to Satan, and his tempting members in matter of unfaithfulneſſe to their husbands, to preſerve innocent and ſpotleſſe women from the rage of a jealous husband, and to ſhew to all fleſh how well pleaſing to him conjugall truth is, and how hatefull and odious the contrary, filling the houſe with baſtard blood, ſhaming the kindred and friends of whom we deſcend, and the true children that ſhall deſcend of us, with many miſchiefes moe beſide ſinne againſt God, and our owne ſalvation that is above all.

9. But may ſome ſay, why was not the like granted to the wife againſt her husband? Anſwer is made, becauſe women are farre more given to ſuſpition than men are, and much trouble would have growne by that frailty of theirs, both to their husbands, and to the government. Secondly, becauſe man is the womans head, and not the woman the mans. Superiours may have many things over inferiours, that were not fit for inferiours over them. Thirdly, more miſchiefe farre, as I have ſhewed, groweth by the womans ſinne in this kind than by the mans, ſhe being able to abuſe him with a falſe ſeed, and not hee her, &c. And laſtly, becauſe there was no ſuch danger of cruell uſage of the man by the woman, as of the woman by the jealous man. The ſinne before God all one in them both, alike foule, and alike hurtfull to their ſoules and eternall ſafety: but in the world, for theſe worldly cauſes, and ſuch others many, a great oddes. Of the good woman Salomon ſaith, That ſhe is the crowne of her husband: And of the wicked woman, that ſhe is a ſhame to him, or ſhe maketh him aſhamed, and as corruption in his bones. Many and many are the true praiſes of a vertuous wife, and no tongue can expreſſe the worth of her. On the other ſide, whole volumes written of womens wickedneſs, that if not for God, yet for worldly ſhame, they might feare to ſtaine themſelves, their houſes, their children, their friends, their ſoules, their conſciences, and their names and memories for ever. What can the unfaithfull man or woman ſpeake for themſelves when the all-piercing eye of the Lord diſcovereth them, and in his ſpotleſs iuſtice will aſſuredly puniſh them as they live, as he is God? Is hell and damnation but a tale? is fire and brimſtone but a ſport, weeping and wailing and gnaſhing of teeth, not for a time but for ever, make wee ſo light of it? the worme that never dyeth, and the fire that never goeth out will they not torment? What hatefull hardneſſe is upon that heart that cannot feele theſe things, but preſuming of life, preſuming of ſecreſie, daunce in a nette where the world ſeeth them, and droppe into ſickneſſe, diſeaſes, and miſery before ever they bee aware, and God granting no grace to repent at their pleaſure, tumble in hell without any redemption. God give feeling ere it be too late. Facilius inveni qui ſervarint innocentiam, quam qui congrue egerint pœnitentiam: More eaſily, ſaith Ambroſe, have I found them that have kept innocency, and not fallen, than them that after ſinne committed, and vertue loſt, have rightly and truly, ſeriouſly, and heartily repented and amended. It is a ſpeech moſt worthy marking and remembring, S. Auguſt. againe (which I often mention) Hac animadverſione percutitur peccator, ut moriens obliviſcatur ſui, quia vivens oblitus eſt Dei. This judgement doth God lay upon the bold ſinner, that at his death he ſhall never remember himſelfe, becauſe in his life time he forgot God.

peccator

Laſtly, why doth not this law continue ſtill may ſome thinke. To whom anſwer muſt bee made, that as the Lord in the new Teſtament hath vouchſafed more light and knowledge, and more evidence of duty every way than in the Old Teſtament: So hath he granted leſſe liberty in divers things than he did in thoſe times. Divorce was then ſuffered you know for the hardneſſe of their hearts, but it is not ſo ſuffered now for any hardneſſe of ours. Wee are taught our duties out of the Word; man to wife, and woman to husband, with ſuch cleereneſſe and fulneſſe, that any hardneſſe now muſt be no pretence to excuſe. So many things more. Infants are permitted to do what men of perfect yeares may do. The Church had her infancy, and from that hath growne into ſtrength and ripeneſſe. It is a ſhame for a man to go on all foure, becauſe being a child he did ſo. What then will you further ſay? muſt wives now do what they liſt? No, God forbid, but making a conſcience not to traduce your wife raſhly and vainely, in juſt griefe the law hath remedy, as fit and good for theſe times, as that was for thoſe. In duty both man and wife are to be kept, and bleſſed be God for law and government. But all the courſes of married perſons one againſt the other, before government, ſhould taſte and ſavour and ſhew forth to the world, love and care, reverence and affection of either to other, not hatred, not bitterneſſe, not venome and gall any way. The law is holy, profitable and good, but malice and poiſon abuſeth the law, and deſtroyeth us. Thus may you profit by this Chapter, omitting many things, not ſo fit for them for whom I labour. Reade and pray, God never ſhall deny a gracious bleſſing.

CHAP. VI.

The heads or parts of this Chapter are two:

- The Law of the Nazarites.
- The forme of the Prieſt his bleſſing the people.

Touching the firſt, you may conſider with your ſelfe:

- What the Nazarite was.
- The ceremonies uſed.
- The end for which they were ſo.

THe Nazarite had his name of Nazar, which ſignifies to ſeparate, as if you would ſay, a man ſeparate from the ordinary courſe of men, and bound to a certaine peculiar courſe or profeſſion of life. Erat Nazaraatus quædam à ceteris hominibus ſeparatio: The order of the Nazarites was a certaine ſeparation from the faſhion and courſe of other men. Nazarei, id eſt, ſeparati, qui ut liberius vacarent legi diſcendæ & exponendæ, aliorum commercio ſe abdicabant ad tempus, & inde ſeparati dicti: Nazarites, that is, ſeparate, who to the end they might more freely give themſelves to the learning and expounding of the Law, ſeparated themſelves from the ordinary and uſuall manner of other men for a time, and upon that were called Nazarites, or men ſeparated. Nazareus ſeparatus vel eximius, quia dignitas major in eis quam in plebe. Nazarite was he called, that is, ſeparate or excelling, becauſe there was a greater dignity in that order then in the other common ſort. Erant Eccleſiæ ornamenta, & Deus volebat in illis ut in ſpeculo, gloriæ ſuæ decus fulgere: They were ornaments of the Church, and God would in them as in a glaſſe ſhew the glory and honour of God in ſome ſort to appeare. Whereupon ſaith God by his Prophet; I rayſed up your ſons for Prophets, and of your yong men for Nazarites, Is it not even thus, O yee children of Iſrael, ſaith the Lord? Noting this order as an honour and grace vouchſafed of God to their children. Againe, by Ieremy: Her Nazarites were purer than the ſnow, and whiter than the milke; they were more ruddy in body, than the red precious ſtones, they were like poliſhed Saphir. See the ſingular honour and dignity of this calling. What followeth in Ieremy? But now their viſage is blacker than a coale, they cannot know them in the ſtreets, their skinne cleaveth to their bones, it is withered like a Storke. As if the Prophet had ſaid: They that were before in Gods favour moſt, are now in greateſt abomination unto him. Thus you ſee what the Nazarite was.

P. Martyr in Iud. 13. Spangenbergius.

Calvin.

Idem.

Amos 2.11.

Lament. 4.7.

Verſe 8.

The

The ſecond part.

THe ſecond part contayneth the Ceremonies uſed in this order of Nazarites; wherein you may obſerve:

What things were to be avoyded.
How they were to be purified.
How to be abſolved.

Verſ. 3. Firſt, they were to abſtaine from wine and ſtrong drinke, no ſowre wine nor ſowre drinke: nor ſhall drinke any liquor of Grapes, neither ſhall eate freſh Grapes, or dryed. As long as his abſtinence endureth, he ſhall eate nothing that is made of the wine of the vine, neither the kernels, nor the huske. While hee is ſeparate by his vow, the Raſer ſhall not come upon his head untill the daies be out, in the which hee ſeparateth himſelfe unto the Lord, hee ſhall bee holy and ſhall ſuffer the locks of the haire of his head to grow. During this time, he ſhall come at no dead body, &c. as in the Text. From abſtinence from wine and ſtrong drinke, remember how their profeſſion was to ſtudy the law of God. In regard whereof, the Lord would have them refraine all things that might trouble the braine, ſtirre up luſt, and unfitting diſpoſition for ſo holy a ſtudy; of which ſort wine and ſtrong drinke be. It is not for Kings O Lemnel, it is not for Kings to drinke wine, nor for Princes ſtrong drinke. Leſt hee drinke and forget the Decree, and change the judgement of all the children of affliction. For this cauſe alſo, forbidden alſo to the Prieſts, as you may ſee, Levit. 10. A ſufficient admonition, if God bee in them, to all that ſerve at the Altar, to remember their callings, and the hatred God hath of exceſſe in men devoted to his ſervice above all others. Conſequently, the feareſull judgement that will in the end enſue without all faile. For if of all it be true, the Drunkard ſhall never enter into the Kingdome of God: it muſt needs be ſealed up in the conſcience of any Miniſter, that a drunken Miniſter cauſing the holy things of God to be deſpiſed for his wickedneſſe, ſhall never, never come within the gates of eternall joy: but in ſtead thereof for evermore reape the reward of his ſinne, in everlaſting torments both of body and ſoule.

Pro. 31. 3.

Verſe 5. 2. Secondly, they forbeare the cutting of their haire, and muſt ſuffer it to grow all the time of their vow or ſeparation. Wherein the Lord taught them that men religiouſly bent to his ſervice in this extrordinary kind, muſt abſtaine from too much fineneſſe and delicacy, decking and tricking, in the care of the fleſh, their bodies after a wanton and curious manner. Tonſura enim nonnihil facit ad vultus nitorem: For powling and cutting off the haire, giveth a grace and neateneſſe to the countenance. The Apoſtle affirming that to men it is a ſhame, or uncomely to have long haire. Againe, they were taught as to be farre from effeminate ſoftneſſe; ſo to have a manly ſtrength and courage to fight ſtoutly againſt all the alluring baites of the fleſh. The haire being a ſigne of ſtrength in men, as in Sampſon, &c. Laſtly, by this meanes God ſought to draw them from the manners and faſhions of the Heathens, who in token of devotion uſed to ſhave their heads.

1 Cor. 11.

Iudg. 13.

Verſe 6,7. 3. They muſt not defile themſelves by any dead body. Whereby the Lord againe would teach them greatneſs and conſtancy of courage in the changes of this world, wherein many ſhew great weakneſs, and namely in the loſſe of friends. For which it is not a fault to bee ſory and to lament; for then Chriſt would not have wept at the ſepulchre of Lazarus, but to exceed a meaſure as often is done when affections be ſtirred, that is fit for no man, eſpecially not for ſuch as by profeſſion promiſe greater perfection and ſtrength. The meditations and reaſons wherewith we may ſtay this ſtreame in ſome meaſure, God aſſiſting us, I have elſe-where laid downe.

In the dialogue betwixt Faith and Frailty.

The ſecond Part.

Verſ. 9. &c. 4. If caſually it ſhould happen that this Nazarite were preſent when any dyed; ſome dying ſuddenly by him ere he were aware: then was appointed a meanes of purification, by ſhaving his head, and a ſacrifice of two Turtles or two young Pigeons; the one for a ſin-offering, the other for a burnt offering, and then loſing all that was paſt he was to begin his dayes againe anew. The Lord by this meanes teaching how pure and undefiled he would have his worſhip to be obſerved; hee not bearing faults done neither willingly nor wittingly, but caſually and by hap. The remembrance hereof when we doe any duty to God, would much profit us; keeping us from haſting and poſting up our prayers, from careleſſe and negligent hearing of his word, from unreverent comming to his holy Sacraments, and in a word, from ſlubbering up any duty we do unto him. For we ſee here he endureth it not.

Ezek. 18. Righteouſneſs forgotten: Ergo, more care.

5. When the time of this vow and ſeparation was ended, a forme is preſcribed how they ſhould be abſolved and releaſed from it, and reſtored to their former ſtate and liberty againe.

He

He was to come to the doore of the Tabernacle of the Congregation. A figure of Christ the true doore by whom we enter unto any liberty, by whom we are freed from all bondage, sin, and imperfection in any duty whatsoever. He was to bring sacrifices, as you see in the Text; a burnt-offering, and peace-offering; so taught and instructed, that albeit hee had now spent some dayes in this forme of holy exercise, yet had he not deserved any thing from God for the worthinesse of his worke. All the workes and duties done by men, being still imperfect and subject to reproofe before the bright eyes of the heavenly Majesty, yea, even of good men, when they doe their best, and by all meanes strive to doe well. Much lesse can they supererogate as some teach and beleeve. So taught and instructed againe, that what good is done, they should never attribute to themselves, but to him, without whose holy Spirit they can doe nothing. It being he that maketh us both to will, and performe any good whatsoever. Their heads were shaven in token their vow was ended. The haire was burnt in the fire, because being consecrated to the Lord it might not be cast into any prophane place. I might shadow out, that the haires of our heads are numbred when we feare God, and not one of them suffered to fall away without the will of our heavenly Father. A sweet and thrice sweet comfort. In Ezekiel you may see a quite contrary use to the wicked, even to shadow out their destruction and confusion, So differ the godly and ungodly in the eyes of the Lord. Even so, ever shall be so his eyes upon the one for eternall good, his eyes against the other for eternall woe, that wee might learne now in time to looke to the right way to save our soules, &c. Ezek.6.1.&c.

6. Having thus seene what the Nazarite was, and the ceremonies of that order, the third point remaineth; namely, to consider the end for which God appointed it. The end why God appointed it is thought to be divers. One because men being out of their naturall disposition given to choose divers kindes of life to themselves, and so often easily drawn into superstition and error: the Lord by this meanes would very graciously provide for the appointing them this forme himselfe, to keep them exercised withall whensoever they desire to be extraordinary, that they might neither fall into the courses of the Heathens, nor prescribe themselves any other kinde of will-worship. And see how in that one point of the usage of their haire, the Lord kept them from evill; namely, for the Idolatrous fashions of the Heathens. For we reade that the Heathens nourished and let grow their haire, that they might offer vel Nymphis vel Apolloni, to the Nymphs or to Apollo. Theseus went to Delphos to offer the haire of his head, which he had kept from cutting, to Apollo. In Rome yong men when they came to mans estate offered the haires of their heads and beards to some of their gods. In Sophocles it is said, Orestes cut off his haire at the tombe of his father. Thus did Heathens usually: And therefore God to keep the Israelites from this course, appointeth them to consecrate it to him, and to burne it in the fire. Another end why God instituted this order was typicall: that it might shadow out the Lord Jesus, then to come, the true and perfect Nazarite: In whom if you looke at separation that was true; Ego non sum de hoc mundo: I am not of this world. If ye looke at temperance signified by abstaining from wine, who ever so temperate as he? If at fortitude, noted by the growing haire, with what fortitude and strength overcame he death, sin, Satan, the world, and all evill: the Prophet Esay speaking of him; Fortium dividit spolia: Hee shall divide the spoile of the strong. If sanctity and purity from all sinne, blot and spot, signified by abstaining from the dead, who like him, the immaculate Lambe of God given to clothe us with his all-shining righteousnesse: Of whom Esay speaketh in the same Chapter. Hee did no wickednesse, neither was any deceit in his mouth. And himselfe of himselfe in the Gospell of Iohn, Which of you can rebuke me of sin. Thirdly, this order and fashion of the Nazarites was instructive to all then, and us now, as to all unto the worlds end; namely, to shew what manner of persons all true Christians ought to be. Eschewers of drunkennesse, and excesse, remembring the Lords words; Take heed lest your hearts at any time be oppressed with surfetting and drunkennesse. The Apostles also; Be not drunke with wine wherein is excesse, that is, all kinde of riot joyned with filthinesse and shamelesnesse; and in stead hereof be strong and stout warriours against Satan, world, and all the baites of tempting sin, taking that whole appointed armour of God that we may be able to resist the evill day, and having finished all things, stand fast, giving up our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, &c. Laying to our hearts that saying of the holy Ghost; This is the will of God even our sanctification, and that we should abstaine from fornication, that every one should know how to possesse his vessell in holinesse and honor, and not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles which know not God. That no man oppresse or defraud his brother in any matter, for the Lord is an avēger of all such things, having called us not to uncleannes, but unto holines. He therfore that despiseth these things, despiseth not man but God, &c. Thus were the Lords purposes good and gracious towards his people in the institution of this order of the Nazarites. Cyril. & Procopius in Num. Iohn 8. Esay 53.12. Verse 9. Iohn 18. Luke 21.34. Ephes.5.18. Ephes.6.13. Rom.12.1. Ephes.4.3.&c.

7. But see the corruption of man ever apt without guiding grace to abuse the good purposes of God. Popish blindnesse hath looked at this order as a warrant by sinfull imitation to appoint sundry orders of men and women to serve God, and sundry fashions of serving him, forgetting foully that Gods worship must bee appointed by himselfe and not by our braines; hee he ever abhorring in his ſervice the precepts of men, forgetting that this order of the Nazarites was but for a time, and then they were releaſed of it. But their orders and vows muſt hold for life, be the parties never ſo unable to endure the ſame, and follow there never ſo much ſin upon it, and forgetting fearefully that by this order there was no meriting with God, as I have noted before by their ſin-offering, and peace-offering, when as they teach by their orders great merit, even of eternall life, not onely to themſelves, but to others.

Of Vowes ſee the Com.

8. Againe, by this ſhaving of the Nazarites, they now patronize their popiſh ſhaving, as though their authority were equall with Gods, in appointing orders for his ſervice. But can there be any thing more croſſe and contrary? For God appointed the Nazarites to let their hair grow, theſe men muſt have it ſhaven. The reaſons why God would have their haire grow, mentioned before, are all croſſed in popiſh ſhaving. The Prieſts in the Law were forbidden to ſhave. *Levit.*21. The Nazarites, although neither Prieſts nor Levites, yet for the time of their vow, were to be as pure and carefull as if they had beene, and ſo admoniſhed by their haire. Popery quite contrary will have ſhaven crownes, and ſhaven faces ſignes of holineſſe, and ſignes of mortification: for ſay they, it ſignifieth how all ſuperfluity is to be cut away, and the fleſh to be ſubdued and brought under. When ſhaving is a trickneſſe and fine delicacy, ſetting out the face as ſmooth and ſmug, farre and farre from mortification: the Nazarites haire noting that neglect of delicacy and contempt of curious trimneſſe much better. Suetonius in the life of Otho, noteth of him, that he was wont to ſhave his face, and to looke in the glaſſe how ſmooth and trick he ſeemed. Of others we reade that will not ſhave, but pluck out their haires by the rootes, that their faces might have a more ſoftneſſe and delicacy. Farre then is this from mortification. Auguſtine ſaith, Monkes uſed long haire like women, in token they were virgins, and rather women than men. Which haply may make but application, for the praiſe of ſhaving in popiſh Prieſts, becauſe they indeed abhorring ſo much virginity as they doe, though having no wives, they make a conſcience to mock the world with long haire, as though they were virgins, when they know here their rule is, Si non caſtè tamen cautè, If not chaſtly, yet charily and warily. Againe, it may be they love plaine dealing herein, in another reſpect. For in Baruch you may reade, that Idolatrous Prieſts ſerving the Idols of the Heathens, were ſhaven: Whereupon Lyra noteth thus, that quia Sacerdotes idolorum raſi miniſtrabant, ergo Dominus noluit ſuos raſos eſſe: Becauſe the Prieſts of Idols miniſtred ſhaven: therefore the Lord would not have his Prieſts ſhaven. But Popiſh Prieſts knowing in themſelves that they are idolatrous Prieſts, and to the end all men may take notice that they are not Gods Prieſts, therefore they are ſhaven. Their hypocriticall care, that the blood of Chriſt being really as they ſay in the Chalice, might not cleave to their Beards I omit, themſelves being aſhamed of it, and the practice of unſhaven Prieſts masking up and downe unſhaven amongſt us, ſufficiently confuting it. I end with the Councell of Carthage which laid downe this Canon: Comam non nutriant Sacerdotes nec barbam radant. Let Prieſts neither ſuffer their haire to grow long, neither ſhave their beards. They doe both contrary, and pretend that feare to offend by their beards dipped in the Chalice, which you ſee here in this Councell was never feared. This order then of Nazarites, had Gods word for warrant: Their orders, none. The Nazarites might not cut their haire. They cut and ſhave. The Nazarites drunke no wine or ſtrong drinke: They poure in. The Nazarites might not come at Funerals and dead corps. They run to all far and neere, ſucking from thence no ſmall advantage. Finally, the Nazaries, notwithſtanding their vow, lived in holy wedlock: Popiſh vowes abhorre mariage, and nouriſh murder and whoredome: yet this order of Nazarites muſt Patronize their ſinfull orders deviſed by man for earthly purpoſes. Origen very fitly obſerveth it: In aliis votis dabant aut ovem, aut bovem, aut capram, &c. at in hoc voti genere ſeipſos offerebant, & tamen eorum ſtatus cum matrimonio ſatis conveniebat. In other vowes they offered a Sheep, an Oxe, a Goat, &c. But in this kinde of vow, the Nazarites offered themſelves to God, and yet their ſtate agreed well with matrimony.

Aug. de opere Monacorum.

Baruch.6.

The ſecond part.

*Verſ.23.&c.*

HAving thus ſufficiently for ſome uſe and profit laid open the order of the Nazarites, with the ceremonies belonging thereunto: the ſecond generall part of this Chapter followeth, to wit, the forme of bleſſing the people here preſcribed by God himſelfe. And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying; Speake unto Aaron and his ſons, ſaying; Thus ſhall ye bleſſe the children of Iſrael, and ſay unto them: that is, thus ſhall ye pray for them & wiſh my bleſſings to fal upon them, for there is a Benedictio hominum, and Benedictio Dei, The bleſſing of man, and the bleſſing of God. The bleſſing of man is, Fauſta & ſalutaria precari: To pray for and wiſh happineſſe and good. But the bleſſing of God is, Non ſolum favor quo nos benevole complectitur ſed etiam operatio ſalutis & incolumitatis noſtræ: Not only his favour and grace, which hee vouchſafeth us, but the effectuall and powerfull reall working of our health and ſafety, comfort and good whatſoever. Jeſus the ſon of Sirach, making mention of this forme, aſcribeth this power as he ought unto God, and and but a myſtery unto man,ſaying; O Lord heare the prayer of thy ſervants according to the bleſſing of Aaron over thy people,and guide thou us in the way of righteouſneſſe, that all they which dwell upon the earth may know that thou art the Lord, the eternall. Man asketh,God giveth; Man the miniſter to pray, God the fountaine and well-ſpring of all good, even as Saint Iames teacheth; Every good giving and every perfect gift is from above,and commeth down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableneſſe,neither ſhadow of turning. Nay,even as God himſelfe teacheth us in the laſt verſe of this Chapter if you mark it.For in expreſſe words,he ſaith,I will bleſſe them,that is,I will be the reall performer of that whereof thou art the miniſteriall asker.Mine is the power,thine is the miniſtery. A ſingular commendation of the miniſtery if it be duely obſerved.For God could give if it pleaſed him,his gracious favours to his people without the Prieſts asking; but he will thus have him ſtep in,and be the means to draw from him his goodnes: and he will thus grace his ſervants the Prieſts,that what they beg he will give, confirming ſo his owne ordinance,their ſervice and miniſtery unto the Church. And ſurely would men lay this to their hearts it were a happy thing for them. For it would weed out of their hearts, that contempt of the miniſtery of the Church,which one day will be a fearefull witneſſe againſt their ſouls, there ſpringing from it ſo many wrongs to the Miniſters of God, many wayes, in body,in goods, in name,in their friends,as daily are ſeene and obſerved. And it would plant in ſtead thereof ſuch a reverence,ſuch a love,ſuch a protection from wrong, as the Lord noting to be for their calling ſake, would take it to be for his ſake, their calling being his owne ordinance, and powre many ſweet bleſſings upon it. It would make them in health regard the Prieſts prayer, and in the day of ſickneſſe and tryall with the firſt ſend for him, ſaying, as the people did to Samuel; Pray for thy ſervants unto the Lord thy God that we die not, for we have ſinned, &c. He ſhould anſwer as Samuel did, God forbid that I ſhould ſin againſt the Lord, and ceaſe praying for you. So we regarding them and Gods ſacred ordinance in them,and they melting upon us with bowels of ſpirituall Fathers according to their vocation: ſweet would be the ſavour that God would ſmell, and he would anſwer as here,Ego benedicam: I will bleſſe O ſhall the duſt of the Miniſters foot ſhaken off againſt us ſo fearefully hurt us, and the cryes of his ſoule unto God according to appointment not exceedingly profit us? Thinke of it, thinke of it whileſt you have time. For the Lord hath not ordained them in vaine, neither will endure at mans hands ever the contempt both of himſelfe and them.

Eccleſ.36.17.

Iam.1.17.

1 Sam.12.19.

2. And as here you note the dignity and uſe of the miniſtery: ſo I pray you obſerve the allowance, nay the commandement of a preſcript forme of prayer; when the Prieſts were in thoſe dayes endued with Gods Spirit,as well as any in theſe dayes,and could have conceived an extemporall prayer as well as any now. I will not enter into this diſcourſe as I might. Such groſſe follies and ſinfull fancies as ſome have broached, and too many entertained, fall to the ground by this preſident, and other ſure grounds of Scripture.

3. Touching the matter of this bleſſing, you ſee it containeth three members, all ſingular and full of ſweet uſe to Gods people. The firſt is, The Lord bleſſe thee and keepe thee. Wherein, becauſe bleſſing is referred to good things, and keeping to evill things; therefore theſe words are in ſenſe thus much: The Lord vouchſafe unto thee all good and gracious bleſſings, both ſpirituall and corporall, and the Lord keep thee and defend thee, the Lord turne away and avert from thee all contrary evills to either. A large extent you ſee of a few words: let the uſe be to us this.

Benedicere ad bona. Cuſtodire ad mala.

Firſt, to learne by it,that we are not bleſſed by nature, but indeed accurſed for the ſinne that hath tainted us, even from our firſt Parents, making us ſubject to Gods wrath and anger. Secondly, that we are freed and delivered from that curſe, not by our owne ſtrength, but meerly and onely by the mercy and goodneſſe, favour and grace of God, all good ſpringing and flowing from him, as Saint Iames ſaith,in the words recited before. Thirdly, that as his mercy giveth all good, ſo his providence and ſafe keeping hand is the onely averting meanes of all evill from us: which being well obſerved and learned of us, will draw all our prayers and invocations to him for what we want, and all our thankſgiving for what we have received; to him I ſay, and to him onely, not to Creatures either in heaven or earth whatſoever,as blinded bleareeyed Popery teacheth and practiſeth.

4. The ſecond member is: The Lord make his face ſhine upon thee,and be mercifull unto thee. Solomon in his Proverbs ſaith, In the light of the Kings countenance is life, and his favour is as a cloud of the later raine. The later clauſe explaineth the firſt, that by the ſhining of the face is meant kindneſſe and love: as wrath and diſpleaſure by the turning away of the ſame. *How long wilt thou turne away thy face from me. Pſal.*13.1. And thou haſt hid thy face from us, Eſay 64.7. Againe,in the Pſalme, Cauſe thy face to ſhine that we may be ſafe. And be mercifull unto thee by ſending the promiſed Meſſias,and accepting his merit to the pardon of thy ſinnes, and reſtitution unto righteouſneſſe and ſalvation loſt by ſinne.

Prov.16.15.

Pſal.80.3.

5. The third member is: The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee,and give thee peace. As if he ſhould ſay, even as loving and tender parents pitch and fixe their eyes upon their children, for their ſafety, comfort, and good any way they can, by that limited power which they have, ſo the Lord deale with thee by his unlimited and Almighty power, ſaving thee and keeping thee day and night continually, to his great glory, and thy unſpeakable good. Giving thee peace outward and inward, in the world from enemies, and in thy conſcience from feares and terrors, occaſioned by ſenſe of wrath due for ſinne. The fruit or efficacy of this prayer followeth in the laſt verſe, where God ſaith: And I will bleſſe thee. A ſweet promiſe, that this forme of prayer ſhall not be uſed by the Prieſt in vaine, but ſhall obtaine good deſired, and bee made effectuall by his power. So are all prayers ſtill and daily fruitfull by his grace, not by their owne worth and merit.

6 It is obſerved by ſome, that in all theſe three parts and clauſes of this prayer, by the three repetitions of the word Iehovah; The Lord, the Lord, the Lord; The Myſterie of Trinitie of Perſons in Vnitie of Eſſence is contained. So implying that to Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghoſt onely prayer is to be directed; and every good thing from that Divine Majeſty to be accepted, and not otherwiſe. The like may we truely learne out of theſe words: So ſhall they put my name upon the children of Iſrael, not the name of Angels, or Saints, or Fathers, or any creatures, as is done when prayer or thankſgiving is ſo directed. Finally, ſee a ſhadow of Chriſt the true bleſſer of his people the true ſeed of Abraham, in whom all Nations are bleſſed. And let this ſuffice for a taſte of the fruit of this Chapter, reading ſtill as I ever repeate, the Text firſt, and then theſe Notes.

Acts 4.12.

Luke 24.50.

Chap. VII.

The chiefe heads of this Chapter are two:

1 The offering of the Heads or Princes of Iſrael.
2 God his ſpeaking with Moſes from the Mercy-ſeate. Verſe 89.

Verſe 1. Before you come to the offerings, marke in the firſt Verſe, that it is ſaid, how Moſes having finiſhed the ſetting up of the Tabernacle, Hee annointed it, and ſanctified it, and all the Inſtruments thereof, And the Altar, with all the Inſtruments thereof, &c. The Lord by this Ceremony teaching his people: firſt, that theſe things were holy and exempt from common and prophane uſe, therefore to bee religiouſly and reverently uſed, not any way abuſed. And ſecondly, that nothing can pleaſe God, nor make to his ſervice, but by the holy Ghoſt: whereof that Oyle was a Symbole and ſhadow. He ever abhorring what is not of faith, and hee that hath not the Spirit, belonging not to God. Blinde and patched Popery will imitate this, and conſecrate their Temples and Altars with holy Water and Oyle, &c. But where is their warrant? Here God appointeth this to be done, but where hath hee appointed them to imitate this? Will they never remember the words of God: In vaine doe they worſhip me with mens traditions, with mens precepts and inventions. Doe they not know what God ſaid to his own people when they adventured beyond his direction? Quis requiſivit? Who hath required theſe things at your hands? But let them alone, they are blinde leaders of the blinde, and they ſhall one day fall into the pit that is fearefull.

Rom. 10. Chap. 8.

2 It is ſaid alſo, that he Sanctified it, He annoynted it and Sanctified it, with a conjunction copulative. Non quod oleo vis & facultas ſanctificandi inſit; Not that in the Oyle there was inherent any power and vertue to ſanctifie: but that the Church might know, Non irritum fuiſſe ſymbolum, That the Ceremony was not idle and in vaine, but that ſuch true holineſſe was joyned with it, as who ſo ſhould deſpiſe by prophane abuſe, either of Tabernacle, Altar, or Inſtruments ſeparated to religious uſe, he ſhould juſtly taſte of puniſhment due to the ſame.

3 It is ſaid, Moſes annoynted them, and Moſes annoynted Aaron, &c. yet Moſes himſelfe was not annoynted, that all eyes may ſee the ſtrength and vertue of Annoynting or Conſecration doth not depend upon mans worth, but both of that, and of all other ſignes, the power and efficacy floweth from the commandement and good pleaſure of God onely.

4 Thoſe things thus firſt obſerved, then come wee to the offering of the Princes, or Heads over the houſes of their Fathers, Princes of the Tribes, which are ſet downe in this order: firſt, they brought ſixe covered Chariots, twelve Oxen, &c. See the hearts of theſe Iſraelites to Gods ſervice, &c. Firſt, they offer to the building of the Tabernacle, ſo much that there was cauſe to bid them ſtay, and to bring no more: now at the dedicating, what rich and great gifts are given. Where are theſe hearts now-adayes, when as nothing is given, but much taken away? May it not truely be ſaid, there was Tempus offerendi, but now alas changed into Tempus auferendi: There was a time of offering, but now a time of auferring, that is, of taking away that which was offered: And by whom but by chiefe men, as they would bee accounted in their Countries, Pariſhes and places of dwelling. But here theſe Princes offer and give, they they take not away. God willing ſo to ſhew, that of all others, great men, and chiefe men, Magiſtrates, Governours and Rulers, ought to be beneficiall to the Church, no way injurious. And if under the name of Princes here, the whole Tribe alſo bee underſtood, becauſe haply then no mans wealth was ſuch, as to give ſuch large gifts of Gold, Silver, &c. without contribution of others, then doth the example notably teach; and God by the example, that princes and people, Captaine and Tribe, great and little, and all according to their meaſure, ſhould advance Gods ſervice, and enrich his Church with all neceſſaries for his ſervice: no way robbe it, ſpoile it, impoveriſh it: that there is no way to have a ſufficient Miniſter, to preach comfort, to threaten wicked livers, to adminiſter all things with underſtanding and gravity, judgement and learning, to the glory of God, the joy of the good, the terrour of the evill, and to the winning of many that are not yet called. If the wages of the labourer, the poore labourer may not remaine with a man, but he muſt have it truely paid him, or elſe God will be angry, and the teares and ſighs of his family at home, of wife and children, aſcend into Gods ſight, complaine of the wrong, and to crie for puniſhment. O! what will the detaining and with-holding of the right of the Church, the wages of the Miniſter, whereby Gods ſervice is baſely performed, and his glory greatly blemiſhed, doe, and worke againſt ſuch with-holders? When the Lord ſhall riſe up, as in this caſe he will, and ſay, what will you anſwer? How will you ſtand in judgment againſt the Lord? Now, now, is the time to lay this to your heart, and make your peace with God, by giving to God; that is, the Church, that which is the Churches, as unto Cæſar that which is Cæſars. Looke upon theſe Princes here, and looke upon this people, this giving people, not this taking people: And ſinke this example ſo in your hearts, being laid before your eyes to that end by God himſelfe, as never hereafter you may like to withdraw any thing from Gods ſervice, his Church, his Miniſter, but rather with more than with leſſe, caſt in your due portion, leaving the recompence to him, that promiſed in this caſe even to open the windowes of Heaven, and to powre downe mercy upon ſuch reſpecters of him and his ſervice, &c.

5 Why doe they offer Charets, and Oxen to draw them? Becauſe theſe things were fit and good for the uſe of the Tabernacle, to carry at remooves ſuch things as were to be carryed, and to carry them dry: Learne by it, that good hearts to God-ward, doe not onely give, but they give fit things, ſuch as are moſt needfull and requiſite for the ſervice of God; the comlineſſe of his Church, the uſe of the Miniſter, and the benefit of the whole Congregation: yea, they to this end caſt their heads, and obſerve what is wanting; what would doe well if it were had, what is now unſeemely, and what would bee more ſeemely for the reverence of Gods houſe, giving themſelves no reſt, till either by themſelves at their owne private charge, or by the Pariſh at their publike charge, ſuch things be prepared. They are affected to Gods houſes, as others are to their owne, who are ever decking and trimming them with all neceſſaries, till they bee to their liking. Such a vertue as I may boldly ſay, God will ſooner ceaſe to be God, which we know is unpoſſible, than forget to reward it. Doe we remember in our owne houſes who gave us this, and who gave us that, of plate, of houſhold, of ornaments, or whatſoever, and will God forget in his houſe who gave any thing for the neceſſary uſe, or greater beautifying it? We cannot thinke it, and our conſciences tell us, it cannot bee. But even a thouſand times more will God reſpect ſuch love, than any man can doe. Make uſe of it then I begge of you, and ſo ſhew your heart to God in adorning his houſe, and advancing his ſervice, as living and dying he may fill your heart with his ſweet comforts for it, bleſſe you, and bleſſe your friends after you, which he will doe, even as he is God.

6 You know how the Levites were to carry upon their ſhoulders the things belonging to the Tabernacle when they removed, but now they ſhall bee eaſed by theſe Charets and Oxen. So the Laity careth for the Clergy, to helpe them, to eaſe them, to comfort them in their duties belonging to God: And O! how could I dwell in the meditation of it a whole day, it is ſo ſweet. Will not you note it, and thinke of it? I truſt you will, and ſo I commit it to you.

7 One Chariot for two Princes, ſaith the Text: And how I could note in it how friendly, how kindly; yea, how religiouſly and holily, they agreed together in the duties to bee done to God and his Church, that it may ſhew us how commendable at this day it is, and will ever be where the like is among chiefe men in a Countrey, or in a Pariſh, God putteth it in his holy Booke here, as in a Chronicle, for all ages to ſee and reade. And in our dayes can wee imagine hee will not behold it? Yes, yes, and he will ſee alſo the jarring and jangling, the ſtriving and croſſing, and drawing backe, that is in ſome places among them that ſhould draw together, even as theſe Princes did. But the one hee will ſee to reward and bleſſe, the other to correct and puniſh ſeverely.

8 Theſe offered gifts God biddeth Moſes receive, and to give them to the Levites, that they might bee to the ſervice of the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and Moſes did ſo, diſpoſing them as you reade in the Text, from the fourth Verſe to the tenth. We cannot thinke that God needeth our gifts, when heaven and earth is his, yet he graciouſly receiveth our gifts to approved ends, that we may ever learne the chiefe and principall uſe of ſuch riches as God ſhall beſtow upon us in this world; namely, to ſerve him with them in all thankfulneſſe and love for his great goodneſſe towards us. Abel brought an offering not of the worſt, as many now a dayes doe, but of the beſt, and God reſpected it. Cain had not the like heart, and God rejected it. Honor the Lord with thy riches, and with thy firſt fruits of all thine encreaſe, ſo ſhall thy barnes be filled with abundance, and thy preſſes ſhall burſt with new wine. Three times a yeare the Iſraelites kept a Feaſt to the Lord. And none ſhall appeare before me empty, ſaith the Lord. The Phariſie was able to ſay, hee gave his riches to God, paying tithes of all that hee had. And ſhould not they that are better learned doe the like? Origen well ſaith; Mihi non videtur hnjuſmodi animus memoriã habere Dei. It ſeemeth to me, ſuch a mind hath not the remembrance of God. Nay, ſo preciſe were thoſe hypocriticall phariſies, you know, in giving God of their due to God, that they left not untithed, Mint, Anniſe, and Cummin; yet you know againe his words, that Lord of truth, and truth it ſelfe; Except your righteouſneſſe exceed the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſies, you ſhall not enter into the Kingdome of heaven. It is a good teſtimony that Pliny giveth of the Romans, and may well be applyed to our own reformation; namely, that they did not deguſtare vina, aut novas fruges: Not taſte their new wines, or any new fruits of the earth, before they had paid the firſt fruits thereof to their Prieſts. Shall they ariſe up in judgement, and condemne us? I ſay no more, but if we have eyes to ſee, and hearts to feele, we will be the better by theſe things. Looke upon this Chapter, and forget not theſe Princes.

Sacra ſacris tradenda, non Secularibus.

Pro.3.9,10.

Exod.23.14,15

Orig. in Numb. 18.

Mat.23.22.
Mat.5.20.

Verſe. 9

9 But to the ſonnes of Kahath he gave none, becauſe the charge of the Sanctuary belonged to them, which they did beare upon their ſhoulders, and muſt not be drawne with Oxen. How may we learne not to take eaſe where the Lord alloweth it not to us, not to lay upon others ſuch burthens, as in our owne perſon we ought to beare, not to ſubſtitute when God looketh for our ſelves, but all eaſe rejected, all ſhifts and excuſes ſet a part, cheerfully and faithfully, heartily and willingly to undergoe the taske allotted to us by our God, ever good and gracious to recompence zeale, and to beare with infirmities, when indeed they diſable. I touch it, yet deſerveth it longer meditation by a good minde, carefull to make uſe of the Lords pleaſure.

Chap.4.15.

Verſe 10.

10 After the offerings at the dedication of the Tabernacle now ſpoken of, follow the offerings of theſe Princes at the dedication of the Altar. One Prince a day, and another another day: Every one offering a gift, as you may may ſee in the Text. They are not weary of well doing, but continue and encreaſe: neither are they tumultuous in their doing, but obſerve order, and offer in courſe, God ſtill ſhewing how he loveth order in his Church.

All their gifts alike.
Vnio & ſocietas et Eccleſia inter fideles non Singularitate, &c.

11 That every thing is ſo particularly noted, and the weight ſo preciſely mentioned, may teach us to our comfort, what an obſervation there is in God of the gifts wee beſtow on him in promoting his glory, advancing his ſervice, maintaining his Miniſters in a liberall manner, releeving the poore, and doing ſuch good things, as with God and man are praiſe-worthy. Surely, the number, the meaſure, with all circumſtances, are obſerved, and the Lord is a plenteous rewarder of all love to him. On the other ſide, can wee thinke the Lord is ignorant, and ſeeth not when wee pluck back our hearts and hands from theſe things, robbe his Church, grudge him his offerings, and in a word, wholly are appropriated to our ſelves, doing no good thing in any of the forenamed duties? I know wee cannot ſo thinke when wee are awake, but muſt needs confeſſe, and be true judges againſt our ſelves for our ſinnes.

The ſecond part.

Verſe 89.

10 THE ſecond generall head of this Chapter, I ſaid, was Gods ſpeaking with Moſes from the Mercy-ſeate, which now followeth in this Chapter, the laſt Verſe, in theſe words; And when Moſes went into the Tabernacle of the Congregation to ſpeake with God, he heard the voyce of one, ſpeaking unto him from the Mercy ſeate, that was upon the Arke of the Teſtimony betweene the two Cherubims, and he ſpake to him. This manner of the Lords ſpeaking hath beene noted in the twenty five of Exodus, whereunto I may referre you. The Mercy-ſeate figured Chriſt; the two Cherubims, the two Teſtaments, one looking to another, and both to Chriſt. It ſhall not need to ſpeake of it here againe: onely let us ever note it, that in the Tabernacle God ſpeaketh, and if we will learne his will, reſort thither. Such as will not come to Church, where God ſpeaketh in his word by his Miniſter, what care have they to know his will that they may doe it? Let us not deceive our ſelves, the contempt of the Church, what gloſſes ſoever wee deviſe, will prove the contempt of the world, the contempt of the Sacraments, they contempt of God himſelfe in his ordinance; and it will ſtrike deepe when wee ſhall come unto judgment. If the Leaven of Rome have poyſoned you, bee not carryed headlong away with a prejudice, but take our Booke of Common-prayer into your hand, and privately runne over it; ſee if from the one end to the other you can finde any one Prayer whereunto a Romiſh Catholike may not ſafely ſay Amen.

Verſ. 22.

Of comming to Church.

Beleeve

Beleeve it from mee, ſuch as have had as ſtrong a prejudice as you can have any, have thus done, and found their error and miſconceit of our Service, confeſſing freely to my ſelfe, that there is not a prayer in it but good and holy. Firſt, a few ſentences of holy Scripture to ſtirre us up to prayer, as, At what time ſo ever a ſinner ſhall repent from the bottome of his heart, I will put all his wickedneſſe out of my remembrance, ſaith the Lord, &c. Then a moſt pithy and godly confeſſion of our ſinnes; No tongue can reprove it: then the Pſalmes, then a Chapter of the Old Teſtament, and another of the New, with godly Hymnes betwixt. Then holy prayers, the Litanie, and others, for all eſtates and occaſions. O looke, and let God worke: I ſay no more; would ever the Pope, Clement the eight, as I thinke, have offered to allow the Book to Queene Elizabeth, of eternall memory, if ſhe would have taken it of him as ſo allowed of him, had it contained any evill matter? I know you will not thinke it; and therefore in Gods name bee wiſe in time, and I goe no further.

CHAP. VIII.

The generall heads of this Chapter are well expreſſed in the Contents, prefixed before the Chapter, namely, three:

1 The diſpoſition of the Lamps.
2 The purifying and offering of the Levites.
3 The age of them to be received and diſmiſſed.

1 CONcerning the firſt: It is ſaid; Speake unto Aaron, and ſay unto him, when thou lighteſt the Lamps, the ſeven Lamps ſhall give light towards the forefront of the Candleſticke. And Aaron did ſo, &c. Call to remembrance what hath beene noted upon the Candleſticke, Exodus twenty five, and much ſhall not need here. This light day and night in the Tabernacle, taught them that God had vouchſafed to them the light of his true and right worſhip, when as other Nations groped in the darke, ſerving both falſe gods, and after a fooliſh manner with inventions of mans braine, whoſe underſtanding, by Adams fall, is ſo darkened, that it perceiveth not the things that belong to God. Againe, it well taught them, carefully ever to looke to the light of Doctrine then amongſt them, by which more and more their eyes ſhould bee opened to ſee and diſcerne things pleaſing to God, and profitable to their owne ſalvation. What comfortable words were theſe to the Church, by the Prophet Eſay; Thou ſhalt have no more Sun to ſhine by day, neither ſhall the brightneſſe of the Moone ſhine unto thee: for the Lord ſhall be thine everlaſting light, and thy God, thy glory. Thy Sunne ſhall never goe downe, neither ſhall thy Moone be hid: for the Lord ſhall be thine everlaſting light, & the dayes of thy ſorrow ſhall be ended, &c. Still, ſtill is the Lord ſuch a laſting light in his Church, by his holy and ſacred word. Remember againe what you reade in the Prophet Zachary; The Angell ſaid, what ſeeſt thou? And I ſaid, behold a candleſtick all of gold, with a bowle on the top of it, and his ſeven Lamps therin, and ſeven pipes to the Lamps, which were upon the top thereof, &c. Then I asked the Angell, what are theſe my Lord? And he ſaid, this is the Word of the Lord unto Zerubbabell, ſaying; neither by an army nor ſtrength, but by my Spirit ſaith the Lord of Hoaſts. See how the Candleſticke, which was ever in the midſt of the Temple, figuified the light of Doctrine by Gods Word, and that the graces of his Spirit ſhould ever ſhine there in moſt abundance, and in all perfection.

Iſa. 60. 19, &c.

Zach. 4. 2, &c.

2 The ſtemme of the Candleſticke ſignified Chriſt, the Braneches his Miniſters and Teachers, who have their beginning in him, and from him, it being true of them alſo in that ſenſe, which is ſpoken in Iohn; As the branch cannot beare fruit of it ſelfe, except it abide in the Vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me. I am that Vine, ye are the branches, he that abideth in me, and I in him, the ſame bringeth forth much fruit, for without me can ye doe nothing, &c. The true Miniſters of Chriſt, the ſhining Lamps and lights in his Church, are branches derived from him, and him onely, and from him have power and ſtrength, to ſerve fruitfully in their places, no way able by themſelves, as of themſelves to doe any good. Paul plants, and Apollo waters, but God, God, and God onely giveth encreaſe.

Iohn 15. 3.

3 The Flowers, &c. notably repreſented the divers gifts of Gods Spirit, wherewith, as with flowers, &c. his Miniſters are adorned and beautified. Whereof you reade in the Apoſtles; There are diverſitie of gifts, but the ſame Spirit, &c. To one is given by the Spirit the word of Wiſedome, and to another the Word of Knowledge by the ſame Spirit: to another Faith, to another the operation of great Works, to another Propheſie, to another the diſcerning of Spirits, to another diverſitie of tongues, to another the interpretation of tongues. And all theſe worketh one and the ſame Spirit, diſtributing to every man ſeverally as he will. What flowers, what bowles and knops, that is, what ornaments and beautifyings were, and are theſe to the Miniſters of God, calling for diligence in them

1 Cor. 12. 4. Verſe 8.

them to ſo good a God, that thus hath graced them, and for reverence in all the people towards them. The Candleſticke was of Gold, ſignifying the excellency of Chriſt and the miniſtery. No gold ſo pure as Chriſt, in whom there is no ſpot of ſinne, but all holineſſe, purity, and perfection; all fulneſſe of grace and goodneſſe, ſo as out of him goe branches as little Rivers unto others, eſpecially unto his Miniſters, to whom hee communicateth of his fulneſſe according to his bleſſed pleaſure. To him God giveth not the ſpirit by meaſure, and of his fulneſſe have all wee received, and grace for grace, that is, grace upon grace, and as a man would ſay, graces heaped one upon another. His Miniſters in him and for him ſo beautifull, that their very feet are ſaid to be beautifull; O how beautifull are the feet of them that bring glad tydings of peace. &c. It was beaten out with hammer all, not ſet together in divers parts and peeces, and ſo to be taken in ſunder and ſevered into thoſe parts againe; ſignifying the indiſſolvable union of Chriſt with his.

Iohn 3.34.

Rom.10.15.

4 One Lampe looked to another, to wit, to that before it, and all to the ſtemme, noting unity of Doctrine among the Miniſters of Chriſt one with another, and their adherence to Chriſt ever altogether as to the chiefe ſhepheard, whoſe ſervants they are. Aaron lighted thoſe Lamps; and Chriſt our Aaron lighteth all true teachers called by him; yea, all others his faithfull and choſen ever, according to that ſaying; Surge, illuminare Hieruſalem, quia venit lumen tuum ſuper te, &c.

Now all this of neceſſity muſt lay open the great blindneſſe of Popery, in lighting ſtill Candles in their Churches, as if Chriſt were not yet come, or as if we ſtill lived under the Ceremonies and ſhadowes of the Law. At which vanity how directly ſtriketh Hierom, when he ſaith; Cereos non clara luce accendimus, ſed ut noſtris tenebris hoc ſolatio temperemus: We doe not light Candles in the day time, but in the night, to bee a comfort againſt that darkneſſe. Lactantius againe, when he ſaith; Num mentis ſua compos putandus eſt qui autori & datori luminis candelarum & Cerarum lumen offert pro munere? Is hee to be thought a man in his wits, which unto the author and giver of all lights, offereth candle-light for a gift? Thirdly, Tertullian in that golden ſaying; Accendunt quotidiè lucernas quibus lux nulla eſt, Illis competunt & teſtimonia tenebrarum & auſpicia pœnarum: they that light candles every day, in whom yet there is no light, to them agree fitly both the teſtimonies of darkneſſe, and the reward of puniſhment. But their ſinne is yet greater, when they make one of their candles a reſemblance of the bleſſed Trinity; ſaying, that the waxe ſignifieth the Father; the weeke, the Sonne; and the fire or light, the holy Ghoſt. This is the reverence that blinded Synagogue ſheweth of ſuch high things as that holy Trinity is. But leave wee them and their fearefull blaſphemies to the eternall Judge that ſuffereth long, yet never forgetteth to puniſh iniquitie and ſinne in the end.

Adverſus Vrgil. lib.6. cap.2.

The ſecond Part.

OF the ſecond head, to wit, the purifying and offering of the Levites, your Chapter ſaith thus; And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying, Take the Levites from among the children of Iſrael, and purifie them, &c. Where againe obſerve the excellency of the Miniſtery, for which no man fit except he be purified. It pleaſed the Lord in ſtead of the firſt borne, to take unto him the Tribe of Levi: But before he will have them ſerve, they muſt after a ſolemne faſhion be conſecrated and ſeparated to his ſervice. That as the people of the Jewes, in reſpect of other nations, were the peculiar people of God: ſo this Tribe among that people ſhould be his peculiar choſen to the holy Miniſtery: not yet all alike in dignity; for unto Aaron and his poſterity were the chiefe parts committed, unto others inferiour offices, as you have ſeene in Leviticus. In ſo much that the inferiour Levites were Sacerdotum quaſi miniſtri, as it were, ſervants to the Prieſts, ſo hath God ever approved and appointed degrees and orders of Miniſters in his Church, ſome ſuperiour, and ſome inferiour, never liking there ſhould bee equality; becauſe it is a fearfull Nurſe of confuſion and diſcord.

2 The like againe you may obſerve, in that God would have both a diſtinct time, and a differing manner to be uſed for the Prieſts, and the other inferiour Levites. The one you ſee here, the other you may ſee in Leviticus. For aſſuredly, the Lord would thus meet with that ingrafted pride and corruption of mans heart, that ever ſince our fall hath broken out at times, and upon occaſion in us. Had they beene ſeparated and purified at the ſame time, and with the ſame ceremonies, the Lord ſaw they would have ſwelled with conceit of equality to the Prieſts, and they would not have obeyed them ſo roundly and willingly as the Lords pleaſure was they ſhould. An obſervation of great uſe in the Church, if men would with feeling and religious touch lay it to their hearts. For, have not conceits of an equality in the Miniſtery, too much and too long ſhaken the ſweet unity and concord that ought to bee in Gods houſe? As though perſons equall in ſome reſpects, might not bee moſt unequall in other reſpects, and one ſubordinate to another in the point of obedience and command? ſhall God be thus carefull to obſerve imparity, and we not afraid of Corahs puniſhment, if we partake in his gain-ſaying? Let it ſinke, O let it ſinke, and an end be of theſe errors, &c.

Chap.8.

3 The

3 The ſeverall Rites and Ceremonies in this purification, if you marke, are ſixe. Firſt, they muſt be ſprinkled with water of purification upon them: which water was made with the aſhes of the red Cow, as you reade in the nineteenth Chapter of this Booke, called the water of ſinne, becauſe it was made to purge ſinne: the water of ſeparation, becauſe they that were ſeparate for their uncleanneſſe were ſprinkled with it, and made clean, as you ſee in this verſe. It was alſo called holy water, becauſe it was ordained to an holy uſe; Chap.5.v.17. Secondly, they muſt ſhave all their fleſh: and thirdly, waſh their cloathes. In all which was reſembled the holy and cleane life of ſuch as ſerve in the Tabernacle. A thing then, and ever pleaſing to God; and the contrary very hatefull and offenſive. Fourthly, impoſition of hands by the Congregation, verſe 10. Which was done in token, that with conſent the Levites did goe in place of the firſt-borne, to performe the ſervice of the Sanctuary to the Lord. Fiftly, Aaron muſt offer them before the Lord, as a Shake-offering of the children of Iſrael. The Shake-offering was moved to the Eaſt, Weſt, North and South. So that herein well might be ſignified, that by the Miniſtery, the Goſpell of God ſhould in time bee carryed to all the coaſts of the world, and that ſaying verified: Their ſound is gone out into all the world, and their words into the uttermoſt coaſts of the earth. Sixtly, they muſt offer a young Bullocke with his meate-offerings, &c. which following after ſprinkling, ſhaving and waſhing, notably ſheweth, that nothing doth externall cleanneſſe or holineſſe profit, if there be internall uncleanneſſe in the heart and ſoule. Woe bee to you Scribes and Phariſies, hypocrites, for yee make cleane the utter ſide of the Cup and of the Platter, but within they are full of bribery and exceſſe, &c. Mat.23.25. Iob in like ſort very effectually; If I waſh my ſelfe with ſnow-water, and purge my hands moſt cleane: yet ſhalt thou plunge mee in the pit, and mine owne cloathes ſhall make me filthy, &c. Iob 9.30. Learne we therefore by this ſin-offering after waſhing and ſhaving, to joyne inward truth to outward ſhew, cleanneſſe of heart to cleanneſſe of hands: Remembring what followeth in the Goſpell, to the words named; Thou blinde Phariſie, cleanſe firſt the inſide of the cup and the platter, that the outſide of them may be cleane alſo. Mat.23.26.

4 Unto theſe ſixe principall Ceremonies in the purifying of the Levites, I might adde the commandement to aſſemble all the congregation of the children of Iſrael. And therein note how fit it is to order Miniſters in the face of the Church, and not in private places without any aſſembly fit for ſo ſacred and reverent an action. Hereunto the ancient Canons of the Church have had reſpect, when they have decreed, that onely on the Sabbath, or on ſome Holy-dayes in the aſſemblies of the congregation ſuch orders ſhould be given, and with ſuch company of Miniſters, as might adde reverence and authority to the action, &c.

5 For they are freely given to me, ſaith the Lord, from among the Children of Iſrael, for ſuch as open any womb, for all the firſt-borne of the children of Iſrael have I taken them unto me. Quid hoc eſt Domine mi, quod nihil gratis accepere à nobis vis, ſed rationem addis cur tibi debeatur? Certe, certe, noſti avaritiam noſtram, & quam facile ſi quid alicui donamus, exprobamus: What is this, Lord, ſaith one upon this place, that thou wilt receive nothing at our hands freely, but wilt give a reaſon why it is due unto thee? Surely, ſurely, even becauſe thou knoweſt our covetouſneſſe, and how eaſily, if we give any thing to any, we upbraid him with it. Let this meditation be ours alſo, that we are naturally vaine, proud, boaſters, covetous, and let it make us carefull to call for contrary ſtrength where the Seeker findes, and the Asker receiveth, without upbraiding, &c. Verſe 9.

6 The often repetition of theſe words, And Aaron ſhall offer them before the Lord; may truly teach us, that none can be accepted of God, unleſſe he be offered by the true Aaron, the true High Prieſt, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour, in whom and by whom we have acceſſe to Favour and Grace, as many as ever ſhall be ſaved.

The third part.

CONcerning the third generall Head of this Chapter; the Age of the Levites; when received, and when diſmiſſed, you ſee what the Text ſaith: From five and twenty yeares old and upward, they ſhall goe in and execute their Office in the ſervice of the Tabernacle of the Congregation: And after the age of fifty yeares they ſhall ceaſe from executing the Office, and ſhall ſerve no more, &c. The Office of the Levites was very painfull, and of ſundry ſorts: wherefore the Lord would not have any admitted unto that Miniſtery, that either by levity, raſhneſſe or ignorance, might commit errors hatefull to him, and diſgracefull to his ſervice. But although the Lord here admit the Levites at five and twenty yeares old to ſerve, yet did he not ſuffer them to carry the Tabernacle, and to meddle with the harder matters of that Office, but kept them under in leſſer matters, till they were thirty years of age: So leaving, even to this day and example to his Church of Order and Degrees among ſuch as ſerve in his Houſe. Againe, albeit he freed them at fifty yeares, yet did he it not wholly, but only from ſuch duties as thoſe yeares were too weak for. Lighter and eaſier matters he ſtill left them bound to, as ſtrength and health would ſuffer, that old men might ever learne, That albeit they cannot doe as they could, yet they ſhould hate idleneſſe, and doe as they can; which the Lord in mercy will accept. And more able men ought Chap.4.

not

not to ſcorne,&c. This point will come againe hereafter, and therefore I leave it now.

2 Obſerve againe in this verſe the words uſed, Ad militandum militiam in opere Tabernaculi. This is thrice that he ſpeaketh of this ſervice in the Tabernacle, and ſtill calleth it Militia, a Warfare. Iuſtè valdè hoc factum eſt, verè enim militia eſt: quis enim dicere poteſt, quot oppoſitiones, objecta contradictiones, patiantur qui Chriſto ſervire volunt, &c. And very rightly (ſaith one) is it thus called: for (indeed) it is a true Warfare, no man being able to number the oppoſitions and contradictions that they finde, who will faithfully and carefully ſerve the Lord. Which the wiſe Syrach well knowing, ſaith: My ſonne, if thou wilt come into the ſervice of God, ſtand faſt in righteouſneſſe and feare, and prepare thy ſoule to temptation: Settle thy heart and be patient; bow downe thine eare, and receive thy words of underſtanding, and ſhrinke not away when thou art aſſailed, but wait upon God patiently: joyne thy ſelfe unto him, and depart not away, that thou maiſt be encreaſed at thy laſt end, &c. Reade on your ſelfe, for the place is worthy reading. Armatus videtur totus orbis adverſus eos, ita ut milites & pluſquam milites eſſe oportet, &c. The whole world ſeemeth armed againſt them that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, and eſpecially againſt faithfull and painfull Miniſters: ſo that they muſt reckon to bee Warriours, and more than Warriours, even Martyrs, if God ſo will.

CHAP. IX.

Two principall parts hath this Chapter alſo:

1. Of the Paſſeover, to the fifteenth verſe.
2. Of the Cloud, from the fifteenth to the end.

1 IN the Lords ſo carefull remembrance of his people, wee may profitable note, what a wretchleſſe forgetfulneſſe we are naturally given to in Gods buſineſſe, and in our due duties to him. For if the Lord thinke it neceſſary to call upon them in the firſt moneth of the ſecond yeare, as here is ſaid; what after forty or fifty yeares. Let every one apply this to himſelfe, and know his frailty, if God ſtirre not up; which wee muſt ſeeke by continuall and earneſt prayer. Againe, how notably doth this teach, That it is not enough to make good lawes, but the obſervation of them muſt alſo bee looked unto, and called for; without which, lawes are idle and vaine things. The Magiſtrate in the Common-wealth, the Houſholder in his Family, muſt make uſe of this, and ſetting the Lord before them for their moſt worthy Patterne, continually watch over their lawes and orders, that they be obſerved, not truſting to any more then to their owne care in this point. The Miniſters are Gods remembrancers, appointed for us in great mercy, Ergo, love them, &c.

Among other Titles this is one.

Verſe 2. 2 They ſhall keepe it, ſaith the Lord, at the time appointed. And againe, they ſhall keepe it in his due ſeaſon, according to all the Ordinances of it, and according to all the Ceremonies thereof, and according to all that the Lord had commanded Moſes. So did the children of Iſrael when Moſes ſpake unto them. They kept the Paſſeover in the fourteenth day of the firſt moneth at even, in the Wilderneſſe of Sinai, &c. God will not have his ſervice according to our will, as hath often beene noted, but according to his owne will: neither will he have our duties to him ſlubbered up in haſt, negligently, careleſly, preſumptuouſly, but with all ceremonies and circumſtances of Time, Place, and ſuch like, as you ſee here. A very needfull note for many of us, God knoweth; ſo tempteth Satan, and our owne corruption to ſinne in this behalfe. But I amplifie it not: Every man to his owne heart may amplifie it, and urge it when he findeth himſelfe dull in his dutie, &c.

Verſe 3. 3 The Time is here noted when the Jewes had their Paſſeover: and it may remember us of the great trouble that hath beene in the Church about our Eaſter, when, and at what time it ſhould be kept. About the yeare of our Lord 664. our Church-ſtory mentioneth a great Diſputation, in the dayes of Oſwy and Oſwine, Kings of Northumberland, betwixt the Romiſh, Scottiſh, and Britiſh Biſhops, about this matter: Wherein much being ſaid, when one alleaged the authority of Saint Iohn, and another of Saint Peter, up ſtood Oſwy the King, and concluded the matter, That for as much as Peter had Keyes of Heaven Gates, hee would have him his friend, and therefore with him that alledged his authority ſhould the matter be ordered. Such was the blindneſſe of great men in thoſe dayes.

About which time, to wit, Anno 664. (let me note by digreſſion) was Benedict, who firſt brought into this land Glaſing; an Invention we would not have wanted for much.

Verſe 4. 4 And certaine men were defiled by a dead man, &c. See their care, their feare, their reverence of this Sacrament: and let it ever quicken us to the like. They aske of Moſes, What they ſhould doe in ſuch a caſe? And of our Teachers we muſt learne reſolution in all difficulties: The Teacher muſt remember, that his lips are to keep knowledge, and the learner may ever ſtirre up himſelfe with that example; Men and brethren, what ſhall we doe? Acts 2.

5 Then

5 Then Moses said unto them: Stand still, and I will heare what the Lord will command concerning you. A most worthy example to teach all Instructers of others, first to learne of the Lord themselves, and then to teach what they have learned. Moses was a great Prophet, and had received great mercy of the Lord, yet he taketh not upon him to know all things, but at times upon speciall occasions, seeketh to the Lord for further knowledge and understanding of his will. How much more may men, farre inferiour to Moses, justly acknowledge in many things, their ignorance, and make further search, by study and prayer, to understand particular points better, before they deliver out their resolute answers. This order observed, would have freed many from deserved blame, and the Church of God from much contention and trouble, &c: For peremptory teaching others, before God had taught them, O, what harme hath it done, &c? Verse 8.

6 Then the Lord spake unto Moses saying, &c. No readier man to seeke, than God to shew. And therefore if we seeke not, if we aske not, if we knocke not, where is the fault if we receive not? Sweet is the comfort of this the Lords goodnes to all, but more and more to the teachers of others, who so often have occasion to receive from the Lord what they may deliver to others. Verse 9.

7 In the fourteenth day of the second moneth, &c. The Lord giveth a further time in the case now propounded, even a moneth more, to receive the Passeover, but in no case dispenseth wholly with the duty. Such an argument for the necessity of the Sacrament, and against that dreadfull contempt which is in many, never receiving the holy Communion, as should strike everie heart, wherein an hope or desire is to be saved: For in the place of the Passeover is our Sacrament come; and as certaine shall bee the cutting off every contemning or neglecting soule, as then. One law for the stranger, and him that was borne in the land then, and now God is no respecter of persons. Verse 11, &c

The second part.

THe second point in this Chapter was, I said, the Cloud, from this verse to the end of the Chapter. What the Text saith of this Cloud, yon reade: and to make use of it, let us consider that by this Cloud was represented and signified the presence of Christ, and very fitly: For the Clouds bring Raine to the Earth, whereby all things spring and flourish, and the like worketh Christ spiritually in his chosen by his spirituall dew: The Clouds gave Manna when time was, for the use of them, and Christ hath given us the bread of Life, if we beleeve: The Clouds coole the burning heat, that otherwise would destroy us, and Christ cooleth the just anger of his Father, more hot than any heate against us. In the Clouds is set that bow of Covenant betwixt God and Man, touching that point, and in Christ behold the eternall Covenant of all good from God to men in this life, as shall be fit, and after this life immortality in joy and blisse for ever. Finally, the Clouds shall be his Chariot at the great day to come unto judgement; and therefore now a resemblance of his presence amongst the Israelites, as unto his Church, still and ever he is present. Psa. 78. Psa. 105. Gen. 9. Mat. 24.

2 This Cloud in the day time, was in the night a Piller of fire, shining with a marvellous glory and comfort unto them. And see the fitnesse of this shadow also: Our God (saith the Apostle) is a fire. Igneo calore quæcunque spirant animantur; By a kinde of fiery heat doe all breathing creatures live: and in him we live, move, and have our being, saith the Scripture: In him and by him we shine, all our filth being washed away: Ignea luce quæcunque sunt colluſtrantur; and who is the true light but Christ. Signum ergo valde illustre & insigne Columna nubis & ignis quo Deus testabatur se non solum populo suo præsentem, sed etiam ejusdē protectorem & defensorem esse in confirmatione animorum si quid adversi inciderit; A most glorious and singular signe therefore was this Piller of a Cloud and Fire, whereby God testified, not onely his presence, but his protection and defence, to the comfort of their mindes, if any adversity or crosse happened among them. Ergo nonnulli dixerunt ignem animam esse.

3 Now as the Lord then guided his Church by this meanes; so still is hee conductor of his faithfull in the Ministery of the Word and Sacraments: whereby he sheweth the way that leadeth to the true Canaan, if we follow it. And therefore, as at the moving or staying of this Piller the Israelites removed or pitched: so we at this day, in the Wilderneſse of our Pilgrimage, must follow the conduct of the Word, directing our course ever according to it: and then shall we assuredly, in the end, come to that happy Haven, where we shall rest in joy for ever. There was a great difference in the moving; sometimes further, and sometimes lesse: and so it appeared not to be naturall, but directed by God. In mens ministeries, the guide of us, there is a great difference of Power and Grace at times, that all tongues may confesse God guideth, and not Nature, &c. Day and night be ready to follow the Lords prescription, and say not, It is night.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

The chiefe heads of this Chapter may be foure:

The ſilver Trumpets.
Their departure out of the Wilderneſſe of Sinai.
The departure of Jethro, Moſes Father in Law.
The Prayer Moſes uſed at the riſing or reſting of the Arke.

Touching the ſilver Trumpets you may obſerve

The Number of them.
The Matter of them.
The Forme of them.
The Vſe of them.

Verſe 1,2. THe number was two: And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, Make thee two Trumpets. This Number reſembled the two Teſtaments, the Old and the New, in their Times. The Matter of them, Silver both, for Majeſty, and for the better ſound; Silver being a pure and a well-ſounding metall. Thus alſo were the properties of the Word well ſhadowed out. As firſt, that it is pure as Silver is, *Pſ.*19. The Word of the Lord is pure, and giveth light to the eyes. Againe, in the 119. Pſalme, Thy word is proved moſt pure, and thy ſervant loveth it. Secondly, Silver is bright, and ſo is the Word, even a Lanterne to our feet, and a Light unto our pathes. The Piller of Fire was bright and light, to note out the propertie of the Word. The Sunne is bright and light, and the Word is reſembled to the Sunne. So of Starres, and other reſemblances. A Glaſſe is bright, and ſo is the Word. Whereupon Gregory; Si deformem te vides, non te fallit ſpeculum, tu te fallere noli; If thou ſee thy ſelfe deformed, the Glaſſe deceiveth thee not; doe not thou deceive thy ſelfe. Silver is ſounding, and full ſweetly ſounding; ſo is the Word: Silver is of price; and ſo is the Word: More to be deſired than gold, yea, than much fine gold; ſweeter than the Honey, and the Honey-combe. Againe, I have had as great delight in the way of thy Teſtimonies, as in all manner of riches.

Verſ. 1 0.

Pſa.19.10.

Pſa.119.14.

An excellent example of the feeling hereof, our Church-ſtory hath. One George Crow, who being in danger at ſea, caſt out whatſoever he had, and reſerved his Teſtament in his boſome, with which he was taken up, moſt miraculouſly ſaved; and the firſt thing that hee thought of when he came to himſelfe, was his Booke. Reade the ſtory in Maſter Foxe; for it is very worthy. Likewiſe, thoſe bleſſed children of God in Lincolneſhire; who (as the ſtory ſaith) gave five Markes, Loads of Hay, &c. for a few leaves of Gods Booke, when cruell Popery denyed them the ſame. Yea, this is that rich Pearle, which the wiſe Merchant buyeth with ſaile of all that he hath, &c.

Pag.1805.

2 The Forme was all of one whole Peece; noting the uniformity of the Holy Scriptures, not pieced and patched, but all one. Let them bee read of the beſt wits, and worſt wils, yet can they not be juſtly charged with contrariety.

3 Touching the Uſe; you may note for what they ſerved, and by whom they muſt be ſounded. They ſerved to call the whole Congregation together, *verſ.*3. or the Princes alone, *ver.*4. To remove their Tents, *verſ.*5. They ſerved for Warre, *verſ.*9. At the times of Joy and appointed Feſtivity: Blow the Trumpet in the New Moon, even in the time appointed, at our ſolemne Feaſt-day. And according to theſe ſeverall uſes, there were ſeverall kindes of blowing, if you marke the Text: ſometimes with one Trumpet, ſometimes with two; ſometimes with an Alarme, ſometimes without, &c. A ſingular uſe alſo, no doubt, of theſe Trumpets, ut excitetur fiducia de auxilio divino cum pugnandum cum hoſtibus; to ſtirre up faith and truſt in God, when they were to fight with any their enemies: Permultum enim valet ſonus Organorum & Inſtrumentorum Muſicorum cum ad animandos tum ad exhilarandos animos; for great force is in the ſound of Inſtruments, of any ſort, to ſtirre up both courage and chearfulneſſe in the hearers of them, warlike Inſtruments, muſicall Inſtruments, &c. And being, as hath beene ſaid, repreſentations of the VVord, very profitably may we note, that in all our actions in warre or peace, in all meetings and joyfull feaſts, the VVord ſtill ſhould ſound, and, as it were, goe before, that our doings may be acceptable to our God.

Pſa.81.3.

*Verſ.*9. Vide verſe 10. idem.

4 In the time of warre, when it is ſaid: And yee ſhall bee remembred before the Lord your God. It is not ſpoken as if the Lord could forget, and had need of any thing to put him in minde, but it is ſpoken in regard of the Iſraelites, that to them it ſhould be an aſſurance of his gracious preſence amongſt them, to fight for them, and to ſave them from their enemies. So doth the the Lord in abundant mercy ſtrengthen by ſignes and outward teſtimonies, the weake and wavering faith of his children; as ſtill, even at this day, he doth by his holy Sacraments: to the end we might ever cleave faſt to him in all occaſions, make account of his promiſes, as never failing them that put their truſt in them. This pleaſeth him, and this profiteth us, being ever as truly to be ſaid of any of us, as it was of David: It is good for me to hold me faſt by God.

5. Touching the parties that muſt blow them, it is expreſſely ſaid in the eight verſe, The ſons of Aaron the Prieſt ſhall blow them, &c. Tum ut in omnibus actionibus Sacerdotum præeat & emineat authoritas, tum ut populus non cæco impetu & feſtinatione, tumultuarie conventus agat, ſed ſervetur modeſtia & gravitas, tum ut doceat tam in politicis & civilibus quam ſacris negotiis nihil agendum eſſe niſi ipſius auſpiciis, id eſt, niſi ipſius invocato nomine; cujus quoq; nos commonefacit Apoſtolus ad Coloſſ. 3. Omne quodcunq; facitis in verbo aut in opere, omnia in nomine Dei Ieſu facite, gratias agentes Deo Patri per ipſum: Both that in all actions the authority of the Prieſts might be reſpected, and that the people, in any blinde earneſtneſſe and haſt, tumultuouſly might not make Aſſemblies, but Gravity and Modeſty ever be obſerved: as alſo, that he might teach, as well in Civill as Eccleſiaſticall things, to doe nothing but under his good favour and direction, that is, by prayer and invocation of his Name: as alſo the Apoſtle admoniſheth, when to the Coloſſians, he ſaith: Whatſoever you doe in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Ieſu, giving thanks to God the Father by him.

6. By this occaſion, godly Writers fall into ſpeech of divers kindes of Trumpets: Two in the Miniſters or Prieſts, to wit, Territoria, the terrifying Trumpet, and Conſolatoria, the comforting Trumpet. Of the former, God ſpeaketh by his Prophet Eſay: Cry, and ceaſe not, lift up thy voice like a Trumpet, and ſhew my people their ſin. This is the Trumpet of the Law, ever manifeſting the wrath of God againſt ſin. Of the ſecond, by the ſame Prophet, when hee ſaith: In that day alſo ſhall the great Trump be blown, and they ſhall come which periſhed in the Land of Aſſhur, and they that were chaſed into the Land of Ægypt, and they ſhall worſhip the Lord in the holy Mount at Ieruſalem. Such differing Trumpets the Lord uſeth ſtill in his Church; the Miniſter ſounding ſometimes Woe, and ſometimes Well, according as our ſinnes or obedience give him cauſe, &c. Eſay 48. Eſay 27.13.

There be Trumpets alſo of all the faithfull, to wit, their voices ſounding forth the praiſe of God. Theſe be pleaſing Trumpets to the Lord, and to the faithfull ever profitable: For who hath honoured God ſince the world was made, and hath not been honoured by God in the time and manner appointed with moſt great mercies and favours? And as with our living voices, ſo with Inſtruments of Muſick, as with a kinde of Trumpets alſo, wee may glorifie God. The Pſalmes of theſe Trumpets (you know) ſpeake often. 1 Sam. 2.

There is the Trump againe of the laſt day, whereby wee ſhall all bee ſummoned to the great judgement. Of which, the Lord Jeſus ſpeaketh in his holy Goſpell, when he ſaith; He ſhall ſend his Angels in the ſound of the Trump to gather his elect from the foure Windes. And the Apoſtle againe; The Lord ſhall deſcend from heaven in the voice of an Arch-angell, and with the Trumpe, and the dead ſhall ariſe. If ever we ſhall heare this great Trump to comfort, we muſt firſt heare the Trump of the Miniſtery of the Word, calling and bringing us to repentance: which God grant we may. Mat. 24.

The ſecond part.

THe firſt head thus paſſed over, ſpeaking of the ſilver Trumpets, now followeth the ſecond, to wit, their departure from the Wilderneſſe of Sinai towards the promiſed Land: which was (ſaith the Text) in the ſecond yeare, in the ſecond moneth, and in the twentieth day of the moneth. Whereby is gathered, that they ſtaid in the deſart of Arabia, which is neare to the Mount Sinai, almoſt a yeare and eleven moneths, and twenty dayes, comming thither the firſt day of the third moneth of the firſt yeare after their comming out of Ægypt. All this time almoſt, as I ſay, a yeare, was ſpent in publiſhing the Law, in building the Tabernacle, in conſecrating the Prieſts, in diſtributing into order that great Hoaſt of the Iſraelites, &c. Wherein obſerve how the Lord fitteth them for his ſervice, before he bring them to the Land of Canaan, to the end, that when they came there, they might be skilfull and experienced in the true manner of ſerving him. So, ſo, and even ſo; ſtill, ſtill, doth the Lord by the Miniſtery of the Word inſtruct and ſchoole all ſuch as ſhall be ſaved, the pleaſing courſe of his holy feare, before they enter into his reſt. Which if men and women did well conſider, it would make them looke to their courſe better, as being aſſured, that if ſalvation follow, holy and carefull ſerving of God muſt goe before. Exod. 19.

2. In this carefull deſcription of the order of their march, who went firſt, and who ſecond, &c. See that which I have often noted, how pleaſing ever to the Lord is Order; and by a true conſequence, how hateſull Tumult and Confuſion is, either in Church or Common-wealth.

3. In this Order ſee and obſerve well, how they that came after, ſtill followed the ſteps of them that went before; not hunting after new Wayes, and pleasing themselves in new Pathes.

Philip.3.16,17. The Apostle giveth us all the like counsell, when he saith: Let us proceed by one rule, that we may minde one thing. And againe in the next verse: Brethren be followers of me, and looke on them which walke so as ye have us for an example. An advice, I say, ever worthy following. Nihil enim adeo perturbat Ecclesiæ statum, quam cum homines novam rationem administrationis Ecclesiæ comminiscuntur; For nothing more troubleth the state of Gods Church, than when men will invent new formes of Government in the same. Such sticklers and stirrers God make quiet, by giving them true wisdome to discerne the hurt they doe often: and often they make me remember Saint Augustine his speech of a like sort of troublers, Flagitant audientiam, cum agere debeant pœnitentiam; they cry out for hearing, hearing, when they should from their soules repent, repent, for their most hurtfull course.

But should we follow the foot-steps of them that have gone before us? This fitteth the Papist well, who singeth this song in every place, We will doe as our fore-fathers did, &c. This wise speech hath been often answered, and therefore I need not be long in it now. It was the speech of the froward Jewes, complained of by Ieremie in his foure and fourtieth Chapter, The word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not heare it of thee: but wee will doe whatsoever goeth out of our own mouth; as to burne incense to the Queen of heaven, and to powre out Drink-offerings unto her: for so have our Fathers, our Kings, and our Princes done in the Cities of Iudah, and in the streets of Hierusalem, and then we had plenty of victuals, and were well, and felt no evill, &c. Verse 16. It was the speech of that Heretick Eutiches, in the Councell of Calcedon, Sic à Progenitoribus meis accipiens credidi, in hac fide genitus sum & consecratus Deo, & in ea opto mori; Thus have I received from mine Elders and Fore-fathers; in this Faith was I begotten and baptised, and in this Faith I desire to die: Yet that Faith no Faith, but a fearefull Heresie; namely, the confusion of the two Natures in Christ. It was the speech againe of Auxentius the Arrian Heretick: Quemadmodum ab infantia edoctus sum, ita credidi & credo; as I have been taught from my youth, so have I, and so doe I beleeve: And yet this beliefe was a damnable Heresie; to wit, that Christ was not God.

Ezekiel 20. To the Jewes God himselfe answered, In statutis patrum nolite ambulare; Walke not in the wayes of your fore-fathers; meaning in their evill wayes, not justifiable by the will and word of God. So to all the rest it hath been answered in their times, by such as were worthy Lights in Gods Church, and well knew the errour they were in, that so said. And in like sort may it bee answered to the Papists in our dayes, alledging their words, agreeing to both: Cyprian said, Non debemus attendere quid aliquis ante nos faciendum putaverit, sed quid qui ante omnes est Christus prior fecerit; Cyprian. lib. 2. Epist. 3. We must not regard what any before us thought fit to be done, but what he that was before all, Christ Iesus, did. And when Cresconius the Heretick said to Augustine, Our Fathers received this of their Fathers: Saint Augustine answered, Very true; sed errantes, ab errantibus; but deceived men, of deceived men before them: As the Iewes received it from their Fathers, and they from their Fathers, That the Disciples stole Christ out of the Sepulchre, and he did not rise againe. Again, Clemens; Lib. Recognit. Alii dicunt impium est si non colemus ea quæ nobis tradita sunt à patribus nostris, & religionem prævaricamur à majoribus datam: sed hac ratione, si cujus pater latro fuerit aut leno, à patribus sibi traditam consuetudinem mutare non debet, nec ad meliorem viam à paternis erroribus revocari; Some say, it is a wicked thing if we reverence not those things which have been delivered to us from our fore-fathers, but finde fault with the religion which they left unto us: By which reason, if it should be allowed, he that had a misse-living father, as a Theese or Baude, or such like, must not change the course used by his father, nor bee drawne away from his fathers errors. S. Paul, we well know, was the son of a Pharisee, and brought up by Gamaliel, a learned and wise Pharisie; yet when Truth appeared to him, he pleaded not either his birth or education in that error, but forsooke all former mistakings, and cheerefully not only beleeved Truth, but painfully and faithfully taught it to others.

Let no man therefore abuse either this example, in our Chapter, of the Iewes, following those that marched before them; or their fore-fathers Ignorances, their Birth, their Baptisme, or the like: but know, that it might have been the answer of a true Divine, that Heathen Cato gave in this point: Optimum quidem est Majorum vestigia sequi si rectè præcesserunt; It is very good to follow the steps of our fore-fathers, if they have gone rightly before us. Such was the marching of the first Tribe that removed; and therefore the next well followed him, and so the rest. Such are Governments too much troubled in our dayes, like to the first March, right, holy, lawfull, godly, and good, as may ever be justified against all gain-sayers, and therefore should be insisted in, and not swarved from by hatefull innovations.

The third Part.

THe third point of this Chapter was ſaid to be the departing of Iethro, Moſes father in law. And now it followeth in order, *verſ.*29. After, Moſes ſaid unto Hobab, the ſon of Revel the Midianite, the father in law of Moſes, &c. Some thinke, that Revel, Iethro, Hobab and Keni, were all one. Conferre you theſe places together, noted in your Bibles margent: for uſe to our edification is that which I ayme at. Firſt note in Moſes the nature of ſuch as are truly religious; they are ever thankfull, to their power, for benefits and kindneſſe received, and ever deſirous to doe good to them againe, from whom they have ſo received. Hobab had with his company and counſell been a great comfort; and he knowing thoſe parts where they were, might ſtill bee ſo unto them, if he would ſtay, even a Guide, or as Eyes, *verſ.*31. And therefore Moſes much deſireth, that he would abide to be partaker of that mercy that God would ſhew unto them. Thankfulneſſe pleaſeth God and Man, and the contrary hath ever a black marke.

Verſe 29.

Rather Hobab was Iethro his ſonne, which Iethro was called Reuel and Keni. Quod oculi præſtant corporibus, id ſapientum conſilia.

2. Another reaſon why Moſes was ſo earneſt with Hobab to ſtay, is thought to have beene, that he might keep him in the true ſervice & worſhip of God, whereunto he was now joyned; from which haply he might fall, if he departed; mans nature being wonderfull fraile this way, and apt to follow wayes deviſed by it ſelfe. Which if it were ſo, then doe we ſee another property of a truly religious heart, namely, not only to be carefull to bring others to the knowledge and profeſſion of the Truth, but alſo to continue them conſtant and ſtable in the ſame to their end. Agreeable to thoſe words of Paul to King Agrippa, I deſire, that not onely thou, but all that heare me this day, were not almoſt, but altogether, ſuch as I am, except theſe bands.

Reade Exodus 18.11.

Act.26.29.

3. Wheu Moſes ſeeketh to ſtay him, that he might be a Guide and Eyes unto them, God having promiſed that he would be their Guide, you ſee how Gods government taketh not away the uſe of meanes, but they may both ſtand well ever together. Againe, you ſee how profitable in Government helpers are, and how Moſes, ſo excellent a man, diſdaineth it not, but moſt earneſtly ſeeketh it: And therefore let no man be wiſe in his owne eyes.

Ioyne this to the firſt note.

4. And he anſwered, I will not goe, but will depart to mine owne Countrey, and to my Kindred. Behold here the heart a good man hath ever to his Countrey: Hee loveth it, hee liketh it, although worſe peradventure than other Countries; and he deſireth to ſee it, to returne to it, and to live in it.

Verſ. 30.

What hearts then have ſuch Monſters, as care not what ruine and deſtruction they bring upon their native Countrey, ſo they may have their owne will, and feed the fancy of them whom they ſhould abhorre? Who theſe be in our dayes is eaſily knowne, both by ſundry deviſed Treaſons, and that late thrice-damnable Powder-Treaſon, or Vault-Treaſon: What name might it have anſwerable to the iniquity of it? The Heathen Poet could ſay:

Neſcio qua natale ſolum dulcedine cunctos
Ducit & immemores non ſinit eſſe ſui.

Ovid.

I am not able to tell the ſweetneſſe wherewith a mans Countrey draweth him, and giveth him not leave to forget her.

The like ſaid Euripides: Neceſſe eſt Patriam amare omnes, quicunq; aliter dicit, ſermonibus gaudet, ſed animum illic habet; It is neceſſary that all men ſhould love their Countrey; and whoſoever ſaith otherwiſe, he loveth to talke, but his minde is there.

In Phœniſſis.

The like have all honeſt and good men both ſaid and thought, thinking the very ſmoke of their owne Countrey ſweet, till theſe later dayes; wherein that curſed brood of Jeſuites hath ſprung up and infected even the Ayre, with their Treaſons and Treacheries againſt God, King, Countrey, and all true Chriſtian blood, &c.

5. Moſes prayeth him againe, ver. 31. And then he yeelded, as is thought; becauſe in the next verſe it followeth, So they departed from the Mount of the Lord, &c. Whereupon this note is gathered, how conſtant and unwearied a good man ſhould be; perſwading unto good, eſpecially the Miniſters of Gods word; not giving over for one or two denials, but remembring the words of Paul unto Timothy: Be inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon: For even the ſoft water pierceth the hard ſtone by often falling upon it.

And they dwelt, See *Iud.*1.16.

6. There may ſeeme ſome contrariety in the words, *ver.*33. to that which was ſaid *v.*21. for in the one place it is ſaid, The Standards of the Hoſts of Iudah and Ruben, with the Gerſhonites and Merarites: and in the other place it is ſaid, The Ark went before. But there is no contrariety at all; the one ſpeaking of Marching, and the other of Reſting. When they marched, thoſe went before, and the Coathites with the Arke after: But when they ſtayed, then the Ark went before, and was firſt placed; after which, the Tribes pitched about it, every one in his place and order.

The fourth part.

Verſ.35. Signum pro ſignato. Gen.17.13. Exod.12.11. Num.6. Mat.13.eſt verbum. 1 Cor.10 the Rocke was. Titus 3.Lavacrum. Zach.2.Qui tangit vos,&c. Pſalme 7. Pſal.68. Pſal.132. Pſal.127.

THe laſt part remaineth; which is, of the words uſed by Moſes when they removed, and when they reſted: namely, when the Arke removed and went forward, Moſes ſaid, Riſe up Lord,and let thine enemies be ſcattered,and let them that hate thee, flie before thee. And when it reſted,he ſaid, Returne O Lord,unto the many thouſands of Iſrael. The firſt is,as if hee had ſaid, O gracious God,which haſt promiſed to be preſent with us,and given this Ark for an outward ſigne and aſſurance thereof, I beſeech thee go before us, ſcattering and cauſing to flye all thoſe thine enemies, which would hinder us to enter into the land of Canaan; calling them Gods enemies as well as theirs, in regard of the Covenant betwixt God and them; it being the manner of Leagues and Covenants to have common friends and common enemies: And as then into that earthly Canaan, ſo are they ſtill Gods enemies that will hinder his children in their way to the heavenly Canaan, &c. The ſecond part is plaine: O Lord, now thou haſt been merciſull, and gone before us, deſtroying our enemies,as we prayed, heare us againe,and returne to our Tents, granting us thy ſervants peace and reſt. Which Prayer confirmed and wrought comfort, that in going and reſting, ſtill God was with them; as alſo hath left to us an example, ever in all our wayes to commend our ſelves to God for happy ſucceſſe: For except the Lord keep the City, &c.

CHAP. XI.

The generall heads of this Chapter may be three:

The peoples murmuring.
Moſes expoſtulation with God.
The appointment of ſeventy Elders more to help him.

1. THere are two murmurings mentioned, as you may ſee, in this Chapter: The one,in the firſt verſe; the other, in the fourth verſe, and thoſe that follow. But ſome make them all one, alledging for that purpoſe the 78. Pſal. Others, whom I rather follow for perſpicuity, make them two ſeverall Murmurings, and ariſing from two ſeverall cauſes: The firſt, from wearineſſe and irkſomeneſſe of their journey. Which being ſo,we plainly ſee, how fleſh flyeth the labours and toyles that muſt be endured, as God ſhall pleaſe to impoſe them, in our ſpirituall travell towards the Land of our heavenly Canaan,and ſaith,as Bernard noteth, Quod poſſum, poſſum; I can doe no more than I can doe. But this may not be: Through many Tribulations we muſt enter into the Kingdome of God; and they muſt be borne: For the afflictions of this world are not worthy the joy that ſhall be revealed,that is,beſtowed upon them that patiently endure the good pleaſure of their ever-living and ever-loving God. Wherefore, even as darts hitting upon an hard ſubſtance,rebound back and pierce not; ſo let our hearts bee ſtrengthened in Faith, Hope, and Love of eternall comfort, as what croſſe ſoever ſeeketh to ſtrike,it may rebound back, without any hurt or hinderance to us, in our commanded obedience and appointed pilgrimage in this life.

Verſe 1. 2. And the Lord heard this murmuring,and his wrath was kindled,and the fire of the Lord burnt among them,and conſumed the uttermoſt part of the Hoſt. I have often ſpoken of this curſed ſinne of Murmuring againſt God, ſo that I need not ſtill to ſtand upon it. Note the puniſhment here and ever, and conclude in your heart, That great puniſhment is ever a ſure argument of great ſin, when the puniſhment is for Sinne, and not for Exerciſe and Triall,as ſometimes it is. Note alſo,that if any thing be amiſſe with us,and not as we deſire, Murmuring is not the way to amend it,but to make it worſe,provoking the Lord againſt us in a fearefull manner: But by humble prayer and ſupplication let us repaire to God, and as ſhall be good for us, he will eaſe us.

3. Obſerve here how it is called the Fire of the Lord,either becauſe it came immediatly from heaven by lightning or ſome other way,through Gods handy will. That they were puniſhed with fire, was moſt fit,ſeeing their tongues were ſo fiery. And in that it is called Gods Fire,let us learne what (religiouſly) to thinke of Fires, either of Townes or Houſes;for we uſually caſt our eyes but upon ſecond cauſes. But here we ſee,that God himſelfe, as his good pleaſure ſhall be, cauſeth theſe Fires for the puniſhment of mans ingratitude, or other ſinnes. Looke wee therefore more at him, without whoſe will not a haire of our heads can fall to the ground. And let not them that eſcape this puniſhment, judge them, upon whom it falleth, as greater ſinners than themſelves; but let all make uſe unto repentance: leſt, if wee doe not, the wrath of God fall upon all.

4. Then the people cryed to Moſes, Moſes to the Lord, and ſo the fire was quenched. See, ſee the common guiſe of the world, when calamity and trouble light upon men, then their Miniſter is thought upon and ſought unto, that he would pray for the ſtay of that woe, and helpe them by any meanes; but in proſperity who ſo contemned, who ſo abuſed, who ſo little regarded as Gods Miniſter? Shall we ſee this and know this, and not be aſhamed to be in the number of them that doe this? God forbid. Let him ever be loved of us, whom the Lord hath appointed to us for our comfort in all diſtreſſes. Great are the mercies that God ſheweth to a people for the ſtrong cryes of a faithfull zealous Paſtor: for they are his charge whom God hath willed him to love and to pray for. And when he doth it indeed heartily and earneſtly, the Lord joyeth in it exceedingly, heareth him with favour, and granteth his requeſt in great mercy, as may be good to him and that people. A father praying for his childe, pleaſeth God and is heard. This ſpirituall Father more, and therefore uſe him; Let me alone, ſaith God to Moſes, that I may deſtroy them: noting that he was a ſtay to him, and ſo ſurely is a faithfull Paſtor to avert many heavy things from us. Count them therefore worthy of ſingular love for their workes ſake, and remember it often with a religious heart, He that honoreth you, honoreth me, and he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me. By the bleſſing of the righteous the City is exalted, but it is ſubverted by the mouth of the wicked. It is moſt true in a godly Paſtor, and the ſecond part as true, when the people are deſpiſers & wrongers of their Miniſters. Behold, ſaith God to Lot, I have received thy requeſt alſo concerning this thing, that I will not overthrow this City for which thou haſt ſpoken. Haſt thee therefore and ſave thee there, for I can do nothing till thou be come thither. O ſweet place, never, never to be forgotten: ſuch an eare ſhall God ever have to his faithfull ſervant, praying for his people, and of ſuch prevailing power ſhall a diligent, zealous and holy Miniſter be with his God. Be aſſured of it as it may be good; for God is the ſame yeſterday and to day, and for ever. Grieve not the ſoule then of your Watchman, quench not his ſpirit, coole not his love, hinder not his zeale, for this cannot be profitable for you. But rather quicken him with your love, kindle the fire of prayer in him with your zeale, and make it flame out in him ever for you, by your religious heart to God, and kinde reſpect to him in his miniſtery. So ſhall God take comfort in both, and from the riches of his goodneſſe, powre bleſſings and mercies upon all.

Verſe 2.

Prov. 11. 11.

Gen. 19. 21.

5. And he called the name of that place Taberah, or burning. So continuing a remembrance of the Lords great workes, and ſo teaching all people to do the like: For whatſoever things are written, they are written for our learning, ſaith the Apoſtle. And againe, Theſe things came unto them for enſamples, and were written to admoniſh us, upon whom the ends of the world are come: yea, even in this particular theſe things are our enſamples, to the intent that we ſhould not luſt after evill things, as they luſted, neither Murmure, as ſome of them murmured, and were deſtroyed of the Deſtroyer. Be it mercy, be it judgement; note it upon the Booke of your heart, and forget it not; for remembrance will profit ever much, and forgetfulneſſe is dangerous and hurtfull. Praiſe the Lord therefore, O my ſoule, ſaith that worthy Prophet, and forget not (forget not I ſay againe) all his benefits. This point hath been often noted before, and yet never can bee noted too often. Will you keep a day booke of your owne actions, and not of Gods workes? O take heed and be inſtructed!

Verſe 3.
Rom. 15.
1 Cor. 10. 11.

Verſe 6. & 8.
Verſe 10.

Pſal. 103.

6. And a number of people that was among them, fell a luſting and turned away, and the children of Iſrael alſo wept and ſaid, Who ſhall give us fleſh to eate? This is the ſecond murmuring for fleſh, wherein we ſee it true in ſinne that is ſaid of Nature, Naturam expellas licet furca tamen uſque recurrit: Expell Nature with a forke, and it will returne: ſo will ſinne, for no ſooner is one Murmuring ended, but another beginnes. Obſta principiis, Stay beginnings, for then is ſinne weakeſt, and may beſt be ſnubbed and overcome. Let it enter in at the doore, and get a little footing, it will foyle us, and we ſhall hardly get it out againe. Firſt will enter a bare Cogitation, then a vehement Imagination; after that, a wicked Delectation; and laſtly, a killing and damning Conſent, if God recover us not. Wherefore, Solomon wiſely biddeth not looke on the colour of the wine. Iob will make a covenant with his eyes, and not looke on a woman. All which is nothing but preventing ſinne at the beginning, before it proceed to a ſtrength.

Verſe 4.

Nuda cogitatio = vehemens imaginatio, impia delectatio, peſsima aſſentio.

7. Obſerve ſtill the bewitching force of evill company: for the Iſraelites were ſet on by the others that fell a luſting, which were of thoſe ſtrangers that came out of Ægypt with them; therefore it is ſaid, The children of Iſrael alſo luſted. The Others put oyle in the Lamp, and they burned with them for company. Bleſſed, bleſſed therefore indeed is he that hath not walked in the counſell of the ungodly, nor ſtood in the way of ſinners, nor ſit in the ſeat of the ſcornfull.

Qui cum claudo habitat claudicare diſcit. Grex totus in agris unius ſcabie cadit.
Pſal. 1.

8. See the wantonneſſe and delicacy of ſinfull fleſh, it muſt have this, it muſt have that, to pamper it and feed it in pleaſure. What may be had is loathed, and what cannot bee had, that, that is longed for, and nothing more than that. But very wiſely doth the Heathen Ariſtotle adviſe all men to looke upon pleaſures when they go, not when they come: for when they come with their faces towards us, they deceive us with a faire flattering ſhew; but when they goe and turne their backes, then commeth repentance, woe and griefe, not a little, many times.

Prov.14.13. Iuſt as the Spirit of God ſaith by the mouth of Solomon: Even in laughing the heart is ſorowfull, and the end of that mirth is heavineſſe; that is, the allurement unto ſin ſeemeth ſweet, but the end thereof is deſtruction. Wanton pleaſure is like the fire or flame of the Candle, which ſhining bright delighteth a childe, but when he hath put his finger into it, then it burneth, and the childe cryeth. Senſim dolor ſerpit, ſed occidit furtim; voluptas repit, ſed omnem virtutis amorem tollit. By little and little groweth griefe, but in the end it killeth; ſo ſtealingly pleaſure creepeth upon us, but in the end overthroweth all love of vertue: Whereupon Horace the Poet wiſely inferreth:

Vis rectè vivere? Quis non?
Si virtus hoc una poteſt dare,
Fortis, amiſſis hoc age delicijs.

Wilt thou live in a right faſhion? Who would not? Then if vertue only can grant this to thee, ſtout and ſtrong, tend this, and omit pleaſures. For they that will well defend a City, doe not onely wateh what foes be without, but as warily they obſerve that there be no traytors within, So men and women that love vertue, they looke to the gates, which are the outward ſenſes, and they looke within, to the inward affections, In illis ne quaſi per portas ingrediantur mala, in his ne quaſi tædis accenſis ſequantur incendia: Leſt by the one, as by wickets evils enter, and leſt by the other, as by torches lighted, fires and flames doe follow: The Epicure ſaid to himſelfe, Ede, bibe, lude, poſt mortem nulla voluptas: Eate, drinke, play, for there is no pleaſure after death. But well doth the Poet, before mentioned, in an Epiſtle taxe him, ſaying, Luſiſti ſatis, inquit, ediſti ſatis atq; bibiſti, tempus abire tibi eſt, &c. Thou haſt played enough, thou haſt eaten enough and drunke, it is time for thee now to goe hence. As if he had ſaid; part thou muſt in time with all thy pleaſures and be gone, therefore thinke of it ere it bee too late. Sardanapalas is ſaid to have cauſed to be written on his Grave to this effect: What I did eate, that I had; and what I left, that I loſt: which Cicero juſtly reprehendeth, ſaying; What elſe ſhould a man have written upon an Oxe his Grave? Voluptas omnes ſenſus inficit; Pleaſure infecteth and poyſoneth all our ſenſes, being Compta ſed fallax, venuſta ſed inſidioſa meretrix: A trim, but a deceiving Harlot, voce, vultu, & veſte fallens, deceiving us by her voice, by her looke, and by her attire, that is, every way. He that will be chaſte, let him gaze upon Helen, not looke upon naked Diana, naked Berſabe, naked Suſanna: Nam oculus in his vulneravit animum, for in theſe the eye wounded the minde. The manners of ours are more diſſolute than ever. Quot gula, quot venter, quot turpis libido perdidit? How many hath gluttony and the belly, how many hath filthy luſt deſtroyed? Nullos homines iſtis temporibus in Smaragdos, id eſt, in caſtitatis lapides mutatos ſcio: No men in theſe dayes are changed into Smaradgs, that is, into chaſt ſtones. Gulæ comes putredo eſt, ebrietatis oblivio, veneris ignominia. Moliuſcule tamen & delicate vivimus: The companion of gluttony is rottenneſſe; the companion of drunkenneſſe is ſottiſhneſſe and oblivion; the companion of luſt and licentiouſneſſe, is ignominy and ſhame: and yet wee live wantonly and deliciouſly.

Vino forma perit, vino corrumpitur ætas,
Vino ſæpe ſuum neſcit amica virum.

With wine beauty and feature doth decay, with wine thy yeares are ſhortned, and with wine many a woman knoweth not her husbands bed. Philoxenus was one ſo beſotted with pleaſure and exceſſe, that he wiſhed his neck as long as a Cranes neck, that his meate and drink might be the longer in going downe, and ſo his pleaſure the more. May we not feare ſuch Monſters in our dayes, when as no lawes deviſed by mans wit can reſtraine the exceſſe of theſe times? Such as God hath marked to a bliſſefull end, will take heed, and uſe all good remedies againſt this temptation they can. The Syrenes are ſaid to live in the greene medowes, and by them ever a heape of dead mens bones, noting the end of exceſſive pleaſure, death, deſtruction, and a wofull end. They are ſaid to ſing ſo ſweetly, that ſuch as heare them are turned into beaſts: ſtill noting the end of delicacy and voluptuouſneſſe. But what did Vliſſes for himſelfe and his friends; he is ſaid to have ſtopped his owne eares with wax, that he could not heare them, and to have tyed his aſſociats to the Maſt of the ſhip, noting a wiſe prevention by avoiding the occaſion; and by tying faſt fancy and affection to the Maſt of reaſon and wiſdome. Si ſit animus propenſior ad libidinem, jejunium; ſi ſit præceps & effrenis, adhibe conſilium: ſi ſit præcipitantior, adhibe flagellum: If thy minde be given to luſt, uſe faſting; if it be heady and unruly, apply counſell; and if ſtill it remaine more ſtubborne, adde a whip, ſaith one that wiſhed men remedy againſt this foule temptation. Thus if we doe heare what wiſe Seneca ſaith, Bis vincit qui ſeipſum vincit. Thus if he will not do, heare him againe; Bis interimitur qui ſuis armis perit: Twice doth he conquer, that conquereth himſelf, and twice may he be ſaid to periſh, that periſheth with his own weapons. As a ſhip, if it be overladen ſinketh, & if it be too light, is toſſed dãgerouſly with every puffe:

puffe: ſo the body, if we afflict it too much, we hurt it; and if we pamper it too much, wee deſtroy it. Thinke of theſe things with a religious feeling, and they ſhall bee as wholeſome remedies wiſely applyed againſt the alluring pleaſures of this enticing world. They ſhall ſtrengthen us, and ſtay us that wee runne not with theſe Iſraelites and the reſt into ſuch luſtings and longings, ſuch wiſhings and willings for pampering pleaſures to delight the fleſh, provoking the Lord againſt the body and ſoule, as they did. Sweet meate had ſowre ſawce, and wanton will wrought wringing woe to them and theirs. O! let their example profit us, and their puniſhment like Worme-wood and Gaule, be laid upon the breſts of thoſe worldly pleaſures, to wain us from ſucking ſo greedily on them: forewarned forearmed, if God be with us. It is the Fooles part to ſay, Had I wiſt.

9 But may not a good childe of God either in ſickneſſe or in health, luſt for ſome meate more than another, without offending God? Yes indeed, for it is not the thing, but the manner here that ſo much offended God, not the luſting I ſay againe, but the faſhion and circumſtances of it. To wit, their preſumptuous croſſing the Lords will when he appointed them Manna from heaven to bee their meat; for what hee would, they would not, and this was not fit. Againe, this was not coldly done of them, but with heate and vehemency giving as it were the reines to their luſt, let God thinke what he would. Here was ingratitude for the Lords gracious care of them, and moſt ungratefull ſpeeches. Here was preferring Onions and Leeks, and Garlicke, and ſuch meane meate before the Lords bounty and mercy from heaven, feeding them as never people was fed, with ſuch other circumſtances of very ſinfull and ill behaviour. This is that offended God, which if we make uſe of we ſhall doe well, for ſurely, though not altogether in like ſort, yet much after this faſhion, it is to be feared, we provoke the Lord. Such meate as God ſendeth us, being farre better than we deſerve, we cannot eate, but preferre that which is farre worſe before it, not without ſome proud and unthankfull check to Gods gracious providence and mercy for us, and to us, giving us that which thouſands as dearely bought with his Sonnes blood, as we, and ſerving more than we, doe want. And this not in any weakneſſe of nature, acknowledging gratefully the goodneſſe of God ſet before us, but in very wantonneſſe and delicacie, not once ſeeing or thinking of the bounty of God, in giving us that we have. This if we doe, it cannot bee excuſed, but muſt needs bee to God very diſpleaſing, and to us very dangerous. Beſides meate, how doe many in other things tempt the Lord: as, if God in mercy and moſt gracious care of them, that they may bee ſaved, and kept from the infections of the world, have given them a learned and painfull Paſtor, that ſpendeth the Sabbath in holy exerciſes of his Miniſtery, forenoone and afternoone, with the Elders, with the children and ſervants. How doth this diſlike many, and how luſt they for worſe things, breaking out in wicked ſpeech: O that wee might have piping and dancing, quaffings and drinkings, Church-ales and Wakes, with ſuch like, as other Pariſhes have! Wee are cloyed with this Manna, give us mirth, and let them have Manna that like it, &c. Doe not ſhrinke to thinke what will bee the end of this murmuring, and the puniſhment of this luſting. Certainly it is fearefull, and I pray God Chriſtian people may have the feeling of it before it bee too late.

So Papiſts talk of old dayes, and preferre that bondage before the Goſpell.

So others wearied with wholſome Doctrine, deſire novelties and new Teachers, cloyed with the old. 2 Tim 4. Itching eares, &c.

Ier. 4.

10 The deſcription of Manna following in the next Verſes: I ſhall not need to ſtand on, but referre you to that which hath beene ſaid in Exodus. It was like Coriander-ſeed, and his colour like the colour of Bdelium, which is a white pearle or precious ſtone, the taſte like the taſte of freſh Oyle, and it fell downe in the night with the dew. A notable figure of Chriſt, Iohn 6. 32. and of the Word of God, who feeds as Manna, refreſhes as dew, and yet loathed by ſinfull man as Manna was. Remember you may the words in the Booke of Wiſdome concerning this: Thou diddeſt feed thine owne people with Angels food, and ſent them bread ready from heaven without their labour, which had abundance of all pleaſures in it, and was meat for all taſtes: for thy ſuſtenance declared thy ſweetneſſe unto thy children, which ſerved to the appetite of him that tooke it, and was meete to that, that every man would, &c.

Verſ. 7. &c. Exod. 16.

Vt Ros officio ſuadus in terra aſcendit, ſic Chriſtus. Wiſd. 16. 20.

The ſecond Part.

1 THis ſinfull murmuring breaking thus out, the people weeping throughout their families, every man in the doore of his Tent, the wrath of the Lord was grievouſly kindled, and Moſes alſo hearing it, was grieved, beginning his expoſtulation with God, which is the ſecond part of this Chapter, in this ſort; Wherefore haſt thou vexed thy Servant? and why have I not found favour in thy ſight, ſeeing thou haſt put the charge of this thy people upon me? Have I conceived all this people? Or have I begotten them, that thou ſhouldeſt ſay unto mee, Carry them in thy boſome (as a Nurſe beareth the ſucking child) unto the Land, for the which thou ſwareſt unto their Fathers? Where ſhould I have fleſh to give unto all this people? for they weep unto me ſaying; Give us fleſh to eate. I am not able to beare all this people alone, for it is too heavy for me. Therefore if thou deale thus with me, I pray thee, if I have found favour in thy ſight, kill mee, that I behold not my miſery.

Verſe 10. This was the ſecond murmuring for fleſh: Exod. 16. the other.

Verſe 11, &c

Can

Can you reade a more vehement expoſtulation of a man with his God? Yet was Moſes a very meeke man, and no way apt to ſtirring paſſions, as others of another temper were. Greater therefore muſt this thing needs be that moveth ſo milde a man ſo greatly. Let us looke into it with a religious heart, and make ſome uſe of it to our good, as the Lord ſhall ſtrengthen.

Firſt, conſider how a froward and perverſe people pierce the heart of a worthy Governour, making him ſpeake in this vehement manner to his God: Little, little, doe they know the tender bowels that are in ſuch Governors towards them, day and night caring for their good, and finding the very ſtrings of their hearts twitched when doing amiſſe, they runne into perill and danger of the Lords conſuming wrath and anger againſt them. Did they, it were to be hoped they would looke to their owne wayes better, and value their Governours at an higher rate. What is ſaid of the Magiſtrate, may be likewiſe ſaid of the faithfull Miniſter; and therefore over and over the Lord cryeth for love and reverence towards both; Pray for Kings and Princes, honour the King, and thinke not an evill thought againſt him, no, not in thy ſecret Chamber, for if thou doeſt, the Birds of the ayre ſhall reveale it, &c. Then for the Miniſters; Obey them that have the overſight of you, and ſubmit your ſelves, for they watch for your ſoules, as they that muſt give account, that they may doe it with joy, and not with griefe, for that is unprofitable for you.

Heb. 13. 17. Nihil bonus princeps à bono patre differt.

Secondly, ſee the affection I ſpeake of, expreſſed in this phraſe of carrying in his boſome. In his boſome, and in his bowels doth a religious Governour or Teacher carry the people committed to them.

Thirdly, obſerve the difficulties in government, when they make conſcience to doe their duties. O! they are many, and they are great, ſuch as make the ſaying true: He that knew what care belonged to a Crowne, would ſcarce take it up in his way. And for the faithfull Miniſter, let him follow with his difficulties alſo, notably deſcribed in the troubles of Paul, and daily felt by ſuch as deſire to make a good account in the great day.

The third part.

Verſ. 16. Vt lumen de lumine, & tamen nihil minus. Baptizati aut ordinati Sacerdoti aut Epiſcopi gratiam non minuit. Theodoret. Aug. de Trin. Lib. 5.

3 THen the Lord ſaid unto Moſes; Gather unto me ſeventy men, &c. A gracious God and moſt ſweet Father, is moved with the complaint and griefe of his ſervant, pittying and yeelding preſently helpers to beare this burthen with him that he may have more comfort. Who would not joy in ſo ſweet a Judge, no ſooner hearing, but helping his oppreſſed ſervant with a froward charge? Be we faithfull then in our places ever: And if wee be too weake for them, ſome way or other the Lord will helpe. Theſe ſeventy men he will have furniſhed with his Spirit, never placing any to doe a duty to whom hee giveth not ſome meaſure of ability to doe the ſame: But when it is ſaid, hee will take off the Spirit which is upon Moſes, and put upon them, we may not thinke he leſſened his grace to Moſes: but the meaning is, I will give to them of the ſame Spirit a portion, whereof I have diſtributed to him ſo great a meaſure; Thine I will not diminiſh, and yet they ſhall have what ſhall be fit.

Verſ. 18, &c.

4 Furthermore, thou ſhalt ſay unto the people, bee ſanctified againſt to morrow, and you ſhall eate fleſh, &c. O ſweet God! Moſes hee will comfort by adding helpers unto him, and the people alſo he will ſatisfie in giving them fleſh which they ſo luſted for, and that not ordinary fleſh, nor groſſe meate, as wee ſay, Shambles meate, but dainty Quailes, which to this day are accounted dainties. And not for a meale or two, or a day or two, but a whole moneth together, &c. How ſheweth this the truth of that Pſalme which after in his time was made. All the Beaſts of the Forreſt are mine, and ſo are the Cattell upon a thouſand hils. I know all the Fowles upon the Mountaines, and the wild beaſts of the fields are in my ſight. If I be hungry, I will not tell thee, for the whole world is mine, and all that is therein. Nay, how ſheweth this, that whatſoever hee will, that can hee doe both in heaven and earth; and therefore bleſſed is the man that putteth his truſt in him.

Pſa. 50.

Mat. 6. 25. Remember what you read in the holy Goſpell, Be not carefull for this life what you ſhall eat, &c. Behold, the Fowles of the heaven, for they ſow not, neither reape, neither carry into the Barnes, yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? what dearth ſo great, what penury ſo pinching, wherein the Lord cannot helpe either ordinarily or extraordinarily? Can hee thus glut his great Hoaſt with daintie Quailes, and can hee not ſend you and yours bread? Feare not, diſtruſt not, but cleave unto him faſt, and even paſt hope if the caſe ſhould be ſuch, yet under hope beleeve all the Scriptures, and that he will never leave you ſuccourleſſe, that openeth his hand & filleth all things with plenteouſneſſe. Only conſider, that many wayes he ever exerciſeth the faith of his children and their patience, whoſe duty is to beare with contentment what he ſendeth, praying to him to remember mercy, and to lay no more upon us than wee are able to beare, as he hath promiſed, uſe ſuch means as you can by juſt and honeſt labour, or otherwiſe; and be aſſured, in goodneſſe he will ſtep in when he ſeeth time. He helped not the Widowes till the laſt caſt, as we ſay; the one, when the meale and the oyle were even ſpent; the other, when the Creditors were come to take her Children, and yet hee helped, and ever will helpe, yea, as he is God, he will helpe, for he is the ſame for ever, and no reſpecter of perſons; feare not I ſay againe in any diſtreſſe, but like a comfortable childe of God, ſay with the Pſalme; In God put I my truſt, how ſay you then to my ſoule, that ſhe ſhall flie like a Bird unto the Mountaines.

1 Cor. 10.

is

Verſ. 21.

5 And Moſes ſaid, ſixe hndred thouſand foot-men are there of the people, among whom I am, and thou ſaiſt, I will give them fleſh, that they may eate a month long. Shall the Sheep and the Beeves be ſlaine for them to finde them? And the Lord ſaid to Moſes, is the Lords hand ſhortned? Thou ſhalt ſee now whether my word ſhall come to paſſe unto thee, or no. The former note incouraged to faith, hope, and comfort: but ſee, ſee now in this great man Moſes, what a hard thing it is for fleſh and blood to take hold of aſſurance in diſtreſſe and want. Who would have thought that ſuch a man would have ſtaggered when God had once ſaid the word: What ſaith the Goſpell? With man many things may be impoſſible, but with God nothing is, or ever ſhall be impoſſible, that he ſaith hee will doe, no not for a Camell to goe through the eye of a Needle. Yet this is ſinne that hangeth on, and preſſeth downe even in the beſt at times. Whereupon the prayer is moſt neceſſary for all; Lord increaſe our faith: But ſome are of opinion, Moſes here did not doubt, and they deviſe diſtinctions to helpe the matter withall. There may, ſay they, things be done of incredulity, as in that Prince or Captaine that ſaid; If God ſhould open the windowes of Heaven, the Prophets words could not come to paſſe. Againe, in the Apoſtle; Here are five Loaves and two fiſhes, but what are they among ſo many? with ſuch other examples: and things may be done in admiration, not doubting, but marvelling at the greatneſſe of the worke; and thus was it here in Moſes ſay they. Tremelius and Iunius have theſe words; Non ex diffidentia, ſed amplius cognoſcendi ſtudio: Moſes ſpake not thus of diffidence, but deſire to know more how this ſhould come to paſſe, as the bleſſed Virgin when ſhe ſaid; How may this be, ſeeing I know no man? But it is a great fault ever to excuſe the great men of God from all blemiſh: for in this world none but Jeſus Chriſt alone ſhall be perfect. And it hath bin the Lords great goodneſſe to leave us ſuch examples of the infirmities of great ones, that we might never deſpaire for our owne, neither put any confidence in man, in whom ſtill, ſtill is variableneſſe and change. Make we therefore right uſe of them for our comforts, not for preſumption to doe the like, and know that faire faces have often ſome little ſpots, &c. A happy wiſedome to uſe Scriptures well, &c.

2 King. 7. 2. See Pet. Martyr upon the place Iohn 6. Two hundred penny worth. Philip.

6 It followeth in your Chapter, how God performed both theſe, to wit, helpe for Moſes, and fleſh for the people. And touching the firſt, it is ſaid; Moſes aſſembled 70. of the Elders, and God came down in a Cloud and took off the ſpirit that was up upon him, and put it upon the 70. ancient men, &c. Which having beene ſpoken of before, let us here rather note what happened hereupon. Of the ſeventy that were about the Tabernacle, the Text ſaith; When the Spirit reſted upon them they propheſied, and did not ceaſe. And two more over above the ſeventy (for they were ſeventy two in all) remained in the hoaſt, and came unto the Tabernacle; the one called Eldad, the other Medad. Theſe two alſo propheſied in the Hoſt, the Spirit likewiſe reſting upon them. Wherein we may thinke why they went not with the others to the Tabernacle, and probably conceive; becauſe in modeſty and humility they thought themſelves not worthy to bee called to ſuch government as then was in ſpeech, and therefore they would as it were hide from the Lord, and flie from that honour. A thing not common in the world at theſe dayes. But what might the Lord meane in his counſell? Surely, becauſe all that great people could not conveniently goe up to heare the other 70. at the Tabernacle: therefore God would that two ſhould remaine in the Hoſt, and there propheſie, that ſo over all, the notice of this great worke might be ſpred, and all ſubmit themſelves to their authority, whom God had choſen and graced with his Spirit.

Verſ. 25. Papiſts would have ignorance Moſes light.

True then wee ſee, that when man purpoſeth one thing, God often purpoſeth another, and turneth the mans doings to his purpoſe; they flie, but God followeth; they will bee hid in humility of heart, and God will make them knowne even the more, that all men may love humilitie and modeſty, and flie ambition and pride. A young man in the Hoaſt heareth this, and ranne to tell of it; Ioſhua, Moſes ſervant, prayeth his maſter to forbid them. But Moſes ſaid unto him, envieſt thou for my ſake? Would God that all the Lords people were Prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them. Such an anſwer as would be written in our hearts with a Diamond, it is ſo Divine, it is ſo ſtrange to the courſe of the time we live in, where envy and malice ſinketh many worthy men with their great gifts. O! the bane of Church and Commonwealth, envy, emulation, canker and pride. They muſt not peepe out upon whom the Spirit reſteth, for feare our credits abate, and they be thought ſome body, where we deſire to be all, all, all; yea, and more than all, if we could tell how. But God ſeeth it, which in his bottomleſſe and incomprehenſible counſell ſuffered Ioſephs brethren to prevaile againſt him for a time, till the time, ſaith the Pſalme, that his cauſe was heard, &c. But in the end, he muſt be exalted whom God will exalt, and theſe proud prevailers ſhall come under, and bee diſcovered to all poſterity, to have dealt farre from Moſes example here, &c.

7 The ſecond, to wit, fleſh for them to eate: how God provided you ſee, Verſe 31. ſhewing his omnipotency, whereof I have ſpoken ſufficiently before.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

The generall heads of this Chapter are theſe:

The ſinne of Miriam and Aaron, Verſ. 1. to the 4.
The puniſhment of it by God, Verſ. 4. to the 11.
Their repentance, Verſe 11. to the 13.
Moſes prayer for pardon, Verſe 13.
Gods anſwer, Verſ. 14. &c.

In the ſinne wee may obſerve theſe things:

What it was. They ſpake againſt Moſes.
For what? For the woman he had maried.
What were they to Moſes? His owne Brother and Siſter.
What ſaid they? Hath the Lord ſpoken onely to him, &c?
What manner of man was Moſes? The meekeſt, &c.

TOuching the firſt point, to ſpeake againſt any good man, or good matter, is, and ever was a very great offence in the eyes of God. But to ſpeak againſt Moſes, the Magiſtrate and Ruler of the people, much worſe. Wee may firſt thinke of the generall, and after of the ſpeciall, when we come to the puniſhment of it. A buſie braine makes a pratling tongue, and an ill heart worketh by both; Of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeaketh, ſaith the God of truth: The good man out of the good treaſure of the heart, drawing good things; and the ill man out of the ill treaſure of the ſame, drawing ill things. A pratling tongue maketh a blacke ſoule, for Pſa.50.8,9,&c. the God of unitie and love did ever abhorre it. Thou haſt let thy mouth ſpeake wickednеſſe, ſaith the holy Spirit, and with thy tongue thou haſt ſet forth deceit. Thou ſateſt and ſpakeſt againſt thy brother, yea, and haſt ſlandered thine owne mothers ſonne. Theſe things haſt thou done and I held my tongue, and thou thoughteſt wickedly, that I am even ſuch a one as thy ſelfe: But I will reprove thee,
Pſa.69.2. and ſet before thee the things which thou haſt done. O conſider this ye that forget God, leſt I plucke you away, and there be none to deliver you. Againe, in another Pſalme, in the perſon of David, ſee the ſinne of it. They that ſit in the gate ſpeake againſt me, and the drunkards make ſongs upon me. Drunken heads, and drunken tongues, prittle prattle, and bibble babble, will never ſet a crowne upon our heads, when the Lord the righteous Iudge ſhall appeare to reckon with us.

Numb.14.37. Well may you againe remember here the ſtory following in this Booke, Chapter 14. of pratling tongues againſt the land which they had ſearched, whoſe hatefull ſinne herein the Lord juſtly puniſhed. For even thoſe men, ſaith the Text, that did bring up that vile ſlander upon the land, ſhall die by a plague before the Lord. Whereupon the Apoſtle Paul perſwadeth the 1 Cor.13.10. Corinthians to take heed of murmuring leſt they be deſtroyed by the deſtroyers, as theſe men were. Fearfull is that ſentence of the wiſe man, and it would be deeply conſidered; The man that is ac-
Eccleſ.23.15. cuſtomed to approbrious words, will never be reformed all dayes of his life. If never reformed, then aſſuredly damned for evermore. Such is the fruit of a tatling tongue, that will be ſpeaking againſt Moſes, doe and ſay what a man can to the contrary. When the Apoſtles did take the eares of Mat.12.2. corne and eate, by and by there were itching tongues that ſpake againſt them. So when they
Mat.15. eate with unwaſhen hands, &c. but the ſcarre and ſcratch of this buſineſſe remaineth upon them
Mat.26. to this day, and ſhall while the world endureth, that if we have grace we may take heed. Adde unto theſe that foule Iudas, who could not hold, when the bleſſed woman powred the oyntment upon his Maſter the Lord of life, our deare Saviour, but ſpake againſt it, and termed it waſte, ſaying; It might have beene ſold for ſo much money and given to the poore. But the Lord diſcovereth the filth of his heart (as he will ever doe in his due time of all tatlers) and telleth us this was not for any holy care that he had of the poore, but becauſe he was a theefe, and carryed the bagge. If Iudas then be a fit example to be followed; Uſe your tongue to ſpeake againſt good things, and abide the reward of it with him from a juſt God that ever hated it. Dulcedo amittitur infuſo amaro, Sweetneſſe is loſt if you powre in bitterneſſe to it. And certainly, if otherwiſe you have many ſweet qualities and vertues, if you have an ill tongue to ſpeak againſt Moſes, the bitterneſſe of it will marre them all. The little Bee hath but a little ſting, and therfore the wound is not mortall that ſhe can make; yet as little as it is it procureth uſually her death, if ſhee bee caught. So, ſo will your ſtinging tongue, aſſure your ſelf, kill you, although it little hurt him or her whom you have ſtung. The foule Frog lyeth all day in the mudde and myre; at night putting up the head and croking with a foule noiſe: and ſuch foule creatures are they ſaid to bee, that have croaking tongues againſt Moſes. Put a Swine into the ſweeteſt garden you can make, and and what will he doe? ſmell to the pleaſant Roſe, or any other delightfull flower there? No, but ſtraight he will fall to rooting, and with his foule mouth turne up both moore and mould of every good thing. Such foule Swine are they ſaid to be, that have foule tongues, ever paſſing by that which is good, and rooting up the good names of them, whoſe vertues, how ſweet ſoever to God and men, yet to them are ever hatefull. I will goe no further, but pray you to marke him that toppeth a Candle, and taketh not good heed, doth hee not uſually blacke his fingers, and ſometimes alſo burne them, although hee make the Candle more bright? So, ſo doth ſuch perſons as will be medling with their neighbours lives. Well may their pratling make them burne and ſhine more bright, whom they meddle withall; but their own fingers carry a mark, nay, their ſoules receive ſuch a blot as all the water in the Sea will not waſh off, but onely the ſaving blood of Chriſt Jeſus, upon repentance and amendment. Follow wee not then Miriam and Aaron in ſpeaking againſt Moſes, but pray for his grace to guide our tongues in a holy courſe, and ſo cleane tongues being the outward tokens of our cleane ſoules, our life ſhall bee godly, and our end happy.

2 The next point is, for what they ſpeake againſt Moſes. Your Chapter telleth you, becauſe of the woman of Æthiopia whom hee had maried, for hee had maried a woman of Æthiopia. Theodoret. Some make a queſtion whether this was not a ſecond wife. But ſince there is no mention made of Zipporahs death, this is not fit to thinke Moſes would have more wives than one at once, and that being now fourſcore yeares old, it is not like hee would marry againe any wife. The beſt opinion is, it was no other woman but even Zipporah his firſt wife called an Æthiopian, becauſe the Scripture uſeth under this name, to comprehend the Midianites: her Father Iethro (as you know) being Prieſt of Midian. Alſo becauſe it was more odious to call her ſo, and ill will Or Prince. ſpeaketh the worſt it can. What is then their quarrell to her? would they not have Moſes maried at all? That appeareth not, neither had they reaſon to wiſh it. Was ſhe not to be touched in credit and honeſty? No, God forbid that ſuch a man ſhould have groaned under ſuch a croſſe. She was not to be ſpotted or blotted that way. What then? Was ſhe curſt and ſhrewiſh? How many women want that fault when they be grieved, as ſhee was about the circumciſion of her ſonne? yet we ſee the Hony Bee is not deſpiſed, though ſhe have a little ſting, but both for their pleaſure & profit they are much deſired and regarded by all perſons, ſhift with the ſting as they may; yea, it is accounted a ſpeciall good hap to have the garden adorned with them, and ſafely may you walke among them, if you anger them not. But none of theſe things were the cauſe of this ſinne in Miriam and Aaron. It was becauſe ſhe was a ſtranger, and not a Jew borne, as they were. Bleſſed be God that never ſtraited himſelfe, but that either to Iob, or Iethro, or Zipporah, or any others he might extend his mercy; notwithſtanding, his peculiar election of the Jewes to bee his people. He might ever have mercy, on whom he would have mercy, and they ſhould not have grudged at his goodneſſe. But this is our corruption if the Lord leave us to our owne ſelves, and let us note it for our good. Marry then Moſes might, and this woman alſo at that time without any offence of God, the Law being after given concerning Mariage in their owne Tribes and people, which how it extended to the Levites you reade, &c. At this day alſo, bleſſed be God, mariage is free with all Nations, ſo it be in the Lord: and in, and of every nation and countrey, that man and woman accepted with God, that feareth him and worketh righteouſneſſe. But I ſay againe, ſo it be in the Lord, and with ſuch due and needfull conſiderations as in a matter ſo weighty, ſhould ever, and of all be reſpected. For in this thing perſons well adviſed, firſt and chiefly reſpect true religion, that therein they diſagree not, and be disjoyned, one following God, and the other Baal. For they remember that the firſt match that Almighty God made, they both drew one way, touching his holy worſhip: and therefore they will follow that preſident, and neither man nor woman, nor woman with man be conjoyned, when there is not a joyning herein.

Secondly, they remember the ſtrength of this poyſon, in the wiſeſt man that ever was, Salomon. Never was there ſuch an one before him, neither ſhall be ſuch an one after him, and yet wives of a contrary falſe religion turned his heart from God, to the example of all others, while the world endureth, that have no ſuch ſtrength as Salomon had.

Thirdly, they forgot not that fearfull deluge drawne from Gods wrath, againſt ſuch unequall mariages of the ſonnes of God with the daughters of men, and they feare to provoke God, to any ſuch, or other puniſhment due to a ſinfull neglect of the love of Gods true worſhip, to bee ſetled in the heart of ſuch, as they muſt lead their life with in mariage untill death.

Fourthly, the Apoſtles expreſſe words worke a conſcience, not onely a care to beware. Bee not unequally yoaked with the Infidels. For what fellowſhip hath righteouſneſſe with unrighteouſneſſe, and what communion hath light with darkneſſe? What concord hath Chriſt with Belial, or what part hath the Beleever with the Infidell? 2 Cor. 6. 14. 2 Epiſt. Ioh. 10.

Laſtly, the words of Saint Iohn; If there come any to you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not to houſe, neither bid him God ſpeed. For he that biddeth him God ſpeed, is partaker of his evill deeds. No mariage then can bee pleaſing to God with ſuch an one. Thus for the matter of Religion, Religion, that it ſhould be the ſame in man and wife, and not either divers or falſe, you plainly ſee.

A ſecond conſideration in mariage, muſt be conſanguinity and nearneſſe of blood, in which the Law of God muſt lie before our eyes, not to be violated for any fancy or cauſe whatſoever. Levit.18. For if thou doe thou art defiled, the land is defiled in which thou liveſt, it ſhall vomit thee out, ſaith the Lord, and thou ſhalt be cut off. By which fearefull words, judge of the Popes Holy Pardons and diſpenſations to marry directly contrary within degrees forbidden by the Lord. In the beginning it was lawfull to marry with nearneſſe, becauſe there were no others, but quanto antiquius compellente neceſſitate, tanto poſtea factum eſt damnabilius prohibente religione: The older it is neceſſity compelling, the more damnable it became after, religion forbidding it, ſaith S. Auguſtine. Yea, even of coſin-germans: the ſame Father ſaith, Factum licitum propter vicinitatẽ illiciti, horrebatur, & quod fiebat cum conſobrina pene cum ſorore fieri videbatur: That which was lawfull to be done, for a nearneſſe to that which might not be done, was abhorred, and what was committed with a coſin-german, was thought to bee committed almoſt with a Siſter. See the care of godly mindes in matter of marriage not to come neare the kindred of fleſh, much leſſe by a worſe copulation than mariage is.

Vxorem ducite ex æqualibus, ne ſi ex ditioribus duxeris, Dominos tibi pares non affines. Pittacus.

A third circumſtance in mariage to be carefully looked unto alſo, is equalitie in eſtate. For matching with thoſe that are too high; we get not affines, ſed dominos, alliances to love us, but ſo many Lords to domineere over us. Fearfull are the griefes that have hapned, and yet too oft doe happen by neglect of this point. Men by ſeeking wealth and riches, women by ſeeking to bee aloft, and to goe over the ſtile firſt; I touch no particulars; but happy they, who by other mens harmes can wiſely take heed.

Deianira apud Ovid.

Si qua voles aptè nubere, nube pari.

If thou wilt marry fitly and well, marry to thine equall.

Si dat oluſcula menſa minuſcula, pace quieta,
Ne pete grandia, lautaque prandia, lite repleta.

If thou haſt but a poore table with a meſſe of pottage in comfortable peace, deſire not great matters and dainty dinners full of ſtrife and variance.

Si lætantis imaginem teſtem tibi reddit ſpeculum, &c. Sic uxor qui jocante marito frontem contrahit, &c.

A fourth, that in nature and conditions, as neare as poſſible thou canſt, thy match and thou agree. For learne by the Looking-glaſſe, it muſt reſemble and ſhew truely the faſhion of him or her that looketh in it. If you laugh, and the face in the glaſſe lowre, will you ſay it is a true glaſſe? If you grieve, and that laugh, is the glaſſe good? So, ſo, and even ſo ſhould married couples, as true glaſſes one to the other, expreſſe the joy or griefe one of another, and not vary by any unfeeling difference one of anothers caſe. The ſhops of men afford no ſuch comfortable glaſſes, but the goodneſſe of a ſweet God can provide for man or woman, fearing him alike, nature to nature to rejoyce and ſuffer one with the other, as he ſhall appoint in this pilgrimage of life, and fickle world. Thoſe two Heyfers that went ſo ſtraight with the Ark of God, and turned neither to the right hand nor to the left; ſee in them a patterne of two true yoke-fellows. The one drew to not this way, and the other that, but both drew together, and that ſtraight. I might goe further in theſe circumſtances of mariage, but this ſhall ſuffice. Upon the 18 of Leviticus, I have ſaid more. Eraſmus ſaith, S. Auguſtine could never be gotten to make any mariage betwixt any, but when by others it was concluded, he would pray for them, and bleſſe them. So hard he knew it to get thanks of all parties in ſuch a matter. The Fathers have noted this repining at Moſes wife, as an allegory, ſhewing the grieving and grudging of the Jewes at the vocation of Gentiles, whereof we have teſtimonie in divers places. But long may they ſpite, and never may they pitie if God ſo pleaſe. To which end, let us often remember the Apoſtles powerfull perſwaſion to all Gentiles, carefully with feare to walk worthy of this calling. For though ſome of the Branches be broken off, ſaith he, and thou being a wild Olive tree, was graft in for them, and made partaker of the root and fatnes of the Olive tree, boaſt not thy ſelfe againſt the branches, & if thou doeſt, thou beareſt not the root, but the root thee, &c. Well through unbeliefe they are broken off, and thou ſtandeſt by faith, be not high-minded, but feare. For if God ſpared not the naturall branches, take heed leſt hee alſo ſpare not thee, &c. Now then to ſhut up this note, we ſee no cauſe why thus Moſes ſhould be ſpoken againſt for his wife; and therefore the ſinne of Miriam and Aaron as great will appeare by the puniſhment. Neither can all the nips and quips of Papiſts, Atheiſts, Hereticks, or Heathens ſpot lawfull mariage, but it ever remaineth the holy Ordinance of God, to his glory, and mans comfort, if it be with due care and wiſdome undertaken, as hath been ſaid; yea, it remaineth honourable among all men, as the Apoſt. ſaith, and the bed of mariage undefiled, but whoremongers and adulterers the Lord ſhall judge: the Lord ſhall judge, I ſay againe, which is a lawfull ſpeech. For if thou Lord, ſaith the Pſalme, do but mark what is done amiſſe, O Lord, O Lord, who may abide it? His

1 Sam.6.12.

Præfat in Aug. Act.11.3.

Act.11.13. Chap.13.23. Chap.14.19 Rom.11,17,&c ſeeing

ſeeing and marking is fearefull, and O how much more then his judging. Idle therefore was the device of Thales, and as vaine the ſpeech of Philemon, with many moe, if it were fit to runne over them. Thales, ſay our bookes, beeing much exhorted by Solon to marry, ſtill denied him and refuſed. At length finding him ſtill to ſolicit him, he ſuborned a friend that ſhould come haſtily in, where Solon and he were, and amazedly to cry out, O Solon, Solon thy ſonne is dead ſuddenly, With which cry, Solon being daunted, began to mourne much. But Thales after a while, ſmiling upon him, bad him content himſelfe, it was but a device of his to let him ſee why hee refuſed to marry. For if ſuch a man, ſaith he, as thou art, ſo wiſe, ſo ſtayed, and ſo abſolute, cannot endure, but with great griefe, theſe caſualties and accidents, how ſhould I doe, a man no way comparable unto thee. But was this well? You know we have learned otherwiſe out of that booke which is the rule, although he knew it not: Namely, that the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh, and as well muſt we bleſſe his name for taking, as for giving. Good things if hee beſtow upon us, we receive them, and ſhall we not receive evill, if he pleaſe to ſend them, &c. Away therfore with ſuch idle devices to blemiſh Gods ordinance. Philemon, againſt ſecond marriage: I marvell not, ſaith he, that a man goeth once to ſea, having never tried it: but after he hath ſeene the ſtormes and tempeſts that there are, and heard the roaring of the ſea with fearefull billowes and waves, hoiſting him ſometimes up, and ſinking him ſometimes downe, then to goe againe after he hath attained to the haven and reſt from ſuch troubles, what wiſedome can it ſhew, or what diſcretion and judgement may it argue? This is the froth of mans wit: which hee ſcattereth that hath taught, A woman, if her husband be dead, is at liberty to mary againe in the Lord. He caſteth in her way no ſuch perils as this man would note, but ſhe having cauſe to uſe his ordinance, hee will bleſſe it unto her for her comfort as ſhall be fit, and give her ſtrength and patience to beare any worldly accident. So of the man, for all is one. Learne we therefore to feare truely unlawfull luſt, and all forbidden uncleanneſſe: Make a conſcience of adultery and whoredome, flie from the damnation of inceſt, &c. Theſe, theſe things are hatefull to God and man, and yet how abound they? Unholy holineſſe is pretended, and ſhamefull things are committed. Mariage is nipped at, and continuall burning endured. Policie thruſteth piety out of place, and a juſt holy God will deny place one day in the glorious Heavens, for ſuch uncleane veſſels, the bold deſpiſers of his ordinance.

Thales Philoſophus.
Philemon Comicus.

Iob 1.
Iob 2.10.

Rom. 7.
1 Cor. 7.

3. What were Aaron and Miriam to Moſes? Even his owne brother and ſiſter. And cannot ſuch agree? Will there be jarres and grudgings in ſuch? would God it were not too true. Nay, ſuch is our corruption, if the Lord leade us not with his loving ſpirit, that not onely we diſagree being brothers and ſiſters, but with a farre more bitter and implacable wrath than others that are farther off. What a venome was in Cain to his brother Abel, when nothing but blood would appeaſe it? What was in Eſaus heart towards his brother Iacob? How repined the two ſiſters one at the other, Leah and Rachel? What bitterneſſe was in Ioſephs brethren towards him? And what effect had that bitterneſſe had, if God had not ſtepped in? How boiled the blood of the elder brother at the prodigall ſonne, when he ſaw what his Father had done? Who more ſpited David than his own brothers? Goe we from the Scriptures to ſtories of other Books, and what horrible things do we reade? I could rehearſe many, but let one notorious one ſerve for all. That of Eteocles, and Polinices, the two ſonnes of Oedipus, how horrible and fearefull to heare of, who when after the death of their father, they had agreed to raigne by courſe or turnes, and promiſe was not kept, but he that began would not give place, when his time was out, to his brother: Whereupon they grew to warres, and meeting together in the field, flew ſo fiercely one upon the other, that they both were ſlaine, and their bodies being put into the fire to bee burned, according to the manner, the flame of the fire parted it ſelfe, and went a ſunder, as a ſigne of the deadly and implacable wrath of the two brothers, proclaiming as it were, to all the beholders, that ſo monſtrous and exceſſive it was, that no more would the fire of their two bodies agree, than their hearts and mindes could agree when they were alive. Of this hatred ſuch ſteps remained in the poſterity, that the warre was afterward continued moſt deadly by the children of them that at this firſt warre were ſlaine. O what venome is this that lurketh in our natures, if God leave us to our ſelves! May we not juſtly marvell at ſome men; otherwiſe of great wiſedome and judgement, that dare breake out unto the praiſe of theſe perturbations, as vertues and badges of noble mindes? For what is this, but as if a man would praiſe the diſeaſes of the body, and the nettles and weeds, and hurtfull plants of the earth? Should not hee bee accounted mad that would ſet his owne houſe on fire? And I pray you what hee that will caſt fire into his owne heart to ſet it on a flame? Saint Auguſtine was wont to ſay, that aceto vas in quo aſſervatur aceſcit & corrumpitur, ita iracundum ab ira depravari: Looke how vineger put into a veſſell thereby is made ſowre, and corrupted: ſo is the angry and malicious rancorous perſon by his owne anger and rage, made filthy and moſt diſtaſtefull to all good men. And if thus among ſtrangers; O what among brothers and ſiſters? Wherefore what counſell is given to refraine, and reſtraine all anger, venome, and hatred, let it in particular bee applyed to bridle all rage or diſlike, among ſuch neere ones as now wee ſpeake of. Many precepts are given, and much might bee ſaid of this point: but in an abridgement I may not runne that courſe.

4. The fourth circumſtance is, what they ſaid; for it pleaſeth God not onely to note that they ſpake againſt Moſes, but alſo to toll us what words they uſed, Verſe 2. And they ſaid, What? Hath the Lord ſpoken but onely to Moſes, hath he not ſpoken alſo by us? All one, as if they ſhould have ſpoken in this ſort: What a running is here by every body to Moſes; and what a reſpect is here to Moſes? hath God ſpoken but onely to him? What I pray you are wee, and what make you of us? Are wee no body in your eyes, nor worthy of any regard? Hath not God ſpoken alſo by us as well as by Moſes? Give us then our due, for he ſhall not overtop us in this ſort, neither have you for it well done to runne thus more to him, than to us, &c. A moſt unfitting ſpeech you plainely ſee, and full of great imperfection, in two ſuch notable members of the Church, as Aaron and Miriam were, But let it profit us to our good, being therefore written by the wiſedome of God, that wee might learne by it. Firſt, then how notably doth it lay before us the damnable ſinne, and the hatefull poyſon and venome of foule envy, ſparing no degree, no propinquity of blood, reſpecting no gifts and graces, nor any circumſtance whatſoever. But the better man or woman, the worſe uſed ever by this gnawing worme, and hiſſing Snake. Looke how the fire aſcendeth upward, and ſo doth this curſed ſinne abuſe ſuperiours, either in place, grace, or any good gift of God. Walke in the Sunne, and you ſhall have ſhadow, walke in vertue and an honeſt courſe, you ſhall be envied by ſome of theſe ſicke creatures. For, no more certaine companion is the ſhadow to the body, than envy to vertue and well doing. No ſooner is Daniel promoted by the King, but his overthrow is ſought by malignant mindes. See the place your ſelfe and make uſe of it. Nay, the Lord of life, and redeemer of man himſelfe, for this cauſe muſt be taken away, becauſe he did works pleaſing to God, and profitable to men: ſo that men were moved by them to beleeve. Reade it & over reade it many a time, and thinke with your ſelfe if the creature may eſcape this poyſon, when the mighty Creator is thus ſpited for good. Be it therefore as God hath appointed, and the Lord give patience to all his ſervants. Secondly, it ſheweth an abuſe of Gods favours to the contempt of others. For what if God alſo ſpake by them, yet did he never vouchſafe them that grace and honor, that therby they ſhould be moved to deſpiſe Moſes, no more ought ever any gifts of God to any, worke the like effect towards any, but uſing all to his ſervice, with thankfull feeling, acknowledge and reverence his favours alſo to others and bleſſe his name for them. Becauſe Haman had the Kings ſpeciall favour, muſt hee therefore contemne poore Mardocheus, a better man than himſelfe? Muſt the ſcornefull Phariſie of neceſſity looke over the poore Publican, becauſe hee was further enriched with ſome things than the Publican was? No indeed, it was never any end of Gods goodneſſe to any man, to make him looke awry upon any that had not the like. And therefore right well ſaid Bernard; Quid inflaris contra Publicanũ, qui ideo non habet quod tu, quia non accepit quod tu? Why art thou puffed up againſt the Publican, who therefore hath not that which thou haſt, becauſe hee hath not received that which thou haſt? What an excellent worke can a cunning Gold-ſmith make of a rude piece of bullion, yet nothing to that which God the chiefe workeman is able to make of a poore plaine creature of his, and therefore deſpiſe none, but think how farre the Lord is able to make him excell thee if it pleaſe him. Thirdly, it preſenteth unto us an unfit pride and boaſting in theſe two, for the favour vouchſafed unto them, whereas Gods goodneſſe ſhould worke humility in all, and pride in none; For what haſt thou (ſaith the Apoſtle) which thou haſt not received, & if thou haſt received it, why boaſteſt thou as if thou hadſt not received it? Goe thy way againe, ſaith our Saviour himſelfe, and tell no man. Teeching thereby modeſty and humility in, and for favours received, not arrogancy and conceit, as here was in Aaron and Miriam, becauſe God ſpake alſo by them. Vaine boaſting is tinea virtutis, the Moth of vertue, and therefore if carefully wee cover our infirmities before men, for our reputation with men, much more let us modeſtly carry Gods favours to retaine ſtill liking with him. To ſhut the doore when we pray, and not to ſuffer our right hand know what our left doth, are rules contrary to vaine oſtentation and glory, and you know whoſe rules they are. Hierom was wont to ſay of a Philoſopher, that he was Gloriæ animal, & popularis auræ venale mancipium: A vaine-glorious creature and a baſe bond-ſlave to praiſe. Be it farre from a Chriſtian ſo to be touched. Phariſies may doe all things to be ſeene of men, and have their reward with men, but Chriſtians that have a God who will reward openly, what they doe ſecretly, muſt follow the courſe that pleaſeth him. When you give unto your childe fit cloathes, you no way give them to make him proud, but for his uſe, and your honeſty: No more doth our heavenly Father cloathe any childe of his with his gracefull favours to make them vaine, but that they may uſe them to his ſervice, and ſee his love. When Moſes hand was open it was leprous, & when in his boſome it was healed. Vertue bragged of, becommeth graceleſſe, when modeſtly covered it is moſt gracefull. A coale of fire under the aſhes liveth long, when laid abroad it dieth quickly. You can apply it. Vaine glory is that arrow that flieth by day, from which carefully pray to be delivered, and take this with you, to remember often when Satan cannot foile you by vice, hee will overthrow you by your owne vertue, as here he did Aaron and Miriam, who no doubt hating groſſe ſinnes, yet were tripped

Envy.

Dan. 6.

Iohn 11. 47.

Contempt of others.

Boaſting, Pride.

Modeſty.

Pſal. 91.

ped in an unfit conceiving of Gods ſpeaking by them. If hee cannot make you a ſwearer, a drunkard, or ſuch like, let him winne you to glorying in your owne well-doing vainely before men, and hee hath given you a great fall. The better the liquor and the fuller the veſſell, the more wary are you that you ſpill not, and ſo be in your vertue. Remember Iob who never ſuffered his mouth to kiſſe his hand, that is, to boaſt of his well-doing. The more God hath given, the more you muſt reckon for, and ſome excell you, as you others, &c. Fourthly, obſerve with your ſelfe here, a deceiving argument or an ill conſequence. For what if God ſpake as well by them as by Moſes, therefore were they equall with Moſes in all things? Are there not diverſity of gifts, and diverſity of authority in the ſame perſons, otherwiſe in ſome things alike? You know in experience, one man may be a Gentleman as well as an other, yet the other above him both for gifts and further authority than he hath, be it as Juſtice of peace, or ſuch like. So for Noblemen, two may be like, in that they are noble both, yet the one may bee Lord Chancellor or Lord Treaſurer, and ſo farre differ. Judges are equall in this, that they are Judges both, yet the one otherwiſe above the other: So in the Church, Miniſters both, and equall in the preaching of the Word and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, may bee much unequall both for gifts given of God, and authority granted by the King. Learne we therefore to diſtinguiſh where there is cauſe, and wee ſhall not grudge or ſpeake againſt Moſes if hee bee preferred before us, when yet God hath ſpoken alſo by us. Fiftly, note with me here in Aaron, how hee was ſuperiour to Moſes in the Prieſthood, yet not content, he will have more what his heart affecteth. I thinke of the man of Rome, who being a Prieſt and a Biſhop might enjoy from all men, both Emperour and others, what honour and ſuperiority is due to that calling well uſed, But nothing contented herewith, hee muſt be ſuperiour further, as his owne ſinfull heart deſireth, and his filthy flatterers heape upon him, forgetting what approved monuments of learning ſhew; that for eight hundred and fifty yeeres the Biſhops of Rome were obedient ſubjects, as they ought to bee, to the Emperour, and cenſured by him as cauſe required, even to baniſhment. Examples are knowne, forgetting alſo thoſe plaine ſpeeches of the Fathers againſt this pride. Tertullian firſt, when hee ſaith, Colimus Imperatorem ut hominem, à Deo ſecundum, & ſolo Deo minorem: We reverence the Emperour as the ſecond man to God, and inferiour to none but to God. Auguſtine againe, Super Imperatorem non eſt niſi ſolus Deus qui fecit Imperatorem: Above the Emperor is none but onely God that made the Emperour. Chryſoſtome alſo, Parem ſuper terram non habet: Hee hath not an equall upon earth. Yea, the Biſhop of Rome himſelfe Eleutherius, wrote to King Lucius in this land, that in his owne Kingdome hee was Gods Vicar, and had full power and authority to make good Lawes, as well for Religion and the ſervice of God, as for civill affaires. Maſter Hart likewiſe priſoner in the Towre for Popery, yet diſclaimed, as appeareth in the conference, this uſurped power in the Pope over Kings and Princes now claimed and uſed.

Iob 31.

5. Note how dangerous a thing government and preheminence is, when it ſetteth a mans neereſt and deereſt friends againſt him. Surely, hee ſaid well that ſaid it; It is like a goodly tree, under which in a ſtorme men will runne to ſhrowd themſelves, and after when the ſtorme is paſt, caſt ſtones and cudgels at it. Many a man therefore hath forborne ever to beare authoritie, and many that have had it, wearied and overwearied with the burdens and griefes of it, have willingly reſigned their places, chooſing a private life to end their daies in. Examples out of all ſtories might be alledged, but our owne knowledge is ſuch that it needeth not. The comforts alſo of a private life might here bee touched, but I deferre them for another occaſion. Certainly, to walke upon tops of houſes, requireth a good braine, and is ſtill ſubject to falling; but who can content himſelfe below, non habet unde cadet, is in a great ſafety both waking and ſleeping, and ſpendeth his dayes in more comfortable meditations, not troubled with feares of undeſerved downefals. Thus much of the ſinne of Aaron and Miriam.

The ſecond part.

IN the ſecond place is laid before us the puniſhment of this ſinne by God, wherein are divers branches. As firſt, the Lords knowledge of this ſinne, how it came, &c. in the end of the ſecond Verſe. And the Lord heard this. The Lord heard it, and the Lord ever heareth any word, wee ſhall yet ſpeake againſt Moſes, that is, yet againſt the Magiſtrate and Governour ſet over us by God. For the calling is holy and great, even his owne ordinance for the ſingular good of mankinde, and hee cannot endure it to bee wronged by the pratling tongues of diſobedient perſons. Looke at Moſes againe, as he was brother to theſe talkers, and certainly, the Lord heareth all words unkindly, untruely, unnaturally ſpoken by brother againſt brother, or ſiſter againſt brother, or any friend or kinſman againſt another. For kindred and blood is a knot, and a great knot of love; and whom God hath ſo joyned, no envy, no ambition, no ſpite or pride ſhould diſioyne and ſever. Behold, how good and joyfull a thing it is, Brethren to dwell together in unity; Brethren in blood eſpecially; that is, kindred and alliances, for they are a cir-cumſtance nearer than thoſe whom one faith and religion hath made brethren. Farre be therfore from us thoſe jarres and emulations that Satans malice working upon our corruption, doth too much and often ſtirre up among friends. For ſurely the Lord heareth, as he did here, and in ſome ſort or other to our ſmart he will puniſh it as he did here. He that made the eare ſhall he not heare, he that made the eye, ſhall he not ſee? The Lord is ſaid to be all an eye, becauſe he ſeeth all things, all an eare, becauſe he heareth all things; &c. Deus videt: God ſeeth, was wont to be a poſie written about mens houſes, to make them carefull of their actions. And may not we as well and wiſely write about our houſes and chambers, Deus audit, God heareth, to make us carefull of our ſpeeches? Such ſwearing in old and yong, in man and woman, ſuch biting and eating up of neighbors, kindred, friends, Magiſtrates, Miniſters, ſuch wanton and ſuch light ſpeech could never paſſe from us, and that full ſtreame, as now it doth, if this were in our mindes, God heareth, and this puniſhment that here followed upon Gods hearing in our eyes; Let us thinke better of it from this time, and the Lord ſtrengthen us in it.

2 The ſecond branch is Moſes innocency, which the Spirit of God thought good to note, leſt any ſhould have imagined that Moſes gave them any occaſion to ſpeake againſt him by ſharp words uſed to them, &c. No, ſaith the Text: For Moſes was the meekeſt man upon the earth. A ſingular commendation of any man, but eſpecially of a Magiſtrate and Governour. A vertue ever renowned in all ages, by all perſons that knew what vertue was. Let us but take a taſte of it, and ſo paſſe on. When Iacob bleſſed his Children in that propheticall ſpirit before his death, what ſaith he of Nepthalie, Nepthalie ſhall be a Hinde let goe, giving goodly words: that is, ſhall be meeke and gentile, faire ſpoken and courteous, ſo overcomming more by ſuch ſweet lenitie, than by roughneſſe and rigour, force or might. A goodly bleſſing, and being the gift of God, let it bee marked and loved of us. Them that be meeke ſaith the holy Pſalmiſt, them ſhall he guide in judgement; and ſuch as be gentle, them ſhall he teach his wayes. Againe, The meek ſpirited ſhall poſſeſſe the earth, and ſhall be refreſhed in the multitude of peace. Wiſe Salomon, A ſoft anſwer breaketh wrath, when grievous words ſtirre up anger. Nay, more vehemently, mark it: A ſoft tongue breaketh the bones, even the hard bones and ſtrong bones: A figurative ſpeech to ſhew the power and force of it. Learne of me, ſaith the light and patterne of all men, Learne I ſay of mee that I am meeke, meeke and lowly in heart, and ye ſhall finde reſt for your ſoules. True it is of meekneſſe that the Apoſtle ſaith of love; It ſuffereth long, it is bountifull, it envieth not, it boaſteth not, it is not puffed up, it diſdaineth not, it ſeeketh not her owne things, it is not provoked to anger, it thinketh not evill, it rejoyceth not in iniquity but rejoyceth in the truth; It ſuffereth all things, it beleeveth all things, it hopeth all things, it endureth all things. It is, ſaith Baſil, Character animæ pie, the very marke and badge of a holy ſoule. It is, Cordis medicus, ſaith Ambroſe, the Phyſitian of the heart: First, of his owne heart, by lengthing life, whoſe fretting anger conſumeth much; then of another mans, to whom he ſpeaketh, or with whom he dealeth: for who can expreſſe the comfort of a good word, and kind ſpeech to every heart. Let a Magiſtrate ſpeak kindly, and though he puniſheth; yet it pleaſeth. Let a tyred ſuter have a loving ſpeech, and though the cauſe goe againſt him, yet he departeth joyous and cheared. Sharpe words have killed, and ſweet words have healed. I know where I am if I would proceed. Wee are not all made of iron and ſteele. Some hearts are of fleſh and ſoone wounded; yea, wounded to death, and never recover; O heavenly vertue therefore of meekneſſe. Bleſſed are they that have it (ſaith the Lord Jeſus) for they ſhall inherit the earth. Surely their report ſhall live upon earth with great honour, when the earth hath covered their bodies from the eyes of men, and the glory of it ſhall never die. No man, nor childe, but in every place he ſoundeth out the praiſe of this great vertue of ſweet and comfortable meekeneſſe, and lamenteth the loſſe of ſuch a perſon. Adde unto theſe things an example or two, and all ſhall be plaine. In the Booke of Iudges, when the men of Ephraim were ſo wrathfull and diſpleaſed with Gideon, that they ſeemed even ready to offer violence to him, how quickly, how quietly were all things ended by the ſoft ſpeech of Gideon to them. The place is worthy your reading, and further often remembrance.

Verſe 3.

Gen. 49. 21.

Pſal. 25. 8.

Pſal. 37. 11. Pro. 15. 1. Pro. 25. 15.

Mat. 11. 29.

1 Cor. 13.

Mat. 5. 5.

Iudg 8. 1.

1 Sam. 25.

Take a little example of a woman, Abigail, the wife of Nabal, who meeting, wiſely, David comming toward her houſe with foure hundred men armed, to deſtroy before the dawning of the day, both her husband, and whoſoever ſhould be there found, for a churliſh anſwer given to his ſervants, ſent in kindneſſe to him, with her meeke ſpeech and ſoft anſwers, ſo turned him from all that fury, that he not onely deſiſted, but bleſſed God that had ſent her ſo to keepe him from ſhedding of blood.

Acts 19.

A third example, may bee that diſcreet Towne-clearke, mentioned in the Acts, who with milde, and wiſe, and ſoft ſpeech, pacified all that tumult and uproare, that there is ſpoken of, ſooner and better, than force would or could. No marvell then if our Lord and Maſter bid us learne of him to be meeke; for certainly the power of it is admirable. Doe men when they will take birds, come to them with clubs and ſtaves, and ſuch like things? No, no, you know the verſe, Fiſtula dulce canit volucres dum decipit auceps. The Fowler comes with a ſweet pipe, and ſo deceives the poore birds. Sweet pipes, that is, ſweet words, ſweet and ſoft ſpeech, milde, and kind, and courteous cariage is that, that not onely conquereth and overcommeth, but as it were by a ſtrange force even beareth all down before it, teareth mens hearts in peeces, and obtaineth what it will, yea more many times than was ſought or deſired. Never man could quench hot fire with more hot fire added to it: but cold water, cold water, I ſay, quencheth, and that quickly, the hotteſt fire that ever was. Thinke of the fable of the winde and the ſunne if you will, and ſo end this note. The winde and the ſunne you have heard laid a wager which of them ſhould get away a Countrey mans Cloake from him ſooneſt. The winde began and puft and blew on him to have his cloake, but the countrey man wrapped his cloake faſter under his arme, and would not yeeld. Then the winde ſet all his force and blew, ſo that ſcarce the man could ſtand, but the ſtronger and fiercer the winde was, the faſter held the countrey man his cloake, and pulling his hat alſo downe upon his head, ſtood ſtiffe and would not yeeld an inch to all that bluſtring and blowing. The ſunne then tooke him in hand, and he in a quite contrary faſhion behaved himſelfe, ſmiling and ſhining upon him with his ſweet and pleaſant beames, more and more cheering of him with a comfortable carriage, and by and by off went his cloake, then his hat, then his coate, and had not the ſunne given over, as ſufficiently having ſhewed his force, certainly he had gotten all to his very ſhirt from him, and that with his very good will and liking. See then the difference of ſweet ſhining and rough bluſtring. See the power and force of meekneſſe, mildneſſe, and ſoftneſſe, and know that Moſes being the meekeſt man upon earth, certainly he had a great bleſſing beſtowed upon him, and might be ſaid to be even the ſtrongeſt man upon earth. This vertue then let us all pray for, and more labour to attaine unto it. It adorneth and beautifieth all, both rich and poore, high and low, old and yong, men and women, but as it were, above all, in a Magiſtrate and Governour, it is as a glorious Crowne upon his head, and bracelets of gold upon his armes. For it never maketh the poores eyes to faile, much leſſe woundeth and killeth mens hearts within them, ſending them away ſobbing and ſighing, groning and grieving, yea bleeding even to death, as roughneſſe, and harſhneſſe, and fierceneſſe doth. Let this ſuffice in ſtead of much more.

and

3: In the third place commeth to be conſidered, Gods juſticing of this matter, I meane this ſinne of Aaron and Miriam, which he had heard, and wherein meeke Moſes had given no provocation: There are ſeverall branches or circumſtances of the Lords proceedings laid downe in the Text. As firſt his ſpeed, by and by the Lord called them: ſo ſhewing us how fitting a thing, yea how pleaſing to him convenient expedition is in juſtice, and how diſpleaſing needleſſe and ſiniſter delaies. Surely it is even in this alſo true, I meane in the adminiſtration of juſtice: Bis dat qui cito dat: He giveth twice that giveth quickly. It ſheweth alſo, which with great comfort I pray you marke, what a tender feeling the Lord our good God hath of the wrongs of his children, even of all his children; for hee is the God of all, and not onely of ſome, but by name of Magiſtrates and Governours wrongs, when they are ſpoken againſt openly, or privily, without cauſe. Surely, he ſo feeleth it, that even by and by hee will undertake the righting of them, and cannot hold from puniſhing ſuch offenders, as ſo lightly regard his holy Ordinance. We thinke that unleſſe we ruffle and keepe adoe in our owne cauſes it is not well (and I condemne not all care this way) but certainly none have beene ſooner and better righted, than ſuch as patiently have endured a time, and committed things to the juſtice of God. David was much and very much wronged by Saul, yet grew he not a malecontent, and ſo either conteſted with his Prince, or traiterouſly and diſloyally practiſed againſt him. And what did God? Did hee not with ſuch expedition as to his wiſedome ſeemed fit, right him; and in ſuch ſort as he gave the Crowne to him, overthrew the houſe of Saul, and ſet up Davids? How ſped he againe in the wrong that he put up at Nabals hands? Did not the Lord ſpeedily ſtep in and right him, ſtopping the churles breath, and making an end of him, giving alſo his greateſt jewell to David? O it is a great matter to commit our ſelves and our wrongs to ſuch a Judge as we have all of the Lord. Let it never out of your remembrance what a tender feeling God here had ſhewed of theſe pratling wrongs that were done to his ſervant Moſes. O Lord, O Lord, thou knoweſt all mens wrongs, that with ſingle hearts deſire to ſerve thee. Thou knoweſt the prates and prattles of every corner in the world: the envy and malice, the ambition and pride from whence they come: be mercifull unto thy wronged ſervants in every place, and ſhew thy wonted love to them, thou knoweſt what to doe, and when to doe, in mercy and juſtice, and to thee be praiſe for ever.

Secondly, he calleth the two offenders by themſelves, leaving Moſes to heare and ſee for his comfort the Lords care for him. And this alſo is a great point of juſtice, to call and convent perſons that have, or are thought to have done amiſſe, not carrying matters in ſecret, and condemning without hearing.

Thirdly, hee ſpeaketh to them, and biddeth them heare his words, as hee had heard theirs. Which likewiſe ſheweth that true juſtice chargeth men, and doth not hoord up in heart, what cutteth off love and liking; giving good words outwardly, and yet inwardly thinking moſt evill things. O let us heare your words if you have conceived any offence, and then will either confeſſion, or true purgation give ſatisfaction. The contrary courſe may have policy in it, but who ſhall juſtifie it for piety, charity, or any vertue? This example here with many more in the Scripture ſheweth the Lords courſe, and can there be a better preſident to follow? I ſay no more, but leave all to him that is able to turne hearts, as the rivers of water.

Fourthly, in his words he ſetteth downe the difference of Prophets, ſhewing that all have not a like meaſure vouchſafed of him, and therefore as before hath beene ſhewed may not argue, I am a Prophet as well as he; Ergo, as good as he. Such kind of reaſonings have in all times diſquieted the Church and peace of the godly. The differences which God layeth downe, you ſee in the Text. To ſome by viſion, to ſome by dreame, to ſome in darker words, to ſome in plainer, but to Moſes mouth to mouth, that is, in a more excellent meaſure of grace, and familiar favour, than ever to any. Therefore although the Lord had alſo ſpoken by them, yet, foraſmuch as it was not in that degree as to Moſes, they ſhould not have compared themſelves with him, but yeelded him a reverence above themſelves. Yea, how were ye not afraid, ſaith the Lord, to ſpeak againſt my ſervant Moſes, even againſt Moſes? So ſhewing, that imparity of grace and gifts from the Lord, ſhould worke ever an imparity of honour and regard by all that will walke rightly, though in ſome other reſpect there may be a parity, as before hath been touched. Other difference of Prophets and propheſie, may bee here noted upon this occaſion. As that of S. Auguſtine, when hee ſaith, Prophets were of three ſorts. Prophets of the Heathens, Prophets of the Jewes, and Prophets of the New Teſtament. Prophets of the Heathens, were their Poets and learned perſons among them; according to which name Paul ſpeaketh to Titus, when he ſaith, One of themſelves, even one of their owne prophets ſaid, The Cretians are alwayes liers, evill beaſts, ſlow bellies. This prophet was but Epimenides the Poet. Prophets of the Jewes, were thoſe mentioned in the Scriptures. And of Prophets of the new Teſtament, you reade Act. 11.27. Act. 13.1. Epheſ. 4. &c. Where the name noteth not foretellers of future things, but interpreters and expounders of the Word and Scriptures. Others have diſtinguiſhed prophecying by theſe kindes. That ſome is ſpirituall, as that whereof God ſpeaketh here in this place, which is from him and by him. Some is naturall, as that which naturall men from naturall cauſes gather, ſhewing what weather or diſeaſes, or ſuch like, are like to enſue. Some is by diſpenſation, as when wicked men, through Gods permiſſion, ſpeake prophetically, as Balaam, Caiphas, and ſuch like. Some is diabolicall, as that of Zidkiab, and his fellowes, that of Hymeneus, and Philetas, that of thoſe whom Auguſtine ſpeaketh of, that would foretell how long the true Chriſtian Faith ſhould endure, namely, 585. yeeres, as I remember, and no more, with all other wizards of this kinde, whereof the world hath ſtill too many. Laſtly, there is a kinde of vulgar prophecie, ſo called, becauſe vulgar and common people moſt uſe it. Such is the Husbandmans skill, when by obſervation kept among them, he will foretell the price of graine like to be that yeere, the plenty or ſcarcity of fruit, and in ſuch like, as in forein parts, by S. Vrbans day, they will tell what maner of Vintage they ſhall have, &c. And here with us by the price of Barley at ſuch a Faire, how it ſhall goe all the yeere after, with a number ſuch: Theſe are mens prophecies. Now becauſe women will not ſit out, but they alſo will be ſome body, they will foretell many matters, as namely, death of themſelves, or their friends, and that it is when the Mice or Rats happen to eat any of their linnen or woollen Cloathes that they weare, bee it but ſo much as their apron ſtrings. But with theſe cold prophets, S. Auguſtine maketh himſelfe merry, and biddeth them be of good comfort. For as for the Rats eating their apron ſtrings, upon his credit there is no danger at all, but if the apron ſtrings happen to eat the Rats, then there is ſomewhat to be thought of it. But to let all theſe kinds goe: the firſt kinde is, that which God ſpeaketh of here, namely, ſpirituall prophecy, when he reveaſeth his will to men in ſuch manner and meaſure as he pleaſeth: Which is ſometimes inwardly, ſometimes outwardly. Inwardly by inſpiration or dreames. Outwardly by voice, by viſion. By voice from the propitiatory, &c. by viſion, as Eſay. 6. Dan. 10. Ezek. 1. &c. All which tended in the mercy of God to the good of the Church, and that was the end of them. Why then will ſome ſay doth not this gift continue in the Church ſtill? Surely becauſe the Lord hath ſufficiently revealed his will in all things neceſſary to mans ſalvation, and cauſed the ſame to bee written, where we may continually reade it and marke it: which indeed is a greater mercy, if we have grace to conſider it well, and to uſe it as we ought to our beſt good: for hereby God ſpeaketh to every one, even the meaneſt and ſimpleſt that will reade his word. And he that will not beleeve Moſes and the Prophets in this ſort, whom, or what will he beleeve? Yet wee tie not God ſo ſtreight, that at his pleaſure hee may not direct the tongues of his ſervants to foretell what hee will, as he did thoſe bleſſed Martyrs, Iohn Hus, and Hierome of Prage, whoſe ſpeeches you may ſee in the Story. But the rule for us to relie upon, is the written Word.

Tit 1.12.

1 King.22.11.
2 Chron.18.
2 Tim.2.17.
Aug. de civitate Dei. l.8. cap.54.

Fifthly, the Lord breaketh out againe into Moſes commendation, and ſaith, Hee was faithfull in all his houſe, a great commendation indeed, and another notable point of holy Juſtice may men learne by it from the Lord, even to grace openly, and greatly the diſgraced and wronged ſervants of God when their cauſes come before them, that the hearers may know the blackneſſe of malice againſt them, and that there is ever a due regard to be had, and a comfortable incouragement to be given to vertue and goodneſſe.

Sixtly,

Sixtly, the Lord departeth away, and the Cloud departeth away, and the Lord was very angry, even very angry with them. All ſhewing his tender feeling againe of his ſervants wrong, and the face of Juſtice how it muſt change upon offenders in ſowreneſs and ſharpneſs, that ſinners may feare and be ſory, and others by their example take heed. Laſtly, he laid his anger upon the fleſh of Miriam as ſhee departed, and ſhe was leprous like Snow, and Aaron looked upon her, and behold ſhe was leprous. Thus hath the Lord juſtified this cauſe in all points, and is departed.

4. Conſider now with your ſelfe and forget it never, how able the Lord is to turne the wrongs of his children to their good, and their diſgraces to their greater honour. Moſes was abuſed, and greatly by Aaron and Miriam, but he is now more honourable than he was before. The Lord hath taken occaſion thereby to make his truth knowne, and who now feared not Moſes, and reverenced him more than before? let it comfort you againſt your owne grieſes, if in this kinde you inwardly grone. Surely the cauſeleſſe wrongs of men truely fearing God, are many, and even by ſuch done many times as of all other ſhould not: but God is the ſame ſtill, as loving and mercifull, as mighty and powerfull to right you as ever. Looke unto him, and rely upon him in patience, you ſhall ſee his pleaſure in good time.

5. Behold the greatneſs of the puniſhment here, for muttering and repining againſt the Magiſtrate, and let it aſſure us, that to abuſe authority is no ſmall ſin in the eyes of God. And if God ſo pleaſe, let it kill in us all pratling againſt any that deſerve better, and are not preſent to anſwer. That the leproſie commeth when God departeth; let it tell thee (ſaith Origen) what ſhall happen if the Lord turne the face of his word from thee, certainely the fearefull leproſie of error and blindneſs to eternall death.

6. Note the convenience of the puniſhment for the ſinne; a biting, gnawing tongue againſt a good man, is puniſhed with a biting, gnawing, vexing maladie, that all chatters may take heed, &c.

7. With much care obſerve what a fall; nay what a downefall here pride hath: for ſhee that earſt would not be in the ſecond place, now ſhe hath no place at all among the people, but muſt be ſhut out of all company, as unfit by uncleanneſs for any company. O ſuch fals, greater or leſſe, as God pleaſeth, ſhall pride have ever at one time or another in this world, or in the next for ever, for his truth ſhall never prove untruth: who ſo exalteth himſelfe ſhall be brought low, and he that humbleth himſelfe ſhall be exalted. Bleſſed is the man and woman therefore to whom God vouchſafeth humility; humility of heart, humility of carriage, and every way that heavenly vertue of humility. Hatefull hath haughtineſſe made many, and even infected the earth whereupon they ſtood or went: but never had man or woman, old or yong, rich or poore, learned or unlearned, hurt by humility.

8. Laſtly, but how happened it, may you thinke, that Aaron alſo was not puniſhed, who likewiſe ſinned as ſhe did. The anſwer is, he ſinned alſo, but not as ſhe did: for ſhe was the beginner and firſt worker of this evill. Aaron was but drawne into it by her, and therefore though faulty, yet becauſe but in that kinde, ſpared by the Lord in his mercy: not to make us bold to joyne with others in evill as long as we are not beginners, but to teach us that it is farre greater to be a Ring-leader than a follower, yet all nought, all hatefull to God, and juſtly ſubject to his ſharpe wrath, which wee may ever feare he will not with-hold, if in preſumption we thus offend. See now ſome uſe of this Chapter, and God make it profitable to us.

CHAP. XIII.

The generall heads of this Chapter are two:

{ The ſending of men to ſearch or ſurvey the Land.
{ Their returne and report.

In the former you may obſerve againe theſe points,

{ Who ſendeth.
{ Who are ſent.
{ For what they are ſent.

TOuching the firſt, who ſent: It ſeemeth here in your Chapter that the Lord ſent, for it is ſaid: And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying; ſend thou out to ſearch the Land of Canaan, &c. But if you looke in the firſt of Deuteronomy, you ſhall ſee the people required it, and plotted this courſe, for ſo Moſes there teſtifieth: Then yee came unto me every one & ſaid We will ſend men before us to ſearch out the Land, and to bring us word againe, &c. Vpon which it is like Moſes conſulted consulted with the Lord, and then the Lord, as here in your Chapter, sent men to search, &c. Where in the people appeareth a sinfull distrust of the promise of God made unto them; for the Lord had said, it was a land that flowed with Milke and Hony, and they should have beleeved him without searching, for the Lord is not as man, that he should deceive. Againe, he had promised to go before them, and to guide them, so that they needed not to send others to learne the way.

Rom. past hope. 113. in locis. Grieve not if thou be mistrusted wrongfully.

No marvell if we trust not one another, when we will not trust God.

But this is the corruption of mans heart, if God assist not, and therefore pray we that evermore we may have faith to beleeve the promises, and to give God the glory of truth so due unto him: For the matter of searching and viewing it is lawfull enough in his time and place, where these extraordinary circumstances spoken of are not, and Princes and Governours either in peace or warres may use it.

This very place is a warrant of it, the Lord permitting it when they desired. Ministers may learn here so to yeeld to the people as the Lord may allow, & not otherwise; which if they well consider, they will never sow pillowes under mens armes, nor flatter them in their wayes, either for quietnesse or profits sake, &c. In the Lord see a most sweet nature, yeelding to be sifted and searched to helpe the infirmitie of doubting hearts. Such goodnesse and mercy we may admire, but never, never can we expresse it, and speake of it as it deserveth.

Let it teach us never to stomacke that which hee yeeldeth to, if by occasion ever it be offered to us, but so ever to carry our selves, as we need not to feare who sifteth us, because whatsoever unkindnesse it may be in them that doe it, yet to us no discredit, because our actions will abide the touch.

The second Part.

Verse 3,4. * Moses principes, Christus 12. pauperes ut testes essent. Deus infirma mundi. 1 Cor. 1. Superbos dejecit. Luke 1. in infirmitate potens. Yet, contra, that we might see, Nullum tam salubre consilium quod hominis malitia non subvertit. So do unadvised desires often. Cæcus natus &c. Adde si bonum, si Deus voluerit. Not my will, but thine. Ora cum sanctis. Deduc me in via tua, fias voluntas tua, in via mandatorum, Domine quid vis ut faciam. Acts 19. In weighty matters witnesses of credit should be used. But, Principes erant, ergo, pinne not your soule upon any sleeve, &c.

The second point is, * Who are sent; And your Chapter saith, of every Tribe one, all Rulers among the people, Heads of the Children of Israel. A singular wisdome to give credit to the report, and to satisfie every Tribe by a witnesse of their owne. Againe, it avoydeth envy and heart-burning, which is too common, where many a one thinking himselfe as worthy as another, and no man well pleased to be omitted. Such wisdome in the world is ever necessary, and Governours must bee carefull to walke even as much as they can, and indifferently towards all, for soone will a little partiality breed a jarre, not easily to be quieted and appeased. Note also how the eminency of his place giveth credit to his testimony: for they are all Rulers, that when they returne, their report might be the more powerfull, and without impeachment. A good watch-word to men of sort, ever so wisely and uprightly, so faithfully and truly to deale, as that truth may ever cleave to them, and their places be reverenced for them.

2. Their names are laid downe particulary who they were of every Tribe, to wit, of the Tribe of Ruben, Shammua, the sonne of Zaccur, &c. which is done for the credit and honour of them that did well, whereof they were but two, Caleb and Iosua, and for the shame and discredit with all posterity of them that did otherwise. So will the Lord ever honour vertue, and blot vice in the greatest. Their places, bee they never so high, shall not save them from ignominy if they deserve it. If these unfaithfull men had never beene borne, it had beene good for them, rather than to live, whileſt the Booke of God liveth, with this reproach. Let it profit all Readers to make them wary and circumspect in their cariage and imployments, as the Lord will enable.

The third Part.

The third point is, for what they were ſent, to view and obſerve

{The Land.
{The People.

In the Land, whether it was {Good or Bad.

{Fat or leane.
{Had trees or none.

In the People, whether they were {Strong or weake.

{Many or few,
{Dwelling in Tents or Townes.
{Walled or unwalled.

And to bring with them ſome of the fruit thereof, &c.

The uſe of which direction in Moſes, was, that their incredulity might thus be convinced, the remembrance of the Commodities of Ægypt ſo ſinfully ſpoken often of, daſhed and taken away in them, their deſire to enjoy the land of Canaan greatly encreaſed; And as Theodoret well addeth, that ſuch as were godly and obedient, might be confirmed and ſtrengthened.

2. To us at this day the uſe may be two-fold: firſt, to ſuch as travell to ſee forren Countries, that they obſerve fit things in them, ſo make good uſe of their travell, not neglecting things profitable, and ſucking up all venome, that the corruption of thoſe places may yeeld as too many doe, to their owne not only temporall, but eternall woe, and to the hurt and poyſoning of many others when they returne. Which fearefull abuſe of travell hath bred that uſuall ſaying; An Engliſhman Italianated, is a Divell incarnated.

Secondly, to Magiſtrates, Miniſters, and all of good diſpoſition, it may bee a patterne of care and endeavour, according to the places and power they have, to worke liking in men of the true Canaan that ſhall endure for ever, and a daily diſliking of the pleaſures of Ægypt, this tranſitory and ſinfull world, that bewitcheth ſo many to their endleſs woe and confuſion.

3. This ſervice thus enjoyned they performe, and after forty daies returne againe, bringing with them a cluſter of Grapes, ſo great, that two men muſt carry it on a barre betwixt them; alſo they brought of the Pomegranats and Figges. In which things allegorically is ſaid to be ſhadowed, and ſet out the office of Paſtors and Teachers in the Church: Who firſt doe painfully ſearch out the myſteries of the kingdome of God, that they may acquaint the people of God with them: then do they by preaching bring the Lord Jeſus as that excellent Cluſter of Grapes, ſhewing that he is made of God to us, Wiſdome and Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification and Redemption, that as it is written, He that rejoyceth, may rejoyce in the Lord. Pomegranates alſo and Figges they bring, that is, wholeſome and ſweet doctrines of Morall vertues, according whereunto men may frame their actions and manners. Auguſtine ſaith, Botrus ſignificat Chriſtum inter duo Teſtamenta: The Cluſter of Grapes ſignifieth Chriſt betwixt the two Teſtaments. He that went before ſhadowed the old Teſtament and the ſtate of the Jewes; he that followed after, ſhewing the new Teſtament and the ſtate of the Gentiles, &c.

Vſe alſo to Miniſters.
Sicut ſpirituales exploratores qui Scripturam non ſalutarunt, & tamen omnia ſe putant ſcire.
1 Cor. 4. diſpenſator fidelis ſit, totam terram exploret, et non limen tantum: qui enim ſcripturam in uno loco vident non in alio, errant. ergo attende lectioni.
1 Cor. 1. 30, 31.
Iudaicus populus præcedit et vertit tergum Chriſto. Non videt et agnoſcit ſuavem gratiam in racemo, ſed ſentit tantum onus gravaminis.
Ethnicus ſequitur et Chriſtum habet ante oculos, videt et experitur dulciſſimam gratiam, credit et ſalvus fit, &c.
O incredduli, ſic oblitieſtis qualia pro vobis Deus? &c.
Multitudini ne credas.

The ſecond part.

THe ſecond generall Head of the Chapter, was their returne and report, which you ſee and reade, verſe 28. And they told him and ſaid, we came unto the Land whither thou haſt ſent us, and ſurely it floweth with milke and hony, and here is of the fruit of it: Neverthelеſſe, the people bee ſtrong that dwell in the Land, and the Cities are walled and exceeding great: And moreover, wee ſaw the ſonnes of Anak there, &c. Which report of theirs is of two ſorts, according to the difference of the perſons that went: Some were faithfull and religious men, and theſe made a good report, and perſwaded the cheerefull and ſpeedy going up to poſſeſs it, notwithſtanding any difficulties that were objected, by fainting, fearing fleſh and blood, aſſuring the conqueſt of it, by the unmoveable truth of Gods never failing promiſe. But this ſome was a very ſmall ſumme,

ſum, even the leaſt of numbers, onely two, Caleb and Ioſua. Others were of a contrary diſpoſition, and objected ſinfully againſt it many difficulties; as that the people were ſtrong, yea, great Gyants; ſome of them in regard of whom, ſeemed as Graſhoppers; The Cities walled and ſtrong, &c. In ſhort, a very ill report did they bring upon that good land, and diſcouraged the hearts of them that hearkened to them. And theſe were the greater part, even ten againſt the other two; Where, to make uſe to our ſelves, many things may be obſerved.

1. In theſe wicked reporters, ſee how Moſes that worthy Governor was deceived: for thinking there had been a good choice made of faithfull and good men, the greater part was naught, even ten of the twelve that were ſent. So may good men be abuſed when they meane well, and muſt not be ſowrely cenſured for that which falleth out againſt their wils. Againe, ſo is the Proverbe verified, Omne quod rutilat non eſt aurum: All is not gold that gliſtereth. The Lord is to be prayed unto to direct our choices: for weake, weake is the wiſedome of man, unleſſe the wiſedome of our All-ſeeing God go before and direct. Let not the wiſe man glory in his wiſdome, nor the ſtrong man glory in his ſtrength, neither the rich man glory in his riches, but let him that gloryeth, glory in this, that he underſtandeth and knoweth me, ſaith the Lord, &c. All one with that of the Apoſtle; Let him that rejoyceth, rejoyce in the Lord: for he is not praiſed or allowed that praiſeth himſelfe, but he whom the Lord praiſeth.

Ier. 9. 23.

2 Cor. 10. 17.

2. In that they confeſs it was a land that flowed with milke and hony, obſerve the rich bleſſings God beſtoweth upon men, and make ſuch uſe in your owne particular, as he did that ſaid; O Domine tu mihi omnia pinguia & pulcra, ego tibi omnia macra & turpia: O Lord thou giveſt to me all things fat and faire, I give to thee all things leane and foule. Againe, ſince the Countrey was ſo good, and the inhabitants ſo wicked, let it make you remember the Abbies and religious houſes, planted moſt uſually in places that flowed with milke and hony, and yet the poſſeſſors ſo idolatrous, and every way evill, as the world now taketh notice they were. Happy men are they that conſider the Lords abounding and ſuperabounding goodneſs to them, and make it an argument to preſſe them daily to thankfulneſs, love, and all obedience to him, both in ſoule and body.

Evill men often inhabit a good land.

3. Note the manner of their praiſing of the land. It is with a But; ſurely ſay they, it floweth with milke and hony; But, but what? But the people be too ſtrong, and wee are not able to goe up to poſſeſſe it. Thus doe depravers and ſlanderers ever ſet out their praiſes. Such an one is a good man, But: Such a woman is a good woman, and a good neighbour, But: The Preacher to day made a good Sermon, But: No man hath a better ſervant, But: So ever with one But or other they abate their praiſe, and ſting the party or the matter praiſed in the minds of them they ſpeake unto.

The Lord of lords, and Judge of judges well ſeeth this their dealing, yea the World noteth it, and even they, to whom they, howſoever they hold their peace, ſecretly in their hearts deteſt and abhorre ſuch ſooth ſmoothing calumniation. The end of it with God, may appeare by this example, as fearefull a one as may be read in any Hiſtory. One ſaith truly of it; Vere terribilis hiſtoria & merito terrorem nobis incutere debet. Quod enim illi fecerunt, nos quotidie facimus, eundem igitur finem & exitũ timeamus, &c. A Story in truth terrible, and ſuch a one as juſtly may worke terror in us, for what they did, wee daily doe, and therefore may well exſpect their end, which you may ſee was this, that ſix hundred thouſand of them died in the wilderneſſe, and never entred into the land of Promiſe, and the infamy of theſe Butting reporters abide chronicled to this day in the Booke of God, the Chronicle to be feared above all Chronicles. In County and Countrey, with great and ſmall, theſe Buts towards our Brethren and good matters are uſed. God in mercy worke the remove of them. That wiſe ſaying of Salomon is applyed hereunto by one, and not amiſſe; Fili, ſi te lactaverint peccatores, non acquieſcas eis. Non dixit ſi apud te detraxerint, ſed lactaverint, ſic enim ſolent ordiri, &c. My ſonne, if ſinners intice thee (to wit, by ſome ſmooth preamble or beginning) beware, and conſent not to them: he doth not ſay, if ſinners detract and ſlander openly, groſly, and plainely before thee, or to thee, but if they feed thee, as it were, with milke, that is, as I ſaid, with a ſmooth praiſe, for ſo commonly they begin, take heed, take heed of ſuch fly deceivers, &c. for the end will not anſwer that ſweet beginning, there will come a But to marre all their praiſe, and to wound the matter or the man deeply.

Prov. 1. 10.

To this againe ſome apply Deut. 13. If there ariſe among you a Prophet, or a dreamer of dreames, and give thee a ſigne or wonder, and the ſigne or wonder come to paſſe, &c. And hereupon, he will ſoote a perſwaſion to goe after other gods, &c. Thou ſhalt not hearken to them, for the Lord proveth you to know whether yee love him or no, &c. warning us to take heede of ſmooth beginnings, when they are perverted to hard and harſh ſequels, as I have ſaid when they bring poyſoned Buts after them.

Sicut Scorpio cauda feriet tandem.
Sicut Locuſtæ nos.
See what hyperboles enemies will uſe.

4. Take this occaſion to thinke of Popiſh ſpirits, and their dealing with the people of God concerning the holy Scriptures, for as theſe ſearchers and ſurveiors ſaid; Indeed the land is good, but we are never able to enter it, the inhabitants be ſo ſtrong, &c. So ſay theſe Spirits, indeed the the Scriptures are excellent,&c. but the people are never able to understand them, they are too strong for them, that is, too hard, too obscure, too mysticall, and so appliable to divers senses, that even as a nose of waxe may bee turned this way and that, so may they. Much danger may come by medling with them,and therefore the surest way is to let them alone,to beleeve them as the Church beleeveth,though we know not what that is,and ever to be assuredly perswaded, that ignorance is the mother of devotion,&c.But woe to these cursed reporters,for as the other upon the land of Canaan ; so these upon the sacred Oracles of God have brought up an evill report, and a most damnable slander ; for &c. vide breve.

5. Had their Children done well to receive this report, and evermore to have stood unto it as a truth; saying,*Sic à progenitoribus nostris accepimus, &c.*2. Thes.2. *credunt mendacio,&c.*Jer.5. Prophetæ mendacium.

CHAP. XIIII.

The chiefe and principall heads of this Chapter are these:

The rebellious mutiny of the people.
The Lords threatning against them.
Moses and Aarons intercession for them.
God his answer.
The punishment of this sinne.

The first may be cast into these parts:

Their weeping, with the manner of it, vers.1.
Their wishing, verse 2.
Their expostulation, verse 3.
Their wicked consultation, verse 4.

Branches all of their sinfull mutiny and murmuring, and as Glasses for us to looke in, for our instruction and premonition.

1 CONcerning their weeping,the Text saith; Then all the Congregation lifted up their voice and cried,and the people wept that night,and murmured against Moses and Aaron,&c. The word crying noteth out the manner of their weeping, even with vociferation or roaring,howling and yelling, that is, in most impatient and grievous manner. Such a mould is ours; now after our fall, if God restraine not with his sweet and milde Spirit, which wee must pray for ever to coole our sinfull hearts and disordered passions, that they breake not out either against God or man in this fashion. Much better had God deserved of them and his faithfull servants Moses and Aaron, but all is forgotten, and no trust had to his promises. They looke at men, and beleeve men, yea, bad men against good men. They looke at difficulties, and forget the power of him that is Almighty, and had given them sufficient experience, that there is no counsaile, no wisedome, no strength or power against him. The Sonnes of Anack to him were lesse than Grashoppers, as bubbles of water,and small dust before the wind, no way able to hurt them whom he would ayde, nor to hinder his purpose and promise concerning the giving of that land to these Israelites.

2. See againe the venome and poyson of a slanderous report: when once it is raised how it creepeth, nay how it runneth and infecteth quickly even thousands, which these sinfull Spies might have prevented, had they feared God, and looked to the end, as wise Syrach wisheth all men to doe.But detractors and slanderers follow their owne sinfull corruption without forecast or feeling. And therefore the Lords justice shall one day follow them without mercy. O had it not been better that these mens tongues had cleaved fast to the roofe of their mouths,yea rotted in their heads, than that so fearefull a sinning against the Lord, and so dreadfull a punishment of so many thousands should have beene procured by them? Surely it had beene good for them if they had never bin borne, and let all reporters make use of it. Respice finem.

3. They were but ten that made this report,and yet thousands are stirred up to wickednesse by them. So will little beginnings make great stirres, and a small sparke kindle a mighty flame. Reade Acts 19.and note it well. Remember that tumult at Lisbone,&c. Wise and true was that inscription in Plato his Seale: Facilius est movere quieta, quam quietare mota. In Church and Commonwealth,there be ignita ingenia,deadly enemies of peace and order,and what harme &c. Acts 13.15.

4. Caleb and Iosua reported truth, and by all their might perſwaded to the obedience of it: but falſe reports are more beleeved; They carry away the matter with light and credulous perſons. So ever hath it beene, and will be to the worlds end. Lord, Lord, ſaith the Prophet, who will beleeve our report, and to whom is the arme of the Lord revealed. I am in deriſion daily, and every one mocketh me ſince I ſpake & cried out of wrong, proclaiming deſolation, the word of the Lord was made a reproach unto me, and in deriſion daily. Againe another, Woe is me, for I am like the ſummer gatherings, and as the grapes of the Vintage, there is no cluſter to eate, &c. The Lord Jeſus alſo, who is truth it ſelf, was forced to ſay; We have piped unto you, and yee have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented. Againe, I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receive me not, another ſhall come in his owne name, and him will you receive. But repentance will one day follow, peradventure when it is too late, and marvell not to ſee wicked teachers prevailing more in an houre in a corner, than teachers of truth can do in many yeares. It is our nature to embrace what is agreeable to our corruption.

Eſay 53.1.

Ier. 20.7. Mic.7.1. Mat.11.17. Iohn 5.43.

5. They were now come even to the skirts of the Land whereunto they travelled, and therefore now to fall away and faile as it were in the laſt act, it was fearefull. But let it tell us ſtill our frailty, and ſtirre us up to pray for conſtancy; holy conſtancy, that to the end, and in the end we may be his. For in theſe wee ſee the image of many that earneſtly embrace religion at the firſt, as long as the Sunne ſhineth faire: but when any clouds ariſe, and difficulties appeare, they change their minde, murmure and mutine, ſlip and ſlide away to their eternall woe.

6. From their weeping come to their wiſhing in the ſecond verſe: Would God (ſay they) wee had died in the land of Ægypt, or in the Wilderneſſe, would God we were dead. Who would have expected ſuch fruits from men ſo experienced with the mighty power of God to beate downe all perils, and his unſpeakeable goodneſſe in relieving them in all diſtreſſes. Is Ægypt better than the land of promiſe? Is a death there to be preferred to life in Canaan? Such choice our wiſedome maketh, and pigges and ſwine content Gergeſites better than the Lord of life. Might wee live ſtill in earth, let them take Heaven that like it, ſay many in their hearts. O it is good being here, let us make three Tabernacles to reſt and dwell in for ever. Feareful ingratitude, whither wilt thou lead this corruption of ours, if God ſtep not in with his grace! O ſave Lord thou King of heaven, and let us not periſh through our corruption! Give us eyes to ſee the difference of Ægypt and Canaan, and cauſe our hearts to feele, and our tongues to ſay from the ſame feeling; It is better to be a doore-keeper in holy Canaan, the ſeate of Majeſty, and the houſe of Saints, than to rule and raigne in Ægypt, the ſeat of blackneſſe, and cage of damned ſpirits, contemners of offered graces, diſtruſters in the power and mercy of God, and hatefull wiſhers and willers, lovers and likers of evill things.

7. After their wicked wiſhing followeth as ſinfull an expoſtulation, verſe 3. Wherefore now hath the Lord brought us into this land to fall upon the ſword, our wives, and our children ſhall bee a prey, were it not better for us to returne into Ægypt? See a notable difference betwixt the godly and the wicked. The godly beleeve evill things happen to them for their good, and the wicked thinke good things are given for their harme. As here, that God had brought them into that land for their deſtruction. Is not this a good requitall of the Lord for his goodneſs? A land that floweth with milke and honey, which they by their owne arme could never have conquered; the Lord in his bottomleſſe grace, and by his outſtretched arme intended to give them, caſting out them that inhabited the ſame. Yet will theſe men thinke and ſay that he brought them thither to conſume them. Can any thing be more fearefull than ſuch ingratitude? See, ſee, the nature of the wicked. Thus did Iehoram, if you marke it, when water wanted. Alas (ſaith he) that the Lord hath called theſe three Kings to give them into the hand of Moab: ſtraight conceiving the worſt, and having no confidence in the mercy and goodneſs of God. When the godly, as they are taught, beleeve firmly, that even all things worke together for the beſt to them that love God, &c.

1 King.3.10.

Rom.8.28.

8. They reſt not here, but to this hatefull expoſtulation, they joyne as odious a conſultation, verſe 4. ſaying one to another; let us make a Captaine, and returne into Ægypt. The Lord is rejected with his mercy, and their owne fancies embraced with their folly. Soone taketh ſinfull man a liking of his owne way, even againſt God and his owne good. Sedition is a weed that ſoone ſpringeth up in mans heart, if God ſtay not: And let all that deſire to pleaſe God take heed of it. New Captaines, and offering to ſtone them that ſay againſt us, are high tranſgreſſions.

The ſecond part.

Verſ. 11. HOw did the Lord take this at their hand? Surely as hee had cauſe. His wrath and anger moſt juſtly was kindled againſt them; and he ſaid to Moſes: How long will this people provoke me, and how long will it be yer they beleeve me for all the ſignes that I have ſhewed among them?

I will ſmite them with the peſtilence and deſtroy them, and will make thee a greater Nation and mightier than they. Marke we the end of all diſobedience at laſt. Patient is the Lord and long-ſuffering, but withall he is juſt, and hateth evill. Provoke we him not, leſt he grieve us, and lay the merit of our owne wicked workes upon us. Againe, marke from whence the peſtilence and other diſeaſes come. Cauſes in nature may be alledged for them: but Almighty God guideth all. He ſendeth health, and he ſendeth ſickneſſe, plague and peſtilence is his deſtroying warriour, ſtriking and ſtaying where he appointeth. Forget not the words: Deut. 28.27. The Lord will ſmite thee with the botch of Ægypt, and with the Emerods, and with the Scab, and with the Itch, that thou canſt not be healed. The Lord ſhall ſmite thee with madneſſe, and with blindneſſe, and with aſtonying of heart, &c. The Lord, The Lord ſhall doe this, ſaith this place, that we may know his all-ruling hand, and learne to feare to provoke ſo ſoveraigne Majeſty. That wee may alſo ever remember where to render humble and hearty thankes, when wee eſcape theſe things, others neare us and about us taſting of them. When he ſaith he will make Moſes a greater Nation and a mightier than they; let it ſeale in our hearts the truth of the Lords words to old Ely the Prieſt: Them that honour me them will I honour, and thoſe that deſpiſe me ſhall be deſpiſed. To be faithfull in a mans place is a pleaſing thing to God, and a great motive to draw more and more preferment from him. 1 Sam.2.30.

The third part.

WHat hindereth the Lord for execution of this his wrath? Moſes and Aaron fell on their faces: *ver.*5. and in the 13.ver. againe, and ſo forward: what a vehement interceſſion maketh Moſes for them: *ver.*19. Be mercifull I beſeech thee to the iniquity of this people according to thy mercy, and as thou haſt forgiven this people from Ægypt, even untill now. And the Lord ſaid, I have forgiven it according to thy requeſt. Notwithſtanding, as I live, all the earth ſhall be filled with the glory of the Lord, &c. See the bleſſing of a religious Magiſtrate or Miniſter, what great things they avert from their people many times. All the treaſure in the world could not have done what Moſes and Aarons Prayer did here, yet unthankfull men little thinke of it. See alſo and obſerve carefully the arguments uſed to move the Lord. Gods glory, Gods promiſe, Gods nature and former goodneſſe. Theſe arguments never faile in God, and therefore if we beleeve, uſing them in our occaſions, we ſhall never faile with God. Si pœnitio, parcis; ſi revertor, ſuſpicis; dum differo, præſtolaris: If I repent, ſaith Auguſtine, thou ſpareſt me; if I returne, thou receiveſt me; and if I ſtay, thou taryeſt for me. So ſweet a God is our God, and ſo ready is mercy ever with him. Aug. medit. cap.2.

The fourth part.

BUt yet marke Gods anſwer more and more, and ſee how it is with exception, and if you thinke how may he be ſaid to grant Moſes requeſt, and yet puniſh too, the anſwer is plaine, he ſpareth their ſeed, and doth not, deſtroying them, raiſe up a new people of Moſes as he ſaid he would, which was a great mercy, and a ſingular effect of Moſes prayer. Parcit generi non perſonis.

Againe, in the perſons that went to ſpy out the Land he excepteth Caleb and Ioſua, becauſe they ſinned not as the others did, but reported well of the Land, and laboured to ſtill that uprore, aſſuring them that God would give it into their hands. A noble remembrance for all good men, in the time of ſchiſme or ſedition to be peace-makers, and ſtrong perſwaders againſt tumult and diſorder. Surely the Lord that bleſſed it here, will ever bleſſe it, and ſhew his great liking of it. The more will it move you, if you will marke the Lords words to Caleb.

Verſe 24. But my ſervant Caleb, becauſe he had another ſpirit that followed me ſtill, even him will I bring into the Land whither he went, and his Seed ſhall inherit it. Another ſpirit he ſaith, in regard of theirs, mentioned before, that ſo mutined againſt both God and the Magiſtrate, againſt their brethren that perſwaded better things, and againſt their owne good, as the end ſhewed. They were patternes of vile and lewd Subjects; Caleb an excelient patterne of a good and faithfull Subject. We have ſomething obſerved the one; let us ſomething alſo obſerve the other: For whatſoever things be written, they are written (if we be wiſe) for our good.

Two ſpeciall points the words offer unto us, to wit:

{ The ſpirit of Caleb.
{ The reward with God.

Touching the firſt we all know that as there is an holy Spirit of God directing ſuch as hee pleaſeth to good, ſo there is a wicked ſpirit of Satan leading ſuch as he may to evill:

and nothing more uſuall in either caſe, than by the word ſpirit, to ſignifie the effects of the ſame. In the good, the ſpirit of wiſdome and underſtanding, the ſpirit of counſell and ſtrength, the ſpirit of knowledge and the feare of the Lord, &c. In the evill, the ſpirit of error, the ſpirit of pride, the ſpirit of blaſphemy. &c. So in this place Caleb had another ſpirit, that is, better effects of a better ſpirit than they in the fourth verſe, whereby his cariage to the State was good, to his God pleaſing, and to himſelfe profitable. For the Lord in mercy rewarded both him and his: Coronans dona ſua: crowning his owne gifts according to his accuſtomed goodneſſe for the comfort of all them that love well-doing. What theſe effects of a good ſpirit were, and ſo what this Alius ſpiritus, this other ſpirit was, let us ſee in particular. This Chapter, and the Chapter before, with the fourteenth of Ioſuah, will ſhew them unto us.

Eſay 11.

1. There was in Caleb a very reverend conceit of Magiſtracy and government, which made him ſtill uſe ſome word of honour, when he ſpake of the government: As Ioſua 14. Thou knoweſt what the Lord ſaid to Moſes the Man of God concerning me in Kadiſh-Barnea. Forty yeares old was I, when Moſes the ſervant of the Lord, ſent me from Kadiſh-Barnea to eſpie the Land, &c. Moſes was now dead and gone, yet marke it how Caleb ſpeaketh not of a dead Magiſtrate, but with addition of honour, the Man of God, the Servant of the Lord, which words being true as in Moſes they were, they equall, nay, they excell all the ſwelling words of our age: Moſt mighty, high, renowned, illuſtrious, &c. words given to great perſonages to expreſſe their honour, and our good affection to them. Now this was alius ſpiritus, another ſpirit from the Murmurers and Mutiners, and therefore this is rewarded by a ſweet God, to whom ſuch reverence of governours is moſt pleaſing. And let it ever teach us, that as we ſee the Lord to obſerve the differing ſpirits of men, and accordingly to love them, and hate them, to reward them and puniſh them as their quality is: ſo we our ſelves be ever carefull to obſerve our owne ſpirits, that ſo we may ſee whither we tend, and what either in mercy or juſtice is like to fall unto us. Noſce teipſum, know thy ſelfe, is a rule as wiſe and good as it is old. And it was a great blemiſh which hee imputed to the ſwelling Cardinall Wolſey, that ſaid of him, Miſeret me Cardinalis hujus, qui nec veteres amicos nec ſeipſum novit; I pitty this proud Cardinall that neither knoweth his old friends, nor himſelfe. The words of our Saviour to his haſty Diſciples have a nip in them: You know not what ſpirit you are of. If all be well with us, God ſo hold it and make us thankfull: but if any thing be amiſſe in this point, remember religiouſly thoſe words of David; I have conſidered my wayes, and turned my feet into thy teſtimonies. And the words of Ieremy; Let us ſearch and trie our wayes, and turne againe to our God. Particularly towards Government and Governors, let us examine our ſelves narrowly how we ſtand affected, and what ſpirit we are of. It would ſeeme barbarous inhumanity to us all, to ſee a dogge, or a ſwine, tearing and rending, and eating the dead body of a man, though never ſo poore and meane: and ſhall it be a good ſpirit in us, thinke we, to rend and teare the name and fame of a dead Magiſtrate? yea haply ſuch a one is not only inrolled in the book of heaven, but alſo liveth for his worthy vertues in earth, with a glorious remembrance among all that bee not envious and malicious. It is too common in this ſinfull age of ours, to uſe Magiſtrates as we uſe fruit trees, ever caſting ſtickes and ſtones, one thing or other at them: but the reward of Caleb here for his love and reverence, with the puniſhment of the murmurers and mutiners ſhould be our ſchooling for ever; as the words of Gods holy Spirit by the mouth of Iude, ſhould never be forgotten: Theſe ſleepers defile the fleſh and deſpiſe government, ſpeaking evill of them that are in authority. Yet Michael the Archangell when he ſtrove againſt the devill, and diſputed about the body of Moſes, durſt not blame him with curſed ſpeaking, but ſaid, The Lord rebuke thee. But theſe ſpeake evill of thoſe things which they know not, and whatſoever things they know naturally as beaſts which are without reaſon, in thoſe things they corrupt themſelves, Woe be unto them, &c.

Pſal. 119: Lament. 3. 40.

Iude ver. 8.

2. Caleb when he ſaw ſedition and uprore againſt the Magiſtrate, rent his clothes for griefe, deteſting and abhorring in his ſoule ſuch cariage in men that ſhould obey. This was againe, alius ſpiritus, another ſpirit in Caleb, moſt pleaſing to God, and gracefull to him. God hath lately tryed in us this point by that thrice helliſh intendment of the Gun-powder treaſon ſo happily diſcovered and prevented by an ever-ſweet and good God. If we have rent our clothes at it, and for it, that is, burned with griefe to ſee ſuch barbarous cruelty in men; our praiſe is with Caleb, and our bleſſing ſhall be with the Lord. Aulus Fulvius, an heathen Romane meeting his ſon going to joyn with Catiline that Traitor, laid hands upon him, and ſlew him, ſaying with indignation at this villany; Non ego te genui Catilinæ, ſed patriæ: I begat thee not for Catiline, but for thy country. And ſurely except we finde that even againſt our own fleſh we could in ſuch a caſe do what lawfully we might, with the like ſpeech, that for God, for Religion, for their King & Country we had begotten them, and not for treaſon and villany: wee have not that edge of ſpirit that we ſhould have. It hath been ſaid of this plot before me, and it will be ſaid after me, to the worlds end, caruit exemplo, it never had match in any age. Not that of Mithridates, cutting the throats of al the Romans that ſojourned in Aſia the leſſe in one night. Not thoſe Veſperæ Siculæ to the French. Not thoſe Normans with the watchword, nor that to the Danes another time. Not that that Paris maſſacre,&c. The Heathen Perſian was of a better minde, that was loath to bee revenged of the Magus whom he hated, for feare of hurting his friend Gobrias. The greater the villany, the greater the mercy of God that diſappointed it, for which if wee ſing Hallelujah all the dayes of our life, we cannot be thankfull enough. God forbid it ſhould laſt but as wonders often doe, Nine dayes and no more. As long as I live (ſaith David) I will praiſe the Lord, yea, as long as I have any being I will ſing praiſes unto my God. Praiſe the Lord O my ſoule, and all that is within me praiſe his holy name. Praiſe the Lord O my ſoule, and forget not all his benefits. Forget not, forget not. Marvellous are thy workes, O God, and that my ſoule knoweth right well, &c. It is written of the Nightingale that ſhe ſleepeth with a thorne at her breaſt, to the end that may awake her, if ſhe nod too much. Such an uſe let this wonderfull worke of God have in us all evermore to awake us, and ſtirre us up if wee ſlumber in forgetfulneſſe and unfeeling. Let our tongues cleave to the roofes of our mouthes, and our right hands forget their cunnings, if wee forget this, and declare it not to our poſterity whileſt wee live. Pſal.137.

3. Caleb had a quiet diſpoſition, not turbulent, not factious, not ſeditious, but loving order and obedience to ſuperiours. A thing moſt pleaſing againe to God, as appeareth by the bleſſing of him. Adoniah we know could not be quiet, but plotting and working till his brother was forced by juſtice to take away his life, and ſo make him quiet. Corah and his company will bee envious againſt authority till the earth open and ſwallow them up. An example of terrour to all proud ſpirits to the worlds end. Abſolon againſt his owne Father cannot harbour a dutifull heart; but ambitiouſly be hammering moſt hatefull deſignes, till the vengeance of God, purſuing ſuch pride, cut him off, and hanged him betwixt Heaven and Earth by the haire of the head, for an example to the worlds end, to all buſie-braines, and diſloyall hearts.

Functius, a man deſerving well of learning for his Chronologicall ſupputations, being put to death for ſome fault of his againſt authority, is ſaid at his death to have pronounced this diſtichon to remaine to poſterity:

Diſce meo exemplo mandato munere fungi,
Et fuge ſeu peſtem τὸν πολυπραγμοσυνὴν.

That is:

Commanded duty to obey,
by my example gaine:
And as a plague for aye to flye,
a buſie working braine.

The holy Apoſtle adviſeth to the ſame, when he ſaith: Study to be quiet, and to meddle with your own buſineſſe, &c. Againe in another place, what vocation you are called unto therein walke. Experienced Syrach to the ſame end, Seek not out things that are too hard for thee, neither ſearch the things raſhly that are too mighty for thee. But what God hath commanded thee think of that with reverence, &c. Be not curious in ſuperfluous things, &c. For the medling with ſuch things hath beguiled many, and an evill opinion hath deceived their judgement. Qui amat periculũ peribit in eo: He that loveth peril, ſhall periſh in it. He that will play with the fire, ſhall be burnt with the flame. Spartam nactus es, hanc orna: Haſt thou gotten a charge, attend that. Mardonius homo inquieto & turbulento ingenio perdidit Xerxem: Mardonius a man of an unquiet and turbulent diſpoſition overthrew Xerxes. It was death among the Locrenſes to aske in the market place, What newes? All to ſnub buſie bodies. Abſolon forſooth would reforme all faults, and amend all matters, if hee might have authority, but he troubled the State, and buſie had a band, yea over-buſie, as the proverb is, was fearefully hanged. Alcibiades was ſo unquiet, being otherwiſe of an excellent wit, that the ſpeech aroſe: Greece cannot endure two Alcibiades, nor two Liſanders: noting that one was enough to overthrow the whole Common-wealth, without any more. Arius, Aerius, Macedonius, and ſuch like, what trouble bred they in the Church by their buſineſſe and factious diſpoſition? Brutus and Caſſius among the Romanes. And is there, lex juſtior ulla quam necis artifices arte perire ſua? Is there I ſay any law more equall and juſt, than wicked perſons to periſh with their owne engines? Ever therefore in our remembrance be the advice of the Holy Ghoſt by Solomon: My ſon feare the Lord and the King, and meddle not with them that are ſeditious. For their deſtruction ſhall riſe ſuddenly, and who knoweth the ruine of them both? Bleſſed Caleb was quiet of nature, no ſtirrer of coles, and the remembrance of him is regiſtred up in Gods Booke. He was obedient to authority himſelfe, and an earneſt perſwader of others to the ſame, whom had they hearkned unto, they had eſcaped Gods wrath, and their owne ignominy for ever. O ſweet quality in a ſubject, Obedience! Let it be remembred what is written for us and all Eccl.3 22.&c. Chap.13.and here.

ſucceeding eyes to reade that the Common wealths of Athens, Lacedemon, and others, ſo long flouriſhed in all honour and renowne, as the Citizens did ſtrive one to excell another in obedience and government. But when Alcibiades, Hyperides, and others beganne to violate lawes, and diſobey commands, then theſe common wealths, de gradu ſuo dejecta in exitium ruere cœperunt, caſt downe from their glory and height, beganne to decay and come to ruine. Let it bee remembred againe, that when one ſaid, Lacedemon flouriſhed by the vertue of Kings. Theopompus the King anſwered; No, no, but Lacedemon flouriſheth, per cives obtemperare doctos, by Citizens and Subjects that are obedient. What greater furtherance of ſuch obedience, than a conſtant execution of good lawes, and what greater hinderance than remiſſeneſſe and ſlackneſſe herein?

It was obedience that made Alexander doe ſuch great things. A. Gellius de Milone athleta. Si brachia forte remiſit, atq; illatum in præceps prono rapit alveus amni.

There may be uſe made this way of that end of Milo the ſtrong, who to make triall of his exceeding ſtrength, in a wood alone aſſayed to teare away a great arme or branch of a tree, and having ſlit it, remitted his force a little, as it were to breath or take better hold, with which remitting the tree clapt together againe, and ſo pinched his hands, that he was not able to uſe his ſtrength to the parting of it againe, but there ſtuck faſt by both hands till the wolves came and deſtroyed him. A conſtant courſe in juſtice is an excellent thing to worke obedience, and remiſſion is as dangerous as this of Milo. Solon complained that lawes were like Spiders webs, catching ſmall flyes, and letting great ones goe. But if ſmall were conſtantly catched, there would be fewer great. For what fire began not of a ſparke? Were not Rome and Athens governed by Kings? How then came they to be Ariſtocracies, but by letting ſlip, by little and little, the reines of diſcipline? When the great battell was fought at Leuctra, betwixt the Thebans and Lacedemonians: Epaminondas the Captaine of the Thebans cryed to his ſouldiers, one ſtep forward for my ſake, and they did it: the other gave ground, and ſo a great fall, &c. So, ſo. A little upon a little is a precept in houſhold affaires, but it holds in government, &c. But it is often ſaid they are ſmall faults, and therefore ſlipt over with animadverſion. And wiſely did he anſwer to a ſpeech that ſaid, Hæ nugæ ſeria fient: Theſe trifles will prove troubles if they paſſe thus ſtill. Sit foras neceſſitas, naſcitur intus voluntas: Let there be Lawes or Iuſtice without, Obedience will follow ever, ſaith Auguſtine. I will ſhut up this point with that Teſtimony of Novatus given by Cyprian: Curioſus ut prodat, adulator ut fallax, fax & ignis ad conflanda ſeditionis incendia, turbo & tempeſtas ad fidei facienda naufragia, hoſtis quietis, adverſarius tranquillitatis, inimicus pacis: Curious to betray, a flatterer to deceive, a firebrand and fire to make flames of ſedition, a whirle-winde and tempeſt to work ſhip-wrack of faith, the hater of quietneſſe, the adverſary of tranquillity, the enemy of peace. Is not this a worthy name and remembrance to bee left behinde a man to all poſterity? O that it may ſinke into mens hearts both in Church and Common-wealth, to the working of peace and obedience, and the hatred of all buſie faction, in either taking heed of all fooliſh colourable pretexts whatſoever, and remembring ever theſe words of experience and truth: Eccleſiam ſpondent, quando id agunt ut qui illis credunt in totum ab Eccleſia pereant: They pretend the Church, the Church, when they doe that as they which beleeve them, utterly periſh from the Church. Why ſhould any man hoping for heaven, bee a cauſe of that heavy complaint: Quo magis fidei & dilectionis creſcit gloria, eo magis diſſentionis & zeli recrudeſcit inſania, nec vulnus ſuum curant miſeri: The more that the glory of faith and love increaſeth, the more beginneth fury of diſſention and envy to grow, neither doe wretched men heale their wound: Caleb had alium ſpiritum, another ſpirit, even in this point being peaceable and quiet. And ſo I leave it to Gods gracious bleſſing in all men.

Epiſt. 49.

4. Caleb had a moſt thankfull feeling of their deliverance out of Ægypt in generall, and of his owne in particular, deteſting to heare of any returne thither againe with theſe mutiners, and this againe was alius ſpiritus, another ſpirit, pleaſing to God and good for himſelfe. Looke we at our ſelves in this point, and remember the happy deliverance God gave us by his renowned Servant of eternall memory, Queene Elizabeth from Romiſh thraldome, together with the ſweet and thrice ſweet confirmation of this joy by his gracious Majeſty, how doth our feeling anſwer with thankes ſuch mercy? Will any man ſuffer his heart to be dolium perforatum, a veſſell full of holes not holding any thing? Darius grieved that he could not requite one that brought him a little water when he languiſhed to death in his coach. Shall greater things bee unfelt of us? Quid retribuam, what ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his favours, ſaith the holy Prophet. And my ſoule doth magnifie the Lord, &c. ſaith the bleſſed Virgin. Aliæ mulieres holocauſta, Maria ſeipſam: Other women offered up burnt ſacrifices, Mary offered up her ſelfe. Et quæ in temporalibus erat pauperior, in ſpiritualibus abundat, And ſhe that was poore in temporals, in ſpirituall things, as thankfulneſſe and the like, aboundeth.

See Eſay 38.17.

5. Caleb uſed to ſpeake as was in his heart. Ioſuah 14. and this againe was alius ſpiritus, another ſpirit, than another had, and greatly pleaſed the Lord. Nihil finxit in hominum gratiam, Hee counterfeited nothing to pleaſe men, ſaith one Interpreter upon the place. And what an happines were it if all men would do ſo. Bleſſed are the pure in heart, ſaith our Saviour Chriſt, that is, ſuch men as are free from glozing and diſſembling. Lord who ſhall dwell in thy Tabernacle, & who ſhall

Pſal. 15.2.

reſt

reſt in thy holy Hill. Even he that leadeth an uncorrupt life, and doth the thing that is right, and ſpeaketh the truth from his heart. Behold indeed an Iſraelite, ſaith our Saviour Chriſt, and who is he? In whom there is no guile. I know what the Worlds wiſdome ſaith, That a man may Circumire, but not Aberrare; a man may fetch a compaſſe, but not goe out of the way, That a man may in Turbido rerum humanarum pelago obliquare ſinus, & ſi recta portum tenere nequeas, id ipſum mutata velificatione aſſequi: In a troubled ſea of theſe worldly matters, croſſe the Port, and not being able directly to enter, by a turne to compaſſe it. That Wine ceaſeth not to be Wine, although ſome water be mixed with it. I condemne no lawfull diſcretion, but I ſee here that Calebs ſpirit was pleaſing to God, aud rewarded by God to him and his, which ſpirit was to ſpeake as it was in his heart. Iohn 1.47.

Zonaras writeth of Tiberius, that he was Literis eruditus, ſed ingenio perquam vario, aliud loqui, aliud ſentire ſolitus pectore à lingua diſſentiente: And the blot will never be done away whilſt Bookes remaine.

Nicetas writeth, Draconem aut Leonem qui videt aut audit in montibus declinare poteſt. Lachrymis & precibus mitigatur latro, ad virum autem qui aliud lingua promptum, aliud pectore clauſum habet cavendum, magna ſapientia opus eſt & numinis auxilio. Tertullian againe, Quænam iſta ſunt pelles ovina, niſi nominis Chriſtiani extrinſecus ſuperficies, qui lupi rapaces & ſpiritus ſubdoli ad infeſtandum gregem Chriſti intrinſecus deliteſcentes. De præſcript. Chap. 4.

6. The Lord ſaith of Caleb, that he followed him ſtill: And this alius ſpiritus, another Spirit, than others had, ſweet and pleaſing to the Lord, glorious and honourable to him, even to this day, though he be dead many hundred of yeares ſince. Sic vivit poſt funera virtus: So liveth vertue after death. Such a care had he that ſaid; I have ſet God alway before me. Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none in earth that I regard in compariſon of thee. Likewiſe he that ſaid, Whatſoever you doe, I and my houſe will ſerve the Lord. Of Enoch it was ſaid, to his eternall praiſe, that he walked with God. The bleſſing whereof we ſee here in Caleb, and there in them to our incouragement ever to pray heartily, O knit my heart unto thee, O knit my heart unto thee, &c. Ioſuah 24.15. Pſal. 86.

We reade that Mithridates ſaid to Pomponius; Dic quæſo ſi per me diligenter curatus fueris, nunquid exinde eris mihi amicus? Ero inquit tibi amicus ſi tu populo Romano amicus fueris, ſin ſecus me quoque inimicum habebis: Tell me I pray thee if I ſhall regard thee and doe for thee, wilt thou be my friend and faithfull unto me? I will ſaith he, if thou be a friend to the State of Rome, otherwiſe thou muſt have me an enemy. So, ſo ſhould it be with us towards God, and thus was it with Caleb.

If men obeyed God, Caleb joyned with them, and if they ran another courſe, he diſſented from them, ſtill and ever ſaith God of him, He followed me. A bleſſed ſpirit this was, and happy had theſe mutiners beene if they had had the like. Commit thy thoughts to him, ſaith Solomon, and thou ſhalt be directed: ſo ſafe is it ever to follow him. Prov. 16.

Laſtly, to his Following joyne his Conſtancy: He followed God, and he followed him ſtill, ſaith the Text. Some have hearts to good things, but not conſtant, wherefore the exhortations in Scriptures are many, to move us all unto this. Beloved Brethren, ſaith the Apoſtle, be ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, abundant alway in the worke of the Lord, for as much as ye know your labour is not in vaine in the Lord. Iohn was not a Reed ſhaken with the winde, ſaith our Saviour, and it was his praiſe. Sed arundo vento agitata fuit Adam qui ad Serpentis ſibilum receſſit à Deo: But Adam was a Reed ſhaken with the winde, ſaith Chryſoſtome, when at the hiſſing of the Serpent he departed from God. You which were in time paſt ſtrangers and enemies, becauſe your mindes were ſet in evill workes, hath he now alſo reconciled in that body of his fleſh through death, to make you holy and unblameable, and without fault in his ſight. See Ioſuah 14. 1 Cor. 15.58. Coloſ. 1.2. &c.

Now marke what followeth: If ye continue grounded and ſtabliſhed in the Faith, and bee not moved away from the hope of the Goſpell, &c. Full I ſay is the word of theſe exhortations, all to bring upon us both the praiſe of Caleb, and an eternall reward. Theſe things may ſuffice to ſhew what this alius ſpiritus, this other ſpirit was in Caleb, whereof God ſpeaketh in this place, when comparing Caleb with thoſe mutinous Rebels, he ſaith, But my ſervant Caleb, becauſe he had another ſpirit, &c. Tertul. de corona. Chap. 11. Nuſquam Chriſtianus aliud eſt unum Evangelium & idem Chriſtus.

The ſecond part.

COme we therefore now to the reward of this Spirit; Even him will I bring into the Land whither he went, and his ſeed ſhall inherit it, ſaith the Lord. This is his reward: We know that this earthly Canaan was a type and figure of the heavenly, and therefore no doubt, but as the Lord made him partaker of the one, ſo in more and more abundance of mercy and goodneſſe, he tranſlated him alſo in his time to the other; yea, not onely him, but his ſeed alſo to a thouſand generations, according to his gracious promiſe. Such reward aſſuredly ſhall all they have have that are ſpirited as Caleb was; meeke and gentle, well tongued, obedient, himſelf a means to make others obedient alſo to his power, a thankfull remembrer of his deliverance out of the bondage of Ægypt, a man ſpeaking as was in his heart, following the Lord in all things, and that ſtill, that is, conſtantly, without variation and change. Great vertues ſhall have great rewards, in the great goodneſſe of the great God, Almighty to doe what he will, and all good to will what is comfortable and ſweet for his faithfull followers. Pitch wee our eyes and our hearts therefore upon this God, and upon this his mercy. Earthly Canaan and heavenly Canaan ſhall be ours, will we be like his ſervant Caleb in our cariage outward and inward; that is, temporall bleſſings as ſhall be good for us, and eternall comforts in his glorious kingdome without any end; where we ſhall be clothed with white Robes, free from death and all griefe, free from Hell and all Satans venome, free from the world and all impiety, like unto Chriſt his glorious body, and following the Lambe whitherſoever he goeth. O glory and bliſſe above the power of humane eye to ſee, of humane heart to comprehend, or of any tongue or pen to expreſſe.

Philip. 3.

If the comforts of earthly Canaan were great, as Milk and Honey flowing, and the like, that is, great and great againe, how much more ſhall the comforts of ſpirituall Canaan be, think we? If the glory of this world often aſtoniſh us; O what ſhall the glory of that houſe of the eternall God, and all his elect doe! Si tantus hic honor diligentibus vanitatem, quantus illic honor diligentibus virtutem? If their honor be ſuch here that love vanity, what ſhall their honor be that love vertue? Earth and Heaven, can they be compared together? Is there any proportion betwixt their joyes? Long we therefore ever for the greater, and prefer we eternity before mortality. Take we the courſe that pleaſeth the God and giver of eternity, he hath here commended to us his ſervant Caleb, and he in mercy grant us his vertues.

The third Part.

GOe we on now with the anſwer of God further, which is concerning the puniſhment he will inflict upon theſe mutiners, verſe 27. &c. How long ſhall I ſuffer this wicked multitude to murmure againſt me, &c? Tell them, as I live, ſaith the Lord, I will doe unto you even as yee have ſpoken in mine eares, your carkaſes ſhall fall in the wilderneſſe, &c. That is, you ſhall die and never enjoy what I intended unto you: but your Children that you ſaid ſhould bee a prey, them will I bring in: Nevertheleſſe, even they alſo ſhall wander in the wilderneſſe forty yeares, and ſhall beare your whoredomes, that is, your infidelity and diſobedience, untill your carkaſes bee waſted in the wilderneſſe, &c. Then for the men that were cauſe of all this, thoſe wicked Spies that did bring up this vile ſlander of the land, they ſhall die by a plague before the Lord. Here is puniſhment every way, and let us make our profit of it.

Wiſd. 11.

Firſt, they that would not goe into the Land, and ſo ſinned, are deprived of it, and ſo puniſhed, according to that ſaying; By what a man ſinneth by that ſhall hee bee puniſhed. So aſſuredly ſhall it happen to them, that being offered the grace of God in the Goſpell, refuſe it, and will none of it, when afterwards haply they would, they ſhall not. Wherefore the holy Apoſtle adviſeth to take grace offered, Hebrews the third, out of the ninety five Pſalme.

Secondly, He excepteth Ioſuah and Caleb, remembring ever mercy in juſtice, and ſo puniſhing the wicked, that he ſtill leaveth a ſeed for the Church.

Thirdly, He puniſheth the ſearchers extraordinarily by a plague ſuddenly, ſo teaching, that they which drew others out of the way, ſhall be puniſhed more grievouſly, and yet they not eſcape that are ſo led, for men ought to take heed what Teachers they follow.

Fourthly, Verſe 40. Theſe puniſhments being pronounced againſt them, then they ſeeme ſorowfull, and will goe up. But it was now too late, the Lords word muſt ſtand: ſo dangerous is it to loſe grace when it is offered: Yet up they will as it were in deſpite of their owne ſafety. So will the wicked be forward when they ſhould be quiet, and backward when they ſhould be zealous: In that Moſes went not up with them, learne we never to further the wicked enterpriſes of men, leſt we periſh with them. In the deſtruction that happened to them by the Amalekites and Cananites, let it ever remember us what ſtrength is in mans power when God withdraweth his hand, when God aſſiſting Gideon with three hundred had ſuch a victory. Profit we thus by this Chapter.

Nitimur in vetitum ſemper cupimuſq; negata.

CHAP.

CHAP. XV.

The chiefe heads of this Chapter are theſe:

Offerings when they came into the Land of Canaan, to be offered.
Of the firſt fruits, Verſe 17.
Sacrifice for ignorance and overſight, Verſe 22.
A tranſgreſſor of the Sabbath by gathering ſtickes, Verſe 32.
Of the fringes of their garments, Verſe 38.

Moſt of theſe things have beene touched before in Leviticus, that it ſhall not need to ſay much of them againe, but onely for order a little.

1 THE reaſon why God was now pleaſed againe of offerings, was for the comfort of the Children of theſe murmurers, who by their ſinne had barred themſelves from entring into that good Land, for it was as if God ſhould have ſaid; Be aſſured I will doe what I have ſaid, by this my appointing of Sacrifices and Offerings there to bee offered, &c. To us it may yeeld cauſe to obſerve, with comfort, how carefull God ever is to confirme and ſtrengthen in time of need, and who knoweth when there is need, as he doth. Sundry particulars yon may ſee in the Hiſtory of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, with many more.

2 Remember that theſe Sacrifices were Figures and ſhadowes of Chriſt the true Sacrifice, and of the ſeverall benefits which we have by him, and in him, which anſwereth the queſtion, Why of one Chriſt there ſhould be ſo many Figures? Surely becauſe from one Chriſt flow ſo many benefits.

3 That there is one Law for the Stranger alſo that ſojourned with them: it figured the calling of the Gentiles, and union both of Jew and Gentile in one ſheep-fold, when Gods good time ſhould be. As alſo that God in his Church would not tolerate two Religions, or divers formes of worſhip, but one forme for both Jew and Sojourner. It ſeemeth a reaſonable requeſt to Romiſh Catholikes to have their Idolatry and ſuperſtition tolerated in the land together with Gods ſacred Goſpell, at the leaſt in ſome private places. But he anſwered well, that ſaid; If it be good, why ſhould it not have Churches, and if it be naught, why ſhould it have Chambers? Salomon fell grievouſly by it, and Ieroboams policy in this point was the overthrow of him, and his houſe. The queſtion is handled at large by divers.

The ſecond part.

VErſe 17. The Law for firſt fruits is ſet down, which is the ſecond Branch of this Chapter: A matter heretofore ſpoken of in other places, yet never too much ſpoken of in regard of mans hardneſſe of heart to bee thankfull: The Lord therefore, againe and againe, requireth the firſt fruits of Corne and Bread, to admoniſh man ſtill, that all food and nouriſhment commeth from him, who if hee give, we have, if he deny, we want. Hee can make the Heaven Iron, and the Earth, Braſſe, that no raine from the one, no fruit from the other, ſhall ever come to us. And therefore when he openeth his hand, and filleth both us, and all things living with plenteouſneſſe; due, and thus due to him are our beſt thankes, as to a moſt gracious diſpenſer of mercy and goodneſſe to us, and to his glory ſhould we ever uſe his creatures. Oſee 2.8. Reade it.

2 The paying of firſt fruits to the Lord, fitly admoniſhed mans heart, that firſt and before all, he ſhould ſeeke to know his God, and to worſhip him with a perfect heart, and a willing minde, knowing and remembring moſt carefully ever, that he ſearcheth all hearts, and underſtandeth all imaginations of thoughts, if wee ſeeke him, hee will be found of us, and if wee forſake him, he will caſt us away for ever. Remembring alſo the words of our Lord and Saviour himſelfe: Firſt, ſeeke the Kingdome of God, and the righteouſneſſe thereof, and all things neceſſary ſhall be miniſtred unto us. 1 Chron. 28.9.

3 Firſt fruits were alotted in part of the maintenance of the Miniſtery, and therefore both carefully required of God, and moſt willingly to be performed and paid by the people: For why ordained God a Prieſthood and Miniſtery, but for the good of them, and ſtill of men to the worlds end? And what equity ever, that he which ſerveth the Altar, ſhould live of the Altar; not baſely and miſerably, but cheerfully and plentifully, as deſerving better things than we can give; becauſe he miniſtreth ſpirituall things to us, and we but temporall unto him: Let him that is taught in the Word, ſaith the bleſſed Apoſtle, make him that hath taught him partaker of all his good, that is, even of whatſoever he hath, to his ability.

4 By

4 By the duty of first fruits, this also was taught unto mans heart, that nothing is cleane unto us, but as it is sanctified unto us by God: according as the Apostle teacheth also, when hee saith, Every creature of God is good, and nothing ought to be refused, if it be received with thankesgiving, for it is sanctified by the Word of God, and by prayer.

The third part.

Verse 22. Levit. 4. THe third head of this Chapter, is the offering for ignorance and oversight, spoken also of in Leviticus: And if yee have erred and not observed all these Commandements which the Lord hath spoken unto Moses, saith your Text there, even all that the Lord hath commanded you by the hand of Moses, from the first day that the Lord cõmanded Moses, and henceforward among your generations: And if so be that ought be committed ignorantly of the Congregation, then all the Congregation shall give a Bullocke, &c. Let us note, that ignorance with God is a sinne, and must have a Sacrifice. Ignorance with some men is the mother of devotion, and much commended. Let us note, that if all the Congregation must give an offering for the oversight committed by them, then multitude of sinnes excuseth not sinne, neither is it safe for us to follow a multitude in any sinne.

Vers. 30. 2 Ignorance then wee see had pardon with God upon these circumstances here mentioned. But what followeth for our remembrance and warning here. But the person that doth ought presumptuously, whether he be borne in the Land, or a Stranger, the same blasphemeth the Lord, therfore that person shall be cut off from among his people. Because he hath despised the Word of the Lord, and hath brokẽ his Commandement, that person shall utterly be cut off, his iniquity shall be upon him. Pride and wilfulnesse is ever naught, but in Religion, wee see here, worst of all, hatefull to God, and most dangerous to men; cutting them off from God and his favour, as a blasphemer of him: than which, what can be more fearefull. Had not men then need to call themselves to an account, what warrant their manner of serving God hath, that it may appeare to their consciences to be good, and grounded upon the Word, the onely sound and true warrant of Religion, left otherwise their continuance in it after so much admonition, prove pride and presumption against the Lord; and so consequently, their owne destruction and confusion for ever. S. Augustine writing something upon this Booke of Numbers, hath this saying: Peccatum ignorantiæ est peccatum non sponte factum. Est ergo peccatum nolentis, quæritur ergo quæ sunt peccata nolentium, utrum quæ à nescientibus committuntur, an etiam quod facere quis compellitur, nam & hoc contra voluntatem est. Sed utique vult propter quod facit, ut vivere,ditescere, &c. Vult ergo facere, quia vult, propter quod facit ipsum peccare nemo vult, sed propter aliud sit quod vult qui peccat. Omnes enim qui scientes faciunt quod non licet vellent licere. &c.

Quæst. super Numb. lib. 4. cap. 25. Tom. 3

The fourth part.

Vers. 32. Chap. 24. THe fourth head of this Chapter, is the gatherer of stickes upon the Sabbath day. This also hath beene spoken of in Leviticus. He dyed for his fault you see, in our eyes seeming but small. Theodoret saith, because he was the first that violated that commandement of the Sabbath; therefore for example to all others in future times, he was so severely punished. Grievous therefore, wee all see, to the Lord, is the contempt of the Sabbath, and would God our hearts had more feeling of it before eternall death ensue of it.

Againe, see how plainly this place teacheth, that even the Lawes of the first Table are belonging to the Magistrates charge, and he bound to procure the performance of them, and to punish the transgressors, without any leave or licence from the Bishop of Rome, whose claime of authority in either Temporall or Ecclesiasticall matters, without the Precincts of his owne Territories, is meerly usurped, Antichristian, and wicked.

The fifth part.

THe last Branch is touching their fringes, a thing commanded of God, to draw the Jewes to a continuall remembrance and meditation of the Law of God. Not for any holinesse in the thing, and therfore they that inlarged them, and performed not the use, are condemned for their hypocrisie in many places. Matth. 23. &c. For the doers of the Law are justified, and not the bare remembrancers. Whereunto Gregory his speech fitteth, Sunt, qui spiritualia meditantur, sed implere negligunt quæ sciunt, &c.

CHAP.

CHAP. XVI.

The heads of this Chapter are chiefly these:

The rebellion of Corah and his company.
The peoples murmuring for their destruction.

In the first you may note againe these heads:

1. The quality of the persons that rebelled, Verse 1,2.
2. Their pretence and colour, Vers. 3.
3. Moses behaviour, Verse 4. to the 31.
4. The punishment of them, Vers. 31.
5. The remembrance made of it, Verse 36. to the 41.

1 TOuching the first. Corah the Ring-leader was a Levite, as you see in the Text, verse 1. And had Satan none to tempt to rebellion but a Levite, an Ecclesiasticall person, or Church-man, as we say? O yes, there were thousands others, but such is the malice of this poysonfull Serpent, that he ever desireth to set against the Church, men of the Church, against obedience and peace, men that should teach and preach both. I could exemplifie this by Sectaries, and Novelists, in all ages, who to the great hinderance of Religion, have busied themselves very unprofitably, to give it no harder a terme. By Romish Bishops, and their Agents, from whom these many yeares have come strange things throughout Christendome, &c. Epist. Iude. 10.

2 The others were Dathan and Abiram, the sonnes of Eliab, and On, the sonne of Pelech, all of the Tribe of Ruben, with 250. Captaines of the assembly, all Israelites, not forreners, not strangers, not aliens; and this is a great amplification of their fault. By sonnes and children, by friends and domesticks, by naturall subjects to be vexed and grieved: O twice foule fault! &c. The King is Parens patriæ, the Father of the Common-wealth, and the disobedience of a subject to him, is as rebellion of a childe to his father, &c.

3 Nay, they were not onely Israelites and homeborne children, but they were extraordinary men, famous in the Congregation, and men of renowne, saith the Text. Another circumstance much amplifying againe their fault; for the better breeding and place a man hath, the more should he love vertue, and hate vice, the more discerne betwixt true and worthy carriage, and base practices.

4 Could one man draw so many, &c? 2 Sam. 20. you see what one man did, and many Stories might shew it, as one little sparke maketh a mighty fire, &c. The use is to observe our fearfull corruption, if God doth not guide us.

The second part.

WHat is their quarrell, Verse 3. They say to Moses and Aaron, Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the Congregation is holy, &c. This is the practice of all Rebels, to pretend reformation, and to seem to plead for the people, that they are wronged, and ought to be righted, as you see here; All the Congregation is holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them; Why then should any dominere over them as you doe, You take too much upon you, &c? But was this the true quarrell indeed? No, no, pride, envy, ambition, was in their hearts, and that bred discontentment; discontentment, insurrection. Vide annotat. If a man should call out all Carpenters, none would come but such, &c. but call for all that thinke themselves wise and able to governe, &c. who will not come, &c.

2 Observe the condition of good men in this world, Quamvis omni diligentia moderationi studeant, non tamen vitare possunt calumnias & opprobria: Moses, singulare exemplum integritatis & modestiæ, yet thus spoken of, doceat nos aliunde sperare mercedem quam à mundo, in humilitate contineat & probet tolerantiam.

The third Part.

WHat doth Moses? First, hee goeth to God, Verse 4. hee fell upon his face. So in our griefes, Ad Deum.

2 He speaketh with the parties, a good meanes often to coole heate, we grow dumbe when we are displeased, and so our anger boyleth and encreaseth more.

3 He

3 Hee offereth an iſſue, not doubting of his calling, Sed dictante S. Sancto, qui ad preces Moſis dat conſilium,&c. juſtly charging them with that which they laid to him, Ye take too much upon you.

4 Particularly he ſpeaketh to the Levites, laying the greatneſſe of their ſin before their eyes. Seemeth it a ſmall thing to you,&c. Quod ſic ne vos gratos Deo præſtatis pro eo beneficio, quod vos præ omnibus aliis elegit, quos adhibet ad ſacram miniſterium, ut contempta hac illius gratia Sacerdotium affectetis. Contra Dominum congregati eſtis, quid enim, Aaron,&c. Non te Samuel, ſed me. Matth.10. qui vos, me,&c.

5 Then he ſent to call Dathan and Abiram, leaving no means unuſed to bring them to themſelves, but they anſwered, We will not come up. Nay, they goe further, and moſt fearfully preferre Ægypt before Canaan. See the Text; Sic apud impios nulla pia admonitio locum habet, ſed ſemper magis ac magis indurantur & excœcantur uſque dum ſe præcipites in interitum dederint.

6 Verſe 15. Then Moſes waxed angry and ſaid,&c. Be angry, ſaith the 4. Pſalme, and ſinne not. Moſes breaketh not out of decency, but ſtill keepeth himſelfe like himſelfe,&c. his integrity a comfort: Non accepi aſellum,&c. Not in malice, but in a right affection to truth. Wee may pray for offendors, that God would open their eyes,&c. againſt them, that God would not ſuffer their actions to proſper, leſt they more and more offend,&c.

Vide Marbechum, pag. 1.11.

7 They accept of the iſſue, Verſ. 18. taking every man his cenſer, and flocking together to give the adventure. Such, ſuch is the fearfull hardneſſe of mens hearts, that they dare doe any thing without remorſe and feeling, till the Axe of God ſmite them. Their hearts ſhould have ſmitten them, their conſciences accuſed them, &c. but clauſa ſutorum,&c. O pray for hearts of fleſh,&c. before it be too late, obſta principiis.

The fourth part.

NOw followeth the puniſhment, Verſe 19. Then the glory of the Lord appeared,&c. He that keepeth Iſrael doth neither ſlumber nor ſleep. The Lord ſeeth the wrongs of his ſervants, and the inſolencies of their enemies, he is patient and forbeareth, but when no patience will ſerve, hee never faileth to ſtep in at convenient time, to ſave the one, to puniſh the other. When Moſes and Aaron were ſafe (for he biddeth them depart firſt) as if he ſhould have ſaid, I can doe nothing till you be gone; A moſt ſingular place to ſhew what a bleſſing good Magiſtrates and Miniſters be. Surely, even wals of defence for the people, not onely againſt angry men, but even an angry God; ſo it is his pleaſure to reſpect them, and to be ſtayed and hindered by them. Againe, their hearts ſo ſtill bent to the people, as that they are ever ready to caſt themſelves before the Lord for them, as here by a moſt effectuall prayer, Verſe 22. O God, the God of the ſpirits,&c.

Wee are taught here, that if we will avoid the puniſhments of the wicked, we muſt forbeare their company, as here: Separate vos,&c. 2 Cor.6. *Ne trahatis jugum cum infidelibus, quod enim conſortium,&c. Apoc.*18. *Exite de Babylone, ne participes ſitis delictorum, ut de plagis ejus non accipiatis. Mat.*25. Chriſtus ſeparabit hœdos ab ovibus; ſic hic nos. This forme of puniſhment here was told by Moſes, Ex prophetico ſpiritu.

3 Accedit ut in hoc interitu ſerventur filii Core, qui impium illius conatum non probarunt, cap. 26. Ex his deſcendit Samuel, & alii qui eruditiſſimorum Pſalmorum Authores fuerunt. Verum ergo filius non portare iniquitatem patrum, ſi non conſenſerint.

4 *The earth clave aſunder,&c, Memorabile exemplum contra ſeditioſos, quo Deus oſtendit ſibi curæ eſſe gubernatores, & non impunitos fore qui reſiſtunt. Simile in Ephraemitis contra Iephtham inſurgemibus. In Abſolone contra Davidem, in Sedechia contra regem Babylonis. Rom.*12. *Qui reſiſtit ordinationi Dei,&c. Pro.*24. Time Dominum fili mi,&c. non cum ſeditioſis. Magiſtrates are men, and may doe wrong, yet we muſt not revenge by rebellion. Saul unjuſtly perſecuted David, yet David would not hurt him when he had opportunity.

5 Obſerve how creatures fight for God againſt wicked men. The earth openeth, the fire breaketh out: Major terror pœnarum diverſitas.

The fifth part.

VErſe 36. A memoriall made: Man apt to forget. Ex aliorum pœnis ſapere nos vult Deus, & metu judicii ipſius cautiores eſſe, ardentiores in pietatis ſtudio.

Verſ. 41. Sic hodie calamitates quas Deus in vindicta ſcelerum immittit, Evangelio ejuſque miniſtris tribuuntur.

The ſixt part.

ON the morrow a new rebellion of murmurers: Adhuc ante oculos judicium Dei, yet offend againe.

2 They impute to Moſes and Aaron, what they ſaw God did.

3 By their prayer themſelves were ſaved, yet now thus requite them. They looke more at the the losse of a few, tha n at the saving of many, even themselves, &c. Certe non solum illi tales sunt, sed & nos, &c.

2 Moses and Aaron fled to the Tabernacle, as putting trust onely in God, and he presently sheweth his presence to their comfort, and the others terror, as ever he will doe. Nunquam deserit sperantes in se, nunquam proprior quam in tribulatione, nunquam clarius apparet ejus gloria quam in adversis.

Againe, the Lord is ready to destroy them. Moses and Aaron make intercession, forgetting the wrong. We never are reconciled.

Aaron standing betwixt the quicke and dead: Typus Christi mediatoris.

Numerus occisorum docet quod proficiunt impii sua pertinacia, scilicet, ut Deus pœnas aggravet. Lev.26.septuplo nisi pœnituerint. Nihil deterius quam contra stipulum, &c. Psa.32. Ne sitis ut equus & mulus. 1 *Cor.*10. Paulus hanc historiam. Ne sitis murm. Vt illi, &c. Verse 48.

Corah figuram tenet eorum qui contra Ecclesiasticam fidem & doctrinam veritatis insurgunt, &c. Vide Origen. Hom.9.

CHAP. XVII.

The principall heads of this Chapter are foure:

The commandement to Moses given by God.
Moses obedience to the same.
The miracle in the Rod.
The use of it.

1 COncerning the first. The Lord commanding this further satisfaction to bee made to their mindes concerning Aarons calling; evident it is, that notwithstanding all before seene and done, as the earth opening, the fire from Heaven destroying, and the plague consuming stayed by Aarons prayer, yet they were not satisfied (for God doth nothing in vaine, and what a monstrous incredulity was this?) The Lord by this further miracle laboureth fully to resolve them, and so to free them from any more offending in this kind. A sweet goodnesse, rather by more mercy to heale them, than by due justice to overthrow them. And this is usuall with the Lord: think of it to make us love him, and to loath this crooked and corrupt nature of ours. I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walked in a way that was not good, even after their owne imaginations. A people that ever provoked me to my face, that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon bricke, &c. saith the Lord by his Prophet Esay. And why doth not he at once cut them off, and make short work of it? O see his mercy and sweetnesse to perverse sinners! O generation faithlesse and crooked, how long now shall I be with you, how long now shall I suffer you? Mark this sweet word, suffer you, & mark ever the sweet nature from whence it floweth: he calleth not to heaven for fire to destroy them, as some willed him to doe, neither any way useth the power of his Godhead to their hurt, but suffer, suffer, and heale them by more mercy. Bring him unto me; and Iesus rebuked the devill, and he went out of him, and the childe was healed. In another place, he marvelled at their unbeliefe, yet he destroyed them not, but went about by the Townes on every side, teaching. Full is the Scripture of such places. Lay them up for comfort and increase of faith in this sweet Saviour evermore, and both in this Chapter and the former, learne to grudge no man the place that God giveth him.

Esay 65.2.

Mat.17.17. Eodem modo nobiscum agit, quia non modo fidei debilitatem multis adminiculis confirmat, sed conatur frenum injicere levitati & inconstantiæ. Calvin. Mar.6.6.

The second part.

THe second head, is Moses obedience to this Commandement of God, without reluctation or doubting. Sara, we know, laughed when she heard of an extraordinary worke of God. Zacharias, the father of Iohn Baptist, doubted. That Captaine in the Booke of Kings, said, If the windowes of heaven were opened, and corne rained downe, the Prophets words could not be true. And Moses himselfe was weake, when he was commanded to strike the Rocke of water, but here it is not so. He obeyeth God readily, and calleth for twelve Rods from the twelve Tribes, as hee was commanded. So let us doe ever, and it shall be that which fitteth us, and pleaseth God exceedingly. How renowned in the Word is Abraham for beleeving, under hope, past hope, and not looking either at his owne or wives age; with many others, whose obedience and faith are noted for our example in the Word? &c.

The

The third part.

Virga arefacta & diu geſtata à principibus in dicendo jure. Rom.4. *Epiſt.*3.

THe third head is the miracle it ſelf. When Moſes on the morrow went into the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony, where he had put the Rods over-night, Behold the Rod of Aarõ for the houſe of Levi, was budded, and brought forth buds, and brought forth bloſſomes, & bare ripe Almonds, &c. A wonderfull worke of God, which ſundry wayes may profit us. As firſt to conſider, that if the power of God can doe this in a drie ſticke, cannot he make the barren woman to beare, and be a joyfull mother of Children? Can he not doe whatſoever he will doe? By this power the Sea is dryed, the Rocke gives water, the earth cleaveth under the feet of men, fire deſcends whoſe nature is to aſcend, he raiſeth the dead, and calleth things that are not as if they were. In a word, he is able to doe exceeding abundantly above all that we aske or thinke, &c.

2 This Rod is a notable Type of Chriſt, his perſon and office. Of his perſon, in that hee was borne of the Virgin Mary, who thongh hee deſcended of the royall blood, yet was now poore and meane, as that royall race was brought exceeding low, nothing remaining but as it were a root onely. Now the ſaid Virgin flouriſheth againe, as Aarons Rod did, and beareth ſuch fruit as never woman bare. Of this ſpeakes Eſay the Prophet, when he ſaith; There ſhall come a Rod forth of the ſtocke of Iſhai, and a Graft ſhall grow out of his Roots. Of his office, both Prieſtly and Kingly: His Prieſtly office is figured, in that being offered upon the Croſſe, he was as Aarons dryed Rod, or as the Pſalme ſaith, Dryed up like a Potſherd. But when he roſe againe, he became like Aarons budding and fruit-bearing Rod, bringing forth to man, beleeving on him, remiſſion of ſinnes, righteouſneſſe, and eternall life. His Kingly office, in that he governeth his Church with a Rod or Scepter of righteouſneſſe, as it is in the Pſalme. The Scepter of thy Kingdome is a right Scepter. Which Rod and Scepter is the preaching of the Goſpell, &c.

Eſa.11.1.

Pſal.22.15.

Pſa.45.

3 Againe, it was a reſemblance of true Miniſters, and of all faithfull men and women: for none of all theſe ought to be drie and withered ſticks, but beare and bring forth buds, and fruit according to their places.

4 It is a ſhadow alſo of our reſurrection, by which we ſhall grow greene againe, and flouriſh with a new and eternall glory, having like dead ſeed lyen in the ground, and wee ſhall bring forth ripe Almonds; that is, the praiſe of Gods incomprehenſible goodneſſe to us for ever, and ever.

5 It reſembleth our reformation and amendment of life: for, when our heart feeleth what is amiſſe, this is as the Bud; when it reſolveth of a change and a future amendment, this as the Bloſſome; and when it performeth the ſame by a new reformed life indeed, this is as the ripe Almonds of Aarons Rod. See in that example of the Acts of the Apoſtles: They were pricked at the heart, behold the Bud: Secondly, they were fully reſolved, behold the Bloſſome; Thirdly, they were baptized, and continued in the Apoſtles doctrine and fellowſhip, and breaking of bread, and prayers, behold ripe and goodly Almonds. See it in that example of Maſter Iulius Palmer, mentioned in the Acts and Monuments of our Church. Hee came from Oxford to Gloceſter, to ſee the burning of that reverend Father Biſhop Hooper, and ſeeing the cruelty, hee burſt out as hee went home, and ſaid; O barbarous cruelty! His heart was wounded at ſuch a cruell ſight, and this was the Bud: when he came to Oxford, he borrowed Bookes, and fell to reading for knowledge of the truth, this was as the Bloſſome: In the end he was reſolved againſt Popery, which before he profeſſed, and burned like a faithfull Martyr for the Goſpell: this was as ripe and goodly Almonds upon a ſtaffe before dead, and without all ſweet juice of true and ſaving knowledge.

Acts 2.42.

Yet one reſemblance more: S. Iohn you ſee writeth in his Epiſtle, To Children, to young men, and to Fathers, Non corporales ætates, ſed animæ profectuum differentias ponit. He meaneth by theſe (ſaith Origen) not corporall ages, but the difference of profiting in the ſoule. The firſt degree reſembled to Buds, the ſecond to Bloſſomes, and the third to ripe Almonds.

Thus have men made uſe of this miracle in the Rod, and let their Applications profit us alſo, bee wee Miniſters, or bee we other beleevers, let us ever remember wee ought to bee fruitfull.

The fourth part.

Verſe 10.

THe fourth and laſt head, is the commandement of God, to bring Aarons Rod againe before the Teſtimony, to be kept for a token to the rebellious children, to cauſe their murmurings to ceaſe, that they die not. Peace and order is the Lords end, trouble and contention, the mother of diſorder, is too often mans end, but follow we God we were beſt, if wee meane to live with God for ever.

2 The Lord manifeſteth and confirmeth his calling of Aaron to the Prieſthood, againſt all his his privy and open enemies, that they might learne to honour and obey him, and both they and all after them for ever not usurp that holy office, unlesse called as Aaron was. If you aske why God doth not joyne others with him to content them; The answer may be, that Aaron was a Type of Christ, who hath no compahions in his office, though foolish Popery make him many. The words that follow in the 12. and 13. Verses, being still unkinde to a most kinde God, may notably teach us the corruption of mans heart in remembring punishment, and forgetting the cause, as Popery doth at this day speake much of Justice executed against them, and not a word of their deserving of the same, by treasons, conspiracies, &c.

Heb.5.
2 Chron.26.

CHAP. XVIII.

The principall heads of this Chapter are two.

The first of the Ministery and Office of the Priests and Levites.
The second, of their stipend and maintenance.

1. CONcerning the first, we see how fitly the Lord, after hee had cleered and justified Aarons calling, delivereth unto him his office and charge: Thou and thy sonnes, saith he, and thy Fathers house with thee shall beare the iniquity of the Sanctuary, both thou and thy Sons with thee shall beare the iniquity of the Priests office, &c. That is, if you trespasse in any thing concerning the Ceremonies of the Sanctuary, or your office, you shall be punished. The Priests therefore must carefully looke to their places, that neither themselves offend, neither any other by their negligence. A great and weighty office not to be grudged at in such as are called unto it, since it is attended as well with great punishment as honour. The like is the case of Ministers of the word at this day, and to the end. The blood of them that perish through their default, will God require at the Pastors hand. A most fearefull speech were it duly regarded.

2. The Lord teacheth Aaron and his Sonnes, how they ought to behave themselves towards the Levites: first, calling them Brethren, that superiours may not despise their inferiours, and appointing them what they shall doe. He instructeth the Levites also how they ought to cary themselves towards the Priests their superiours. The Priests shall deale with the greater matters, and the Levites with the Lesser: Bring with thee, saith he, thy Brethren of the Tribe of Levi of the family of thy father which shall be joyned with thee, and minister unto thee, but thou and thy sonnes with thee shall minister before the Tabernacle of the Testimony, &c. as followeth in the Text. Verse 2.

3. I have made your Priests office an office of service. Therefore the stranger that commeth neere shall be slaine: And is not still the Priests office an office of service? How, how then should it be thought of, to stir up unto all painfull diligence in the same, that God may take comfort in us respecting his will, and we finde eternall reward with him in doing our duty?

4. This distinction of the Levites from the Priests, giving them inferiour places, and appointing them respect and obedience to the Priests, how still, still doth it shew us the Lords good liking of order in his Church, and of inequality of Ministers for orders sake. I have noted it more largely elsewhere, and therefore only remember it now. It was well said: Obedientia Civium fœlicitas urbis: The obedience of Citizens is the felicity of the City. And it is as true of Ministers: Obedience in the Church; Quanto quis diligentius obsequitur, tanto majorem gratiam obtinebit; The more diligently and willingly a man doth obey, the more favour ever shall he finde with God and man. Xenophon.

The second part.

THe second head is their salary and maintenance, of which thus speaketh the Lord most fitly, when he had described their duty, knowing they could not attend upon it as they should without distraction if they were not provided for, but must provide for themselves: Behold, I have given thee the keeping of mine offerings, as the first fruits, first born, and the tenths, &c. Worthy and thrice worthy it is to be observed, how liberally the Lord dealeth in this point of maintenance of the Ministery. It is not bare, it is not beggarly and base, but it is most plentifull, gracious in God, and abundantly comfortable to them. Carefull of this was God ever. Hee that serveth the Altar, shall live of the Altar by Gods appointment cheerefully. Let him that is instructed in the Word, make him that hath taught him partaker of all his goods; that is, of whatsoever he hath, according to his ability. This is no niggardly retribution. Pharaoh had a care to provide for Verse 8.

1 Cor.9.4.
Gal.6.6.

Gen.47.22. 1 Kings 18.17. Iudg.17.5,10.

for his Idoll Prieſts in that great famine. Iezabel the like, and all Idolaters the like: ſhall they riſe up in judgement againſt us? The Phariſie boaſted that he paid his tithe truly, and ſhall wee boaſt that we have deceived our teacher cunningly? God forbid; For except your righteouſneſſe exceed the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſies, ſaith our Saviour Chriſt, you cannot enter into the kingdome of God. Yea the Phariſies were juſt in tything Mint and Aniſe, they would not withhold the leaſt things. In God is no fault. Hee ever hath given preſidents of plenty and bounty; he hath required it at mans hands, he hath promiſed great bleſſing to the religious performers of it, and threatned puniſhment to them that doe otherwiſe. Upon our owne heads therefore muſt be our owne ſinne. The Lords will is knowne unto us. It is Origens ſpeech very worthy remembrance and obſervation, Non mihi videtur hujuſmodi animus memoriam habere Dei, nec cogitare nec credere quod Deus dedit fructus quos ita recondit quaſi alienos à Deo: That minde ſeemeth to me to have no remembrance of God, neither to thinke nor beleeve that God hath given thoſe fruits, which he ſo hideth up as nothing belonging to God. Obſerve it carefully alſo that this matter of maintenance of his Miniſters, the Lord here ſaith, ſhall be a perpetuall covenant of ſalt before him: that is, during and continuing, not arbitrary and uncertaine at the pleaſure of man. For ſalt is a reſiſter of corruption, and ſo uſed of us in our occaſions, as the Egyptians did in their dead corps for long preſervation of them.

Verſ.20. 2. And the Lord ſaid to Aaron: Thou ſhalt have none inheritance in their lands (to wit, of Canaan) neither ſhalt thou have any part among them; I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Iſrael. In which words is ſignified not onely that God is more to him than all earthly treaſure, but that all ſuch things as men eſteeme, are to him vile in reſpect of God. Surely a place it is of unſpeakable comfort. Inſomuch that Origen well noting the ſweetneſſe of it, inlargeth it to all the Miniſtery to the worlds end, as well as to Aaron and his children: Annon omnes ſacerdotes ſumus? Are not we all Prieſts ſaith he? And Cyprian maketh an excellent uſe of it when he ſaith: Mirum valde quod te ſolo ſit Deus contentus, tu vero non contentus eo: ſufficiat tibi quaſo Deus tuus, ſicut & tu Deo ſufficis. It is a great marvaile that God being content with thee, thou ſhouldeſt not be content with thy God. I pray thee let thy God ſatisfie thee, as thou doeſt ſatisfie thy God.

3. But may not Miniſters in theſe dayes have any inheritance, lands, and portions among men, becauſe Aaron and his ſons had none? No, this was a legall ceremony, and bindeth not now more than that prohibition to drinke wine. *Levit.*10.9. with ſuch like. The yoke of the law is taken from us, and not to be reduced againe. In the 21. of Ioſua, ſee what proviſion for Cities and grounds for them and their cattell. The like in this booke of Numbers, Chapter 35. *Ier.*32. *ver.*8. A purchaſe and land, and title, diſcent and right, by kindred and blood. Euſebius writeth, that Paulus Samoſatenus, being depoſed, would not out of the Churches houſe till Aurelius the Emperour removed him. Origen mentioneth rents and revenues of the Church. Sabellicus writeth, that Lucina a noble and rich Gentlewoman of Rome made the Church her heire. Sozomen, how Conſtantine out of the tribute of every City gave a portion to the Churches for maintenance of their Miniſters. Euſebius, of free immunity from all ſervices and taxes. Ambroſe ſaith, that the Churches lands paid tribute, therefore the Church had lands. Baſil ſaith, that Biſhops were rich, and able to give to Churches. Nicephorus ſtorieth how the worthy Empreſſe Theodoſius wife, adorned the Biſhops houſe with all goodly furniture, and gave a yearely revenue. Thus have not all ages and perſons dealt ſparingly, or grudgingly with their Clergy; but both thought them worthy reſpect, and moſt worthily reſpected them in their maintenance, and otherwiſe. Such as would have Miniſters like the Apoſtles, in having no certainties, would be far off from ſelling all they have, and laying downe the price at the Miniſters feet, as men did in thoſe dayes. But I goe no further, what is in the heart, not onely tongue, but hand will ſhew. A good heart, a liberall hand; a naughty heart, a naughty pinching hand.

Euſeb l.7.hiſt. cap.30. Tract.31.in Mat. Æneas.7.l.8. lib.1.cap.8. Hiſt.10.cap.7. Epiſt.5. Epiſt.140.

CHAP. XIX.

This Chapter is wholly ſpent in the ſacrifice of the red Cow. For the better underſtanding whereof we muſt underſtand that there were two kindes of purifying or making cleane; the one from ſinnes committed by ignorance and error, whereof we have heard; the other from uncleanneſſe gotten by touching of uncleane things. This was made partly by waſhing of the body and clothes, partly by ſprinkling of Holy water made of the aſhes of this red Cow. The manner whereof is laid downe in this Chapter.

1. Whereof this water was to be made.
2. How it was to be made.
3. To what end and uſe.

The firſt part.

TOuching the firſt. Speake unto the children of Iſrael, that they bring thee a red Cow without blemiſh wherein is no ſpot, upon which never yoke came, &c. A notable figure of our Saviour Chriſt, by the particulars. For firſt it was a Cow, that the imbecillity of the ſexe might ſhadow out the great humiliation of our Saviour Chriſt by taking our fleſh, whereof the Prophet ſpeaketh, when he ſaith: He hath neither forme nor beauty, when we ſhall ſee him, there ſhall be no form that we ſhould deſire him, &c. Verſe 2.

2. This Cow muſt be red: To note the true humane body of Chriſt, as Adam had, who had denomination of red earth, ſaith Theodoret. To note out, ſaith Auguſtine, the paſſion of Chriſt bloody and cruell. Vulgaris color eligitur: A common colour is choſen, ſaith Calvin, leſt ſome myſtery in white or blacke might have been thought to be. Red, ſaith another, to note out, ignеum Chriſti amorem, quo totus ardet & rubet in conſpectu Dei patris: The fiery love of Chriſt, whereby wholly he burneth and is red in the ſight of God his Father. Laſt, the Cow was red, ſaith another: to note out the grievouſneſſe of ſin in it ſelfe, red as Scarlet, and the occaſion of red bloodſhed of our Lord and Saviour. Auguſtine. Sexus fœmineus propter infirmitatem carnis. Eſay 53. 2. Ut corpus terreum notaret, quia nomen Adæ terram ruſam ſignificat. Ruſa propter ipſam cruentam paſſionem Chriſti. Auguſt. Eſay 1.

3. The Cow was without blemiſh, expertem peccati Chriſtum dominum ſignificat, to note our Saviours purity from all ſin, ſaith Theodoret, & eam rem firmius repetitio commendavit: And that thing more ſtrongly doth the repetition note, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, to wit, wherein is no ſpot. Which words you ſee follow in the Text, and are all one with the former without blemiſh. Of this purity ſpeaketh the Prophet. Hee had done no wickedneſſe, neither was any deceit in his mouth. Eſay 53.9.

4. Upon the which never came yoke. This noted, ſaith Theodoret, the freedome whereof himſelfe ſpeaketh in the Goſpell, when he ſaith: Then are the children free. Yea, it noted ſay others, that Chriſt was not ſubject to the yoke of ſin and Satan himſelfe: according to his owne ſaying: The Prince of this world commeth and hath nought in me. And that he ſhould alſo free us, even ſo many as beleeve in his name, ſaith Saint Auguſtine. Chriſti libertatem. Mat. 17. 26. Iohn 14. 30.

5. This Cow was delivered to be ſlaine. So was Chriſt: By whom? By Iſraelites. And ſo was Chriſt. To whom? To Eleazar the Prieſt. By the Prieſt Chriſt we offer all our ſacrifices of prayer, &c. And why not to Aaron? Fortè ſic figuratum eſt non ad tempus quod tunc erat, ſed ad poſteros hujus Sacerdotii paſſionem Dei perventuram. Haply, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, ſo was figured that the paſſion of our Saviour Chriſt ſhould not bee in that time that was then, but ſhould come to the poſterity of that Prieſthood. And wee are all now a royall Prieſthood, &c. Where muſt this Cow be ſlaine? without the hoſt, ſo Chriſt, Ioh. 19. Heb. 13. 12. Paſſionem ſalvatoriæ extra portã ſignificat: It noted, ſaith Theodoret, the ſuffring of our Saviour without the gate.

6. And being ſlaine, what ſhall be done? Eleazar the Prieſt ſhall take of her blood with his finger, and ſprinkle it before the Tabernacle of the Congregation ſeven times. This ſprinkling noted the Redemption and purging of us by his blood, for ſo the Apoſtle: If the blood of Buls and of Goates, and the aſhes of an Heifer, ſprinkling them that are uncleane, ſanctifieth as touching the purifying of the fleſh, how much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, which through the eternall Spirit offered himſelfe without fault to God, purge your conſcience from dead workes to ſerve the living God? By the carying out of the hoſt, it might have ſeemed that God abhorred the Cow; but this ſprinkling of the blood ſhewed it was cleane, for an uncleane thing cannot cleanſe, neither can be offered. So Chriſt our Saviour, although he ſeemed vile for our ſake, as hath beene ſaid, yet indeed nothing departed from his holineſſe. Epheſ. 5. 2. Secondly, this ſprinkling ſhewed that Chriſt cannot profit any but by application of faith. It was to bee done before the Tabernacle of the Congregation, to ſhew that Chriſt was offered, and his blood ſhed Heb. 9. 13.

Auguſtine. Contra faciem tabernaculi, quia non aliter declaratum quam fuerat divino teſtimonio prænuntiatum.

in conſpectu Dei Patris: in the ſight of God his Father, to purchaſe for us remiſſion of ſinnes. And it was to be done ſeven times; comfortably to ſignifie that the blood of Chriſt ever availeth a penitent ſinner. For otherwiſe mans ſeventy times ſeven times ſhould be more mercifull than God, which were horrible to thinke.

7. Eleazar alſo ſhall cauſe the Cow to be burnt in his ſight, with her skinne, and her fleſh, and her blood, and her dung ſhall he burne her. Burned, to note the grievous ſufferings of Chriſt our comfort and good. Her skin, her fleſh, &c. to note whole Chriſt our comfort and good. His fleſh our meate, his blood our drinke, his tongue our teacher, his heart to love us, his power to protect and defend us, his life to ſave us, his merits to juſtifie us, &c. O what ſhall we render for ſuch mercy! O homo quanti te fecit Deus tuus ex his quæ pro te factus eſt, agnoſce, & quanto pro te factus eſt vilior, tanto tibi ſit carior: O man, ſaith Bernard, obſerve and ſee what reckoning God hath made of thee, by that which he was made or became for thee. And the more that he abaſed himſelfe, the more deare let him be unto thee. Let him be mel in ore, melos in aure, jubilum in corde: Hony in the mouth, melody in the eare, and joy in the heart.

Verſe 6. Aſpergillum, or Aſperſorium Tale Aſpergillum eſt fides, qua ſanguinem Chriſti pro nobis effuſum cordibus noſtris aſpergit. Nec enim paſſio & mors Chriſti prodeſt niſi eam nobis applicemus per fidem. Sanguinem fundi non ſatis eſſe niſi ejus irrigatione mundati.

8. The Prieſt then ſhall take Cedar wood, and hyſope, and ſcarlet lace, and caſt them in the midſt of the fire where the Cow burneth. Of theſe three were the ſprinkler made which they did uſe to ſprinkle withall: and therefore ſaith Calvin, hoc viſibili ſigno admoniti ſe non tantum aqua ablui ſed illo ſanguine. By this viſible ſign they were admoniſhed, that not by water alone they were waſhed, but by that blood. Againe, that it was not enough for the blood to be ſhed, unleſſe they were ſprinkled with it, and ſo made clean. Alſo, Cum ligni Cedrini pretioſus ſit odor, in Hyſſope vis purgandi, hinc iterum apparebat mundam fuiſſe illam victimam quamvis peccata cum eorum maledictione ſuſtineret: Whenas the Cedar-wood had a ſweet ſavour, and the Hyſop a property of purging: hereby it appeareth that the ſacrifice of Chriſt was pure, although hee bare mans ſins, with the curſe that belonged to them. Theodoret ſaith, lignum Cedrinum Crucis erat figura, Coccinum typus ſanguinis Chriſti, Hyſſopus purgat: The Cedar-wood was a figure of the Croſſe: The Scarlet a type of the blood of our Lord, and Hyſop purgeth. S. Auguſtine ſaith, Lignum Cedrinum ſpes eſt quæ debet in ſupernis firmiter habitare, Hyſſopus fides quæ cum ſit herba humilis radicitus hæret in petra, Coccinum charitas quod fervorem ſpiritus igneo calore teſtatur: The Cedar-wood noteth hope, which muſt have habitation above: Hyſop noteth Faith, which being a low hearb, fixeth his rootes faſt in the Rock: And Scarlet noteth Charity: witneſſing by his redneſſe or fiery colour the heat of the ſpirit.

Verſe 7.

Verſe 8. Quod Dominus Sacerdotẽ & eum qui vaccam combuſsit, et illum qui cineres collegit immundos cenſeri vult, cum tamen hoc ipſo operam ſuam ad emundationem populi collocarint, docet Chriſtum dum nos ab immunditia peccati purgaturus ſit, reputatum ibi in oculis hominũ pro immundo et ſceleſto homine, ita ut in medio duorum latronum crucifixus ſit, quamvis innocentiſsimus eſſet.

9. Then ſhall the Prieſt waſh his clothes, and he ſhall waſh his fleſh in water, and then come into the hoſt, and the Prieſt ſhall be unclean unto the even. Alſo he that burneth her ſhall waſh his clothes in water, and waſh his fleſh in water, and be unclean untill even. Uncleane were theſe dealers about the Cow, ſaith Theodoret, ad denotandum peccatum eorum qui Chriſtum Crucifigunt: To note out the ſinne of them that crucifie Chriſt. Secondly, that holineſſe and vertue to purifie, was not in the ſigne, but in the thing ſignified.

10. And a man that is cleane ſhall take up the aſhes of the Cow, and put them without the hoſt in a cleane place, &c. Habet hæc deportatio cinerum ad locum mundum ſignificationem ſepulturæ Chriſti. Sepultus enim eſt in monumento novo in quo alius quiſquam poſitus ante non fuerat: This carying of the Aſhes into a cleane place had a ſignification of the buriall of our Saviour Chriſt, who we know was buried in a new tombe wherein before never man lay. A cleane place never uſed before. With the aſhes of this Cow was made a water, as here ver. 9. or the water of ſeparation, becauſe that they that were ſeparated from their uncleanneſſe were ſprinkled with it, and ſo made clean, chap. 8. ver. 7. Alſo holy water, becauſe it was ordained to an holy uſe, chap. 5. Again, the water of ſin, becauſe it was made to purge ſin, &c. Sundry names had it in regard of the uſes. But no warrant any where for the continuance of it in theſe dayes, as Popery doth.

Verſe 11.

Pſal. 50. 18.

1 Tim. 5. 22.

The ſecond part.

THe ſecond chiefe head in this chapter is uſe of it, whereof the Text ſaith thus. He that toucheth the dead body of any man ſhall be uncleane even ſeven dayes, &c. Hereby was ſignified Communicantes aliorum peccatis: Such as were partakers of other mens ſins, that even they alſo were uncleane, as well as the chief authors or committers of them. A thing true in theſe dayes ſtill, and as needfull to be thought of as ever. So are men given to abetting, incouraging, and maintaining of ſinne, and evill doing. We forget the ſaying of God in the Pſalme: When thou ſaweſt a theefe thou conſentedſt to him, and haſt been partaker with the adulterers, &c. We forget the words and advice of the holy Apoſtle to Timothy: Be not partaker of other mens ſinnes, keepe thy ſelfe pure. With many ſuch like places in holy Scripture. But the day will come wherein they will be laid unto us, and we muſt anſwer a juſt Judge for all. Let us take heed whileſt wee have time. Againe, marke how it is ſaid in the 13. ver. that he defileth the Tabernacle of the Lord. So we at this day entring into the Church with foule hearts and minds. We care much that our clothes be cleane, but we never care to our inward parts, and they, not our clothes defile the Tabernacle.

2. And

2. And all the veſſels that be open which have no covering faſtned upon them, &c. Significat exteriora, ſi interiora tecta ſint, non contaminari: Ex corde enim cogitationes malæ, cædes, &c. It ſignified, ſay writers, that if the inward parts of men be covered, the outward parts bee not defiled: becauſe out of the heart come evill thoughts, murders, &c. were the heart well covered, that ſinne and evill might not iſſue out of it, the body and outward parts would not be ſo defiled. Some others ſay hereby were alſo ſignified ſolutiores & vitio linguæ laborantes: Diſſolute perſons given to pratling and talking unneceſſarily and unfitly. Men or women whoſe mouthes bee ſtill open and never covered. Theſe are uncleane before God and men, plagues in a Commonwealth, and moſt wicked diſturbers of the ſweet peace of humane ſociety. The wicked walking tongue is a common place to dwell long in, if I had not ſpoken of it. Lay thy hand upon thy mouth, ſaith Wiſdome: and keep Lord the doore of my lips, prayeth the holy Prophet. Surely a cover upon this veſſell is a happy thing, and ſuch as feare God will be carefull of it: Even as it were with bit and bridle, let us hold in that little unruly member in time and place ſo requiring. To have ſpoken hath repented many, but to have held in, few or none ever repented. Whereupon haply the proverb, Tutum ſilentium, Silence is ſafe, &c. Verſe 15.

3. Whoſoever toucheth a bone of a dead man, or a grave, ſhall be uncleane ſeven dayes. Let this make us marvell how in Popery there ſhould be ſuch worſhipping of bones and reliques of dead perſons, ut meritorum quibus ſanctos florere dicunt fiant participes. Verſ. 16.

4. For an unclean perſon they ſhall take of the burnt aſhes of the ſin-offering, that is, of the red Cow burnt for ſin, and pure water, to wit, out of the fountain or river ſhall be put thereto in a veſſel. And a clean perſon, that is, one of the Prieſts which is clean, ſhall take Hyſſop and dip it in the water, and ſprinkle it upon the Tent, and upon all the veſſels, and on the perſons that were therein, and upon him that touched the bone, or the ſlaine, or the dead, or the grave. Benedictus ſis Domine Deus, qui ſemper cogitas quomodo peccata noſtra abluas: Bleſſed be thou O Lord God, ſaith a feeling heart upon this place, which ever art thinking how our ſinnes may be waſhed away. And have not wee as good cauſe to ſay it as he, if we have the like feeling? Surely his goodneſſe is all one, and his mercy to man ſuffereth no change, but from mans owne ſin and unthankfulneſſe. Secondly, obſerve here what a notable ground here is for Popiſh holy-water. Here is a commandement to make their water: They have neither God nor commandement for theirs. Here are aſhes of a red Cow, they take ſalt. This was to prefigure Chriſt to come, theirs cannot doe ſo, becauſe he is now come. We know the Scripture. If that Son ſhall free us, we ſhall be free indeed. Iohn 8. 36. For he is made unto us wiſdome, and righteouſneſſe, and ſanctification, and redemption, that hee which rejoyceth, may rejoyce in the Lord, 2 Cor. 1. 31. And theſe benefits of remiſſion of ſinnes, of freedome from Satan, of ſanctification and cleanneſſe, hee no otherwiſe imparteth to man, but by the Word and Sacraments ordained of him, not by Popiſh holy-water, deviſed by themſelves to rob God of his glory. This could not take ſin away, but ſhadowed him that both could and ſhould doe it. They affirme of theirs that it taketh away ſin, driveth away the devill and Mice, and maketh barren women fruitfull, with twenty ſuch feates. But leaving this toy, let us obſerve to our comfort, that in this water made thus of the aſhes of the Cow, was notably figured, how Chriſt by his death and paſſion ſhould be made water unto us, whereby we ſhould not onely be purged from the ſtaines of our ſinne, that we might appeare pure and cleane in the ſight of God; but whereby we might alſo coole all the raging heate and thirſt, which hapneth from the fearefull feeling of Gods wrath againſt our ſinne, according to that ſweet Scripture: Whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never bee more athirſt: But the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a Well of water, ſpringing up unto eternall life. If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drinke. He that beleeveth in me, ſaith the Scripture, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of the water of life. This water is offered unto us by the preaching of the Word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments: And it is received of us by faith, the inſtrument whereby we take hold of Chriſt and all his benefits. Unto this looked the Apoſtle, when hee ſaith: If the blood of Buls and of Goates, and the aſhes of an Heifer, ſprinkling them that are uncleane, ſanctifieth as touching the purifying of the fleſh, how much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, which through the eternall Spirit offered himſelfe without fault unto God; purge your conſcience from dead workes to ſerve the living God? In which word the Apoſtle betwixt the piacular and cleanſing blood in the old Teſtament, and the blood of Chriſt in the New Teſtament; teacheth that that reached onely to the purifying of the fleſh, but this unto the purifying of the Conſcience. A thing to bee well noted againſt them that ſay, there is but a verball communication of properties betwixt the two natures of Chriſt. For if there bee but a verball communication, then is our purification by the blood of Chriſt alſo verball: And if ſo, then what is Chriſt his blood better than the blood in the Olde Teſtament. But God forbid that Chriſt his blood ſhould onely verbally cleanſe us from ſinne. If then it doth truly cleanſe us, as it doth indeed to our eternall good, from whence hath it his power? Surely not of it ſelfe, but by communication with his deity, or divine power. For by no power can ſinne be taken away, but by divine power. No man forgiving ſin, but God onely. Whereupon Saint Iohn ſaith: The blood

Here is no croſſing, they uſe divers. See the Breefe.

Iohn 4.14.

Iohn 7.37, 38.

Heb. 9.13, 14.

of Christ, not as a man, but as the Son of God cleanseth us from all sin, There is therefore no verball, but a reall communication of properties betwixt the two natures.

5. Touching this ceremony of sprinkling water, the Lord thereby would draw his people from the superstitions of the Gentiles which they used, and stir up to the hope of resurrection, which the heathens had not. Secondly, hee would admonish them of the uncleanesse that commeth from sin, which as it hath infected our nature wholly, not leaving a sound place within or without, from the top of our head to the sole of our foote; so hath it and doth it defile all our actions, making them unable to endure the pure eyes of the Lord, and his just judgement: whereupon the Prophet saith: All our righteousnes even our best righteousnes, is but as a stained cloth. And David in his Psalme prayeth: Enter not into judgement, O Lord, with thy servants, for in thy sight no flesh living shall be justified. Thirdly, the Lord would teach man that he is not able to cleanse himselfe from any uncleannesse of sinne, but must have that from elsewhere; namely from the precious blood of the immaculate Lambe, slaine and offered for man, that so he might be cleansed, being regenerated by the holy Ghost. Fourthly, he would thus admonish man to follow after cleanneſse, eschewing such things as might defile him.

Esay 64. Psal. 142.

6. But why was he uncleane that sprinkled this water, so that he must also wash his clothes and wash himselfe in water? Ideo nimirum ut indicet istam purificationem ab immunditia non esse veram purificationem, sed aliam in ea significari & adumbrari, in quam respicere oporteat: Even therefore that the Lord might thus shew that that purification was not the true purification, but another must be looked after, which was signified and shadowed in that.

7. If any man will say, It is hallowed water, &c. Let him know that their hallowing having no warrant in the word is not worth a rush, but it is a great abuse of the name of God, to apply it by prayer and invocation to other uses then God hath appointed. And let them bee assured the Lord will never hold them guiltlesse that thus take his name in vaine. Witches and Conjurers, Charmers and Sooth-sayers, use Gods holy name in blessings and speeches, framed by themselves to purposes offensive to God, but those blessings and hallowings, prayers and speeches, will turne to the encrease of cursings upon them, and are meere illusions of Satan to deceive them by, as this matter of unholy holy water in popery is.

Chap. XX.

This Chapter containeth foure principall heads: namely:

- The death of Miriam.
- The bringing water againe out of the Rocke.
- An Embassage sent to Edom for passage.
- The death of Aaron.

THe people abode at Cadesh, where Miriam dyed, and was buried there. This was forty yeares after their departure out of Ægypt. Miriam you know was sister to Moses and Aaron, graced by God with the Spirit of prophecy, and many good parts; doing many good offices in the government of that people with her brethren. And although at one time she shewed weaknesse and offended God, in envying her brethren, yet the Lord upon her repentance forgave her, and ever after she lived orderly, and was a worthy Matron among that people: Insomuch that the Prophet Micah joyneth her with her brethren, when he bringeth in God speaking to the Israelites thus; O my people what have I done unto thee, or wherein have I grieved thee, testifie against me. Surely I brought thee out of the land of Ægypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants, and I have sent before thee Moses and Aaron, and Miriam. It is an example of God his speciall love and favour, as well to women as to men, bestowing the gifts of the holy Ghost even upon them also, and using their service as he thinketh good. Whereupon the Apostle saith: In Christ Iesu there is neither male nor female, that is, God is not partially inclined to the one, with neglect of the other, but good and gracious to both. And Peter therefore maketh them equally heires of grace.

Mic. 6. 3, 4.

Gal. 4. 1 Pet. 3.

2. Miriam was that sister of Moses which watched him when he was put in that little basket a yong childe, and hid in the flagges, to see what might become of him: and when Pharaoh his daughter walking that way found him, asked whether shee should call a Nurse, and then called her mother, who was a joyfull woman to receive her childe with such warrant to nurse it up for the Kings Daughter. In likelihood she was then a girle of 10. or 12. yeares old, because she could so boldly and wisely cast for her yong brothers safety. Moses was forty when he fled, Acts 7. 23. And in Madian with Ietbro he lived forty yeares: ver. 30. Her death was forty yeares after their departure out of Ægypt. So that by this reckoning Miriam was about one hundred and thirty yeares old when she dyed. A rare and extraordinary age in a woman.

A great honour beſtowed of God upon her, and to bee reverenced in her and all. So commanded God in his Law. Thou ſhalt riſe up before the hoare-headed, and honor the perſon of the old man, and dread thy God, I am the Lord. Age is a crowne of glory when it is found in the way of righteouſneſſe, ſaith Salomon. Agreeably that in Wiſedome: The honourable age is not that which is of long time, neither that which is meaſured by the number of yeares, but wiſedome is the gray haire, and an undefiled life is the old age. Cicero writing of old age, ſaw as much, and therefore ſaith; Non cani non rugæ repente authoritatem afferre poſſunt, ſed ſuperior ætas honeſtè acta: Not white haires and wrinkles by and by get authority to men, but their former time ſpent well. Seneca againe: Turpis & ridiculoſa res eſt elementaris ſenex, deſine eadem velle Senex quæ voluiſti puer; & hoc opus ſit, hæc cogitatio, imponere veteribus malis finem: An elementary old man is but a ridiculous thing: Ceaſe to wiſh that in age which thou wouldeſt in youth. And let this bee thy worke, this thy thought and care, to make an end and cut off old vices and faults. Chryſoſtome agreeable to this: Canities tunc venerabilis, quando ea gerit quæ canitiem decent. Cum vero juviniliter ſenex converſatur, plus juvenibus ridiculus eſt: Then is a white head venerable, when it doth thoſe things that are fit for ſuch age. But when an old man will behave himſelf youthfully, hee is more ridiculous than youth. Which maketh mee remember that good ſaying of Lacon, who when hee was asked why he let grow ſuch a long white beard: anſwered, Vt canos intuens nihil committam illis indignum: That looking upon theſe white haires I may commit nothing unworthy of them. A ſaying fitter for a Chriſtian, than for a Heathen. Let then age thus carry it ſelfe, and let all men honour ſuch age. Iuſto enim judicio fit, ut qui in juventute ſenes contempſerunt, ipſi quoque in ſenectute ab aliis contemnuntur: For by the juſt judgement of God it falleth out that they which in their youth have deſpiſed their elders, others when they are old contemne them.

Levit. 19. 32.

Pro. 16. 31. Wiſd. 4. 8.

In Heb. Serm. 7.

3 Miriam dyeth in this honorable age, and ſee the mercy and goodneſſe of God in it. Moſes and Aaron, her beloved brethren, ſhortly after her death offend God, and are for their puniſhment deprived of entrance into the Land of promiſe. A thing that would exceedingly have grieved her, had ſhe lived to know it: And who can tell whether ſhe alſo might have finned with them. The Lord prevented all, by taking her away from the evill to come. And ſo many times dealeth he with the godly. Of Henoch it is ſaid, God tooke him away from the ſins of men in a ſinfull time, made him a teſtimony of the immortalitie of ſoules and bodies. The Book of Wiſdome ſpeaketh more fully of him, and ſaith: He pleaſed God, and was beloved of him, ſo that whereas he lived among ſinners, he tranſlated him. He was taken away, leſt wickedneſſe ſhould alter his underſtanding, or deceit beguile his minde. For wickedneſſe by bewitching obſcureth the things are good, and the unſtedfaſtneſſe of concupiſcence perverteth the ſimple minde. Though he were ſoone dead, yet fulfilled he much time. For his ſoule pleaſed God, therefore haſted he to take him away from wickedneſſe, &c. Unto Ioſiah the like is ſaid, that in regard God had a favour to him, hee ſhould be taken from the evill to come, and goe to the grave in peace. Whereupon S. Auguſtine fitly groundeth, that the dead know not what hapneth to the living, for if they did, they were not taken away from griefe. Abraham (ſaith the Prophet) is ignorant of us, and Iſrael knoweth us not. But thou, O Lord, art our Father, and our Redeemer, thy name is for ever.

Wiſd. 4.

2 King. 22. De cura pro mort. cap. 13. Eſay. 63. 16.

4 Though ſhe lived thus long, yet ſhe died; therefore let no long life lull us on ſleepe. We muſt away. In Geneſis remember what is ſaid, he lived ſo many hundred yeares, and dyed, dyed, dyed: Dyed, is the foot of the ſong in that place often repeated. And the Apoſtle in few words, Omnibus ſtatutum eſt ſemel mori: Every man and woman muſt die. Let the houre, Lord God, be comfortable unto us, and thy bleſſed will be done.

5 Little is ſaid of her buriall, but ſhe was buried there; to wit, at Cadeſh in the deſart of Zin, No place of note and honour, but in an obſcure part of the wilderneſſe. Let it never grieve us, if God vouchſafe no ſolemne place unto us, but remember the Pſalme; The earth is the Lords: And from every place there is a way to heaven for the faithfull. The body ſhall not ever reſt in the earth, but ſhall riſe againe, and bee reſtored to the ſoule in glory and immortality for ever. Care we for our ſoules that we may live, and the body ſhall follow whereſoever it lyeth hid in land or water, in place noble or ignoble, all is one to God, it cannot be loſt from him. A great comfort to ſatisfie us, as the occaſion ſhall require.

The ſecond part.

THe ſecond point of this Chapter, is the bringing of water out of the Rocke, whereof you read thus; But there was no water for the Congregation, and they aſſembled themſelves againſt Moſes, and againſt Aaron, &c. The like Hiſtory was before in Exodus, but not the ſame. For that was in Rhephidim, even at their entry almoſt out of Ægypt: This in Cadeſh, eight and thirty yeares, or thereabout, after. A moſt horrible thing, that after ſo plaine experience of Gods goodneſs and power even in that particular diſtreſſe of water, beſides many more worthy taſtes of an ever gracious God, they ſhould againe thus fearfully and rebelliouſly mutine againſt their their governours, and ſo conſequently againſt God, by whom their governours were directed. They ſhould rather have remembred their refuſall, when the ſpies returned from ſearching the land, which was the cauſe of their ſo long abode in the wilderneſſe. The Lord fed them from heaven with moſt pleaſant bread, without any labour or paine of theirs: and yet they murmure that there is no place of ſeed, nor Figs, nor Vines, nor Pomegranets, &c. But above all it is moſt dreadfull to hear, that they wiſhed to have periſhed with Corah, Dathan, and that wicked company. O furious rage of mans wicked heart, whither will it leade if God reſtraine not! That was an example of wrath that God would leave te the world to make all fleſh feare, and yet ſee how light they make of it, being angry that they likewiſe were not deſtroyed. Are we by meere nature any better than theſe men thinke wee? No, no, let us reſt aſſured, nothing, but given grace maketh a difference. Wherefore even at this day, where God vouchſafeth not ſuch grace, we ſee thoſe which in proſperity were forward and zealous, if the Lord turne his hand, and ſend the croſſe, fall out with God and religion, blame Magiſtrates and Miniſters, accuſe the time, and bite at every thing with ſinfull murmurings and repinings. Give we thanks where they are moſt due, and pray moſt earneſtly that he would ever knit our hearts unto him.

Verſe 2.

Exod. 17.

Pſa.86.

2 Obſerve wee upon this murmuring what fell out in Moſes and Aaron, as alſo in God. Then Moſes and Aaron went from the aſſembly unto the doore of the Tabernacle, and fell upon their faces, and the glory of the Lord appeared unto them. Juſtly and moſt juſtly might they with great ſharpneſſe have rebuked them for this outrage, but they doe not. The time ſerved not. They were in fury, and ſharpe ſpeech would have made them worſe. But to the Tabernacle they flie, and to God they runne, the onely ſure ſuccour in all diſtreſſe, and hee ſteppeth in to them. Such wiſdome and diſcretion to obſerve time, ſhall ever be commendable, watching fit ſeaſons for all duties, and making God our anchor, when all is at the worſt. Want of diſcretion hath cauſed great errors many and many a time. Againe, we may note in Moſes and Aaron, what is good to effect ardent prayer. Surely to leave company, and to goe to the Tabernacle if wee may: It is Gods houſe, and he is ever at home to anſwer zealous ſuters to him in any griefe. A thing which contemners of Churches little thinke of. And in caſe we cannot goe thither for diſtance of place, or other impediment, then to get to ſome other private and remote place, according to to that, when thou prayeſt enter into thy chamber, and ſhut the doore, and there cry unto thy heavenly Father: And he that ſeeth and heareth in ſecret, ſhall reward and comfort thee openly. They fell alſo upon their faces, and humble geſture ſhall ever become godly prayers, let idle heads blaze their folly as they liſt to the contrary.

3 I ſaid, God is ever at home to anſwer ſuters that flie unto him: And ſee it here. The Lord comforteth them by ſigne and word. By ſigne, making his glory to appeare, by letting downe the cloud to cover the Tabernacle. By word, ſaying to Moſes; Take the Rod, to wit, wherewith thou diddeſt miracles in Ægypt, and divideſt the ſea, and gather thou and thy brother Aaron the congregation together, and ſpeake ye unto the Rocke before your eyes, and it ſhall give forth his water, and thou ſhalt bring them water out of the Rocke, &c. Amara exprobratio, loquere ad rupem. A bitter and ſharpe reproofe, ſaith one, are theſe words; Speake unto the Rocke. As if hee ſhould have ſaid; the ſtony Rocke ſhall have more obedience than this wicked people. It ſhall heare me, they will not heare me: It ſhall obey and yeeld water, they will never obey and yeeld fruit of love unto me; let the Rocke accuſe them and condemne them. Speake thou unto it, and it ſhall give thee water. Dat Petra aquam juſſu Dei, & non das tu cor tuum? Doth the Rocke, ſaith one, give water at the commandement of God; and doeſt not thou give thine heart? So ſhewing what uſe we may make to our good of this example. Did God tarry long ere hee anſwered them? No: But even ſtraight he made his glory to appeare, and comforted them. So ſweet a God to diſtreſſed ever. And yet curſed Popery will teach to runne to Saints, and creatures, as more mercifull and ready to heare, than hee is. God let them ſee this wickedneſſe, and leave it before they finde the gate of goodneſſe to forgive, ſhut againſt them for ever.

Verſe 9,10.

Verſe 11.
Pſa.78.
Pſa.105.

4 Then Moſes tooke the Rod from before the Lord, as he had commanded him. And Moſes and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the Rocke: And Moſes ſaid unto them, Heare now ye Rebels, ſhall we bring you water out of this Rocke? Then Moſes lift up his hand, and with his rod hee ſmote the rocke twice, and the water came out abundantly: So the congregation and their beaſts dranke. See the mighty and almighty power of God to relieve any want, yet will not man be patient, and calling upon him for helpe, expect and tarry his gracious will, but murmure and repine, ſpeake and prattle moſt unſeemly, and indeed moſt ſinfully. Their experience before even in this caſe ſhould have ſtayed them, as I have ſaid, but nothing is profitable except GOD bleſſe. Let us obſerve this nature of his over all creatures, even to command ſtony Rockes, that by nature are dry, to guſh out with water abundantly, when hee pleaſeth, and therefore no cauſe to diſtruſt, but ever to depend upon him for our comfort in any want. God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children to Abraham, ſaith the Goſpell.

Pſa.107.

And

And what then ſhall be hard unto him? All the beaſts of the Forreſts are mine, and the beaſts of a thouſand hils. I know all the Fowles on the mountaines, and the wilde beaſts of the field are mine, &c. How then can his children want what he ſhall ever thinke good for them. He maketh the Ravens feed the Prophet, and when he pleaſeth, the Angell: hee maketh the meale and oyle encreaſe for the ſuſtenance of the Widow and her childe, and the Prophet: Yea, hee maketh the little oyle in the Cruſe, to continue running, till there be enough to pay debts, and to live upon alſo. What cauſe can man then have to fall from ſuch a God? Pray as we ought, Give us Lord our bread, and never feare, he will not forſake us, relying upon him. Pſa.50. 1 Kings 17. Chap.19. 2 King.4. Chap.7.

5 Remember often, how when Moſes ſhould rather have ſmitten the people that ſo ſinned, he is commanded to ſmite the Rock, a plaine figure of Chriſt, who as Eſay ſaith, was ſmitten and wounded for our tranſgreſſions: He was broken for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed. God might have ſmitten us, For wee were the offenders, but in mercy to us he ſmote him for us, as here the Rocke for them. And hee guſhed out comfort to our drie and thirſty ſoules, as this Rocke did water to them. Whoſoever (ſaith our Saviour to the woman) drinketh of this water ſhall thirſt againe, but whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never be more a thirſt, but the water that I ſhall give him, ſhal be in him a Well of water ſpringing up unto everlaſting life. If any man thirſt, let him come to me and drinke. He that beleeveth in me (ſaith the Scripture) out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of water of life, &c. Come unto me all ye that are weary and laden, and I will eaſe you. By this water-giving Rocke, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, Significata eſt de Chriſto profluens gratia ſpiritus, qua interior ſitis extinguitur: is ſignified the grace of the Spirit flowing from Chriſt, whereby the inward thirſt of man is extinguiſhed. And this very agreeable to the Scripture in the place above named of water. This he ſpake of the Spirit, which they that beleeved in him ſhould receive, for the holy Ghoſt was not yet given, becauſe that Ieſus was not yet glorified. And touching the figure, the words are plaine, The Rock was Chriſt. Could men then drinke Chriſt ſpiritually, and not now? Muſt there needs be a groſſe reall Tranſubſtantiation now of the bread and wine into the body and blood of Chriſt; becauſe it is ſaid, This is my body, &c. more than of the Rocke, then it being likewiſe ſaid, The Rocke was Chriſt? Are not theſe words as plaine, as, This is my body? In Geneſis when he ſaith of Circumciſion: Hoc eſt fœdus meum, This is my Covenant. Was that cut in the fleſh his Covenant, or onely a ſigne or ſeale of his Covenant? The Covenant is expreſſed before: Ambula coram me, & eſto perfectus: Walk before me and be perfect. Et ego ero Deus tuus, & ſeminis tui: And I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed. A Covenant hath two parts, one from either of them that make the Covenant, and here they be both. On the part of Abraham and his ſeed, Walke before me, &c. on the part of God, Then will I be thy God, &c. Yet doth the holy Ghoſt call the ſigne, to wit, the cut of Circumciſion by the name of the thing ſignified, and never any groſſe errour like to Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation dreamed of. So in Exodus: for it is the Lords Paſſeover, when you know the Lambe was not the Paſſeover, but ſignified it. So the waſhing of water is called the waſhing of Regeneration, when it was but the ſigne. The ſeed is the Word, Matth. 13. with a number of ſuch ſpeeches in the Scripture, not to be taken literally; as neither ſhould theſe words, This is my body: but all figuratively, as any man living may ſee that is not blinded of God, for his contempt of truth. Non dubitabat dicere, hoc eſt corpus meum, cum ſignum daret corporis ſui: He doubted not to ſay, This is my body, when he gave a ſigne of his body, ſaith the Father. And, Cibus eſt mentis, non ventris: It is food for the mind or ſoule, not for the belly, ſaith Cyprian. And therefore, Quid paras dentem & ventrem, Crede & manducaſti: Why prepareſt thou thy tooth and thy belly, beleeve and thou haſt eaten? Let truth ever be precious in our eyes, and deare unto our hearts. This Rocke was Chriſt here, even as the bread is his body. The beleevers dranke of this Rocke ſpiritually, and ſo doe we eate his body, and drinke his blood, to our eternall good ſpiritually, without any ſuch groſſe change as hath beene ſpoken of. Iohn 4.17. Iohn 7.37. Mat.11.21. Iohn 7.39. 1 Cor.10.4. Gen.17. Exod.12.11. Titus.3.5.

6 But Moſes and Aaron offended here: For the Lord ſaith, Becauſe yee beleeved me not to ſanctifie me in the preſence of the Children of Iſrael, therefore ye ſhall not bring this Congregation into the Land which I have given them. Here is a great puniſhment: Moſes and Aaron muſt not enter into the Land of Canaan. And therefore a great ſinne aſſuredly that pulleth upon them ſuch a puniſhment. Yet nothing appeareth, as you reade it: For Moſes did all that God commanded him in gathering the people, in taking the Rod, in ſpeaking to the Rocke, and ſtriking it with the Rod, &c. Let it be ſo. Yet here is a ſinne, and a great one, otherwiſe this puniſhment ſhould not have beene inflicted. Let then this place profit us much. Verſe 12.

As firſt to think, that if they be thus puniſhed that ſinne by other mens occaſions, how much more ſhall they bee puniſhed, that are the occaſions, or give the occaſions. Moſes and Aaron had never thus offended had the people not murmured: and many a ſinne ſhould be daily uncommitted, did not ſome allure, tempt and provoke, or by ſome meanes give occaſion thereof. But take we heed by this example to be ſo accuſed by God, for the paine will ſmart.

Secondly, let it teach us, that if wee ſlip from God, though man cannot ſee it, yet the Lord doth doth, and will reveale openly ſuch offences many times. Wherefore the Prophet David prayeth heartily: O let my heart be ſound in thy Statutes, &c. As if he ſhould have ſaid, be there never ſo little a hole, never ſo little a taint of unſoundneſſe, I know thine eye ſhall diſcerne it, and yeeld me reward accordingly, be it never ſo faire before mans eye. And therefore, Lord let my heart be ſound, &c.

Pſa.119.80. Faire workes before man, be not faire before God ever. 2 Sam.2.

Thirdly, ſee the truth of that ſaying: Them that honour me, them will I honour, and they that deſpiſe me, they ſhall be deſpiſed. Bee it Moſes and Aaron, two worthy and famous men, yet they ſhall not eſcape; but, as if they honor me I will requite it: ſo, if they diſhonour me by doubting and miſtruſting any word of mine, I will rebuke them, and let them taſte of puniſhment for it, as here thoſe two men did, barred from entring into the Land.

Fourthly, we may obſerve here, that the beſt men are not without imperfections and weakneſſe, becauſe no man is regenerated perfectly in this world. And no mans regeneration is perfect, that glory may bee given to God for all our ſalvations: whereas if wee were perfect, wee would aſcribe it to our ſelves, and our workes. Since therefore God hath concluded all under ſinne, that he might have mercy on all, and all give glory to him: Let every man watch over himſelfe with a holy care, to avoid the ſnares of ſinne and Satan, and hee that ſeemeth to ſtand, take heed leſt he fall.

Laſtly, conſider what was the ſinne of Moſes and Aaron; out of queſtion incredulity, for ſo ſaith the Text: Becauſe yee beleeved me not, &c. Arguments of this unbeliefe ſome ſay was that twice ſtriking of the Rock, when he ſhould but have ſmitten once: others, his manner of ſpeech, Shall we bring you water out of this Rock? as if he had doubted. And this may ſeeme agreeable to the Pſalme, that ſaith, He ſpake unadviſedly with his lips. If you think how could he doubt, having once ſeene the power of God in the ſame point before, Exod.17. where he ſtroke the Rock, and the waters flowed out: The ſame Pſalme ſeemeth to give you a reaſon, when it ſaith: They ſo vexed his ſpirit, that he ſpake unadviſedly with his lips. Others ſay he no way doubted of the power of God, for he had ſufficient experience and knowledge thereof, that hee doubted of his will, and thought, that albeit he bade him ſmite the Rocke, yet he ſpake figuratively, and did not indeed purpoſe to give them water by that meanes. For ſo Moſes looked upon the horrible wickedneſs of thē in that rebellious murmuring, that he forgot the ſweet nature of God ever good and gracious, when man is moſt unworthy. But let it teach us ſo ever to bee angry with other mens ſinnes, as that we ſinne not our ſelves therein. For zeale is good, but it muſt have limits and bounds, beyond which if it paſſe, it is not zeale, but a fault and indiſcretion. Let it preach to us, that if ſuch famous men, after ſo much worthy ſervice in ſo many yeares, doe as it were, in extremo actu, the laſt up-ſhot of their life, ſo deficere, faile and fall, how, how great need have we, inferiour perſons to them in all vertue, to pray and cry to God for conſtancy, continuance and perſeverance in our obedience and duty to him? Let it alſo lay before us the ſincerity and truth of Scripture, when Moſes ſpareth not to publiſh to eternall memory, as it were, his owne ſhame and his Brothers. Meere fleſh and blood would not doe thus, and therefore not by fleſh and blood were the Scriptures written, but by the holy and ever true Spirit of God. It hath bin ſpoken of in Geneſis, in the ſinne of Levi. Let God have ever glory due to him, and we ſhame and confuſion, when we deſerve it, by falling from him, according to that holy ſpeech of that holy ſervant of God: To us belongeth nothing but ſhame and confuſion.

Verſe 13. 7 This is the water of Meribah, becauſe the Children of Iſrael ſtrove with the Lord, and he was ſanctified in them. The remembrance of Gods judgements upon men for ſinne, is a great meanes to preſerve others from the like. And therefore this murmuring and ſtriving againſt God, is recorded by the Spirit of God in the pen of Moſes, that all fleſh may beware and feare the Lord, according to the Pſalme; That poſterity might know it, and the children which ſhould bee borne ſhould ſtand up and declare it to their Children. That they might ſet their hope on God, and not forget the workes of God, but keepe his Commandements: And not to be as their Fathers, a diſobedient and rebellious Generation, a Generation that ſet not their heart aright, and whoſe ſpirit cleaveth not ſtedfaſtly unto God. That worthy Chapter of Eccleſiaſticus, I wiſh it were often read, that it might both encourage to a care, to leave a good remembrance behind us, and to feare us from the contrary: for there are, ſaith hee, that have left a name behinde them, ſo that their praiſe ſhall be ſpoken of. And there are ſome which have no memoriall, but are periſhed as though they had never beene borne, and their children after them, &c. Reade, I ſay, and often read the whole Chapter.

Pſa.78.6, &c.

Chap.44.

The third part.

*Verſ.*14, &c. THe third Head of this Chapter is an Embaſſage ſent to Edom for paſſage through his Countrie: whereof the Text ſaith thus; Then Moſes ſent meſſengers from Cadeſh unto the King of Edom, ſaying: Thus ſaith thy Brother Iſrael, &c. Firſt, learne here to aske leave, where no right is, & to be patient if you be denyed. So you ſee God is here, who could have made a paſſage, if he had had would. Secondly, learne how God will not have kinsfolke ſpoile and hurt one another,for it is nought in any,but much more nought in ſuch as be linked together by blood. Would God in theſe dayes it had more place in our hearts; for the greateſt frauds and wrongs are daily to be ſeene amongſt kinsfolkes. The ſtones in the wall doe one hold in another, faſten and ſtrengthen one another: But kinsfolkes, one weakens, and puls downe another, one ſlander and reproach, and ſhame another,ſo that no anger to the anger of kinsfolkes. God abhorreth it, and as hee is juſt, hee will ever puniſh it one way or other,at one time or another. His mouth hath publiſhed it, his pen hath written it, that ſweet and pleaſing to him it is ever, Brethren to dwell together in unitie. Thirdly,ſee how faithfull God is in his promiſes,even to the wicked,as here to Edom,of whom came theſe Edomites. For in Deuteronomy you may reade how, becauſe God had given Mount Seir unto Edom for a poſſeſſion; therefore he would not have them provoke them, neither would give them of that land ſo much as a foot-breadth. Will hee ever faile his faithfull, that is thus juſt to the wicked? Taſte it,and keepe it as a moſt ſweet comfort.

2 The Edomites thus denying paſſage to their Brethren, were a Figure, ſay Interpreters, of ſuch as deny paſſage to the Goſpell and truth of God, which though the Lord endure for a time without revenge, yet will he not ever put it up, but in his owne appointed time ſeverely in juſtice puniſh; as in time he did theſe Edomites,though here he forbare: for as one ſaith well, Deus metas & terminos poſuit impietati hominum, ad quos cum pervenerint, ſupplicium mittit, quod declinare non poſſunt, God hath ſet bounds and limits to the impiety of men, whereunto when it is come, then hee ſendeth puniſhment which they cannot eſcape. Till that time hee is patient and long-ſuffering. Thus with the Canaanites, the Idumæans,the Iſraelites, the Babylonians and others: their ſinnes had a ripning time, and then the wrath of God came upon them. This is the ſtate ſtill of all Kingdomes, Cities and Countries; yea, of every private man and woman. Happy are they that prevent his judgements by amendment of life, and a commanded courſe.

3 Then Iſrael turned away from him to paſſe another way: Which was a Type alſo,ſome ſay,of the paſſing of the Goſpell to other places, when, where it is offered, it is contemned, whereof many examples may bee ſhewed. You remember what the Lord Ieſus ſaith to his Diſciples: Into whatſoever City or towne ye ſhall come, enquire who is worthy in it, and there abide till yee goe thence. And when yee come to houſe, ſalute the ſame. And if the houſe bee worthy, let your peace come upon it: but if it be not worthy, let your peace returne to you. And whoſoever ſhall not receive you, nor heare your words, when ye depart out of that houſe, or that City, ſhake off the duſt of your feet. Truely I ſay unto you,it ſhall be eaſier for them of the Land of Sodome and Gomorrah in the day of judgement, than for that Citie. To contemne grace when it is offered, is an high ſinne. O Hieruſalem, Hieruſalem, which killeſt the Prophets, and ſtoneſt them that are ſent unto thee! How often would I have gathered thy children together, as the Hen gathereth her chicken under her wings, and ye would not? Behold your habitation ſhal be left unto you deſolate. O if thou hadſt knowne, at the leaſt, in this thy day, thoſe things that belong unto thy peace! but now are they hid from thine eyes; for the dayes ſhall come upon thee, that thine enemies ſhall caſt a trench about thee, and compaſſe thee round, and keep thee in on every ſide: And ſhall make thee even with the ground, and thy children which are in thee, and they ſhall not leave thee a ſtone upon a ſtone, becauſe thou knoweſt not that ſeaſon of thy viſitation. See a time of Grace, ſee a time of vengeance and wrath, when Grace is contemned. Edom ſhall have a fall for this churliſhneſſe to his Brethren, and other ſinnes. Tarry but the time,and he that liveth ſeeth ingratitude requited as it deſerveth. Theſe Iſraelites paſſe by another way,and you ſee what uſe is made of it.

Verſe 21.

Mat.10.11.

Mat.23.37.

Luke 19.42.

The fourth part.

NOw we are come to the laſt part of this Chapter; namely, the death of Aaron, whereof the Text ſpeaketh thus: The Lord ſpake unto Moſes and Aaron in the Mount Hor, neare the Coaſt of the Land of Edom, ſaying: Aaron ſhall be gathered unto his people, for he ſhall not enter into the Land which I have given unto the Children of Iſrael, becauſe hee diſobeyed my commandement at the water of Miribah, &c. Firſt Miriam, and then Aaron; firſt one, and then another, ſtill, ſtill, till we all be gone. It is a Law that cannot bee changed, a Statute that cannot be repealed: Omnibus ſtatutum eſt ſemel mori: wee all muſt die. Adam lived ſo long, nine hundred and thirty yeares, and hee dyed. Seth nine hundred and twelve, and he dyed. Dyed, dyed ſtill is the concluſion, how long ſo ever he lived, as I have often noted before: The phraſe is comfortable, He ſhall bee gathered unto his people; Hee ſhall not periſh as the brute beaſts doe, but another life remaineth,wherin his people bee, and to them hee ſhall be gathered,and live with them: Mors vitæ via, ſaith Saint Ambroſe, Death to the godly is but a way to life. Mors nomen tantum fidelibus, Death is onely a name to the faithfull, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome.

Verſ. 23.

Ambroſ. de bona mort.

Gen. Hom. 29.

2 The comforts of Aarons death here, are theſe: the Lord appointeth it ſo, and his will, as it it is ever good, ſo ſhould it ever be our content. Secondly, his ſonne ſucceedeth him in his place, a great comfort. Thirdly, he ſhall be freed from all his toyle, from all his griefe, from an unkinde people, never pleaſed conſtantly with any ſervice, paine, and labour ſuſtained for them, but ſtill murmuring and grudging againſt him and his friends, doe what they could by any meanes whatſoever. Now ſhall he reſt and have peace, and all griefe from his heart, all teares from his eyes wiped quite away. Bleſſed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they reſt from their labour, and their workes follow them. Let it be a comfort to all, and by name, to Gods Miniſters, that faithfully and zealouſly have watched over their flockes, feeding them by day, ſtudying and praying for them by night, and having reaped but wrong, fraud and oppreſſion, ſlander and venome too often ſeene, not onely of God, but all adjoyning men and neighbours. God hath his ſweet time to releaſe us, and to gather us to our people, as he here did Aaron: Hee will care for our children, as here for Aarons, and put them in ſome place or other after us, for their good in his great mercy, if we commend them to him. Our labours ſhall not bee loſt with him, that rewardeth a cup of cold water. If we have ſowed in teares, we ſhall reape in joy: Earths woe ſhall be changed to heavens bliſſe, and happy ſhall wee be. Goe on in comfort, bee painfull and faithfull unto the end, the Lord ſhall give us a crowne of life: They that be wiſe ſhall ſhine as the brightneſſe of the Firmament, and they that have turned others to righteouſneſſe, ſhall ſhine as the Starres for ever and ever.

Apoc.14.

Aaron putteth off his cloathes as to goe to bed, and ſeeth them put upon his ſonne, to his joy, and ſo dyeth chearfully and willingly, as hee uſed to goe to bed.

Daniel 12.3.

3 When all the Congregation ſaw that Aaron was dead, all the houſe of Iſrael wept for Aaron thirty dayes. Carendo magis quam ferendo: by wanting it, rather than having it, many men know a bleſſing: ſo theſe Iſraelites. Now they weep, and now they mourne, but when he lived how they uſed him, we have ſeene. Well, let this alſo comfort all men that have well deſerved in their places. If life cannot yeeld them their due, death ſhall. Livor poſt fata quieſcit; Malice and envy, injury and wrong, will reſt after death.

Verſe 29.

Avons life was long, for the more ſervice to the Church.

4 But here was no puniſhment inflicted upon the people? Yes, the loſſe of their Aaron is a great puniſhment. And even at this day, the death of a good Miniſter is a ſevere plague to the people, had they eyes to ſee it. Their life is gaine, their death is loſſe, and time will ſhew it when they cannot be had againe. O that they that enjoy ſuch a bleſſing, would at laſt have feeling of it, and according to the counſell of the bleſſed Apoſtle, Obey them that have the overſight of you, for they watch for your ſoules, as they that muſt give an account, that they may doe it with joy, and not with griefe, for that is unprofitable for you.

CHAP. XXI.

In this Chapter obſerve theſe heads:

1. The mercy of God in giving them victory againſt King Arad.
2. Their ingratitude and murmuring, Verſe 4,5.
3. The puniſhment of it, Verſe 6.
4. Their repentance, Verſe 7.
5. The remove of the puniſhment, Verſe 8,9.
6. Their going forward in their journey, Verſe 10.
7. Their victory againſt the Amorites.

Verſe 1.

1 WHen King Arad the Canaanite which dwelt towards the South, heard tell that Iſrael came by the way of the Spies, then fought he againſt Iſrael, and tooke of them priſoners. It may be an example of diligent circumſpection to Governours, ſo to watch and care for their charge, as that nothing bee attempted, but they heare of it in due time by their intelligencers, as in all places. It is written of Ceſar, Quod ipſe ſe non habuit, poſtquam mundus eum principem habere cœpit: That he never had himſelf, after the world had him a Prince and Governour. So were all his cares for the publike, that his owne private he gave over to others. And ſurely as the Starres have received their brightneſſe and glory, not for themſelves, but for the uſe of others: So Governours doe not receive their places for themſelves, but for others committed to their charge. Ambroſe ſaith of Valentinian the Emperour, that his people knew not whether they had of him, Dominum an Patrem, a Lord or a Father. An excellent commendation of his ſweet government: Surely it is true, Boni imperant non cupiditate dominandi, ſed officio conſulendi, non ſuperbia principandi, ſed miſericordia providendi: Good men beare rule, not out of a deſire to rule, but out of love to adviſe and profit, not out of pride to be Princes, but out of mercy and good affection to provide for the good of them that are their charge; Therefore worthy of honor, worthy of love, worthy of cuſtome and tribute, and worthy of all hearty and faithfull obedience.

2. He fought againſt them, and tooke of them Priſoners: They asked leave before of Edom, and in this Chapter of Sihon, verſe 21. Therefore not unlike, but they asked leave alſo of King Arad, and promiſe to make no ſpoile any way, yet he would not ſuffer them, but fought againſt them cruelly. A raſh and unneceſſary war, which commonly hath puniſhment following: for God hateth pride and inhumanity, and ſnubbeth it many times with ſharp judgements. As in Pharaoh overthrowne in the ſea for his unneceſſary following after Gods people. Cræſus raſhly attempting war againſt Cyrus, was overthrowne by him, and ſore repented his folly. Cyrus himſelfe for the ſame folly overthrowne after all his victories of the Maſſagetes. That huge army of Xerxes, like unto the ſand of the ſea, in two yeares ſo vanquiſhed and ſpoiled, that Xerxes himſelfe was glad to flye away in a little Boat, having at his comming forth ſuch a glorious Navie. Mardonius the chiefe perſwader of that war, ſo needleſſe and vaine, had his braines daſhed out by a ſtone caſt upon his head, and ſo reaped the reward of his bad counſell. That war remaining to this day, a ſpectacle of Gods puniſhment upon wars taken in hand unneceſſarily for vaine-glory, and upon hope and confidence of humane ſtrength.

In the time of Darius Nothus, there was an Army ſent into Silicia, as I remember, of forty thouſand, Alcibiades and Nicias being Captaines; This whole army being ſlain, except a few that eſcaped by flight. There was no juſt cauſe of this war, but only Alcibiades his ambition, and ſee the end of it. Cyrus the yonger riſeth up in war againſt his brother Artaxerxes Mnemon, and is ſlaine, that ſtill it may appeare to men, ſaith Melanthon, in his Chronicle, how God hateth unneceſſary wars, and how He that taketh the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſword, that is, he that taketh it unjuſtly and unneceſſarily: for Darius Nothus in his life time, ſetled the Kingdome to Artaxerxes Muemon; and to Cyrus his yonger ſon, he gave Lydia and Ionia, but after his fathers death this yonger ſonne ſtirreth againſt his brother, and reſteth not in his fathers Will, where you ſee pride had a fall. When Greece flouriſhed there fell a jarre betwixt the Athenians and the Megarenſes for a wood that was burned, for which the Athenians forbade them their Ports. The Megarenſes complained to the Lacedemonians, who ſent to the Athenians to intreat a revocation of that decree. Pericles confeſſed the matter was not great if it were granted, but the example was dangerous: for the Lacedemonians (ſaith he) may take upon them to write for greater matters if this ſhould be granted. Which needleſſe ſuſpition, and undiſcreet interpretation, what a ſea of blood did it cauſe to be ſhed, by great wars and maſſacres for many yeares? As indeed, ſaith one, Suſpitiones, aſtutiæ, & virulentæ interpretationes magnorum bellorum cauſa ſunt: Suſpitions, crafts, and virulent interpretations, are the cauſe often of great wars and deſtruction. A little ſparke ſetting on fire, and burning a whole wood, as Pindarus ſaith. Remember often that example of Ammon his villanous entreaty of Davids Meſſengers, upon a falſe and vile interpretation or ſuſpition. What hapned therefore here to King Arad, hath hapned you ſee to others, God ſtill puniſhing needleſſe and cauſeleſſe wars, or contentions among men. Temere in acie verſari, & manu cum hoſte confligere, immane quiddam & belluarum ſimile: Raſhly to undertake a war and conflict with an enemy, is barbarous, and like unto brute beaſts, could the Heathen Orator Tully ſay. Into a pit very eaſily may a man caſt himſelfe, but out againe nothing ſo eaſily get himſelfe: ſo for war, ſtrife and contention, eaſie is the beginning, but nothing ſo the ending. Non in ejuſdem poteſtatem ivitium & finis belli: It is not in one mans power to begin and end a brawle, &c.

2 Sam. 10.

Cic. in Offic. 1.

3. He tooke of them priſoners. Why may we think did God ſuffer them thus to be overcome, they travelling as they were commanded, and Arad fighting againſt them without cauſe. It is good to marke it: ſurely to draw them from conceit of themſelves, to fix their confidence ever in the Lord, which had they not had this little ſnub, hardly they would have done. But now ſeeing they were thus taken priſoners by one King, how much more might divers Kings, combining themſelves and their ſtrength together, vanquiſh them and ſpoile them if God aſſiſted not. In teipſo confidere periculoſum ſemper: To truſt in a mans ſelfe ever was, and ever ſhall bee very dangerous, ſaith good experience; Hoc eſt quodam modo turrim Babylonic ædificare: This is in ſome ſort to build another Tower of Babel: I would have ſcattered them abroad, ſaith God in Deuteronomie of the Iſraelites, and I would have made the remembrance of them ceaſe from among men, ſave that I feared the fury of the enemy, leſt thy adverſaries ſhould waxe proud, and leſt they ſhould ſay: Our high hand, and not the Lord hath done all this. O marke it! Cannot the Lord abide in his enemies a vaine conceit and confidence in themſelves, and will he ever abide it in his own people? No, and therefore the Lord laboureth to draw them alway from it, as in this place by this ſnub: For the King is not ſaved by the multitude of an Hoſt, neither is the mighty Man delivered by his much ſtrength. A horſe is a vaine thing to ſave a man, &c. I will not truſt in my bow, &c. But in the ſtrength of my God I ſhall leape over a wall. It is good to hold me faſt by him, to put my truſt in him, &c.

Deut. 32, 26, 27.

Pſal. 33. 16.

4. See here, and ſee often what impediments theſe Iſraelites had to enter in the Land of Canaan, their ſinnes, their wars, &c. Many and many a ſtop and let ere they got thither. Even ſo at this day in our paſſage to heaven. Neither they then, nor we now can obtaine our reſt by ſloth and and ſleepe, But through many tribulations now, as they then, muſt we enter. Strive to enter in at the narrow gate, ſaith the Goſpell, and we muſt often thinke of it.

5. Then Iſrael vowed a vow unto the Lord, and ſaid: If thou wilt deliver and give this people into my hand, then will I utterly deſtroy their Cities, &c. God hath no meaning to ſpare Arad, but to ſchoole his people as hath been ſaid; which having done, and ſo driven them to this Prayer and vow here; Now at a ſecond conflict Arad is overcome, and the Iſraelites utterly deſtroyed them and their Cities, and called the name of the place Hormah or deſtruction. Thus in chaſtiſements he uſually beginneth with his owne, and after commeth to the wicked with a farre heavier hand, as here, and againſt the Benjamites, where he let Iſrael twice bee overcome and ſlaine with much loſſe, yet after gave them victory, and laid his hands ſore upon their oppoſites. It is a place worthy often remembrance, that of Solomon: Though a ſinner doe evill an hundred times, and God prolong his dayes, yet I know that it ſhall be well with them that feare the Lord, and do reverence before him: But it ſhall not be well with the wicked, neither ſhall he prolong his daies, he ſhall be like a ſhadow, becauſe he feareth not before God. See alſo how victory is not ever given of God in favour, nor an overthrow in anger, but hath other ends to raiſe the wicked, that their fall may bee greater, and to ſchoole his owne, that they may pray and promiſe as here they did. Wanton pleaſures may make us dull, and the profitable Croſſe quickeneth us againe, and bringeth us to our knees. David, Manaſſes, with many other moe may bee added to this Example here. Grieve not therefore impatiently at it, but looke at God working for our good.

Iudicium à domo Dei. Iudges 20.

Pſal.119.71. Pſal.83.15. Pſal.107.6,13. 2 Chron.33.12

Ioſeph had a time to be ſterne to his Brethren, and a time to bee ſweet againe, clipping and claſping them in his armes, and with teares of love, and a burning affection to crie, I am Ioſeph, I am Ioſeph your brother, feare not, &c. So God, ſo God our ſweet and good God, after a ſternneſſe hath a ſweetneſſe, above the power of mans ſpeech to expreſſe. O tary we therefore the Lords leiſure, be ſtrong, and he ſhall comfort our hearts, ſaith the holy Pſalm, and ever put we our truſt in him.

6. But was the vow of theirs good? Is it lawfull to vow cruelty and blood-ſhed? No not ſimply, but take the caſe here as it was: They had the commandement of God to deſtroy the Cananites, whereof you may reade in Exodus 22. and 34. Deuteronomie, 7. &c. For as much therefore as they were the Executioners of the judgement of God againſt this people, they rightly vow to that which God commanded, to the end their vow might more move them and binde them to do their duties. So may we vow all good duties to God and our neighbours: for a vow and promiſe added to that whereunto I was bound otherwiſe, maketh a double band, and tyeth us more faſt to the performance thereof. And for the warres, zealous prayer hath beene ever a great prevailing weapon, as much experience ſheweth. Hezekiah prayed, And that night the Lord ſent his Angell, and ſmote in the Campe of Aſhur an hundred foureſcore and five thouſand, ſo that when they roſe early in the morning, Behold they were all dead corps. Moſes prevailed againſt the Amalekites by prayer; For while Moſes hands were up, the Iſraelites prevailed, that is, while Moſes prayed: but when he let his hands goe downe, Amalech prevailed, that is, when he fainted in prayer. Whereupon they put a ſtone under him to ſit upon, and Aaron and Hur ſtayed up his hands, the one on the one ſide, and the other on the other ſide: So his hands were ſteedy till the going downe of the Sunne. And Ioſua diſcomfited Amalech with the edge of the ſword. Oſwald King of Northumberland, ſay our Chronicles, fought againſt Cedwall and Penda Britaines, that came with a far greater power, and by prayer overcame them: Ethelred being at Prayers, a Meſſenger came in poſt to acquaint him with the diſtreſſe of his brother Alured, but he would not ſtir till prayers were fully ended, and then going to his brother, prevailed. Sivanus King of the Danes, dyed at Bury, ſuddenly yelling and roaring through the earneſt prayers of the people againſt him. Edward the third religiouſly praying, had a famous victory againſt the French, the Hiſtory is memorable. Syrach therefore ſaith well; The prayers of him that humbleth himſelfe pierceth the clouds. Fugabit Cythara Davidis Diabolum, & non oratio tua? And ſhall Davids Harpe, ſaith one, drive away the devill, and not thy prayer? Si erigi volumus proſternemur: If we will be raiſed of God, let us caſt downe our ſelves: If God do it not inſtantly, remember the Pſalme; O tarry thou the Lords leiſure, be ſtrong, and he ſhall comfort thine heart, and put thou thy truſt in the Lord. He that will cut downe a tree, ſtriketh againe and againe before it fall. The woman of Canaan gave not over till ſhe had her deſire, and the Lord was moved with her faith, ſo that he ſaid; O woman great is thy faith, bee it unto thee according to thy will. Prayer therefore, I ſay, is a very ſtrong prevailing weapon in war and peace, upon all occaſions. Of Vowes the thirtieth Chapter will give occaſion to ſpeake, and therefore I reſerve it till then.

2 King.19.35. Exod.17.11. Syrach 35. A medicine often. Mat.15.

7. And the Lord heard the voice of Iſrael, and delivered them the Canaanites, and they utterly deſtroyed them and their Cities, and called the name of the place Hormah, that is, Deſtruction. Now you ſee the end of unneceſſary warre, whereof note was made before. It was ever dangerous, and wiſe Governours will ever take heed of it, as private men unneceſſary contentions and ſuites ſutes with others. He that overcommeth at firſt, may fall at the ſecond conflict, as Arad did here. Againe, here we may ſee the courſe of Gods ſervants: Firſt they taſte of the croſſe, then of comfort; firſt of adverſity, then of proſperity; they that puniſh them periſh, and they riſe and ſtand upright, as the Pſalme ſpeaketh, ſo trying the truth of that; Bleſſed are they that mourn, for they ſhall be comforted: And Iudgement beginneth at the houſe of God. And as here you ſee it in this earthly and worldly war, ſo is it in ſpirituall conflicts with Satan, Sin, the Fleſh, World, and our owne Conſcience: firſt downe, and then up, conquered of, but conquerours in the end, and for ever conquerours, entring into the land of Promiſe with joy and gladneſſe. Laſtly, ſee againe the effect of prayer made unto God heartily in any diſtreſſe. They prayed, and God heard, to their comfort, and the overthrow of their enemies. Ioſua prayed, and the Sun ſtood ſtill in the firmament, that he might have time to deſtroy the wicked. A wonderfull effect of holy prayer. Agar, a poore deſolate woman, prayed in her diſtreſſe, and how did the Lord comfort her? Iacob prayed to God in his feare of Eſau, and God heard him. Anna prayed for a childe, and God gave her Samuel the Prophet, for an unſpeakable comfort. Paſſiones corporis jejunio, peſtes mentis oratione ſanandæ: The paſſions of the body are to bee cured by faſting, and the griefes of minde by prayer, ſaith Hierom. Oratio oranti ſubſidium, Deo ſacrificium, dæmonibus flagellum: Prayer to them that pray is a help, to God a ſacrifice, to the devill a ſcourge, ſaith another. Prayer to God hath thus prevailed, and ſhall ever bee ſtrong as the Lord ſhall ſee good. But can all the world ſay ſo, and prove it, of prayers to Saints and creatures, leaving the Creator as not ſo mercifull and ready to heare as they? A fearefull blaſphemy, to prefer the creature before his Maker in goodneſſe, when there can bee no goodneſſe which is not derived from God, as the only Fountaine of all good.

Reade Auguſt. Levit. 22. c. 18. Athanaſ. orat. 1. contra Arrian. Of that death of Arrius by prayer. Euſeb. hiſt. 5. Of raine by prayer. Ruffin. lib. 2. Of Theodoſius ſucceſſe againſt Arbogaſtum, &c.

Mark what is ſaid of the mercy of God, Exod. 34. and finde the like ſaid of Saints. Papiſts themſelves that are learned in their owne practice, pray to God alone, though they dare not diſallow the other in others, for feare of cenſure and danger. Ego in meis precibus, ſaith a chief man, non ſoleo ſanctos invocare, ſed preces meas dirigo ad Deum in nomine Ieſu Chriſti: hoc enim tutius exiſtimo; In mine own prayers I do not pray to Saints, but I direct my prayers to God in the name of Chriſt: for this I take to be more ſafe. Others ſo alſo. But I rake up no further their puddle.

Caſſander.

The ſecond part.

THe ſecond Head of this Chapter is their murmuring againe by reaſon of the compaſſe and difficulties of the way, ver. 4. and 5. They ſpake againſt God and Moſes, ſaying; Wherefore have ye brought us out of Ægypt, to die in the Wilderneſſe? for here is neither bread nor water, and our ſoule loatheth this light bread, (to wit) Manna. We are amazed to heare and reade theſe often murmurings, and we thinke them, as indeed they were, a moſt rebellious and perverſe people.

But let us make a further uſe, and learne our owne diſpoſitions, if God ſtay us not with his grace. For many and grievous are our tranſgreſſions alſo, in this our peregrination to the true Land of Promiſe. And who obſerveth how many loath the ſweet Manna of Gods word, and wiſh for Ægypt againe? This people in all their courſes, were figures of future things, and let us ever looke for our owne good.

Secondly, See how one diſcontent, though a very little one, more vexeth than many great contents pleaſe.

The third part.

THe third Head is the puniſhment of this murmuring. The Lord ſent fiery Serpents among them, &c. As Mercy, ſo Juſtice attendeth the Lord, and wrongs to him and his Moſes, hee ſharply ſcourgeth, when he ſeeth good.

Serpents he ſendeth, that they might ſee how only by God they were delivered from many perils in that Wilderneſſe, that they little thought of. For, but that his All-ſaving-hand hindered, the vile creatures both could and would have annoyed them. Serpents againe, that ſo God might humble them, and let them ſee, that of themſelves they were not able to ſtand againſt wormes and vile creatures: How then dared they to ſtrive againſt God, by ſuch continuall murmurings and offences? Fiery Serpents they were called, of the ſting and poyſon that the Serpent infuſed into their bodies, namely, an outragious heate and fire, ſo that they dyed with it in great extremity, hot maladies being ſore and grievous to any body. And moſt fitly, ſaith one, did the puniſhment anſwer to the fault: For they tranſgreſſing by hot and fiery tongues, they are plagued by hot and fiery ſtings. They had ſtung God and Moſes, therefore juſtly the Serpents ſting them. They powred venome out of their mouthes, the Serpents requite them, and doe the like to them. Wiſd. 11. 13.

By what a man ſinneth, by that ſhall he bee puniſhed. Hee that ſheddeth mans blood, by man Gen. 9.

ſhall his blood be ſhed, (ſaith God.) And Adoni-bezek ſaid, when the purſuers had caught him, and cut off the thumbs of his hands and of his feet; Seventy Kings ſerved I ſo, and now as I did to them, ſo God hath rewarded me. The Ægyptians drowned the Iſraelites male children in the waters, and God drowned Pharaoh, and a number of them likewiſe in the red Sea for requitall. Nadab and Abihu offered ſtrange fire, and ſo ſinned: Fire from heaven deſtroyed them: and ſo by the like they are puniſhed: In fire they ſin, in fire they ſmart.

Iudg.1.6.

Exod.14.

Antiochus had made many bowels to ake, and the Lord puniſheth him by an incurable diſeaſe in his bowels, ſo that no man was able to abide the ſmell of him. Reade the eleventh and twelfth Chapters of Wiſdome, Ab altero ſperes alteri quod feceris ipſe: Looke for that at anothers hand, that thou haſt done to any. Qualia quiſq; facit, talis finis manet ipſum: Such as a mans actions are, ſuch end taryeth for him.

Levit.10.

But ſhould the Lord puniſh all ſlanderers and privy back-biters, that poure out venome, and ſting them that are better than themſelves, who ſhould bee able to ſtir for Serpents? Every towne and every houſe would be full.

If the Serpent bite (ſaith wiſe Solomon) when he is not charmed, no better is a Back-biter. The words of the mouth of a wiſe man have grace, but the lips of a foole devoure himſelf. The beginning of the words of his mouth is fooliſhneſſe, and the latter end of his mouth is wicked madneſſe. Serpens laudatur propter prudentiam, ſed vituperatur propter venenum: The Serpent is praiſed for his wiſdome, but diſpraiſed for his venome. So, ſo, too many in this age, much to be praiſed for ſundry good parts in them, but for their venome both by word and pen, O how to be diſpraiſed?

Eccleſ.10.11. &c.

Let this juſtice of God upon thoſe Iſraelites worke as it ought, unto amendment of this fault. To ſpeake againſt God is moſt fearefull, and to ſpeake againſt Moſes and Aaron, is grievouſly puniſhed.

Remember Corah and his company. Remember this place: They ſpake againſt God and Moſes. Et juſtum erat ut à Serpentibus paterentur, qui Serpentum malitiam ſectabantur: It was juſt they ſhould ſuffer ſtinging of Serpents, that followed the malice of Serpents. As fire licketh up the wood and conſumeth it, ſo doth a privy hiſſing ſlanderer, murmurer and back-biter, lick up and conſume his neighbours reputation and credit. Therefore in Gods juſtice to be plagued by fire or fiery wormes, that may ſting him even to death, as he hath ſtinged others, to the loſſe of their Good-name, worſe than any death.

The Serpent biteth in ſecret: So the ſlanderer.

Laſtly, theſe Serpents were fiery, to tell the ſlanderer, murmurer and repiner againſt God, or authority Temporall or Eccleſiaſticall, that Hell fire remaines for him, beſides whatſoever puniſhment God ſhall pleaſe to lay upon him. And alſo that all ſinners by ſin, make themſelves ſubject to hell fire.

The fourth part.

THe fourth Head is their repentance. Therefore the people came to Moſes and ſaid, We have ſinned, for we have ſpoke againſt the Lord and againſt thee, pray to the Lord that he take away the Serpents from us. And Moſes prayed for the people.

Firſt, obſerve (I pray you) how this Repentance was wrought, even by the Croſſe, by this diſtreſſe of ſtinging Serpents, and by this Calamity. So is the Croſſe as Gods wreſt, to put every ſtring in tune. In my proſperity I ſaid: Tuſh, this wealth ſhall never decay, thou Lord of thy goodneſſe, haſt made my hill ſo ſtrong.

But thou turnedſt then thy hand, and the caſe was altered. Before I was in trouble I went aſtray, but this trouble ſchooled me. It is good for me that I have been in trouble, that I might learn to keep thy Commandements. Schola Crucis, ſchola lucis: The ſchoole of the Croſſe, is the ſchoole of light. When Saul his lap was cut by David, it opened his eyes: And ſurely the Lords cutting off our skirts ſometimes, is right profitable unto us. When Manaſſes was in fetters in iron as a captive, then he came to himſelfe, and repented for the evill that he had done. Reade the ſecond of Machabees, the ninth Chapter, what effects Gods heavy hand, but moſt juſt, wrought in cruell Antiochus, that was in ſuch a height of pride.

2 Mach.9.5.

Secondly, obſerve the bleſſing, to repent at laſt. The proverb is old: Hee runneth far that never returnes. Seven times a day falleth the juſt man, but he returneth, he riſeth againe and is ſorie. When David had ſinned ſo fearefully, he looked back and repented. When another time he had cauſed the people to be numbred, and ſo ſinned, his heart ſmote him, and he was ſory for it. A wilde race did the prodigall Son runne, but he returned. Peter ſinned moſt grievouſly, but he went out and wept bitterly. Happy were all theſe for their returning: And bleſſed be our good God for evermore, that pardoneth upon repentance. The wood begetteth the worme, and the worme conſumes the wood. Sinne begets repentance, and repentance eates up ſinne through a ſweet God. Thirdly, obſerve in their repentance their confeſſion to God, becauſe they had ſpoken againſt him, and to Moſes, becauſe they had alſo tranſgreſſed againſt him.

him. Novit Deus omnia, ſed expectat vocem tuam: God knoweth all, ſaith Ambroſe, but yet hee looketh for thy confeſſion. God is never more ready to cover, than when wee lay open. The Fox (ſay our Bookes) taketh his prey by the throate, ſo to ſtop all noiſe: And the devill that fox by all meanes hindreth holy confeſſion, and bringeth men to deale with their ſoules as men uſe to deale with their old ruſty armour, either never, or once in a yeare or two, formally and ſuperficially to ſcoure it over. But as a thorne in your finger will grieve you ſtill, till it bee had out: ſo will ſinne in your conſcience ſtill vex till it be acknowldged and confeſſed: When I held my tongue, ſaith the holy Prophet, my bones conſumed, or when I roared all the day, &c. that is, neither by ſilence nor crying, found I any eaſe: Then I acknowledged my ſinne unto thee, neither hid I mine iniquity: for I thought I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickedneſſe unto the Lord, & thou forgaveſt the puniſhment of my ſinne. So ſhewing, that before the ſinner be reconciled to God, he feeleth a perpetuall torment. I ſpeake not of Popiſh Confeſſion in the eare of a Prieſt: God nor his word teach any ſuch confeſſion. But I ſpeake of confeſſion to God with your Prophet David, both here and every where: Againſt thee only have I ſinned and done this evill in thy ſight. If we have offended man, reconciliation to him is neceſſary. But to thy God ſpeake all, ſaith Chryſoſtome, even whatſoever thou art aſhamed to ſpeake unto man, for he expecteth thy voice, although he knew it before, and he will never upbraid thee as man will. Fourthly, note, They truſt in Gods mercy, that upon prayer he would pardon, and therefore they deſpaire not. This ever muſt be joyned to our repentance, or elſe it is a gulphe that will ſwallow us up. Quid proderint lachrymæ & confeſſio, ſi nulla adſit abolitionis fiducia? What will teares and confeſſion profit, if there be no hope of pardon? My ſins are greater than can be forgiven, ſaith wicked Cain. Sed mentiris Cain. Major enim Dei miſericordia, quam omnium peccatorum miſeria: But thou lieſt Cain, ſaith S. Auguſtine, for the mercy of God is greater than all ſinners miſery. Thus you have ſeene their repentance.

Pſal. 32. 3.

The fift part.

THe fift point and head in this Chapter is the remedy of this evill, wherein you may marke Moſes praying, God hearing, and the manner of the remedy. Pray for us, ſay they to Moſes, that the Lord would take away theſe Serpents. And Moſes prayed for them. Moſes forgets all their wrong, and ſeeing their miſery prayeth for them, and the Lord heareth and helpeth. If Moſes cry, Moſes, quid clamas? ſtraight from a ſweet God. Magiſtrates and Miniſters muſt turne away their faces from many faults, or elſe it will be wide with the people: yet will they never have eyes to ſee it. When we are well, a ruſh for the Miniſter, rob him in his tithes, wrong him with the tongue; but when ſickneſſe comes, then ſend for the Miniſter, And O ſir pray for me, &c. Well, a fault amended is well obſerved. I leave it to your ſelfe.

Exod. 32. blot me out.
Rom. 9. accurſed.
1 Reg. 3. Solomon for wiſdome, to goverue for good, &c.
We ſleepe, they wake, we ſilent, they cry, yet, &c.

2. The Lord heard and ſaid unto Moſes, Make thee a fiery Serpent, and ſet it up for a ſigne, that as many as are bitten may looke upon it and live, &c. This is the manner of the remedy. A ſtrange manner to looke up to a piece of braſſe, for remedy againſt a mortall and deſperate malady. But yet fit. For thus the Lord exerciſed their obedience, making them ſtoope to his will, though they ſaw no naturall reaſon, as Naaman did.

Secondly, God forced them to ſee him helping, and onely helping this miſery: for could they thinke the braſſe did it? No, no, ſo abſurd they could not be; but of force they muſt ſee a divine and ſupernaturall power healing their plague.

Thirdly, he thus ordained a moſt excellent figure of his ſonne Chriſt Jeſus, the onely Saviour of all mankinde, and with great contentment: marke well this figure: As Moſes lift up the Serpent, ſaith S. Iohn, in the wilderneſſe, ſo muſt that Son of man be lift up, that whoſoever beleeveth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. Minorum & exigua majorum figuræ & præmonſtrationes ſunt: Small things, ſaith Lactantius, are figures and foreſhewings of greater things. So here. They were ſtung, and ſo was Adam in Paradiſe, and by him all mankinde. They by materiall ſerpents, we by that ſpirituall ſerpent. Theſe felt fires in their bodies, we feele fire in our ſoules and conſciences. They were helped, and we are helped. Their meanes, a Serpent in forme, but without venome: we by a man in our nature, but without ſin. They looke upon that with bodily eyes, we upon this with the eyes of our faith. That was lifted up, to the end, that Chriſt was lifted up upon the croſſe, for our ſafety. How fitly now ſheweth this figure, that which the Apoſtle ſaith, Since by man came death, by man came alſo the reſurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive. That was of braſſe, and not of gold or pretious matter, leſt any vertue might have beene attributed to the matter. Secondly, that ſo it might figure that great humility which our Saviour was pleaſed to come in, whereof the Prophet Eſay ſo notably in that place now often repeated, more profiting us than all the glory of the Angels. Whereupon one ſaith, Vitulus aureus occidit, Serpens aneus ſanat: The golden Calfe kills, but the brazen Serpent heales. The glory and pompe of the world helped not us, but Chriſt his poverty and great humility ſaved us.

Iohn 3. 14, 15.
Iohn 12. Ego ſi exaltatus fuero, &c.
Eſay 53.
1 Cor. 15. 21.
Eſay 53.

Againe, their Serpent was braſſe, that it might figure out the ſtrength and power of our Lord and Saviour, both to defend, protect, and ſave his owne, as alſo to cruſh and conquer, beate downe and tread upon all puffing pride whatſoever that raiſeth up it ſelfe againſt him. Whereunto thoſe Scriptures agree: All power is given me both in heaven and earth. Father, I have not loſt one of thoſe whom thou gaveſt me. No man ſhall take them out of my hand, &c. The winde, the Sea, the diſeaſes of men, whatſoever, yea devill and death it ſelfe yeeld to him, and if hee command, they obey. I will, be thou cleane. I command thee foule ſpirit come out of him. Maid, I ſay to thee ariſe, and Lazarus come forth. All obey. And who is this, ſay they, whom winde and Sea obey? Ye men of Iſrael, ſaith Peter, when the Creeple was healed, why marvell ye at this, or why looke ye ſo ſtedfaſtly on us, as though by our owne power or godlineſſe we had made this man goe? The God of Abraham, Iſaac and Iacob, the God of our Fathers hath glorified his Son Ieſus whom yee betrayed and denied in the preſence of Pilate, &c. His name hath made this man ſound whom ye ſee and know, through faith in his name, and the faith which is by him, hath given to him this perfect health of his whole body in the preſence of you all. Likewiſe this againe ſpeaketh the Apoſtle to the Epheſians, ſaying: God ſet him at his right hand in the heavenly places; farre above all principality and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not in this world only, but alſo in that that is to come. And hath made all things ſubject under his feet, and hath given him over all things to be the head to the Church which is his body, even the fulneſſe of him, that filleth all in all things. Thus ſtrong is he for his owne, an exceeding comfort if it be religiouſly meditated upon. See alſo how ſtrong againſt his enemies, for that likewiſe was figured in the braſſe. Mat. 21. he deſtroyed thoſe husbandmen that ſo little regarded him: that is, all enemies whatſoever, that oppoſe themſelves againſt him and his Church, what degree or calling ſoever they be of.

Acts 3.12.

Epheſ.1.19.

Mat.21.41.

And in the 44. verſe: Whoſoever ſhall fall on this ſtone he ſhall be broken, but on whomſoever it ſhall fall, it will daſh him in pieces. In the 22. Chapter, Binde him hand and foot, take him away and caſt him into utter darkneſſe, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. The Evangeliſt Saint Luke, Thoſe mine enemies that would not that I ſhould raign over them, bring hither and ſlay them before me. S. Iohns Goſpell againe: As ſoon as he had ſaid unto them, I am he, they went backwards and fell to the ground. So unable is any worldly power to ſtand againſt him. An unſpeakable comfort alſo if it be well conſidered, for what he is, he is for us, and all his power, ſtrength and vertue is ours, to beate down them that trouble us, whenſoever his bleſſed pleaſure ſhall ſo be. Remember we therefore ever this uſe of the braſſe, why the Serpent was made of braſſe. Finally, remember that notable application of the Booke of Wiſdome, When the cruell fiercene ſſe of the Beaſts came unto them, and they were hurt with the cruell ſtings of the Serpents: Thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were troubled for a little ſeaſon, that they might be reformed, having a ſign of Salvation, to remember the commandement of the Law. For he that turned towards it was not healed by the thing that he ſaw, but by thee O Saviour of all. So Chriſt it was that healed then, that healeth now, and for ever muſt heale them whom ſinne hath bitten unto death, by looking up to him with the eyes of true faith, and affiance ſetled onely in him. Humani generis ſalus in Chriſti aſpectu poſita, vel cum illum cœleſtis pater aſpicit ut noſtri miſereatur, vel ipſum nos aſpicimus, ut ejus miſerecordiam divinam conſequamur: The ſalvation of mankinde is placed in the beholding of Chriſt, either when his heavenly father beholdeth him to have mercy on us, or wee behold him, to obtaine his divine mercy.

Mat.22.13. Luke 19.27.

Iohn 18.6.

Turne it againſt the Iew that ſo deſpitefully ſaid, Tune credis crucifixo: Doeſt thou beleeve in him that was crucified? And know that the like ſcoffe might have been made at them which looked to the braſen Serpent. Doeſt thou looke at a piece of braſſe? can ſuch a looking profit? what a toy is this? &c. But that looking was life, in the ordinance of him that ſtill remaines powerfull to ſave all beleevers. They only by looking up were healed, and by no other worke of theirs, that they and we for ever might learne, that onely by Chriſt and faith in his name, mankinde is ſaved, no other action and worke of ours availeth ought in this point, but Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, he is the propitiation for our ſinnes.

Turne it againſt the Papiſt, that ſo unthankfully joyneth workes with faith, and man with God in the matter of our juſtification. Onely that Serpent, and onely by looking, how plaine to ſhew that onely Chriſt, and onely by faith in him, wee live and inherit his heavenly joyes: Tantum crede, abſq; operibus, non ex operibus, &c. Without workes, not of workes, &c. Plentifull is the Scripture in this point. The ancient Fathers agreeable to the ſame; Chryſoſt. Fecit juſtum peccatorem. S. Aug. Solus Chriſtus pro nobis ſuſcipit ſine malis meritis pœnam, ut nos per illum ſine bonis meritis conſequeremur gratiam: Onely Chriſt without any ill workes, tooke upon him for us puniſhment, that we by him without any good workes, might obtaine grace. Pighius a learned Papiſt, Si formaliter & propriè loquamur, nec fide nec charitate noſtra juſtificamur, ſed una Dei in Chriſto juſtitia, una Chriſti nobis communicata juſtitia: If wee ſpeake formally and properly, neither by our faith nor our charity are we juſtified, but onely by the righteouſneſſe of God in Chriſt, onely by the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imparted or imputed unto us. Bellarmine himſelfe ingenuouſly confeſſeth: Propter incertitudinem propriæ juſtitiæ & periculum

Chryſoſt. in 2 Cor. 5. ult. vide.

Ad Boniſac. lib. 4. cap. 4. Controv. 2.

De Juſtific. lib. 5. cap. 7.

lum inanis gloriæ tutiſſimum eſt fiduciam totam in ſola Dei miſericordia & benignitate reponere: for the uncertainty of our owne righteouſneſſe, and the feare of vaine glory, it is moſt ſafe to put our whole truſt and confidence in the onely mercy and goodneſſe of God.

Lyra alſo, a man cleaving to the Church of Rome, in this point ſaith; Aſſerentes quod fides non juſtificat ad ſalutem ſine legalibus, falſi ſunt Apoſtoli, & ſic condemnant Chriſtum tanquam impotentem ad ſalvandum: They that affirme that faith is not ſufficient unto ſalvation without the Law, are falſe Apoſtles, and ſo condemne Chriſt as unable to ſave. In Galat. 3.

Caſſander againe, one of their owne, in the Article of juſtification, ſaith: Proteſtantium doctrinam hanc ſemper in Eccleſia probatam & retentam: That the doctrine of the Proteſtants, touching juſtification onely by Chriſt, was ever held in the Church.

Their Anſelmus laſtly, moſt excellently; In hac ſola morte totam fiduciam tuam conſtitue, huic morti te totum committe, hac morte te totum contege. Si Dominus voluerit te judicare, dic, Domine, mortẽ Domini noſtri Ieſu Chriſti objicio inter me & te: Place thy whole confidence in this death alone, commit thy ſelfe wholly to this death, ſhroud thy ſelfe altogether under this death. If the Lord will enter into judgement with thee, ſay, The death of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, I ſet betweene thee and me, O Lord.

How hateſull then and groſſe is that of Saint Francis? Vulnerum ſtigmatibus impreſſis ei ab Angelo, ſervari poſſe omnes ab ejus tempore ad diem noviſſimum: That by the markes or wounds imprinted in him by an Angell, all may be ſaved from that time to the end of the world. In Galat. 3.

And againe, that of another; Fœminas ad ſanctam Claram, &c. That all women to the time of Saint Clare, were ſaved by Chriſt, but from her to the end of the world, all were ſaved by her. The ancient Fathers ſay farre otherwiſe, as partly you have ſeene, and more may ſee. Nazianzene: Juſtitia eſt totum credere: It is righteouſneſſe onely to beleeve. Baſil: Sola fide quæ eſt in Chriſtum juſtificatur homo: By faith onely in Chriſt is every man juſtified. Athanaſius: Planè demonſtrat Apoſtolus fidem ipſam, vel ſolam juſtificandi in ſe habere virtutem: The Apoſtle manifeſtly ſheweth, that faith onely hath power in it to juſtifie. Origen; Apoſtolus affirmat ſufficere ſolius fidei juſtificationem; That Apoſtle affirmeth, that juſtification by faith alone ſufficeth. Chryſoſtome; Latro credidit duntaxat & juſtificatus eſt à miſericordiſſimo Deo; The Thiefe onely beleeved, and was juſtified of a moſt mercifull God. Saint Ambroſe againe; Videant Abrahamum non ex operibus legis, ſed ſola fide juſtificatum; Let them ſee Abraham juſtified, not by the workes of the Law, but onely by Faith. The ordinary gloſſe upon Iames Epiſtle, Abraham onely by Faith, not by the workes of the Law was juſtified. Origen ſpeaking of the circumciſion of Chriſt: Sola tantummodo fide ſalvabuntur gentes: Onely by faith ſhall the Gentiles be ſaved. In Rom. 3. In Rom. 3.

Conclude we then with him that ſaid; Quid ſit Serpentem aſpicere, ipſe Chriſtus docet cùm dicit; Vt omnis qui credit in ipſum non pereat, ſed habeat vitam æternam. Aſpicere ergò & credere, & Chriſti Fidem profiteri quem propoſuit Deus propitiatorem, per fidem in ſanguine ejus; What it is to looke upon the Serpent, Chriſt himſelfe teacheth, when he ſaith; That every one that beleeveth in me might not periſh, but have everlaſting life. To looke therefore is to beleeve and to profeſſe the faith of Chriſt whom God hath ſet out a propitiation through faith in his blood. Now the Jewes onely looked, and if looking be to beleeve, then onely beleeving ſaveth us. But when all this is ſaid of faith, is a dead faith meant, where no good life is? In Rom 3.

Bernards ſaying we hold; Juſtus ex fide ſua vivet, utiq; ſi vivat & ipſa, aliter quomodo vitam dabit ſi ipſa ſit mortua; The juſt man ſhall live by his faith, to wit, if his faith it ſelfe live: Otherwiſe how ſhall that give life, that is dead it ſelfe? Pejeras, detrahis, concupiſcis, omnia flagitia, ſine ullo doloris ſenſu, ſine ullo divini nominis metu committis, qualis hæc fides? Thou forſweareſt, thou ſlandereſt, thou luſteſt, and thou committeſt all wickednesſe, without any ſenſe of ſorrow, or any feare of the divine name. And what a faith is this?

God would not have the firſt borne of the ſheepe, which was given to him, to bee ſhorne: Ovis hominem cum fide non tonſa, vellus omnes virtutes ſignificat: The ſheepe ſignified man, whoſe faith God would not have ſhorne: that is, deprived of good life: And the fleece ſignified all vertue and good actions. Opera ſequuntur juſtificatum, non præcedunt juſtificandum: Good workes ever follow him that is juſtified, they goe not before juſtification.

The ſweet uſe againe of this worke of Chriſt for us, may bee well to tell us, that love is due to him from us, that hath in mercy thus loved us. His nailes, his ſpeare, his croſſe, his wounds and blood, his death and paſſion, require this at our hands. O homo quanti te fecit Deus tuus ex his quæ pro te factus eſt agnoſce, & quanto per te factus eſt vilior, tanto tibi ſemper ſit charior; O man what reckoning God hath made of thee, conceive by that which he became for thee: And the more baſe and vile he became for thee, ſo much the more deare ever let him be to thee. Greater love than this hath no man, when any man beſtoweth his life for his friends. Ye are my friends if ye do whatſoever I command you. Henceforth call I you not ſervants, for the ſervant knoweth not what his Maſter doth; but I have called you Friends, for all things that I have heard of my Father, have I made knowne to you. Ye have not choſen me, but I have choſen you, &c. O let this greateſt love have our our greateſt love againe. Sweet Saviour make us love thee, and by thine owne power worke in us what by thine owne goodneſſe thou ſo deſerveſt of us.

Iohn 15.13.

Againe, Quid ego ſub tali protectore metuam, &c.? What ſhould we feare under ſuch a protector, or what may we not hope for under ſuch a loving Lord? Vbi tanta potentia eſt, & tantus amor, &c. Where ſuch power is, and ſuch love, why ſhould wee feare, why ſhould wee doubt, why ſhould we any way be perplexed, if with humble and faithfull hearts wee ſubmit our ſelves wholly to him, and his providence? Quid enim in eo deeſſe poteſt, in quo & omnipotens miſericordia, & miſericors omnipotentia eſt? For what can be wanting in him, in whom there is an Almighty mercy, and a mercifull Almightineſſe? Hee ſtretched out thoſe armes to receive thee, and wilt thou not bee received of him? Hee refuſeth not the penitent theefe upon the Croſſe, and will he refuſe thee? O doe him not this wrong, and deprive not thy ſoule of this comfort. He is nailed faſt both hand and foot for thee, to aſſure thee that he taryeth for thy repentance, and will no more ſtart from thee, when thou commeſt to him, than a nailed man can goe from the tree he is ſo nailed unto. Hee would bee pierced in the ſide, to let thee ſee a paſſage to his heart for thee, if thou wilt come. His blood hee gave thee, what will he ever deny unto thee? But ſaith Bernard too truly; Mundus clamat, ego deficiam; Caro clamat, ego inficiam: Dæmon clamat, ego decipiam: Chriſtus clamat, ego reficiam: & tamen ea eſt mentis noſtræ cæcitas & amentia, ut Chriſto relicto, mundum deficientem, carnem inficientem, & dæmonem decipientem ſequamur: The World cryeth, I will faile thee: the Fleſh cryeth, I will infect thee: the Devill cryeth, I will deceive thee: and Chriſt cryeth, I will refreſh thee: yet ſuch is the blindneſſe of our mindes, that leaving Chriſt we follow this failing world, this infecting fleſh, and this deceiving devill. O thrice miſerable we, what doe we meane? How many bobs hath this world given us, how often hath this fleſh abuſed us, and how often hath Satan over-reached us? yet we will not take heed, yet we will not be wiſe. To dote upon our own deſtruction, ô what a blindneſſe? To fall out with our owne happineſſe, and that eternall, O what a miſery? Good Lord turne us, and we ſhall be turned, &c.

Fulgentius.

Adit unus ad præcordia ejus.

O but will ſome worldlings ſay, you propoſe all good in Chriſt, and yet wee daily ſee his chiefe profeſſors, and trueſt friends afflicted, and moleſted in the world ſundry wayes, of ſuperiours, of equals, and even of inferiours, &c. True, ſaith Baſil, but the nature of theſe afflictions are changed. Fructus enim crucis Chriſti, qui has omnes pro nobis pertulit, efficit ut in mœroribus lætitiam, in laboribus ſolatium, in paupertate divitias, & in ignominia gloriam & honorem inveniamus: For the fruit of Chriſt his ſuffering, who endured all theſe things for us, maketh that we finde in ſadneſſe and ſorrow mirth, in labours comfort, in poverty riches, and in ignominy reproach and ſlander, glory and honour both in heaven and earth. The bleſſed Apoſtle confirmeth as much, when he ſaith, We are afflicted on every ſide, yet are we not in diſtreſſe, we are in doubt, but yet we deſpaire not, we are perſecuted, but not forſaken, caſt downe, but we periſh not, &c. 1 Cor. 4. 8.

Againe, in another place, God forbid that I ſhould rejoyce but in the Croſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, whereby the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. Now we know, that a thouſand darts, caſt at a crucified or dead man, hurt him not. No more doe any afflictions the godly that are crucified, and dead unto the world, &c. And it is a farre more excellent thing, living in the world, not to be hurt of the evils in it, than to bee freed and delivered from them. For that may bee done by mans ſtrength, but the firſt onely by Gods power and grace. Looke we therefore evermore up unto this our deliverer, helper and Saviour of us, figured ſo lively by that braſen Serpent lift up in the wilderneſſe, for the Jewes to looke unto in their danger. And know that in all the old Teſtament there is no figure that ſo expreſſeth all the parts and points of the myſterie of Chriſts incarnation, and comming into this world, as this doth. Gal. 6. 14.

The ſixt part.

Verſ. 10. AND the children of Iſrael departed thence and pitched in Oboth, &c. This is the ſixt generall head of this Chapter, noting their going forward in their journey, when God thus mercifully had heard their cry, and eaſed them from the ſtinging Serpents. From this 10. verſe to the 21. are divers pitchings mentioned, which I need not diſcourſe of. That great worke of God by the river Arnon ſpoken of in the Booke of the battels of the Lord, a booke now loſt, how God deſtroyed Vaheb the City with a whirle wind, and the river Arnon directed another way, having at this day another courſe than it had then, is to be noted.

Secondly, that great worke of Beer. The ſame is the Well, ſaith the 16. verſe, where the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Aſſemble the people, and I will give them water. Then Iſrael ſang this ſong: Riſe up Well, ſing ye unto it. The Princes digged this Well, the Captaines of the people digged it, even the law-giver with their ſtaves. Hereupon it is gathered, that there being a want of water, by the commandement of God unto Moſes, the 12. Princes of the Tribes digged, and God gave water plentifully; which is the third time that he thus relieved them.

Thirdly, obſerve for the maine uſe of theſe removes, that when wee are delivered from ſpirituall ſpirituall Ægypt, the houſe of bondage, and have taſted Manna and water out of the Rock, that is, of the grace of the holy Ghoſt, we reſiſt not, but ever goe forward by degrees, till wee come unto the heavenly Canaan, the bleſſed haven where wee would be, Chriſt our Saviour telling us, that he which putteth his hand to the Plough, and looketh backe, is not fit for the kingdome of God. And his Apoſtle after him, That it is impoſſible that they which were once lightned, and have taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the holy Ghoſt, and have taſted of the good word of God, and of the powers of the world to come, if they fall away, ſhould be renued againe by repentance, ſeeing they crucified againe to themſelves the Son of God, and make a mocke of him, &c. Luke 9.

The ſeventh part.

THen Iſrael ſent meſſengers unto Seon King of the Amorites, ſaying, Let me go through thy land. We will not turne aſide into the fields, nor into the Vineyards, neither drinke of the waters of the Wels. We will goe by the Kings way, untill we be paſt thy country. But Seon gave no licence, but aſſembled his people to fight with them &c. This is the laſt generall head of this Chapter, their victory againſt the Amorites. In Deuteronomy this ſtory is more at large, which is good to be there read. God there telleth the Iſraelites he will deliver Seon and his countrey unto them, therfore fight. Yet they ſend this meſſage, which ſeemeth ſomewhat ſtrange, for if Moſes did it without God, he is more kinde than he had warrant for: If God appointed it, how then ſtandeth it with his purpoſe to deſtroy them? Divers anſwered diverſly. Verſe 21. Deut. 2. 24. Deut. 13. 1.

But we may reſt in this, that God did all, and yet no contrariety, becauſe there were ſeverall uſes of all. Hee determineth their deſtruction, ſo was his pleaſure: and who ſhall finde fault with his will, or touch it with injuſtice? Hee diſcovereth ſo much to Moſes for his comfort, Deut. 2. 14. yet this meſſage is ſent to diſcover their obſtinacy and evill heart the more, which it effectually did. Secondly, to make them inexcuſable both in their owne conſciences, and the judgement of others that heard of it: For though Gods decree bee unchangeable, yet it is not forcing; but ſtill our owne will converteth to our guilt, becauſe wee doe ſponte, willingly in regard of our ſelves, that which we doe neceſſario, neceſſarily in regard of Gods decree. This conſenting and agreeing will of ours maketh us inexcuſable, and ſo did it here. For peaceable paſſage being offered by Moſes, and prayed at the hands of the Amorites, their refuſall of it, and undertaking warre, made them guilty of their owne deſtruction, and utterly inexcuſable. Thirdly, to teach that whatſoever Gods dercee is, meanes ordinary are to be uſed, as a meſſage firſt, then warre upon the denyall, and ſo that deſtruction that was decreed with God. Let the two former make us ever beware contempts, and examine our hearts, how wee receive Gods meſſages, ſent unto us by his Word, and by many and many particular favours, that wee never doe as Seon this King with his people did, rejecting offered good, and ſo pulling upon us great and grievous, but moſt juſtly deſerved evill. Let them againe bee a comfort to preachers, and Miniſters, when their meſſage is not received, but rejected and deſpiſed; it may bee, God hath appointed it ſo to be. God ſendeth to ſome, to diſcover the wickedneſſe of their hearts, and to make them inexcuſable. So Eſ. 6. Eze. 2. if you reade them, with other places. When our meſſage is the ſavour of death unto death, yet are we the meſſengers, a ſweet ſavour to our God, even in them that periſh. Let the third profit them who uſe that abſurde ſpeech; If I be predeſtinated, I cannot change it, and therfore no matter what I doe. If God have decreed a thing, it will come to paſſe, though we ſit ſtill. No, let this place tell us, that though hee have decreed the deſtruction of the Amorites, yet hee will have his children keepe their ordinary way, and uſe meanes. Rebecca uſed meanes to ſave Iacob from his brother, albeit God had ſaid, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger. Saint Paul uſed meanes in that ſhipwrack, albeit God had ſaid, they ſhould all come ſafe to land. They that could ſwimme, firſt leapt in to helpe others, and others on boords, and broken peeces of the ſhip, came all well to the ſhore. Yea the Lord Jeſus is conveyed into Ægypt, to ſave him from Herods hands, in that cruell ſlaughter of all the infants of two yeares old and under: yet what Herod or devill could hurt him? Fourthly, when ſtrife and contention groweth among men, is not this place, and the like good remembrances, to bid us take heed how we reject offered peace, and prepare our ſelves to unneceſſary warres? Againe, when wee paſſe by any neighbours grounds, fields, and vineyards, to doe no harme. So may wee have uſe one of another, without any griefe or detriment. A leſſon to be joyned to that of Iohn Baptiſt given to ſouldiers. Luke 3. 14. 1 Cor. 13. Baſil. Pax & manſuetudo charactheres animæ piæ.

2. Seon would not. Behold the dogged nature of a churle, and remember the Apoſtles words, Love is gentle. See againe, ſtill, ſtill, the lets and impediments to the land of Canaan, and remember the words; Through many tribulations muſt we enter into the kingdome of God. Marke how Seon is king of the Amorites, and Og is King of Baſan. Cananites and Iebuſites, and all that rabble, have pleaſant dwellings, and many comforts, when Iſrael the people of God wander up and downe the wilderneſſe, croſſed here, and croſſed there, not having any comparable comfort any where. But tarry a while, and ſee the Beeſome of the Lord ſweeping all Nabals churliſhneſſe. The Sodomites to Lot, &c.

all theſe away, and giving their comforts to his people. Reade the 37. Pſalme often, it will ſpeak comfortably of this point. Reade *Pro.*11. *verſ.*8. The righteous eſcapeth out of trouble, and the wicked ſhall come in his ſtead. Againe, in another place: The wicked ſhall be a ranſome for the juſt, and the tranſgreſſour for the righteous: that is, the Lord ſhall cauſe that to fall on their own heads, which they intended againſt the juſt, and putting the wicked in their places. David eſcapeth, and Abſolon dyeth. Daniel eſcapeth, and his accuſers periſh. Mardoche eſcapeth, and Haman is hanged. Peter is delivered out of priſon, Herod dyeth a foule death. The Iſraelites paſſe moſt ſafely, but Pharaoh and his hoſt periſh. Reade Eſay 43. Feare we not therefore, for our owne affliction, or the proſperity of the wicked, for ſoone can the Lord make a change. The birds have neſts, and foxes holds, but the Lord of all hath not where to lay his head. He that ſwimmes with all plenty heareth theſe words: Thou foole this night ſhall they take away thy ſoule, and then whoſe are all theſe? O ſettle things in your heart, and cleave to the Lord in comfort.

Pro.22.18.

3. See againe, how true it is, Qui nolunt dare communia, ſæpe perdunt propria: They that will not grant common things, often for it loſe their owne private. The high way was common, and their offer not to turne out of it was good, yet it would not bee ſuffered, and now they loſe all. The proverbe is old, and too true many times: Penny wiſe, pound fooliſh. Judgement is neceſſary, and ſmall things denyed draw on great effects.

Bellum Peloponeſ. 27. An.

4. Seon here, ſaith Origen, may reſemble the Devill, to whom the faithfull ſay in Baptiſme, Let us paſſe, we will none of thy works, none of the pomps of the world, nor of the ſinfull luſts of the fleſh: but goe on in the Kings way, that is, in the way of Chriſt and his truth; but he will not let us paſſe, but raiſing his forces fighteth with us, till at laſt God caſt him downe and give us victory, even a finall victory at our death.

5. Seon may ſignifie all bad neighbours, to whom we ſay: let us paſſe quietly, wee will doe no harme, but the more gently wee ſpeake, the rougher are they, and the more wee labour for peace, the more ſuits and vexations we finde. Till Seon be overcome he will not yeeld. And bee wee of good comfort, God is able and ready to give victory, to their coſt that are thus forward.

2 Sam.16.10. Eſa.6. Ezech.14.9. Rom.1.18. Aug. Eadē opera diverſa conſilia. Miro modo non fit præter voluntatem ejus quod fit contra. Enchirid. c.100. Deus operatur in animis hominum ad inclinandum voluntates eorum ſive ad bonum ſecundū miſericordiam, ſive ad malum ſecundum merita eorum judicio interdum aperto, interdum occulto, ſemper autem juſto. De gra. & lib. Arbitrio ca. 21.

6. In Deuteronomy it is ſaid, Seon would not let us paſſe by him, for the Lord had hardened his ſpirit, and made his heart obſtinate. The like ſpeech is in Ioſhua 11. and divers places of the Scripture. We are afraid if we ſhould ſo ſpeak, that we ſhould make God the of Author evil: and therfore wee uſe to ſay, God ſuffered: But we never need tofeare to ſpeake as the Scripture ſpeaketh, for that is Gods owne ſpeech. God hardened Pharaohs heart, yet no author of evill. He curſeth, ſaith David, even becauſe the Lord hath bidden him curſe David. In Eſay, Make the heart of this people fat, make their eares heavy, and ſhut their eyes, leſt they ſee with their eyes, &c. In Ezekiel, If the Prophet be deceived when he hath ſpoken a thing, I the Lord have deceived him. Againe, the Apoſtle to the Romanes, feareth not to ſay, that God delivered them up to a reprobate minde, to doe theſe things which are not convenient. Conclude with Iob, The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken, yet were there other meanes you know. But in none of theſe ſayings is God made the cauſe of evill. Becauſe he can b ecauſe of an action, and not of the evill in the action: As he that ſtriketh an inſtrument out of tune, is cauſe of the ſound, but not of jarring ſound, that is in the ſtrings that be out of tune. What God doth is ever good, and as Auſten ſaith, Never would he ſuffer any evill to be done, were he not able out of evill to draw good. But I have often ſpoken of this point. Let us marke it here well, and remember it all our life, that to reject good and honeſt conditions of peace, love, alliance, &c. is an effect of Gods wrath, and of a heart hardened in his wrath.

7. See here in theſe Amorites, how God giveth away our earthly places, whatſoever they be, at his good pleaſure, and no wit or power of man can hinder him. No skinnes of parchment containing Lawyers perpetuities, and ſinfull dotage, as many uſe it. But when our ſinnes are ripe, our ſinnes of unthankfulneſſe, of pride, of cruelty and oppreſſion, with ſuch like; then God awaketh and giveth all away to ſtrangers, that never laid it together. The name is put out, the inheritance altered as a river out of his channell, and the place knoweth the old poſſeſſors no more. The tent that is never ſo well pitched muſt be removed at his good pleaſure, and who knoweth how ſoone? Iſrael ſmote Seon, and theſe Amorites his people with the edge of the ſword, and conquered his land from Arnon to Iabok, even unto the children of Ammon, &c. And Iſrael tooke all theſe Cities, and dwelt in them, &c. There is no man in the world hath any other tenure in any thing that hee poſſeſſeth, than ad voluntatem Dei: at the will of the Lord. And O that men would more thinke of it.

Verſe 26.

8. For Heſhbon was the City of Seon the King of the Amorites, &c. From this verſe to the 31. God carefully ſheweth, that the Iſraelites tooke nothing which belonged to Moab, but kept his promiſe firmly with them, how ill ſo ever they deſerved it. Conferre the 2. of Deuteronomy with this, and ſee the Lords care, which yeeldeth us a great comfort. For he that will not break with the wicked, he will never break with the godly that beleeve in him. Reſt upon it, and be aſſured of it, heaven and earth ſhall paſſe, but not one jot of any promiſe of his faile his faithfull.

9. It

9 It is worthy noting here, how God proveth that Heſhbon belonged to Seon, by a proverbiall ſpeech. They that ſpeake in proverbs (ſaith hee) ſay, come to Heſhbon, let the Citie of Seon be built and repaired, for a fire is gone out of Heſhbon, and a flame from the City of Seon, and hath conſumed Ar of the Moabites, &c. There is no people nor language that hath not proverbes: And ever theſe provebs have beene great preſervers of the truth of many matters. Often doe Hiſtoriographers uſe them for confirmation, being ſo effectuall for memory, that what could not by Bookes, by pillers of ſtone and braſſe, or any other like way be preſerved, that by a proverbe hath remained ſtill in remembrance, from age to age, many hundred yeares. It perſwadeth greatly, and therefore in rules of ſpeech is one. See Quintilian and others. Philoſophers uſe it, and make account of it. The holy Scriptures both in the Old and New Teſtament many times. If probability induce, what more probable than that which proverbially is in every mouth? Quod tot ætatum tot nationum conſenſus & velut unum ſuffragium approbavit: Which the conſent, and as it were one voyce of ſo many Ages and Nations, hath allowed and made good. If there were not, nativa quædam vis veritatis, fieri non potuit eandem ſententiam in centum dimanaſſe populos & linguas: If there were not, I ſay, a certaine naturall power in truth, it could not be that one little ſentence and ſaying ſhould ſpread it ſelfe into ſo many nations and tongues of differing people. It leaveth, quaſi aculeos, as it were ſtings behinde it, in the mindes and thoughts of men. And that which Fabius ſaith of a jeſt or merry ſpeech, that is ſaid alſo of a proverbe. By theſe two great things have beene put by, ſo prevailing and piercing they are. Cic. pro Flavio.

10 And Moſes ſent to ſearch out Iaazer, &c. This ſending to ſearch and ſpie, ſheweth circumſpecton and care, and may tell us, that if againſt viſible worldly enemies, ſuch wiſedome is fit, how much more needfull is it againſt inviſible and ſpirituall enemies? Wiſely ſaith Salomon, without counſell thoughts come to nought, but in the multitude of Counſellors, there is ſtedfaſtneſſe. The Lord Jeſus and his Apoſtles how often to us, Watch, watch, &c. Verſ. 32.

11 And they turned and went up towards Baſhan, and Og the King of Baſhan came out againſt them, &c. Here is another onſet by this man, and ſo ſtill ſtoppes and hinderances in our paſſage to Canaan: And tentation after tentation while wee live upon this earth. But bleſſed bee God, victory ever in the end over all enemies. For this Og alſo was overcome, and all his Cities poſſeſſed by the Iſraelites, man, woman and childe, deſtroyed, to the great glory of God, comfort of this people, and terrour to all that heard of it. If you looke in the third of Deuteronomy, verſe 11. you ſhall ſee what a Gyant this Og was, and what an iron bed he had, the length of it nine Cubits, and the bredth of it foure Cubits, &c. The more glory to God to give his people power over him to throw him downe. In Tyberius time, we reade that a corps was left bare by reaſon of an Earth-quake whoſe teeth were twelve inches over. Now if he had his full number of teeth, that is, in either jaw ſixteen, then was his mouth ſixteen foot wide, a very large ſcope if meate were ſcant. Againe, that Francis King of France, had one of his Guard, under whoſe twiſt an ordinary man might goe. Verſe 33. Siracb prepare for tentation. The Cities walled, ergo truſt not, &c.

Such ſtrange things are written, but happely not all true. This of Og is true.

And let us note the mighty power of God in his workes, as alſo how the nearer they came to Canaan, the fiercer and fearfuller ſights or tryals. So, ſo ſhall it bee with us in our march to the heavenly Canaan, the laſt fault of Satan worſt, if God reſtraine not. For then hee either winneth or loſeth for ever. Marke 9. being commanded to come out, Satan rent him, and tare him fearfully. Our Saviour himſelfe prayeth moſt vehemently three times. In the life of Bernard there is a notable deſcription of this laſt conflict, Adfuit Satan, &c. Matth. 26.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXII.

This Chapter beginneth that notable hiſtory of Balack and Balaam, where generally obſerve,

{ His ſending for Balaam.
{ Balaams comming to him.

In the firſt, ſee the Motives that ſtirred up Balack to this courſe, and then the manner of the meſſage and ſending, contained in the 7. verſe.

THe firſt motive is Feare; yet in the ſecond of Deuteronomy, we have ſeene how God forbad them to meddle with Moab, and thereupon they were driven to compaſſe about to their great trouble, as in the Chapter before we ſaw. But this is the juſt judgment of God upon them, that have not their peace made with him, to be vexed ſtill in their minds with unneceſſary fears. Remẽber what you reade in Deuteronomy and Leviticus, among the curſes of God upon diſobedient perſons to his law & wil. I will ſend even a faintneſſe or cowardneſſe into their hearts, and the ſound of a leafe ſhaken ſhall chaſe them, and they ſhall flie as flying from a ſword, and they ſhall fall, no man purſuing them. Againe, thou ſhalt finde no reſt, for the Lord ſhall give thee a trembling heart, and looking to returne till thine eyes fall out, and a ſorrowfull minde. And thy life ſhall hang before thee, and thou ſhalt feare both night and day, and ſhalt have no aſſurance of thy life. In the morning thou ſhalt ſay, would God it were night, and at night thou ſhalt ſay, would God it were day, for the feare of thy heart which thou ſhalt feare, &c. If the Lord thus puniſh his owne when they diſobey, much more the rebellious ſtranger, whoſe heart is not inured with the feare of God. You ſee how ſmall a noyſe will ſtartle Theeves and other malefactors. Whereupon it is ſaid, O ſemper timidum ſcelus: O wickedneſſe ever fearfull: Hi ſunt qui trepidant & ad omnia fulgura pallent: Theſe are they that tremble and waxe pale at every crack of thunder. Theſe I ſay, that have no peace with God. Their conſcience is a continuall ſcourge, and whip to them. The feare of the Lord is ſtrength to the upright man, but feare ſhall be for the workers of iniquitie, ſaith Salomon. Nihil eſt miſerius quam animus hominis ſibi conſcius: There is nothing more miſerable, than the minde of man, guilty to it ſelfe of evill. Conſcience is a thouſand witneſſes. Conſcientia eſt ante peccatum frænum, poſt peccatum flagrum: Conſcience before ſinne committed is a bridle to keep us from it, but when it is committed, a moſt ſharpe ſcourge and whippe. Yet, multi famam, pauci conſcientiam verentur: Many are afraid of fame, and few of conſcience. Sed ô te miſerum, ſi contemnis hunc teſtem: But ô miſerable man that thou art, if thou little reckon of this witneſſe! Tranquillitate conſcientiæ nihil excogitari poteſt beatius: There cannot a greater bleſſing bee thought of, than the peace and tranquillity of a mans conſcience, ſaith S. Auguſtine.

Levit.26.36.

Deu.28.65, &c

Somnium Apollodori.
Statius.

2. The ſecond motive is Envy. They were their kindred, and they ſhould have rejoyced, repented, turned to them, and by common prayer ſought the appeaſing of God. But bitter and ſowre Envy ſeeing Gods favour to them, and mighty power among them, deſireth rather their overthrow and confuſion. They are motes in their eyes, rather than comforts to their hearts. Thus envied Cain his brother Abel; Good Rachel her ſiſter Leah; Iacobs ſonnes their faultleſſe brother Ioſeph: Aaron and Miriam their worthy brother Moſes: It is a devilliſh thing Envy, and let all that feare God deteſt it. The venome of the Snake or Toade, never hurteth her ſelfe, but Envie above all others hurteth the Haver. Bion ſeeing an envious perſon ſad, prettily ſaid to him: A man cannot now tell by thy ſadneſſe, whether harme have happened to thee, or good to another: meaning, he and all envions perſons be as much grieved at the one, as at the other. Agreeable to which was that ſaying of Socrates, when being asked what was grievous to good men, he anſwered; The proſperity of the wicked: And what was grievous to evill men, hee anſwered; The proſperity of the good. Why were the Scribes and Phariſies ſo malicious to our Saviour? Quia multa ſigna fecit: Becauſe he did many ſignes and miracles. As the ſore eye cannot indure the light, no more can Envy abide Vertue, &c.

3. A third motive was ſuſpition. Balack King of the Moabites ſuſpecteth and imagineth this and that, according to his owne fancy and miſ-judging braine, and theſe imaginations and ſuſpitions are as grand truths to him, making him caſt this way and that way, to meet with imagined danger, and among other wayes to reſolve of ſending for the Soothſayer or Sorcerer Balaam. Wicked ſuſpition, how many haſt thou led out of the way, and cauſed to erre? Abraham ſuſpecteth the feare of God is not in that place, and thereupon ſinneth againſt God in denying his wife, &c. The King of Iſrael reading the kinde and friendly letter of the King of Aram in the behalfe of Naaman, preſently ſuſpecteth that the King ſought a qnarrell to him, and by that foule and cauſeleſſe ſuſpition offendeth greatly. Suſpitio grave hominibus malum:

2 King.5.7.

O ſuſpition, ſuſpition, what a miſchiefe is it amongſt men? Innocentiam præſtare poſſum, &c. I can be innocent and blameleſſe, but ſo to bee judged of all men, and to eſcape wicked ſuſpition, that lieth not in my power, nor any mans, ſaid one wiſely and truely. Suſpitiones ſuas quiſque fere cognitiones putat: Every man thinkes his ſuſpition to be knowledge, or little leſſe. Quanti non dederunt locum errori, & dederunt locum ſuſpitioni? How many can you name, that have given place to ſuſpition, and have not given place to error. It accuſeth, arraigneth, condemneth, and putteth the halter of death over the true mans head? Yet it hurteth no man more than him that hath it, whoſe inwards it tormenteth and twitcheth; whoſe ſleepe it driveth away, whoſe body it alters, and conſumeth the heart to very powder and duſt in the end.

4 A fourth motive to this ſending for Balaam, was Satans ſubtilty working in Balack to take that courſe: for it may be obſerved often, that when Satan ſeeth open fury will not ſerve, then he directeth to wiles and guiles, pieceing out the Lions skinne that is too ſhort, with the Foxe his taile. Saul will give his daughter to David to ſnare him: Ioab killeth Amaſa with, How doeſt thou my brother. Simeon and Levi worke their revenge under pretext of mariage, of love, and alliance. Abſolon biddeth Amnon unto a feaſt, when hee intendeth his death. But bleſſed is the man in whoſe ſpirit there is no ſuch guile, no ſuch devilliſh Machiavillian venome and tricks. Aut eſto quod videris, aut videre quod es: Either be as thou ſeemeſt, or ſeeme as thou art, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome: Behold a true Iſraelite, in whom there is no fraud nor guile, ſaith the Lord Jeſus of Nathaneel. A praiſe that ſhall endure for ever, when flattering falſhood ſhall bee branded in the forehead for damnable villany. He that walketh uprightly, walketh boldly, but he that perverteth his wayes ſhall bee knowne, ſaith the wiſedome of God by Salomon. How knowne? That is, made knowne alive and dead for perſons hateſull unto God, and dangerous unto men. O let my heart therefore bee ſound, ſaith David, in thy ſtatutes, that I bee not aſhamed, that is, made knowne and diſcovered to my ſhame.

1 Sam. 18. 21.

Prov. 10.

5 A fift motive was Balacks erronious conceit of Balaam and his office. To ſee his owne weakneſſe to reſiſt the Iſraelites by humane force, and thereupon to ſeeke the helpe of God, to have a reverent conceit of the Prophet or Miniſter, and to ſend for him: all this is well, and more than many in theſe dayes performe in their dangers. But to ſeparate a Prophet from a courſe pleaſing God, and to thinke that of himſelfe without the ſtrength and power of God he could doe any thing: this was abſurd and full of blindneſſe and ignorance. He ſhould therefore have inquired of Gods will, of the Prophets office, and how God uſeth the Prophets, and then thereafter have framed his curſe. But this is too many mens faults, ſtill not to looke what may bee done, but what they would have done. Eſau will have a bleſſing though his father cannot alter what he hath done. Balack will have a curſe, or hee will want of his will, never looking how it may be done. Filius ægrotat, currit que ad carmina mater: The ſonne is ſicke, and the mother ſhee runs to a charme. But of Witches and Inchanters hereafter. Now I will but ſay that haply Balack conceived Balaam to bee an honeſter man than hee was, and that Iuſtorum maledictiones efficaces ſunt, and that I ſay the curſes of holy men are powerfull, as indeed they are in ſome caſes. Noah of Cham, &c. The bleſſing of the father eſtabliſheth the houſes of the children, and the mothers curſe rooteth out the foundations. Saint Auguſtine hath a fearefull relation of the effect of parents curſe upon ſeven brethren and three daughters.

Sirac. 3. 10.

The ſecond part.

HAving now ſpoken of the motives that Balack ſent for Balaam, come wee to the ſecond point, to wit, the maner of ſending, expreſſed in the ſeventh verſe, thus; Then the Elders of Moab, and the Elders of Midian departed, having the reward of ſoothſaying in their hand, and they came to Balaam, and told him the words of Balack. Moab and Midian joine together, for Balack King of the Moabites had ſaid unto the Elders of Midian, that if a joint care were not had, the Iſraelites would lick them all up, as an Oxe licketh up the graſſe of the field. Wherefore, I ſay, they joine together, and ſend to Balaam. Firſt, men of account and worth, Elders, that is, heads and chiefe perſons. And in the fifteenth verſe, Hee ſent againe more Princes, and more honourable than they, for at the firſt hee came not. Such civill complements are fit for men, dealing in every thing according to a good courſe, congruent and ſutable to the perſons and matter we deale with, and in: for fayling in ſuch outward ſmall circumſtances hath cauſed all intents and labours to faile often.

Verſe 7.

Verſe 4.

Verſe 5, 8.

2 They ſend a preſent. There be munera honoraria, and munera corruptoria, honourable preſents in love and kindneſſe, and for no evill purpoſe ſent of man to man: And corrupting preſents ſent to pervert men, and in plaine Engliſh, Bribes. Their preſent here is of the later ſort. And doe they thinke to tempt a Prophet with rewards? They will aſſay, and not without hope, when they conſidered the mighty power and operation of gifts. The Princes of the Philiſtims promiſed Dalilah eleven hundred ſhekels of ſilver from every one of them, if ſhe would learne wherein Samſons great ſtrength lay, and tell them. Which wrought ſo with her, that ſhee was never quiet till ſhee had overthrowne him whom ſhee pretended to love. Falſe and flattering Ziba tooke with him a great preſent to the King, when he intended to abuſe him, and what followed, you ſee. True and faithfull Mephiboſheth was condemned before any proofe, and his wicked ſervant had his eſtate given to him, as if hee had beene a traytor to David. Samuels ſonnes, the evill children of a good father, are charged not to have walked in their fathers wayes, but to have turned aſide after lucre, and to take rewards, perverting judgement. That famous Orator Demoſthenes was corrupted when time was, and pretended the diſeaſe in his throat called the Squince, ſo that hee could not ſpeake: whereupon one ſaid, it was not Angina, but Argentangina: not the Squince, but Pence, that troubled him. It was a foule report that was given, and to this day remayneth, of M. Calius, Quod fruſto panis conduci poſſit vel ut loquatur, vel ut taceat: That with a piece of bread hee might be hired either to ſpeake or hold his peace. Such name ſhall they leave out of doubt that are ſo given. And therefore wiſedome will often think of that ſaying, Matrimonium inter aurum & arcam, divortium facit inter Deum & animam: A contract or mariage betwixt gold and your cheſt, will make a divorce betwixt God and your ſoule. Againe, of that, Aurum accepiſti, animam perdidiſti: Thou haſt received gold, and loſt thy ſoule: a deare bargaine.

Iudg. 16. 5.

2 Sam.16.1. 1 Sam.8.3. Catoin A.Gel.

3 Some thinkes this reward was a due Fee, and therefore not to bee blamed. Indeed there were in thoſe times, and I feare ſcarce rid yet, vates nummarii, money Prophets, ſuch as uſed to take money and reward for their tellings, and doings. Of which ſort Saul and his ſervant imagined Samuel to bee. And therefore when they were ſeeking the loſt Aſſes, and the ſervant ſaid, Behold now in this City is a man of God, and hee is an honourable man, all that hee ſaith commeth to paſſe, let us now goe thither, if ſo bee that hee can ſhew us what way wee muſt goe. Saul anſwered, well then, let us goe. But what ſhall wee bring unto the man? for the bread is ſpent in our veſſels, and there is no preſent to bring unto the man of God? what have wee? And the ſervant anſwered: Behold I have found about mee the fourth part of a ſhekel of ſilver (which was three pence three farthings) that will I give to the man of God to tell us our way. But ſuch baſeneſſe was never uſed by the true Prophets of God. Naaman could not faſten any thing upon Eliſha.

Calvinus. 1 Sam.9.7. Gen.23.15.

4 This ſeemeth then to make Balaam a Soothſayer. Saint Auguſtine feareth not to ſay ſo of him: Hic Balaam famoſiſſimus erat in arte magica & carminibus noxiis prapotens, & ideo quaſi expertus in talibus opinioni erat omnibus in Oriente. Niſi enim experimenta plurima praceſſiſſent quod frequenter maledictis hoſtem vertiſſet armatum, non utique præſumpſiſſet rex hoc poſſe fieri ſermonibus. This Balaam was very famous in the Art Magick, and mighty in hurtfull charmes, and thereupon was reputed skilfull in ſuch matters among them of the Eaſt. For unleſſe there had beene manifold experiments how by curſes he had overthrowne Armies, the King would never have ſuppoſed ſuch a thing could be done by words.

Vide Auguſt. Serm 103. de tempore.

5 Balaam anſwered, tarry here this night, and I will give you anſwer, as the Lord ſhall ſay unto me. Quis mihi dabit ô Deus! ſic tibi obtemperare ut iſte, ut nihil dicere, cogitare aut facere te inconſulto velim, id eſt, lege tua; O GOD, who ſhall give mee this care to obey thee, that ſeemeth to bee here in this man, that I may ſay nothing, thinke nothing, and doe nothing without conſulting with thee; that is, with thy Law. But did hee meane here indeed to conſult with God? No, ſaith Auguſtine, but with his Devill or familiar, or ſoothſaying ſpirit. How then came God to him? Surely of his owne goodneſſe to hinder the hurt of his children, he warned him in a dreame not to goe. O the ſweetneſſe of God, and comfort of this place, if it bee well marked with others. Did the Iſraelites know of this practiſe againſt them, or could they prevent it? No, but the faithfull ſweet watch-man of Iſrael that neither ſlumbreth nor ſleepeth, hee knoweth of it, hee careth for them, and preventeth their harme. Who then ſhall effect any thing againſt Gods choſen more than the Lord himſelfe ſhall pleaſe to ſuffer? God admoniſheth Abimelech in a dreame not to wrong Abraham, Laban alſo not to wrong Iacob. And how many live at this day that have found the working hand of God for them in this kinde? preventing practiſes, putting by intendments, fruſtrating purpoſes, and diſcovering ſecret counſels by men never knowne. I know what I ſpeake. Let God have thankes, and the remembrance of them never die, that though they would not diſcloſe themſelves, yet have by meanes diſcloſed ſecret malice with the deviliſh, and malicious purpoſes thereof. Hee that wrought ſo in them, and by them for the Innocent, requite them ever into their boſomes ſuch love, and upon their poſterity when they are gone. Non ibis. Thou ſhalt not goe, ſaith God to Balaam, with them, neither curſe the people, for they are bleſſed. His curſes could not have hurt them, yet God will not have them uſed, &c.

Gen.20. Gen.31.

6 Balack yet againe ſent moe Princes and more honourable than they. Why did Balack ſend againe having an anſwer before, that God would not give him leave to come? Surely firſt the anſwer arguing no unwillingneſſe in Balaam, but onely a reſtraint by God, animated him to ſend againe, whereas if Balaam had anſwered ſoundly and roundly that hee would not doe

Verſe 12.

ſo

ſo wicked a thing, the matter had beene ended, and no moe attempts made. But his heart being tainted with covetouſneſſe, his tongue could not ſpeake ſo reſolutely, which Balack well obſerved, and therefore ſent againe. Secondly, many things are wrought by importunity, which at firſt cannot bee obtained. Therefore hee will try happily that way what may bee effected. The force of importunity wee ſee in the Goſpel, where three loaves are deſired to bee borrowed, when the lender was in bed, &c. I ſay unto you, ſaith our Saviour, though hee would not ariſe and give him becauſe hee is his friend: yet doubtleſſe becauſe of his importunity hee would riſe and give him as many as he needed. So againe of the unrighteous Judge, Though I feare not God, nor reverence men, yet becauſe this widow troubleth me, I will doe her right, leſt at the laſt ſhee come and make mee weary. In the booke of Kings when Eliah was taken away, they moved Eliſha, that they might goe and ſeeke him, and Eliſha would not. But when they were inſtant upon him, till he was aſhamed, hee ſaid, Send. Such an example was Coriolanus mother in Dionyſius Halicar. the eight Booke, worthy looking upon and reading. But againſt importunity to doe evill, oppoſe Chriſtian conſtancy, and remember ever, that not he which runneth, but hee which runneth to the end hath the prize. Remember the praiſe of Iohn by him that knew true praiſe-worthy vertue; Iohn was not a Reed ſhaken in the winde, a hollow Reed, without pith, and therefore very light and moveable any way, but Iohn had pith of faith and conſtancy to reſiſt evill whoſoever ſhall allure to it. Remember wiſe Sirach: Bee not carried about with every winde, and goe not into every way, for ſo doth the ſinner that hath a double tongue. Stand faſt in thy ſure underſtanding, and in the way and knowledge of the Lord, and have but one manner of word, &c. Thirdly, the meſſengers being more honourable than the former, happily that might worke ſomewhat; for men uſe much to reſpect the dignity of the perſons that ſpeake to them. But in ſuch a caſe to avoid evill, let us alwaies remember the Apoſtle, If an Angel from Heaven ſhould move amiſſe, hee is not to bee reſpected. Fourthly, hee will try what greater offers, will doe of dignity and preferment. And therefore ſaith, hee will promote him to honour, and will doe whatſoever hee ſhould deſire. A large and tempting offer to him that was more than halfe wonne before, with that which was then brought. Our firſt mother Eve in Paradiſe was tempted with dignity, you ſhall bee as Gods knowing good and evill. And all her ſonnes ſince have felt a pleaſing reliſh in it if God guide not with grace. Quis niſi mentis inops oblatum reſpuit aurum: Who but a madde man refuſeth gold when it is offered? O what treacheries and treaſons, what ſinne and villany hath, I will promote thee, wrought. But let mother Eve tell us what it is to ſinne for honour and dignity: So have her children ſped ſince, their high mindes have had foule falls, and in ſtead of honour, profit, and pleaſure, hoped for and ſought for, foule ſhame and perpetuall ignominy hath followed. A man may thinke hee can walke upon toppes of houſes, but a lower place were ſafer, and wiſe men rather chooſe them. Mediocria firma: Meane things are firme things. Children runne vehemently after a painted Butter-flie, it may bee they miſſe her after much paines, and if happily they get her, what have they gotten but a painted Butter-flie.

Luke 11.8.

Luke 18.5.

2 King. 2.17.

Matth. 15.

Sirac 5.9.

Agrippina Neronis matrem occidat modo imperet.

7. And Balaam anſwered and ſaid unto the ſervants of Balack, If Balack would give me this houſe full of ſilver and gold, I cannot goe beyond the word of the Lord my God to doe leſſe or more. An excellent ſpeech had it come from a ſound heart, but Balaam was hollow, and one ſaith, Præfert obedientiam erga Deum, ut vendicet ſibi titulum & honorem Sancti Prophetæ. Hoc enim agunt falſi Prophetæ, ut ſimulatione pietatis verorum Prophetarum nomen obtineant. Hee preferres obedience to God in this glorious faſhion, that hee may get to himſelfe the reputation of a holy Prophet. For ſo uſe counterfeits and hypocrites to doe: I meane falſe Prophets by diſſembling of piety and holineſſe, to get the name of true Prophets. Now that Balaam was not ſound in theſe faire ſpeeches, you may ſee by the words following, verſe 19. But now I pray you tarry here this night, that I may wit what the Lord will ſay to mee more: For had not his heart hanged after the offers that were made him of honour and preferment, hee would never have expected from God any more direction, but reſolutely have anſwered, God did deny mee and therefore I will not goe. A notable patterne of many yet in the world that will ſpeake well, and make a great ſhew of conſcience and care, yet under-hand practiſe another courſe for lucre and gaine. Indeed, will they ſay, I cannot doe it, it is not warrantable by Law, &c. yet having an eye to the offer, they will ſay, Give me ſome time to thinke of it. As Balaam ſaid here, Tarry all night, come to me againe, I will conſider of it, and tell you more the next time. So is the deceit of Balaams wages a peſtilent thing in this world among the ſonnes of men. The more you thinke of it, the more you will ſee; I leave it to your meditation.

8. And God came unto Balaam by night and ſaid unto him: If the men come and call thee, riſe up, and goe with them, but onely what thing I ſay unto thee that ſhalt thou doe, &c. Now Balaam hath what hee wiſhed, leave to goe. But was this in Gods liking? No; It was as many ſpeeches in Scripture, and dayly among men by an ironie or taunt. As Chriſt ſaith to Iudas: What thou doeſt, doe quickly, not liking of his action, but taunting his villany, Hee that is filthy

Verſe 20.

Apoc.22.

let him be filthy ſtill. Not allowing filthineſſe, but quipping their ſinne that ſo continue. As dayly fathers and friends uſe to ſpeake: Well Sir, my words prevaile not with you, take your owne will, your owne way, &c. Agreeable to that, God gave them up to their hearts luſts, &c. Agreeable to that by the Prophet: Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoaſts, the God of Iſrael: Drinke and be drunken, and ſpue and fall and riſe no more, &c. Thus God here to Balaam, as if hee had ſaid, Did not I tell thee before thou ſhouldeſt not goe, was not that enough, but that againe thou muſt gape for ſome other anſwer. This is thy greedy longing after the prey; well take thy courſe, follow thine owne minde, goe with them, but onely what I bid thee that ſhalt thou doe. Where wee may learne never to ſolicite God in things which hee hath denied us, but to reſt in his will, to ſubmit our ſelves to his pleaſure as aſſured that hee knoweth what is beſt, and will doe what is beſt for us if we depend upon him. Otherwiſe that ſaying of S. Auſtin proveth true very often: Concedit iratus quæ negavit propitius: God granted in anger what hee denied in mercy. As in this booke before, God gave them fleſh, but whileſt it was in their mouthes, his wrath fell upon them, &c. And as hee gave them a King, when they had beene better to have God ſtill their King. I have elſewhere noted what experience hath knowne, men and women too importunately begging a childe, and not moderately ſubmitting themſelves to the Lords good pleaſure, when God hath ſatisfied their deſire, but with ſome croſſe either of blindneſſe, or lameneſſe, or ſuch like. Be not therefore ever too vehement in things of this life. But firſt ſeeke the kingdome of God and the righteouſneſſe thereof, and then truſt we to his promiſe, all other things ſhall be caſt unto us as ſhall bee good for us. Pray, but pray moderately as becommeth a childe to aske of his father. And peremptorily appoint not God what hee ſhall doe, for in asking a bleſſing you thinke, it may prove a curſe if it bee granted, and a bitter woe all the dayes of your life. We cannot diſcern ever what is beſt, and therefore ſo many ſighes and grones in the world: O that I had never knowne it! O that I had never had it, done it, &c! I could ſpeake more plainly if I would: But deale you with your ſelfe as you have cauſe, and remember the uſe of this place. Balaams wilfulneſſe hath chronicled his infamy, and it had beene better for him hee had not gone.

Numb.11.
1 Sam.8.

Verſe 21.

9. So Balaam roſe up earely and ſadled his Aſſe, and went with the Princes of Moab. Here ſee further into this mans nature: after God had let him looſe, ſleepe cannot hold him, but early, early hee is up, and his Aſſe ſadled that hee may goe. Now hee begins to feed upon honours and preferments, gold and gaine in a plenteous meaſure; and every houre is a day till he come there. Such power and force hath the world ſtill in mens hearts, and happy they if they could ſee it. In matters of ſpirituall gōod, how heavy, ſlow and dull; but in matters of worldly profit, how quick, ſenſible, how early up? Bid them to the Supper, and one hath bought a Farme, another Oxen, and the third hath maried a Wife; they cannot come by any meanes: but in worldly profit who maketh excuſe that hee cannot come to receive it? We forget that fearefull ſaying of the Apoſtle; There are many walkers, whoſe end is damnation, whoſe God is their belly, and whoſe glory is to their ſhame, minding earthly things. That againe in the Apocalyps, The more her glory and pleaſure was, ſo much the more give her ſorrow and torment. But of the world and the love thereof, many occaſions have beene to ſpeake, ſo that I need not inſiſt upon it againe here. Shut up this note with that to Timothy, They that will be rich (that is, that greedily ſet their hearts to bee rich) fall into tentation, and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noiſome luſts, which drown men in perdition and deſtruction: for the deſire of mony is the root of all evill, which while ſome luſted after, they erred from the faith, and pierced themſelves through with many ſorrows. But thou, O man of God, flie theſe things, and follow after righteouſneſſe, godlineſſe, faith, love, patience, and meekneſſe, &c. Sic tene ut non tenearis: So hold this world, that thou never be holden of it. Index aurum, aurum hominis: The touch-ſtone trieth the gold, and gold trieth men. A dogge that followeth two men, is not knowne to which of them hee belongeth till the way part, but then you ſhall ſee: And ſo many men till gaine and godlineſſe part. Then ſhall you plainely ſee they belong to the world, and not to Religion, they will follow gaine, and leave godlineſſe; though indeed godlineſſe bee true gaine, and gaine is not godlineſſe. 1 *Tim.*4.5. and 6.

Philip.3.19.
Apoc.18.7.
1 Tim.6.9.
1 Tim.4,5,&c.

Verſ. 23.

10. And the wrath of God was kindled becauſe hee went, and the Angel of the Lord ſtood in the way to be againſt him as hee rode upon the Aſſe, and his two ſervants were with him. How this anger of God ſtood with his leave given him, is anſwered before, when it was ſaid that leave was in anger, not in good liking of his journey. Let us note here, how the Miniſtery of Angels is either with men or againſt men, as God appointeth them, they being miniſtring ſpirits to doe his will. The Angels are for Lot, and againſt the Sodomites: They defend Daniel in the Denne, the three Children in the Fornace. The Angel ſmiteth Herod in his greateſt pride, and reade the firſt of Kings 19.5. Acts 5.19. *Pſal.*91. 2 *King.*6. and many more. David draweth uſe, wherein hee ſaith, Lord what is man that thou art ſo mindfull of him, &c? And a great comfort it is to thinke how we are guarded by them.

Gen.19.3.
Dan.3.
Dan.6.
Acts 12.7.
Pſal.8.

11. The Aſſe ſaw the Angel ſtand in the way, and Balaam ſaw him not: Wherefore he ſmote the Aſſe when he turned out of his way. Thus it pleaſeth God to check this wicked man, that the brute beaſt beast should doe more than hee, Allegorically it is applied to note that God revealeth often to meaner persons, what he hideth from the prudent and wise: 1 *Cor.*1.29. God hath chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the mighty. Againe, those tremblers at Gods word, taste and feele what others not of such spirit thinke wonders and fables. Or lastly, that the Gentiles should see and beleeve what the Jewes would not.

2 Pet.2.

12 Some make use of it thus, that as Balaam here which way soever hee turned, had the Angel against him with a drawne sword, although he saw him not: So they which persist in a bad purpose, have Gods judgements against them every where, although they see it not. And therefore it is good to remember what David saith, I have examined my wayes, and turned my feete into thy Testimonies. I made haste and prolonged not to keepe thy righteous judgements. Psal.119.

13 And when the Asse saw the Angel of the Lord stand in the way, and his sword drawne in his hand, the Asse turned out of the way, and went into the field. But Balaam smote the Asse to turne her into the way This going aside of the Asse from the perill she saw, rebuked not onely Balaam then, but many of us still at this day for our heady resolution in many things not good. Wee see God is angry, wee see the end will not be good, because our doings offend him, and consequently perill and danger lieth before us, the Angel of Gods wrath, with the sword of Gods wrath in his hand is in the way against us; yet on wee will desperately, headily, and presumptuously, till we bee crushed with the waight and fiercenesse of it. But shall wee be madder than this Asse? Shall shee have wit to decline a danger, and we none? Remember what Scriptures cry out of obstinacy and wilfulnesse, pertinacy, and frowardnesse; commend unto us meekenesse and mildnesse, feeling and conscience, remorce and repentance, the wayes to heaven and all felicity. The Oxe knoweth his owner, and the Asse his Masters crib, but Israel hath not knowne, my people hath not understood. Ah sinfull Nation, a people laden with iniquity; O seed of the wicked, corrupt children, they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the holy One of Israel to anger, they are gone backward, &c. They are impudent children and stiffe-hearted, they will not heare, neither will they cease, for they are a rebellious house, &c. On the other side. Blessed is the man that feareth alway, but he that hardneth his heart shall fall into evill. Because thy heart did melt, Iosiah, and thou hast humbled thy selfe before the Lord, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants of the same: to wit, that it should be destroyed and accursed, and hast rent thy cloathes and wept before me, I have also heard it, saith the Lord. Therefore I will gather thee to thy fathers in peace, and thine eyes shall not see all the evill which I will bring upon this place. Many more may you note your selfe unto this end. Verse 23. Esay 1.3. Ezek.2.4. Prov.28.14. 2 Kings 22.19.

14. Balaam smote his Asse, attributing the fault to his Asse that indeed should have been attributed to himselfe and his sin. Sic impii incommoda & successus infœlices non suis peccatis imputant, sed vel creaturis vel influentiis, &c. Hinc irascuntur, maledicunt, verberant, non vident, non cogitant Deum sibi obsistere, sed Asinæ imputant: So, so, saith one, doe the wicked still even at this day, not ascribe their crosses and mishaps to their sinnes, but to creatures, to starres and influences, and to this or that second cause: Whereupon they are angry, they curse, they beat, and they see not or think once that God doth resist them, and crosse them, but all the fault is in the Asse still, as indeed it is, but then distinguish of Asses. Iob quickly saw, and quickly said; The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken, &c.

15. But goe on and see how the Angel meets him in another place betwixt two walls, and dasheth his foot against one of them, while she declined from the fearefull Angel. And he smote her againe. Thirdly, the Angel of the Lord went further, and stood in a narrow place where was no way to turne, either to the right hand or the left. And when the Asse saw the Angel of the Lord, shee lay downe under Balaam: therefore Balaam was very wroth, and smote the Asse with a staffe. Marke the manifold admonitions that Balaam had, and yet all in vaine. Shee avoids the Angel, once, twice, and thrice; shee hurts his foot against the wall, shee lied downe under him, never used to doe thus before, yet all this could not smite his heart to think; Surely my journey pleaseth not God. Even thus in some sort doth God still deale with men, and yet all in vaine, their sinne will not bee seene, their fault will not bee amended. Hee giveth us a twich within, either at some Sermon or otherwise, and yet that vanisheth away, and wee forget it. Then hee striketh our foot against the wall, that is, hee crosseth us with sickneesse or losse, or some calamities, assaying whether that will bring us home: but still wee beate the Asse, and continue our course. Fourthly, when this will not serve, hee throweth us downe Asse and all, that is, when the lesser crosses profit not, hee layeth on greater, greater, I say, and greater, till hee make us feele, even as a father smiteth more, till hee humble the froward stomacke of his childe: yet many times in vaine still. Remember what God saith by Esay his Prophet; Wherefore should ye be smitten any more? For ye fall away more and more: that is, what availeth it to seeke to amend you by punishment, seeing the more I correct you the more you rebell? By Ieremy againe: Thou hast stricken them, but they have not sorrowed: thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than a stone, and have Verse 24, 25. Verse 26, 27. Esay 1.5. Ier.5.3.

refuſed to returne. But take wee better heed, and let ſuch unfeelingneſſe bee ever farre from us. Pray we againſt it with burning hearts, for it will ever prove hurtfull to ſtrive againſt the pricke. Let us in good time religiouſly remember what we ſhall find moſt true: Quod fuit alimentum peccati erit fomentum pœnæ: That which nouriſhed ſinne in us, the ſame ſhall nouriſh puniſhment for us. And the words of Wiſedome bee fulfilled; That wherewith a man ſinneth, by the ſame alſo ſhall hee bee puniſhed. The rich mans tongue felt a dreadfull heat, becauſe in the ſame he had much offended. Hee hath a bed of woe for Adulterers, A fatall ſword for Antiochus, A milſtone for Abimelech, An invenomed ſhirt for Hercules, &c. Vnicuique voluptas erit carnifex, delectationes tortores, tripudia tormenta, riſus luctus, gaudium ſupplicium: To every one his ſinfull pleaſure ſhall bee his executioner, his delights his tormentors, his dancings his torments, his laughter his ſorrow, his joy his puniſhment. How happy a thing then to profit by Gods admonitions, to ſee him in his withſtanding us, and not to runne on with Balaam againſt all warnings. The Heathens could ſay, that to ſlip and fall is incident to man, but to perſiſt in evill and errour is fitter for a beaſt than for a man.

Wiſd.11.13.

Verſe 28. Lib.3.cont.Iul.

16 Then the Lord opened the mouth of the Aſſe, and ſhe ſaid unto Balaam: What have I done unto thee that thou haſt ſmitten me three times, &c. Iulian the Apoſtata, as Cyril ſaith, ſcoffed at the Hiſtory of Moſes, becauſe it is there ſaid, that the Serpent ſpake with Eve, thinking it a great untruth ſufficient to diſcredit all the reſt. So doe ſome prophane ſpirits deride this ſtory of the Aſſes ſpeaking; but Cyril in defence of the former, ſaith, Revera ſermonem illum Dæmonis operatione factum eſſe: That indeed that ſpeech of the Serpent was by the working of the Devill, and that the Devill might ſo doe, hee confirmeth by manifeſt teſtimonies out of the moſt approved, both Philoſophers and Poets among the Heathen. Homer ſpeaketh of Achilles horſe, who being inabled by Iuno to ſpeake, foretold his Maſter of his death. Porphyry in the life of Pythagoras, that the River ſaid to Pythagoras: ſalve Pythagora; God ſave thee Pythagoras. Philoſtratus writeth, that among the Gymnoſophiſts, at the commandement of the chiefe of them, an Elme did ſalute Apollonius diſtinctly and plainely, but with a ſoft ſmall voice like a woman. The Oake that gave Oracles, and Iupiters Bull in the Ile of Rhodes, with many ſuch things. Now if the Devill can thus worke by Horſes, Bulls, Rivers, and Trees, why cannot hee by the Serpent alſo? ſaith Cyril. And Cyril anſwereth, that as the Serpent ſpake by the Devill, ſo the Aſſe ſpake by the Angel. But to cut off all queſtions, and to defend this Hiſtory truely. Wee beleeve the omnipotency of our God, and of him the Text ſaith, that hee opened the mouth of the Aſſe. Even hee that maketh us to ſpeake when he will, and giveth dumbneſſe when hee will, even hee that could have made the beaſt to bee a man, if hee had pleaſed, and therefore much more one property of a man to ſpeake. Tertullian ſaith, hee could have made man to flie as the fowles doe if hee had would: Therefore he can make beaſts to ſpeake by the ſame fulneſſe of power. Shall the diligence and induſtry of man make Birds ſpeake, and not Gods omnipotency? Valerius Maximus among his ſtrange things, mentioneth even this for one, that beaſts have ſpoken. Yet give we no advantage herein to Popiſh blindneſſe, concerning tranſubſtantiation by Gods omnipotency. For we alledge his power where his will goeth before, they his power without his will. For us maketh that ſaying, He hath done whatſoever he would. Againſt them maketh that old Maxime: A poſſe ad eſſe. From power to will is no conſequence. And that ſaying of Tertullian mentioned before; God could have made man to flye as Birds, yet he hath not done it. Againe, that of all Divines, Deus eſt omnipotens faciendo quod vult, non patiendo quod non vult: Gods is Almighty by doing what hee will, not by ſuffering what hee will not, as to die, to ſinne, to be deceived, or in the point to be tranſubſtantiated into a piece of bread. But it is the Argument on the other ſide: God is omnipotent, therefore he can truly feed us with his body and blood, without groſſe tranſubſtantiation.

Principis eorum juſſit. Tenui & exili & muliebri voce Dodonea quercus.

Potuit hominem volatilem facere. Tert.

Pſal.136.

The uſe of this ſpeaking by the aſſe, was firſt to reproove Balaam. So teacheth us Saint Peter, when he ſaith: Balaam loved the wages of unrighteouſneſſe, but he was rebuked for his iniquity. For the dumbe beaſt ſpeaking with mans voice forbad the fooliſhneſs of the Prophet. Horribile Dei judicium: A fearefull judgement of God, ſaith one upon the place. Secondly, it ſheweth the manner of Gods dealing many times in revealing himſelfe to them that are little eſteemed, by blind and falſe Prophets, happily no better than ignorant aſſes, or as the Scribes eſteemed them that followed Chriſt, the more to confound thoſe blind guides. Thus in the dayes of perſecution; Tradeſmen, Husbandmen, ſimple women, had their eyes and hearts opened to ſee, and their tongues ſtrengthened to reprove by ſtrong Scriptures, thoſe great Rabbies that ſate in judgement upon them. Mighty and glorious hath the Lord ſhewed himſelfe in this courſe, as by the Acts and Monuments of our Church you ſee, and other forreine Hiſtories abundantly alſo witneſſe: According as the Apoſtle writeth, God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe, and the weake things to confound the mighty things. Vile things and things which are deſpiſed hath God choſen, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are, &c.

Iohn 9.

1 Cor.1.27.

17. That Balaam anſwered the Aſſe when hee heard her ſpeake, and rather ſtood not amazed at the great and ſtrange worke of God, ſee and note earneſtly with your ſelfe what a ſtrong ſtrong poſſeſſion covetouſneſs had taken of his heart, ſo holding of him captive that he was not able to obſerve this ſtrange thing, but blind and beſotted with hope of worldly honour and gaine, feedeth ſtill upon that, and admitteth no ſtop nor ſtay of this his journey by his good will. Such is the power of any ſinne if it once rule in a man or woman, it bereaveth them of all judgement to ſee their eſtate, or the love of them that perſwade them otherwiſe. How blockiſh was Pharaoh till he was overthrowne? how ſenſeleſſe the Jewes till Hieruſalem and they taſted of extremity? Swearers and ſwaggerers, drunkards and whoremongers, liars, and libellers, railers and ſlaunderers, with all the reſt are as blind and blockiſh as Balaam here, doting upon their own courſe till they ſmart for it, or the Lord open their eyes to ſee him againſt them, as at laſt here he did Balaams eies to ſee the Angell with drawne ſword againſt him.

When the Aſſe ſaith, Did I ever ſerve thee thus before? it may admoniſh us not to be too raſh with our neighbours and brethren, who have never beene noted to bee ſuch offendors, but ever of good and vertuous behaviour. As Suſanna, of whom it is ſaid, that her ſervants, when the Elders had told their falſe tale, were greatly aſhamed. For there was never ſuch a report made of Suſanna. Verſe 27.

28. When Balaam ſaw the Angell and heard his reproofe, then like a Saint he will ſeeme ſory, and willing to returne if ſo the Angell pleaſe: But all is hollow and not from his heart. Wherefore God left him to his will, and I warrant you he made no ſuit to returne, neither needed a ſecond commandement to goe with them, but quickly taketh the grant and away, for all theſe apparant tokens that his journey was naught. Some thing he hoped would be gotten, howſoever he was reſtrained to ſay but what he was bidden, and ſomething hath ſome ſavour with Balaam and all his ſucceſſors.

The ſecond part.

THus having paſſed over the firſt generall head of this Chapter, namely, the ſending for of Balaam, with the circumſtances: now are we come to the ſecond, to wit, his comming to Balack the King of the Moabites: of which thus ſpeaketh your Chapter: And when Balack heard that Balaam came, he went out to meet him. Verſe 36. See the honour done to a Prophet by Pagans, compare it with other places which you reade. Pharaoh his care of his Prieſts when that great dearth was, and every man ſold his land to buy bread; they ſold not, but were maintained by the King. Nabuchadonozor honoureth Ieremy, when his owne people did not ſo. Darius honoureth Ezra. Alexander, when he came to Hieruſalem and ſaw the Prieſts, lighted from his horſe and did them great honour. There is no Nation ſo barbarous which hath not them in honour, whom they uſe in their received worſhip. Gen. 47. Ier. 36. Eſra 7.

God let it never be laid to the charge of them that know more, and would think it a wrong to be ſorted with Pagans. He that honoureth you honoureth mee, and hee that deſpiſeth you deſpiſeth me, ſhould never out of our minds, were we within as we will ſeeme without. But it hath beene often touched.

2. Obſerve the behaviour of men, when they ſeeke and are in hope to obtaine, how ſweet, how faire, how full of all kindneſſe: but when they faile it is not ſo. Then the caſe is altered and that greatly. Daily wee ſee it, and Balaam ſhall prove it in the end. Remember it when you come to the place. So, and even ſo, fareth it with the Miniſters, they are Angels while we heare nothing from them that croſſeth our deſires, but if once that come, neither Angels nor Saints, nor honeſt men.

Laſtly, you heard how Herod reverenced Iohn Baptiſt, till he rubbed upon his ſore, and plainly ſaid, It is not lawfull for thee to have thy brothers wife; then was the caſe altered you know how. But let thus much ſuffice to make this Chapter profitable to us.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXIII.

Balaam at laſt being come, and received with all honour, beginneth his buſineſs, being as you ſaw in the laſt Verſe of the former Chapter, taken by Balack up into the high places of Baal, that thence he might ſee the uttermoſt part of the people. And if you conſider the chiefe parts of this Chapter, they may be ſaid to be two.

{ The manner or ceremonies of Balaams dealing.
{ Famous prophecies or parables touching Iſrael.

FOr the firſt. Satis pompoſe orditur: He beginneth, ſaith one, with a pompe. Firſt up into the mountaine on high, then ſeven Altars, then twice ſeven ſacrifices, a going aſide to have private conference with the Lord. All glorions in mans eyes, and apt to breed great expectation and hope of great matters. But remember with your ſelfe how ever Satan hath uſed to beguile men with outward pompe and ceremonies. Looke at the Gentiles, and what vanities? Looke at Popery, what care to bewitch men this way? The pompe of their Pope in riding, in going, in ſitting, and ſtanding, every way pompe, and all ſhowes. In his very feet pompe, and that by a good text, How beautifull are the feet of them that bring glad tidings of the Goſpell. Their Maſſe and Prieſts all pompe, ſuch ſinging, ſuch ringing, ſuch croſſing, ſuch clenſing, ſuch lighting of tapers and torches, as if they were bringing the Bride to bed. His back to the people now, by and by his face to them, his tripping and skipping to the one end, then to the other of the Altar, as if he were dancing the maids morrice. His voice up aloft like a chimney-ſweeper, and by and by downe againe and huſht up like a Mouſe caught in a trap. His armes folded like pittifull Mary Magdalen, by and by ſtretched out as if he were going to ſhoote in Robbin Hoods bow. Now he is in his memento as one aſleepe, ſtraight hee leapeth up as out of a dreame, or as if the Cutpurſe were buſie with him. The eye is pleaſed with gay ſights, the eare with muſicke, the noſe with ſmelling, every way the unskilfull gazer is delighted and allured to like of that worſhip. Thus was Satan ever wily to beguile with outward ſhewes, and his ſcholer Balaam followeth him.

Gentium Ceremoniæ, vide Magdeburg.

2. Obſerve the regard of the number 7. God, as wee reade, hath uſed it often, as the ſeventh day for the Sabbath, 7. Candleſticks, &c. And thereupon ſubtill Satan hath drawne his witleſs followers to conceit great matters in the number of 7, and to uſe it much. Heathens have fancied 7. Planets, 7. Triones, 7. Pleiades, &c. Popery hath ever liked to follow Paganiſme, and therefore in many things they runne upon 7; as 7. deadly ſinnes, 7. ſorrowes of the Virgin Mary, and 7. Sacraments, with ſuch like. Their number of 7. Sacraments they ground ſtrongly upon the Scriptures: for, ſay they, there were 7. Candleſticks, 7. ſeales, 7. Trumpets, 7. ſtarres in his right hand: Chriſt uſed 7. loaves, &c. Ergo there muſt be 7. Sacraments. It would be unkindneſs to deny the conſequence. Thus in other numbers they are ſtill myſticall: Five Pater noſters, five Aves, and five Creeds; ſo in their Ieſus Pſalter for the number of tenne, of fifty, &c. Their Beads to keepe reckoning that God may have but his tale, as the Woodmonger doth with his Billets. Even reckoning keepes long friends.

Apoc. 1. Chap. 5. Chap. 8. Mat. 15. Reade Iulian Epiſt. ad Serapionem, pag. 213. de numero Centum.

3. In his going apart by himſelfe, and the uſe of Gods name, conſider the manner of falſehood ever to put on the vizard of holineſſe and piety. Therefore juſtly and graciouſly are wee commanded not to beleeve every Spirit, but to try the ſpirits whether they bee of God or no. For traditions which are after the commandements and doctrines of men, have indeed a ſhew of wiſedome in voluntary religion and humbleneſs of mind, and in not ſparing the body, which are things of no value, ſith they pertaine to the fulfilling of the fleſh. Witches and Sorcerers uſe good words to colour their ſinne. Hereticks uſe Scriptures to confirme their errour. Nihil autem Deo abominabilius quam res ad ſacrum uſum deſtinatas ad impietates transferre: Thinke againe with your ſelfe whether Balaam was a ſound man, that would uſe all theſe meanes to pull (if it were poſſible) from God a licence to curſe that people, that he might be promoted. O ambition and covetouſneſſe, whither will you lead corrupt man, not ſtayed and ſtrengthened by God? How true is it; Ye cannot ſerve God and riches? How good therefore that good counſell: Love not this world, nor any thing that is in the world, &c?

1 Iohn 4.

Coloſ. 2. 23.

1 Iohn 2.

4. See Balacks readineſſe to performe whatſoever Balaam required, hee ſticks at nothing Balaam ſaid. Thus you know was ſuperſtition and error ever moſt ready to any charge, building Churches, giving land, offering daily and liberally, here, there, every where; grudge at nothing that went to the furtherance of their conceited worſhip and religion. When men endued with true knowledge yeeld not ſuch readineſs, but (in a moſt fearefull faſhion) thinke all all too much that is beſtowed upon God, on Church, on the Miniſtery or maintenance of learning and religion any way. The heavier out of all doubt one day will bee their reckoning, with a juſt God, who to them hath not beene cloſe-handed, but many wayes gracious and liberall.

5. And God met Balaam, and Balaam ſaid unto him, I have prepared ſeven Altars, and have offered upon every Altar a Bullocke and a Ramme. God uſeth bad men to doe his will, as he uſeth the devils themſelves, but never approveth wickedneſs and ſinne. Balaam rehearſeth to God his workes, as if God had not knowne what Altars he had made, and what ſacrifices he had offered. So the Phariſie in the Goſpell, and ſo holy Papiſts ever. God were not beſt either begge or borrow of them much, for they will tell him of it againe and againe if they doe any thing for him; yea, and not onely hee, but every one they talke with ſhall know it. You remember what the Jewes ſaid to Chriſt touching the Centurion, whoſe ſervant was ſicke; Hee is worthy (ſay they) that thou ſhouldeſt do this for him, for he loveth our Nation, and hath built us a Synagogue; So ſingeth Popery ſtill in the eares of God: This have we done, this have we ſaid, this have we paid; Our workes are worthy to bee reſpected, elſe were it better to play for nothing than to worke for nothing. But ſuch proud boaſters forget, that when we have done all we are unprofitable ſervants: that eternall life is the gift of God, that in the ſight of God ſhal no fleſh living be juſtified, &c. Meritum meum miſeratio Dei, &c.

God vouchſafeth no anſwer to his merits.

Luke 7.

Congruum. Condignum. Supererrogation Hardings ſpeech.

6. And the Lord put an anſwer in Balaams mouth, &c. It is one thing to have Gods truth, will and word, put in the mouth, and another thing to have it put in the heart. Often is the one done to the wicked, ever is the other done to the elect. Saul among the Prophets had the word in his mouth, and ſo had Caiphas being High Prieſt: Balaams Aſſe had words in his mouth, and Parrots and Birds ſpeake as men. But the godly have his word in their hearts; and with the bleſſed Virgin ponder all things, and lay it up in their ſure ſafe-keeping breſts. Ezekiel eates the roule and feeles it ſweet as hony with him. I beleeved and therefore I ſpake (ſaith the holy Prophet.) He that ſpeaketh truth from his heart, he ſhall dwell in Gods holy Hill. But they that draw neere to him with their mouthes, having hearts farre from him, ſhall bee caſt into utter darkeneſs where is weeping, wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. Balaams mouth was furniſhed to go to Balack, but his heart as bad ever. And what ſaid he, when he returned finding the King and all the Princes of Moab ſtanding by the burnt offering?

Verſe 5.

Ezek. 3.

7. He uttered his parable and ſaid; Balack the King of Moab hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountaines of the Eaſt, ſaying: Come curſe Iacob for my ſake; come and deteſt Iſrael: How ſhall I curſe where God hath not curſed, or how ſhall I deteſt, where the Lord hath not deteſted? For from the top of the rocks I did ſee him, and from the hils I did behold him; Loe, the people ſhall dwell by themſelves and ſhall not be reckoned among the Nations. Who can tell the duſt of Iacob, and the number of the fourth part of Iſrael? let me dye the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like his: Words to be read over and over if you do well, and worthy to be committed to your memory, that at home and abroad, often with your ſelfe, you may repeate them as occaſion ſhall move you. They are called a Parable, becauſe that name was uſually given to all grave ſentences, and memorable ſayings.

Verſ. 7. &c.

Sig. Maſcal. graves & memorabiles ſententias, cum aliquo verborum ſplendore commotas, Marbachius.

8. Touching the matter it ſelfe, ſee and ſee, and for ever ſee, thinke of it, meditate of it upon your bed, and have it in your mind when you are waking: eate it as Ezechiel did the roule, and taſte the ſweetneſſe above power of pen to lay downe; How ſhall I curſe where God hath not curſed, or how ſhall I deteſt where the Lord hath not deteſted? it is not in my power, I cannot do it. Loe, I am come, but can I now ſay any thing at all? If Balack would give me his houſe full of gold and ſilver, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God to do leſs or more. But the word that God putteth in my mouth that I ſhall ſpeake: And hath the Lord ſuch a tie upon the wicked when they would hurt his children; yea, upon the Devill and all his Angels the Lord hath a tie, that not one haire of the heads of any of his ſhall be touched without his leave. There is no wiſdome, there is no underſtanding, there is no counſell againſt the Lord. The horſe is prepared againſt the day of battell, but ſalvation is of the Lord. South-ſayers and ſorcerers may be ſent to doe miſchiefe, Balack and Balaam may have will, but there is no power when God reſtraines. He puts his hooke into their noſtrils, and his bridle into their lips, and his faithfull ſhall be free from malice. The Lord breaketh the counſell of the Heathen, and bringeth to naught the devices of the people. His counſell ſhal ſtand for ever, and the thoughts of his heart throughout all ages. A potent King, a covetous South-ſayer, will enough, and malice great, yet no hurt to Iſrael by all their power, doe what they can. See what it is to live within the wall of Gods bleſſing. How can I curſe where he curſeth not, how can I deteſt where he deteſteth not? The greater ſort crave worldly goods, and riches do embrace, but Lord, Lord, lift up the light of thy countenance upon us. For ſo ſhal we have more joy of heart, than they when their corn, and wine and oyle encreaſeth. In peace may we lay us downe under this bleſſing, and we ſhall ever dwell in ſafety. Bleſſed is the Nation whoſe God is the Lord, even the people that he hath choſen for his inheritance. He looketh down frō heaven upon the childrē of men, faſhioneth their hearts, and underſtandeth all their workes. Neither King nor Kingdome is ſaved by the multitude

See Chap. 23. 6. For I know that whom thou curſeſt he is curſed, &c.

Verſe 8.

Verſe 38.

Chap. 22. 18.

Verſ. 38.

Prov. 21. 30, 31.

Pſal. 33. 10, 11.

Pſal. 33. 12.

titude of an hoſt or any humane meanes whatſoever. But the eye of the Lord is upon them that feare him and truſt in his mercy. This is the ſure ſafety of Iſrael, the Lord hath not curſed, and therefore Balaam cannot curſe. Apply it to Romiſh Balaam and his Buls, feare them not, if wee do not alienate from us by our lives, this wall of braſſe, the bleſſing of the higheſt.

Verſe 9. 2. See another branch of this parable. From the top of the rocks did I ſee him, and from the hils I did behold him: Loe, the people ſhall dwell by themſelves, and ſhall not be reckoned among the Nations. This people is ſo farre from any power of curſe, as they ſhall in Religion, in Lawes and profitable ordinances for ſociety be bleſſed above all other Nations. They ſhall not be reckoned among them, but moſt admirable, excell them all. In Number againe they ſhall be bleſſed. For who can tell the duſt of Iacob, and the number of the fourth part of Iſrael? Hyperbolically amplifying the great number of them. According to that, Looke up now to heaven, and tell the Starres, if thou be able to number them. So ſhall thy ſeed be. Duſt and the ſtarres be innumerable.

Gen. 15. 5.

3. Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like his. His conſcience feareth Gods judgements, and wiſheth the ſweet death of the godly. Why then Balaam doſt not thou live the life of the righteous? Oh ſee the world, Vivere volunt homines ut peccatores, mori autem ut juſti: Men would faine live as ſinners, that is, giving the raines to all their luſts, and die as the faithfull in Gods favour. But this will not be. And therefore Vivite bene, ne moriamini male: Quia ſicut non poteſt eſſe mala mors quã bona vita præceſſit, ſic non poteſt eſſe bona quã mala vita anticipavit: Live well, that you may not die ill. For as the death cannot be evill, where the life was good: ſo can it not be good where the life was bad that went before, ſaith S. Auguſtine. But qualis vita, finis ita: Such life, ſuch end. This was the parable that God put in Balaams mouth in ſtead of a curſe, and never forget it while you live. It was bitter and double bitter to Balack, as you may ſee by his anſwer. A lively patterne of thoſe that brooke no truth further than it ſtandeth with their humour, and fitteth their fooliſh or wicked fancie.

Verſe 12.

Verſ. 13. 4. And Balack ſaid unto Balaam, Come I pray thee with me unto another place, &c. Thus uſe the wicked to be ſtill obſtinate and perverſe, not giving over, but headily continuing a wicked courſe once begun and entred into. They accuſe the time, the manner of handling, or one circumſtance or other, and feed themſelves with hopes of better, ſtill going on, as this King did here. But David having another ſpirit, did not ſo when he was enraged againſt Nabal. Soone was he touched with good perſwaſion, and thanking God for the meanes, deſiſted. The Apoſtle teacheth another courſe, when he ſaith, Knoweſt thou not, O man, that the long ſuffering of God calleth thee to repentance? Conſtancy in good is commendable with God and man, but beware ever of wilfulneſs in evill. He will change the place, and ſo hypocrites uſe to thinke one place more luckie than another, forgetting that God is the ſame in all places, according to his owne words by his Prophet: Am I a God at hand and not afarre off? Can any hide himſelfe in ſecret places that I ſhall not ſee him? Doe not I fill heaven and earth, &c? Seven Altars more muſt be built, and new Sacrifices. Balack is not weary of charge, no more the blinde, to maintaine ſuperſtition, as hath beene noted before. A condemnation of our ſlackneſs to do good, grieving and pinching at every thing that goeth from us, or is demanded of us. His going apart againe, with the other circumſtances, have beene alreadie noted: Come to Gods anſwer to him againe the ſecond time.

2 Sam. 25.

Rom. 2.

And he uttered his parable, and ſaid, Riſe up Balack, and heare, hearken to me thou ſon of Zippor. God is not as man that he ſhould lie, neither as the Son of man that he ſhould repent. Hath he ſaid, and ſhall he not doe it, and hath he ſpoken, and ſhall he not accompliſh it, &c? This is the ſecond propheſie concerning Iſrael, worthy your reading over and over, wherein the Lord publiſheth the reſoluteneſſe of his will to bleſſe and keepe his people Iſrael from all malitious machinations of their Adverſaries, admitting no change of this his will, did they trie him never ſo often, and build never ſo many Altars in ſeverall places. And what an unſpeakeable comfort is here? God is the God of his choſen ſtill, and his promiſes to them are unchangeable. Hee hath bleſſed (ſaith Balaam) and I cannot alter it. O ſweeter than honey and the honey combe. Not Balaam, not Balack, not hell, not devill, can alter the Lords love to them that he hath choſen for his owne.

6. He ſeeth no iniquity in Iacob, he ſeeth no tranſgreſſion in Iſrael. The Lord his God is with him, &c. That is, the Lord imputeth not iniquity unto him, but covereth, pardoneth and purgeth the ſinnes of his children. And, Bleſſed is the man (ſaith the Pſalme) to whom the Lord imputeth not ſinne. God brought them out of Ægypt, their ſtrength is as an Vnicorne. By a continuance of mercy the Lord will bring them to the place intended, and his power protecting them ſhall be invincible. There is no ſorcery in Iacob, nor Sooth-ſaying in Iſrael, that is, either they uſe none, which is their praiſe with God, or none ſhall prevaile againſt them, either now or hereafter, taking a proofe from his preſent attempt. Then Balack ſaid, neither curſe nor bleſſe. Such is the venome of the wicked, that if they cannot hurt, yet they would not profit. Then he led him to a third place, to ſee yet if hee might prevaile, never weary either of paines or charge to doe miſchiefe. The ſucceſs will follow in the next Chapter.

Chap.

CHAP. XXIIII.

This Chapter containeth five notable propheſies or predictions of things to come, as:

1. The proſperity of Iſrael.
2. Of Chriſt.
3. Of the Amalakites.
4. Of the Kenites.
5. Of the Grecians and Romans.

Touching the firſt, you may obſerve in it:

The Preface, verſe 3.
The Parable, verſe 4.
The effect, verſe 10.
Balaams anſwer, verſe 12.

FOr our uſe let us take the things in order as the Text yeeldeth them: And ſee what the words are, to wit, When Balaam ſaw that it pleaſed the Lord to bleſſe Iſrael, then he went not as certaine times before, to feteh divinations, but ſet his face towards the wilderneſſe, and lift up his eyes, and looked upon Iſrael, &c. In which words, ſay ſome Interpreters, it is apparent that hee went before to conſult with the devill, yet pretended to go to ſee what God would ſay to him, as you ſaw in the Chapter before, ſuch holy colours to bee put on wicked actions is not ſtrange. But the Lord ſtill croſſed him, and put an anſwer in his mouth that he muſt needs utter. Remember what you read in the Prophet Eſay: Wo be unto them that ſeek deepe to hide their counſell from the Lord, for their works are in darkneſs, and they ſay who ſeeth us, and who knoweth us, but your turning of devices ſhall it not be eſteemed as Potters clay? For ſhall the worke ſay of him that made it, he made me not; or the thing formed ſay of him that faſhioned it, he had no underſtanding? &c. Secondly, you may obſerve, that when Balaam ſaw God did not like his courſe, hee gave it over, and went no more apart to conferre with the devill, as he did before. Some meaſure of grace, if his heart had been ſound, otherwiſe to ſlip and to ſlide is proper to man, but to perſiſt ſtill in errour and evill is fit for a beaſt, and not a man. Twice Balaam goeth, but not the third time. Some will never give over ſins, till ſinne give over them, that is, till they can ſin no more. But it would be remembred that was ſaid to Saul: It is hard for thee to kicke againſt the pricke. And by the Apoſtle: If we ſin willingly after that we have received, and acknowledged that truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſin, but a fearefull looking for judgement and violent fire, which ſhall devoure the adverſaries. Againe, it is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the living God Whoſoever ſhall fall on this ſtone, he ſhall be broken, but on whomſoever it ſhall fall, it will daſh him in peeces. S. Peters counſell would alſo be remembred: Submit your ſelves to God, reſiſt the devill, and he will fly from you. Draw neere to God, and he will draw neere to you: Cleanſe your hands yee ſinners, and purge your hearts yee double minded. Againe, in his ſecond Epiſtle; Humble your ſelves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time. Caſt all your care on him, for he careth for you. Be ſober and watch, for your adverſary the devill as a roaring lyon walketh about, ſeeking whom he may devour, whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the faith, &c.

Eſay 26.15. Verſ. 16.

Acts 9. Hebr. 16.26.

Verſe 31. Mat. 21.44. 1 Peter 4.7.

Chap. 5.6.

2. And the Spirit of God came upon him. There is a Spirit ſanctifying, and that is peculiar to the godly, and the pledge of Election: There is a ſpirit illuminating, and that is often vouchſafed to the wicked. So here to Balaam, this ſecond effect of Gods Spirit is granted; whereby he ſaw and ſpake as followeth in your Chapter. Many content themſelves with knowledge and underſtanding, with utterance and diſcourſe, never looking what power Gods Spirit hath in them to ſanctification of life, to amendment of their errors and miſ-doings. And ſo it is to bee feared, that often falleth out, which Saint Auguſtine ſaith, Nos cum doctrinis noſtris; We with our learning goe to hell, when meaner perſons in underſtanding go to heaven. Say wee therefore and pray we as he, Mallem ſentire quam ſcire: I had rather have leſſe knowledge, and more feeling unto reformation of my life, than great knowledge to fill every table I come at with diſcourſe and prate: in the meane time practiſing nothing leſſe than what I know, but puffed up with pride, diſdaine, ſelfe-love, faction and ſlander, with ſuch like fruits of a vaine heart, and idle head.

Verſe 2.

Vides Deum quandoq; miniſterio malorum uti, ergo nuli objicere verbum propter malum miniſtrum, &c. Mat. 23.1.

3. Come to his Preface. And he uttered his parable and ſaid; Balaam the ſonne of Beor hath ſaid, and the man whoſe eyes were ſhut up hath ſaid. He hath ſaid which heard the words of God, and ſaw the viſion of the Almighty, and falling in a trance had his eyes opened. What words were theſe to

to raiſe up attention in the hearers? Surely they were very powerfull to that end. And they may well make us remember what Saint Auguſtine ſaith, That perfect Eloquence is to bee found in the Scriptures; as by ſundry examples there he proveth. Alſo what Saint Ambroſe ſaith, That they which firſt wrote of the Art of well ſpeaking, gathered all their precepts and rules out of the Word. That contempt therefore that ſome have of the ſtile of Scripture, is without cauſe. A great argument of their evill heart. For you ſee theſe Fathers ſaw more in it, and ſo may any that religiouſly reade it. When he ſaith, The man whoſe eies were ſhut up hath ſaid, Let us ſee how hee both ſeeth and acknowledgeth a change in him: And ſhall we not obſerve the daily dealings of God with us in opening one day this, another day that unto us? It is honour to God, it is thankfulneſs in us to confeſſe the mercy of God, either when we have read, or when we have heard, ſaying, herein are mine eyes opened that were ſhut. And this do I now know, which I did not before, &c. Remember Davids Pſalme, Lib. 4. de Doctr. Chriſt. c. 6. 7.

Epiſt. 63.

Mine eyes and eke mine heart,
to him I will advance,
That pluckt my feete out of the ſnare
Of ſinne and ignorance.

So wee, ſo wee, never was there loſſe by ſeeing and acknowledging Gods gracious favours to us, &c.

The whole Preface, Docet ſe nihil nunc dicturum à ſe excogitatũ, ſed quod à Deo ſibi ſit inſpiratum. Fecit hoc more Prophetarum qui præmittere ſolebant, Sic dicit Dominus.

4. And falling in a trance had his eyes opened, &c. God giveth a ſtroke unto the heart when he lighteth it, as you heare it ſpoken of David: Then his heart ſmote him, to ſee his fault committed in numbring the people. And by this blow or ſtroke we crie, O what have I done, what race have I runne, what life have I lead, what caſe ſtand I in, if the Lord ſhould take the advantage? And this wounding and touching is as a kinde of trance. Philo the Jew ſaith, that Ioſeph made all the priſoners with him crie, O ubi tantum bonum tam diu latuit, Where, where, hath this great good lyen ſo long?

5. How goodly are thy Tents, O Iacob, and thy habitations, O Iſrael! With great admiration he beginneth to declare the future proſperity of that people, and doth it by ſix ſimilitudes.

Firſt, as the Valleyes are, they ſtretched forth, or as the Rivers, ſay ſome, which comming from one head, ſpread themſelves into great broad waters: So this people having ſprung from Iacob one Patriarch, hath ſpread into this multitude, and yet further ſhall ſpread into many more.

Secondly, As Gardens by the river ſide: Such Gardens are watered ſo by the rivers, as if the heat be never ſo great, yet they are not burned up. So ſhall this people in all adverſities and dangers be preſerved by the power and bleſſing of God, till the comming of the Meſſiah, and overcome by no aſſaults of Satan and his inſtruments.

Thirdly, as the Lign-Aloes trees which the Lord hath planted. Vmbraculis quæ non humana induſtria facta, ſed ita volente Deo è terra enata ſunt, ut in ardore Solis & tempeſtatibus refugium præbeant, cujuſmodi in denſis ſilvis reperiuntur, ſic creſcentibus & denſè ſeſe implicantibus arbuſtis, ut oſtendat, ſic quoque illos, quamvis magnis cladibus quaſſabuntur, non tamen funditus everſos, & extirpatos iri.

Fourthly, As the Cedars, beſide the waters, which growing to a great height notably ſhew how this people with their of-ſpring, ſhould wonderfully grow with their vertue and famous acts, getting a great name in the world.

Fiftly, The water droppeth out of his bucket: that is, as ſuch water floweth abroad, ſo ſhall this people abound, aqua cœleſtis doctrinæ & ſapientiæ, with the water of heavenly doctrine and wiſdome, and from them be ſpread to other Nations plentifully, according to that; De Sion exibit lex, & verbum Domini de Hieruſalem: Out of Sion ſhall a Law go, and the word of the Lord from Hieruſalem.

Laſtly, His ſeede ſhall be in many waters. As ſeed that is caſt into a field well watered ſoone ſpringeth, and beareth fruit. So this people.

Theſe are the propheticall reſemblances of this people Iſrael: which (if you well marke) doe ſtill declare unto us, the flouriſhing and happie eſtate of Gods Church, whatſoever worldly men conceive and thinke.

The Church is the Tabernacle of God, wherein he dwelleth, and familiarly with his choſen, as with his Domeſticks and houſhold ſervants, converſeth, providing things neceſſary both for this life and that to come.

Rivulus. The Church is that little River which ſpreadeth it ſelfe far and wide throughout the world.

Hortus irriguus. The Church is that well-watered Garden, ſet with ſweet trees, caſting forth the fragrant ſmell of life, of the knowledge of God and of vertue, whereof Salomon in his Canticles: My Siſter, my Spouſe is a garden incloſed, as a ſpring ſhut up, and a fountaine ſealed up.

Cantic. 4. 12.

Vmbraculum. The Church is that Vmbraculum præbens refrigerium in æſtu ex ſenſu iræ Dei adverſus peccata:

Shadow

Shadow that yeeldeth comfortable cooling, in the ſenſe and feeling of Gods wrath to ſinne. It is that Cedar planted by the water ſide, and growing ſo high, whereof the Prophet in the Pſalme, The righteous ſhall flouriſh like a Palme tree, and grow like a Cedar in Lebanon. Such as be planted in the houſe of the Lord, ſhall flouriſh in the Courts of our God. They ſhall ſtill bring forth fruit in their age, they ſhall be fat and flouriſhing, &c.

Cedrus ad aquas plantata. Pſal. 92. 12. &c.

The Church is that bucket, containing doctrine of life, and dropping it out to the comfort of ſoules. Finally, that ſeed, quod in futura vita reviviſcet, & in æternum germinabit: Which ſhall live againe in the life to come, and for ever ſpring and flouriſh.

Sibula.

Semen.

6. His King ſhall be higher than Agag, and his Kingdome ſhall be exalted. A prophecy of the power and ſtrength of this people, in vanquiſhing and overcomming their enemies. As if hee ſhould have ſaid, Although now you ſee them without King, yet the time will come that they ſhall have famous and valiant Kings ruling them, far more puiſſant than the Kings of the Amalekites, yea ſuch as ſhould vanquiſh and overcome the Amalekites, which was fulfilled in the time of Saul. From whence this ſtrength ſhould grow, he ſheweth in the words following, God brought him out of Ægipt, his ſtrength ſhall be as an Vnicorne. As if he ſhould ſay, He that brought him out of Ægypt, ſhall doe this for them, even God, almighty to give ſtrength and power where he will.

Which were called Agags.

1 Sam. 15.

As an Vnicorn free from the venome of his adverſaries. Dreadfull alſo to his enemies; as a Lion aſleepe that no man dareswake

7. He coucheth and lyeth downe like a yong Lion, and as a Lioneſſe, who ſhall ſtir him up? A prophecy of his ſecure habitation in the Land of Promiſe. Even as the Lion having his prey, ſecurely eateth it, not caring for any. See Gen. 49. 9. Yet ſee more.

8. Bleſſed is he that bleſſeth thee, and curſed is he that curſeth thee. As if he ſhould ſay, They of other nations that ſhall joyne themſelves to thee, profeſſe the ſame religion that thou doeſt, and as true friends and brethren wiſh all good unto thee, they ſhall be partakers of thoſe bleſſings and benefits that God beſtoweth on thee, when they that ſeparate themſelves from thee, and like enemies behave themſelves towards thee, ſhall feele the rod of the Lords revenge upon them: agreeable to this ſpeech of Balaam here, you remember that in Geneſis to Abraham: I will bleſſe them that bleſſe thee, and will curſe them that curſe thee. What could be more ſweet and full of comfort than this ſpeech? Now is God the God of Abraham alone, or of that people Iſrael alone? you ſee how they are broken off, and we Gentiles grafted in, you know the partition wall is broken downe by Chriſt, and now in every Nation he that feareth God and worketh righteouſneſſe is accepted. Remember therefore what wiſe Syrach ſaith, Conſider the old generations of men, ye children, and marke them well: was there ever any confounded that put their truſt in the Lord, or who hath continued in his feare and was forſaken, or whom did he ever deſpiſe that called upon him? For God is gracious and mercifull, and forgiveth ſins, and ſaveth in the time of trouble, and is a defender of all them that ſeeke him in the truth:

Acts 10.

9. The points of the parable thus runne over, ſee in your Chapter, next the effect Balack, and his ſpeech. The effect was anger and wrath, for ſo ſaith the Text: Then was Balack very angry with Balaam, and ſmote his hands together. An uſuall thing with wicked men, when their deſires are not ſatisfied, be they never ſo bad. Truth getteth hatred, and flattery friends, ſaith the old proverb. Above all men Prophets muſt reckon of it, that is, Preachers and Miniſters, who deliver the Lords will without dawbing to the world. Marvell not (ſaith the Lord) if they hate you, for you know they hated me firſt. The diſciple is not greater than his Maſter, it is ſufficient for the diſciple if he be like his Maſter.

Verſe 10.

10. So Balack ſaid unto Balaam, I ſent for thee to curſe mine enemies; and behold now thou haſt bleſſed them three times. Therefore now flie unto thy place. I thought ſurely to promote thee to honor; but loe, the Lord hath kept thee backe from honor. Remember with your ſelf how glorioufly Balaam was welcomed and entertained when he came, and lay it to theſe words now. Is not the caſe much altered? So ever was it, and ever will it be in this falſe world. Men have their drifts and ends, when they give grace and countenance to men, they ſhoote at a marke, which if they may hit by your meanes, you ſhall be a white ſon ſtill, and all ſhall be well, while you ſerve their purpoſes: But if once you faile, and preferre conſcience and honeſty before their deſire, truth before falſehood, and God before the devill: then hands be ſmitten together, the foote ſtamps, the brow frownes, the countenance and heart is changed, great things were intended to us in favour and love, but now all is loſt, we muſt flie to our place, and be packing. And who hath kept us from honour but God? The fault muſt be laid upon him. This to many falleth out moſt unjuſtly, but here to Balaam it was due, whoſe heart was tainted with deſire of wicked gaine, and ſo loſt both God and his gaine. An example to move worldly mindes, if God have any portion in them.

Verſ. 10, 11.

11. Balaam excuſed himſelf, as before, that he was not his owne man, but ſubject, as all men are, to the power and will of God, who reſtraining him, could not doe what he deſired. But (now ſee a wicked man) he would give him counſell, &c. So did his heart deſire reward, and ſo loth was he to loſe all, that when by curſing he might not be ſuffered to gratifie Balack, by another way he would doe what he could. He would adviſe him as a friend, and ſo ſhew himselfe worthy of some regard for his great paines and journey. What counsell and advice this was, the next Chapter and the one and thirtieth will shew. Most vile and wicked, craftie and devillish was it, to wit, that he should cause them by some meanes to offend God, from whom all their strength and protection came, that so he might leave them, and subject them to punishment and overthrow. Which might be if he made friendship with them, and invited them to his sacrifices, the feasts of his gods, and so making merry, objected unto them faire women, who by their allurements might bring them to their maner of worship, displeasing to God, to wantonnesse and sinne, so that the wrath of God might be kindled against them, and they given over for a prey to their adversaries. A damnable advice (as I said before) plainely shewing us, that the Church and children of God stand more in danger of the subtill sleights of Satan, than of open force and violence of knowne foes. Further occasion will be given to thinke of this counsell in the Chapter named, and therefore here we may thus passe from it.

The second part.

THe second point or generall head of this Chapter was said to be, concerning Christ, which now in order followeth next: for although Balack was so angry, yet Balaam goeth on with his parable, Gods Spirit stirring him up so to doe. And now entring into a notable prophecie, concerning both the Israelites and the Lord Jesus that should come of them, hee stirreth up attention as before, with a solemne Preface, saying; Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the Man whose eyes were shut up hath said: He hath said that heard the words of God, and hath the knowledge of the most High, and saw the Vision of the Almighty, and falling into a trance had his eyes opened. Which Preface before was used, and now againe repeated: teaching Preachers how lawfully they may repeate the same things, with profit to their people, and how greatly pleasing to God attention in men is, to that which is spoken to them by the Prophets.

Verse 17, 18, 19.

2. I shall see him, but not now, I shall behold him, but not neare; there shall come a Star out of Iacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the Coasts of Moab, and destroy all the sonnes of Sheth. And Edom shall be possessed, and Seir shall be a possession to their enemies, but Israel shall do valiantly: He also that shall have dominion, shall be of Iacob, and shall destroy the remnant of the City. First, this fell out in David, a lively figure of many things of Christ. Secondly, it most truely is applyed to Christ himself. Concerning David he spake rightly, I shall see him, but not now, I shal behold him, but not neare: For David was borne about foure hundred yeares after this Prophecy: as if he had said, I shall see in my posterity, I doe see now in spirit, a certaine great man to be borne of this people in time, but not shortly. Such a worthy man we all know was David. He was also a Starre, and that a notable Starre, casting a light of truth and godlinesse throughout the whole Church. Againe, he was a Scepter, because in him the Kingdome of Israel was confirmed and established, the adjacent and adjoyning enemies being all overcome: And that he smote the Coasts of Moab, &c. it is most plaine in the second booke of Kings, and the eight Chapter: Hee vanquished them, and made them tributaries. So giving some light to Balack, that if he loved himself and his people, he should be quiet, not medling with this people, because their time of subduing Moab, was yet far off. Of Christ againe this Prophecy spake most rightly, I shall see him, but not now, I shall behold him, but not neare. As if he should have said, I see and understand that the Messiah, the Saviour of the world, shall come of this people, but not in this our age, but after many yeares to come. Then is Christ againe a more worthy Star of Iacob than ever David was, even a Star that shineth unto everlasting life, of whom S. Iohn speaketh; This was that true light which lightneth every man that commeth into the world. Christ also himselfe, I am that light of the world, He that followeth me shall not walke in darknesse, but shall have that light of life. In Peter he is called the Day-star that ariseth in our hearts. In Malachy, the Sunne of righteousnesse. Christ againe, I am the Roote, and the generation of David, and the bright morning Star. Zachary, A light springing from an high, to give light to them that sit in darknesse, and in the shadow of death. That againe of a Scepter to rise out of Israel, is most true of Christ: for he was a King, although not of this world, nor according to the fashion of this world, for the kingdomes of this world are limited both by place and time, but the kingdome of Christ not so; For his Dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the Land. Psal. 72. 8. Againe, the Kingdomes of the world are occupied about outward matters, outward discipline and peace. But the kingdome of Christ, besides the outward manners of men, reacheth unto the heart and thoughts: according to the saying of the Prophet, The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, therefore hath the Lord annointed me, he hath sent me to preach good tidings to the poore, to binde up the broken hearted, to preach liberty to the captives, and to them that are bound the opening of the prison, &c. The worldly kingdomes use worldly weapons, either to defend or offend, but the kingdome of Christ is spread by that voyce of his Gospell, his children defended, and his enemies beaten downe. David smote the Coasts of Moab by subduing them outwardly, and making them tributaries, as hath been said. But Christ smiteth them, and all others in another sort. He shall smite

I shall in my posterity, I doe now in Spirit.

Bozius of Mary, *li.*9. *c.*6. fing 36.
1 Iohn 1.9.
Chap. 8.12.
1 Pet. 1.19.
Malach 4.
Luke 1.78.
Apoc. 22.16.

Esay 61.1.

Esay 11.4.

ſmite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips ſhall he ſlay the wicked. Againe, Out of his mouth went a ſharp ſword, that with it he ſhould ſmite the heathen, &c. So the reſt, He alſo that ſhall have dominion ſhall be of Iacob, and ſhall deſtroy the remnant of the City. As if he ſhould have ſaid, of the poſterity of Iacob ſhall he come, who at his glorious appearance ſhall deſtroy all the wicked, and make happy his owne for ever. This is true of Chriſt in that great day, as in this manner it might be applyed to David. Apoc. 19. 15.

3. In that Chriſt was both Starre and Scepter, the Starre being above, and the Scepter below: Learned men have noted the two Natures of Chriſt, his Deity and Humanity, the one from heaven, the other in earth: Of which two Natures our Creed ſpeaketh, God of the ſubſtance of his Father, begotten before all worlds, and Man of the ſubſtance of his Mother borne in the world, perfect God and perfect Man, &c. The Prophet Eſay ſaith, To us a Childe is borne, to us a Sonne is Given. Noting in the words, Childe and Borne, his Humanity, and in the words Sonne and Given, the Deity: thereupon ſaying; Eſay 9: Puer natus, vide humilitatem, filius datus, vide ſublimitatem.

Natus qui occaſum ſentiret,
Datus qui exordium neſciret:

He was borne that ſhould know an end,
He was borne that knew no beginning.

Natus qui matre junior,
Datus quo non Pater antiquior:

He was borne that was yonger than his Mother,
He was given, whoſe Father was not elder then he:

Natus qui moreretur,
Datus ex quo vita naſceretur:

He was borne that ſhould die,
He was given of whom life ſhould ſpring.

Sic qui erat datus eſt,
Et qui non erat natus eſt:

So he that was, was given,
And he that was not, was borne.

Sum quod eram, nec eram quod ſum, nunc dicor utrumq;. Auguſt.

Filius Dei factus eſt filius hominis non amittendo quod erat, ſed aſſumendo quod non erat. Iſidorus.

Aſſumpſit humanitatem non amiſit divinitatem: in natura Dei æqualis patri, in natura hominis factus eſt mortalis, pro nobis manens quod erat, & de nobis ſuſcipiens quod non erat, ut liberaret quod ſe cerat. Origen.

Vt filius patris.
Vt filius hominis
Quod homo eſt, (chriſtus eſſe voluit, ut homo poſſit eſſe quod Chriſtus eſt.
Natus & paſſus eſt homo Deus, ut liberaretur homo reus. Cyprian. de Idolorum vanitate.

His Deity was ever, his Humanity ſometimes was not, but had a beginning. The Union of theſe two Natures in Chriſt make not two, but one Man. Looke upon Athanaſius Creed, Who though he be God and Man, yet is he not two, but one Chriſt: One not by converſion of the God-head into fleſh, but by taking the Manhood into God. One altogether, not by confuſion of Subſtance, but by unity of Perſons, for as the reaſonable ſoule and fleſh is one man, ſo God and Man is one Chriſt. The uſe of this bleſſed Union may be this: firſt to obſerve what a horrible thing ſin is; for the remedy whereof, ſuch an union of Natures was very requiſite. For, Non eſt mediator homo propter Deitatem, non eſt Mediator Deus propter humilitatem, ſed inter Deitatem ſolam & Humanitatem ſolam mediatrix eſt Humana Divinitas & Divina Humanitas: Man is not Mediator without the Deity, nor God without the Humanity, but betwixt the ſole Divinity, and the ſole Humanity, the Mediator is Humane Divinity, and Divine Humanity. Secondly, we may obſerve the unſpeakable love of God, who when we were ſo vile, exalted us even above the Angels; for he tooke not their Natures upon him, but ours. Thirdly, by this fellowſhip with Chriſt, fellowſhip with God is aſſured. Fourthly, the Deity aſſureth us of his power to doe any thing for us that is good: And the Humanity aſſureth us of his feeling and pitty of our wants. For ſaith the Apoſtle, In all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might bee a mercifull and a faithfull High-Prieſt in things concerning God, that he might make reconciliation for the ſins of the people, for in that he ſuffered, and was tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. Againe in the fourth Chapter, We have not a High-Prieſt that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all things tempted in like ſort, yet without ſin. Let us therefore goe boldly to the Throne of Grace, that we may receive mercy, and finde grace to help in time of need. Saint Auguſtine very well. He that by nature was the Son of God, was made the Son of Man, that we which by nature are the ſons of men, might be made the ſons of God. Iob ſaith, I know my Redeemer doth live. The Hebrew word is ſaid to ſignifie a kinſman, neare allyed, of his owne fleſh, that will reſtore him to life. Heb. 2. 17, 18. Ver. 15, 16. Goel.

4. This Starre of Iacob, thus God and Man was without ſinne: for the Holy Ghoſt firſt ſtopped the paſſage of originall ſinne, ſo that in him it held not that David ſaith, In ſinne did my mother conceive me. And then he infuſed into his humane nature all purity and holineſſe, fit Pſal. 51. Rom. 5. 12.

for a Redeemer. Originall ſin is propagated by generation, here was no generation, therefore no originall ſinne. That which is ſaid by the Apoſtle, By one man ſin entred into all, ſheweth that he propagateth to no more than he begets. And if you ſay Chriſt was in Adam, yet he ſinned not in Adam, becauſe he came not of Adam, as all wee doe by generation. Now for uſe; as he is cleane, ſo ſhould we labour by all meanes to be cleane: He that hath this hope, ſaith S. Iohn, purgeth himſelfe even as he is pure. Not unlike the begger that putteth off ragges and clouts, and cloatheth himſelfe in better attire.

1 Iohn 3.3.

5. Now, foraſmuch as all our joy and happineſſe conſiſteth in this Starre, God and Man, either Nature yeelding us comfort, as you have ſeene, and both yeelding to us a perfect Saviour. Marvellouſly hath Satan laboured to blemiſh both theſe Natures, and ſo conſequently our whole ſafety and redemption by this Saviour. I will onely touch a little of the humanity, the time leading us to conſider of his Nativity in the fleſh. Firſt then it hath been objected, the Father, Son and holy Ghoſt be all one: how then can one be incarnate and not the other? And it hath been anſwered, that although they be one in regard of eſſence, yet in reſpect of a peculiar manner of ſubſiſting they differ: And therefore mans nature may bee aſſumed by the ſecond Perſon, and not by the others. As the ſoule is whole in all the body, and in every part, yet exerciſeth not reaſon in the foot or hand, but in the head. But againe it is ſaid, Incarnation is an outward worke, and the worke of the Trinity in regard of outward things is undivided. So againe it is anſwered by Saint Auguſtine, that that Creator which was conceived and borne, though it appertaine to the perſon of the Son alone, yet was made by the whole Trinity. In other words, thus: The framing and making of the manhood is common to all, but the limiting and receiving it into the Unity of Perſon is not common to all, but peculiar to the ſecond perſon: as three men may weave one and the ſame cloth, and only one of them weare it.

Tota in toto, &c.

Opera Trinitatis quoad extra ſunt indiviſa. Enchirid. ca. 38. Opus incarnationis inchoative, eſt commune, ſed non terminative.

6. Valentinian and Marcion both Hereticks, objected that Chriſt brought his body out of heaven, and tooke it not of the Virgin Mary, becauſe the Apoſtle ſaith, The firſt man is of the earth earthly, the ſecond Man is the Lord from heaven. But it hath been anſwered, that our Creed muſt ſtand, which ſaith, who for us men and for our ſalvation came downe from heaven, and was incarnate of the Virgin Mary, and was made man. Againe, it is objected, that which was conceived in her, is of the holy Ghoſt: As if he had ſaid, in her, not of her. We anſwer in the ſixteenth verſe, it is ſaid, Iacob begat Ioſeph the huſband of Mary, Ex qua, of whom was borne Ieſus, that is, Chriſt. And otherwiſe how could he be of the ſeed of Abraham and David. Epiphanius ſaith that he was Circumciſed, that the truth of his humane body might bee knowne, and that hee brought not a body from heaven.

1 Cor.15.47.

Rom.1.3. How is that body that is made of bread, of the ſeed of Abraham and David?

7. Manes, another Arch-heretick ſaid, that his body and all his actions and paſſions, were but putative or imaginative according to ſhew only, and not true indeed: for the Apoſtle ſaith, But he made himſelfe of no reputation, and tooke on him the forme of a Servant, and was made like unto Men, and was found in ſhape as a man. Again, God ſent his Son in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh. Ambroſe anſwereth, Acute hæc, ſed piſcatoribus credimus, non Dialecticis: Theſe things are ſpoken wittily, but we muſt beleeve Fiſher-men, not Logitians. Irenæus ſaith, if Chriſt and all his actions and paſſions were putative, or in ſhew only, then ſo was our Redemption, and ſo all our comfort in one word wiped away moſt fearefully: Our Faith in vaine, our preaching in vaine, all in vaine, which God forbid. Doe we not reade, As we have borne the Image or ſimilitude of the earthly, ſo ſhall we beare the Image of the heavenly? Here the word Image or Similitude, is not oppoſed to verity, but ſtandeth with it. Againe, it is ſaid of Chriſt, Who is the Image of the Inviſible God: Yet true God, and not putatively. To the Philippians, He ſhall change our vile body, that it may be faſhioned like unto his glorious body: Yet this glorification ſhall not take away the truth of our bodies, and make them but imaginative bodies. The concluding one, Sicut noſtra glorificatio non tollit veritatem carnis noſtræ, ſed qualitates, ſic ejus humiliatio in ſimilitudinem hominis non derogat veritati carnis ejus: As our glorification doth not take away the truth of our bodies, but their former qualities: ſo Chriſt his humiliation to the forme of a Servant, derogateth nothing from the truth of his fleſh. But he like unto us in ſimilitude of humiliation, wee like unto him in ſimilitude of Glory. This commendeth his love, that although hee might have beene true Man without our infirmities, as Adam was before he fell, yet he tooke upon him our infirmities, and in all things was made like unto us, ſinne onely excepted. The ancient Writers ſay, this taking upon him our infirmities, was miſerationis affectu, non conditionis neceſſitate: By merciſull affection, not by neceſſity of nature.

1 Cor.15.49. Coloſſ.1.15.

Philip.3.21.

Heb.2.17. Heb.4.15.

8. Apollinaris, the Biſhop of Laodicea in Syria, a very learned man, that with ſuch dexterity dealt againſt the Arrians, in his old age fell to deny the reaſonable ſoule of Chriſt, but ſaid hee had the Vegetative, and his Deity ſupplyed the roome of the reaſonable. But Epiphanius ſpeaketh of him Cum gemitu, with woe and griefe, to wit; that ſo excellent a man ſhould ſlip into ſo foule an Hereſie. For what ſaith our Creed, Of a reaſonable Soule, and humane Fleſh ſubſiſting. And Damaſcene notably, Quod inaſſumptum eſt, incuratum eſt: That which hee tooke not upon him, he helped not. If then he tooke not a reaſonable Soule, hee hath not healed, helped, and redeemed redeemed our ſoules. Suſcipit enim naturam noſtram ut curet: For he took our nature upon him to heale it,&c.

9. Let theſe foule hereſies named ſuffice for a taſte of Satans malice againſt the humane Nature of Chriſt our Saviour, wherein our great and endleſſe good is. And reſting reſolved by a true, firme, and unmoveable Faith of the truth of it,againſt the devill and all his members, let us make uſe of it thus. Firſt, endeavour to take upon us his nature as he hath taken ours; that is, to be mercifull, holy, juſt, good, &c. as he is, remembring often S. Peters words: That we ſhould be partakers of the divine Nature, in that we flie the corruption which is in the world through luſt. Secondly, as he came downe to us, ſo let us learne to aſcend to him in Prayer earely and late, in Meditation, in the Sacraments, in a deſire to be looſed, and to be with him. 1 Pet.1.4.

10. This glorious Star, thus foreſeene and ſpoken of by Balaam, was prophecied of long before that time, as you ſee in the Scripture. Even as ſoone as man was fallen,a comfort was given, The Seed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the Serpents head. All the Sacrifices of the Law were Types and Figures, foretelling the comming of this Star, and many particular prophecies by the Prophets, too long to be rehearſed. Among the Heathens there was a glimpſe of this glory.

Iam redit & virgo, redeunt Saturnia Regna,
Iam nova progenies cœlo demittitur alto. Virgil.Eclog.4.

Cornelius Tacitus ſaith, Fuit publica vox inter Ethnicos,illo tempore magnum Dominum naſciturum: There was a publike ſaying among the Heathens, that a great Lord ſhould bee borne at that time. Tacitus Lib.21. Oroſi. Lib.7.9.

11. Yea, the circumſtances were foretold,and not only the thing in generall, as:

The time of his birth.
The Family he ſhould come of.
The place where he ſhould be borne.
His Mother.
The manner of his birth, &c.

The time of his birth in theſe words: The Scepter ſhall not depart from Iuda, nor a Law-giver from betweene his feet till Shiloh come, &c. But when Chriſt was borne there went a decree from Auguſtus Ceſar, that all the world ſhould be taxed; that is, all that were ſubject to the Romane Empire, whereof the Jewes were ſome, and ſo without Scepter or Law-giver. Daniel foretelleth in what Monarchy,and Eſay ſaith, He ſhall come of the roote of Ieſſe; that is, when the royall line of Iudah ſhall be in low caſe, and as it were but a roote of a tree left: It was foretold he ſhould be borne in a time of peace, having his name the Prince of peace. And when he was borne, the Temple of Ianus never ſhut while they had wars, nor ſhut in 200. yeares before, was ſhut up in token of peace, and continued twelve yeares,a thing not hapning ſince the beginning of that City of Rome, ſaith Dion. Gen.49.10.

12. The Family or Tribe hee ſhould come of, was foretold, as you have ſeene in Gen. 49. 10. as you may ſee 2 Samuel 7. And here plainely in your Chapter, a Starre ſhall riſe of Iacob, &c.

13. The place to be Bethlem: ſo you reade in Mich. 5.

14. His Mother, to be a Virgin: So ſaid Eſay 7.14. *Mat.*1. Virgo fuit partum poſt, in, & ante ſuum, A moſt ſtrange thing,and never ſeen before. Chryſoſtome ſaith, Verbum caro factum eſt, quomodo neſcio. Miraris quod neſciamus? omnis caro ignorat: The word became fleſh,but how I know not: and doſt thou marvell that I know not? all fleſh is ignorant. Cyprian ſaith, Non mirabor amplius ſtructuram mundi,non Lunæ vices,non temporum viciſſitudines, aut Solis curſum, ſed Dominum in utero,omnipotentem in cunis: I will no more marvell at the Fabrick of the World, the Changes of the Moone, nor the revolutions of ſeaſons,or the courſe of the Sunne, but I will wonder at the Lord in the Wombe,and at the Almighty in ſwadling clothes. Eſay ſaith, his Name ſhall be wonderfull, becauſe indeed he ſhall be wonderfull, in his birth, in his life, in his doctrine, in his death,in his reſurrection, in his aſcenſion, and every way. Creator de Creatura naſci voluit, & fœmina authoris ſui facta eſt author: The Creator would be born of his Creature, and a Woman was made the author of her author. Saith Euſebius Emiſſenus, Flos naſci voluit de flore, ipſo floris tempore: A Flower would ſpring from a Flower, and that in the time of flowers. Saith Bernard, Grandis hodie eſt ſolemnitas, ſed dies brevis cogit ſermonem abbreviare. Nec mirum ſi facimus nos verbum breve,cum Deus Pater verbum fecerit abbreviatum. Vultis noſcere quomodo? Cœlum & terram qui implet,nunc in præſepe locatur: It is to day a great ſolemnity, but the day being ſhort, muſt force mee to a ſhort ſpeech. And no marvell if wee 25. of March conceived,and borne 25. of December.

ſpeake a ſhort word, when God the Father hath made the word ſhort. Aske you mee how? He that filleth heaven and earth is now placed in a manger. Da Domine ut ſicut verbum caro factum eſt, ſic cor meum fiat carneum: O Lord grant, that as the Word was made fleſh, ſo my heart may be made fleſhy. And it is a good prayer for all fleſh.

Numb.17.

Strange therefore ſtill is that great myſtery of Chriſts incarnation in all mens mouthes and pens. Dicat incredulus Iudæus quomodo arida virga Aaronis floruit & florem Amigdalinum protulit, & ego dicam ei quomodo virgo Deum & hominem in una perſona concepit & peperit. Sed profecto nec ille virgæ conceptum, nec ego virginis partum explicare potero: Let the unbeleeving Jew, ſaith Auguſtine, ſhew me how the dry and dead rod of Aaron budded and bare ripe Almonds, and I will ſhew him how a Virgin conceived and bare God and Man in one perſon. But truly neither can he ſhew me the one, nor I him the other. Saint Bernard: Tria opera, ſeu tres mixturas fecit omnipotens illa majeſtas in aſſumptione noſtræ carnis, ita ſingulariter mirabilia & mirabiliter ſingularia, ut talia nec facta ſunt nec facienda amplius ſuper terram, conjuncta ſunt Deus & homo, Mater & Virgo, fides & cor hominum: Three workes, or three mixtures or conjunctions hath the Almighty Majeſty made in the aſſuming of our fleſh, ſo ſingularly wonderfull, and ſo wonderfully ſingular, that ſuch things have not been done, neither ſhall be done ever upon earth again: Conjoyned God and man in one perſon, one woman is both the Mother of a Childe and a Virgin; and faith and mens hearts are joyned together. What ſtrange things be theſe? You ſee now theſe holy men, in their time, obſerved all theſe things, and were bettered in their ſoules by meditation of them. And you have ſeen how in Scripture all circumſtances of his Nativity have beene noted. Let us goe on with the manner of his birth, which alſo is laid downe with all circumſtances unto us.

1. He was borne in an Inne, thereby teaching all his children to reckon themſelves here but pilgrims and ſtrangers, travellers and paſſengers that are in a journey, not to take any conſtant reſt till they come to their journeies end. Remember the Scriptures in this point; The whole time of my pilgrimage (ſaith old Father Iacob to Pharaoh) is an hundred and thirty yeares. Few and evill have the dayes of my life been, and I have not attained unto the yeares of the life of my fathers in the dayes of their pilgrimage. David in his Pſalm, I am a ſtranger with thee, and a ſojourner as all my fathers were. The Apoſtle to the Hebrews: All theſe confeſſed that they were ſtrangers and pilgrims upon earth. I beſeech you brethren, as pilgrims and ſtrangers, abſtain from fleſhly luſts which fight againſt the ſoul. We have not here an abiding City, &c. The Heathen then could ſay; Ex hac vita diſcedo tanquam ex hoſpitio; Natura enim commorandi locum, non habitandi dedit: I depart out of this life as out of an Inne: Nature hath given here an abiding place for a time, but not a place to dwel in ſtill. Xerxes wept when he looked upon his huge hoſt, and conſidered in how ſhort a time they ſhould all be dead and gone. Man that is borne of a woman (ſaith Iob) is of a ſhort continuance and full of trouble, He ſhooteth forth as a flower, and is cut downe; he vaniſheth alſo as a ſhadow, and continueth not. Cry (ſaith God to his Prophet) What? That all fleſh is graſſe, and all the glory of it as the flower of the field. Thou foole this night ſhall they take away thy ſoule, and then whoſe are all theſe? Our life is compared to a Bubble upon the water, to a ripe Roſe, to a Tale that is told, to a Player upon a Stage: Man is ſaid to be brevis hora, a ſhort houre, tranſiens umbra, a paſſing ſhadow, reſembled to the Weavers ſhuttle; To a tree, at the root whereof two Mice continually doe gnaw; A white Mouſe which is the day, and a black Mouſe which is the night. How farre they have gnawed into the tree of any mans life who can tell?

Gen.4.

Pſal.39.12.
Heb.11.13.

Iob 7.

Anacarſis a Philoſopher, compared mans life to three Grapes: There is, ſaith he, uva voluptatis, the Grape of pleaſure, and that is Childhood; uva ebrietatis, the Grape of drunkenneſſe, and that is mans middle age, wherein his ſins abound; laſtly, uva doloris, the Grape of ſorrow and griefe, that is, Old age.

All theſe, and many ſuch reſemblances of our ſtate ſhould make us mindfull of our paſſage, and not to defer from day to day our peace and reconciliation with the Lord. Serò medicina paratur, &c. Too late is the medicine applyed, when the malady is ſpread over all the body. Qui different bene vivendi ſtudium ad ſepulchrum, raro inveniunt ſalutis aſylum: They that deferre their care to live well untill the laſt day, ſeldome finde the haven of ſalvation. As Galen could ſay, Vita non eſt vivere ſed valere: Life is not in living, but in having health; ſo aſſuredly, the life of a Chriſtian is not in living, but in living well.

Heathen Ariſtotle, Vita non eſt frui luce, ſed virtutis laude prælucere: Life is not to enjoy this light, but to ſhine in vertue: Vita enim ſine virtue mors eſt, & vivi hominis ſepultura: For a life without vertue is a death, and as a burial of a living man. De virtutibus loqui minimum eſt, virtutibus uti, hic labor, hoc opus eſt: To ſpeake and talke of vertue is a very ſmall thing, but to uſe vertue, this is the labour and the worke.

Rota quæ minus tangit terram velocius movet: The wheele that toucheth the ground lightly, moveth more ſwiftly: and he is more forward in his journy to heaven, that leaſt is glued to theſe earthly allurements.

Non exiſtimemus nos hic perpetuos, ut poſſimus eſſe perpetui: Let us never think that we ſhall be be here perpetually, that we may elsewhere live perpetually, said Saint Hierome.

2. In the Inne he was borne in the Stable, for better roome could not bee had, there was no roome for him in the Inne. The world ever went by outward shew, and ever will; the gayer coate shall have the better place, and many times better it is to have a good coate, than a good cause touching successe. The Stable is our Lord and Saviours roome. Quid Deo sublimius, quid vilius stabulo? What is higher than God, what is viler than the stable? Such was the poverty he pleased to come in, and hee was respected of the world accordingly. Mary poore, Ioseph poore, the stable poore, the manger poore, his swadling cloathes poore, his company poore, and all poore. Cujus sedes est cœlum, & scabellum terra; He whose seat is heaven, and the earth his footstoole. Cujus est terra, & plenitudo ejus; Hee whose the earth is, and all that is in it: He, he would be thus borne. He that could have commanded more than twelve Legions of Angels, was thus placed in the stable. This was inclinatio misericordiæ, not defectus potestatis. This is a great comfort in poverty.

3. To this humility it belongeth, that hee was borne in the winter, the sowrest time of the yeare. Cujus in arbitrio tempus erat, nasciturus tempus elegit molestius. Doceat id esse melius & eligendum, quod carni molestius. He in whose power and will Time was, being to be borne, chose the sharpest time. Let it teach us that often that is best, and to bee chosen, which pleaseth the flesh least, &c.

4. He was borne in the night, that he might teach us ever to flie ostentation, and vaine shew. Ama nesciri: Love to be unknowne, said a wise man; and bene vixit, qui bene latuit: hee hath lived well that hath beene hidden well, said others. There is a measure betwixt vaine ostentation, and too private a retiring of our selves from publike and necessary duties.

5. He would againe be borne under tribute, that is, in the time when the Jewes were tributaries to the Romanes. And Augustus Cæsar sent a decree that all the world should be taxed. Upon which circumstance, Gregory noteth thus: Nascitur sub descriptione orbis, ad innuendum, quod electos suos à descriptione Legis liberaret, & in librum vitæ scriberet; He was borne under the taxing of the world, that he might shew how he came to save his chosen from the taxe of the Law, and to write them into the Booke of life. Chrysostome thus; Sub sensu nascitur, ut illi quibus collectio publica pecunia demandata est, cogitent se Christum inspectorem habere; Hee was borne under the taxe, that they which are set over publike collections of money, might ever remember that they have a beholder of their carryage and truth in such trust. Both good uses, and this last for our dayes most fit, wherein it is to be feared, men make little conscience to gaine all collections what they ought not, but if I touch this string much it will jarre.

Good Zacheus is forgotten, or thought to want wit and pollicie, who once having received Jesus Christ, stood forth and said unto the Lord: Behold Lord, the halfe of my goods I give to the poore, and if I have taken from any man by forged cavillation, I restore him foure-fold. Zacheus was the chiefe receiver of the tribute, and I pray you read the marginall note in your Bible, Luke 19.

6. The first tidings of this happy appearance of this glorious Starre of Iacob, was not brought unto Noblemen and great personages, but unto poore shepheards keeping their flocks by night in the field. Another branch of his great humility. Of which poverty of the Shepheards, Bernard gathereth a great comfort to them that are poore, saying; Caveant qui gemmis & auro fulgent, ne Angeli ad pannosos illis omissis divertant: Let them that shine with Gold and precious stones take heed, lest the Angels of God passing them over, turne to the Shepheard or poore man ruffling in rags and clouts. Thus have we runne over some circumstances of the birth of this Starre and Scepter of Iacob, seeing it to have beene in unspeakable humility.

Now to make use of it to our selves: Let it first teach us to love him, for this was exceeding love in him to us, and every love should have love againe. In creatione potentiam, in gubernatione sapientiam, in nascendo amorem vide: In his creation of all things, behold his power; and in the government of all things, behold his wisedome; but in the birth behold and see his love. And remember it ever well, Potentia subjectionem, sapientia admirationem, nativitas dilectionem postulat: His Power requires subjection, his Wisdome admiration, and his Nativity love. For what tongue is able to expresse the love he hath shewed to us? Quanti te fecerit Deus tuus, ex his quæ pro te factus est agnosce. Quanto enim fecit se minorem in humilitate, tanto majorem se exhibuit in bonitate: How God hath regarded thee, understand by such things as he was made for thee: for the lesser he made himselfe in humilitie, so much the greater he gave himselfe to us in goodnesse. Wherefore, Quanto pro te factus est vilior, tanto tibi semper sit charior: The more vile hee was made for thee, so much the dearer let him ever be to thee. To see the flame ascend upward, is no marvell, but to see it descend downeward is strange, and not ordinary. Wee thinke all, that this Inne-keeper was unhappy, to put such a gueſt into the Stable, and to have no better roome for him: but what if you so use him too, and that after knowledge of him, which the In-keeper had not; remember his words, that he stands at the door & knocks, what if you let him not in, neither afford him any room in your heart, are you not worse than the In-keeper? Judge your selfe before

Iam. 2. with a gold ring.

Aug Omnia bona terrena contempsit, & omnia mala sustinuit, ut nec in his quæreretur fœlicitas, nec in illis temneretur miseria.

Prodiit nudus ut tu vestes, pauper ut tu dives, humilis ut tu exaltatus, lachrymans ut omnem lachrymam ab oculis tuis, &c.

Tinea virtutis blandus hostis.

Qui ex aliorum labiis pendet, modo magnus, modo parvus, modo nullus.

Cupit omnis dilectio redamari.

before the Lord, judge you what roome you allow to his Sonne Christ. He dwels not with pride, swearing and wickednesse. Hee lookes for a lodging swept from this filth, and the like whatsoever. The humility that said, I am not worthy to have thee under my roofe, that stood a farre off, and durst not lift up his eyes to heaven, but knocked his brest, and said; God be mercifull to me a sinner; that said, Truth Lord, yet the whelps eate of the crums that fall from the Table, with such like, were tokens of roomes to his liking, and in such he graciously dwelleth. Minus Deum amat, qui aliquid præter eum amat, quod non propter eum amat: He loveth God too little, that loveth any thing else, but which he doth not love for him.

Mat. 11. 29. Secondly, let us learne humility of him: for, Deus tuus parvulus factus est, & tu te magnificas? Thy God became small for thee, and dost thou magnifie thy selfe? Exinanivit se Majestas, vermiculus intumescis? Majesty it selfe hath stooped, and shall a Worme swell? God forbid. See, and ever see, how he cryes by his example, what after he cryed by word; Learne of me, that I am meeke and lowly in heart, and ye shall finde rest unto your soules. But what saith the world, Humility is baseneſse and want of wit. But the Devill, whose voice this is, was a lyer from the beginning. One seeth how farre the heavens are distant from the earth, and he is held wise; another seeth how farre he is distant from God, and shall he be a foole and base? Wisedome is justified of her Children.

7. The Shepheards were poore, and wee have noted comfort against poverty. Let us profit further by them, and see that they were feeders, poore men, but faithfull in their place, feeders of sheep, and carefull keepers of them, as well by night as by day. Hath God a care of Sheepe, and not feeders of men, much more deare to him if they likewise be faithfull? Feeders of men by the Word and doctrine, feeding of the poore by charitable Almes, and feeders of Strangers and Travellers by liberall hospitality, of all which the Scripture speaketh to incouragement. Of the first, when he saith; They are worthy of double honour. Honour in affection, and honour in liberall maintenance; such as may not be onely Alimentum, but Ornamentum: Not a bare keeping of life, but a cheerfull allowance to them and theirs, and that in very equity and conscience. For if we have sowne unto you Spirituall things (saith the Apostle) is it a great thing if we reape your carnall things? Of the second, in every place, namely, that most excellent comfort, Come ye blessed of my Father, &c. For when I was hungry ye fed me, &c. Of the third, over and over also, in that notable place; Be not forgetfull to entertaine Strangers, for thereby some have received Angels into their houses unawares.

1 Tim. 1 Cor. 9.

Mat. 25. Heb. 13. 2.

8. As they were feeders, so were they watchers, and that in the night, diligent, faithfull, and painfull, as I have said already. A thing ever pleasing to God and good men. Sonne of man, I have made thee a Watchman: Good and faithfull servant, thou hast beene faithfull over little, I will make thee ruler over much, enter into thy Lords joy.

9. They watched againe their Flocks; that is, their owne. Good may bee done to others as wee say, but ever our owne must bee cared for above all. It is a fearfull thing to range up and downe without just cause, labouring any where rather than at home with our owne. It smelleth strongly of vaine glory, and we must beware. God seeth the heart, and that which is done to the good of others, to our selves in regard of that blemish in the heart, may be unprofitable, yea, hurtfull. Other watchers there be in the world, but not of their owne; Achab watched for Naboths Vine-yard, David watched Bersabe another mans Wife, Absolon watched for his fathers Kingdome, &c. Of these I speake not now. It shall ever be good to watch our owne. The Magistrate, the Minister their owne, and every particular person his owne body, his owne soule, his owne eyes, eares, and other senses. For this is your flocke, and if day and night you have care hereof, the Lord that seeth it shall give his blessing to your good, temporall and eternall. Thus in regard of the time when these things fell out to be spoken of, many things have beene noted touching this glorious Starre and Scepter of Iacob. It remaineth to goe on with the rest of the Chapter briefly for order sake.

The third part.

Verse 20. THe third prophesie in this Chapter, is concerning the Amalekites, of whom it is thus said; And when he looked on Amalek, he uttered his Parable and said, Amalek was the first of the Nations, but his latter end shall come to destruction. Long had Amalek sinned, and long did God with patience suffer, but he is ever just in the end. Reade Eccles. 8. 12. and Psal. 37. throughout. Amalek was the first of Nations, either in regard of his first making warre against Israel, as you have seene. Chap. 14. 45. Or in regard of antiquity, which the Amalekites boasted of. Reade againe Marbachius.

The

The fourth part.

THe fourth propheſie is touching the Kenites; And hee looked on the Kenites, and uttered his Parable, and ſaid: ſtrong is thy dwelling place, and put thy neſt in the Rocke. Nevertheleſſe, the Kenite ſhall be ſpoyled, untill Aſhur carry thee away captive. Strong houſes ſhall never be able to keepe out Gods judgements when the time of wrath commeth. Thinke of the ſtrong Tower of Babel, how weake it was againſt God. Ieriche's wall, that fell downe at the blaſt of Rams hornes. That glorious Babel, *Dan.*4. and 5.

Or Midianites. Verſ. 21, 22.

Ioſhua 7.

2. Alas! who ſhall live when God doth this? They happely ſporting when theſe things are decreed againſt them. So ſtill many eating, drinking, &c. till the flood came and ſwept them away.

The fift part.

THe laſt is of the Grecians and Romanes. The ſhips alſo ſhall come from the coaſts of Chittim and ſubdue Aſhur, and ſhall ſubdue Eber. And he alſo ſhall come to deſtruction.

Theſe things thus uttered, Balaam roſe up and went, and returned to his place, and Balack alſo went his way. Reade *Micha.*6.5. Si Deus nobiſcum, &c.

CHAP. XXV.

The generall Heads of this Chapter are theſe:

The ſinne of the people, they committed whoredome.
The wrath of God for it.
The zeale of Phinees.
The reward of that zeale.

Concerning the ſinne of the people, we may marke:

The ground of it firſt.
Where it was committed.
With whom.
By what meanes, &c.

THe firſt ground of this wickedneſſe, was Balaams counſell: who being deſirous ſome way to gratifie Balack, that hee might reape ſome reward, and not loſe his journey cleane: which wicked wages to this day, in reproach, is called Balaams wages, and not able by Gods reſtraint to curſe them, told the King that he would counſell him what to doe, which counſell was; that if he would prevaile againſt that people, hee muſt ſome way make them offend God, as by procuring women to tempt them to evill. This wicked advice is followed, and ſo the people ſinned grievouſly, committing whoredome with the daughters of Moab. So true is it, that good men ar miſſed when they are gone, for their good: and ill men when they are gone, are remembred for their evill: yea, ſo ſhall Balaam be remembred, that while the Booke of God remaineth, his lewdneſſe ſhall not be forgotten. Such ſcars doe men make in their owne faces, as neither art nor time can put out: The old verſes therefore were good.

Numb. 31. 16. Apoc. 2.

Verſ. 1.

Cum facis ingreſſus, ſtudeas ſic eſſe modeſtus,
Vt poſt diſceſſus, de te ſit rumor honeſtus.

Whereſoever thou commeſt ſo behave thy ſelfe, as when thou art departed, there may goe a good report of thee. Wee plainly ſee here the poyſon and venome of wicked counſell; how ſoon it entreth, how quickly it is followed, and how ſore it corrupteth: let men ever take heed, but eſpecially when they are tempted by ill counſell, and fit occaſion or opportunitie, for many have ſtood as long as they were not urged; which once being allured, very quickly were caught and overthrowne. Remember Iezabels counſell to Achab; and to the Rulers to put Naboth unto death. Remember Achitophels damnable counſell to Abſolon, to abuſe his Fathers Concubines: how grew Lots Inceſt with his owne daughters, but by wicked counſell? Rehaboam, Salomons ſonne, how hurt by the fooliſh counſell of the young men, &c? Wee thinke counſell and perſwaſion is a ſmall thing, becauſe men may chuſe whether they will follow it: but but Peter was called Satan for giving ill counſell, although it were not followed. And the Spirit of God ſaith; Bleſſed is the man that hath not walked in the counſell of the ungodly, it is even a bleſſing, though they never follow it. I have read a conceit of one well affected; that ſo long ſhould their paine in hell be increaſed, as any in earth were hurt with the counſell that they in their life time gave: Such a wicked thing is ill counſell.

2. Theodoret obſerveth, that loco armatorum, in the ſtead of armed men, women are ſent to overthrow this great hoſt of the Iſraelites. Which to men and women ſhould be profitable: to men, to make them ſee this great blemiſh in their nature, to be turned and returned, and overturned by women; how diſhonourable is this in all reports? and how is the note of it wee ſee by writing often, continued from age to age, as here in this place, and many more. The ſonnes of God, that is, of the faithfull, ſaw the daughters of men, that is, of the wicked, that they were faire, and they tooke them wives of thoſe wicked ones, for beauty ſake, againſt God, Religion, and their owne ſafety. Whereupon followed the flood, that fearfull judgement of God againſt ſinne; yea, ſuch ſinne, as luſt upon beauty, without reſpect of God and his will is. Holofernes doted upon the beauty of Iudith, and did not God ſhew his indignation againſt ſuch weakneſſe in a valorous man, and made him pay full deare for it? Samſon the ſtrong had this blemiſh, and it made him weak, and ſubject to ſcorne & deriſion, even of thoſe that in his ſtrength he ſet little by. Salomon the wiſeſt was not wiſe in this, but overcome with this baite, to the abiding blemiſh of his worth, even to this day. David, I forgat, a wiſe, a valiant, and moſt holy man, yet a man, and in this point a fraile man, wherefore his diſhonour lives at this day as freſh and green, as it did at the time of his fall. I ſhrinke, and my penne refuſeth to yeeld inke, when I ſhould lay down that in the fourth Chapter of Eſdras, concerning the weakneſſe of man in this point: reade it your ſelfe, and let me not write it. Bluſh, and feare to leave ſuch a report behind you juſtly, that whom no wiſdome could over-reach, either in ſtratagem or otherwiſe; I meane either in warre or peace, whom no fiery eyes of foes, no roaring of Canon, Nec aurum, nec ferrũ, neither gold nor iron could corrupt or overcome; he by a ſilly woman guilded a little on the outſide, like a S. Martins chaine, or painted like the Tombes ſpoken of by Chriſt, that within are full of rotten bones, is overcome, vanquiſhed, and brought to ſtirre neither foot nor arme; nor ſpeak, nor looke, nor thinke, but what his Goddeſſe will give him warrant for, under the ſeale of her becke or nod, and ſuch like. O baſe change from wiſdome to foolery, from ſtrength to weakneſſe, from valour of the Lion, to meekiſhneſſe of the Mouſe, upon the glance of a ſilly woman! How makes it me remember the wiſh of Valerius to his friend, Det Deus omnipotens ut ab omnipotenti fœmina ſemper libereris; God Almighty deliver thee ever from an almighty woman. I will goe no further: Thus ſhall this example in your Chapter of men vanquiſhed by women profit you.

Pſa.1.

Ill women are the devils Sergeants, to arreſt and carry to priſon. Ignis, Mare, Mulier, how good, how evil. One asked why he married a little woman, ſaid, ex malis minimum

3. Againe, it ſhould profit women, to ſee how the devill, as he firſt began to make them his agents, ſtill continueth that courſe, and againſt God and man; yea, againſt themſelves, fearfully uſeth them as his vaſſals, whom we may command. O why ſhould they bee thus abuſed ſtill by the enemy of their honour in this world, and of their everlaſting joy in the world to come! What woman thinkes not, if ſhe had beene in mother Eves place, and had knowne the expreſſe will of God the Creator, as ſhe did, but that ſhe would have ſent that Serpent packing, with all his gloſing, flattery, and faire promiſes? But doth ſhe thus worthily indeed, when the ſame Serpent commeth to her (for he tempteth daily, as then he did) and when the Apple is offered her, the eating wherof ſhall fling her to death, & caſt woe and griefe upon all her poſterity & friends. God knowes it, and to God I leave it, wiſhing more ſtrength daily and hourely to every one, to defie him and his practices, That goeth about like a roaring Lion, ſeeking whom he may devour: And praying that all women would ſet before them the examples of worthy women; who excelling in beauty, in ſpeech, and all perfections of women, yet uſed all to good, and nothing to harme. Iudith was the ſafety of all her people: their ſaved blood to this day ſounds forth her praiſe, and every ſpeaking ſtory rings out her honour to all ages. Abigail preſerved her husband and all her houſe, from the rage of him that had vowed in heart not to looke upon the wall. God honoured her in earth for it, by making her a Kings wife; and in his holy word hee will have her praiſe live as chronicled while the world endureth. How glorious are theſe remembrances in compariſon of the contrary? and how ſhould all womens hearts burne to bee thus eternized. God in mercy give feeling.

Read Pro.31.

4. What did the Moabitiſh women to them? Your Chapter ſaith; They Called them to Sacrifices of their gods; that is, to thoſe feaſts which were uſed when they ſacrificed to their gods. See then the beginning of miſchiefe, and how the Devill layeth his nets to catch his fooles or fowles if you will: Meetings, eatings, drinkings, feaſtings, and ſuch like; faire and friendly in ſhew, but foule and ſinfull too often in the end. Sine Cerere & Baccho friget venus: By wine and banquetting wantonneſſe is uſually wrought. I have peace-offerings at home, ſaith the tempter in the Proverbs; that is, meat and good cheare, Come, &c. Lot muſt bee intoxicated with wine, and his body ſet on fire, before wickedneſſe can be effected as was wiſhed. Truly therfore and Convivia veneris præludia. Pro.7.14.

and wisely said Scipio, that worthy Romane: Imperatori bono majus periculum imminere à voluptatibus, quam ab armatis hostibus: That more danger hanged over a worthy Emperour by bewitching pleasures, than by armed enemies. Often therefore reade it, if you love your selfe, that powerfull exhortation of the Wiseman, *Pro.*5. even the whole Chapter. And if you will doe any thing for him that writ this for your sake, often reade it I say againe, and let it never depart out of your remembrance.

5. When was this? Whilest Israel abode in Shittim, saith your Chapter. That is, whilest they camped fast by them. Let it tell you still the danger of ill company, either to be in it or neare it, for that happeneth in and houre that was thought almost impossible. Iuxta ignem, Serpentem & mulierem, nemo diu securus: Neare a fire, a Serpent, and a wicked woman, no man can long bee in safety. Qui amat periculum, peribit in illo; He that loveth danger shall perish in it.

6. And was idlenesse thinke you nothing? Yes, yes assure your selfe, it is ever a chiefe agent in this businesse. Had our first mother beene busie, shee had not tatled with the Serpent; and had they not beene idle in Sodome, they had never fallen to that abhomination: for idlenesse is mentioned as a meanes, by the Prophet: Otia si tollas periere Cupidinis arcus; Take idlenesse away, and Cupids bow casts the string. Hee will never doe harme with all his arrowes: Doest thou ask the question, how Ægistus became an adulterer? Desidioso erat: He was idle. David was idle on the top of his Palace, and what followed? These Israelites are idle, and idle they tattle, and tatling they are invited to their Sacrifice, invited, they goe, and both spiritually and corporally they commit whoredome. A fearfull fall in men so taught: But this is mans weaknesse, and womans strength, as I have said before. Gregory his speech therefore would bee remembred, as very profitable for us: Peccatum quod mox per pœnitentiam non deluitur, pondere suo trahit ad aliud: The sinne that is not forthwith blotted out by true repentance, with his weight draweth another after it. You see it here plainly in the progresse I named.

Ezec.16.

Verse 2.
Verse 3.

Ill thoughts.

7. I could note the successe that usually followeth of company with women of a contrary Religion, the worse overcommeth the better; seldome or never the better the worse. I would men were more carefull and zealous in these dayes. The mischiefe is sorrowed, but when it is too late with too many. But I passe it over as spoken of else-where. Origens conceit also, that Philosophy and humane studies doe allure and deceive men like these Moabitish women, I stand not on. Let men beware and remember his speech that said, Philosophandum, sed paucis: or rather the speech of God himselfe; Beware lest any man spoyle you through Philosophy, and vaine deceit, through the traditions of men, according to the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. That good saying againe comes to my minde in this place; Si senseris malignum spiritum loqui in corde tuo, ut aliquod peccatum facias, intellige te duci ut cum istis Israelitis comedas de oblatis Baal Peor: If at any time thou feele the wicked spirit speaking in thy heart, and moving thee to some evill thing, know and understand that thou art tempted, and led to eate the offerings of Baal Peor with these Israelites.

Colos.2.8.

8. Lastly, consider what was the safety of these Israelites, and in them what is all other mens safeties, namely, cleaving to God, in the holy worship of his Name, commanded and prescribed by him. For while this held, neither Balack nor Balaam, foe nor devill could hurt them, but the Lord still watched over them, crossed their desires, and brought to naught all their indeavours. Which he shall likewise for all other men that feare him. But when once they stepped from him, and preferred their sinfull pleasure before him, the Lord turned from them likewise, and sends his messenger of wrath, leaving them teachers to other men what shall likewise overthrow them, if other mens harmes cannot make them wise. Nostris peccatis Barbari fortes sunt, nostris peccatis Romanus superatur exercitus: By our owne sinnes wee are overcome, by our owne sinnes the Roman Army is vanquished; said he wisely, being but an Heathen.

The second part.

HAving now seene the sinne of this people, with the circumstances, as corporall whoredome with the women, and spirituall with their Idols, from what ground it grew; namely, from the wicked counsell of Balaam: where it was committed, in Shittim, a place neare to the Moabites; with whom it was committed, with the daughters of Moab, that is, the women of Moab; and by what meanes drawne on, to wit, by talking and tatling, feasting and banquetting together: Now let us come to the second head of this Chapter, the wrath of God kindled against them for it. Whereof the Text speaketh, verse 3. 4. &c. It is most true in Gods execution of Justice, that is not ever true in mans, by the punishment wee may truly judge of the sinne, a great punishment, a great sinne. First looke we at his wrath. The wrath of a King (saith Salomon) is as messengers of death, but a wise man will pacifie it. What then is the wrath of God, and how carefully should that be pacified? Againe, The Kings wrath is like to the roaring of a Lion, but his favour is like the dew upon the grasse. Most dreadfull then must needes bee the wrath of the Almighty, and most comfortable his favour. Of this wrath speaketh Iob, Let him take take his rod away from me, and let not his feare aſtoniſh me. David agreeth with Iobs aſtoniſhment, and ſaith; If thou ſhalt marke what is done amiſſe, O Lord, who may abide it? The wrath that will follow juſtly, will be intollerable for any. The Prophet Nahum plainly, Who can ſtand before his wrath? Or who can abide the fierceneſſe of his wrath? His wrath is powred out like fire, and the Rocks are broken by him. Thus of his wrath, and ſhall man thinke to wreſtle with it? But of his favour: The Lord is good, and as a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble, and he knoweth them that truſt in him. If the ſight of him not angry was ſo terrible, that Moſes ſaid, I feare, I quake; What is the ſight of him, yea the thought of him, when he is angry. Our God (ſaith the Apoſtle in the ſame place) is a conſuming fire. And if his wrath be kindled never ſo little, bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him. The leaſt feeling of his wrath to the uprighteſt man is ſuch, as that he joyeth not in any thing under the Sunne. If the heart be pricked, till the ſound of mercy come, and reconciliation, there is no reſt day nor night. O Lord, I have heard thy voyce (ſaith the Prophet) and was afraid, when I heard, my belly trembled, my lips ſhooke at the voyce, rottenneſſe entred into my bones, and I trembled in my ſelfe, &c. My bowels did boyle without reſt, ſaith Iob, my ſkinne is blacke upon me, and my bones are burnt with heate. If thus, when God tryeth in love, what reſt when hee ſcourgeth in wrath? And if wrath thus dreadfull, how hatefull ſhould ſinne be that kindleth it? That threw the Angels out of heaven, and made them damned divels in hell, that brought the flood upon the world, and deſtroyed all fleſh, that pulled fire and brimſtone from heaven upon Sodome and Gomorrah, was the confuſion of Jeruſalem in ſuch a fearfull manner, &c. O how hatefull, againe I ſay, ſhould this ſinne bee, this monſter ſinne, the cauſe of hell and eternall damnation? Let the words of Eſay be often in your minde; Your iniquities have ſeparated between you and your God, and your ſinnes have hid his face from you that he will not heare. Againe, the like words by Ieremy: Your iniquities have turned away theſe things, and your ſinnes have hindred good things from you. Often remember alſo that heape of curſes and plagues mentioned in Leviticus and Deuteronomy, and finally and laſt, Ite maledicti; Goe yee curſed into eternall woe, where the worme never dyeth, the fire never goeth out; where is weeping, wayling, and gnaſhing of teeth. And as of all ſinne in generall you may thus meditate to your good, ſo in particular may you thinke of theſe two ſinnes here committed by the Iſraelites, Spirituall and Corporall whoredome. The firſt being Idolatry, never was, nor ever will bee leſſe than the death of body and ſoule, paint it, and gild it over with all the deviſes and skill that the braine of man can bring forth. Remember the words of Moſes, concerning this particular now in our Chapter; Your eyes have ſeene what the Lord did becauſe of Baal-Peor. For all the men that followed Baal-Peor, the Lord thy God hath deſtroyed every one from among you. But ye that did cleave to your Lord your God, are alive every one of you this day. Reade Iudg. 10.6. 2 King. 22. verſe 17. Pſa. 106. with many like places. The ſecond, Corporall whoredome. Marke this puniſhment in your Chapter, and it may ſhake fleſh and blood, if it can feele any thing; Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord againſt the Sunne, that the indignation of the Lords wrath may be turned from Iſrael. This fearfull puniſhment ſheweth a moſt hatefull ſinne. Adde unto it the juſtice of God ſpoken of in Ieremy, againſt Ahab, the ſonne of Kolaiah, and Zedekiah, the ſonne of Maaſeiah, They of the captivity of Iuda that are in Babel, ſhall take up this curſe againſt them, and ſay; The Lord make thee like Zedekiah, and like Ahab, whom the King of Babel burnt in the fire. Becauſe they have committed villany in Iſrael, and have committed adultery with their neighbours wives, &c. See the deteſtation of Heathens, and let us bluſh to bee worſe than they. Among the Athenians, when one Dydimus had committed Adultery, and was led to puniſhment for it, Dignus eſt, inquit Diogenes, qui ipſo nomine pœnas luat: He is worthy ſaith Diogenes to be puniſhed according to his name, to wit, to bee hanged by his privy parts. The Ægyptians, ſaith Diodorus Siculus, ſlit the noſtrils of theſe tranſgreſſors. The Locrenſes put out both their eyes. VVhereupon Zelencus his ſonne being convicted of that fault, and ſo to loſe his eyes, his father was content to loſe one of his, to ſave one of his ſonnes, and yet not to alter the ſeverity of the Law. Plutarch ſpeaketh of others, that made ſuch offenders goe with a garland of wool about their heads, that all eyes might gaze on them, and know them to be effeminate and unworthy perſons. Polybius ſaith, Si mœcus interficiatur, eſto impune: If any man kill an Adulterer, let him not be puniſhed for it. Mahomets law is to beate them almoſt to death. The twelve Tables gave death. And Cornelius Tacitus writeth of the Germanes: Tonderi fœminam, & veſtibus in circuitu abſciſſis, ignominioſe per vicos circumduci: That their women thus offending, were ſhorne on their heads, and with their cloathes cut round about ſhort, were ignominiouſly led about the ſtreets. Thus hath beene the corporall puniſhment of this villany. And for the ſpirituall we all know it is, and ever ſhall be eternall death and confuſion.

Pro.16.14.
Chap.19.12.

Iob 9.34.

9. Hang up the heads of the people, ſaith God; Some thinke, becauſe they were offenders in this kinde; others becauſe they did not execution upon ſuch as did offend. Howſoever, it is a notable example to men in place and ſtate above their brethren. For if they ſinne either the one way or the other, the Lords eye is upon them, and they ſhall ſmart. Were they offenders here you ſee gods wrath: were they but negligent in doing juſtice, you ſee alſo the pain. So was Heli

Chap. 1. 6.

Verſe 7.

Heb. 12. 21. Heb. 13. 29.

Acts 2. Hab. 3. 2.

Iob. 30. 27, 30.

That fearfull delebo omnem carnem.

Eſa. 59 2.

Ier. 5. 25.

Deut. 4 3.

Verſ. 4.

Ier 29. 23. Inſartagine frixit.

Qui teſtibus pendeat teſtes ſunt. Diodorus lib. 1. Ælian lib. 13.

Plutarch in Problem. Cortinaceos.

Heli plagued for his ſlackneſſe againſt his owne children. So was the King of Iſrael told that becauſe he had let Benhadad goe out of his hands, a man whom hee had appointed to die; Thy life ſhall goe for his life, and thy people for his people. Wherefore deſire not to bee made a Iudge, leſt thou be not able to take away iniquity, and leſt thou fearing the perſon of the mighty ſhouldeſt commit an offence againſt thy uprightneſſe (ſaith wiſe Sirach.) Againe, Heare O ye Kings, and underſtand, and learne ye that be Iudges of the ends of the earth. Give eare ye that rule the multitudes, and glory in the multitude of people. For the rule is given you of the Lord, and power by the moſt High which will try your works, and ſearch out your imaginations. Becauſe that yee being Officers of his Kingdome have not judged aright, nor kept the Law, nor walked after the will of God, horribly and ſuddenly will he appeare unto you. For a hard judgement ſhall they have that beare rule, ſaith the Book of Wiſedome. Words to a heart of fleſh marvellous fearefull.

10 See how juſtice executed appeaſeth Gods wrath, and turneth his indignation away from a State and people: See how the doing of it, it is ſaid to be before the Lord, to encourage men to the execution, and to feare them from ſlackneſſe: for even both bee before him, and hee ſeeth them. See how it muſt be done before the Sunne; that is, openly that others may ſee and feare. And laſtly, that Moſes muſt doe it; that is, men authorized to it, and not every one according to his heat and raſh apprehenſion. Let this ſuffice of the puniſhment of their hatefull ſinne wrought by the ſubtill counſell of Balaam. And come wee now to the zeale of Phinehas, which is the third generall head of this Chapter.

The third Part.

AND behold one of the children of Iſrael came and brought unto his brethren a Midianitiſh woman in the ſight of Moſes, and in the ſight of all the Congregation of the children of Iſrael, who wept before the doore of the Tabernacle of the Congregation. And when Phinehas, the ſon of Eleazar, the ſon of Aaron the Prieſt ſaw it, he roſe up, took a ſpeare in his hand, and followed them into the tent, and thruſt them both through, &c. Having noted their ſinne and the puniſhment of it: the third chiefe head of this Chapter was ſaid to bee the zeale of Phinehas, which now in theſe words you ſee expreſſed. You may note the occaſion of this fact, and the fact it ſelfe. The occaſion you ſee was the comming of one of the Iſraelites with a woman in his hand of the daughters of Moab, to commit with her filthineſſe. But marke the circumſtances. Firſt, whoredome of it ſelfe hatefull. So we learne, Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Chriſt? Shall I then take the members of Chriſt and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid. Doe you not know that he that coupleth himſelfe to an harlot is one body? For two (ſaith he) ſhall be one fleſh, &c. Fly fornication, every ſin that a man doth is without the body, but he that committeth fornication ſinneth againſt his own body, &c. Secondly, in an Iſraelite this fault is greater. For if a man that is called a brother (ſaith the Apoſtle againe) be a fornicator, or covetous, or an Idolater, or a rayler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with ſuch a one eat not. Thirdly, what manner of Iſraelite was hee? Not an ordinary man. But his name ſaith your Chapter was Zimri, the ſonne of Salu, Prince of the family of the Simeonites. Now great mens faults are more grievous. The Heathen Orator could ſay, Eorum qui præſunt Reipub. non facta ſolum ſed verba, vultus, geſtus, &c. If men bee in place and authority in the Common-wealth, not onely their actions, but words, countenances, geſtures, and every wrench, and wry is noted. Et quod in aliis error, in principe flagitium eſt: And what in others is an error, in a Prince it is a great wickedneſſe, ſaith Eraſmus. Fourthly, he did it openly in the ſight of Moſes, and the Congregation of the people of Iſrael, as not onely paſt honeſty, but paſt all ſhame and modeſty. Sirach ſpeaking of the man that breaketh wedlocke, ſaith, he thinketh this in his heart: Who ſeeth me? I am compaſſed about with darkneſſe, the walls cover me, no body ſeeth me, whom need I to feare? the moſt High will not remember my ſins. Such a man onely feareth the eyes of men, and knoweth not that the eyes of the Lord are ten thouſand times brighter then the Sunne, beholds all the wayes of men, and the ground of the deepe, and conſidereth the moſt ſecret parts. Saint Paul ſaith, They that are drunke are drunke in the night as having ſome ſhame. And ſinnes are called works of darkneſſe. But this man openly in the day time, and before the faces of many commeth marching with his Damoſell, neither regarding God nor man. Laſt, he doth it when others wept, ſaith your Chapter, as repenting for their offending God ſpoken of before. Well therefore might this bee called a preſumptuous ſinne, committed with an high hand, as Numb. 15. verſe 30. Generally by all theſe circumſtances, ſee what Satan can doe with us, if hee get once rule over us. Wherefore Obſta principiis: Stay and ſtop his beginnings. Reſiſt him and hee will flie. Reſiſt him not and wee muſt die. Daſh the bones of ſinne while they be young. For after ſtrength gotten it will not be ſo eaſie. In particular, note the power of this ſin, of the fleſh, and of alluring women. I have ſpoken of it before, yet I will adde the good ſayings of ſome holy Fathers here againe. Gregory Niſſen ſaith thus: Cum omnis voluptas facile ad vitium alliciat, tum fœliſſimus veneris actus libidinoſos præſertim, Iuniorum animos adunco detentos hamo attrahet. Id hic patet. Nam armis prævalebant. Sed qui

Verſe 6,7.

1 Cor. 6. 15.

1 Cor. 5. 11.

Chap. 23. 18.

1 Theſſ. 5. 7. Epheſ. 5.

hoſtes ejuſdem ſua virtute retuderunt, qui legiones armatos fuderunt atque fugarunt, mulieris forma percuſſi ceciderunt. Et ſic qui viros vicerunt à mulieribus pervincuntur. Nam ſimulatque mulieres apparuerunt formoſa corpora pro telis obiicientes, ſtatim fortitudinis obliti ad voluptates devoluti ſunt. All pleaſure eaſily allureth unto ſinne, but eſpecially the act of carnall luſt, holding as it were with a hooke the mindes of fleſhly men, chiefly of the younger ſort, pulleth them unto it readily. This appeareth here in this place. For with martiall armes theſe Iſraelites prevailed. But they that with vertue and valour daunted and dulled the edge of hoſtile ſword, and put to flight whole legions, armed to fight againſt them; they, even they ſmitten with womens beauty, fell moſt fouly and ſhamefully. So they that overcame men, of women baſely were overcome. For as ſoone as women preſented their comely bodies in ſtead of darts againſt them, by and by all valour and vertue, all manhood and fortitude was forgotten, and this foule alluring pleaſure entertained. Gregory Nazianzen hath an Oration againſt women that paint themſelves, that they may ſeeme fairer: Oculos nefarie cor ſequitur. And Hierome ſpeaketh of a woman, that as ſhe was attiring her ſelfe to the ſhew, was by the juſt hand of God ſmitten lame in thoſe hands that wrought that bad worke. Let this ſuffice of the occaſion that kindled the zeale and anger of Phinehas. Come we now to his fact.

Verſe 7.

2 When Phinehas ſaw (ſaith the Text) he aroſe, caught his ſpeare, &c. Hee ſaw it, he roſe up, hee caught his ſpeare, he followed them even into the Tent, he thruſt them both through and ſlew them. O renowned zeale, ſweet to God, and glorious ever before all good men! Let it affect us much, and never be out of our remembrance. Let the Magiſtrate follow it with his ſword: let Parents and Maſters follow it with their rod and lawfull cenſures: let Miniſters follow it with their ſword, the ſharpe and killing word of God; killing, I ſay, if not correcting and moving to amendment. Let them bee as Samuel to Saul, Nathan to David, Heliah, to Iacob, Iohn to Herod. Let them remember Eſay his Clama. Cry, and cry aloud, &c. Watchman: Sonne of man I have made thee a watchman, and if thou ſpy and cry thou ſaveſt thy ſelfe, if thou ſleepe and give no warning, thy blood ſhall anſwer it, &c. Such Phinehas God ever in mercy ſend to his Church.

3 But this place ſeemeth to warrant the ſword alſo to any man in Gods quarrell. Why ſo? Becauſe Phinehas is praiſed for the fact. A bad conſequence. Therefore underſtand things better. It was lawfull in Phinehas, becauſe he was the chiefe Prince of the Tribe of Levi, ſon to Eleazar, the high Prieſt, and therefore not a meere private man haply. If hee were a private man, yet might his fact be lawfull two waies. Firſt, by a ſpeciall inſtinct of Gods Spirit confirmed and made aſſuredly knowne unto him. And if thus, then it was an extraordinary fact, and not to be drawne in example, as Calvin, nor a common rule to be made of it. No more than men may be warranted to ſteale, becauſe the Iſraelites got the Egyptians jewels, Exod. 12. Or to murther, becauſe Samſon pulled downe the houſe upon himſelfe and others, Iudg. 16. Or to curſe and kill children, becauſe Elizeus did ſo, 2 King. 2. Or to call for fire from heaven, becauſe Elias did ſo, 2 King. 1. But in theſe things remember ever as a bridle to you, that ſaying of Chriſt to his Diſciples, when they would have imitated Elias fact; You know not what ſpirit you are of, Luk. 9. 54. that is, you kow not what will, minde, and counſell you are of. The gifts of God are called the Spirit, becauſe they are given of Gods Spirit, and ſo are they that are contrary to them, which proceed of the wicked ſpirit; as the ſpirit of covetouſneſſe, of pride, of madneſſe, &c. whereby we ſee that the argument taken from example is naught, except we have the ſame warrant which they had. Eliah had Gods Spirit commanding him to execute his judgements upon theſe fifties. When Moſes killed the Egyptian he was a choſen Magiſtrate of God, and himſelfe knew his warrant, although openly it was not knowne, Act. 7. 25. and Heb. 11. 24. Iael did but that which God had authorized her to doe, ſaith Pet. Martyr, Iudg. 5. 24. And whatſoever may be objected of keeping hoſpitality pure, from harme, all that muſt bee underſtood ordinarily, when God commandeth not otherwiſe. For his will is ever juſtice, and to be preferred, no ſinne being ever in the obeying of him. Let therefore theſe and the like extraordinary examples goe, and follow we the ordinary way. Leave the ſword to the Magiſtrate, Rom. 13. Remember, he that takes the ſword, to wit, without authority, ſhall periſh with the ſword, Matt. 16. Remember S. Auguſtine, Maleſactorem ſine publica authoritate occidere homicidium eſt. To kill a malefactor without publike authority is murder.

Deus liber eſt & interdum ſervis ſuis novas & inſolitas perſonas imponit.

Spiritum vocat interdum agitationem ſeu motum quo agebantur.

Spiritus { Dei. / carnis

Iael. Iura hoſpitalia inviolata obſervanda, ſcilicet, jure communi, niſi Deus aliter, &c.

De civit. Dei l. 1. c. 20. & 22.

4 A ſecond way whereby Phinehas fact might be lawfull, ſay ſome, was becauſe he had warrant from the Magiſtrate. For Moſes being commanded from God, to hang up the heads of the people that had ſinned, &c. gave the like commandement to the chiefe Judges and heads of the Tribes before this fact happened, ſaying to them; Every one ſlay his men that joyned unto Baal Peor, &c. But you will ſay, why then was Phinehas ſo highly commended and recompenced at Gods hands? Certainly not for attempting to kill without warrant, but for his readineſſe to accompliſh the will of God, and word of Moſes, the Magiſtrate with his owne hand in a holy zeale, and godly heate of heart, grieved to ſee ſuch bold and preſumptuous contempt of God.

See D. Bilſon, Page 386. 1.

5 For uſe to our ſelves, let us ſee what wee ſafely may imitate in this fact of Phinehas. We noted noted before the zeale of his heart to God and godlineſſe, wiſhing the like in Magiſtrates by his meanes; Parents and Maſters by their meanes; and Miniſters and Preachers by their meanes. Now ſecondly, let us note his heart to his countrey and people. He deteſteth him that will be any meanes of incenſing God againſt them. Wee nurſe and cheriſh them, wee commend and praiſe them, wee call them to Offices and places amongſt us, whoſe hatefull ſinnes, whoſe obdurate hearts, and whoſe irreligious behaviour is more like to pull the puniſhment of Sodome upon us, and our Countrey, than any bleſſing or good thing from God. This ſhould the example of Phinehas amend in us. Thirdly, note how heartily hee abhorred this particular ſinne of whoredome, and let it ſtrike like a dart to our ſoules if we love it. Surely hee hated other vices alſo, and therefore let us follow him in his piety, and be aſſured of a like reward from our holy Father that hateth all ſinne, and loveth all righteouſneſſe.

6 Allegorically ſome have thought of this example. Origen ſaith, that all tentations may bee underſtood by theſe parties offending, againſt which we muſt doe as Phinehas did, catch up the ſpeare of Gods holy Word, and kill them. Ambroſe ſaith, we may underſtand all hereſies, error, and falſe opinions, which when they ariſe, with the ſame powerfull ſword of the Word we muſt zealouſly ſlay. Others have applied it to Chriſt, who, ſay they, tooke up our nature, and in that ſlew Satan, Death, and Sinne, that they ſhould never be able to hurt his Elect that beleeved on him. But I leave theſe conceits which groundleſſe ought ever ſparingly to be uſed. Come wee to the laſt part of the Chapter, Phinehas reward.

The fourth part.

THen the Lord ſpake unto Moſes, ſaying; Phinehas, the ſonne of Eleazar, the ſonne of Aaron the Prieſt, hath turned mine anger away from the children of Iſrael, while he was zealous for my ſake among them. Therefore I have not conſumed the children of Iſrael in my Iealouſie. Wherefore ſay to him; Behold I give to him my covenant of peace, &c, We ſee the praiſe and reward of holy and right zeale. Let both cold and luke-warme hearts make uſe of it. And adde to it the zeale of Moſes, when hee brake the Tables written by God; the zeale of Ioſua, when Achan had ſinned; the zeale of Eliah for God, againſt Baal; of Hezekiah when hee brake the brazen Serpent that God commanded to be ſet up, and had ſtood ſo long; of Ezra when he rent his garments; of Nehemiah when hee ſaw the Sabbath prophaned; of Paul when hee ſaw the ſuperſtition of the Athenians, and ſuch like examples in holy Scripture. But beware ever of raſhneſſe and indiſcretion. They are not zeale, nor peeviſhneſſe, nor raſhneſſe, nor obſtinacie, nor envy, nor pride, and the like. Often thinke of the words of Chriſt, You know not what ſpirit you are of. If the Diſciples of Chriſt may be miſtaken, may not you? Chriſt did not quench the ſmoaking Flax, nor breake the bruiſed Reed. Be fervent in ſpirit (ſaith the Apoſtle) but ſerving the Lord. Chryſoſtome very excellenly, Vellem vos Zelum temperare miſericordia. Zelus enim veniam negans furor potius eſt quam zelus, & admonitio miſericordia carens tortura quadam eſt: I would have temper your zeale with mercy. For zeale that denieth pardon and forgiveneſſe, is rather fury than zeale, and admonition that wants mercy is a kinde of torture. Bernard againe moſt worthily; Importabilis eſt abſque ſcientia zelus. Ergo ubi vehemens amulatio, ibi maxime diſcretio eſt neceſſaria, quæ eſt ordinatio charitatis. Et quo zelus fervidior & vehementior ſpiritus, eo vigilantiori ſcientia opus eſt, quæ zelum ſupprimat, ſpiritum temperet, &c. Zeale without knowledge is intolerable. Therefore where zeale is vehement, there chiefly is diſcretion neceſſary, which is an ordering aright of zeale. And the more fervent that zeale is, the more vehement the ſpirit, the more need there is of watchfull knowledge, which may keepe downe that zeale, and temper that ſpirit, &c. Zelum tuum inflammet charitas, informet ſcientia, firmet conſtantia, ſit fervidus, ſit circumſpectus, ſit invictus, nec teporem habeat, nec diſcretione careat, nec timidus ſit: Let charity kindle thy zeale, let knowledge informe it, conſtancy make it firme, let it bee hot, but circumſpect, let it be invincible, having neither luke-warmneſſe, nor wanting diſcretion, nor being fearefull.

Verſe 10, &c

Exod 32.
Ioſua 7.
1 King. 18.
2 King. 18.
Ezra 9.
Nehem. 13.
Acts 17.

Rom. 12.

Hom. de habenda Cura Prox.

Bern. Serm. 49. in Cantic.

Ibid.

2 You ſee here what doth turne away Gods anger from a People, Nation, City, or Houſe, even zealous puniſhing of offenders. Deut. 13. teacheth the like; Reade it over and over. In Ioſua Chap. 7. the puniſhing of Achan. Did not thy father proſper when hee executed judgement and juſtice? Ieremy 22. Purge out therefore the leaven, ſaith the Apoſtle, with a number like places, forcible to a feeling heart, to ſtirre up in Magiſtrates, Parents and Maſters, all due care to ſee ſinne puniſhed in their ſeverall places.

3 Who did this juſtice? None but Phinehas, and yet the bleſſing reacheth to the whole people. So, ſo, the vertue of one profiteth many times, Laban is the better for Iacobs vertue, Potiphar for Ioſephs piety, &c. Reade Ier. 5. 1.

4 The Prieſthood is promiſed to him for his reward. A thing of little regard with many men. And never of leſſe than in theſe ſinfull and proud daies of ours. But where God ruleth the heart with his holy Spirit, there ever it hath, and ever will bee honourable. Anna that worthy woman vowed her Samuel to the Lord, as the place ſhe valued above all the world. Magna ſublimitas, honor grandis: A great height, a great honour, ſaith Gregory. Nihil apud homines odioſius, nihil apud Deum beatius: Nothing more odious with men, nothing more bleſſed with God, ſaith Auguſtine. But what gift is this, may you ſay, when the Prieſthood was ſetled in Aarons houſe before? I anſwer, to renew a free gift, I meane the promiſe of a free gift, is a mercy, Gen. 22. Againe, although it was promiſed to Aaron and his ſonnes, yet no neceſſity that it ſhould light upon Phinehas. Therefore ſee the firſt of *Maccab.*2.54.&c. Where by everlaſting Prieſthood ſome have thought that God promiſed his poſterity ſhould not faile. If you object that Abiathar was put out, and Sadock put in: ſome anſwer, that haply Sadock, as well as Abiathar, was a firſt borne of the houſe of Phinehas. And when hee ſaith, My Covenant of peace: It is as if he had ſaid, Phinehas and his poſterity ſhall in peace and proſperity enjoy the Prieſts office.

5 Note againe, how hee that is zealous muſt have the Prieſts office. Not the richer, but the more zealous is a Prieſt for God. A happy world if in all elections true zeale might bee more reſpected, &c.

Ioh. 11. whereſoever this Goſpel.

6 The names of this wicked man and wanton woman be by Gods direction here laid downe. Zimri the ſonne of Salu, Prince of the family of the Simeonites, and Cozbi the daughter of Zur, who was Head over the people of his fathers houſe. Learne we how there is a memory for Vertue, glorious and good, and there is a during memory alſo for Wickedneſſe and Sinne, which is a heavy remembrance. Theſe two were blots to all their friends, and ſo be many to their whole Houſe. A good motive for Parents to bee carefull of the education of their children, that if God pleaſe, they may live well and die well, leaving no blemiſh behinde them to themſelves or any, &c.

7 They were both noble, and yet not exempted from the wrath of God. God is no reſpecter of perſons: Gods Vice-gerents, the Magiſtrates, ſhould learne in juſtice to doe the like, and not to take the little Bees, and to let the greater breake through. Potentes potenter tormenta patientur: Great perſons ſhall have great puniſhments with God; and with men they muſt have none, but doe what they liſt, wringing and wronging whom they liſt. But will this juſtice ſtand before God, the great Judge, when he ſhall call it into account? How much ſafer for themſelves, and better for the State were it throughout all Chriſtian governments, if men would follow the example of God, and doe Juſtice indifferently to great and ſmall? No gifts can corrupt him, neither will the zeale of Phinehas regard of what condition they bee, but what they doe againſt the Lord, &c.

Verſe 17. 8 Againe the Lord ſaid to Moſes; Vex the Midianites and ſmite them, for they trouble you with their wiles, &c. God in his word forbiddeth revenge, how then doth he here command it? Anſwer may be made, that God no where forbiddeth ſimply revenge, but ſuch revenge as proceedeth from mans carnall affections. Qui igitur recto & compoſito Dei zelo ad pœnam expetendam agitur, non ſui ipſius cauſam, ſed Dei agendam ſuſcipit: Whoſoever therefore is led to puniſh a fault with a right zeale to God, he doth not take his owne cauſe in hand, but Gods.

9 Laſtly, let us learne to account them our greateſt enemies who leade us to offend God: for theſe make a ſeparation betwixt God and us, deprive us of his love, and conſequently of eternall comfort and ſalvation. Were we owners of the whole world, and ſhould be robbed of it, yet would not this loſſe be like the former. For what is this life to eternity, or all the comforts of this life to this everlaſting joy? What will the whole world profit a man if he loſe his ſoule, ſaith Wiſdome it ſelfe? The damned rich man in hell, would have given many worlds, if hee had beene owner of them, for one drop of water to coole his tongue. But alas if wee have any for friends deare unto us in theſe dayes, they are thoſe that leade us to hell, by deviſing wayes to ſin, by flattering us when wee ſinne, and lulling us ever on ſleepe, till the long and laſt ſleepe come. Theſe are they that our ſoules delight in, that wee are never weary of, that are merry and pleaſant, making us ever merry when they are with us. I cannot ſay that in this point that many will not adde unto it much more. The Prophet is the worſt enemy that Ahab had, and therefore he crieth, Haſt thou found me mine enemy? But Ieſabel his wife that drew him to evill, that killed the innocent man for his Vineyard, that brought to confuſion him and his, ſo that the world yet remembreth their wickedneſſe, and Gods judgements upon them for it, ſhe was no enemy but a friend, yea a great friend, that would get him that which he longed for, were it never ſo wickedly gotten. Thus may we profit by this Chapter: And God in mercy bleſſe it unto us.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXVI.

REembring with my ſelfe for whom chiefly I write; namely, for ſuch as cannot uſe better helpes, and yet are deſirous to taſte the ſweetneſſe of the Word: I cannot ſee any cauſe why I ſhould ſtand upon Names and Pedegrees, but ſtill goe on with what may ſerve for moſt edification.

In the beginning of this Booke they were numbred; and now here againe they muſt be numbred: Men are numbred, Removes are numbred, Perils, Puniſhments, and Bleſſings are numbred: ſo that aptly the Booke is called the Booke of Numbers. In this Chapter wee may obſerve two points:

{ When this numbring was.
{ Why it was.

Touching the circumſtance of time When, it was after God had laid his hand upon many of them, and taken them away for their diſobediences to him, ſome one way, ſome another: which partly made ſhew the cauſe of numbring, even to declare his care of thoſe that remained, to their comfort, and praiſe of his great goodneſſe and mercy. The Money-monger often telleth, and is ſtill making his Reckonings, ſhewing thereby his care of thoſe matters, and that not onely his head, but even his heart is upon them. Did wee ſo recount with our ſelves the benefits and favours of God, as that our often reckoning them might ſhew our heads and hearts to bee upon him and his goodneſſe, it were a thing worthy men and women that feare God indeed; then might we pray the better with him that ſaid it, Domine Deus jube me in numeris tuis inveniri; Lord God grant that I may bee found in thy numbers. Surely let him ſtill bee found in our numbrings and reckonings, and as wee live, wee may be aſſured hee will vouchſafe us a place in his: but if wee exclude him with his continuall favours to us, why ſhould not hee exclude us when we would moſt gladly be included? Other cauſes may be alledged; as ſecondly, when he ſaith, From twenty yeeres old and above: Wee well underſtand hee had an eye to warre, that their ſtrength and fitneſſe that way might be knowne to the Ruler and Magiſtrate. So this numbring was as a Muſter-booke among us, and teacheth us that ſo wee number not as David, with pride and confidence in multitude of men; numbring or muſtering is lawfull: nay, it is ſo neceſſary, that Imployments and Services cannot bee done without it. A third cauſe, to keepe the Tribes diſtinct in regard of Chriſt who was to come of the Tribe of Iuda. A fourth cauſe, to ſhew the truth of that Threat, Numb. 14.22. that not one of thoſe that ſo offended God ſhould enter into the Land of Promiſe: for at this numbring it was found, that not one of them was alive. Laſtly, to ſhew, that though ſo many were cut off, yet his promiſe to Abraham ſhould be true, His ſeed ſhould be as the ſtarres of Heaven.

2 For further uſe to us, we may learne, that to preſerve Pedegrees is very lawfull, being done moderately, for a civill uſe, in Titles of Land, and ſuch like, not vainely puffed with deſcent, nor dotingly ſeeking to carry them further, than there could be any uſe of, if we certainly did know them. Maximilian is ſaid to have done ſo: and when his wiſe and grave Counſell could not prevaile with him, his Foole did, by bidding him ſearch no further, for feare hee proved his coſin, and of his blood. A more bleſſed ſtudy it is to ſearch out our names in the booke of Life, and to finde both our ſelves and our friends there written. Againe, we may obſerve the certaintie of Gods Judgements, if they bee not averted by repentance: For as hee ſware in his wrath, That they ſhould never enter into his Reſt, and it came ſo to paſſe; even in like manner ſhall his Threats, ſo little ſet by, and ſo lightly weighed, fall upon all ſcorners, and ſcoffers, and prophane perſons whatſoever. The men died in the Wilderneſſe, and never ſaw the Lords Reſt: ſo ſhalt thou in the wilderneſſe of this world, and never ſee Heaven. Let mercy be ſhewed to the wicked (ſaith the Prophet) yet hee will not learne righteouſneſſe; in the Land of uprightneſſe will hee doe wickedly, and will not behold the Majeſty of the Lord: O Lord, they will not behold thy high hand, but they ſhall ſee it, and be confounded with the zeale of the people, and the fire of thine enemies ſhall devoure them. Thoſe Horſes, Angels, Viols, Trumpets, and Mill-ſtones, ſpoken of in the Apocalyps, note out the judgements of God, and the ſeverall wayes he hath to deſtroy by: In ſhort, he ſaith, No uncleane thing ſhall ever enter into that bleſſed Place: Fearefull things, if wee have feeling; but to a reprobate heart nothing is fearefull.

3 Vnto theſe (ſaith God) ſhall the Land be divided for an inheritance, according to the number of Names, &c. To theſe (I ſay) being not they that were firſt called out of Egypt, but a ſecond Off-ſpring, as it were, from thoſe: An application whereof one maketh thus; As they were called out of Egypt; ſo many of us out of ignorance and blindneſſe: but as they fell and never entred into Canaan; ſo many of us fall away, and for all our knowledge never come into Heaven. Ergo ſi in prima vocatus, cura ut in ſecunda numeratione inveniaris, ſcilicet eorum qui perſeverarunt: Therefore if thou beeſt, through Gods mercy, in the firſt number, take heed and give all diligence that thou mayeſt be found in the ſecond.

4 To many thou ſhalt give the more inheritance, and to few thou ſhalt give the leſſe, to every one according to his number, &c. Firſt (ſay ſome) as there was a difference here, ſo ſhall there bee in heaven: every mans glory ſhall not bee alike, and yet all full, and beyond the capacity of mans heart to conceive, or any tongue or penne to expreſſe. One ſtarre differeth from another in glory, (ſaith the Apoſtle) and hee that ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reape ſparingly; he that ſoweth plentifully, ſhall reape plentifully.

Secondly, here was a portion kept; If they were more perſons, they had more inheritance; if fewer, then had they leſſe. Now with us the rich get all, and the poore get none; no, not the going of a Cow, a Sheepe, a Pigge, or a Gooſe upon the Common: We forget that fearefull ſaying, Woe bee to them that joyne houſe to houſe, and land to land, till there be no place left for the poore, &c. But take heed that the Lord, who made the poore, remember it not in wrath, and yeeld us as little in heaven as we have yeelded the poore in earth.

Thirdly, by lot this diviſion was made, to avoid ſtrife and murmuring againſt Moſes: for who knoweth not how hard, or rather impoſſible, it had beene to pleaſe all this great Hoaſt of people, had not God taken it in hand, who directeth the lots (ſaith Salomon) that are caſt? Theſe earthly matters make great jarres many times, and ſo part friends, that they never love againe, but from teeth outward. He hath a bleſſing that leaſt medleth with them: for the Lord ſaw, that not Moſes himſelfe could pleaſe all, were he never ſo juſt, meeke, and void of partiall affection. Prov. 16.

The Levites had no inheritance as the reſt, the Lord graciouſly ſaying; I will be their inheritance my ſelfe. And they were numbred from a moneth old and above; noting, that we are fit for God before wee bee fit for the Worlds uſe, either in Warre or Peace. A thing for Parents earneſtly to marke, that they ſuffer not thoſe young yeeres of their children to be loſt, without inſtruction to God in Vertue and Religion, ſince this may bee done when nothing elſe can bee done. But O ſinne that crieth out againſt many in this point! Children ſwearing more in our dayes than any men did in better times; ſpeaking uncleane things without check, and lying, raylings, reviling neighbours abroad, and ſervants at home, without feare of any diſcipline. But ſuch a beginning makes ſuch an ending many times in the juſtice of God, as makes both Parents and themſelves, yea all their kindred, wiſh they had never beene borne. O let this ſincke into our hearts as we reade it, that God choſe his from a moneth old; thoſe that ſhould ſerve him more neerely than others, ſhould be numbred from a moneth old: a very young time you know. And let us think them worthy to periſh from the earth with ſhame, that never hold themſelves fit for God, untill the world hath done with them; till they bee old and impotent, ſicke and weake, not able to riot and ruffle, to ſweare and to ſwagger, as they were wont. Timothy was brought up in the Religion and the knowledge of God from a childe, and God hath cauſed it to bee written for the praiſe of ſuch Parents, and for an example to all the World, how they ſhould uſe their children. O bleſſed Grand-mother, and Mother, there ſpoken of, for their care of little Timothy! their memory ſhall not be put out while the world endureth; and they enjoy their reward in eternall bliſſe, with God that joyeth in ſuch education.

CHAP. XXVII.

The generall heads of this Chapter are three.

{ The Law for Inheritance.
{ Moſes ſeeing of the Land of Canaan.
{ Joſua appointed Governour in his place.

TOuching the firſt, note the Occaſion, note the Judgement. The occaſion is ſpecified in the former Chapter, and here againe repeated. In the former Chapter thus; And Zelophehad, the ſonne of Hepher, had no ſonnes, but daughters, &c. yet theſe daughters there numbred as well as men: A great comfort to women, that they alſo are in Gods reckonings, accounts, and numbers. In this Chapter it is ſaid: Then came the daughters of Zelophehad, the ſonne of Hepher, &c. and ſtood before Moſes and before Eleazar the Prieſt, and before the Princes and all the Aſſembly, at the doore of the Tabernacle of the Congregation ſaying; Our Father died in the wilderneſſe, and had no ſons, wherefore ſhould the name of our Father be taken away from among his family, becauſe he hath no ſonne? Give us a poſſeſſion among the brethren of our Father. Where note how carefull they are of a place among the people of God in the earthly Canaan, which was a type of the heavenly: Ought not all to bee as carefull for that heavenly? yes, and more carefull. So (no doubt) doubt) are Gods children, when their eyes bee opened, and by name women: for although many are busied about attires and vaine shewes, to make them pleasing to men, yet others doe seeke by all meanes for that eternall rest, and how to be pleasing to God; which is the onely good and perfect way: Favour is deceitfull, and beauty is vanity, but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Prov. 31. 30.

2. Observe how these daughters goe not up and downe from Tent to Tent, from one to another, tatling, and pratling, murmuring, and complaining, but directly they goe to the Magistrate, and there exhibit their desire, waiting for relieſe and order from him: so should all men doe, not marring a good cause with ill handling. Being come to him, see how modestly and womanly they propound their matter, without any unfitting word of choler or anger, or any unseemely behaviour any way. See againe how wisely they prevent an objection that might have beene made of their Father, That haply he was one of those Rebels that tooke part with Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, and so perished. No, say they, Our Father died in the Wilderness, and he was not among the Assembly of them that were assembled against the Lord in the company of Corah, but died in his sin; that is, as all sinners must: for death is the reward of sin, &c. Where you may see, what a comfort, what a credit and glory honest parents be to their children: they leave a good name behind them, and it maketh their children bold to speake of them; when others must hang their heads and bluth either to mention them themselves, or heare them spoken of by others. A great motive to all parents, even for this cause, to be carefull of their cariage, &c.

The second part.

For the Judgement and Resolution of this request, see what your Chapter saith: Then Moses brought their cause before the Lord: And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, The daughters of Zelophehad speake right, &c. Before you see, that the cause was brought before Moses and Eleazar, and all the Princes: Such a conjunction there was of the Civill Magistrate and the Ecclesiasticall Minister together in hearing of causes, continued ever since, as appeareth in good Records of antiquity. But neither Moses nor Aaron speak, till they have received resolution from God, and understood his will. In like manner should it be still with all Judges; first, to know and understand, and then to judge: Wherein the Lord still is ayding and directing: although not by speaking, as to Moses, yet by his Spirit of Wisedome and Vnderstanding, of Counsell and Knowledge, men using the meanes, as they ought, of Learning and Prayer. Be wise ye Kings, and be learned ye that are Judges of the earth: For Prayer, if any lacke wisdome, let him aske of God, which giveth to all men liberally, and reproacheth no man, and it shall be given him, &c. Another use againe men may well make here, even a caveat to have but such causes, as if they be brought before God, may be approved, as this was of those daughters of Zelophehad. But alacke, should the most of our suits and controversies in these dayes be brought to this touch and triall, how impious, how hatefull, how vile, would they appeare? The all-holy God is offended with our brawles, much more with our wicked paines and charge to effect them and bring them to passe; That I may say nothing of them that plead them to the uttermost of their cunning, against their own conscience and knowledge: Is it not a grievous fault to justifie a wicked man, or to condemne an innocent man? And is it not so in causes? God give eyes and feeling. I say no more.

2. Gods answer you see now following: first particular, in regard of these women: The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: Thou shalt give them a possession to inherit among their Fathers brethren, and shalt turne the inheritance of thir father unto them. Then generally for a law to others; If a man dy, and have no Sonne, then ye shall turne his inheritance unto his daughter: and if he have no daughter, ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren: and if he have no brethren, ye shall give his inheritance unto his fathers brethren: and if his father have no brethren, ye shal give his inheritance unto his next kinsman of his family, and he shall possess it. And this shall be unto the Children of Israel a Law of Iudgement, (or an ordinance to judge by) as the Lord hath commanded Moses. In which gratious answer, these things may serve for our use. First, we may note, that God rejected not these women from having a place in his earthly Canaan, because so earnestly they sought it and desired it; and thereby gather comfort assured and infallible, that out of his heavenly Canaan hee never rejecteth any that are desirous to have place in it. For hee that commeth to me (saith he) I cast not away. God would not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should turne from his sinne and be saved. God would have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of his truth. And this God is no accepter of persons: but in every Nation he that feareth him, and worketh Righteousnes, is accepted of him: There is nether Iew nor Grecian, bond nor free, male nor female in this, but wee are all one in Christ Iesus. Exclude not then your selfe out of Canaan, and the Lord of mercy and goodnesse will not exclude you. Againe, wee may note how harsh this disinheriting of daughters, because we desire to continue the name, is. If God be pleased to continue the Land or Inheritance in our name, blessed be his will. If he be against it, and to that end end give no ſonne, but daughter, wee fight againſt one that is too ſtrong for us, in ſeeking by-wayes, contrary to his rule; and how can it pleaſe him? God raiſeth up Houſes, and putteth downe at his pleaſure; for the earth is his, and all that is in it. With his owne to do his will, who will controll and check him? Now, if hee doe this by a woman, why may he not? May hee raiſe a name by women inheritors, and may hee not change the Name againe when hee ſeeth good, by giving a daughter and no ſonne? Let us often thinke of the Pſalme in a religious feeling, and humble deſire to receive inſtruction from the Lord: They thinke their Houſes and their Habitations ſhall continue for ever, even from generation to generation, and call their Lands by their Names; but Man ſhall not continue in honor, he is like the beaſts that die: This their way uttereth their fooliſhneſs, yet their poſterity delight in their talke, &c.

3. We may note, how groſſely and grievouſly they erre, that condemne the government of women, when Crowne and Kingdomes, by lawfull deſcent, in the All-guiding providence of God, fall unto them. For be they not within this Law of God, that he ſaith ſhould be a Law of Iudgement, that is, a Law to iudge by of this matter for ever: If a man have no ſon, his inheritance ſhall deſcend unto his daughter?

The ſecond Part.

THe ſecond part of this Chapter now followeth in the twelfth verſe, to wit, the ſhewing of the Land of Promiſe to Moſes, and the telling him of his death, in theſe words: Againe the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, Go up into this Mount of Abarim, & behold the land which I have given unto the children of Iſrael: And when thou haſt ſeene it, thou ſhalt be gathered unto thy people alſo, as Aaron thy brother was gathered, &c. Both theſe points will come againe to be ſpoken of in the laſt Chapter of Deuteronomy: ſo that I might deferre them to that place, but becauſe I know not whether it may be the Lords good pleaſure to give me life and leave to goe ſo far in this courſe, I chooſe rather to touch them here, and to ſpare them there, if I come to it, than otherwiſe. Let us therefore, I pray you, even ſeriouſly and zealouſly pitch our minds upon theſe two points. Firſt then, Moſes here is not taken away ſuddenly, but is premoniſhed before, that he muſt away, and a time given him to prepare himſelf for it: A great and ſweet mercy of God to his children. Wherefore David prayeth heartily, Lord let me know my end, and the meaſure of my dayes what it is, let me know how long I have to live. And again, in another Pſalme, Teach me to number my daies, that I may apply my heart unto wiſdome. The Lord doth not this by expreſſe words, as here to Moſes, but by encreaſing weakeneſſe and infirmities upon us, by many yeares, by examples of others daily before our eyes, and many times by a ſecret inſtinct in our hearts, with arguments and circumſtances fitting to confirme it unto us. So that if wee bee unprepared, it is our fault that we carry no better an eye to the Lords dealings with us, no better a watch over our ſelves for ſtate of body and minde, nor make better uſe and application of things, as that often-repeated counſell in Scripture willeth us, ſaying, Watch, watch, for you know not at what houre the Maſter, the Bridegroome, &c. will come. Sweet is the Lord, and moſt gracious in his courſe. Let us not be wanting in ours, and all ſhall be well, the time never ſudden, the thing never fearefull, but as welcome as quiet ſleepe to a wearied and over-wearied body. A ſudden death to a man prepared is no hurt, for the word of God is firme and immutable. He that beleeveth ſhall be ſaved. No man taketh my ſheep out of my hands: There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus, which walke not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit. Againe, Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? Shall Tribulation, or Anguiſh, or Perſecution, or Famine, or Nakedneſſe, or Perill, or Sword? No, no: for I am perſwaded, that neither Death nor Life (no not ſudden Death) nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor Height, nor Depth, nor any other Creature, ſhal be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. Now if none of theſe, certainly not ſudden death, as I ſaid before. And therefore well ſaith the Booke of Wiſdome concerning the godly, That though he be prevented with death, yet ſhall he be in reſt, &c. It is ſaid that Saint Iohn died of an Apoplexie, and Polycarpus wiſhed he might doe the like: yet we uſually pray againſt ſudden death, both in regard of the raſh iudgement of the world, and many mens negligence in preparing themſelves for all houres: But I ſay againe, to one that hath laid his ground-worke well, it is no hurt, bleſſed be God. And for the iudgements of men, too raſh uſually both in this and other things, the Life before, and the profeſſion and confeſſion of a true Faith, ought to give all men ſatisfaction; if not, let them remember that ſaying well, Who art thou that judgeſt another mans ſervant? he ſtandeth and falleth to his owne Maſter and Lord. To the wicked (indeed) that have wallowed in ſinne without feeling, ſudden death is fearefull; either in Warre, when a bullet taketh him, or in Sea, when he is drowned, or any other way whatſoever: when Ammon is nayled to the wall by his brother Abſolon ſuddenly, when Pharaoh and his company bee drowned in the Sea, Baltaſar, Antiochus, the rich Glutton, and ſuch like.

2. But though Moſes bee not ſuddenly taken away, yet away he goeth: It is very true; and ſo muſt all fleſh: therefore let us reckon of it, The reward of ſin is death; and ſince all fleſh is ſinfull, to all it is appointed once to dye, Hebr. 9. Hodie an cras, iturum eſt, debitum eſt, reddendum eſt; Whether it be to day or to morrow, it muſt be, it will be, a debt it is, and muſt be payed, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, Hodie mihi, cras tibi, I to day, you to morrow, till wee be all gone: Nothing more uncertaine than the time, nothing more certaine than the thing. They that lived ſo many hundred yeeres, of every one it is ſaid, & mortuus eſt, and he dyed: The longeſt time had an end, and at laſt Death knocked for him, he muſt away. And as no Time, ſo no Vertue can avoid Death; but even Moſes himſelfe, as worthy a man as the earth hath carried, muſt die. If any man marvell at this, Why ſuch men ſhould die, ſince Sinne, which is the cauſe of Death, is pardoned and forgiven them through faith in Chriſt; let him know, that this is done for two cauſes: firſt, for thoſe reliques of ſinne and corruption which hang upon us, and by death muſt be purged and taken cleane away, God then perfecting that ſanctification which was begunne before. Secondly, that we might be made conformable to our Head Chriſt Ieſus, who as he by death overcame death, and roſe from death to life, ſo muſt wee by him. Both which ends yeeld us great comfort, becauſe they ſhew, that death is not laid upon the Elect as a puniſhment, but as a mercie vouchſafed by a ſweet Father for the ends named.

ſo

3 But before he die, and paſſe this way of all fleſh, God will have him goe into the Mountaine, and ſee the Land of Promiſe. This was done in ſweet goodneſſe, that with more readie will he might make an end: And aſſuredly, thus dealeth God with his loving children at their latter end, even give them a glimpſe, a ſight, and taſte of the true Land of Promiſe, that heavenly Canaan, which hee hath prepared for them after death. But as Moſes, to ſee this pleaſing ſight, muſt aſcend up into the Mountaine, ſo muſt wee raiſe up, and lift up our hearts, our ſoule, our thoughts, and the eyes of our mindes, as it were, aloft into an high Mountaine, that ſo wee may ſee what will make us moſt willing to depart, that our joy may bee both full and endleſſe. That Moſes entred not, but onely ſaw it, had two ends: Firſt, the puniſhment of his incredulitie when he ſtrucke the Rock, ſpoken of in ſome verſes of your Chapter; and ſecondly for Myſtery: Vt ſignificet nos per Legem cujus Miniſter fuit Moſes, vitam & ſalutẽ æternam eminus quaſi aſpicere, ſed ad eam per illam non ingredi propter corruptionem naturæ noſtræ, qua fit ut legem non impleamus, qua non impleta aditus nobis ad vitam præcluditur, That it might ſignifie, that by the Law, whereof Moſes was Miniſter, we may ſee, as it were a farre off, eternall life and ſalvation, but never enter into it that way, becauſe through corruption of our natures wee are not able to performe it; which being not performed, ſhutteth us out, and ſubjecteth us to a curſe.

4 That Moſes ſo readily went up into the Mountaine to die, is an example before our eyes of moſt ſingular obedience: for he grudged not, he grieved not, hee ſhrunk not back, but yeelded to Gods bleſſed pleaſure, as was moſt willing and ready to die. O that wee may finde grace and mercie with God ſo to doe when time commeth, ſaying with tongue, and ſaying with heart, Behold, here am I thy ſervant, bee it unto me as thou my bleſſed God wilt: Is my time come, and I muſt away? Lord then I come, and deſire to be looſed, and to bee with thee. Againe, that Moſes endureth ſo patiently the denyall of him to enter into the Land, which no doubt he much deſired: let it ever teach us and ſtrengthen us to do the like, when God denyeth us our deſires; for aſſuredly God will do better for us, as here he did for Moſes, if wee reſt in his good pleaſure. It is a true ſaying, it is a good ſaying, let it never go out of our minds: Semper Deus ſuos exaudit, ſi non ad voluntatem, tamen ad ſalutem; God alwaies heareth his children, if not unto their will, yet unto their ſalvation and good.

5. Obſerve it againe carefully, that death is not mentioned unto Moſes in any terrible words, but in ſweet words; Ibis ad Patres, thou ſhalt go to thy Fathers. And ſo ſtill is the death of Beleevers ſpoken of in the Scripture, that we might draw ſweet comfort from it againſt any feare, that fraile fleſh may conceive of death. For there is a death which moſt men feare; and that is the ſeparation of body and ſoule, our naturall death: and there is a death which too few feare; and that is the ſeparation of the ſoule from God. Vita corporis anima, vita animæ Deus, The life of the body is the ſoule, and the life of the ſoule is God. Againſt this naturall feare, oppoſe this and the like phraſes in Scripture. You go to the Fathers, therefore feare not. Socrates a Heathen was greatly comforted at his death, that hee ſhould goe and meet with thoſe learned Poets, Orpheus, Homer, Heſiod, and ſuch like: How much more may we joy to goe meet with God the Father, God the Sonne, and God the Holy Ghoſt; with Angels, Arch-angels, Patriarkes, Prophets, Apoſtles, and all the company of Heaven: our Fathers, our Mothers, our Siſters and Brothers, our Friends and deare ones, that are gone before us? O glorious ſight and ineſtimable comfort, worthy to make us cry with the Apoſtle; I deſire to be looſed, and to be there, Come Lord Ieſus, come quickly. Death is an end of all miſery, and the beginning of all bliſſe. and eternall dwelling with God, a gaine, and an advantage; as the Apoſtle nameth it, A ſweet ſleepe, a comfortable reſt: Vitæ via, the way of life, ſaith Ambroſe, Nomen tantum fidelibus, Death is onely a bare name, and no death indeed to the faithfull, ſaith Chryſoſtome: Nemo timet mortem, niſi qui non ſperat vivere poſt mortem: No man feareth death, but he that hopeth not to live after death.

death. The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away, life as well as goods; and ſhall not we ſay with Iob, Bleſſed be the Name of the Lord? If wee hold for terme of yeeres, or at the will of the lord, muſt we not be content to relinquiſh it when our terme is expired? We our ſelves looke for it at our Tenants hands, and would be much offended if they ſhould be diſobedient. Shall we not performe to God what wee looke for at men? Grudge not the loſſe, but bee thankefull for the loane: Wee are Gods Tenants, and wee ought to give his owne when it is due to him. Would you keepe a Pledge from the true Owner, that committed it to you for a time? Our life is Gods pledge, he hath left it with us now ſo long; hee ever intended to call for it againe, and will you not reſtore it gladly and willingly, without murmuring and repining? Think how you would like that at mans hand? Heathens have beene ſtrong, and ſhall Chriſtians be weake? The Swanne is ſaid to ſing moſt ſweetly when ſhe muſt die, and ſhall Gods children weepe? Bleſſed, bleſſed are the dead which die in the Lord (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) and will wee not beleeve him? O ignaros malorum ſuorum, quibus mors non ut optimum inventum naturæ laudatur; O ignorant men of the miſeries of this life, that doe not eſteeme and praiſe Death as the beſt invention of Nature! yea, let us ſay rather, as the great mercy and goodneſſe of God toward man: for it expelleth Calamity, it includeth Felicity, it preventeth the perills of Youth, it finiſheth the toyles of Age: Omnibus finis, multis remedium, nonnullis votum; To all an end, to many a remedie, to ſome a wiſh, deſerving better of none than of them to whom he commeth before he be called for. As children feare their friends when they are diſguiſed, but when the vizard is plucked off, are glad of them; ſo of Death, ignorance makes feare, and knowledge joy. Cleombrotus (ſaith Cicero) after he had read Platoes Book of the happy eſtate of the dead, caſt himſelfe headlong off from a wall into the Sea, that he might come to that happineſſe. The ſame Authour ſpeaketh of another Philoſopher, that ſo diſputed of the contempt of death, that many willingly killed themſelves. Whereupon Ptolomy the King forbad him any more to ſpeake of that matter in his Schoole. Now alack, what compariſon betwixt Philoſophicall comforts and Divine, out of the treaſure of Gods owne wiſdedome taken in his written word? Shall we then with our light feare that which they in their darkneſſe ſo little regarded? God forbid. The day of our birth we never feare, and the day of death (ſaith God, that is ever true) is better than the day that one is borne.

That reſemblance of death to ſleepe in Scripture, is moſt fit, if you marke it, and full of pleaſure: for as no man can ever wake, but of neceſſity muſt ſometimes ſleepe; ſo no man can ever live, but muſt needs have a time to die.

Secondly be a man never ſo ſtrong, ſleepe doth tame him, and ſo will Death.

Thirdly, as ſleepe maketh us put off our cloathes, and jewels, and that willingly, that we may take our reſt; ſo dealeth Death with us, and taketh from us all our pompe and port, and layeth us downe in our bed, till the waking time come to ariſe.

Fourthly, as ſleepe commeth of eating, ſo came Death alſo to our firſt Parents.

Fiftly, as our dayes doings are our nights troubles, ſo are our lifes ſins our deaths griefes.

Sixtly, ſleepers have no ſtormes, nor dead men know the worlds woes: Some fall ſuddenly or quickly on ſleepe, and ſome are long; even ſo, ſome die ſooner and later, as pleaſeth God: Some ſleepe in their owne houſes, and ſome in other mens; ſome in the fields, ſome at Sea; ſome here, ſome there, in many places: ſo doe wee die, ſome at home, and ſome abroad; ſome by land, ſome by ſea, as God appointeth.

No man can tell the very time that he falleth on ſleepe, but onely feeleth it comming, and his body diſpoſed to it: ſo no man can tell the very moment of his death, but only feeleth his body faint, and his ſpirits drawing to an end. Suavius dormiunt qui relinquunt curas in calceis; They ſleepe much better (ſaith one) that leave all their cares in their ſhooes which they put off, and goe to reſt with a quiet minde: Even ſo doe they die better, that have diſpoſed all their worldly matters by Will, or otherwiſe, whereby they are not trobled or diſtracted by them.

They ſleepe well againe that have laboured and taken paines in the day time; and ſo they die well, that in their vocation have not beene idle, but applied both body and minde to doe good. Aſſuerus when he could not ſleepe, called for the Chronicles of his Kingdome to bee read unto him: and aſſuredly, whileſt we wake in this world, and the ſleepe of death commeth not upon us, it ſhall bee a moſt profitable thing to reade, or cauſe to bee read unto us the Chronicles of God, the ſacred and holy Scriptures, the treaſures of all comfort and good inſtructions.

When the body ſleepeth, the ſoule ſleepeth not; no more dyeth the ſoule when the body dyeth.

No man goeth to bed to ſleepe ever, but with a hope and purpoſe to wake and riſe againe: ſo muſt wee die in aſſurance of that great and generall Reſurrection; and as our voice and calling upon men awake them, ſo ſhall that ſounding Trumpe doe in that day. Our bed (ſaith another) is the image of our grave; the cloathes that cover us, of the duſt and earth caſt upon us; the little Flea that biteth, of the Wormes that ſhall conſume us; the Cocke that croweth, of the laſt Trumpe: and as (ſaith hee) I riſe up luſtily when ſluggiſh ſleepe is paſt, ſo hope I to riſe joyfully to Iudgement at the laſt. How fitly then Death and Sleepe be reſembled together, you ſee.

6 But you may haply wiſh to know what may make you die willingly and gladly when Gods time commeth. Fleſh being fraile, and an enemy ſtill to the Spirit, till God ſubdue it: your deſire herein is good, and hearken a little to theſe things.

If Death be a ſleepe, as you heare the Scripture ſtill call it, for our comfort; then looke what maketh men goe to ſleepe gladly without any feare, and the ſame ſhall greatly helpe us to die contentedly and chearefully.

The firſt thing is wearineſſe or paine of body: for in this caſe you know how willingly wee goe to reſt, and how heartily we wiſh we were on ſleepe. Apply it to Death: If you either be weary of the toyles and troubles of this wretched life; of the diſhoneſt courſes that are uſed in it; and of the infinite trickes, ſinfull and vile before God and good men; or if you be in any paine, either of the whole, or any part of your body, not to bee eaſed and helped by the art of man: how, in ſuch caſe is death welcome, and of right ſo ſhould bee, much more than ſleepe; for ſleepe eaſeth but for a time, and death for ever both theſe caſes: Sleepe taketh not away the malady, but the feeling; Death taketh both away, and (as I ſay) for ever.

The diſeaſes of the body, how many, how ſtrange, how fearefull, who can number them, when daily happen new that the Phyſitians know not? Sweet Death is a Superſedeas for all, curing what we have, and preventing what we might have, ſhould God ſo be pleaſed to lay them upon us. Thinke therefore ſeriouſly of this one meanes to make death welcome, and aſſuredly you ſhall be the better.

A ſecond thing that maketh us willing to goe to our naturall ſleepe, is griefe, and anguiſh of minde; ſorow and woe of heart: And will not this alſo make us die willingly? Surely even ſo much more than the former, by how much griefe of minde exceedeth any griefe of body. The croſſes by foes, the croſſes by friends, the diſobedience of children, the unfaithfulneſſe of ſervants, publike woes, and private woes, in goods, in name, and many waies, they are more bitter than gall and wormewood, more burning and biting than tongue can expreſſe; now ſcalding, now cooling the oppreſſed heart, groaning and ſighing, panting and pining away in the view and ſight of all beholders. The number ſo great that no man can comprehend them, every day begetting new griefes of minde, as well as new paines and diſeaſes of bodies: Thinke with your ſelves whether ever you eſcaped day in your life without ſome diſcontent, greater or leſſe, that according to his meaſure bit you, and grieved you. It is Vallis lacrymarum, the vale of miſery that we live in, and from one miſery or other we ſhall never be free while we live in it. Saint Auguſtine ſaid it upon ſome feeling, Diu vivere eſt diu torqueri, long to live, is long to be vexed and tormented. The holy Prophet went a dayes journey into the Wilderneſſe, and ſate downe under a Iuniper tree, deſiring that hee might die, and ſaying, It is enough, O Lord, take my ſoule, for I am no better than my fathers. See how griefe of minde made this holy man willing to die, and moſt welcome ſhould that good will of God have beene to him, if ſo it had pleaſed the giver and taker away of life, to doe with him. And unto theſe words, the like words in Tobiah, Deale with me, O Lord, as ſeemeth beſt unto thee, and command my ſpirit to be taken from me, that I may be diſſolved and become earth: for it is better for me to dy than to live, becauſe I have heard falſe reproches, and am ſorowfull. Command therefore that I may be diſſolved out of this diſtreſſe, and goe into the everlaſting place, turne not away thy face from mee. See the effect of ſorrow and griefe of minde in this good man againe; It maketh him moſt willing and deſirous to die. It is written of Babylas Biſhop of Antioch, ſlaine by Decius that perſecuting Emperor, that going to his death he ſaid the words of the Pſalme, Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoule, for the Lord hath been beneficiall unto thee: an excellent place for ſuch a time, as if hee ſhould have ſaid; Now my griefes farewell, and all my woes & wrongs in this wicked world: And now my ſoule be chearefull and glad, for now commeth thy reſt, thy ſure reſt, thy ſweet reſt, thy never-fading reſt, but eternall for ever: therefore returne unto it, O wearied ſoule, and give God praiſe and thanks, for he hath beene beneficiall unto thee in this moſt gracious change, and happy releaſe. Conclude with the words of wiſe Syrach, and remember them often, O death! how bitter is the remembrance of thee to a man that liveth at reſt in his poſſeſſions, unto the man that hath nothing to vexe him, and that hath proſperity in all things, &c. But againe, O death how acceptable is thy judgement unto the needfull, and unto him whoſe ſtrength faileth, and that is now in the laſt age, and is vexed with all things, &c. Feare not the judgement of death, remember them that have beene before thee, and that come after. It is the ordinance of the Lord over all fleſh, and why wouldeſt thou bee againſt the pleaſure of the moſt High? whether it be ten, or an hundred, or a thouſand yeeres, there is no defence for life againſt the grave.

A third reaſon that maketh men willing to ſleepe naturally, is the good that commeth both to body and minde by ſuch ſleepe, it chearing and refreſhing, gladding and comforting both. Let the ſame reaſon alſo make us willing to die, for death will miniſter much more comfort, chearing and refreſhing, and that for ever, as ſhall bee ſaid. The braſen Serpent cured the beholders, and had no ſting: ſo doth Death, and hath no ſting neither: that it cureth and helpeth all evils, you know, becauſe it is finis omnium malorum, the end of all evils; and it hath no ſting, you are taught when you reade thoſe words, O death where is thy ſting, O grave where is thy victory? The ſting of death is ſin, and the ſtrength of ſin is the Law: but thanks be to God which hath given us victory through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Mors Chriſti mors mortis meæ; The death of Chriſt is the death of my death, ſaith Bernard. O death I will be thy death, ſaith he by the Prophet. And Hierom upon it; Illius morte tu mortuus es, illius morte nos vivimus, devoraſti & devorata es, &c. By his death thou art dead, by his death wee live, thou haſt devoured, and art devoured thy ſelfe. Death maketh duſt returne to the earth as it was, and the ſpirit to returne to God that gave it, ſaith the word of God; and ſhall not wee be glad of this? Shall it grieve us to returne to God, to have the ſpirit go from whence it came, to walk with God, to enter into life, to go to the mariage of the Lambe? Is the brute Oxe grieved to be unyoked? Were Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, holy men, or holy women, ever unwilling? Wherefore, if men deſire naturall ſleepe, in regard of the good that commeth by it; ſo doe you death, and chearefully from your heart ſay with old Simeon, Lord now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace, &c.

you

A fourth cauſe making men willing, without feare, to ſleepe naturally, is that aſſured hope which they have to awake and riſe againe: And ſhall not you doe ſo from the ſleepe of Death? Why then ſhould we ſhrinke more at one than at the other? We ſhall riſe againe: for Chriſt our Head is riſen, and the members muſt follow. If the dead be not raiſed, then is Chriſt not riſen, &c. as you reade in that ſingular Chapter. The Sunne ſetteth, and riſeth againe; the Moone waneth, and groweth againe; of the aſhes of the old Phœnix commeth another; the Leafe falleth, and the Sappe deſcendeth, yet both Sappe and Leafe returne againe. Sarahs wombe, though dead, yet beareth a ſonne when the Lord will: ſo, ſo, ſhall the reſurrection be of dead bodies. The hand of the Lord was upon me (ſaith the Prophet) and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and ſet me down in the middeſt of a field which was full of bones; and he led me round about by them, and behold there were very many in the open field, and loe they were very dry: And he ſaid unto me, Sonne of Man, can theſe bones live? And I anſwered, O Lord God thou knoweſt. Againe he ſaid unto mee, Propheſie upon theſe bones, and ſay unto them: O yee dry bones, heare the word of the Lord, Thus ſaith the Lord God unto theſe bones: Behold I will cauſe breath to enter into you, and ye ſhall live; and I will lay ſinewes upon you, and make fleſh grow upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath into you, that yee may live, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord. So I propheſied as I was commanded, and as I propheſied, there was a noiſe, and behold there was a ſhaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone; and when I behela, loe the ſinewes and the fleſh grew upon them, and above the skinne covered them, but there was no breath in them. Then ſaid he unto me, Propheſie unto the Winde, Propheſie ſonne of man, and ſay to the Winde: Thus ſaith the Lord God Come from the foure Windes, O breath, and breathe upon theſe ſlaine, that they may live. So I propheſied as hee had commanded mee, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and ſtood up upon their feet an exceeding great army.

Such an other excellent place as this, is that in the Apocalyps: I ſaw a great white Throne, and one that ſate on it, from whoſe face fled away both the earth and the heaven, and their place was no more found. And I ſaw the dead, both great and ſmall, ſtand before God, and the Bookes were opened, and another Booke was opened, which is the Booke of Life, and the dead were judged of thoſe things which were written in the Bookes, according to their workes. And the Sea gave up her dead which were in her, and Death and Hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their workes.

Thus you ſee, that as from our naturall ſleepe, ſo from Death wee ſhall awake againe, and therfore no cauſe to feare the one more than the other: Reſurrectio mortuorum ſpes Chriſtianorum, The Reſurrection of the dead is the hope of Chriſtians, ſaith Tertullian; meaning their joyfull Hope, that wipeth away all teares and unwillingneſſe to die. Credo Reſurrectionem carnis, I beleeve the Reſurrection of the body, and life everlaſting. Therefore Care, away; though I die, yet I die not, but onely ſleepe in my grave, as in my chamber, till my God ſend his Angell to awake me with his Trumpe, that I may enter into joy that never ſhall have end. Till which time I reſt free from all ſorrow and paine, not troubled with any of the worlds woes, but as a man in his bed faſt on ſleepe, moſt free from all offences and vexations: yea, even the ſelfe-ſame body ſhall riſe to our unſpeakable comfort, teach the Scriptures, Iob 19.25. and in many other places. Whereupon ſaith Tertullian; Dixerunt tactis corporibus, credimus reſurrectionem carnis hujus, hujus bonitas Dei gloriam vult dare illi corpori quod glorificavit eum: Ille idem oculus, os, auris, pes, manus, &c. They ſaid, touching or laying their hands upon the bodies; Wee beleeve the reſurrection of this body, this body that I touch and lay my hand upon: for the goodneſſe of God will give glory to that body, that hath given glory to him, the ſelfe-ſame eye, the ſelfe-ſame mouth, the ſelfe-ſame eare, feete, hands, &c. What an encouragement is this to doe well, if you marke it? And what an argument to make us willing to die? being aſſured of this, as we are.

The fifth and laſt cauſe, that maketh us willing to goe to our naturall Reſt without feare, muttering, or any diſcontent, is the chearefulneſſe and livelineſſe of body and minde, that uſeth to follow after ſleepe both to body and minde, being refreſhed thereby ſo greatly. Let the ſame cauſe make us willing to die: for there is no compariſon betwixt the comfort and refreſhing freshing that naturall sleepe worketh, and that which followeth after death: When he shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himselfe: when this corruptible hath put on incorruptible, and this mortall hath put on immortality. If that small glympse which the Disciples saw, made them wish for three Tabernacles, and an eternall being there: O how shall the whole glory of Heaven, and Heavens blisse ravish us, and make us glad that we have attained to it! No such refreshing can come from our earthly beds and naturall sleep here. Wherefore with joy let us welcome the houre of death, and blesse God for it ten thousand times; following the footsteps of worthy Fathers and Saints in the Church, whose feeling of this point God hath directed them to leave behinde them in their Writings. O tu vita quam præparavit Deus iis qui diligunt eum, vita vitalis, vita beata, vita secura, vita tranquilla, vita pulchra, &c. vita ignara mortis, nescia tristitiæ, vita sine labe, sine dolore, sine anxietate, sine corruptione, sine perturbatione, sine varietate & mutatione, &c. utinam deposita carnis sarcina in tua gaudia intrarem: O thou Life (saith Saint Augustine) prepared of God for them that love him; thou living Life, thou blessed Life, thou secure Life, thou quiet Life, thou beautifull Life, thou Life that knowest no Death, thou Life that knowest no sadnesse, thou Life without blot, without sorrow, without care, without corruption, without perturbation, without any variety or change. Would God that laying aside this burden of my flesh, I might enter into thy joyes: O quam fortunatus ero si audivero jucundissimas Civium tuorum cantilenas, carmina melliflua, &c. sed & nimium fœlix si ego ipse meruero cantare Canticum Domino Iesu Christo de dulcibus Canticis Sion: O happy shall I bee if I might heare those sweet Songs of thy Citizens, and those honey-sweet Verses; but O more happy, if I my selfe may finde grace and favour to sing a Song unto the Lord Iesu Christ, of the sweete Songs of Sion. O verè fœlices qui de pelago ad littus, de exilio ad Patriam, de carcere ad Palatium, &c. O truely happy they that come out of the Sea of the World to that Haven of Heaven; out of Banishment, to their owne Countrey; and out of a foule Prison, to a glorious Palace. O cœlestis domus luminosa, ad te suspirat peregrinatio mea, ut possideat me in te qui fecit & me & te; O heavenly House, full of glorious Light, to thee tendeth my Pilgrimage, that hee may possesse mee in thee that made both mee and thee. Inter brachia Servatoris mei & vivere volo & mori cupio; In the armes of my Saviour I wish to live, and desire to die. Many such feeling speeches I could repeate out of the ancient and godly Fathers, shewing how farre they were from any unwillingnesse to die: which if wee make use of as wee ought, assuredly they will worke in us, through the blessing of God, to the same effect. Shut up this: The godly cry, Come Lord Iesu, come quickly: Now they are Wards, then they shall come to their owne; now they are in the skirmish, then shall they bee in the victory; now in the tempestuous Sea, then in the quiet Haven; now in the heate of the day, then in the rest and coole evening. Now in place absent from Christ, then with him following him whereſoever he goeth. Now their life is hid with Christ, but then shall they appeare with him in glory, and that glory for ever and ever without change or end. So I leave this point, having now shewed five chief motives not to be afraid of death, but to welcome it cheerefully when God pleaseth, as Moses did in this place.

7. From willingnesse to die, let us consider how wee may die well, another good point for Gods children to exercise themselves in, before the time come of weaknesse and departure.

First then if you will die well; often with your selfe remember death, and that you must away. Prævisa jacula minus lædunt: Darts that are fore-seene hurt lesse. That which so many cary in their rings, be carefull you to cary in your heart, Memento mori, Remember death. Often reade over that worthy Chapter of the wise Preacher: Remember thy Creator in the dayes of thy youth, whiles the evill day come not, nor the yeares approach wherein thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them, &c. That againe of wise Syrach forget not, Whatsoever thou takest in hand forget not the end, and thou shalt never doe amisse. Our blessed Saviour saith the same thing, which we must regard: Watch, for ye know neither the day nor the houre when the Son of Man will come. Fethers must be cast in the place of ashes, said the Law, and all our glory and port, be it never so great, should be ever tempered with remembrance of death: our glory resembled to the Fethers, and death to ashes, or the remembrance of death to the places of ashes. The Tombe that Ioseph of Arimathea had hewed out, and wherein hee put our blessed Saviour, was in his Garden, that amidst his pleasures he might remember his end, and that one day he must take leave of all worldly joyes.

Secondly, still, still, and ever cary in your breast a wounded heart for your transgressions: For the sacrifice of God is a troubled spirit; a broken and contrite heart he shall never despise. Many sweet waters may be made by the art of man, but never any so sweet as the sorrowfull teare that trickleth downe the cheeke of a penitent sinner. O make your bed then swimme with such sweet, and water your couch with such teares. Reade often the ninth of Ezra, and the ninth of Daniel, marke their words, and observe their feeling, follow their woe, and assuredly poſſeſſe with thē their endleſs joy. Manaſſes ſorow, and Peters bitter weeping, have often in your minde. Quando David clamavit Peccavi, ſtatim audivit, Dominus abſtulit peccatum tuum, tantum valent tres ſyllabæ, ſed in iſtis tribus ſyllabis flamma ſacrificii cordis ejus ad cœlum aſcendebat: When David, ſaid Ambroſe, cryed I have ſinned, preſently he heard, the Lord hath forgiven thee thy ſin, ſuch force was there in three ſyllables; but in theſe three ſyllables the flame of the ſacrifice of the heart aſcended to heaven. Qui ſibi diſplicet in vitiis, Deo placet in gratia. He that diſpleaſeth himſelfe in his ſin, pleaſeth Almighty God in his grace, ſaith Bernard; but this knowne matter needeth no ſtanding upon. Doe we grieve if one hurt but our little finger, and ſhall we not grieve, when we grievouſly offend our God? His mercy in making us, in preſerving and keeping us, in powring his favours beyond number upon us; his ſweetneſſe in giving his holy Son for us: that body ſo wronged, that blood ſo ſhed, that life ſo laid downe for our ſakes, ſhall they not worke a woe in us to offend ſuch a Lord? with whatſoever you may remember herein to make a penitent heart doe it, and doe it with all your care, it is a way, as I now have ſaid, to die well.

Thirdly, joyne with your ſorrow faith; faith I ſay and aſſurance in his mercy, that upon your true repentance, he will pardon you according to his gracious promiſes in his Word. For ſorow without faith is a gulfe that will ſwallow you up and deſtroy you for ever. Remember therefore ever the ſweet and moſt ſweet ſayings of holy Scripture touching this point, and let no temptation wring them out of your heart, If we acknowledge our ſinne, (ſaith Saint John) God is faithfull to forgive us our ſin, and the blood of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſin. Marke the generall words well, from all ſinne, without exception, and therefore make you no exception, but hold faſt the Lords owne words, and beleeve them. With his ſtripes we are healed, ſaith the Prophet, and therefore feare not. As our ſins imputed to him made him die: ſo ſhall his righteouſneſſe imputed to us, make us live. For God forbid we ſhould thinke more power in our evill againſt him, than in his goodneſſe towards us. And as Saint Bernard ſaith, Peccavi peccatum grande, & turbatur conſcientia, ſed non perturbatur, quia vulnerum Dei recordabor: I have ſinned a great ſin, and my conſcience is troubled, but it ſhall not be diſquieted above hope; for I will remember the Lords wounds. O Ieſu eſto mihi Ieſus, O Jeſu be to me a Jeſus, that is, a Saviour. In hac ſola ſhorte Ieſu Chriſti totam tuam fiduciam habeto, huic morti te totum committe, hac morte te totum contego & involve: Si Dominus voluerit te judicare, dic, Domine mortem Ieſu Chriſti objicio inter te & me, aliter tecum non contendo: ſi dixerit quod meruiſti damnationem, dic, mortem Ieſu Chriſti objicio inter te & mala merita mea, ipſumq; paſſionis meritum offero pro merito quod ego habere debui & non habeo. Si dixerit tibi, iratus ſum, dic, Domine mortem Ieſu Chriſti pono inter me & iram tuam. Hoc modo qui mortem Chriſti ſibi applicat, ſecurus morietur, nec videbit mortem æternam. In this onely death of Jeſus Chriſt ſet all thy whole truſt and confidence, to this death commit thy ſelfe wholly, with this death cover thy ſelfe wholly over, and wrappe thy ſelfe in it, as it were in a garment. If the Lord will ſeeme to judge thee, ſay, Lord I ſet the death of Jeſus Chriſt betwixt thee and mee, otherwiſe I contend not with thee. If hee ſay thou haſt deſerved damnation, ſay, Lord I ſet the death of Chriſt betwixt thee and my ill deſervings, and I offer the merit of his Paſſion in ſtead of the merit that I ſhould have, but have not. If hee ſhall ſay unto thee, I am angry, ſay thou to him againe, Lord, I put the death of Jeſus Chriſt betwixt mee and thine anger. And whoſoever ſhall in this manner apply to himſelfe the death of Chriſt, hee ſhall die ſafely, and ſhall never ſee eternall death.

A fourth thing requiſite to die well, is as the Lord ſhall enable us to live well. For qualis vita, finis ita: ſuch life, ſuch end moſt commonly. Nunquam memini male moriturum qui bene vixit, & vix bene moritur qui male vixit: I never remember, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, any to have dyed ill that lived well, and hardly doth he die well that hath lived ill. Yet the Lord giving repentance, it falleth out ſometimes as in the Theefe upon the Croſſe. There are yet thoſe that ſell oyle, ſaith one, to put in your Lampe, even the poore that you have among you, and therefore buy while you have time, that is, exerciſe the fruits of a lively faith, and by doing good the Lord ſhall reward it in mercy with a good death. Peccatum omnes majores tuos occidit, & num tibi carum erit? Sinne hath ſlaine all thy Anceſtors, and wilt thou delight in it? labour therefore to live well, and be moſt aſſured when time commeth to die well.

A fifth thing helping to die well, is to diſpoſe your earthly buſineſſe in your health, that your minde being freed from all ſuch cares, it may wholly waite upon God, and meditate of his ſweete mercies laid up in Jeſus Chriſt, for all that beleeve in him. Set thy houſe in order, ſaid God to King Ezekias by his Prophet, for thou ſhalt die and not live. And thinke with your ſelfe, that as you ſee the bird that is in the lime not able to flye aloft doe what ſhe can, but the more ſhee is limed, the worſe it is with her: ſo aſſuredly thoſe diſtracting cares at the time of death are a marvellous hinderance to the ſoule and heart to thinke upon God, to flie aloft to any meditation, and the more the cares are, the worſe it is. Remember what you reade of Abraham, that being but maryed to a ſecond wife, and having children by her, to the end hee might might keep peace in his family, and free his minde from ſuch cares, hee diſpoſed of his eſtate, and gave every one portions as he thought good. How much more ſhould this be done before death, that our mindes be not then troubled, for feare we looke back with Lots wife, when we ſhould joyfully goe on without looking back to any worldly matters. And for peace in your family, thinke it not a ſmall matter when you have wrought it. For it is too much daily ſeene what fires ariſe in families to the conſuming of the whole eſtate for want of this godly care and providence in the time of health, to ſettle with good advice every thing in an order; wherein let me tell you a tale, and I pray you take notice of it, and conſider it with feeling. When one commended greatly a friend, that he had an honeſt, a juſt and a loving man, &c. Another ſtanding by, asked of him, unquam ne cum illo partitus es hæreditatem? Didſt thou ever part inheritance with him? giving him a hint, that the men we would thinke to be according to our hearts, yet when worldly matters fall a ſharing, land, living, gold, money, plate, jewels, &c. they ſtart aſide like a broken bow, and deceive our conceit of them. Therefore be the more carefull to confine every one your ſelfe, and to apportion and limit how all ſhall bee, and that with an eye firſt to God, beſeeching him to direct you, as he may be pleaſed to bleſſe, and then with the help of counſell from more heads then your own, and thoſe good men. In this diſtribution of your goods remember, and with as good a wiſh as I would to mine owne ſoule, I pray you remember to give unto Chriſt Jeſus ſome Legacy: He hath purchaſed for you with no leſſe price than his owne precious blood an inheritance immortall, more worth than many worlds, and is he not worthy to be remembred in your Will with ſome peece of your earthly inheritance? O do it, & do it with a burning heart, feeling the mercies that he hath ſhewed to you, and remembring Davids quid retribuam? What ſhall I render? O what ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his favours, for all his benefits and goodneſſe that he hath ſhewed unto me, before I was born, and ſince I was born, to this day? Pſal. 16. 2. O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord, thou art my Lord, my well-doing extendeth not to thee, but to the Saints that are upon earth, &c. If any wicked wretches be falſe in theſe dayes, abuſing, perverting, claiming, defeating the godly purpoſes of ſuch givers and gifts, let the Almighty Judge of all the world deale with them according to their great wickedneſſe, it ſhall not hurt you that with a religious heart gave it, and firſt or laſt God ſhall reduce it to your deſire by ſtirring up hearts to make laws, and as carefull hearts to execute them when they are made, according to their true purpoſe. Wherein let me intreate all Gentlemen towards the Law, that ever reade this my poore writing, that being put in commiſſion for the righting of ſuch things as have been given to charitable and godly uſes; they would never ſhrink from that labour for any feare to loſe any Clyents, or to offend any man, but zealouſly and faithfully perform their ſervice to their beſt skill, as they deſire God to bleſſe what they ſhall leave behinde them, either to like uſe, or to their children.

Sixtly, if your conſcience accuſe you with any extremity or cruelty ſhewed to any, you being able to make recompence, doe it. Remembring Zacheus when his heart was touched: Behold Lord, the halfe of my goods I give to the poore, and if I have taken from any man by forged cavillation, I reſtore him foure-fold. Remembring Iob, If my land cry againſt me, or the furrowes thereof complaine together, if I have eaten the fruits thereof without ſilver, or if I have grieved the ſoules of the maſters thereof, let Thiſtles grow in ſtead of Wheate, and Cockle in the ſtead of Barley. Finally remembring S. Auguſtine, Non dimittitur peccatum, niſi reſtituitur ablatum. Sine reſtitutione panitentia non agitur ſed fingitur: Sin is not forgiven except reſtitution be made. For without reſtitution repentance only is ſhewed, not performed.

Seventhly, call before you your children and charge whileſt ſpeech and memory ſerve, and exhort them to piety and the feare of the Lord. For our friends laſt words are commonly beſt remembred, and of great force with us. Thus did David to his ſonne Solomon, when his dayes drew neare that he ſhould die, he charged him, ſaying: I goe the way of all the earth, be ſtrong therefore and ſhew thy ſelfe a man, and take heed of the charge of the Lord thy God to walke in his wayes, and keep his ſtatutes, and his Commandements, and his judgements, and his teſtimonies, as it is written in the law of Moſes, that thou maiſt proſper, ſaith he, in all thou doſt, and in every thing whereunto thou turneſt thee, &c. Againe in another place, And thou Solomon my ſon, know the God of thy father, and ſerve him with a perfect heart and willing mind. For the Lord ſearcheth all hearts, and underſtandeth all the imagixations of thoughts: If thou ſeek him, he will be found of thee, but if thou forſake him, he will caſt thee off for ever. The like did Tobiah if you remember: When he was very aged he called his ſon, and ſix of his ſons ſons, and ſaid to him: My ſon, take thy children, for behold I am aged, and am ready to depart out of this life, keep thou the law and the Commandements, and ſhew thy ſelfe merciſull and juſt, that it may goe well with thee, and bury me honeſtly, and thy mother with me, &c. Reade alſo the fourth Chapter of that Booke. Commend them to God in your prayers, as our Saviour did his Diſciples and children, Iohn 17. 6. 9. 11. And if there be cauſe, commit them to the truſt, love and care of ſome faithfull friend, as our bleſſed Saviour did his Mother to Iohn, Chap. 19. 27.

Laſtly, for your Funerall, ſay with Tobiah, bury me honeſtly, not vainly and waſtfully, as too many Gen.35. many are buried in theſe dayes. Marke how Abraham buried Sarah, Iacob his deare Rachel, ſetting up a pillar upon her grave.

8. Having thus ſpoken of death, let us now proceed with the Chapter. Then Moſes ſpake unto the Lord, ſaying, Let the Lord God of the ſpirits of all fleſh appoint a man over the Congregation, who may go out and in before them, &c. See the faithfull heart of a worthy Governour, not only during his dayes, moſt carefully guiding and ruling this people, but now as carefull againe when he muſt die, what ſhall become of them. Many and great had his toyles beene, and many and bitter his croſſes with this people; yet being his charge committed to him of God, hee loveth them with a true heart, and wiſheth all good unto them, knowing the danger of ſheepe without a ſhepheard, and of people without a governour. He is not ſo carefull for his private as for the publike, and therefore omitting his owne family, ſpeaketh onely of a Governour for the people. And what manner of one deſireth he at Gods hands, but ſuch an one as may go out and in before them, that is, ſuch a one as both in peace and warre may be able to rule them wiſely and worthily. A ſingular benefit, and above the reach of moſt braines, is a prudent and religious Governour. Wherefore the Lord promiſeth ſuch a one for a bleſſing to them that hee loveth, and the contrary for a ſcourge to ſuch as he favoureth not: Turne againe (ſaith hee by his Prophet) and I will give you Paſtors according to mine owne heart, which ſhall feed you with knowledge and underſtanding. On the other ſide by another Prophet: I will appoint children to be their Princes, and babes ſhall rule over them.

Ier.3 14,15.

9. Upon his motion the Lord appointeth Ioſua, and biddeth Moſes put his hands upon him, and ſet him before Eleazar the Prieſt, and before all the Congregation, and gave him a charge in their ſight.

Chap. XXVIII.

THe people being numbred, Ioſua appointed in Moſes roome, and all things (as it were) ready for their entrance into the promiſed land, it pleaſed the Lord by way of repetition and concluſion to give them admonition touching his Sacrifices, and Feſtivall dayes, (as before in Exodus and Leviticus, he had commanded) to the end this ſecond repetition might breed, and imprint in them a ſpeciall care of obſervance of the Lords will in thoſe things; the ſacrifices are foure:

The daily ſacrifice: from the 1. verſe to the 9.
The weekly ſacrifice: verſe the 9. to the 11.
The monethly: verſe 11. to the 16.
And the yearely: verſe the 16.

The daily Sacrifice was offered morning and evening every day. The weekly every Sabbath. The monethly, every moneth in the Calends. The yeerely, every yeare divided into five ſeverall Sacrifices, according to the five ſeverall Feaſts, to wit:

The Feaſt of the Paſſeover, ver.16. to the 26.
The Feaſt of Pentecoſt, ver.16. to the end.
The Feaſt of Trumpets.
The Feaſt of Reconciliation.
The Feaſt of Tabernacles.

Of which five, two are mentioned in this Chapter, and the other three in the next: touching the daily Sacrifice, you may looke backe to the nine and twentieth of Exodus, and ſee what hath there been ſaid of it: remembring what Auguſtine ſaith of it. Agnus eligitur ut ſimplicitas & manſuetudo Chriſti deſignentur, maſculus ut virtus comprobetur, immaculatus ut innocẽtia: A Lamb was choſen, that the ſimplicity and meekneſſe of Chriſt might bee noted; a Male, that his vertue or ſtrength: without blemiſh, that his innocency might be ſhadowed: neſcit enim agnus vel nocere, vel nocenti reſiſtere, for the Lamb knoweth not either to hurt others, or to reſiſt any that will hurt him: And therefore ſaith the Prophet of Chriſt, as a Lambe before his ſhearer, &c. If we belong to Chriſt, to teach us alſo that we ought to endeavour to be without blemiſh of Envy, Malice, &c. And as ſome have thought, this Sacrifice thus offered in the morning and evening, figured the ſalvation of all by Chriſt; whether under the Law, or under the Goſpell: for Chriſt was the Lambe ſlaine from the beginning, Yeſterday, and to day, and for ever the ſame. Of Popiſh Maſſe I ſay nothing: badly are they grounded upon this Sacrifice, but well may we take occaſion to remember, our daily ſpirituall ſacrifice of prayer and thankſgiving to the Lord, religiouſly obſerving the ſame every morning and evening, as they did this in the Law: and it ſhall be good to obſerve the Lords phraſe, verſe the ſecond: My ſacrifice and my bread, bread, concluding that even ſo are our prayers his prayers, that is, a duty ſo due, and appropriated to him, as if we either faile in it by negligence, or make it to any creature by errour and ſuperſtition, he will be very highly diſpleaſed with us: if you will not doe wrong to man, doe not doe wrong to your God by holding from him that which is his, to wit, your humble and hearty prayer morning and evening.

2. The weekly Sacrifice upon the Sabbath what it was, you ſee in the Text, adumbratur eo Chriſtus ſimiliter, & inſtituitur in gratiarum actionem propter mundi creationem. Cum enim Deus mundum noſtri cauſa crearit, & adhuc hodie conſervet, merito tantum beneficium agnoſci debet cum gratiarum actione, Chriſt is likewiſe ſhadowed out in it, and it is ordained for a thankſgiving for the Creation of the world. For ſeeing God created the world for our cauſe, and yet ſtill doth preſerve it: ſuch a benefit ought worthily to be acknowledged with thankſgiving. Againe, ſee in it how God regards his Sabbath, and let us learne to regard it alſo, &c. Thirdly, as this ſacrifice exceeded the daily, ſo let our ſervice of God upon the Sabbath be more than our daily, &c.

3. You ſee next the monethly Sacrifice in the new Moone. Servit autem non tantum in adumbrationem ſacrificii Chriſti: ſed etiam in admonitionem novitatis vitæ, in qua virtute regenerationis S.S. ambulandum. Vult enim Dominus Calendas ſacras haberi, ut conſideratione Lunæ (quæ quidem ex media parte qua Soli apponitur, illuſtratur; attamen medieta illa non ſemper tota à nobis conſpicitur, ſed ab oppoſitione decreſcere, lucemq́, ſuam amittere. A conjunctione vero regenerari & priſtinum ſplendorem recipere videtur.) admoneantur Iſraelitæ, ut quia per peccatum primorum parentum integritatem & ſanctitatem, in qua creati ſunt, amiſerint, regeneratione S.S. ad eandem recuperandum ſedulo contendant. Vnde in novo Teſtamento primus dies novi anni feſtus celebratur, non tantum ut gratus habeatur Deo pro conſervatione, ſed etiam admoneamur ut veteris hominis actiones mortificemus, & novis actionibus novo homini congruentibus demus operam: It ſerveth, not only to ſhadow forth the ſacrifice of Chriſt, but alſo to admoniſh us of the newneſſe of life, wherein we ought to walke by the vertue of regeneration of the holy Ghoſt. For the Lord would have the Calends of every moneth to be kept holy, that by the conſideration of the Moone, (whoſe halfe is lightned of the Sun, but that halfe, &c.

4. After the monthly followeth the yearely ſacrifices, which I ſaid before were foure. The firſt the Paſſeover, inſtituted (as you know) in remembrance of their great deliverance out of the land of Ægypt. Et in admonitionem redemptionis à ſervitute peccati, mortis & inferiorum per Chriſtum: Whereof at large in Exodus. We keep the feaſt of Eaſter in the new Teſtament, for remembrance of his moſt glorious and joyfull Reſurrection, about which much contention hath beene in the Church, concerning the day; moſt unprofitably ſtirred by the Biſhop of Rome, not conſidering the words of the Apoſtle: Qui curat diem Domino curat, qui non curat diem Domino non curat.

5. Touching the Feaſt of Pentecoſt it hath likewiſe been ſpoken of in Leviticus the 23. by conference of which two places, you may obſerve ſome difference, becauſe in Leviticus it is ſaid one yong Bullock and two Rams, and here two yong Bullocks and one Ram, which difference hapned either by negligence of writers, or that the Lord would ſhew he regarded not whether they were great or little; I meane their ſacrifices, ſo much as the heart and minde of the offerer of them. In this time of the new Teſtament, we retaine likewiſe this Feaſt of Pentecoſt, but both our Eaſter and Pentecoſt or Whitſontide differ much from thoſe in the Old Teſtament; for firſt thoſe in the Old Teſtament were inſtituted and commanded by God, and therefore their obſervation was the worſhip of God; but ours in the New Teſtament are ordained by the Church, not as neceſſary parts of Gods worſhip, but for order and edification, in which reſpect they ought not to be contemned.

Secondly, theſe two Feaſts in the Old Teſtament had their appointed Sacrifices; but ours in the New Teſtament not, Chriſt by his bleſſed comming having freed us from all ſhadowes and figures.

Thirdly, the old Paſſeover was inſtituted, as hath been ſaid, in remembrance of their deliverance out of Ægypt: and the feaſt of Pentecoſt in remembrance of the giving of the Law in Mount Sinai, and a government eſtabliſhed among them, when before they had beene ruled by the Lawes of Ægypt; but our Paſſeover in remembrance of his Reſurrection, and our Pentecoſt in rememberance of the giving of the holy Ghoſt from heaven, in likeneſſe of cloven fiery tongues, &c. The terror of the giving of the Law, if you reade it and marke it, Exodus 19. and the ſweet manner of the giving of the holy Ghoſt, notably ſheweth the difference of the Law and the Goſpell to the conſciences of Sinners, if you meditate of it; the one thundreth and caſteth man downe with feare and trembling; the other raiſeth him up with comfort and joy in the holy Ghoſt: that the holy Ghoſt was given the ſame day wherein the Law was given, notably it ſhewed, that by him is wrought all our obedience to the Law, bee it more or leſſe. We by nature doing what we ſhould not, and omitting what we ſhould doe, which the holy Apoſtle fully teacheth, when he ſaith: The wiſdome of the fleſh is enmity againſt God: For it is not ſubject to the Law of God, neither indeed can it bee; changed therefore of neceſſity muſt our nature be if ever we obey God, and that is done by his holy Spirit, according as you reade in Ezekiel: I will put a new Spirit within thy bowels, and I will take the ſtony heart out of their bodies, and will give them a heart of fleſh, that they may walke in my Statutes, and keep my judgements, and execute them, &c. Like words in the 36. Chapter againe.

Chap. XXIX.

THis Chapter goeth on, as hath been ſaid before, with the other yearly ſacrifices: the next whereof, is the Feaſt of Trumpets, and the Sacrifices appointed thereto. This feaſt was a ſhadow of the preaching of the Miniſters of the Goſpell, who are as Trumpets, ſounding forth in this world the pardons of our ſinnes, and an eternall Tabernacle provided for us by Chriſt, of which ſound the Prophet ſpeaketh when he ſaith, Their ſound is gone out into all the world: Pſ. 19. Such a Trumpet was Iohn Baptiſt, the fore-runner of Chriſt, crying, Repent, for the Kingdome of God is at hand, behold the Son of God that taketh away the ſins of the world, &c.

2. The Feaſt of Reconciliation followeth in the ſeventh verſe, with the Sacrifices and Ceremonies thereof. So called, not becauſe through any effect thereof ſinnes were forgiven: for it is impoſſible by the blood of Buls and Goates to waſh away ſinne, but that it might ſhadow out the true reconciler of man to God Chriſt Jeſus, and for that at the time, Qui excommunicati & excluſi à cœtu recipiuntur in communionem Eccleſiæ, of which reconciliation made by Chriſt, as often as we ſpeake, let us with feeling hearts, and all poſſible thankfulneſſe, behold the unſpeakable love of God the Father, who rather than we ſhould be caſt away and periſh, would give his only Son to the death for us. Secondly, the incomprehenſible ſweetneſſe of our bleſſed Savior that for us would undergoe ſuch things. Laſtly, the hatefulneſſe of ſin, whoſe ſpot ſo defile as no Sacrifice but the Son of God, God and Man could take away from us that guilt and ſtaine.

It is obſervable in this Feaſt, how God commanded them to humble their ſoules; yea, ſo earneſtly he commanded it, that as you reade in Leviticus 23. 30. Every perſon that did not ſo humble his ſoule, was to be cut off from his people. This was done, to ſhew that of that reconciliation made by Chriſt none can be partakers but ſuch as are truly penitent for their ſins: an occaſion to make us remember the difference of Gods Faſts and Popiſh Faſts: in Gods faſts, there was an abſtinence from all meat; in Popery but from this and that meat. In Gods faſts they abſtained but one day; in Popiſh faſts many dayes. In Gods faſt, the humbling of ſoule in hearty griefe for ſin, and to make them more ready, apt, and fit for Prayer, and all holy exerciſes were the ends; but in Popery, merit, and the clenſing of our owne ſins by our own works, were the markes, moſt derogatory to the goodneſſe and glory of God, and moſt erroneous and falſe to themſelves.

Munſter reporteth, that the Jewes were ſo ſuperſtitious or ſtrict in this feaſt, that they think it unlawfull at this time to reade any thing that may rejoyce or glad the heart, as the manner of their deliverance out of Ægypt, their comming into the Land of Canaan, their deliverance from the conſpiracy and cruelty of Haman, and ſuch like: but only ſad and dolefull things; as the Lamention of Ieremy, the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, the rebukes of the Prophets given in their times, &c.

3. The laſt feaſt was that of Tabernacles, ordained of God, to put the Iſraelites in remembrance of their miraculous protection and defence, by the ſpace of forty yeares in the wilderneſſe, dwelling but in Tents and Boothes, houſes moveable, and of ſmall ſtrength, had not God been with them; as alſo to put them in aſſurance by a viſible figure of an eternall Tabernacle: provided of a gracious God for them when this life ſhould end, Vbi cum ipſo perpetuam feſtivitatem cum gaudio ineffabili celebrent. Of holy dayes if you will heare, &c. againſt ſuch as condemne all but the Sabbath.

Chap. XXX.

HAving made mention in the end of the former Chapter of Sacrifices upon vowes: now in this Chapter Moſes goeth on with Vowes, ſhewing what vowes ſhall ſtand for good and be performed, what not: And firſt concerning the man that is head and maſter of the family; Whoſoever (ſaith the text) ſhall vow a vow to the Lord, or ſweareth an oath to bind himſelf by a bond, He ſhall not breake his promiſe, but ſhall doe according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth: But this is to be underſtood of lawfull things, and not otherwiſe: for if firſt a man do vow that which is wicked, as to kill Paul with the Jewes, and then performeth the ſame: this ſhall be a double ſinne, as we plainly ſee, when the Scripture telleth us, That in one ſinne it ſhall not be unpuniſhed.

punished. For lawfull things God forbid but men should carry care and conscience to performe them: For God is truth, and loveth truth in us, and if it bee a fault to breake our word to man, much more to God. The want of this distinction of things lawfull and unlawfull, hath made many men and women runne violently into every great and fearfull mis-doing, thinking blindly they were bound to fulfill their owne, whatsoever it was.

2. The next person is a woman unmaried in her fathers house, whereof the Text saith thus; If a woman also vow a vow to the Lord, and bind her self by a bond, being in her fathers house, in the time of her youth, and her father heare her vow and bond wherewith she hath bound her selfe, and her father hold his peace concerning her, then all her vowes shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her selfe, shall stand. But if her father disallow the same, then all shall be void, &c. The like must bee understood no doubt of a sonne under the government of his father, and of servants in respect of their Masters. Where wee may observe two good lessons; First, that Parents and Masters ought to oppose themselves stoutly and carefully to things unlawfull, and unfit to be done in their houses, for as much as their silence and wincking giveth a kinde of consent to them, which the Lord will punish in them. And secondly, that if a promise or vow, made to God by the childe without the Fathers consent, much lesse a promise made to man of marriage without parents liking, they liking or disliking justly.

3. The third person named, is a wife under the authority of her husband: whereof you read thus: And if she have a husband when she voweth, or promiseth ought with her lippes, wherewith she bindeth her selfe, if her husband heard it, and holdeth his peace concerning her, the same day he heareth it, then her vow shall stand, &c. But if her husband shall disallow it, then not. If women thus in vowes to God, how should they not be head-strong otherwise against their husbands? &c.

4. But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith she hath bound her selfe, shall stand in effect with her. The reason is, because neither of them is under subjection, but in their owne power. Thus of the persons named in this Chapter, making vowes. Touching the matter it selfe of vowes, I have else-where noted that which may suffice to such as I write for, shewing what a vow is; namely, a promise made to God willingly by persons free, and not under the rule of others, of matters lawfull, and to a good and lawfull end; suffered in the old Law, lest they should therein follow the manner of the Heathens, among whom they lived: It was (I say againe) made to God, not Idols or Creatures willingly; not by any compulsion; as Popish vowes of chastity be; by persons free, and not by young men and maidens; as in Popery stolne away from their parents, and sent beyond Sea; of things lawfull, not to renounce all duty to Parents, as in Popery, to live sole, though the flesh burne, to doe most horrible acts against God, Prince, and Countrey, &c. Finally, to a good and lawfull end, not as in Popery, to set up Antichrist, and to bring in strangers, bondage and misery, into our native Countrey, and the inheritance of our fathers; Quod David non implevit juramentum major pietas fuit: That David fulfilled not his oath or vow made to kill Nabal and all his, it was the greater piety, (saith Austen.) Et si quis discretionẽ non adhibuit, in vovendo stultus, in reddendo impius: And if one have not discretion in making his vow, (saith Hierome) he is in vowing a foole, and in performing the same, wicked. For, In malis promissis rescinde fidem, in turpi voto muta decretum: Impia enim est promissio quæ scelere adimpletur: In evill promises breake thy minde, and in foule vows change thy purpose, for it is a wicked promise that is fulfilled with wickednesse. Againe, Iuramentum non debet esse vinculum iniquitatis; An oath may not be the bond of iniquity: But when it is said, neither the wife nor the childe may vow without leave: Some objection may be made, that God is to be served, notwithstanding any mans disallowance. And true, if vowes were of the necessity of salvation, and part of Gods worship, for therein the rule standeth; We must obey God rather than men: but when there is no such matter, as indeed there is not in vowes, God will have in them, the inferiour subject to the superiour.

5. If you aske what may bee thought of vowes now in the time of the New Testament? answer may be made, That the matter you vow, either is commanded, or forbidden, or neither, but indifferent: If commanded, then is your vow needlesse; if forbidden, then is your vow sinfull; and if neither, but indifferent, then shall you remember the Rule of the Apostle: Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage. If you would say, I vow the more to bind my selfe; see if you cast not an imputation upon your self, for being more bound with your owne word, than with Gods Word; the thing you vow being commanded. S. Augustines saying is good, Quisquis bene cogitat quid voveat Deo, seipsum voveat, seipsum reddat, hoc exigitur, hoc debetur: Whosoever thinketh what hee well may vow unto God, let him vow himselfe, let him give himselfe, this is required, this is due. I beseech you brethren, by the mercies of God, that you give your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable serving of God. But what shal we say to that place to Timothy; Refuse the yonger widows, for when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry, having damnation, because they have broke the first faith; that is (saith Popery) their vow that they would live single. But is it not a weake cause, that hath no ground in Scripture, but an obscure and doubtfull place?

place? S. Augustine saith, In his quæ aperte posita sunt in Scripturis, continentur ea omnia quæ sufficiunt ad doctrinam moresque vivendi: In these places that are plaine in Scriptures, all things necessary either for doctrine or manners are contained: Vowes being not taught in any plaine place, you see what wee may conclude of them; surely as not necessary either for doctrine or manners. Touching the place of Scripture, it hath sundry answers, and none making for Popery: Looke the annotation in your Testament, and so sensible it is, Verse 11. figure 10. The first reason, saith it, Why yonger widowes are not to be received and admitted to such ministery and service in the Church, &c. To wit, because for the lightnesse of their age they will at length shake off the burthen that Christ hath laid on them, and thinke rather upon marrying againe, and so will forsake the Ministery, whereunto they had bound themselves; and how bound themselves? by vowes? no: but as every one is bound, that taketh upon him an office and service, whereunto he is called and chosen either by Church or Common-wealth. This undertaking such place and office is, prima fides, their first faith, and disorderly slipping from it, is breaking that first faith, Beza in his annotations, saith thus: Rejici non vult juniores viduas ab Ecclesia, sed ad numerũ Diaconisarũ non admitti: causam affert, quod ad hoc munus ineptæ sunt quæ matrimonii vinculo obstrictæ sunt; Iuniores autẽ ætas sæpe ad matrimoniũ solicitaret. Inde duplex sequebatur incommodũ, aut etiam triplex. Primum, quod Diaconisarum numerus minuebatur. Alterum, quod hoc sine aliqua levitatis & infamiæ nota, deniq; non sine offendiculo eveniebat. Tertiũ vero longe gravissimũ, quod nõnullæ cum non ferrent se inter pios aliquam probri ignominiam sustinere, à Christianismo, etiã hac occasione deficiebant: The Apostle will not have the younger widowes rejected from the Church, but from being of the number of Church widowes, or Diaconisses. His reason is, for that they which are marryed are unfit for such office, and the yonger widowes by reason of their ages would think of marying, wherupon would follow a double inconvenience, yea a threefold mischiefe: First, for that so the number of the widowes, fit for that service of the Church, and chosen to it, would be diminished still, and so the Church dispersed: Secondly, for that this same could not fall out without some blot of levity and infamy to the party so marrying, neither without just offence and scandall to the Church. Thirdly, which is worst of all, some of these widowes not able to endure the reproach and speech that passeth of them, for this lightnesse flatly renounce Christianity, and turne unto Paganisme againe, which indeed is a fearefull forsaking or breaking of their first faith, given to Christ and his Gospell. These things make little, I hope, for the sinfull vowes of Nunnes in Popery: yet see more, and note it well, how the Apostle leaveth marriage to the younger women, for avoiding of incontinency, although hee would not have such chosen to office in the Church. But Popery will both chuse young women to make vowes, above their strength, and when the mischiefe appeares, yet allow them no marriage. How much therefore may we note the opinion of Cyprian, who writing to Pomponius, saith; Si perseverare nolunt, aut non possunt, melius est ut nubant, quam ut in ignem suis deliciis cadant: If either they will not continue, or cannot, better it is to marry than to burne, through, or with their pleasure. Basil writing of Viginity will have them marry after their vow, if there be cause. S. Augustine writing to Iulian, saith, Quidam nubentes post votum asserunt adulteros esse. Ego autem dico, quod graviter peccant qui tales dividunt: Some account them that marry after their vow, to be Adulterers: but I say, they grievously sin who separate such. The most fearfull effect of their constrained chastity by their vowes, Gregories Fish-pond report, wherein were 6000. childrens skuls found; whereupon he repeating the Apostles words, It is better to marry than to burne, added, or to be any cause of such burning. The hypocrisie of their vow of poverty who saw not, when notwithstanding such vow they licked up the fat of the Land. Their vow of obedience, to whom was it? non Christo, sed Francisco; not unto Christ, but unto S. Francis; his rules they obeyed, not Christs, &c. What a foule tale is that, udo, udo, cessa de ludo. How hatefull, how sinfull now derogatory to Christs passion for men, out of the tender love of his Father to mans salvation; Rigor ordinis, & multa bona quæ feciſti, & adhuc facturus es, cedant tibi in remissionem peccatorum: The rigour of thine order, and many good things which thou hast done, and shall doe, cause unto thee the remission of thy sinnes. S. Paul saith, If any man sinne, we have an advocate with the Father, Iesus Christ, &c. Saint Peter saith, Not with old corruptible things, as Silver and Gold, were yee redeemed, but with the precious blood of Christ, &c. Saint Iohn saith, The blood of Iesus Christ cleanseth us from all sinne. Lastly, the holy Prophet Esay saith; Surely he hath borne our infirmities, and carryed our sorrowes; He was wounded for our transgressions, He was broken for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. Where is rigor ordinis, the rigour of the order, either of Monks, Friers, or Nuns? Where is any motion of the many good things we have done, and the rest hereafter to be done? are not these corruptible things included by Peter, and uncleane things done by uncleane men, imperfect workes proceeding from them that are imperfect? O more than fearfull thus to rob God of his honour, of his praise, and thanks most due for so great salvation, and to bring it to vaine man, and his thrice vaine inventions! God give eyes, God give eyes, I have but lately touched this point, and therefore I leave it.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXI.

This Chapter hath two generall Heads in it:

{The revenge which was taken on the Midianites.
{The great ſpoyle or prey which was had by it.

The firſt Part.

TOuching the firſt, call to your remembrance the words of God in the 25. Chapter, verſe 17. Vexe the Midianites, and ſmite them for they trouble you with their wiles, where they have beguiled you; as concerning Peor, and as concerning their ſiſter Cozbi, the daughter of a Prince of Midian, which was ſlaine, &c. It is like therefore, that upon thoſe words not long after, before Moſes was called into the Mount, this revenge was made, although here placed by an uſuall tranſpoſition in Scripture, of things after, that ſhould have gone before: for uſe and profit to our ſelves, let us note ſtill the reward of ſinne and wickedneſſe in the end, albeit God deferre never ſo long: How theſe Midianites, by the counſell of Balaam, drew the Iſraelites both to Idolatry and whoredome you have ſeene before: the puniſhment that God tooke upon the Iſraelites pleaſed the Midianites well, and they thought ſurely God would forſake them, and they ſhould have the Maſtery over them, to deſtroy them: Behold, now the caſe is altered, and the Iſraelites muſt have Maſtery over the Midianites, and deſtroy them. Such a God is our God, ever chaſtiſing his children for their ſinnes, as hee pleaſeth, but in the end burning the Rod that did beate them, and comforting his children againe: but let us keepe to our note, at laſt vengeance is come, and the wicked malicious Midianites, ſo hating, and ſo wronging the people of GOD, muſt ſmart.

Never ſhall ſinne eſcape then finally unpuniſhed, as I ſaid before; becauſe God is juſt as well as mercifull, Sera, ſed certa vindicta Dei; Slow, but ſure is the revenge of God, and let all fleſh feare it, God will ſpare in Salomons time; but in his ſonnes time after him, wrath ſhall fall. That fearfull judgement of God upon Nabuchadnezzar, of a proud King to become a beaſt, came at laſt. That dreadfull ſight of a hand-writing upon the wall, the doome of Belſhazzar King of Babylon, came at laſt. No honour or greatneſſe helpeth, for as Iob ſaith; He looſeth the coller of Kings, and girdeth their loynes with a girdle; he leadeth away the Princes as a prey, and overthroweth the mighty, he taketh away the ſpeech from the faithfull Counſellers, and taketh away the judgement of the Ancient; He powreth contempt upon Princes, and maketh the ſtrength of the mighty weake: The mighty Monarchies of the world, as God let them riſe to an height, ſo for ſinne he threw them downe; yea, with his owne Iron rod broke them into many ſhivers, as the Potters veſſell is broken into many ſhreds: what ſhould I ſpeake of meane eſtates, yet great Kingdomes, Nations, and Countries, how are they vaniſhed that once ſo gliſtered, and all for ſinne? Dandle it, and nurſe it daily, and play with it as you pleaſe, in the end it will bee your bane, and bring you to deſtruction, as it ever hath done the lovers of it. Often remember the gracious love, that ſent forth his ſervants to bid them to the wedding, and as often againe print it in your hearts what followed their contempt. When the King heard it, he was wroth, and ſent forth his Warriors, and deſtroyed thoſe murtherers, and burnt up their Citie: Hee was wroth, which hee? even the mighty God, whoſe wrath, no man, no ſtrength, no world can reſiſt: for if hee ſhall marke what is done amiſſe; O who, who is able to abide it! Hee removeth the Mountaines, and they feele not when hee overthroweth them in his wrath. Hee removeth the earth out of her place, and the Pillars doe ſhake. Hee commandeth the Sunne, and it riſeth not: Hee cloſeth up the Starres, as under a ſignet. He alone ſpreadeth out the Heavens, and walketh upon the height of the Sea: yea, hee rebuketh the Sea, and dryeth it, and he dryeth up all the Rivers. The Mountaines tremble for him, and the Hils melt, and the Earth is burnt at his ſight: yea, the world and all that dwell therein. Who can ſtand before his wrath, or who can abide in the fierceneſſe of his wrath? His wrath is powred out like fire, and the Rocks are broken by him. This mighty and terrible King was wroth at their contempt, and ſhall ever be ſo unto ours: and therefore whiles kindneſſe and grace is offered, let us take heed of either ſinning our ſelves, or alluring others to ſinne, as theſe Midianites did. Being wroth, he ſent forth his Warriors, ſaith the place; O what Warriors! Miſer homo quem unius pulex punget, quem rapit una febricula, quem una nox inſomnis frangit, quid faciet cum Deus legiones & exercitus mittet: Miſerable man, whom a little Flea can vexe, whom one graſh of an Ague can pluck downe, whom one night without ſleepe and reſt ſo tameth and breaketh, what ſhall hee doe when God ſhall ſend legions and hoaſts of VVarriors againſt him? But I ſay againe, O what VVarriors? Exercitus Angelorum bonorum, Angelorum malorum, creaturarum exercitus hoſtiles foris foris, exercitus accuſantium cogitationum & conſcientiæ ſtimulos acerrimos, intus: Deniq; exercitus omnium factorum & dictorum. Nã ut diligentibus Dominum omnia cooperantur in bonum, etiã ipſa peccata: ſic odientibus enim omnia cooperantur in malũ: Mala quæ fecerunt, quæ facere voluerant, quæ per alios curarunt, imo bona quæ fecerunt, in illis non perſeverando, vel quæ non fecerunt omittendo, quaq; acceperunt gratia Dei abutendo: Warriors or Hoaſts of good Angels, of evill Angels, of all Creatures, according to that ſaying of the Booke of Wiſedome. Hee ſhall take his jealouſie for armour, and ſhall arme the creatures to bee revenged of the enemies. Hee will ſharpen his fierce wrath for a ſword, and the world ſhall fight with him againſt the unwiſe; then ſhall the Thunder-bolts goe ſtraight out of the lightnings, and ſhall flie to the marke, as out of the bent bow of the clouds, and out of his anger that throweth ſtones ſhall thicke Hayle bee caſt, and the water of the Sea ſhall be wroth againſt them, and the floods ſhall mightily over-flow, and a mighty winde ſhall ſtand up againſt them, and like a ſtorme ſhall ſcatter them abroad. Thus iniquity ſhall bring all the earth to a wilderneſſe, and wickedneſſe ſhall over-flow the Thrones of the mighty. Hoaſts againe, or Warriors of enemies without, and of accuſing thoughts within, ſtings of conſcience moſt bitter and byting. Warriors of all our words and deeds, done and ſpoken amiſſe. For as unto them that love God, all things worke unto good, even their very ſinnes; ſo unto them that hate God by living wickedly, all things worke unto evill, the evils which they have done, the evils which they would have done, the evils which they have procured others to doe; yea, the good things which they have done, and have not continued in them, or which they have done by omiſſion of them, or the good things which they have received, and abuſed them and the grace and goodneſſe of God that gave them. How fearfull Warriors are theſe againſt miſerable man, that will not bee admoniſhed in time, and turne unto his God? Now what ſhall theſe Warriors doe, or they do with them? He deſtroyed thoſe Murtherers, and burnt up their City, ſaith the Scriptures; we follow, Non in perſonas tantum, ſed in facinoris conſcios, in tanti ſceleris fautores, tantæ impietatis applauſores, & in loca ipſa ſæviet ira Dei; Not onely againſt the perſons, but againſt as many as knew ſuch wickedneſſe, and were favourers of ſo great wickedneſſe, & applauders to ſo great impiety; yea, againſt the places themſelves ſhall the fierce wrath of the Lord rage and burne: full are the Prophets of examples, to prove this Juſtice in the Lord. But of many take that in Sophony, touching Jeruſalem; Woe to her that is filthy and polluted, to the robbing Citie; She heard not the voyce, yet received not correction, ſhe truſted not in the Lord, ſhe drew not neare to God; Her Princes within her are as roaring Lyons, her Iudges are as Wolves in the Evening, which leave not the bones till the morrow; Her Prophets are light and wicked perſons; Her Prieſts have polluted the Sanctuary, they have wreſted the Law, the juſt Land is in the midſt therof; He will doe no iniquity, everie morning doth he bring his judgement to light, he faileth not, but the wicked will not learne to be aſhamed. Now ſee then puniſhment, puniſhment; yea, the puniſhment of the very places, where like ſinnes have beene committed, and ſo of them in time: I have cut off the Nations, their Towers are deſolate, I have made their Streets waſte, that none ſhall paſſe by, their Cities are deſtroyed, without man, and without Inhabitant. This God is the ſame for ever, his Juſtice the ſame for ever; and therefore happy men, if they feare in time, before Kingdome, Countrey, Citie, Towne, Houſes, and Inheritance of Anceſtors, long continued in the Name, be deſtroyed in his Juſtice of a moſt holy God, ſlowly revenging, but fearefully revenging at laſt the contempts of men: Adde, or joyne unto theſe words of Scripture, theſe arguing words of Nazianzen: Quo modo facti ſunt in deſolatione? Repente deſtituti ſunt, perierunt propter ſcelera, tanquam pulvis qui diſperditur, tanquam ros matutinus, tanquam ictus tonitrui, tanquam coruſcatio, &c. How are they become deſolate? Suddenly they are forſaken, they are periſhed for their wickedneſſe, as duſt is ſcattered, as the morning Dew, as a crack of Thunder, as lightning, &c. Reade, Eſay 33. Ezek. 5. Sirach. 5 and ſee the end of wickedneſſe. Finally, remember ever this revenge taken of the Midianites, by the expreſſe commandement of God: in amplification whereof all this hath beene ſpoken, and ſo I leave this note.

2. The commandement given once to Moſes, he, like a moſt carefull man, and faithfull in the Lords appointments, cauſeth a power to be ſelected of twelve thouſand, a thouſand out of every Tribe, wherein, out of queſtion, he had direction from God. For otherwiſe having ſix hundred thouſand fighting men, he would not have adventured ſuch a handfull againſt ſuch a power of enemies; And what the Lord aymed at wee may probably conjecture, even to try the faith of his people, and to make his glory the more appeare. For if they ſhould have gone with their whole power, they might have aſcribed ſomewhat to themſelves, and have ſinned much againſt the Lord. Thus after, in the Book of Iudges you ſhall finde, that with foure hundred under the hand of Gideon, he deſtroyed againe the Midianites. He tooke of every Tribe equally, that none might thinke themſelves wronged: The reaſon why in Moſes life time; was, firſt, for the better incouragement of the Iſraelites, who holding Moſes in great regard and reverence; much more chearfully would obey any thing delivered by him, than they would by any other, of whom they had had no ſuch experience: Secondly, it might alſo bee in regard of Moſes himſelfe, who might the more willingly die when he had ſeene the juſtice of God, revenging the the great wrong that the Midianites did to his people, in cauſing them to offend both by Idolatry and whoredome. So that God tooke vengeance on many of them for it: either reaſon by it ſelfe, and both together ſhew a ſweet God, ever mindfull of his childrens weakneſſe, and carefully providing to meete with it.

3. The ſucceſſe of this warre is expreſſed, when hee ſaith: They ſlew all the males, they ſlew all the Kings of Midian, among them that were ſlaine, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five Kings of Midian, and they ſlew Balaam the ſonne of Beor with the ſword. Reade the Text your ſelfe, and ſee a terrible ſlaughter; If you aske, why were the women ſlaine? Anſwer your ſelfe, that the Lord is ever juſt, though we cannot ſee his ſecrets; yet women having allured the Iſraelites to ſinne, might therefore be puniſhed: if you ſay not all ſuch, yet to be in company of ſinners, is often deare bought: that a few overcome ſo many, it is that which worthy Ionathan ſo chearfully ſpake: Come let us goe over unto the Garriſon of thoſe uncircumciſed, it may be that the Lord will worke with us, for it is not hard with the Lord to ſave with many or with few. Againe, it is that which Salomon ſaith, The horſe is prepared againſt the day of battell, but ſalvation is of the Lord. A ſweet comfort to the godly in their juſt and lawful warres, defenſive or offenſive. For whatſoever our ſtrength is through God (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) we ſhall doe valiantly, for he ſhall tread down our enemies; and as a great terror to the wicked, whoſe ſtrength be it never ſo great ſhall not profit them, but the Lord ſhall cauſe them to fall before their enemies; They ſhall come out one way againſt them, and ſhall flie ſeven wayes before them: The Lord ſhall ſend a faintneſſe into their hearts, and the ſound of a leafe ſhaken ſhall chaſe them, and they ſhall flie as flying from a ſword, and they ſhall fall no man purſuing them, &c. Wherefore let us ever ſay with David: Though an Hoaſt be pitched againſt me, mine heart ſhall not be afraid; Though warre be raiſed againſt me, I will truſt in this, to wit, that God will deliver me, and give my faith the victory.

4. Among them that were ſlaine, Balaam that falſe Prophet was one; that wretch who for lucre and reward, would (againſt his conſcience) have curſed the people of God, and when by God he was bridled from ſo doing, hee gave wicked counſell, whereby they were ſnared, and brought to doe evill, to the loſſe of many lives in Gods wrath, for their ſo offending: where, obſerve with your ſelfe, what uſually happeneth to the maſters of evill counſell, even to fall by the plot themſelves which they deviſed for others, according to the heathen Poets ſaying; Malum conſilium conſultori peſſimum, yea according to the holy Prophets ſaying, Cadet impius in foveam quam fecit, the wicked ſhall fall in the ditch he hath made for others. This wicked Balaam wiſhed, He might die the death of the righteous, but now having lived the life of the wicked, he dieth alſo the death of the wicked.

5. And they burnt all their Cities, wherein they dwelt, and their villages with fire, and they tooke all the ſpoyle, and all the prey both of men and beaſts, the ſum of it was taken by Gods commandement, and there were ſix hundred ſeventy five thouſand ſheep, ſeventy and two thouſand Beeves, threeſcore and one thouſand Aſſes, two and thirty thouſand perſons in all of women that had lyen by no man. See, and obſerve with your ſelfe what eſtate we have in the things of this world, for which we ſo labour and toile, never caring how we get them. The wrath of God little troubles our heads, but he pleaſeth himſelfe beſt that gathereth moſt; let ſuch examples as theſe coole that getting veine in us, and quicken our feare of God, and care to pleaſe him. So ſhall he bleſſe our basket, and our dough; ſo ſhall hee bleſſe all our gettings, and proſper our places to our poſterity: otherwiſe looke how the Lord did here ſweep away in wrath, upon a ſudden, both perſons and goods, and gave them to ſtrangers, ſo can hee doe againe, our blood ſhall bee ſpilt in battell, and the earth drinke it up, our carcaſſes ſhall bee meate for the fowles of the ayre, and unto the beaſts of the earth, and none ſhall fray them away: wives and children, ſonnes and daughters weeping and wayling, carried captive, ſerving the pleaſures of men never knowne to us; how ſhould this ſink into our hearts if God be with us?

6. Moſes and Eleazar the Prieſt, and all the Princes of the Congregation, went out of the Campe to meet them, to wit, when they returned home from the battell; an ancient cuſtome in all Countries, to congratulate them that have adventured themſelves for their Country and people, when they returne home. Rome had glorious triumphes when they returned, and hee that was Generall of the Hoaſt, had a golden Chariot drawne with foure white Horſes, a Lawrell Crowne upon his head, before him the Enemy with neckes laden with chaines of miſery, and captivity, the which ſome going before, and all the Souldiers following after, with ſongs, mirth, and melody, able to raviſh with joy the victors, and to teare in peeces the hearts of the vanquiſhed with woe and griefe.

7. The great prey was divided into two equall parts: The one to goe to the Souldiers, the other to them that tarried at home. Which kinde of diviſion at firſt ſight ſeemed very unequall: For ſhould they which tarryed at home be as good in the diviſion of ſpoile, as they that got it with adventure of their lives? But if you marke it well, it was very fit for the Souldiers: firſt, being but twelve thouſand, and the reſt of the people, almoſt ſixe hundred thouſand, the Souldiers having halfe, they had farre more than they which ſtayed at home, as was fit they ſhould, then then that they which ſtayed at home ſhould have ſome, it was almoſt reaſonable, becauſe it was not their fault, through them, that they ſtayed, but the Lord appointing the number, all could not goe; therefore ſince they were as willing as the reſt, it pleaſed the Lord they ſhould have ſome part of the ſpoile for that unwillingneſſe, and for incouragement unto them. So all being reſpected, there was peace among them all, when otherwiſe there might have beene muttering and grudging. So ever is that juſt, and good, and gracious, which Chriſt doth. Reade in the firſt of the Kings and the 30. how David divided the ſpoile taken from the Amalekites.

8. This diviſion being made betwixt the Souldiers, and the reſt of the Congregation, the Lord ſteppeth in for his right, and ſaith; Thou ſhalt take a tribute unto the Lord of the men of war, &c. and alſo of the reſt out of their part, &c. The end of this tribute was double. Firſt, that ſo they might teſtifie their piety and gratitude to the Lord, acknowledging that this great warfare and ſpoyle grew by him, and from him, as indeed it did. Secondly, that the Levites might not be omitted, as men leſſe regarded for their Miniſtery than others. A moſt ſweet graciouſneſſe in the Lord ſtill, ſtill to ſhew his love and care for his Miniſters, how unkinde ſo ever the world is to them: Let them ſinke to hell in their ſinne. This was of contempt of their Paſtors and Teachers, not giving to them as they ought, with an affectionate heart for the Lords ſake, but raking and pulling every day, and every way from them: I ſay, Let them ſinke in this ſinne, If no ſaying can pierce their hearts, let it abundantly pleaſe us, cheare us, and comfort us, that the Lord our ſweet God careth for us, and will give, in deſpite of them, what hee ſhall thinke good, if we be faithfull in our places, and preferre his will and preſcripts before our ſelves, and all the allurements of the world whatſoever. For the proportion to be kept in rayſing his tribute, marke your Chapter, and you ſhall ſee it was from all alike taken, neither to all alike given, in an equalitie, but with great wiſedome, as before.

9. Then the Captains came unto Moſes, and ſaid, Thy ſervants have taken the ſumme of the men of warre which are under our authority, there lacketh not one man of us, we have therefore brought a preſent unto the Lord what every man found, of Iewels, of Gold, of Bracelets, and Chaines, Rings, and Ear-rings, and ornamẽts of the kings, to make an atonement of our ſouls before the Lord. An excellent place if you conſider it well: firſt ſhewing the mighty hand of God in giving ſuch a victory, without loſſe of any one man of the Iſraelites; then ſhewing again what a moſt holy feeling theſe men of warre had, of ſuch the Lords mercy and goodneſſe, when out of the ſame they brought over and above the tribute ſpoken of before, an offering to the Lord; Even for his mercy, of Iewels, of Gold, Bracelets, and Chaines, &c. Where may we ſee ſuch men of warre now adayes, ſo touched, ſo feeling, ſo thankfull to God for their found favours, and received benefits from him? O memorable act! Juſtly put in Gods Records, that all fleſh may ſee what ſhould be done; the ſumme was ſixteene thouſand ſeven hundred and fifteen ſhekels. Which worthy gift Moſes and Eleazar brought into the tabernacle of the congregation, for a memoriall of the children of Iſrael before the Lord.

CHAP. XXXII.

In the twenty one Chapter of this Booke, you reade how Seon King of the Amorites, and Og the King of Baſhan withſtood Iſrael, and were vanquiſhed by them; whereupon they become Maſters and Owners of their Countries by the Law of Armes. The poſſeſſion and Diviſion whereof is handled in this Chapter, containing for order theſe chiefe points.

The Petition of Ruben and Gad, verſe 2. &c.
Moſes chiding of them for making ſuch a requeſt, verſe 6, &c.
His conditionall granting it to them afterwards, verſe 20, &c.
The diviſion to Ruben, Gad, and halfe the Tribe of Manaſſes, verſe 33, &c.

CONcerning the firſt, a little wee may ſee in it, what is the caſe of them that either rule many in this world civilly, or by calling and place, are to lead men to ſpirituall Canaan: ſtill rubs and croſſes, and griefes will happen, moſt bitter to a heart that would fain have men be as they ſhould be. For if a man having but three or foure children or ſervants, cannot rule them ever to his will; how much leſſe thouſands, yea, many thouſands ſeverally affected and diſpoſed in their carriage. This requeſt fell out much beſides the expectation of Moſes, and with deepe wiſedome he ſaw what might have happened by it, but things fell out better when all was underſtood. Their requeſt for the manner is with great humility: If we have found grace in thy ſight, let this Land be given to thy ſervants, &c. So commonly doe rich and great men aske. Marke Achabs ſpeech to Naboth for his Vineyard, and Labans to Iacob for his ſervice, but they doe doe not anſwer ſo when requeſt is made, but in a higher key. Remember Nabal to Davids meſſengers, and Solomons words in the Proverbs: The rich ruleth the poore, and the borrower is ſervant to the lender, &c. For the matter, it is that they might dwell on this ſide the River, a convenient place for cattell, wherewith they abounded above the reſt of their brethren: Namely, in the Countries of Seon and Og, conquered and killed, as you have heard before. Why, will you ſay, that was out of the Land of Canaan, and will they loſe that bleſſing? Surely a little in them we may ſee, as in a ſigne, what a power the profits of this earth have in mens hearts; if not to put them quite away, yet to coole them, or ſlake them in their zeale to the Land of Canaan. The excuſes of them in the Goſpell you may well remember, Farmes, and Oxen, and Wives, ſinke in mens loves, to the offence of God many times. Abſolon forgets Canaan, that is, God and Heaven, when his heart is ſet upon his Fathers Kingdome, ambitiouſly, vainly, ſinfully, and traiterouſly. Achan in like ſort, when he coveteth the wedge of gold, and the Babyloniſh garment. Gehezy when he runneth after Naaman for a gift. Iudas, when hee betrayeth his Maſter, and thoſe wicked watchmen, that for money were content to ſay, he was ſtolne away by his Diſciples. Thoſe and their like make me remember that true ſaying: Avarus antequam lucratur ſeipſum perdit, & antequam capit capitur: A greedy covetous man, before he gets, loſeth himſelfe: and who are theſe Petitioners? Surely the firſt borne of their ſeverall Parents. Ruben of Leah, Gad of Zilpa, Manaſſes of Ioſeph. See then how often they which ſhould bee wiſer, and give better example, forget themſelves, and give moſt offence.

The ſecond part.

HEare now the anſwer of Moſes to them, Shall your brethren goe to war, and you tarry here? Wherefore now diſcourage you the hearts of the children of Iſrael, to go over into the land which the Lord hath given them? thus did your fathers, &c. Wherein is contained you ſee a ſharpe reproofe grounded upon two reaſons. The firſt, becauſe they ſeemed by this requeſt to have care onely of themſelves, and not of their brethren, which was not tolerable, ſurely there bee ever ſuch in this world, and ever will be, that looke to their owne particular, to make that as good as they may, little or nothing regarding the publique; but this is not good, neither ought it be ſo either in Church or Common-wealth. The ſecond reaſon is, becauſe hereby they ſeemed to diſcomfort and diſcourage their brethren, yea to move them to rebellion and inſurrection, for why ſhould they adventure for land not yet gotten, and others ſit downe and enjoy that which was already gotten, and gotten partly by their helpe, and happily loſſe of their blood and their friends, a juſt cauſe and forcible to move Moſes to anger, if it had beene ſo meant: For, Offendere alios ut avocantur à vocatione Dei & ab obedientia verbi illius, graviſſimum peccatum eſt: Quod qui committit, de eo Chriſtus inquit, quod tolerabilius ei eſſet ut ſuſpenderetur mola aſinaria in collo ejus & demergeretur in profundo maris: To offend others ſo as they be turned from the calling of God, and the obedience of his word, is a moſt grievous crime, which whoſoever committeth, Chriſt ſaith of him, it were better he were hanged with a milſtone about his neck and caſt into the Sea.

2. But a carefull Governour here as Moſes was, fearing the worſt in his vigilant love over the Congregation, receiveth an anſwer of better contentment, and findeth that things were not ſo intended as he feared. For they went neare unto him and ſaid, We will build ſheepfolds here for our ſheep and cattell, and Cities for our children, but we our ſelves will be ready armed to goe before the children of Iſrael untill we have brought them unto their place, but our children ſhall dwell in the defenced Cities, becauſe of the Inhabitants of the Land, we will not returne unto our houſes, untill the children of Iſrael have inherited every man his inheritance, neither will we inherit with them, beyond Iordan on that ſide, becauſe our inheritance is fallen to us on this ſide Iordan Eaſtward.

Marke I pray you the modeſty of this anſwer, although Moſes had more ſharply rebuked them than there was cauſe when their intent was knowne, yet they never opened their lips, nor uttered one word of anger, but reverently and mildly anſwer for themſelves, making their true purpoſe better knowne. Such cariage of our ſelves towards Magiſtrates and Governours, ſhall ever commend us, not only while we live, but ever after death, as it doth here even to this day.

The third part.

HEreupon followeth the third part of the Chapter, namely Moſes allowing of their requeſt, but with limitation and condition mentioned, If you will do this thing, and goe armed before the Lord to warre, untill he hath caſt out his enemies from his ſight: and untill the Land be ſubdued before the Lord, then ye ſhall returne and be innocent toward the Lord and toward Iſrael, and this Land ſhall be your poſſeſſion before the Lord: but if yee will not doe ſo, behold ye have ſinned againſt the Lord, and be ſure that your ſinne will finde you out, &c. See now herein on the other ſide a ſweet and commendable cariage in a Magiſtrate and Ruler. Moſes heareth with patience their anſwer unto him in defence of themſelves, and finding it to be reaſonable, is pacified with it, granting their deſire with convenient and juſt conditions: what can bee more comfortable to a ſubject or inferiour, than to be heard what he can ſay for himſelfe when hee is accuſed of any thing, and when he ſpeaketh truth and reaſon, to be accepted, cleered, and juſtified of wrongfull imputations, yea, diſmiſſed and ſent away with his hearts eaſe and full contentment? What ſhall we wiſh then, and from our hearts pray for, but that ever in Subjects there may be modeſty, meekneſſe, patience, and reverence to Governours; yea, although they be wronged, and worſe thought of than they deſerve: and in Magiſtrates to lend an eare to their defences and goodneſſe, to be ſatisfied and appeaſed with truth? God that guides all hearts, and hath them in his hand, as the Rivers of water, if it be his bleſſed will, give this bleſſing, and put out all fires and heates, all jealouſies and ſuſpitions from ſuperiour and inferiour, till the day come wherein we ſhall be freed from our infirmities, and our ſanctification perfected. Amen.

2. Then Moſes gave charge to Eleazar the Prieſt, and Ioſua the ſon of Nun, and the chiefe Fathers of the Tribes of the children of Iſrael, that if they kept this their Proviſo, they ſhall performe his promiſe to them, and ſuffer them to enjoy this Land; but if they brake promiſe, that there they ſhould not, but ſhould inherit among them beyond Jordan. This noteth ſtill the true care that was in that worthy Governour Moſes. And that they did performe, we ſhall ſee hereafter in the booke of Ioſua. In the meane time, I cannot but obſerve how well ſatisfied they were, if they might enjoy this portion, which they had made requeſt for, wiſhing that all our deſires were ſo confined within honeſt limits, as the world might ſee, and our conſcience tell us we could be ſatisfied with reaſon. It is an old ſaying, and as true as old; Eſt modus in rebus, ſunt certi denique fines, quos ultra citraque nequit conſiſtere virtus: There is a meaſure in all things, and certaine limits, without which, vertue, which is the meane, cannot conſiſt.

The fourth part.

THe laſt point of this Chapter is the diſtribution of this Land to theſe Tribes, to wit: of Reuben, Gad, and halfe the Tribe of Manaſſes, which you may reade from the thirty foure verſe. The uſe may be this, that our gracious God is never worſe than his promiſe, but often better, as here having promiſed but the Land of Canaan to them, yet he vouchſafeth now more to theſe Tribes, than that which they deſired. Solomon asked but wiſdome, but the Lord gave him more: as you may reade in that place, ſweet is he ever to them that pleaſe him, and happy we if our hearts be touched that way. Theſe had their portions in that earthly Canaan, as truly as the Lord had promiſed; and ſo ſhall we one day in that eternall Canaan, by the ſelfe-ſame truth of a never failing word: O day of joy, when ſhall it come! O haven of true reſt, when ſhall we poſſeſſe it! Lord of ſweetneſſe and all true comfort come, and come quickly, according to thy goodneſſe, to take us to thee for ever.

CHAP. XXXIII.

SOmething hath been ſpoken in this Booke of ſome chiefe pitchings where ſome memorable accidents fell out. But now in this Chapter it pleaſed God there ſhould be made a particular recitall of all the places where they pitched their Tents and made abode from their beginning to their entrance into Canaan, whereof there be theſe reaſons given. Firſt, a remembrance of their great and famous Deliverance out of bondage, together with ſuch benefits and favours as were annexed thereto, for nomination of places and times in particularity maketh much for certainty of Hiſtory, and mans better memory. Secondly, that by nomination of places they might remove ever their fearefull provocations of God unto anger againſt them, and namely and above all to turne them back againe for forty yeares into the wilderneſſe, even untill they dyed that ſo ſinned when they were at the skirts of the Land, ready to enter in and take poſſeſſion. Laſtly, that they might alſo remember how graciouſly the Lord ſtill tempered his wrath, and gave it not full force againſt their ſinnes, but remembred his Covenant with Abraham and their Fathers to the ſparing of them ſtill from the dayes of their diſobedience and ſinne. This peregrination was a moſt lively Figure of the ſtate of the Church Militant in this world toſſed up and downe, exerciſed with many dangers and troubles, vexed with wicked and diſobedient perſons in the midſt of her, whoſe ſins cary them to deſtruction in the end, yet ſtill is this Church, by the mercy and might of the Lord, defended, nouriſhed and kept till it arrive in Canaan that eternall habitation, provided for all beleevers, the higheſt Heavens:

Let

Let not therefore the troubles and perſecutions of the Church ever diſmay us, but ſtill look we for him that ſitteth betwixt the Cherubins be the earth never ſo unquiet, and commending our ſelves and all we have to him, welcome with patience his moſt holy will, whatſoever it is: hee is our Father, we may not doubt of his love, he is a King we may not doubt of his power, what he will he can, and he ever will what ſhall be beſt for us in the end.

2. Theſe removes are ſaid to be according to the Commandement of the Lord written by Moſes, as they fell out, and this wee know to bee true, becauſe they never pitched or removed, but as the Lord gave them warning, and as it were demonſtration: for if the Lord removed they removed, and if the Lord ſtood ſtill then they reſted; whereof ſome have made this uſe, that our pilgrimage here in this life ought not to be according to our owne will and pleaſure, or according to the traditions and devices of men, but according to the will and word of the Lord, which (as the Pſalmiſt ſaith) is a Lanterne to our feete, and a light unto our pathes.

The firſt remove was from Rameſes, the firſt moneth, even the firſt day of the firſt moneth, on the morrow after the Paſſeover. Rameſes was the name of a City, built, as you may reade, by the Iſraelites upon Pharaoh his commandement to put ſtore in. From hence they moved (ſaith the Text) with an high hand in the ſight of all the Ægyptians, God having ſlain their firſt borne, and they not daring to hinder them, but moſt glad to give them all the contentation they could, fearing leſt they ſhould have dyed all: A moſt notable ſhadow of our Redemption by Chriſt, deſtroying by his owne power all the glory of the world, and whatſoever men, according to the fleſh, might rejoyce in, or repoſe any truſt or confidence in, and delivering us from the power of Satan, Hell, Death, and Damnation, that we might enter into the eternall Canaan prepared by him in his mercy for the Elect, and this in the ſight of Satan, and all his members, not able to hinder it with all their power, not daring to ſpeake againſt it with all their venome: a notable ſhadow againe of the joyfull end of all the woes of the godly. For as this day of departure to the Iſraelites, after ſo many yeares of thraldome, miſery and bondage, was a moſt cheerefull day, ſo ſhall wee one day ſee an end of all our griefes, wrongs, oppreſſions, paines, ſorrowes, and ſuch like; with more comfort than either my poore pen can write, or my narrow heart comprehend, wee ſhall no more faile of ours, than the Iſraelites of theirs, bleſſed be God for ever.

The ſecond was in Succoth, for they removed from Rameſes, and pitched in Succoth, ſaith the Text: This place is memorable by that which you may reade in the booke of Iudges, where it is ſaid, Gideon prayed the men of Succoth to give morſels of bread unto his weary ſoldiers, and they would not, but give him a ſcoffe, whereupon when he had overcome his enemies Zeba and Zalmanath, he tooke the Elders of them, and thornes of the wilderneſſe, and bryers, and did teare the men of Succoth with them, as he had threatned.

They departed from Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderneſſe, and that was their third remove: and they removed from Etham, and turned againe unto Pihiroh, which is before Baal-Zephon, and pitched before Migdol, this was their fourth remove, a place famous by the great danger they were in there, this being a valley neare to the Red Sea, where in mans eyes there was no ſafety for them, but that they muſt be a prey to Pharaoh and his company purſuing after them, the Red Sea being before them, great hils on either ſide, and Pharaoh behinde them: unto which diſtreſſe the Lord would have his people fall, that all humane helpe failing, they might lift up their hearts to him, and receive a moſt admirable teſtimony of his love and power, to their confirmation for ever after to truſt in him, had they made right uſe of it. For the Lord here made the Red Sea part in two, and ſtand like walls on the right hand and left, till the Iſraelites had paſſed over on dry land, and when Pharaoh followed he made them cloſe againe, and drowned him and all his. So can he make all creatures ſerve for his childrens good, and for the bane and overthrow of their enemies. The great flood that drowned all the world, ſerved to carry up Noah his Arke, that hee and thoſe creatures with him might be ſafe: The fire and brimſtone that deſtroyed Sodome, could not hurt Lot; The Lions ſpared Daniel, and tare in pieces his enemies before they came to the ground; things of ſuch comfort and ſpirituall ſweetneſſe, as I chuſe rather to leave them to the gracious working of God in your hearts, then to endeavour by word to expreſſe what no tongue or pen can lay downe. Chaſtiſe us he may as a kinde father doth his childe for his good, but forſake us he will never, having power to quell all that riſe up againſt us in a moment with the breath of his mouth.

Being over the Sea they went three dayes journey in the wilderneſſe of Etham, and pitched at Marah, which was their fift Manſion. In the fifteenth of Exodus, you reade that all theſe three dayes they had no water, and yet they murmured not, cheared up with a great and wonderfull worke of God, in bringing them through the Sea: but at laſt comming to Marah, and finding water, but ſo bitter that they could not drinke, they forgot themſelves and murmured: ſo ſhewing, that when wee ſee things and cannot enjoy them, we are worſe than when we ſee them not, yet the Lords hearing was gracious, contrary to their deſert, and by appointing wood to be caſt into thoſe bitter waters made them ſweet, and fit for their uſe, this wood being a moſt notable figure of Chriſt, as hath beene ſhewed in the Book of Exodus.

Their fixt Manſion was in Elim, a place of much comfort and contentment : There being twelve Fountaines of water, and ſeventy Palm-trees ; where I pray you marke how graciouſly the Lord mixeth ſweet with ſowre, that his children may be able to beare the one, helped with the other: the twelve Fountaines are ſaid to be ſhadowes of the twelve Apoſtles, who by their Doctrine watered the world, as moſt glorious and ſweet Rivers; the ſeaventy Palme-trees, figures of ſeaventy Diſciples, which Chriſt choſe beſides his twelve Apoſtles : See Exodus 15. verſe 27.

They removed from Elim, and camped by the Red Sea, and they removed from the Red Sea and lay in the wilderneſſe of ſin; Here they received Quailes and Manna : Thus might I go over and name the reſt, but ſince you may reade them in the Text, and I before in the ſeverall places have touched what was moſt fit for ſuch as I write for, it ſhall not be needfull in going any further. There were in all forty two of them, and ſome have made them reſemblances of the deſcent of our Saviour from Abraham. For from Abraham to David, ſaith the Evangeliſt, are fourteen generations; from David to the Captivity fourteene generations, and from the Captivity to Chriſt fourteen generations, which in all are forty two generations, as thoſe campings of the Iſraelites were forty two : Let us begin at his bleſſed birth and reckon how we go forward in Faith, in Knowledge, in Love and Charity one towards another, and in all good works to his glory, and the good both of our ſelves and others : Such removes muſt we make till we come to our Canaan, even from faith to faith, from vertue to vertue, as ſons and daughters of a moſt holy God, that hath ſaid unto us, Be ye holy as I am holy, &c.

4. And the Lord ſpake unto Moſes in the Plaine of Moab by Iordan towards Iericho : ſaying, Speake unto the children, and ſay unto them, when ye were come over Iordan to enter into the Land of Canaan ye ſhall then drive out all the Inhabitants of the Land before you, & deſtroy all their pictures, and break in ſunder all their Images of metall, and pluck downe all their high places, &c. A declaration, as you ſee, how they ſhould behave themſelves when they came into the Land of Canaan : wherein concerning the deſtroying of the Inhabitants, behold it in the ſevere, but yet the juſt hand of God, who having by the ſpace of foure hundred yeares looked for their repentance and amendment, found it not; but in ſtead thereof rather an accumulation of wickedneſſe and ſin, as if there had been no God, or he unable to take vengeance of them at his pleaſure: wherefore at laſt he ſmiteth with his moſt bloody ſword, to the deſtruction of them. Another reaſon of this puniſhment ; That his people might not be diſeaſed with their lewd wayes, as fleſh and blood is apt to take infection of the ſame. And thirdly, that the Land may bee made voide for his people to poſſeſſe it, according to his promiſe : Let us learne to feare by theſe judgements, for God is the ſame ever, if we provoke him with our ſins; and let us know that although here be given a great charge to deſtroy, yet it was to the Governours, and not every private man at his will, without directions and commandement from them ; and for Idols and pictures it was meant of ſuch as were Idolatrous indeed: not of lawfull remembrance of perſons or actions commendable, whereof every Nation hath ſome.

5. So carefull is the Lord of this execution, to be made according to his will without affection and partiality, that he addeth a threat ; If they would not drive them out, thoſe which remained ſhould be prickes in their eyes, and thornes in their ſides, and ſhould vexe them and the Land wherein they dwelt : Yea, moreover, which (I ſhrink to write) it would come to paſſe that he would do unto them, as he thought to do to the Cananites : Yet for all this the Iſraelites obeyed not, but ſuffered divers to live and remaine with them which brought them to many miſeries in the juſtice of God, upon ſuch preſumption and ingratitude, as if God pleaſe to give life and leave, I ſhall carefully uſe in the booke of Iudges, the diviſion by lot I have heretofore noted, and therefore paſſe it over now.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Two chiefe points are contained in this Chapter: to wit:

The declaration of the limits of the land of Canaan.
The names of them that ſhould divide it unto the Iſraelites.

CONcerning the firſt, in great wiſdome did the Lord declare how far this land ſhould extend, knowing the unſatiable humour that is in mankinde oftentimes, to poſſeſſe more than he ſhould, although he be far from well uſing that which he hath. I ſhall not need to mention the appointed markes and bounds, you ſee them plaine in the Text, and upon Geneſis I have noted how every thing fell out according to the foretelling of Iacob at his end. A manifeſt note that God giveth the lots whenſoever they are caſt into the lap, as Solomon ſaith; and that whatſoever God hath appointed to any man or woman, it ſhall in Gods time fall unto them: No power being able to hinder it; I tell you a great comfort, when we ſee the plots and practiſes of evill men againſt us, we may be ſure, and let them work till their heart burſt, they cannot diſappoint Gods determination for us, and what they doe diſappoint, was never Gods purpoſe wee ſhould have, nor good for us, aſſuredly, if wee attribute to the Lord either wiſedome or love.

2. Touching the ſecond it may be ſaid, What needed any to divide when lots muſt be caſt? Theſe men forget that firſt the Land was to be divided into ten parts, and then lots caſt which of thoſe ſhould fall to every Tribe. After againe, many ſubdiviſions were to be made before every particular man could have a ſhare: in all which, ſome muſt bee to expedite that work: The Lord excepts the Tribes of Reuben and Gad, with halfe Manaſſes, becauſe they were ſped already, yet not ſo excepteth he them from the land, but that he includeth them in his Covenant and number of his children. And for the land alſo; although it was no part of Canaan promiſed, yet after grant made to them, as yet the Lord is pleaſed to admit it as an acceſſary to it. For the Commiſſioners; I marke it here, I marke it often, and you if you pleaſe may note it with me, that ſtill the Lord liked to make Eleazar the Prieſt one. Should I lay to it the reckoning that is made of Clergy men in theſe dayes, be they never ſo well qualified, I ſhould make no ſmall fault appeare lurking in ſome mens hearts, which God in time will both diſcover, and ſeverely puniſh, reaching indeed to the contempt of himſelfe.

CHAP. XXXV.

The chiefe heads of this Chapter are two: namely,

An order for the maintenance of the Levites.
Another for Cities of refuge in caſes of ſuppoſed murther.

TOuching the firſt, the Lord having choſen the Levites for his Tabernacle, and to the ſervice of the Miniſtery: He will not have them as other Tribes be, reckoned in the diviſion of the Land, they being not to dwell together, as the other Tribes. Yet he will not have them deſtitute or baſely provided for, but in a fitting and liberall manner, ſo that both they might apply their calling to the better, and not to bee contemptible for their powers, for their allowance; therefore he appointeth them the firſt fruits and tenths; and for dwellings hee commandeth certaine Cities to be given to them, with Suburbs of a thouſand Cubites round about the ſaid Cities; for their Cattell and for their ſubſtance, and for all their beaſts, then two thouſand Cubites more; for to plant and to ſow in for food for themſelves and Cattell: ſo that there was in all three thouſand Cubites round about; of theſe Cities there were forty eight taken from the Tribes, the more from them that had more, and leſſe from them that had leſſe: So were they diſperſed among the Tribes, quaſi cuſtodes ad conſervandum Dei cultum: as it were keepers of Gods ſincere worſhip among them, leſt any prophane ſuſpition or error might creep in among them. This was the care of the Lord then for them that were to attend upon his ſervice in his Tabernacle, and to inſtruct his people in their duties towards him, which would men conſider with religious hearts, and caſt it up, what a liberall portion it was, it could not be that ſuch coldneſſe and ill defection towards the Miniſtery in theſe dayes ſhould cary them away, in a moſt fearefull maner as it doth, not only to the not giving of any thing to their better maintenance to follow their function, but to the moſt irreligious taking away daily from them, what others have given many yeares agoe.

The ſecond part.

THe ſecond head of this Chapter is concerning Cities of refuge, or ſanctuaries, as we ſpeak; The Lord would have ſix in number, and theſe of the Cities which ſhould be given to the Levites; Three in Canaan, and three beyond Iordan, among the Reubenites, Gadites, and halfe the Tribe of Manaſſes, which, as you have heard, had their portion there: to have them thus ſcattered, that no man driven to uſe them might goe too far, and ſo haply be intercepted by the revenger of blood before he could recover the Sanctuary, and that he would have them of the Cities of the Levites, it was that the dignity of the Miniſtery might the more protect them from violence and wrong till the cauſe were heard, alſo it might be more aſſured, that in ſtead of guiltleſſe men, for whom properly they were ordained, there ſhould not be taken in known Malefactors and bad perſons, unworthy to be protected by that meanes. Such a reverend opinion would God then have all men have of the Miniſtery of Prieſthood: But O Lord is it ſo in theſe dayes? Doth thy wiſdome and will ſtrike mens hearts with a care to follow it? Give thy ſervant leave to ſay with David, Enter not into judgement with thouſands in theſe dayes, and many of them hate profeſſors outwardly. For if thou ſhalt marke what is done amiſſe in this point, how Lord, how Lord ſhall they be able to abide it? Be pleaſed (gracious Lord) rather to purge their hearts from this venome and moſt fearefull hypocriſie, that they loving thy Goſpell, not in ſhew, but in truth, may honor thee the God of it, and thy Prieſts and Levites for thee, knowing that if they caſt them away, they caſt thee away, thou having in great mercy to mankinde made them thy meſſengers and Embaſſadors to deliver thy will unto them, the following of which ſhall ſave their ſoules, and the contempt whereof ſhall caſt them away for ever: Now beſides this gracious conceit in the Lord, of the wiſdome, gravity, honeſty, and ſincerity of his Prieſts and Levites, to whom he would have this truſt committed; This placing of theſe Cities with them, figured that as that Prieſthood was a defence unto men in caſes limited; ſo ſhould the moſt holy and al-ſufficient Prieſthood of Chriſt be a Sanctuary to all ſuch as in faith flye unto him. According to the Apoſtle, If any man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation of our ſins.

2. But were theſe Cities of refuge for all malefactors? No, not for Idolaters, blaſphemers, perjured perſons, theeves, adulterers, and ſuch like, but onely for manſlaughter, and not for all, but only for ſuch caſually and by error, and not by any forborne malice and of purpoſe were committed: plainly therefore the Lord diſtinguiſhed wilfull murder from caſuall killing, granting Sanctuary to the one, not to the other; and yet how granting? Not without judiciall hearing and examination, by which if he proved guilty, his Sanctuary profited not, and if guiltleſſe yet was he not diſmiſſed, but ſent back to his Sanctuary, there to live and remaine till the death of the high Prieſt, and then to be free. O moſt ſingular ſhadow of our deliverance by the death of our bleſſed high Prieſt Chriſt Ieſus.

3. But how were the Iudges to proceed in theſe cauſes, even that alſo is laid down by God in this Chapter, by two rules; The firſt, Whoſoever kils any perſon, the Iudge ſhall ſlay the murtherer through witneſſes: but one witneſs ſhall not teſtifie againſt a perſon to cauſe him to die. This was the triall the Lord then liked, and ſtill liketh by witneſſes, but not by one, for one may be miſcaried, but two or three will give light by ſome differences, being well examined apart, if there be ſuſpition of ſubornation, or any wicked dealing. Therefore in the mouth of two or three witneſſes ſhall every word ſtand, ſaith the Lord in another place; and, receive no accuſation againſt an Elder (ſaith the Apoſtle) but in the teſtimonies of two or three witneſſes: The ſecond Rule, ver. 31. Ye ſhall take no recompence for the life of the murtherer which is worthy to die: but he ſhall be put to death, &c. For mans life is a more precious thing than that it ought to be ſold for money. No recompence being ſufficient for it. Againe, by murder the land is ſo defiled, as no expiation can be made, but by blood againe, and when the Magiſtrate doth ſuch Iuſtice the Lord is appeaſed, as with a ſacrifice, beſide which Cities expiation there is another holy and heavenly, which is by the blood of the immaculate Lambe, without which no ſin can be done away. A great motive to Iudges to take heed to the clenſing of the land by their Iuſtice the Lord giveth them, when he ſaith, for I dwell in the midſt thereof. And now thinke with your ſelfe what it is either to juſtifie the wicked, or to condemne the innocent. Surely full heavy accompts have ſome men to make, as well out of Weſtminſter, as in it, God give men uſe of this ſacred word, ſo guiding and directing every man in his place, as if himſelfe hinder not he may pleaſe God and be ſaved.

Chap.

CHAP. XXXVI.

IN the 27. Chapter of this Booke, you remember a queſtion moved, touching the daughters of Zelophehad, whether their father dying without heyres males, they his daughters ſhould not inherit: And it was reſolved, that in ſuch a caſe daughters ought to inherit. Now in this Chapter queſtion is moved of their marriage, whether it might be out of the Tribe or no? The daughters would bee at liberty to marry in any Tribe, the men of their Tribe thinke it ought not to be ſo, and they bring two ſtrong reaſons for them.

The firſt drawne from the diviſion of the land by Gods appointment. To every Tribe a portion, not confounded with others, but peculiar to themſelves. But if women inheriters ſhould marry out of their Tribe, and carry their inheritance with them, it would alter the diviſion made by Gods appointment, mingle the Tribes which ſhould remaine diſtinct, and happely be the decay and overthrow of ſome Tribe.

The ſecond reaſon drawne from the yeare of Jubile, wherein lands were to returne to their firſt owners, which could not be, if theſe women were maried to other Tribes. For their huſbands children would not reſtore it to the right Tribe, but keeepe it as depending upon them by inheritance, not bought with any money, &c. when then they could not agree, they bring the caſe before Moſes, who (by warrant from the Lord, for ſo it appeareth in the Text) reſolved it thus, that in ſuch caſes daughters might marry where they would in their owne Tribe, but not out.

2. Now for uſe to our ſelves, wee ſee how lawfull and pleaſing to God it is, that in caſes of controverſie and doubt, men ſhould uſe the helpe of the Magiſtrate, Judge, and Juſtice, ſo it bee without ranckor and venome one towards another, which is ever an abuſe of men, and no fault in the Law: For the Magiſtrate is Gods Arbitrator, or Commiſſioner, to end and determine mens controverſies, and to preſerve peace, unity and love among them.

That which the Apoſtle writeth to the Corinthians, is not againſt this.

3. From the particular, Moſes commeth to the generall, and ſaith, not of theſe onely, but of all. Every daughter that poſſeſſeth any inheritance, of the Tribes of the children of Iſrael, ſhall be wife unto one of the family of the Tribe of her Father, that the children of Iſrael may enjoy every man the inheritance of their Fathers. Neither ſhall the inheritance goe about from Tribe to Tribe, but every one of the Tribes of Iſrael ſhall ſticke to his owne Inheritance.

Some have taken this Law, as if no men then might marry out of their owne Tribes, and therefore Hierome tranſlated the words, Omnes viri ducent uxores de Tribu & cognatione ſua: All men ſhall marry wives of their owne Tribe and kindred, but this place ſpeaketh onely of women, and not of men. Nether of all women, but ſuch onely as had inheritance, others might marry where they would.

Iehoida the Prieſt married Ioſabeth the daughter of Ioram, King of Iuda, the ſiſter of Ochoſias, the King. Alſo Zacharias the father of Iohn Baptiſt, married Elizabeth, Couſin to the bleſſed Virgin, of the Tribe of Iuda. Aaron the Prieſt againe, maried Elizabeth, daughter of Aminadab, of the Tribe of Iuda.

At this day many are too apt to marry too neare in their blood, of which commeth great griefe in ſtead of comfort, and rather a curſe than a bleſſing from the Lord, the world is wide enough, were not men too carnall.

4. Theſe daughters of Zelophehad obey the judgement of Moſes, and marry in their Tribe: Teaching us at this day, to reſt in the determination of the Magiſtrate, and not to runne from Court to Court, onely in malice, and a contentious ſpirit, till we have inriched others, and beggered our ſelves.

There may bee a uſe ſometimes of appeale, or going about againe upon better light, but let not reaſons be pretended when they are not, to ſatisfie our corruption: for Deus videt, GOD ſeeth: And GOD being the GOD of peace, he will ever ſhew his diſlike of quarrelling and contention.

5. By this caſe of theſe women and others, wee may ſee that even in the Law of God there were Caſus omiſſi, Caſes omitted; and therefore no marvell if it be ſo in mens lawes. But take things right, that you offend not againſt God.

Mens lawes are imperfect, becauſe mens knowledge and underſtanding is imperfect, but farre be it from us to thinke ſo of God, whoſe wiſdome ſeeth and knowes all things. In his law therefore this and ſuch other caſes were omitted of purpoſe, till the reſolution might grow à re nata, from the caſe hapning: and this for two reaſons: Firſt, that ſo he might preſerve the authority and majeſty of his Word; which if ſuch things ſhould have beene inſerted before, occaſion falling out, might have ſeemed not ſo great and full of reverence, handling light things not in queſtion. But when occaſion falleth out, then hath the reſolution weight, and is obſerved of all.

Secondly,

Secondly, that hee might thus force them to flie to him at all times, and depend upon his wiſedome in their hapning caſes, as was fit.

Laſtly, we obſerve it there, that God ſaid of thoſe Daughters, They might marry where they liked, but onely in their owne Tribe, not forcing them to husbands, but tying to their owne Family.

Now if God left them to their liking, ſhould men force their children againſt all love and liking? No, no, it is a ſinne, and not a ſmall one, bitter to the childe all the dayes of life, and not very ſweet to the Parents, after they ſee the fruits of their violence. Let children dutifully regard parents, and parents charitably and religiouſly regard their children; who will beg with better will where they like, than live without love in worlds abundance.

We have knowne too often the childe crie, the Father crie, and the Mother die for this fault, when it was too late. Thus hath God beene pleaſed to let me give you ſome taſte of the uſe of the Booke of Numbers, reade the Text, and reade thoſe Notes, and the Lord in mercy give his bleſſing.

Amen, Amen.

COMFORTABLE NOTES
UPON THE BOOKE OF DEUTERONOMY.

THis is now the fifth and laſt booke of Moſes, containing the entrance of theſe Children of Iſrael, after ſo long a travell, into the Land of Canaan. The ſcope and marke endeavoured unto from the beginning, containing alſo the death of Moſes, and his laſt ſpeech unto the people which hee had governed, with ſuch care, zeale, and faithfulneſſe, ſo many yeares.

To ſpeake at large, as the former Bookes, is altogether needleſſe, ſince little is in it that hath not in ſome ſort beene touched in the former Bookes: This being but a rehearſall of thoſe Lawes and Precepts of God.

Againe, I remember I have ſeene divers yeares ago, when I was young, and thought not of this poore labour, ſome Commentaries and Expoſitions of this Booke in Engliſh, either by Tranſlation or otherwiſe, which may ſupply the want of mine now. And indeed my yeares and preſent ſickneſſe, wherein I now write this little, bid me conclude, for my glaſſe is almoſt runne in mans eyes, not prejudicing the power and mercy of my God, who at this time hath brought mee up from the gates of death, and ſet mee up againe, ever bleſſed be his Name for it. Wherefore I reſolve to follow that little Abridgement that Ferus maketh, and following thoſe Heads, to reſt in ſo much to bee ſpoken of this Booke. The Heads be theſe:

1. A repetition of the benefits of God to them.
2. A touch alſo of his Juſtice, puniſhing their faults.
3. Sweet perſwaſions and exhortations to obedience.
4. An Explanation of the Law.
5. A Denunciation of Bleſſings and Curſings, as they ſhould deſerve.
6. A peculiar Song made for remembrance.
7. A Bleſſing of every Tribe ſeverally by it ſelfe.
8. Laſtly, his going up to the Mount to die.

The firſt Head.

COncerning the firſt, Moſes maketh an effectuall rehearſall of Gods favours to them, though not in order, as a moſt piercing Argument to their hearts, to love and obey that God that was ſo kinde to them and theirs.

Theſe benefits and mercies have beene ſpoken of in the Bookes before, and therefore leaving them in the place: Let us make uſe to our ſelves of this Argument, and religiouſly call to remembrance the manifold mercies he hath ſhewed to us ſince we were borne, and before.

Before we were borne, when the Clay lay before him, to make veſſels of honour, and veſſels of diſhonour, it pleaſed him to caſt his gracious eye upon us, and appoint us to a Kingdome of eternall joy and comfort with himſelfe. A mercy above the apprehenſion of any mortall heart, if if either we conſider the felicity of it, or the terrour and horrour of that burning Lake, together with the eternity of it. Being borne and brought into the world, to live, to love, to ſerve him withall.

Heb. 1.1. Thus ſaith the Apoſtle, At ſundry times, and in divers manners, God ſpake in the old time to our Fathers by the Prophets, but he hath ſpoken to us in theſe laſt dayes by his Sonne.

Chap. 12, 18, &c. Now looke how this Sonne of God ſurpaſſeth Moſes, ſo ſurpaſſeth the mercy of God, that grace and favour that hee vouchſafed them. Marke the words of the Apoſtle that follow, and feele them in the heart. Wee are not come to the Mount that might not be touched, nor unto burning fire, nor to blackneſſe, and darkneſſe, and tempeſt, neither unto the ſound of a Trumpet, and the voyce of words, which they that heard it excuſed themſelves, that the word ſhould not be ſpoken to them any more. For they were not able to abide that which was commanded, &c.

Yea, ſo terrible was the ſight which appeared, that Moſes ſaid, I feare and quake; but we are come unto the Mount Sion, and to the City of the living God, the Celeſtiall Hieruſalem, and to the company of innumerable Angels, and to the aſſembly and Congregation of the Firſtborne, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the ſpirits of juſt and perfect men, and to Ieſus, the Mediator of the New Teſtament; and to the blood of Sprinekling, that ſpeaketh better things than that of Abel. What an amplification and ſetting out of the mercy that we enjoy, is this that followeth?

See then that yee deſpiſe not him that ſpeaketh, for if they eſcaped not which refuſed him that ſpake on earth, much more ſhall we not eſcape if wee turne away from him that ſpeaketh from heaven; whoſe voyce ſhooke the earth, &c. Wherefore ſaith the bleſſed Apoſtle, ſeeing we receive a Kingdome which cannot be ſhaken, let us have grace, whereby we may ſo ſerve God, that we may pleaſe him with reverence and feare. For even our God is a conſuming fire.

Thus excelleth our ſtate under Chriſt and his Goſpell, the ſtate of the people of Iſrael; to whom yet you ſee how Moſes urgeth the benefits of God, to move them to love, obedience, and thankfulneſſe. How much more us in generall, and every one of us in particular for a bleſſing? O thinke, and thinke againe, with bended knees of heart, what a mercy it is to feele in the ſoule aſſurance, ſweeter than honey and the honey combe: That when all the woes of this world are ended, (under which, God hath beene pleaſed for our good, to let us a while ſigh,) ſickneſſe of body, loſſe of friends, undutifulneſſe and unthankfulneſſe of children, hollowneſſe and fraud, where ſincerity and truth were reckoned of, with a thouſand ſuch like, wee ſhall bee

Rom. 8. 16. tranſlated to the glorious Palace of the Kings of kings, and Lords of lords; to live for ever with him in ſuch bliſſe, as no Eye hath ſeene, no Eare hath heard, nor ever mortall heart could comprehend: which aſſurance he giveth to us by his bleſſed Spirit; bearing witneſſe to our ſpirits, that we are the Children of God. And this Spirit we know to be his true Spirit, and no preſuming fancie in us, by two effects he worketh in us, to wit, the hatred of ſinne, and the love of righteouſneſſe, holineſſe, and all honeſt converſation. O I ſay againe, what a mercy is this, what

Pſal. 116. heart will not love and obey ſuch a God? Thinke of Davids feeling, when hee cryed, What ſhall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits beſtowed on me? Thinke of him againe, when he ſaith, It is good for me to hold me faſt by God (faſt, faſt, that my hold ſlippe not) to put

Pſa. 71. my truſt in him, &c. Againe in another Pſalme, Praiſe the Lord O my ſoule, and forget not

Eſa. 93. 7. all his benefits. Thinke of the Prophet Eſay his words: I will remember the mercies of the Lord, and the praiſes of the Lord, according unto all that the Lord hath given us, and for the great goodneſs toward the Houſe of Iſrael, which he hath given them, according to his tender love, and according to his great mercy, &c. When the Iſraelites forgot Gods favours and benefits to them, ſaith the Pſalme, they fell from God, they ſtarted aſide like a broken bow, &c. God in juſtice ſo puniſhing their unthankfulneſſe.

Thus the holy Scriptures. Heare wee now a little, what feeling holy men out of the Scrip-

Greg. Moral. ture have had of this point. Gregory hath this notable ſaying, Stude quæſo, & quotidiè Creatoris tui verba meditare, diſce cor Dei in verbis Dei, ut ad æterna ſuſpicias: Nam tanto erit requies tua major in cœlis, quanto jam in terris ab amore Conditoris tui requies nulla fuerit: Study, ſaith this worthy Father, (I pray thee) and daily meditate on the words of thy Creator, and learne the minde of God in the words of God, that thou mayeſt looke up to eternall things: For ſo much ſhall thy reſt be greater in heaven, by how much it hath been even none from the love of thy Creator here on Earth.

Aug. Medit. Againe, Meditatio parit ſcientiam, ſcientia compunctionem, compunctio devotionem, devotio commendat orationem, ſaith Saint Auguſtine out of his knowledge and experience: Meditation breedeth knowledge, (to wit, of his benefits, and our unworthineſſe and ſinne) knowledge and breedeth compunction of heart for the ſame, compunction worketh devotion, and devotion maketh pleaſing to the Lord the invocations and prayers.

Hugolib. 3. de Anima. O meditate then of his goodneſſe, favours and mercies evermore. And remember this ſaying often of a feeling heart: Sicut nullum eſt momentũ in quo homo non utatur Deo: ſic nullũ eſſe debet debet momentis quo eum præſentem non habet in memoria. Omne enim tempus, in quo de Deo non cogites puta te perdidiſſe: As there is no moment wherein Man uſeth not God; ſo ought there to be no moment, wherein he hath not him preſent in his memory. For all the time wherein thou thinkeſt not of God, thinke thou haſt loſt, and it is periſhed and ill gone. Hæc continua Dei memoria, eſt fœlix illa unio Spiritus noſtri cum Deo, quem tanti fecerunt Sancti. Hæc eſt illa quam David inſinuat ſe conſecutum, cùm toties repetit in Pſalmis: Dominum in conſpectu ſuo fuiſſe ſemper, ſemper ſe in lege ejus meditatum, ſemper laudem ejus in ore fuiſſe: This continuall remembrance of God and his mercies, is that bleſſed union of our ſpirits with God, which holy men ſo much regarded in their times. This is that which David inſinuateth he had obtained: when ſo often in the Pſalmes he repeateth, that God was ever in his ſight; that ever he meditated in his Law; that ever his praiſe was in his mouth, &c.

Licet rex fuerit, & multis bellis occupatus.

There be ſhort motions and feelings in the children of God, which are as it were darts ſent out of the heart by Gods working Spirit in us: which we may uſe, when we cannot uſe longer, or are cold, and not ſo well affected and diſpoſed to prayer, or large meditation, as God knoweth the beſt are dull too often.

Theſe Saint Auguſtine perſwadeth Proba to uſe: and theſe are ſometimes in ſorrow and griefe, for frailty and ſinne, as Pſa. 51. ſometime in gratitude, as Pſal. 103. Praiſe the Lord O my ſoule, and all that is within me praiſe his holy Name, &c. Sometime in the ſweet ſting of love, as Pſa. 18. I will love thee dearely O Lord my ſtrength. The Lord is my rocke, and my fortreſſe, and he that delivereth me, my God, and my ſtrength, in him will I truſt, my ſhield, the horne alſo of my ſalvation, and my refuge. I will call upon the Lord, which is worthy to be praiſed, ſo ſhall I be ſafe from mine emies. Let the Lord live, and bleſſed be my ſtrength, and the God of my ſalvation be exalted.

Sometimes in a taſte of the joyes of heaven, and the love of that celeſtiall Sion, as Pſalm. 48. and 55. with others.*

If the benefits of men here on earth, have ſuch a power to captivate the heart unto love, O Lord, how ſhould the benefits and favours of God pierce us, and move us to a retribution of love? Si vis amari, ama: If thou wilt be beloved, love thy ſelfe (ſaith our Bookes.) O turne it to God, and ſay in your ſoule, Why my God, why, why my God, ſhould I expect or deſire love in thee to me, if I be void or frozen in love to thee? This was Moſes firſt Argument, to move the Iſraelites to their duties in loving, and ſerving, and faſt cleaving unto God, the remembrance of his benefits and favours done to them, which as it ought to have prevailed with them: So may it be applyed in this ſort unto us, and wee wrought by the working of that moſt ſweet and bleſſed Spirit, to the duty, as due from us, as from them. O that it may, O that it may, I ſay againe: And then ſhall we live in a comfortable eſtate here, whileſt the Lord vouchſafeth us to draw breath, make an happy end, when wee muſt away, and inherit eternall bliſſe, when we are gone: Eternall Trinitie, Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghoſt, grant it to us. Amen. Amen.

The ſecond Head.

THE ſecond Argument uſed by * Moſes, to move to conſtant love, and obedience to the Lord, is drawne from the Juſtice of God, as if he ſhould ſay, But it may bee all will not bee moved with the ſweet favours of God: but ſome will grow bold, preſumptuous, wanton and careleſſe, which if it fall out, let ſuch looke upon Gods Juſtice. and remember well, that albeit in this moſt gracious manner, as I have rehearſed, he did heape mercy upon mercy unto you, yet when you ſtarted aſide, and became diſobedient, and tranſgreſſors of his will, hee turned to his Juſtice, and ſeverely and ſharply hee puniſhed your rebellious wayes againſt him, by very fearfull plagues among you, by the ſword of your enemies, by opening of the earth, and ſwallowing ſome of you, and ſuch like.

* Deus converſis remittit culpam & pœnam æternam, tamen regulariter premit certis calamitatibus quæ & ipſis utiles ſunt & aliis ſpectatoribus: ipſis dolore, his exemplo. Servamus ergò Deo, &c. ſive ut Iob 9. vereamur omnia opera ejus, ſcientes quod non parcit Deus delinquenti. Heb. 12. 2.

He is the ſame God ſtill, as juſt as ever, and as perfectly hating all wicked wayes, as ever. And therefore be well aſſured, if you will take the bit in your teeth, and trangreſſe his Law given unto you, he will doe as he formerly did, ſcourge you in his wrath, and puniſh you ſharpely in his moſt juſt diſpleaſure.

This is Moſes Argument, which I wiſh we may make application of to our ſelves: and ſuch as are out of all good wayes, learne to looke up, whileſt God giveth time and ſpace, and ſuch as doe feare God, and in ſome meaſure ſerve him with their infirmities and wants, bee more and more ſtrengthened in their vertue and well-doing, knowing that God, as he is a moſt ſweet Father, if he be loved and obeyed: ſo he is ever juſt, if he be forſaken or neglected, to puniſh ſuch ingratitude. For (ſaith the Apoſtle) if they eſcaped not, which refuſed him that ſpake on earth, much more ſhall we not eſcape, if we turne away from him that ſpeaketh from heaven. For our God is even a conſuming fire. Remember often with your ſelfe, and reade them often in your Bible, thoſe thundring ſpeeches of Juſtice which you meete with. As that in the nine and twentieth twentieth of this Booke of Deuteronomy: If there bee among you any roote that bringeth forth Gall and Wormewood: ſo that a man knowing and hearing theſe words, doe bleſſe himſelfe in his heart, ſaying; I ſhall have peace, although I walke according to the ſtubbornneſſe of my owne heart, adding drunkenneſſe to thirſt: (now marke I pray you) the Lord will not be mercifull unto him, but the wrath of the Lord, and his jealouſie ſhall ſmoake againſt that man, and every curſe that is written in this Booke, ſhall light upon him, and the Lord ſhall put out his name from under heaven. Can there bee a more fearfull ſpeech uttered by the tongue of man? O how much more dreadfull, comming from the Spirit of God, the God of truth and juſtice? Heare another much like unto it, in the two and thirtieth Chapter of this Booke: Fire is kindled in my wrath, and ſhall burne unto the bottome of hell, and ſhall conſume the earth with her encreaſe, and ſet on fire the foundations of the Mountains.

Deut. 24. 4.

I will ſend plagues upon them, I will beſtow mine arrowes upon them. They ſhall be burnt with heate, and conſumed with hunger, and with bitter deſtruction. I will alſo ſend the teeth of beaſts upon them, with the venome of Serpents, creeping in the duſt. The ſword ſhall kill them without, and in the chambers, feare both the young man, and the young woman, the ſuckling, with the man of gray haires, &c. Forget not the Pſalme; The Lord will trie the righteous, but the wicked, and him that loveth iniquitie, doth his ſoule abhorre. Upon the wicked he ſhall raine ſnares, fire, and brimſtone, ſtorme and tempeſt: this is the portion of their cup. For the righteous Lord loveth righteouſneſſe, and his countenance doth behold the juſt. See then, and ſee with feeling, conſider, and conſider with judgement theſe things. They are the words of your God, and the Dictates of his holy Spirit, Heaven and earth ſhall paſſe, but not one title of this truth ever faile: Sweet he is, good he is, and happy is hee that cleaveth unto him; but withall you ſee, juſt he is, holy he is, and ten thouſand woes to him that falleth from him. Much more might the juſtice of God bee inlarged by examples, but this people of Iſrael may ſerve for all. They were his choſen, his peculiar, to whom he ſet himſelfe to doe good, yet when they ſhrunke from him, ſinned againſt him, and provoked him to wrath, hee ſpared them not, but made them alwayes ſee his juſtice. Yea, the record of it is with us this day, and ſhall endure to the end of the world. O vow then with your ſelfe, for his ſake that dyed for you, that both Mercy and Juſtice ſhall move you, and that this grace aſſiſting and vouchſafing ſtrength, you will conſtantly obey him, declining and avoiding, denying and defying all alluring baits and temptations to the contrary, whileſt you live. Which the Lord Jeſus grant unto you, and to us all, for his mercy ſake. Amen. Amen.

Pſa. 11. 4, &c.

Pſal. 2. If his wrath be kindled, &c.

Nabuc. fearfull puniſhment. B. Gard.

The third Head.

THe third way Moſes taketh with them, is by many ſweet enterlaced perſwaſions and exhortations. Hoping that way to prevaile, as indeed with an ingenious nature and feeling heart, good and effectuall words comming from love and truth prevaile much. Examples of his exhortations you muſt marke, diſpoſed throughout this Booke, as you meet with them in your private reading. As that in the fourth Chapter: Now therefore, Hearken O Iſrael, unto the ordinances, and unto the lawes which I teach you to doe, that you may live, (marke it) that yee may live, and goe and poſſeſſe the Land which the Lord God of your Fathers giveth you, &c. Your eyes have ſeene what the Lord did becauſe of Baal-Peor, ſo all the men that followed Baal-Peor, the Lord thy God hath deſtroyed every one from among you: But yee that cleave unto the Lord your God are alive every one of you this day: And ſo throughout that Chapter, read it over, and I pray you reade it over for my ſake. So in the ſixt and ſeventh Chapter, for uſe and application to our ſelves, let us, as in a glaſſe, behold our corruption gotten by our fall, and ever ſince cleaving unto us inſeparably, that hath need of this repetition over and over, and ſo often over of exhortation to that which is our good, not onely in this world, but eternally. Alacke to evill, and that which leadeth us to eternall deſtruction, halfe the labour needeth not, but three words in a corner by ſome of Satans inſtruments, or a two-penny pamphlet, or a paltry ballad, or ſuch like, turneth us out of the way from good, from Church, from Word, from Sacraments, from King, from Law, from all, and maketh us bitter enemies to all good. The paine whereof will be dreadfull one day, when there will be no time for repentance, but a fearefull looking for judgement, with wiſh that the Mountaines would fall upon us, and cover us from ſuch wrath.

Secondly, let us note in theſe often repetitons of perſwaſions, what a heart was in this worthy man Moſes, to the glory of God, and the ſalvation of his people. O where ſhall wee finde ſuch love, ſuch care, ſuch zeale in Magiſtrates, in Miniſters, in Maſters of families, or in Parents? Over and over, againe and againe, daily and continually without intermiſſion, to call upon ſuch as are committed to our charge, to love God, to feare God, and to obey his Lawes and Ordinances, as the joy and ſafety of their ſoules for ever. The Lord quicken us all by this example, and forgive us what is paſt and gone. The never ceaſing care that is in Parents to provide temporalls porals for their children, ſhall give a thundring and dreadfull Teſtimony againſt them in the laſt day for neglect of Spirituals. How much better was that ſpeech of old Tobiah to his ſonne: feare not my ſonne, becauſe we are poore, for thou haſt many things, if thou feare God, and fly from ſinne, and doe the thing which is acceptable to him. How much better that holy courſe of Iob, of whom you reade thus, that his ſonnes banquetting in their houſes every one his day, when the dayes of their banquetting were gone about, hee ſent and ſanctified them, and roſe up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them. For hee thought it may bee that my ſonnes have ſinned and blaſphemed God in their hearts. Thus did Iob every day. Laſtly, how much better that of holy David, Come ye children, hearken unto me, I will teach you the feare of the Lord, &c. Reade the place your ſelfe for it is good. Thus may we profit by this third way that Moſes uſeth with his people: Let perſwaſions to good things prevaile with us, and let us perſwade our ſeverall Charges to good things, with repetition againe, and againe, as Moſes did, and aſſuredly, the Lord ſhall give our ſoules comfort of both at our laſt end.

Tob.4.12.

Iob 4.5.

Pſal.34.11.

The fourth head.

THe fourth way Moſes uſeth before his death, to exhort and ſtirre up his people to a conſtant obedience of this law, is by explaining the ſame unto them, unto the 27. Chap. That if any yet remained ignorant among them, hee might ſee what an holy and excellent thing the law was, and of what uſe to them, for the pleaſing of God, and the ſaving of their ſoules, beſide proſperity and bleſſings following it often in this world. Hee beginneth and telleth them, that the law is not onely literall, commanding and forbidding outward things: but it is alſo ſpirituall, reaching to the heart and ſoule within, and commanding there all holineſſe and purity, and forbidding the contrary. Beſide outward ſacrifices and ceremonies, ſaith hee, thou muſt love the Lord thy God, and how? with all thy heart, &c. Thou muſt feare him, heare his word, beleeve in him, &c. Repeating the duties of the firſt Table moſt excellently, and ſo agreeing with the New Teſtament, as all men may ſee the ſpirit of both to be one. For doth not Paul ſay the law is ſpirituall, and I am carnall, ſold under ſinne, &c? In a word onely: As S. Iames ſaith, Cleanſe your hands ye ſinners, and purge your hearts, &c. So ſaith alſo Moſes: Circumciſe the fore-skinne of your hearts, &c. The like paines hee taketh with the ſecond Table, ſhewing the extent of thoſe briefe words, to be farre greater than many did thinke, as that of honouring the father and mother, to reach to all Superiours, Princes, Prieſts, Maſters, and all aged, grave and gray-headed men, and ſo forth of the reſt. A great helpe of which conference of one law according with another, Calvin his Concordance upon the five Bookes of Moſes will give; and Beza hath written purpoſely a very good Treatiſe to this end, to ſhew what lawes interprete and explaine the ten Commandements. But becauſe I have taken a little poore paines herein, I will be bold in this weakneſſe of my body, to referre you thither, onely noting here, which I pray you to note with mee, how the Spirit of God directeth Moſes to an explication of the Law, to the end it might the more move them, affect them, ſtrike and touch them, then it would doe if it were but read as it lieth literally in the Text. And what a ſecret praiſe is this, not onely of the utility, but of the neceſſity of interpretation, explanation, expounding and preaching. To ſpeake againſt the bleſſing and good of reading, either private or publike in the Church, is to bee phantaſticall, wicked and abſurd, as I have, I hope, ſufficiently ſhewed upon the Lords Prayer, but it muſt ever give place to Preaching, as you ſee in this notable example. For the Lord maketh choice, and directeth his ſervant, when hee will have the people ſtrongly, piercingly, and powerfully moved, to interprete, open, and explane the Law unto the people. O what a want have they then that want this bleſſing, becauſe they have no means to maintaine it among them, their tithes being taken from them by the iniquity of Leaſes and Grants to lay-men, which will not contribute a penny out of their impropriations, were it to ſave ten thouſand ſoules. No though they be as preciſe and holy as may be, and cry at every Parliament and every occaſion, preaching, preaching. And againe, what extreme injury doe they to themſelves, that may come to heare the Scripture broken, as it were, up, and ſo explicated and applyed to the heart by men of worthy learning, and full of Gods Spirit, (wherof this flouriſhing Church wherein we live, of England, aboundeth, bleſſed be God, and the Lord in mercy ſtill increaſe them) and yet will not, but ſit at home, ride abroad, or one way or other ſpend the Sabbath, thinking themſelves ſafe and well, becauſe they are endued with great gifts of knowledge and underſtanding, but the good God of heaven make them betimes to conſider, that never did hee, never ſhall hee eſcape Gods diſpleaſure, that contemneth his ordinance. And let this ſuffice for the fourth point.

Rom.7.14. Iam.4.8.

The fift Head.

IN order now followeth the fift point of Moſes zeale, labouring to make this people continue in the obedience of Gods law and feare, when he ſhould goe the way of all fleſh, and it is drawn from bleſſings moſt admirable and comfortable upon them that ſhould continue and perſevere; and from curſings moſt dreadfull and fearefull upon them that ſhould forſake him, and ſtart aſide as a broken bowe.

He moreover commands to ſet up great ſtones, to plaiſter them with plaiſter, and to write upon them all the words of the law. Alſo to make an Altar with unhewne ſtones to the Lord; he exhorteth them with all good words; and what doth not this carefull Paſtor and Governor to have his people cleave unto God, and eternally to be ſaved? where be ſuch hearts now a daies in Paſtors? ô where againe be they I ſay, if wee marke the courſe of our time, when they that happily would cannot, and they that excellently can, will not teach, will not labour, will not ſhew almoſt any care of opening the eyes of their people, by framing themſelves to the capacitie of them in a courſe of continuall Catechiſing, and explaining plainly the grounds of Religion, without which they ſhall never build ſoundly and profitably? Alacke, alacke, what ſhall we ſay to the Judge of quicke and dead, in that all-judging day? can wee ſhift him off with the excuſes of our time?

I am loth to rip up this ſore, and to lance this dead fleſh, to the offence of any whoſe gifts I reverence and thanke God for: bnt I beſeech the Father of mercy for his Chriſts ſake, to give us all hearts of fleſh, and to give us conſcience, and care in this point to his glory, and to the ſalvation both of our ſelves, and of his people. And I pray all them whom it concerneth to remember with me theſe words, of that famous preaching Biſhop S. Chryſoſtome upon Iacobs words to Laban, *Gen.*31.40. I was in the day conſumed with heat, and with froſt in the night, and my ſleepe departed from mine eyes, &c. Vidiſti Paſtoris vigilantiam, vidiſti intentum ſtudium. Qualem habebunt excuſationem ii, quibus rationales greges crediti ſunt, & magnam præ ſe ferunt negligentiam, & quotidie juxta Prophetam pecudes alias mactant, alias à beſtiis captas contemnunt, alias verò ab aliis captas reducere non curant, tametſi minor ſit labor & cura facilis? Anima enim eſt quæ docetur. Illic autem multus eſt & corporis & animæ labor. Die enim aduſtus fui æſtu, & gelu nocte, & diſcedebat ſomnus ab oculis meis. Quis hæc nunc potèſt dicere quod propter eorum ſalutem quos paſcit, tot ferat labores & pericula? hoc quidem nonnullis audes dicere. Soli Paulo licebat hoc fidenter dicere, atq; his majora. Quis infirmatur, inquit ille, & ego non infirmor? Quis ſcandalizatur & ego non uror? O Paſtoris dilectionem indulgentiſſimam! Aliena ruina meos dolores augent, alina ſcandala fornacem doloris mei ſuccendunt. Hunc omnes imitantur quibus rationales oves concreditæ ſunt, & ne deteriores fiant hoc, qui tantæ in brutis pecudibus cuſtodiendis vigilantiæ fuit, idq; tot annorum numero. Et illic ſi incuria quædam acciderit, nullum damnum, hic autem ſi vel una ovis rationalis perierit, vel à beſtia fuit capta, grave damnum, maximum detrimentum, ineffabilis pœna: Nam ſi Dominus noſter ſanguinem ſuum proprium effundere pro illa non declinavit, qua venia dignus fuerit, qui ſic honoratum à domino deſpicere voluerit, & non omnia quæ poteſt in curanda ovicula adimpleverit. You have ſeene the vigilancy of a Paſtor, you have ſeene his fixed and unceſſant care. O what maner of excuſe will they have, unto whom ſheepe are committed endued with reaſon, and yet dayly ſhew groſſe and grievous negligence, and daily as the Prophet ſaith, kill ſome, and others taken and torne of wild beaſts, contemne and care not for, others drawn away by others, never labour or care to reduce againe, although the labour be leſſe, and the care eaſie. For it is the ſoule that is taught in theſe reaſonable ſheepe, but in Iacobs ſheepe there was toile, both of his body and ſoule. For in the day (ſaith hee) I was conſumed with heat, in the night nipped with froſt and cold, and the ſleepe departed from mine eyes. Who now a daies can ſay theſe things, that for the ſheepe which he feedeth, he endureth theſe labours and perils?

Truely hee lives not that dare ſay thus. Onely S. Paul boldly might ſay thus much and more, whoſe words you know: Who is weake, and I am not weake? who is offended, and I burne not? O moſt tender love of a Paſtor. Other mens ruines and harmes increaſe his ſorrow, other mens wrongs, and given offences ſet on fire the fornace of his woe. Let them to whom ſheepe endued with reaſon are committed, follow this example, and bee not againe worſe than Iacob, that was of ſuch diligence in keeping of brute beaſts, and that for ſo many yeeres, when as there, if any negligence were, there was no great hurt done: but here, if but one reaſonable ſheepe periſh, or ſhall be taken with beaſts, there is grievous loſſe and great detriment, and an unſpeakable puniſhment.

For if our Lord did not avoid to ſhed his owne precious blood for the ſheepe, what pardon is he worthy of that will neglect what the Lord hath ſo honoured, and will not do all that ever lieth lieth in him for the cure and ſafety of the ſheepe? Thus farre Chryſoſt. whoſe words I wiſh from my ſoule, may finde hearts of fleſh and feeling to light upon, to the Glory of God, the ſalvation of thouſands, and the eternall joy of thoſe Paſtors that have made ſuch uſe of them.

Having then noted this moſt faithfull Paſtors care, zeale, and conſcience to have them ſaved, come we to the way he uſeth, of pronouncing curſings and bleſſings to them. Where note firſt, that Moſes repeateth but ſome ſinnes, not meaning that all others ſhall eſcape free, for the curſe of God is upon all ſinne: but becauſe thoſe ſinnes were moſt heinous and ugly before God, and very uſuall among the Iſraelites, ſo wee repeat not all our afflictions and griefes in our praiers, but thoſe which moſt wring us, and thoſe ſinnes which were moſt to be avoided.

Secondly, note how hee layeth theſe curſes upon hidden ſinnes, as if a man have an Idoll cloſe in his houſe unknowne to any, &c. that men may know how nothing eſcapeth the all-ſeeing eye of God, be it never ſo ſecret, but his eye ſeeth it, and his curſe reacheth it, even his damning curſe for ever and ever. A good caveat, not to ſay with them in the Scripture, The darkeneſſe ſhall hide me, the wals ſhall ſhadow me, &c.

Thirdly, note the extent of Gods curſe, it reacheth to, and containeth in it all manner of puniſhment ſpirituall and corporall, temporall and eternall. For the violation of Gods Law inferreth all this, GOD hating them that deſpiſe him, and all evill following upon his wrath. Rom. 7.

Fourthly, obſerve that after the particulars which I leave to your owne reading, being plain, he addeth a generall, Curſed be hee that abideth not in all things that are written in this booke to doe them: whereby it is plaine, that though a man bee free from groſſe and great ſinnes, yet if hee tranſgreſſe in any, and abide not in all, hee is ſlipped from the Lord, and the Lord from him. And this tranſgreſſing muſt bee underſtood, not onely of the outward act of fleſh, but of inward purity of the heart, as hath beene ſaid, the Law being ſpirituall, as the Apoſtle told us.

Fiftly, he would have them ſay Amen, that of their owne mouth they may be judged if ever they fell away. And hee would have them all there to ſay thus, that all might know and feele their eſtate, without the promiſed Meſſiah, our Lord and Saviour Ieſus Chriſt, by whom wee eſcape theſe curſes, they, in beleeving he ſhould come (for hee was the Lambe ſlaine from the beginning of the world:) wee, in beleeving hee is come, and hath taken away the hand-writing that was againſt us, and fixed it to his Croſſe, &c. Coloſ. 2.

Sixtly, theſe curſes are not denounced nakedly, or in a corner, but with great ſolemnity, if you marke it, of time, of place, of perſons, of order, &c. which may well teach us, that ceremonies, comely ornaments, fit times, fit perſons, to execute, &c. greatly pleaſe the Lord, and worke impreſſions and contentments in mens hearts. The contrary, as foule Churches, and unſweet, like to barnes, ſtables, hay-houſes, &c. than to houſes for God to come and meet us in. A foule Pulpit or none at all, but a paltry deske, a foule Font, ill favoured broken ſeats of twenty faſhions, and which is worſt of all, a light headed fellow, that commeth skipping in his ragged hoſe, moth-eaten Jacket, and a payre of bowles under under his arme, which the Clarke his man keepeth till all be ended, and then ſweating as he came in from bowles, ſo he returnes again, having hudled and mumbled up Service, without edification to any, or zeale in himſelfe. But ever remember that hee followeth the Alehouſe in friendly ſort, before hee goe, and when hee commeth backe, till midnight: haply dropping under the board on ſleepe, and ſo ſome of his bad and mad companions going to Church, toule the bell for him. Alacke, alacke, will theſe things bring the ſtony hearts of unregenerate men from darkneſſe and error, from ſinne and deſtruction, unto the knowledge of God and their ſalvation? O pray for feeling, they will not, they will not, but as they daily doe worke contempt and Atheiſme, God is the God of order in all places, and eſpecially in his owne houſe. See 1 Cor. 14. ver. 33. and 40.

Hee that likes to enlarge this matter of the ornaments and ceremonies in Churches, hath proofe enough, to prove God is pleaſed with it,, and offended with the contrary. God ſent an Angell to burne Sodome: David ſinned, and God ſent but an Angell in like ſort: Adam ſinned, and an Angell drave him out of Paradiſe: the world ſinned, and hee commanded waters to deſtroy it. But the abuſe of Gods houſe, God puniſhed by his owne Sonne ſent from heaven, and that with a very baſe puniſhment of whipping, that all the world might ſee his deteſtation of this ſinne, and his love of order, comelineſſe, of cleanneſſe and beauty of his houſe. Dilexi decorem domus tuæ, &c. I have loved the beauty of thy houſe, &c. ſaith David. And if he be a beaſt, and an uncivill beaſt that fouleth the cleare fountaine, from whence all the Citie fetcheth water to drinke; O what a Monſter is hee that defileth and abuſeth the houſe of God, where wee fetch both bread and water of Life? Non eſt Eccleſia taberna aut tonſtrina, ſed locus Angelorum, Archangelorum, Regia Dei, cœlum ipſum: The Church, ſaith Chryſoſtome, is not a ware-ſhop, or a Barbers-ſhop, but a place of Angels, Archangels, the King of heavens Court or houſe, yea heaven it ſelfe. What an excellent ſpeech from ſo excellent a man is this, would wee give it place in our hearts? But enough of this Note: Onely I will adde, that if the high Prieſt 2 Sam. 24. Pſal. 26.

and his company had met Alexander, when hee came with purpoſe to deſtroy Hieruſalem in their dublets and hoſe, he would have beene farre from that reſpect and reverence he ſhewed to them adorned with their robes and princely garments, according to their places. And with good equity doth the old Canon make it a grievous fault to lay violent hands upon a Clergy man: but provided alway hee be in Clericall habit in appointed office: otherwiſe if hee bee in his coate, either in the Cow-faire, or Sow-faire, or hedging and ditching, or filling his dung-cart to carry to his Gleabe, if he get a knocke, as the Canon will not helpe him, ſo I ſhall hardly for my part pity him.

Come wee to another Note, why Moſes cauſeth only curſes to be denounced, ſince there are alſo bleſſings to well doers? It is anſwered, that when they came over Iordan, and went about the performance, bleſſings alſo were pronounced, and that firſt as you may ſee Ioſua 8. but Moſes here maketh mention of curſes only as mindfull of his place and office, being the Miniſter of the Law, and the Law onely curſeth, the Goſpel bleſſeth. Yet in theſe very curſes, the contrary bleſſings are comprehended, although Moſes would not name them, for it followeth truely, if he be curſed that maketh a molten Image, then he is bleſſed that maketh none, but abhorreth all idolatry from his heart, and ſo in the reſt. Yea but will many ſay, there appeare no ſuch curſes upon the wicked, nor bleſſings upon the godly, but rather contrary, the wicked flouriſh, and the godly are afflicted, and that often greatly, but theſe men forget what God ſaith: As many as I love, I rebuke and chaſten. Againe, were yee without chaſtiſement, yee were baſtards and not ſonnes. He that will follow me, let him take up his croſſe and follow me: for through many tribulations muſt we enter into the kingdome of God, with a number like places. They forget all examples of Scripture, what Patriarches, Prophets, Apoſtles, and all that were deare to God have ſuffered. And as for the greatneſſe or ſharpneſſe, they forget what the Apoſtle ſaith, that he eſteemed the afflictions of this life, not worthy the glory that ſhall be revealed, &c. And for the wicked, they forget what Solomon ſaith which ſhould touch the very heart; Though a ſinner doe evill an hundred times, and God prolong his dayes, yet I know that it ſhall be well with them that feare the Lord, and doe reverence me before him: (now marke) but it ſhall not be well to the wicked, neither ſhall he prolong his daies, he ſhall be like a ſhadow, becauſe he feareth not before God. But againe, how ſhall theſe bleſſings be derived unto us, ſince we cannot fulfill the law, to which perfect obedience they are annexed? are they not words and fruitleſſe ſpeeches? Alacke were there Catechiſing uſed in Churches, theſe queſtions would bee none, for did not wee ſay a little before, that in Chriſt we eſcape the curſe and hand-writing, which was againſt us, becauſe he pleaſed to bee accurſed? So gaine wee all theſe bleſſings in the Lords eyes fit for us, becauſe he fulfilled the Law for us, and wee by beleeving in him, as by a ſtrong hand, apply it to us, and make it ours. Ideo ex fide gratis, ut ſit firma promiſſio. Therefore of faith freely that the promiſe may bee firme, to wit, of the grace of God, of the remiſſion of ſinnes, &c. As for temporall promiſes, of wealth, health, liberty, &c. wee muſt ever leave them to the wiſdome and good pleaſure of our ſweet Father, who knoweth better what is good for us than our ſelves, and recompenceth ſomewhat of ſuch things with eternall and incomprehenſible joy. Remember in all defects and griefes, that little ſaying of worthy feeling exerciſed David, in that ſchoole of the croſſe which is the ſchoole of light. Cum contabeſcit caro mea, & cor meum, tu petra cordis mei, & pars mea Deus in aternum. My fleſh faileth and my heart alſo, but God is the ſtrength of my heart, and my portion for ever. O ſweet place, and if you looke upon the Pſalme, this was even then ſpoken when David was greatly tempted with the proſperity of the wicked, &c. Adde a like place, and boſome it up as a Jewell. In the multitude of the ſorrowes that I had in my heart, thy comforts have refreſhed my ſoule. O gaze upon it with hungry eye. In the ſorrowes, ergo, the godly and deareſt have ſorrowes. In the multitude of ſorrowes, ergo, they have multitudes of ſorrowes: In my heart, ergo, they are often, not ſmall or light, but heart ſorrowes. Thy comforts have refreſhed my ſoule, not the worlds comforts, but thy comforts, thine inſtilled comforts by thy gracious ſpirit, ſweeter then honey, and the honey combe at times, theſe, theſe have refreſhed mee, not lightly, but even my ſoule they have refreſhed, &c. To returne then to the bleſſings, take theſe rules ever with you. Tie God to no time, for you know how long the land of Canaan was expected, and deferred, yet truely given in Gods time. Tie him not to any maner, nor any other circumſtance, but wholly commit your ſelfe to his wiſedome and to his goodneſſe.

You will ſay, he is rich, glorious. And what then, yet accurſed. And for his gold and ſilver he locketh a theefe in the cheſt with it, that will conſume it all in a ſhort time: to wit, his Atheiſme, and incredulity, his miſery and uſury, his uncleanneſſe of life, and contempt of all the meanes of his ſalvation. Howſoever, make not you God a liar, but remember ever, that Dei dicere, eſt facere, Gods word is his need, and hee hath ſaid they are curſed, therefore they are ſo, are they never ſo ſhining, and flouriſhing in the eye of this world, and the godly bee bleſſed, bee they never ſo contemptible. It ſhall much increaſe our dread and feare of this thrice dreadfull curſe, if wee conſider how in other places it ſpeaketh that, and as it were explaineth it.

Heb.12. Matth.16. Acts 14.

Rom.8.

Eccleſ.8.

Rom.4.16.

Pſal.73.26.

Pſal.94.29. Heb.through.

Ipſe dixit, & facta ſunt.

First,

Firſt, it ſaith, that ſuch are to receive ever condigne puniſhment, that evill may bee taken out of the Land, noting that they are the ruine of countries, kingdomes, and townes, whereſoever they are, infecting others, and pulling downe ſtrong plagues and wrath from heaven, as S. Paul ſpeaketh of the inceſtuous Corinthian, let ſuch an one be taken away, leſt as leaven he ſowre the whole lump. Oedipus, that curſed and wicked man, brought upon himſelfe and his family, yea upon the whole kingdome of Thebes, feare, vengeance, and deſtruction, with his wickedneſſe, &c. Many examples might bee ſhewed, and your owne experience haply in this point can ſay ſomething. 1 Cor.6.5.

Secondly, Saint Paul to the Galathians tearmeth this curſed man execrable, and deſtinated to horrible puniſhments. Againe, filth, and off-ſcouring, &c. Againe, a thing fit to bee utterly rooted out, leſt it hurt by his contagion. One whom no man ought to touch. One, for whom no man ought to pray. The blot and ſtaine of mankinde, with many ſuch more, all mee thinke able to work both the underſtanding of the word Maledictus, accurſed, and to be carefull againe, and againe, how we live, that we incurre not the ſame. But we muſt not take it, that all theſe curſes mentioned, *Chap.*20. and Levit. 26. are laid upon every particular man. For the Lord diſpoſeth them as he pleaſeth, ſome with plague, ſome with famine, ſome with captivity, ſome with that madneſſe and blindneſſe, and aſtoniſhing of heart mentioned in the 28. verſe of the 28. Chapter, whereby they erre in all their counſels and actions they goe about, running to deſtruction every way; according to that ſaying, Gal.3.

Iratus ad pœnã Deus ſi quos trahit,
Eripere mentem talibus prius ſolet,
Caliginemque offundit, ut ruant ſuas
Furenter in clades, ſibi quas noxiis
Accerſerunt ultro conſiliis mali.

Whereunto agreeth that of the Apoſtle, becauſe they gave themſelves to filthy luſts, the Lord gave them unto a reprobate ſenſe. And that againe to the Epheſians, bee not like theſe Gentiles, which walke in the vanity of their minde, having their cogitation darkened, and being ſtrangers from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in them, becauſe of the hardneſſe of their hearts. Many examples alſo might be alledged out of Hiſtory if need were to this point. For many indued with wiſedome, learning, authority, power, excellent perſons otherwiſe, have given themſelves fouly, ſome to love and luſt, to pride and ambition, to hatred, envy and deſire of revenge, &c. till they have overthrowne themſelves, and fallen into weakneſſe of braine, or ſome other malady, God taking from them the uſe of right reaſon and true underſtanding. Rom.1. Epheſ.4.

Thus fell it out with Aſtyages: when God would puniſh his tyranny, he ſo blinded him in his counſels and thoughts, that hee made Harpages whoſe ſonne before hee had cauſed to bee ſlaine, and the father to eate of him; I ſay, hee made him Generall of his Army againſt the Perſian King, which turned to a great miſchiefe. Pompey erring in his counſell raiſeth up civill warre, which in the end was his deſtruction. Anthony inraged with ambition and fury, moveth warre againſt Auguſtus, which in time was his fall. Wiſe Salomon left of God a while to himſelfe, fell into filthy affectation of women, and ſo to Idolatry and the wrath of God. Conſider we therefore in Gods feare, this curſe threatned by God to them that forſake his Law and his ordinances: namely, that hee will ſmite them with madneſſe and blindneſſe, and aſtoniſhment of heart, and pray wee day and night, upon the knees of our ſoules, crawling and creeping with all humility of heart, that hee would ever vouchſafe to guide our mindes, our wills, our hearts and underſtanding, with his holy Spirit, that wee may ever walke in his feare, and die in his favour. Another dreadfull curſe God layeth upon ſome, mentioned *ver.*65. of the 28. chap. And ſo on in theſe words; I will give thee a trembling heart, and a ſorrowfull minde, and thy life ſhall hang before thee: For thou ſhalt bee in doubt of thy life, and thou ſhalt feare both day and night, and ſhalt have no aſſurance of thy life. In the morning thou ſhalt ſay, would God it were evening, and at evening thou ſhalt ſay, would God it were morning, for the feare of thy heart which thou ſhalt feare, &c. This is the torment and torture of a mans owne conſcience, purſuing him day and night for his ſinne, not to bee ſtayed with any bribe, could I give the world to one to ſtay it, no not with any wiſedome, counſell, or learning, if God ſtill do perſecute. Of which much might be ſaid, and many fearefull examples ſhewed, but I will not follow it any further, the very words of the Text are fearefull enough. Finally, is not that a dreadfull curſe ver. 53? Thou ſhalt eate the fruit of thy body, even the fleſh of thy ſonnes and of thy daughters, which the Lord thy God hath given thee, &c. A thrice horrible proofe whereof fell out in the ſiege of Jeruſalem in that diſtreſſed woman, both for birth and eſtate Noble, who (omitting the tragicall diſcourſe of her unſpeakeable woe) was forced to uſe theſe words, to her little childe, the fruit of her body, and the love of her heart. Veni ô mi nate, eſto matri cibus, prædonibus furor, ſæculis fabula, quæ ſola deerat cladibus Iudæorum: & cum hæc dixiſſet, filium jugulat, medium ſuperpoſitum igni torret, modium ſervat obtectum: Come O my childe, and bee meat for thy mother, for the theeves a matter of fury (or madneſſe) and to all ſucceeding ages a tale to talke of, which onely was wanting to the miſeries of the Jewes. And that ſaid, ſlew her childe, roſted or boyled one halfe, and hid the other halfe. It was not long ere the ſmell was ſmelt by the rovers, and rangers up and downe, and then ruſhing in upon her, threatned her with death, except ſhee would ſhew them what meat ſhee had. Shee anſwered them, that the beſt part ſhee had kept for them, and ſo fetched out the reſidue of her childe: which when they ſaw, a moſt horrible amazement ſtrake them, and away they went, ſpreading this newes over all the City. And the Lord after, cauſed it to bee committed to Hiſtory by Ioſephus, that it is come to us, and no doubt ſhall ſtill goe on as a fearefull ſpectacle of his judgement and wrath, &c. Let this ſuffice of this point of bleſſings and curſings: for fainting fleſh bids me end. If there bee a beliefe that there is a God, a heaven, a hell, and immortality of the ſoule, a ſalvation, a damnation, let theſe things worke to good, and the God of mercy and power, in whoſe hand are all hearts, grant they may. Amen, Amen.

The ſixt Head.

THe ſixt point of Moſes care to have this his people continue in obedience to God, is a notable Song made by him, containing as much as hath beene ſaid in all this before of incouragement to doe it, and of terrors not to doe it. The ſong is contained in the thirty two Chapter of this Booke, in regard whereof, it is ſaid by a learned man, that ut inter ſydera Heſperus ſive Lucifer eminet, ita hoc caput inter reliqua hujus libri capita maximè lucet, quia Canticum Moſis continet, quod ante obitum fecit, & decantandum Iſraelitis tradere juſſus eſt. As amongſt the ſtarres, the evening or morning ſtarre is moſt excellent: ſo is this Chapter among all the Chapters of this Booke, becauſe it containeth the moſt excellent ſong of Moſes, which even upon his death hee made, and was commanded to deliver to the Iſraelites to ſing. Now why a ſong in Verſe ſhould be uſed, wee muſt needs anſwer, becauſe Verſe doth more affect, and with more contentment is learned of old and young, wee ſee it dayly in our experience, Pſalmes of ſome to their good, foule ballads of others to their great hurt. A great commendation of Verſe, of the benefit of it, of the antiquity of it, and of ſinging. It is a ſaying moſt ſweetly, whereupon the Proverbe groweth, Cygnæa Cantio, the Swans ſong, but this ſong indited by the Spirit of God, and penned by ſuch a man, at ſuch a time, upon ſuch an occaſion, &c. never can there bee a ſong more ſweet: but the ſweeteſt thing that ever was, is not judged or deſired by him that hath no taſte, for the matter of a ſong Plutarch a Heathen could ſay thus.

Primum & pulcherrimum Muſicæ munus, eſt Deum Conditorem in larga manu omnia nobis beneficia tribuentem, viciſſim grata voce celebrare: The firſt and moſt commendable office of Muſicke is, to retribute with a true thankfull voice to that Creator, that with a moſt liberall and open hand miniſtreth all benefits unto us. The powerfull force of it I have touched before, and you may ſee beſide your owne experience, which I truſt is ſome, in Saul when hee was out of temper, and quieted by Davids Harpe. In the Prophet, when being out of quiet, he prayed that a Minſtrell might bee brought unto him, who playing he propheſied, and many wayes more. It was the wonderfull and moſt gracious wiſedome and mercy of God, to direct, ſtrengthen, and raiſe up his worthy ſervant King David to this courſe of Verſe and ſinging, wherein ſuch feeling, ſuch ſpirituall experience, ſuch heavenly comfort, and direction in all temptations whatſoever (for David felt much that hee might teach much) in all proſperity, &c. as no tongue or pen of man can expreſſe. The Heathens of old had Poets tearmed men excellent, who to their Harps and Inſtruments ſung of whatſoever Philoſophy ſaid well of God, of Nature, of Manners of men, of the noble and heroicall acts of great men, that with more contentment theſe things might enter into the mindes and memory of men. Our imitating books for young Schollers are moſt in Verſe, as Lillies verſes, Cato, Ovid, Terence, and the reſt. Such was Orpheus Muſicke, who lived ſome 150. yeeres before David, ſinging his ſongs to the people of Thracia and others. So Linus, Orpheus Maſter, ſung to his Harp of the creation of the world, of the motion of the ſtarres, of the nature of beaſts, &. Tindarius and Simonides living in the time of Xerxes warres did the like, ſing in verſe to their Harps, of Monarchies, of Kingdomes, of Cities, of Townes, of fallings and riſings, &c. What would you have more of verſe or ſinging? Remember the ſong of the people, when they were come ſafe over the red ſea; of Deborah and Barack, when Siſera was vanquiſhed, &c. Remember the ſweet ſong of the Angels to the Shepheards when Chriſt was borne, and all thoſe celeſtiall ſongs mentioned in the Revelation.

1 Sam. 16. 23.
2 King. 3. 23.

Exod. 15.
Iudg. 5.
Luke 2.
Revel. 4. 8.

The ſeventh Head.

THe laſt point of Moſes meanes to keepe this people to God, is a moſt ſweet and propheticall bleſſing given by him at the inſtinct of Gods Spirit to all the Tribes, which I will not ſpeake of, but leave it to your owne private reading, and Gods inſtilled Spirit into your hearts. The eternall God of heaven and earth, and our moſt loving Father, bleſſe us all, that when wee read his holy Word, we may feele, and feeling remember, and practiſe to his glory and our endleſſe comfort, when that appointed and decreed houre ſhall come. Amen. For that moſt ſacred blood. Amen. Amen.

A TABLE SETTING DOWNE ALPHABETICALLY the principall matters contained in the Bookes of NVMBERS and DEVTERONOMIE.

A

ANT and Grashopper. 3. vid. Grashopper.
Age and judgement requisite in the Ministery. 10
but not tying the graces of GOD. 11
Allegory of the silver Trumpets 32. and of the 42. removes of the Israelites in their way towards Canaan. 144
Authority of Priests. 33
Abundance causeth loathing. 39
Abuse of authority is a great sinne. 51
Aulus Fulvius his great spirit. 58
Anger without sinne. 66
Aarons Rod a notable type of Christ. 68
Ambrose his commendation of Valentinian the Emperour. 80
Arguments taken from example are not alwaies currant. 118
Appeales how and when to be used. 148
Assurance of the Spirit. 150

B

BLessing of two sorts, 22. Blessing and Keeping distinguished. 23
Blindnesse of Popery. 28
Benedict, that first brought glasing into this Land. 30
Birth nor education no plea in Religion. 34
Boasting is the Moth of Vertue. 46
By what a man sinneth, by that he shall bee punished. 62
But, is a note of depravation. 54
Balaam his hypocrisie, 95. his wilfulnesse, 96. hee is reproved by his Asse. 98. his hollow heart, ibid his cursed counsell, 106. his wages, 113. his death. 139
Benefits of men, and benefits of God. 151

C

CHurch-men and Lay-men distinguished, 5. Vid. Lay-men.
Children may be destinated to God before they be fit for any other course of life, 9. 122. oftentimes not so well nurtured as Hawkes, Horses, and the like, Vid. Hawkes.
Censuring of our Elders in the Ministery taxed. 11
Curiosity reprehended. 12
Confession is the fruit of faith, 15. vid. Faith.
Christians what manner of persons they ought to be. 21
Corruption of men. ibid.
Contempt of the Ministery. 23
Contempt of the Church is the contempt both of Word and Sacraments. 26
Contempt of the Sabbath. 64
Consecration or anoynting depends not upon mans worth. 24
Clement the eight Pope his offer to Queene Elizabeth. ibid.
Crowe his miraculous preservation. 32
Company, good or bad, is of great force. 37
Caleb his singular commendation. 58
Creatures fight for God against wicked men. 66
Constancy in good is commendable. 102
Comfort in poverty. 111
Cleaving to God is our onely safety. 116
Conjunction betweene the civill Magistrate, and the Ecclesiasticall Minister. 123
Cares of the world at the time of death are a great hinderance to the soules passage, 130. and wil be an heavy testimony in respect of the great neglect of spirituals. 152
Chastity constrained. 136
Crosses never wanting to the godly. 140
Coldnesse towards the Ministery. 145
Carnality of these times. 147
Compunction breeds devotion. 150
Continuance in obedience commanded and commended. 153
Curse of God annexed to all sinnes, 154. the extent thereof. 156
Curses imply blessings. 160
Covetousnesse keeps a theefe in his chest. 162

Difference

D

DIfference of degrees in the Church, 9 and of our feasts at Easter and Pentecost, with those of the old Testament. 133
Divorce, why ordained of God, 16. why granted against women, and not against men. 18
Dust is an argument of detestation. ibid.
Day and night be ready to follow the Lords prescription. 32
Death, to the godly, is the way to life. 79
Death of the faithfull. 125
Danger of ill company. 115
Difference of glory in heaven. 122
Division by lots. ibid.
Disinheriting of daughters not warrantable by the word. 123
Desires ought to bee confined within honest limits. 142
Dignity of the Ministery. 145
Determination of the Magistrate ought to end all controversie. 147

E

ENvie, how poysonous a Serpent it is, 4. 45. 92. it is the companion of vertue. 46
Extent of the Church. 6
Exchange that God maketh with men. 9
Expedition in justice. 49
Eminency of place gives credit to testimony. 52
Evill men often inhabite a good land. 54
Evill would never bee suffered, if God were not able to draw good out of it. 90
Examples are great motives to good or bad. 144
Execution of justice is a sacrifice to God. 146

F

FRiendship fained, is worse then Coine counterfeited. 6
Friends and enemies. 120
A friends last words are best remembred. 128
Faith is the root, and Confession the fruit, 15 vide Confession.
Faithfulnesse in a mans place is a thing pleasing to God. 56
Fulvius his great spirit. 59. vid. Aulus.
First-fruits, and their institution. 63
Failing in outward complements, hath made many great labors frustrate. 93
Falshood cloaked with a shew of piety. 100
Feeders of men. 112
Favour is deceitfull. 123
Funerals how to be performed. 131

G

GOD in no place is unmindfull of his Church, 2. nothing hid from him, 4. he disposeth of his owne at his owne pleasure, 7. his bottomlesse mercy, 8. hee is the God of order, 9. his free election, 10. his care to preserve the reverence of holy things, 12. he receiveth nothing of us gratis, but ex debito, 29. his government taketh not away the use of meanes, 35. he never forsaketh his children 41. 76. his power over all creatures, 76. hee cannot be deceived, 78. his long suffering, 79. Mercy and Iustice wait upon him, 83. hee grants in anger what he denies in mercy. 95
Gods power may be alledged, where his will goeth before; but not so his power, without his will. 98
God many times putteth truth into the mouth of the wicked, but never into their hearts, 101. no power is of force against. ibid.
God never alters his love to his chosen. 102
Gods fasts and Popish fasts, 134. his promise never failes. 142
Godlinesse is the true gaine. 96
Good may be done to others as we may, but our owne must be cared for above all. 113
Government of women approved. 124
Grashopper and Ant, 3. vid. Ant.
Grace refused, being offered, is of most dangerous consequence. 63. 79.
Grace onely makes the difference betweene the Iew and Gentile. 76
Gratitude of the Israelites. 140
Greatnesse of the person offending, aggravates the punishment. 120
Gregory his Fish-pond. 136

H

HAwkes, Horses, and the like, oftentimes better nurtured then Children, 9. vide Children.
Hirelings truely so called. 15
Hayre-offerings, 21. vid. Offerings.
Hieromes speech of Philosophers. 46
Holy-water of the Papists. 73
Hope ought to be joyned with repentance. 85 vid. Repentance.
Heresies against the truth of Christs humanity refuted. 107
Honouring our Parents, extendeth also to all Superiours, as Princes, Priests, &c. 153

I

INjuries done to our neighbours, are done to God. 15
Indissolubility of union betwixt Christ and his Church. 28
Imparity of graces ought to worke imparity of honour. 50
Ingratitude in the highest degree. 56
Ignorance is a sinne, and must have a sacrifice. 64
Julius Palmer his notable conversion. 68
Justification by faith. 87, &c.
Importunity and the force thereof. 95
Idlenesse, the mother of many mischiefes. 115
Idolatry is the death both of soule and body. 116
Justice executed appeaseth Gods wrath. 147
Justice of God against backe-sliders. 151

L

LAymen and Churchmen distinguished. 5
Lepers put out of the Tents. 14
Lawes to no end without observation. 30
Love of ones Country. 35
Lenity, how effectuall and comfortable it is. 48.
it is the Physitian of the heart. ibid.
Leave ought to be asked, where there is no propriety. 78
Lessons to instruct us to dye well. 129. &c.
Love, obedience, and thankefulnesse, are due unto God for all his benefits. 150
The Law is not onely literall, but also spirituall. 153

M

MAtters of high reach more affected than matters which are more fit. 12
Magistrates and great men ought to bee beneficiall, not injurious to the Church. 24
Magistrates and Ministers that are good, are a great blessing to the people. 66
Man is apt to forget, 67. unable to cleanse himselfe from sinne. 74
Mans weakenesse. 114
Mans life not vendible, 146
Men would live as sinners, but die as the faithfull. 102
Meditation breeds knowledge. 150
Memorials of vertue and of ungodlinesse. 120
Mercy of God in the new Testament far above the old. 150
Ministers of Christ are branches derived from Christ. 27. sought unto in time of trouble, but contemned in prosperity, 37. well esteemed whilst they speake faire, but not so when they rebuke, 99. they are as Trumpets sounding forth the pardon of our sinnes. 134
Ministery of Angels. 96
Miriam the sister of Moses, her description. 75
Mistrust wrongfully, is patiently to be endured. 52
Modesty of carriage towards Magistrates. 141. &c.
Moses his divine speech, 41. his ready obedience to Gods command, 77. his death. 125
Multitude of offenders lessens not the sin. 15
Murmuring is no meane for amendment. 36
Mystery of the red Cow figuring Christ. 71. &c

N

NUmbers, in what respect it is fitly so called, 1. the argument or matter thereof. ibid. with the authority and use of it. ibid.
Numbring, a signe of care and love. 2
Number of seven abused by Satan and his Schollers. 100
Nazarite, whence derived, 19. why Wine and strong drinke were prohibited them. 20
Novelty condemned. 33
Nothing is fearfull to the reprobate. 121
Nomination of places and times, makes much for certainty of History. 142

O

OFfice of a true Minister or Prophet. 8
Obedience commanded, 14. it is the mother of all Vertues, ibid. it makes a flourishing Common-wealth. 60
Obstinacy of the wicked in their bad courses. 102
Offerings of haire, 21. Offerings to the Church how acceptable with God. 25
Og, his giant-like stature. 91
One fact in one speciall man is no lawfull warrant for the same in generall. 118
Ornaments and Ceremonies of the Ministery, are of great use and force. 155
Ostentation to be avoyded. 111
Oswy his answer for the observation of Easter. 30
Oyle noteth gladnesse. 17

P

PRide, what mischiefe it worketh in the World. 7
Priority of the Magistrate and Minister. 8
Parity among Priests refuted. 13. 69
Patrons of Benefices, and Ministers. 13
Presumption punished. 18
Prayer in a prescript forme commanded. 22. and a sweet promise annexed unto it, 23. it is a prevalent weapon in warre. 82
Punishment upon others ought to put us in minde of our owne sinnes. 36
Pleasure is a pernicious harlot. 37
Philoxenus his vaine wish. 38
Physick against lust. ibid.
Pratling tongues make blacke soules. 43
Prophets of three sorts 50. money-Prophets, 94
Peace and order is the Lords end. 68
Peace-makers in time of Schisme or sedition. 57
Practice of Rebels and Schismatickes. 65
Participation of other mens sinnes. 72
Predestination takes not away the use of ordinary meanes. 90
Proverbs, how forcible to preserve memory. 91
Presents of two sorts. 93
Policie of the Devill to beguile with outward shewes. 100
Phinees his great zeale against sinne. 118
Parents that are honest, are a credit to their children, 123. they should not enforce their Children to marry against love and liking. 148
Premonition of our ends is a great mercy of God. 124
Preparation makes no death to bee sodaine. ibid.
Priests are to bee honoured as Gods Embassadours. 146
Presumption of dangerous consequence. 152

R

REasons for the numbring of the people in the Wilderneſſe. 2
Reaſons to perſwade us to dy willingly. 127, &c
Religion is the glory and ſafety of all governments. 6. It ought chiefly to bee reſpected in mariage, 43
Rottenneſſe is the companion of Gluttony. 38
Repentance without hope profits not. 84
Revenge, not ſimply forbidden by God. 120
Reprobates are feareleſſe. 122

S

STability of the Church. 7
Suſpition, how dangerous, 15. and it is often the cauſe of great warrs, 81. and miſchiefe. 92
Shaving of heads, a ſuperſtitious faſhion of the Heathen, 21. yet inſtituted by God to the Nazarite upon occaſion, ibid. whence the Papiſts vainely take the ground of their ſhaving. 22
Supererogation refuted. 21
Subordination in the Miniſtery proved. 28
Steps that are good are to be followed. 36
Sinne muſt be ſtopt in the beginning. 38
Sardanapalus his Epitaph. ibid.
Sunne and Winde at contention. 49. vid. Winde.
Slander, and the effects thereof. 55
Sinne, not to bee taken away by any other than a divine power, 73. not remitted without reſtitution, 131. never ſcapes finally unpuniſhed. 138
Serpents and ſlanderers bite alike, 84. Serpent of braſſe, 86. the moſt lively figure of Chriſt. 88
Seon reſembled to the Devill. 90
Spirits ſanctifying, and Spirits illuminating. 103
Stile of the Scripture. ibid.
Subtiltie more dangerous than open force. 106
Starre and Scepter. 107
Sleepe is the image of death. 126
Sheepe without a Shepheard. 132
Selfe-love. 141

T

TImes and ſeaſons reſpected by God, and therefore not to bee neglected of Maſters. 3
Timothie his Grandmothers and mothers commendations. 9
Trumpets, terrifying and comforting. 33
Thales his deviee againſt Solon. 45
Travell into forraine countries how to be uſed. 53
Toleration of two divers Religions in one land, not allowable. 63
Teares of a true penitent, are the ſweeteſt water. 130
Troubles ought not to diſmay us. 143
Time is loſt, wherein God is not thought of. 151
Torment of conſcience purſues the ungodly. 155

V

VAine-glory, to be avoided. 46
Vertue ought to be regarded and encouraged. 50
Verſe affects and contents more than Proſe. 156
Vigilancy requiſite in a Paſtor. 154
Union betwixt Chriſt and his Church, 28. vid. Indiſſolubility.
Unity of his Miniſters among themſelves. ibid.
Union of the two natures in Chriſt, with the uſe thereof, 107. and of our ſpirits with God. 151
Vowes, how they may be performed, & how not. 134

W

WArres, approved by God. 3
Warfare of the Tabernacle, 30. warres unneceſſarily undertaken. 81
Wantonneſſe of the fleſh. 37. 115
Weeping for dead friends, not diſcommended, but the exceſſe. 21
Will-worſhip. 22
Wrath amongſt friends is the moſt implacable, 46. wrath of God againſt ſinne. 116
Winde and Sunne at contention, 49. vid. Sunne.
Wrongs patiently borne are righted by God. ibid.
Why there were ſo many figures of one and the ſame Chriſt. 63
Wiſedome and diſcretion to obſerve time. 76
Want makes us know what plenty is. 80
Wickedneſſe is full of feare, 92. wicked men are angry if their bad deſires bee not accompliſhed. 105
Works or mixtures, 2. wrought by Chriſt in the aſſuming of our fleſh. 110
Whoredome corporall and ſpirituall, 115. puniſhed, 116. committed in the higheſt degree. 117
Widowes firſt faith. 136
Willingneſſe rewarded as well as action. 140
Wealth, health, and other temporall promiſes are to be left to the good pleaſure of God. 155

Z

ZEale is good, if limited, 78. zeale of Phinees, 118. vid. Phinees, how rewarded. ibid.

The end of the Table of Numbers and Deuteronomie.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE CATHOLIKE FAITH:

OR

THE XII. ARTICLES OF THE APOSTLES CREED.

LEARNEDLY EXPOVNDED

(according to the Scriptures) Wherein all Heretikes as well Ancient as Moderne againſt the Deitie of Chriſt and the Holy Ghoſt, is plainly diſcovered, pithily diſproved, and the Truth faithfully confirmed.

BY

THE RIGHT REVEREND FATHER in God, GERVASE BABINGTON, late Biſhop of Worceſter, penned and perfected a little before his death, for a direction to them that deſire to know the truth, and to beleeve rightly in the LORD IESUS.

LONDON,
Printed by M. FLESHER.
1637.

AN EXPLANATION OF THE CATECHISME CONTAINED IN THE BOOKE OF COMMON-Prayer, for the better ſetting forward of the moſt profitable exerciſe of Catechiſing the Youth in every Pariſh.

IF the Lord did not like that men ſhould ſo rake and gather their Fields as nothing might remaine for the poore to gleane after: aſſuredly, himſelfe ſuffereth not the great and glorious Fields of his Word to be ſo reaped by any, but that ſomething remaineth, which the poore that come after, may gather up. Happily alſo, they that have gone before, of purpoſe did let ſomething fall, as Boaz bad his Reapers doe for Ruth, to the end they might not hinder other mens induſtries. Wherefore in Gods name, let us looke into this Abridgement of the points of Chriſtian Religion, though many have gone before us in the labour. And firſt with the Name.

Nemo reprehenſus eſt qui è ſegete ad ſpitelegium rel quit ſtipulã. Varro.

Alius ſi volet, tollet.

What meane you by this word Catechiſme?

The name.

It is a word drawne from the Greeke, and generally may ſignifie Inſtructions given to learners, in any Knowledge, Art, or Science. But particularly as we uſe it, it ſignifieth a ſhort and briefe ſumme of the Principles of Chriſtian Religion. And to Catechiſe, ſignifieth to inſtruct in thoſe Principles, with an Examination after, in that which hath been ſaid.

How prove you this?

Luke the firſt, ver. 4. That thou mighteſt acknowledge the certainty of thoſe things whereof thou haſt been inſtructed, where the Greeke word is Catechiſed. κατηχήθης.

Againe, Acts 8. ver. 25. Apollos was inſtructed in the way of the Lord. The Greeke word againe is, Catechiſed in the way of the Lord. κατηχημένος.

Who was the firſt Author of this courſe?

The Author.

The ſureſt and ſafeſt Author to be followed in any thing, even God himſelfe. Firſt to Adam: after to Noah: then to Abraham: and when tradition by word did not ſerve to preſerve Truth, Laſtly to Moſes, he gave his will in writing. Namely, the Law in two Tables of ſtone, commanding his people that they ſhould teach their children and families in the ſame, which was Catechiſing of them.

Shew ſome places.

Exodus 12.26. When your children aske you what ſervice is this you keepe? Then you ſhall ſay, It is the ſacrifice of the Lords Paſſeover: which paſſed over the houſes of the children of Iſrael in Ægypt, when he ſmote the Ægyptians, and preſerved our houſes. Againe, Deut. 6. and 7. Theſe words which I command thee this day, ſhall be in thy heart, and thou ſhalt rehearſe them continually unto thy children, and ſhalt talke of them when thou taryeſt in thy houſe, and as thou walkeſt by the way, and when thou lyeſt downe, and when thou riſeſt up.

Did this exerciſe ſtill continue in the Church?

Continuance. Heb. 12.4. Rom. 10.

It did aſſuredly, among the godly. For as God taught Adam, ſo Adam taught his; whereupon it is ſaid, Abel by Faith offered a better ſacrifice then Cain. Now Faith is by hearing, and hearing by the Word. Other Teacher to heare of then his Father he had not, and therefore his Father inſtructed or catechiſed him, and the reſt of his Family. After Adam, you heare what God ſaith of Abraham, that hee knew he would command his ſonnes and his houſhold after him, him, to keepe the way of the Lord, which was by inſtructing and catechiſing of them: As no doubt Abraham had ſeen others doe before him. Then thoſe Schooles of the Prophets were for this exerciſe, even to inſtruct and teach in Religion. In the New Teſtament, Paul biddeth Timothy continue in thoſe things which he had learned: and ſaith he learned the holy Scriptures of a childe. Moſt like of his Grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunice, whoſe unfained faith he ſo commended in the firſt Chapter verſe 5. Laſtly, in the ſixt to the Hebrews, ver. 1. you have the points of the Catechiſme then uſed laid downe, and therefore carefully you ſee continued and uſed in the Church, to ſay nothing of Catechiſmes ſpoken of by the Fathers, and extant in all Ages to this day.

What might be the profit of this holy Exerciſe?

Firſt, it enableth us to give that anſwer to any that asketh a reaſon of our faith, which God requireth of us, by Peter his Apoſtle, 1 Pet. 3. 15.

Secondly, it is a true rule to try all falſe Doctrine by. For whatſoever is contrary to our Catechiſme, is falſe, and to be rejected.

Thirdly, it maketh us a great deale better to underſtand and profit by any Sermon wee ſhall heare.

Fourthly, being ſhort, it is moſt fit for the capacity of youth and learners.

Laſtly, it is an excellent preſervation from all prophaneneſſe, which creepeth into mans corrupt heart: if it be not ſeaſoned with ſweet and good liquor at the firſt.

What be the parts of the Catechiſme?

They are foure in number, { Faith, contained in the Creed. / The Law of God, contained in the ten Commandements. / Prayer, in the Lords Prayer. / And Sacraments. }

Having then thus ſhewed the meaning of the Name, the Author, the Continuance, and the Profit of this exerciſe of Catechiſing: Come we now to the Catechiſing it ſelfe, and tell me,

What is your Name?

Iohn; or ſuch like.

Can you tell me who was the Author of the firſt giving of Names?

Even he that was the firſt Author of Catechiſing, God himſelfe, who as wee reade, called the Light Day, and the Darkneſſe Night, the Firmament Heaven, and the dry Land Earth; and when the firſt Man was created, he called him Adam. After cauſing all creatures to come to him, that he might give them Names, which he did. And looke how he called them, ſo were they called; Gen. 2. 19. Other men followed this example, and gave Names in all Ages.

But how I pray you?

Somtimes of Events, as Moſes, becauſe he was drawne out of the water: Peregrine, becauſe he was borne in a ſtrange Countrey. Sometimes of colours, of ſtature, or proportion of ſome parts, &c.

Sometimes of affection, wiſhing well to them whoſe Names we uſe: Or wiſhing that the childe may prove anſwerable to ſuch Name. For, Bonum Nomen, bonum Omen, ſaith the Proverb.

Sometimes according to the Lords that ruled, which hath made a great mixture of Names in this Land: wherein Britaines, Romans, Saxons, Danes, and Normans have ruled.

What way thinke you is beſt?

Surely, to keep the Names of our Kindred, according to that Example, Luke 1. 59. of Zachary and his ſon Iohn: flying as a very hatefull Novelty, ſuch Names as theſe fantaſticall dayes of ours have deviſed; Duſt, Morefruit, The Lord is neare, &c. Which Names, if a Biſhop ſhould change at confirmation, I know not what high fault he ſhould commit.

What is the uſe of a Name?

Diſtinction: whereupon they are called Nomina, quaſi notamina: notes of diſtinction, and difference.

Have Sirnames been ever?

No, In this Land, not much before the Conqueſt, as it is thought.

Why are they called Sirnames?

Either as Sirnames, that is, the name of my Father: or as ſuper-added to our Chriſten-names. Which is pretily expreſſed, when the firſt is called prænomen, the other renomen. Many things more might be noted concerning Names: divers having travelled herein, and vouchſafed their labours to the Church, with their during praiſe. But thus much may ſerve for our Catechiſme.

The next Queſtion is of the givers of our Names, and your Catechiſme ſaith, Who gave you this name?

What anſwer you?

MY Godfathers and my Godmothers, in my Baptiſme, wherein I was made the member of Chriſt, the Childe of God, and an inheritor of the Kingdome of Heaven.

There be ſome that diſlike of this forme of our Baptiſme, and they would have no Godfathers and Godmothers to promiſe for the Childe, neither any of the appointed queſtions to be asked: What can you ſay to this?

It may be anſwered with S. Auguſtine, that from the ſpring of Chriſtianity, Children have alwayes anſwered by their ſureties, being not able to anſwer themſelves.

How appeareth this?

First, in the Baptiſme of them that were of age, we reade that they were baptized of them in Jordan, confeſſing their ſinnes: That is, acknowledging that they were ſaved onely by the free remiſſion and forgiveneſſe of their ſinnes; which ſhould not be without ſome queſtions and anſwers. Againe, betwixt Philip and the Eunuch, we ſee what interloquutions were before baptiſme. Mat. 3. 6. Acts 8. 37.

What is this to children under age, not able to anſwer?

It is manifeſt that the Church continued the ſame forme in baptizing of Children, to the end it might appeare, that the baptiſme of men and children was all one, and that children belonged to the covenant of God as well as men.

How appeares this?

By the teſtimonies of Antiquity, and the practice of the Church.

Tell me ſome.

Dionyſius Areopagita, if not Pauls Scholler, mentioned Act. 17. the laſt verſe, yet an ancient writer: when ſome mocked and ſaid, The Godfathers and Godmothers were chriſtned for the children, becauſe they anſwered for them; ſaid thus, That thoſe promiſes were not made for the ſureties, but for the childe: ſignifying that they would undertake to doe as much as lay in them, that the childe ſhould performe when hee came to age, what they in his behalfe promiſed. Whereupon another Queſtion followeth in our Catechiſme; Doeſt thou not thinke thou art bound, &c. with the anſwer, Yes, &c.

This teſtimony is plaine, that this forme was obſerved in this authors time. What other teſtimonies have you?

Many. But S. Auguſtine may ſuffice for all, whoſe words are theſe; Qui per ſua non poſſunt, per corda & ora geſtantium renunciant: They that cannot by themſelves, renounce by the hearts and mouthes of them that bring them.

Againe, Myſterium credulitatis in parvulis, per eorum reſponſionem à quibus geſtantur, impletur; The myſtery of beleeving in little ones is fulfilled by the anſwer of them that bring them, to wit, of the ſureties.

Theſe Teſtimonies are plaine for the long uſe of this forme in the Church, which ought to move us much, without good matter againſt it. Can you ſay any thing elſe?

The forme is contrary to no Scripture, neither any evill in it; and therefore being ancient alſo, it ought not raſhly to be changed, for any private fancies.

Againe, it is a charitable worke, as our Booke well ſaith, in the ſureties, to bring children to our holy Baptiſme: And it is a great bond of love in the Church among men, the ſureties wiſhing well to the childe, and to the parents, by reaſon of this office, and likewiſe backe againe.

Popery ſaith, it maketh ſpirituall kindred, but aſſuredly, it maketh honeſt love among neighbours, and therefore not to be changed.

Laſtly, it is moſt profitable, both to the Church and to the Childe, the ſureties being with the parents, ſo many ſtrings to the good bringing up of the childe in the knowledge of Chriſt, that if one faile, ſtill another may hold.

In regard of which good, and much more that might be named: Saint Auguſtine ſaith worthily: Accommodavit illis mater Eccleſia, aliorum pedes ut veniant, aliorum corda, ut credant, aliorum linguas, ut confiteantur, &c. Their mother the Church lendeth them the feet of others, that they may come, the hearts of others, that they may beleeve, and the tongues of others, that they may confeſſe.

But ought there not to be care in the choice of Godfathers and Godmothers?

Yes ſurely, that they be ſuch, as both in conſcience to God, and in love to us, will not ſhake away the duty as ſoone as they come home, but continue it in heart, and performe it in deed, if ever there grow occaſion. In regard whereof, happily yong children are not ſo fit. I know what they undertake, but I leave it.

You ſay that your Godfathers and Godmothers gave your name to you in your Baptiſme: Why at that time more than any other?

Becauſe Circumciſion being to the Jewes as our Baptiſme is to us, the Sacrament of admiſſion into the Church, they uſed to give their names when the childe was circumciſed, Luke 1.2. and many other places.

Againe, that as often as we heare our names, we might be put in minde of our promiſe made when we received them, and of the fruit of Baptiſme, to die to ſin, and live to righteouſneſſe.

You ſay again, that in Baptiſme you were made a member of Chriſt, a childe of God, and an inheritor of the Kingdome of heaven. How I pray you?

Becauſe Chriſt is the head, the Church his body, Baptiſme Ianua in Eccleſiam, the doore into the Church: Therefore we entring into the Arke of the Church by the doore, are made members of the body, and ſo conſequently children of God, and inheritors of heaven, the head and the members being not ſeparate.

Are we not tyed to the eighth day, as the Iewes were for their Circumciſion?

No: For there God in mercy would have the childe eight dayes old, that it might be able to beare the cut in the fleſh, and bleeding upon it, which upon the new birth of it might have been dangerous, eſpecially to weake children.

In our Baptiſme there is no ſuch danger: And therefore we not tyed to that time. Onely we ought to obſerve fit time, and not defer it too long for vaine pompe, leſt that privation of Baptiſme, which may happen by the death of the childe, be imputed by God unto us for contempt: and ſo hurt us, though not the childe, who was not in fault.

What did your Godfathers and Godmothers for you at your Baptiſme?

They did promiſe and vow three things in my name. Firſt, that I ſhould forſake the devill and all his workes, and pompes, the vanities of the wicked world, and all the ſinfull luſts of the fleſh.

Secondly, that I ſhould beleeve all the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith.

And thirdly, that I ſhould keep Gods holy will and Commandements, and walk in the ſame all the dayes of my life.

Let us examine theſe three points. And firſt tell me how you may ſtrengthen your heart to forſake the devill, according to your promiſe.

By conſidering the ſundry Commandements of God to doe it; as, Give no place to the devill. Reſiſt the devill, and he will flie from you. Whom reſiſt ſtedfaſtly in the Faith. That hee is the enemy of mankinde, and goeth about like a roaring Lion, ſeeking whom he may devoure: with many ſuch.

Ephes. 4.27. Iam. 4.7. 2 Pet. 5.9.

Theſe are good places. And if we be bound upon one Commandement, how much more upon ſo many? Why doe you ſay, and all his workes?

Becauſe we cannot forſake him, except we forſake alſo his workes. Our Saviour reaſoning againſt the Jewes, that they were not Abrahams Children, becauſe they did not the workes of Abraham: but they were the children of the devill, becauſe they did his workes. And our owne conſcience will tell us, that his ſervants we are, whoſe will we doe.

Iohn 8.39.

How can you ſtrengthen your heart againſt the love of the world?

By holy Scriptures and examples.

What Scriptures?

Thoſe piercing words in the Goſpell; What will the whole world profit a man, if hee loſe his owne ſoule? What recompence ſhall a man give for his ſoule?

Againe, thoſe words of S. Iohn; Love not this world, neither the things that are in the world. For if a man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. Many ſuch Scriptures are there, which in the bleſſing of God ſtrike to the heart of a man, to weane him from the immoderate regard of this wicked world, or any tempting thing in it.

By what examples?

By the example of Achan, who for a wedge of gold, and a rich garment, brought deſtruction upon him and his. Of Gehezi, who for gaining a reward from Naaman, had the leproſie of Naaman cleave to him and his poſterity for ever. Of Iudas, and many more.

How can you ſtrengthen your ſelfe againſt the fleſh?

By that fearefull ſaying; Whoremongers and Adulterers God ſhall judge.

Againe, Fornicators and Adulterers ſhall never enter into the kingdome of God: with the like throughout the Booke of God.

What is the ſecond point promiſed for you in Baptiſme?

That I ſhould beleeve all the Articles of our Chriſtian Faith.

What Articles, and what Faith meane you?

Thoſe Articles and that Faith which we call the Creed.

And why are thoſe Articles to be beleeved?

Since our fall in Adam we live by faith onely in that ſeed of the woman; which upon that fall fall was promiſed ſhould come to burſt the Serpents head, and to be an all-ſufficient ranſome for the ſinnes of all that ſhould beleeve in him. Now theſe Articles containe that faith, and are the rule thereof. Therefore theſe Articles by every Chriſtian man that will bee ſaved, are to bee beleeved.

Againe, the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles in holy Scripture is to bee beleeved: but theſe Articles are an abridgement thereof, or a briefe ſumme, agreeable in all things, contrary in nothing: therefore theſe Articles are to be beleeved.

Thirdly, theſe Articles are the badge, whereby we are knowne to be Chriſtians, diſtinct from Heathens that beleeve them not: therefore to be beleeved: A badge I ſay, to be knowne by, and not a forme of prayer, as Papiſts ignorantly uſe them.

Fourthly, whatſoever is contrary to theſe Articles, the Church rejecteth as falſe, and whatſoever agreeth, the Church receiveth as truth. Therefore theſe Articles are with all care to be knowne and beleeved: If a Corinthian deny the reſurrection; if a deſpairing man deny the remiſſion of ſinnes; the foole, if he ſay in his heart there is no God; the Iew, if he deny Chriſt; the Epicure, if he deny everlaſting life; &c. all theſe croſſing theſe Articles of our Chriſtian faith, the Church rejecteth them, God condemneth them, and they fearfully periſh, without his mercy to recall them.

Then for the name, I could reaſon from it, that it is called the Creed, quia omnia credenda, becauſe all things in it are to be beleeved: but I ſtay here, remembring the words of Athanaſius Creed; Whoſoever will be ſaved, before all things it is neceſſary that he hold the Catholike Faith: which Faith, except a man keepe holy and undefiled, without doubt he ſhall periſh everlaſtingly.

What is the third thing promiſed for you?

That I ſhould keepe Gods holy will and Commandements, and walke in the ſame all the dayes of my life.

Are you able to doe this?

No, not without imperfection and weakneſſe. And therefore both their promiſe and my performance, muſt admit expoſition. Their promiſe to bee but uſing of the meanes to bring me to it, and my performance according to humane frailtie endevouring with my beſt ſtrength to doe it, praying for Gods aſſiſtance, and heartily lamenting my ſlips and ſlides againſt it. Saint Auguſtines argument is moſt true: Our knowledge is but in part, and therefore our obedience muſt needs alſo be but in part.

We have now examined the three things your Sureties promiſed for you. Doe you not think you are bound to performe and doe as they have promiſed for you?

Yes verily, and by Gods helpe ſo I will. And I heartily thanke our heavenly Father, that hee hath called me to this ſtate of ſalvation, through Ieſus Chriſt our Saviour. And I pray God to give me his grace, that I may continue in the ſame unto my lives end.

Why doe you thinke your ſelfe bound?

Becauſe if a promiſe, made unto man, being lawfull and good, doth binde, much more doth a promiſe made unto God; for that is the nature of a vow: And how religiouſly lawfull vowes to God were to be kept, many Scriptures teach us. Secondly, if a promiſe made privately binde, much more doth one made publikely, in the face of the Congregation, and preſence of God and his Angels. Numb.30.3. Deut.23.21. Eccleſ.5.3.

Why doe you thanke God?

Becauſe a thankefull heart is ever a pleaſing Sacrifice unto God, and it is moſt due for all his favours, we being not worthy the leaſt of them: much more is it due for that incomprehenſible mercy, in calling us from ignorance and darkneſſe, unto knowledge and light; and from hell, death, and damnation, by our fall in Adam unto heaven, life, and ſalvation, for Jeſus Chriſt his Sonne, and our bleſſed Saviour. The fearfull judgements of God upon men for unthankfulneſſe, ought ever to be before our eyes, *Dan.*4.27. Luke 18, &c.

Why doe you pray for continuance?

Becauſe onely ſuch as endure to the end ſhall be ſaved. He that putteth his hand to the plough and looketh backe, is not fit for the Kingdome of heaven; better never to have knowne the way of truth, than after knowledge to forſake it. Mat.10.20. Luke 22.28. 1 Cor.15. laſt verſe. Mat.11. Ad ſibilum Serpentis.

Iohn was not a Reed ſhaken with the winde; and Chriſt rehearſeth it for his praiſe. Adam was (ſaith Chryſoſtome) ſuch a Reed, becauſe at the hiſſing of the Serpent he fell, and we all rue it to this day.

Rehearſe now the Articles of your Beliefe.

I beleeve in God the Father Almighty, maker of Heaven and Earth. And in Jeſus Chriſt his onely Sonne our Lord; which was conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, borne of the Virgin Mary, ſuffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried, hee deſcended in hell: the third day he roſe againe from the dead, he aſcended into Heaven, and ſitteth at the right hand of God the Father Almighty: from thence hee ſhall come judge both the quicke and the dead. I beleeve in the Holy Ghoſt, the holy Catholike Church, the Communion of Saints, the forgiveneſs of ſinnes, the reſurrection of the body, and the life everlaſting. Amen.

What

What doe you chiefly learne in theſe Articles of your beliefe?

Firſt, I learne to beleeve in God the Father, who hath made me and all the world.

Secondly, in God the Sonne, who hath redeemed me and all mankinde.

Thirdly, in God the Holy Ghoſt, who ſanctifieth me and all the Elect people of God.

This is ſhort and good, but it ſhall not be amiſſe to joyne unto it ſome fuller and larger expoſition of theſe twelve Articles of our Faith; which in the aſſiſtance of God I will doe by queſtions and anſwers: Alſo for more plainneſſe (wherein as occaſion ſerveth) you ſhall aske, and I will anſwer.

An Expoſition or Explanation of the Apoſtles Creed.

I will obſerve this order, to ſpeake,

1. Of the name Creed.
2. Of the ſorts of Creeds.
3. Of the end and uſe of ſuch abridgements.
4. Of the parts of this Creed.

WHen S. Auguſtine that worthy Father, and moſt painfull Biſhop, began the like paines, I pray you heare his words; Queſo vos fratres chariſſimi, ut nobis referentibus expoſitionem Symboli attentiùs audiatis: I beſeech you, dear brethren, that while we expound the Creed unto you, you would give your diligent attendance to us. Qua doctrina Symboli, eſt illuminatio animæ, plenitudo credentium in eo quod docetur & diſcitur: Which doctrine of the Creed is the light of the ſoule, and the fulneſſe of beleevers, in that which is taught and learned. Symbolum breviſſ. verbis, ſed magnum ſacramentis: parum oſtendens inſinuatione latitudinis, ſed totum continens compendio brevitatis, exiguum eſt ut memoriam non obruat, ſed diffuſum, ut intelligentiam ſupercedat. Confirmans omnes perfectione credendi, deſiderio confitendi, fiducia reſurgendi, &c. The Creed is ſhort in words, but great in myſteries. Little doth it ſhew by inſinuation of bredth, but yet containeth all in a compendious brevity: ſmall, that it might not oppreſſe the memory, yet large and exceeding much our weake underſtanding, confirming all with perfection of beleeving, with deſire of confeſſing, and with aſſurance of reſurrection in the laſt day. Thus that worthy Father in his time; which ſhall ſerve for the quickning of our attention in this our time.

Touching now the name Symbolum, it is had from a Greeke word, that ſignifieth to contribute, to give, or to offer, and it hath divers acceptations in mens writings.

Firſt, it ſignifieth that contribution or gathering that is made of many to a common end. Wee when it is for victuals, call it uſually a ſhot.

Secondly, it ſignifieth that marke, or badge, or ſigne, whereby in the field one Souldier is knowne from another, to belong to his Captaine or Band.

Thirdly, it is taken for a ſigne of another thing, as when the Bread and Wine in the holy Sacrament, are called Symboles of the body and blood of our Saviour Chriſt, becauſe they are ſignes, repreſenting the ſame.

Fourthly, for that Poſie or word which men make choice of, for things in their Armes or otherwiſe, as that of Alphonſus, Pro lege & grege, for the law, and for the people: the moſt of which acceptations agree to our Creed, and therefore fitly called Symbolum Apoſtolorum, the Apoſtles ſhot or contribution, the badge to know beleevers by, &c.

Be there divers Creeds?

There be three Creeds receeived in this Church of England.

The Apoſtles Creed, the Nicen Creed, Athanaſius Creed.

The Apoſtles Creed is that which wee have now in hand: ſo called, not becauſe in Scripture we finde any thing to prove it, but becauſe uſually ſpeech derived to us from our Anceſtors hath ſo termed it. Ruffinus and Cyprian upon the Creed writeth thus: Our old Fathers affirme (ſaith he) that after the aſcenſion of our Saviour, when the Spirit deſcended and reſted upon every one of the Apoſtles in forme of fiery tongues, whereby they were endued with ability to ſpeake and underſtand divers languages, having thereby a paſſage open unto them, to profit all Nations, according to the commandement given them by Chriſt, before he departtd, Matth. 28. and when the time was come that they muſt ſever themſelves one from another, they determined among themſelves to ſet downe a forme of faith, or a body of doctrine out of the holy Scriptures, to keep themſelves ever unto: leſt by ſeparation and diſtance of one from the other, many diverſities might be found in the ſubſtance of their teaching. And this is that ſumme or briefe abridgement they all concluded upon, being from that day to this, called Symbolum Apoſtolorum, the Apoſtles Creed: as for that fancy, That every Apoſtle made one particular Article, and caſt it in, as men uſe to doe their ſhot at a meeting, it hath no ground: but this is ſufficient, that it was the common ſhot of them all, they altogether agreeing of the whole. To this effect writeth Ruffinus. Others alſo might be alledged of the like opinion.

Amb. Serm. 38. Hierom. Epiſt. 61 & 9. againſt Iovinian, &c.

Wherefore

Wherefore you ſee how it came to bee called by this name: When, or in what yeare it was made, wee reade not any certainty in good authority: but it was the firſt of all, and before the other Creeds named, they being but Paraphraſes to this: and it was ever in great account in the Church. Auguſtine and Irenæus call it Apoſtolicam traditionem, A tradition of the Apoſtles.

What ſay you of the Nicene Creed?

The Nicene Creed is that which we uſe at the Communion, in our Booke of Common-prayer, and was compoſed by the godly Aſſembly of an 118. grave and learned Biſhops, with others in the Councell of Nice, under Conſtantine the Great: about the yeare of our Lord 328. upon the occaſion ſpecially of Arrius hereſie.

And what of Athanaſius Creed?

Athanaſius Creed, uſed of us at Morning-prayer, and beginning thus: Whoſoever will bee ſaved, &c. was made by Athanaſius an ancient Father, of ſingular learning and godlineſſe, a man beautified with perſecutions and afflictions, and commended for his true profeſſion of religion, the Holy Ghoſt being his guide, and governing both heart and pen, about the yeare of our Lord, 350.

What might be the end or uſe of theſe Breviaries or Abridgements?

Theſe ſerve, and alwayes have ſerved, as already hath been ſaid:

To be a rule to teach by.
To be a rule to learne by.
To be a rule to make profeſſion by.
To be a cogniſance to know Chriſtians from Pagans by.

All good and holy uſes: wherefore this our Creed ſhould be throughly knowne of us.

What is the diviſion you beſt like of?

I beſt like, as moſt plaine, that uſuall diviſion that putteth it into foure parts.

The firſt, of God the Father, and our Creation, Article 1.
The ſecond, of God the Sonne, and our Redemption, in the next fixe Articles.
The third, of the holy Ghoſt, in the eight Article.
The fourth, of Gods people, called the Church, in the foure laſt Articles.

The firſt Article of God the Father and our Creation, is this; I beleeve in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth.

What will you pleaſe to ſay of it?

For moſt plainneſſe, which in matters of ſuch conſequence, as the underſtanding of theſe Articles, ſhall ever be beſt, I chooſe to follow the words as they lie in the Article. Wherein firſt you ſee who beleeveth; and ſecondly, what is beleeved. To the firſt, you ſee the Article ſaith, I beleeve: I, and not we; I, and not another; I, for my ſelfe, you for your ſelfe, &c. The firſt word then, I, offereth unto us this conſideration: That faith muſt not be generall, but particular: Not of others, but of my ſelfe. For what will it profit mee to beleeve that all the world ſhall be ſaved, if I can conceive no comfort of mine owne eſtate? Or what good can ariſe to this ſad and ſinfull ſoule of mine, by hearing, by reading, or any way knowing the generall promiſes of Mercy and pardon in the Scriptures, unleſſe the Lord vouchſafe mee that gift of gifts (which we call Faith,) in particularity, to apply, taſte, and feele to mine owne comfort the ſame.

Therefore it is ſaid, and we muſt ever remember it; The juſt ſhall live by his owne faith. But the Church of Rome getting commoditie by mens doubting, cannot abide this doctrine. Their Rhemiſh notes upon the eight Chapter to the Romanes ſhew their Romiſh malice abundantly, to name no moe Authors. But what is Truth, ſtill judge we by his bleſſed Word. My God, my God, cryeth our Saviour Chriſt in our nature, feeling for us the weight of his Fathers wrath due unto us. And I thanke my God through Jeſus Chriſt for you all, ſaith the Apoſtle after him, Saint Paul; yea, my God, againe in another place, I thanke alwayes on your behalfe; and my God the third time, making mention alwayes of thee in my prayer. And how many times in his Epiſtles, My God, my God? David before him in every Pſalme almoſt, and all the children of God without exception, in their times and occaſions.

Hab. 2. 4.
Mat. 27.
Rom. 1. 8.
1 Cor. 1 4.
Philem. 4.

Saint Auguſtine ſaith, Contra iſtos mirabiliarios cautum me fecit Deus meus, &c. My God hath willed me to beware of theſe miracle-mongers, telling me that in the laſt dayes there ſhall riſe up falſe prophets. Againe he ſaith, Deus meus ubique præſens eſt, ubique totus, nuſquam incluſus: My God is every where preſent, every where whole, no where incloſed or ſhut up. Chryſoſtom ſaith, Chriſto meo teſtificabantur & venti, & mare: Both the winds and the ſea bare witneſſe to my Chriſt. Saint Hierome ſaith, Ego non Patrem, non Matrem, non Germanum adverſus Chriſtum

Aug. in Ioan. tract. 13. de Civit. Dei, 1. c. 29. Chryſoſt. in Pſal. 96. Hieron. adverſus error. Ioan. Hieroſolymitan.

Sedulius in 2 Cor. 6.
Cypr. de bono pœnitentia.

Chryſoſt. in Gen. hom. 34.

Chriſtum meum audiam: I will not heare either father, or mother, or brother, againſt my Chriſt. Sedulius ſaith, Deus natura omnium eſt, voluntate paucorum; God by nature is the God of all, but by will the God of few. S. Cyprian ſaith, Hic eſt Deus noſter, id eſt, non omnium, ſed credentium & fidelium Deus; This is our God, (that is to ſay) not the God of all, but of the beleevers, and of the faithfull. S. Paul to the Galathians, ſaith, I live by the faith of the Sonne of God, who hath loved me, and given himſelfe for me. Which words S. Chryſoſt. writing upon Geneſis, expoundeth thus: Qui dilexit me eſt, ut proprium uſurpas commune beneficium. Perfecto inquit. Nam licet pro omni hominum genere ſacrificium oblatum ſit, tamen propter amorem in eum, id, quod factum eſt omnibus, proprium mihi facio. Ita & Prophetis mos eſt, & facere, & dicere, Deus, Deus meus, quamvis totius orbis ſit dominus: ſed peculiari hoc eſt amori, ut ex cõmunibus propria faciat. Qui dilexit me. Quid dicis? An te dilexit ſolum? Omnem inquit hominum naturam dilexit, ſed ego illi gratias debeo, quaſi me ſolũ dilexiſſet, & tradidiſſet ſemetipſum pro me ſolo. S. Paul ſaith, Chriſt hath loved me. O Paul, the benefit that is common to all, thou uſeſt as peculiar to thy ſelfe! Yea verily (ſaith S. Paul) for albeit that ſacrifice were offered for all mankinde, yet for the love that I beare towards him, the thing that was done for all, I account as proper and ſeverall to my ſelfe alone. Thus the manner of the Prophets is to doe and to ſay, O God my God, notwithſtanding he is the God of all the World. But this is the ſpeciall and all-only office of love, of things common to make things peculiar. Thou ſaiſt, Chriſt hath loved me. What ſayeſt thou? Hath Chriſt loved thee only, & no man elſe? No (ſaith Paul) he hath loved all mankinde, but I owe him thanks, as if he had loved me alone, and had given himſelfe only for me. By all theſe Teſtimonies then, both of Scriptures and Fathers, you ſee the nature of true Faith in Gods children, how it doth particularize and apply things generall to the moſt and neareſt comfort. You ſee alſo wee ſpeake no otherwiſe than the Prophets, Apoſtles, holy Fathers and Doctors have done before us: and therfore a hard Religion, that cannot abide this light and this ſweetneſſe. But ſee the venome and poyſon of Error, when once it is gotten to mans heart, and hath ſetled it ſelfe. Wee acknowledge (ſay they) theſe Scriptures, &c. but theſe men were extraordinary men, and had ſpeciall revelations, &c. Had they ſo? and ſhall not we ſpeak as they ſpake, becauſe they were extraordinary men? O devill: let the Lord Jeſus be Judge, who knoweth all truth and right ſpeaking, and to correct it hath ſpoken thus:

Ioh. 20, 17. Goe to my brethren, and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father, and to your Father, to my God, and your God; evidently teaching, againſt all falſe Charmers whileſt the world endureth, That true faith apprehending him, muſt make as bold an application, and as particular an application of his Father, and of his Mercies, as he himſelfe may doe, but in him; and for him: A doctrine ſweeter than honey, and the honey-combe to a ſoule travelling and heavy laden, deſirous to be refreſhed but with the crummes that fall from Gods mercy Seat.

Let it therefore ſinke and ſettle it ſelfe in our hearts ever againſt all men and devils: for no man can teach us contrary to our deare Lord and Saviour: If hee tell me, that his Father is my Father, and his God is my God, I may be bold to ſay ſo, and ſpeake ſo, thinke ſo, and beleeve ſo ever. Et non erit hæc ſuperbia elati, ſed confeſſio non ingrati: And this ſhall not be either pride, or preſumption, or arroganey, as Popery teacheth, but a confeſſion of ſoule and heart not unthankfull, as Saint Auguſtine ſaith: much leſſe ſhall it be a token and marke to know an Heretike by, as that blinde and bloody Doctor Story, in his time, taught and ſaid: but it ſhall truely ſhew, that I am a man or woman that holdeth this Article, I beleeve, I, I, for my ſelfe, and in particular.

Sir, this ſufficeth of this firſt word: you may, if you pleaſe, goe to the ſecond, which is this, Beleeve.

It ſhall then ſuffice till hereafter, that occaſion will offer it ſelfe againe to touch it, and I come to the next, Beleeve. Where, firſt touching Faith, let us know that there are foure ſorts of Faith; an hiſtoricall Faith, a temporary Faith, the Faith of miracles, and a true Faith: An hiſtoricall Faith, is that which beleeveth all to be true that God hath ſaid and laid down in his word, but abſq; fiducia, without any truſt in it. Such faith as this have the Devils, who, as Saint Iames ſaith, beleeve and tremble.

Iam. 2. 10.

A temporary Faith have they that heare the Word of God, and with joy receive it; but not for any feeling of the grace of God in their hearts, but for other cauſes: of whom Chriſt ſpeaketh in the Goſpell. This Faith differeth from the hiſtoricall, becauſe this maketh glad, the Hiſtoricall doth not. The faith of miracles is a gift to doe miracles; whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, when hee ſaith: If I had all faith, ſo that I could move Mountaines, and have not love, I am nothing. Such faith had Iudas, and many others falſe Prophets, of whom Chriſt ſpeaketh in the ſeventh Chapter of Saint Matthew, verſe 22. But of none of theſe faiths doth our Creed ſpeake, for as much as they are not able to unite and joyne us to Chriſt, and to make us partakers of his benefits. Come wee therefore unto the fourth ſort, which is true faith.

Mat. 13 20.

1 Cor. 13.

And what I pray you is that?

True faith is a knowledge, firme and certaine of the good will of God towards us: which being founded upon the truth of his free promiſe in Chriſt, is both revealed to our mindes, and ſealed

ſealed in our hearts by the holy Ghoſt. Another in moe words to the ſame effect ſpeaketh thus: Vera fides eſt non tantum notitia qua firmiter aſſentior omnibus quæ Deus nobis in verbo ſuo patefecit, ſed etiam certa fiducia à Spiritu Sancto per Evangelium in corde meo accenſa, qua in Deo acquieſco, certò ſtatuens non ſolum aliis, ſed mihi quoq; remiſſionem peccatorum, æternam juſtitiam & vitam donatam eſſe, idq; gratis ex Dei miſericordia propter unius Chriſti meritum: True faith is not onely a knowledge whereby I firmely aſſent unto all things which God in his word hath opened unto us, but alſo a ſure truſt raiſed up in my heart by the holy Ghoſt, through the Goſpell, whereby I reſt in God certainly perſwaded, that remiſſion of Sinnes, eternall Righteouſneſſe and Life is given, not only to other, but alſo to me, and that freely of the mercy of God, for the merit of Chriſt onely. Calv. Inſtitut. 3. cap. 2. ſect. 7.

This were ſufficient, but that moſt plainneſſe in theſe points is moſt profitable: and therefore if you will take every part by it ſelfe, I thinke it will be very good.

Conſider then with your ſelfe what is firſt ſaid of Faith, namely, that it is notitia, a knowledge, which you muſt underſtand thus, not as wee know theſe outward and worldly matters, by ſenſe, but it is an aſſurance or certainty in us, more than an apprehenſion, proved by theſe places, and others: This is eternall life, to know thee to be the onely very God, and whom thou haſt ſent, Ieſus Chriſt. Againe, Which Myſterie hath been hid (ſaith S. Paul) ſince the world began, and from all Ages, but now is made manifeſt unto his Saints. Alſo in another place, That their hearts might be comforted, and they knit together in love, and in all riches of the full aſſurance of underſtanding to know the myſterie of God, even the Father of Chriſt. And we know (ſaith S. Iohn) that we are tranſlated, &c. we know. All which places you ſee evidently prove Faith to be a knowledge; ſo doth even Reaſon: for how can we beleeve things which we know not? Saint Peter knew it could not be, and therefore joyneth Faith and Knowledge, ſaying; And we beleeve and know, that thou art that Chriſt, the Sonne of the living God: For he yeeldeth a reaſon why he and other of the Apoſtles beleeved in Chriſt; namely, becauſe they knew that he was the Sonne of God. Which being ſo, it neceſſarily followeth, that they beleeve not, to whom thoſe things are unknowne, that he hath revealed in his Word. And therefore that tale of Popery concerning implicita fides, an ignorant faith, is moſt fooliſh: for Faith and Knowledge are ſo knit together, that they cannot be ſeparated. Iohn 17.3. Col. 1.26. Chap. 2.2. 2 Ioh. 3.14. Iohn 6.69.

Doth Popery croſſe this plaine truth, That Knowledge ought to goe with Faith?

There is nothing more hatefull in that Kingdome of Darkneſſe, than to heare of Knowledge, and in this particular moſt they abide it not: For a great Pillar of their Church is not aſhamed to write, That Obedientia irrationalis eſt conſummata obedientia & perfectiſſima, quando obeditur ſine inquiſitione rationis, ſicut jumentum obedit Domino ſuo: Obedience without reaſon, is a full and moſt perfect obedience, when thou obeyeſt without asking any reaſon, as the Horſe doth his Maſter. A moſt ſtrange ſpeech, and fitter for a Horſe, or for Balaams Aſſe, than for a Man: Surely moſt ill beſeeming a Cardinall, but that error will often be moſt groſſe. Yet hee ſtayeth not here, but againe in the ſame Epiſtle anſwering to this objection, What if the Church command contrary to Chriſt, whom muſt we obey? With as great groſſeneſſe he ſaith againe, Ab hoc eſt omnium præſumptionum initium, &c. This is the beginning of all preſumption, when particular men thinke their owne judgement to be more agreeable to Gods commandement, than the judgement of the Univerſall Church. Whereby you ſee, that he utterly diſliketh the people ſhould any way ſeeke to know what they beleeve, or what they obey unto, but ſimply and fillily to follow blinde Guides whither ſoever they pleaſe to leade them. The very ſelf-ſame darkneſſe doth Doctor Smith, and other of their Catholike Teachers, againe deliver in one of his Books, where he ſaith, That albeit a man doe by the commandement of his Biſhop or Prieſt a wicked thing, yet this very cloake of his ſimple obedience ſhall excuſe him. But the bleſſed Apoſtles knew no ſuch obedience, when they anſwered, Whether it is better to obey God or man, judge you, &c. Sir Thomas Moore, and other of that ſide not unlearned, boldly avoucheth, that If ten ſhould preach in a day, and every one contrary to another, yet ſhall he never thrive that will ſearch who ſaith true. Directly contrary to the commandement of our Saviour Chriſt, Search the Scriptures, and to that notable example of the men of Berea ſo commended and liked by the holy Ghoſt, that beleeved not even Saint Paul himſelfe without tryall, but ſearched the Scriptures whether thoſe things were ſo. Nic. Cuſanus, Epiſt. 2. ad Ba. Ioh. 5. Act. 17.

Now how doth this darkneſſe of Popery and Papiſts minds agree with Faith to bee a knowledge, how alſo with the Scriptures that have proved it ſo, or with many others that may bee quoted? As with that in the Goſpell, If the blinde leade the blind, both ſhall fall into the ditch, then no excuſe by ſimple obedience, but a flat falling into the pit, as well as he that led mee, and bade me, Biſhop, or Prieſt, or whoſoever: Prove all things, and hold that which is good; beleeve not every ſpirit, but trie the ſpirits whether they be of God or no, be ye followers of me, but how? Even as I am of Chriſt: Marke this example well, and conſider in your owne heart, whether any Prieſt, or Prelate under heaven may challenge more obedience of Gods people, than the bleſſed Apoſtle might: but the Apoſtle will be obeyed no further, than he obeyeth and followeth Chriſt, which hee Mat. 14. 1 Theſſ. 5. 1 Ioh. 4. 1 Cor. 11. 1.

he leaveth us ever to trie in him; what tyrannie then is this Popiſh doctrine over our ſoules and conſciences, to ſeeke to muffle us that we may not ſee, and muſle us that we may not ſpeake till it be too late to doe either, but we muſt ſimply obey without asking any queſtion, or once having any care whether it be good or evill. It is a law amongſt them, that if the Pope would carry ten thouſand ſoules to hell, yet may no man ſay, Domine, cur ita facis? Sir, why doe you ſo? Now this doctrine of ſimple obedience, without knowledge or reaſon, maketh as many Popes as Prieſts alſo, tyrannically ſitting in our conſciences, that wee may not ſay any thing to them, but ſimply doe whatſoever they bid us, or elſe it is preſumption, or arrogancy, or ſinne, and no obedience, where the Apoſtle maketh it a great obedience, after ſearching and finding how our teacher followeth Chriſt, then and ſo farre to follow him. Saint Peter telleth us, Such followers as they would have us to bee, ſhall follow the deſtruction of their guides, and therefore no excuſe either to teacher or follower, if the Maſter be not right. The Apoſtle ſaith to the Epheſians, Be yee not unjuſt, but underſtand what the will of the Lord is: marke the word underſtand, here plainly it overthroweth their ſimple obedience, and eſtabliſheth this truth that wee ſpeake of, that faith is a knowledge. Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, If I ſpeake the truth, why doe ye not beleeve me? moſt mercifully leaving us to an examination even of himſelfe, whether hee ſpeake truth or no. And ſhall ſinfull men tell us it is preſumption to looke into their doings, and to ground our obedience upon knowledge? O pride! O tyranny over the flocke of Chriſt! what marvell if they carried ſway in the world, when they had thus farre prevailed with the people, that they muſt be followed without any queſtion, and ſimple obedience ſhould excuſe them, though the thing were naught? Is this the Church? Is this the Spouſe? certainly a bold Spouſe, that ſeeketh more credit than her Husband, and let us note it: What meant the Apoſtle when he wrote thus, I beare them record that they have zeale, but not according to knowledge? doth he not lament it? doth he not condemne it? what can be plainer? you follow your Biſhop, or your Prieſt, and aske no reaſon why: becauſe you preſume they command you but good, and you are carefull to obey them that have the overſight of you: May it not now be ſaid of you, if the matter you follow be an error, as the Apoſtle ſaid, I beare them record their meaning is good, but they have no knowledge; and ſhall not the condemnation of you in this, be as juſt as that was? yes verily and much more: for though they had no knowledge, yet they were not taught that they might have none, as they are that beleeve this Popiſh Probleme: and therefore if the bleſſed Apoſtle bewailed that, needs muſt he to hell condemne this. Surely, ſo groſſe it is, that ſome of their owne ſort have been aſhamed of it. But I have tarried too long upon this point: wherefore I leave it with this remembrance, That ſince God and they teach directly contrary in this point; they, that Knowledge is Preſumption; God, that it is neceſſary unto Faith and all true obedience, Whether you will obey God or Man, judge you. Reade M. Calvin, Inſtitut. 3. cap. 2. ſect. 28. to the end.

Dist. 40. ſi Papa.

2 Pet. 2. 2.

Epheſ. 5. 17.

Hanno upon the words, omnia probate.

Faith then is a Knowledge, muſt needs be confeſſed: but you adde further, firme and certaine: now is that alſo true?

It is moſt true alſo; but gain-ſaid by the Doctrine of Rome, as the former point was. And to the end all things may be plaine, it ſhall bee good to heare what they teach in their words. Their Councell of Trent, even that ſinfull Councell, in one Canon ſaith thus: If any man ſhall ſay, That to the obtaining of the remiſſion of ſins, it is neceſſary that every one ſhould beleeve certainly, and without doubting or wavering, in reſpect of his own infirmity, that his ſins are forgiven him, let that perſon be accurſed. In another Canon thus: If any man ſhall ſay, That a man borne againe and juſtified, is bound by his faith to beleeve that he certainly is of the number of the Elect, let him be accurſed. And in a third Canon thus: If a man ſhall ſay with a firme certainty, That he ſhall have that great gift of perſeverance to the end, unleſſe hee hath learned it by ſome ſpeciall revelations, let him be accurſed. Unto which three wicked Canons, adde their Rhemiſh note upon the eighth to the Rom. 38. & you ſee their Doctrine, not out of any one mans Writings, againſt which they might take exceptions, as being but one, but even by their whole Church, repreſented in a Councell, and confirmed by the Pope. Of which great injury to God and his Chriſt, and his children, if you aske a reaſon, what may more truly be given than this? becauſe upon ſuch wavering and doubting, as upon a foundation, moſt of their gaine and ſinfull commings in bee grounded and built. For the heart of man and woman ever deſiring and wiſhing ſome certaine ſafety, ſome comfort and hope touching the life to come, and being beaten from the ſweet promiſes of God by theſe men, and taught that they muſt ever feare and doubt, aſſurance being preſumption, ſtraight it turneth it ſelfe to outward, and thinks of workes to be done, and gifts to be given, to winne eternall life by; wherein they want no ſetting forward: this being the prey that is gaped for. Hence come Buildings, endowments with Land and living, Vowes, Pilgrimages, Maſſes, Dirges, Trentals, Pardons, and what not? heaping up whatſoever they can, that as the Poet ſaith, If no one, yet all together, may help. And when, not even all, in the Agony of Death yeeld any comfort, but ſtill the ſoule feareth, and is perplexed, then have they Purgatory to put them in hope of: which being ſubject (as they ſay) to their Prayers and offices, ſhall ſurely be overcome by the ſame, and they there-hence delivered joyfully, if they will Seſſ. Can. 13.

Can. 15.

Can. 16.

give

give and bequeath liberally: Now cannot the dead come back againe, and tell them how damnably they have abuſed them. And ſo every way, by this denting, you ſee they drive fiſh into their net, and get the fat of the Land. But O ſinfull gaine, gotten with ſuch depraving of the Lords ſweet promiſes, and by ſlaying the ſoules of his people, in driving them from Faith to workes, and from Jeſus Chriſt the true ſafety, to themſelves. Their great Rabby Andradius would faine wipe from them this ſhame and moſt due reproach, by telling us of that ſpeech of David, No man knoweth, or who can tell, how oft he offendeth. But what a ſilly ſhift is this to come from a man ſo great in his owne eyes, when wee all know that David who uttered that ſpeech, yet never doubted for all that of his own ſalvation, but with firme faith and aſſurance, ſweeter than any honey, reſted upon him that is both able and willing to free David and all true beleevers, both from knowne and unknowne ſinnes, be they never ſo many or ſo great, upon true repentance and ſorow for them. Thus wee ſee their wicked Doctrine; contrary to which, the truth that we muſt hold, and is here compriſed in this word Credo, I beleeve, is, that a Chriſtian man and woman ought not onely generally to beleeve the promiſes of God to be true, as theſe men affirme, but alſo to make thereof a particular application to themſelves: and ſo beleeving them alſo in particularity to be true, to ground upon them ſure hope, firme faith, and (as the Apoſtle ſaith) a ſtrong conſolation touching their owne ſafety in the day of the Lord. For as for the firſt, there are too many that carp at the truth of theſe things that are written in the word, whom Peter calleth mockers, and ſaith, in the laſt times they ſhall abound, whereas wee know by the Apoſtles teaching, that faith is not a ſimple knowledge, but ἔλεγχος &c. the evidence of things which are not ſeen. And S. Iohn Baptiſt ſaith, He beleeveth that hath received his teſtimony, and hath ſealed that God is true, that is, confeſſeth and aſſenteth to theſe things that he hath ſpoken. And for the ſecond, there are both men and devils, that although they have knowledge, and agree that things be true, yet they have no power to apply them to any good to themſelves, and ſo their knowledge is vaine, as S. Iames ſaith: whereas the faithfull doe ſo know as they beleeve, ſo beleeve as they apply, and ſo apply, as albeit they ſee many things contrary to what they beleeve, yet nevertheleſſe, paſt hope they beleeve under hope, and give glory to God, as Abraham did: and this is true Faith, the efficient cauſe whereof is the holy Ghoſt, for no man can call Ieſus Lord, but by the holy Ghoſt: the inſtrumentall cauſe is the Goſpell, for Faith commeth by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. The ſeat of faith is in the heart, for of ſuch as beleeve the Lord openeth the heart: and, with the heart we beleeve unto righteouſneſſe, as with the mouth we confeſſe unto ſalvation.

2 Pet. 3. 3. Heb. 11. 1. Iohn 3. 33.

Iames 2. 19.

Rom. 4. 18. &c. 1 Cor. 12. 3. Rom. 10. 17. Acts 16. 14. Rom. 10. 10.

I pray you apply to this Popiſh errors of Doubting, ſome proofes of our doctrine, that we ought to be aſſured.

Firſt, it is proved by the very end of the free promiſe, which is, That we ſhould not doubt: For becauſe he that doubteth beleeveth not, and he that repoſeth ſalvation in works, ever doubteth, as not knowing when he hath done enough; therefore we ſhould not waver, but be firme in faith, Salvation commeth not by the Law, but by Grace, ſaith the Apoſtle: in whoſe words this alſo further marke, that he doth not ſay, that faith only in generall might be firme, ſed toti ſemini, but to the whole ſeed, that is, to all beleevers in particularity, and the ſame alſo ſay other places: In the 6. to the Hebrews; God willing more abundantly to ſhew unto the heires of promiſe the ſtableneſſe of his counſell, bound himſelfe with an oath, That by two immutable things, wherein it is impoſſible that God ſhould lie, we might have ſtrong conſolation: which we? we in generality, or we that have ſome ſpeciall revelation of our election? No, it followeth, we which have our refuge to lay hold upon that hope that is ſet before us, and that is every particular beleever. S. Iohn ſaith, He that beleeveth not God, hath made him a lyar. But he that doubteth beleeveth not, and therefore he that doubteth hath made him a lyar. Yea will they ſay, he that beleeveth not God in generality. But then let them reade what followeth, ver. 13. Theſe things have I written unto you that beleeve in the name of the Son of God, that ye may know that ye have eternall life, and that ye may beleeve, &c. Therefore I ſay againe, if I particularly for my ſelfe, take not hold of the promiſe of God, I make God a lyar by the doctrine of S. Iohn, let them ſay what they will, and make vice vertue as they doe. Thus then by the end of free Juſtification is this doctrine once proved.

Rom. 4. 16.

Heb. 6. 17.

A doubting is no ſtrong conſolation.

Secondly, it is proved by the properties of a true ſaving faith, whereto is attributed in the Scripture aſſurance, Let us draw neare with a true heart in aſſurance of Faith, our hearts being pure from an evill conſcience, Heb. 10. 22. Col. 2. 2. Alſo a ground & an evidence, as where he ſaith, Faith is the ground of things which are hoped for, and the evidence of things which are not ſeen. Heb. 11. 1. A boldneſſe and entrance with confidence, Eph. 3. 12. All which, and every one whereof, you ſee evidently exclude doubting and wavering, as a thing moſt contrary to them: whereunto you may further adde theſe places, Rom. 5. 1. Being juſtified by faith we have peace with God: now peace and doubting cannot dwell together, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Truſt perfectly in the grace that is brought unto you in the revelation of Ieſus Chriſt. Perfectly to truſt excludeth doubting. 1 Iohn 5. 13, 14. We know, we know, &c. excluding doubting. Rom. 8. 38. I am perſwaded that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor Depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord. Which ſingular place many wayes is bitten at by theſe enemies of Gods mercies and his childrens comforts. Their Rhemes Teſtament ſaith, he ſpake of himſelf by revelation: ſo ſaid Pigghius before them, whom happily they followed. But his ſpeaking in the plurall number of moe than himſelfe, when he ſaith us, not me, confuteth them both. Andradius therefore ſeeing this ſhift would not ſerve, cavilleth with the Greek word πέπεισμαι and ſaith it ſignifieth, I am probably perſwaded; which the Rhemes Teſtament alſo hath. But judge you, whether a man is ſaid to be perſwaded, when the matter is but probable. Themſelves tranſlate it, I am ſure; and how can a man be ſure upon only a probability? Then conſider againe, which is truly anſwered to them, That the Knowledge which we have by hope grounded upon Gods promiſes, is ſo ſure, that it cannot be deceived, as it is plaine, Rom. 5. 5. The perſwaſion that the Apoſtle hath in other places is alſo grounded upon good arguments; but here Rom. 8. upon the immutable Decree of God. And it is a good reaſon to prove, that every Chriſtian man which is endued with Faith and Hope, may and ought to be infallibly aſſured, that he is juſtified, and ſhall be ſaved, becauſe the word of God, and his promiſe to all that beleeve in him (and in Faith call upon him) cannot faile, but be moſt infallibly true. That we ſhall alſo perſevere in the favour of God, and ſo conſequently that we are predeſtinated to eternall life, the Apoſtle doth moſt plainly prove in this Chapter: wherefore, by the ſpirit of Adoption, and the effects of Gods grace agreeable, we may have certaine knowledge that we ſhall inherite Gods kingdome; which none ſhall doe, but they that continue unto the end, and were appointed unto it before the beginning of the world. And this is true humility, when we preſume nothing upon our owne ſtrength or worthineſſe, but depend wholly upon the truth of Gods promiſes. Wherefore it was a damnable preſumption of the Popiſh Prelates of Trent, to condemne that for a falſe illuſion which the word of Truth doth ſo manifeſtly lead us unto, and by all meanes perſwade us to acknowledge. Laſtly, conſider that of Paul to Timothy, 2 Epiſt. 1. 12. I know whom I have beleeved, and am ſure that he is able to keep that which I have cõmitted to him againſt that day. Where the ſame Greek word πέπεισμαι is: and yet I hope they will not tranſlate it probably ſure, unleſſe they will call Gods divine Power into queſtion, as ſubject to want. Evident therefore it is what force is in the Word, more than they will heare of: and doth not one Scripture explicate another?

Thirdly, the doctrine and uſe of the Sacraments doth apparently fight with this doubting of theirs, and confirme the aſſurance of Faith now ſpoken of; for they were not inſtituted, as themſelves (I hope) will confeſſe, to confirme Gods promiſes in themſelves, but to confirme us in the beliefe of them, who by corruption are weake, and ſubject to a thouſand wavering conſents and thoughts. And in what manner of beliefe muſt they confirme us? In a generall beleefe only? no, no; but in a particular: and therefore in them there is a particular application of the ſignes to every one by themſelves: yea, by theſe ſignes, Salvation, even ſealed with the blood of Chriſt, is as it were by the hand of Chriſt given into the hand of the Chriſtian, to draw them and bring them, the holy Ghoſt working by the meanes, to as ſtedfaſt and certaine a beliefe of the particular application of the thing ſignified, as there is of the ſigne, and to make every man by faith in his heart ſecretly to change theſe generall words of Chriſt, which is given for you, into theſe particulars, which is given for me.

Fourthly, marke againe that ſpirit of Adoption mentioned even now, and ſee how that Seale ſealeth up this Truth which is now in queſtion. Ye have not received (ſaith the Apoſtle) the ſpirit of Bondage to feare again, but ye have received the ſpirit of Adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The ſame Spirit beareth witneſſe to our ſpirits, that we are the children of God: and if we be children, we be alſo heires of God, & heires annexed with Chriſt, Rom. 8. 15. Gal. 4. 4. Again, in another place the ſame Apoſtle, Wherein alſo after ye beleeved, ye were ſealed with the holy ſpirit of Promiſe, which is the earneſt of our inheritance, Epheſ. 1. 13. Finding then this Seale, pledge and pawne and earneſt of our inheritance in our hearts, may we grow to no certainty and comfortable aſſurance by it? Mens Promiſes, with Pledges given, work aſſurance and reſt in us, and ſhall Gods Promiſes, with ſuch a Pledge, not do ſo much, but leave us nevertheleſſe fearefull and doubting, and often plunged in moſt dreadfull ſtruglings of deſpaire? O wickedneſſe to be abhorred of all that hate not God to be God! Surely, words cannot expreſſe this injury to the Lord, who is ever faithfull and true, and to his children, which live in the feeling of that his ſweet and aſſured mercy; but God ſhall repay them one day that thus blaſpheme.

Fifthly, if the Lord like Doubting, or would have us ever harbour it, as theſe men teach, why doth he ſo often and ſo earneſtly command and call upon us to ſtrive and wreſtle againſt it, by all meanes crying to him, Lord increaſe our Faith, Lord help our unbeliefe, &c. O well doe theſe places and the like ſhew how faſt the Lord would have his children cleave unto him in faith, living and dying ever, ſay they what they can.

2 Cor. 3. 5. Sixtly, marke the commandement of the Apoſtle well, to the Corinthians, Prove your ſelves whether you are in the faith, examine your ſelves, know you not your own ſelves, how that Ieſus Chriſt dwelleth dwelleth in you, except ye be reprobates. Know ye not (ſaith the Apoſtle) Know ye not, that is, aſſuredly and certainly, without any wavering, &c.

Laſtly, their owne writers are aſhamed of this devilliſh doctrine of doubting; and therefore great is truth and prevaileth. Gropperus publikely and to their faces that averred it, withſtood it; Ambroſius Catherenus, and Dominicus à Soto writ againſt it, and do teſtifie, that in the Councell of Trent, when they were about this aſſertion, they could not agree among themſelves to eſtabliſh it, till at laſt this ſhift was deviſed, to entitle the 9. Chapter thus, Contra inanem Hereticorum fidem, Againſt the vain Faith of Heretikes; inſinuating thereby in ſhew, that they meant not any thing againſt the certainty of a true juſtifying Faith. But when by this tricke they had got it to paſſe, then their hidden venome ſhewed it ſelfe. Gerſon againſt it obſerveth thus, that in the Scripture it is not ſaid, Would God thy ſins were forgiven thee, or if they be, or may be, or ſo forth; but thy ſins are forgiven thee, in the Indicative Moode and preſent Tenſe, for aſſurance and comfort by certainty; and thy ſins, thy ſins in particular; as Nathan to David, Thy ſin is done away, 1 Sam. 12. Son be of good cheere, thy ſins are forgiven thee, Mat. 9. And thy faith hath made thee whole; hath, hath, not ſhall, ſhall: it is done, doubt not, &c. And if this yet ſuffice not, let us aske one of them, Whether he know himſelfe to be a member of the Catholike Church, or no? he will ſay, he doth, becauſe he beleeveth, thus he doth, he doth that, &c. as in their Catholike Church is commanded. Then let him anſwer, Whether the ſalvation of one that is a true member of the Church be caſuall? If it bee, ſuch a Church let theirs bee, for of the true Catholike Church it cannot be ſaid; and if it be not, why deny they certainty? Thus you ſee what they teach, againſt Scripture, againſt themſelves, againſt common reaſon. Therefore we juſtly reject ſuch wicked doctrine, and conclude out of the ſtable word of God, That faith is a knowledge firme and certaine.

Your next words in order are theſe, in God; I beleeve in God.

Firſt, for the former word (in) let us not continue that three-fold difference of beleeving, de Deo, Deo, & in Deum, of God, to God, and in God. To beleeve of God, is to beleeve ſuch truth concerning his nature, as ſhall out of his word be ever taught unto us; and this kinde you have, Iohn 14.10. Beleeveſt thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me, &c. To beleeve God, or to God, is to be perſwaded of that which he himſelfe ſaith, that it is true; this kinde you have in the next verſe, Beleeve me that I am in the Father, &c. To beleeve in God is more than both theſe, even to truſt, and ſtay, and relie wholly, firmly, faſtly, and conſtantly upon him, &c. Which kinde is in the next verſe againe, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, He that beleeveth in me, the workes that I doe he ſhall alſo doe, &c. The Papiſts, ſome of them, have joyned this word (In) to the ninth Article, and would have us ſay, I beleeve in the Catholike Church; others have joyned it to the tenth Article alſo, and would have us to ſay, I beleeve in the Communion of Saints. But men better adviſed of their ſide, have diſliked it, and alledged for their reaſon out of S. Auguſtine, That to beleeve in God, is credendo amare, credendo diligere, credendo in eum ire, & ejus membris incorporari; with beleeving to love God, to goe into God, and to be incorporated into his members, that is, to be made a member of him: a greater matter than may be given to creatures. Therefore their vulgar Tranſlation in ſome places, where others have put the word (In) leave it out: as Exod. 14. The people beleeved God and Moſes, not in Moſes. Exod. 19. I will come down, that the people may beleeve thee, not in thee. Againe, Paſchaſius words touching this matter are plaine; Credimus Eccleſiam, &c. We beleeve the holy Church, as the mother of Regeneration, but we beleeve not in the Church, as the author of Regeneration. S. Auguſtine againe is plaine, Credimus Paulo, non credimus in Paulum; Credimus Petro, non credimus in Petrum: We beleeve Paul, but we beleeve not in Paul; we beleeve Peter, but we beleeve not in Peter, &c. See therefore how foule and groſſe errors Popery liketh, though ſtrength of truth breaketh out of ſome of them, God ſo ruling and over-ruling them for his glory. Touching the next word God, it implyeth theſe points unto us:

Hoſius confeſſ. Petri Gommeſt. cap. 58.

Paſchal. lib. 1. de Spir. Sanct. Aug. in Joan. tract. 29.

1. That there is a God.	3. What he is.
2. But one God.	4. What manner of God.

For the firſt, I never held it fit to argue it, but even to reſt in that badge which the Spirit of God giveth him of a foole, that either denyeth or doubteth of it: Surely whom God thinketh and judgeth a foole, he is a foole indeed; and ſo let him take himſelfe to bee, and amend that fault. For the ſecond, let us remember what we reade of the blindneſſe of man in this point. Some have ſpoken of celeſtiall gods, terreſtiall gods, infernall gods, ſea gods, gods of the fountaines and floods, houſe gods, &c. Hence came unnaturall and adulterous Iupiter, filthy Apollo, baſtardly Æſculapius, adulterous and murthering Mars, theeviſh and knaviſh Mercury, drunken Bacchus, infamous Ganimedes, impudent Venus, ſpightfull Iuno, filthy Opis, Lupa, Faula, Flora, &c. The Heretikes, called Gnoſtici, Carpocratians, Manichees, &c. made one god of good, and another of evill. Thoſe Tritheitæ made three gods, as three Perſons, to wit, the Father, the Son, and the holy Ghoſt: Againſt all which let us ever obſerve and marke the ſure truth of Gods word. Moſes ſpeaketh never but of one God, neither any other of all the godly in the Scripture. God ſpeaking to the fathers, ſpeaketh ever of himſelfe as of one only: the Fathers praying, ever prayed but to one: the Commandement is, Thou ſhalt have no other gods but me, not us. The Tabernacle one, the Altar one, &c. ſhewed one God; Chriſt taught, and all his Diſciples after him, but one God; the Church ever hath held it, and refuſeth the contrary: and which is a ſure ground alſo, the Scripture expreſſely ſaith it; Heare O Iſrael, the Lord thy God is one: We know that an Idoll is nothing, and that there is no God but one. One God, one faith, &c. And there is one God, and one Mediator betwixt God and Man, the man Chriſt Ieſus: with many ſuch places. The wiſe Philoſophers and Poets of the Heathens have held this: as Orpheus, Homer, Sophocles, Pythagoras, Plato, &c. ſee Lactantius, Iuſtine Martyr, Auguſtinus Steuchus, and others. Reaſon firmly teacheth it: for there is but one infinite, and none but God is infinite, and therefore but one. Secondly, if there were moe Gods, then muſt they be circumſcribed, that where one is, another is not, which cannot be. Thirdly, there muſt bee ſome eſſentiall difference, and ſo not perfect. Fourthly, in one Kingdome there is rightly but one King; but Gods Kingdome is one, and therefore but one King or God. Theſe and other reaſons hath Athanaſius. This alſo is implyed in the word God, being of the ſingular number, and not of the plurall. And the Nicene Creed maketh it plaine, Credo in unum Deum: I beleeve in one God, &c.

Deut. 6. 4. 1 Cor. 9. 4. Epheſ. 4. 1 Tim. 2. 9.

Orat. contra Idol.

This unity of the Deity I thinke you will touch again when you come to ſpeak of the diſtinction of Perſons by the word Father, and therefore if you pleaſe this may now ſuffice.

Let it be ſo then, and come we to the third point; What God is: where juſtly we may thinke, that if the joyes he hath prepared for us be far above the reach of eye to ſee, eare to heare, tongue to tell, or heart to thinke, ſurely himſelfe is much more above our capacity to declare or ſpeake of him as he is. Wherefore Simonides the Philoſopher being asked of Hiero the Tyrant, what God was; and taking a day to conſider, when that was done, asked two, and then foure, and ſo doubled the time, being ever further and further off, the more he conſidered of it. It is alſo written of Alanus, that when he had undertaken to ſhew what God was, and walking by a River in that great meditation, he ſaw a little Child by the river ſide, who made a little hole in the earth, and went with a ſpoone to the River to fetch ſpoonfull after ſpoonfull of water to put in the ſame, the former being ever ſunke into the earth ere he came with another; Which when Alanus had marked a good while, at laſt he asked the childe, what he meant to do? who anſwered, That he intended to fetch all that River with his ſpoone, and to put into that hole, even that little hole which he had made. Then Alanus laughed, and told him he could never doe it; to whom the childe readily anſwered, No more canſt thou ever do that which thou art now about to doe; namely, declare what God is. Which ſo amazed Alanus, that he gave over his intendment. God hath no genus, no difference, as the Logitians ſpeake, and therefore cannot be defined by any true and perfect definition. Laſtly, the Seraphins covering their faces with their wings, by a mute and ſilent demonſtration teach us thus much.

It is enough, and now I pray you to the fourth point.

The next point is, that we conſider, Qualis, What manner of God he is, for that is the next help we weake wretches have, leaving to declare what hee is in his divine eſſence and nature. And this it hath pleaſed him to reveale in his word in many places, but that one in Exodus may ſuffice of himſelfe alone; where you may remember he is thus revealed: The Lord, the Lord, ſtrong, mercifull, and gracious, ſlow to anger, and of great goodneſs & truth, reſerving mercy to thouſands, forgiving iniquity, tranſgreſſion, and ſin, and not making the wicked innocent, viſiting the iniquity of the father upon the children, and upon childrens children, &c. The uſe of which deſcription is, that the nature of God being knowne, we ſhould embrace him by faith, and feare to offend him: for when we heare that God is ſuch and ſuch, and remember that hee hath made ſuch a gracious covenant with us, To be our God, and the God of our ſeed: we conclude rightly upon the forme of the Covenant, that he is not only ſuch a one by nature, but alſo that to us and ours hee will ever ſhew himſelfe ſuch a one. Thus doe we if a mortall man be in league of love with us; looke what wiſdome, what wealth, what friends, and what help any way is in him, wee aſſure our ſelves of good by it, if we need: How much more from God may bee drawne ſtrong comfort in all occaſions? Too much it were to run over all his attributes, and ſome will follow in this firſt Article hereafter: Wherefore let it ſuffice now to thinke a little of theſe two, his truth and wiſdome.

Exod. 34. 6.

I pray you then open theſe two, which I conceive to be comfortable.

So they be aſſure your ſelfe, if at large they might be ſpoken of: but for a taſte now, Is there any truth like unto his? No, no: ſo great and ſo conſtant is his truth, that one word of it paſſeth all the truth of Men and Angels. He, he is the Truth, the Way, and the Life, and of his fulneſſe we all participate: the good whereof may be this unto us; firſt to aſſure us, that his inſtruction is moſt ſafe to be followed, and therefore ever to be hearkned unto and ſought for with all our care and diligence, we having ſo ſweet a promiſe, that if we ſeek we ſhall find. Secondly, to make us know with feare & ſhaking, that he will not ever ſpare and ſuffer the wicked worker, though though long he doe it in his incomprehenſible mercy to bring repentance : but having in his word laid downe his judgements, as he is true and Truth it ſelfe, he will in time accompliſh the ſame, and poure forth his wrath upon impenitent ſinners, unleſſe they returne : So worketh his truth both faith and feare in us to our good. Then for the ſecond, is there any Wiſdome like unto his ? we know there is not. And is not this his wiſdome tyed to our uſe and good by his gracious covenant, if we ſerve him ? O how ſhall every thing work for the beſt then, and bee diſpoſed by him to our comfort, in the end, may we with joy and heavenly ſweetneſſe thinke and feele ! How ſhall all troubles be ended, all practiſes broken, all ſlanders revealed, and puniſhed, all teares, in a word, wiped away from our eyes, and true contentment given us : for cannot his wiſdome over-reach any mans wiles, or will, or malice, or might ? it can, it can, and it is for us and with us by his promiſe, and therefore, Si Deus nobiſcum, if he be with us, what feare we, what man can ever doe againſt us. Lord, Lord, increaſe our faith.

This little may ſhew us what ſweetneſſe is in more, and what uſe may be made of all his Attributes : but ſince you intend not that courſe, for brevities ſake paſſe now, if it pleaſe you, to the next word, Father.

This addition of this word maketh a diſtinction, or a reſolution of that one God which wee beleeve, and have now ſpoken of, into three perſons, confeſſing the Father to be the firſt in that Trinity, not in time, for all the perſons are coeternall, but either in revelation, the word ſetting him firſt, or in order, or becauſe from everlaſting he begat his Son of like ſubſtance with himſelfe. This Trinity of Perſons is proved by plaine and evident Scriptures many : Faciamus hominem ad imaginem noſtram : Let us make man according to our owne likeneſſe. Where the verbe being of the plurall number cannot be underſtood of one perſon. Againe, in another place, Behold Adam is become as one of us. And let us goe down and confound their language : ſtill ſpeaking in the plurall number, to note moe perſons than one. In the New Teſtament, when Chriſt was baptized, there is the perſon of the Son baptized, the perſon of the Father ſpeaking from heaven & ſaying; This is my beloved Son heare him: and the perſon of the holy Ghoſt deſcending like a Dove, and lighting upon Chriſt. Againe, when that Commiſſion was given to the Diſciples to goe and teach all Nations, what is ſaid But baptizing them in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the holy Ghoſt, three diſtinct perſons. Alſo in that place of Saint Paul, God hath ſent forth the ſpirit of his Son into our hearts, whereby we cry Abba Father : where we ſee three perſons expreſſed. In his words againe to the Corinthians, where he prayeth for the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the love of God, and the fellowſhip of the holy Ghoſt, mentioning three. Iohn alſo when he ſaith, There are three that beare witneſſe in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit. All which places you ſee moſt plainly reveale and ſhew this point unto us. You may adde that in the Goſpell, When that Comforter ſhall come whom I will ſend from the Father : Where you ſee all three mentioned. The ſecond Pſalme diſtinguiſheth Father and Son, unleſſe you will ſay that one may beget himſelfe : for there it is ſaid of the Father, this day have I begotten thee : And it is written in the Law, ſaith our Saviour, that the witneſſe of two men is true, I am one that beare witneſſe of my ſelfe, and the Father that ſent me beareth witneſſe of me, and I am not alone. Father, againe ſaith Chriſt in another place, let this cup paſſe from me, yet not my will, but thy will be done. Ever in all places noting the diſtinction of perſons.

But we may not by this Trinity of Perſons take away the unity of the Godhead.

No, God forbid, the unity of the Godhead is as plaine in the Scriptures as this Trinity of perſons, whereof alſo take a little taſte. The firſt words of Geneſis, In the beginning God created heaven and earth : where the word God is of the plurall number to ſhew diſtinction of perſons, and the word created of the ſingular, to ſhew unity of Godhead and Eſſence. So againe in theſe words of Abraham, When God called me to wander out of my fathers houſe, &c. the verb called is of the plurall number, and the word God of the ſingular. Againe in Ioſua, ye cannot ſerve the Lord, for he is a holy God. Quia Domini ſancti ipſi, be the words indeed. And in that place of Eſay moſt plainly, Quem mittam ? whom ſhall I ſend ? ſee the unity of eſſence. Quis ibit nobis ? who will goe for us ? See the plurality of perſons. So we ſee by theſe Teſtimonies of holy Scripture, that God revealeth himſelfe in a Trinity, and in an Unity, a Trinity of Perſons, and an Unity of Godhead, neither doth the Unity take away the Trinity, nor the Trinity the Unity. There is alius in the Trinity, not aliud, alius eſt enim Pater, alius Filius, alius Spiritus Sanctus reſpectu perſonarum, ſed non aliud quia una eſt, & individua natura : The Father is one, the Sonne another, and the holy Ghoſt a third in reſpect of perſon, but the nature of all is one and indiviſible, and therefore in regard of that but one. Thus taught Fulgentius, when he ſaid, Cum unum Deum audis Patrem, Filium, & S. S. unam naturam ſummæ iſtius Trinitatis intellige; cum Trinitatem, tres perſonas ſummæ illius Trinitatis agnoſce : When thou heareſt the Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt to be but one God, underſtand the unity of nature in the high Trinity ; and when thou heareſt them to be three, acknowledge three perſons of the Trinity. Nazianzen alſo, when he wrote thus, Non poſſum unum cogitare, quin trium fulgore mox circumfundar, nec tria diſcernere, quin ſubito ad unum referar : I cannot thinke of one, but by and by the glorious light of three ſhineth

Gen. 1. 26.
Gen. 3. 22.
Gen. 11. 19.
Mat. 3. 16, 17.
Mat. 28. 19.
Gal. 4. 6.
2 Cor. 13. 13.
1 Iohn 5. 7.
Iohn 15. 26.
Pſal. 2.
Iohn 8. 17. 10. 29.
In principio creavit Dom. cœlum & terram.
Gen. 20. 13. Cum facerent Deus.
Ioſua 24. 19.
Eſay 6. 8.

ſhineth about me, neither can I againe thinke of three, but ſtraightway I am referred and caried to one. We neither divide the ſubſtance therefore of this bleſſed Trinity, becauſe they bee three, nor confound the Perſons becauſe they be one, but we acknowledge them three in one, and one in three, the glory equall, the majeſty coeternall; hating the hereſie of Arrius, that made the Sonne inferior in Godhead; and abhorring Macedonius, who detracted from the holy Ghoſt: with the hereſies of all other that have ſwarved from this doctrine ſo true.

Will you ſhew ſome uſe of this alſo before you leave it?

The firſt doctrine of unity of nature hath this uſe, to ſtrengthen us in the Commandements, Thou ſhalt have no other gods but me, or before me, and ever to teach us to diſcerne betwixt the true God and thoſe that by nature are no gods.

The ſecond doctrine of Trinity of perſons guideth us in the courſe of true honoring of God, who without the ſame is neither honoured nor called upon aright, as Chriſt himſelfe teacheth, Iohn 5.23. and Iohn 16.23. And without the holy Ghoſt neither can we beleeve in Father or Son, *Rom.*8.15. 1 *Cor.*12.3. So that moſt neceſſary and fruitfull is this knowledge of the Perſons: both the doctrines together of Trinity and Unity teach us to know God, and whom hee hath ſent, Jeſus Chriſt, and ſo make us heires of everlaſting life: this being eternall life, as wee heare and reade, to know one God, and whom he hath ſent, Ieſus Chriſt, Iohn 17. 3.

Yet hath this point ever been thought an high point, and hard to be conceived of our weakneſſe.

It is moſt true: Such as in holy humility have thought both of it and of themſelves as they ought, have ſo acknowledged. But theſe Heretikes called Tritheitæ, and others, boaſted of the eaſineſſe of it, and of their perfect underſtanding of all things belonging to it; when that godly Father Iuſtine Martyr wrote thus: Vnitas in Trinitate intelligitur, & Trinitas in unitate noſcitur, id vero quomodo ſit, nec alios ſcrutari velim, nec ipſe mihi poſſum ſatisfacere: An Unity in Trinity is underſtood, and a Trinity in Unity is knowne, but how that is, neither would I have other ſearch (he meaneth curiouſly) neither can I ſatisfie my ſelfe. Of the ſame minde were the other Fathers, when they laboured by things in nature ſomewhat to lighten the point unto us: as Baſil by the Rainbow, the ſubſtance whereof is but one, a dewiſh cloud, and yet many colours in it; which divers and diſtinct colours doe not make divers Rainbowes: no more (ſaith hee) doth a diſtinction of Perſons make a plurality of gods; but as all theſe colours are but one Rainbow, ſo all three Perſons are but one God. Saint Auguſtine by the minde, wherein are Memory, Underſtanding, and Will, three diſtinct faculties, yet but one Minde. And in another place, the minde begetteth knowledge, and from them both proceedeth love: yet omnia hæc unum ſunt, quia in mente ſubſtantialiter exiſtunt, & cum perfecta ſunt æqualia ſunt; All theſe are one, becauſe they are ſubſtantially in the minde, and when they are perfect, they are equall. Others by the Sun, in which, being but one, theſe three are diſtinct, Light, Brightneſſe, and Heat ariſing from both. The body and the ſoule of man are diſtinct, yet make but one man. Wherfore in humility alſo let us acknowledge our weakneſſe, and what fully we cannot apprehend, let us ſay credo, I beleeve; I beleeve I ſay, becauſe in the word I am ſo taught that it is, albeit the manner be above my reach: and let us abhorre ever thoſe heretikes, Noëtus, Sabellius, Praxeas, Hermogenes, and the reſt, who taught that the word Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, were but attributes, as Strong, Juſt, Mercifull, and the like: Which wicked aſſertion, the Priſcillianiſts went about to revive in Spaine about the yeare 380.

Aug. de Trin. lib.10.cap.11.

De Trin.lib.9. cap.4.

There is alſo ſome differenec betwixt the perſons, which I pray you expreſſe.

They differ thus; That the Father is of none, the Son is of the Father, by an incomprehenſible and unſpeakable generation, Iohn 1,14. *Pſal.*2.7. The holy Ghoſt is of the Father and of the Son, by an incomprehenſible and an unſpeakable proceeding, Iohn 15.25. *Rom.*8 9.

Pro.8.24,25.

What further matter may we learne out of this word Father?

Beſide this excellent doctrine of diſtinction of perſons, this word proveth not onely the begetting of Chriſt, who is the naturall Son of God his Father, but that free adoption of us in Chriſt, and ſpirituall begetting of us by his holy Spirit, to be heires of his kingdome and everlaſting life, in regard whereof we call him Father: and which is ſo ſweet, as nothing may be ſweeter. For when once by faith I conceive and know him my Father, then reaſon I thus to my comfort; A Father loveth his childe, a Father defendeth his childe, a Father provideth for his childe, a Father correcteth his childe, but ever in love, and for his good; and therefore what need I feare, he is my Father, I am his childe, I cannot, I ſhall not, he will not forſake me, nor ſuffer me finally to fall from him ever. Then thinke I with a leaping heart for joy of the words of Chriſt, That the world may know how thou haſt loved them, even as thou haſt loved me; me, me, and marke it well, even as thou haſt loved me. Then ſay I to my ſelfe, O Saviour and deare Lord, art thou aſcended from this wicked world to thy Fathers Kingdome? art thou gone before? well, have after with comfort when thy bleſſed pleaſure ſhall bee, for thou art not aſcended to thy Father only, but to thy father and my father, to thy God and my God; for ſo (ſweet Love) haſt thou taught and told mee, bleſſed, bleſſed be thy Majeſty for it. This is the ſweetneſſe of this word Father, whereunto adjoyne the true remembrance of that place

This love brought God from heaven, and bringsman to heaven. Vnde Anſelmus nec pedes meos volo niſi te quærant, nec manus niſi tibi ſerviant, nec genua niſi te adorent, nec cor niſi te amet. Prior, tantus, tantillos, tales, tantum. Iohn 17.23. Mal.1.6.

in

in the Prophet: A Sonne honoureth his Father, and a Servant his Master: if then I be a Father, where is my honor? and if I be a Master, where is my feare? and all shall be well: for as the word Father yeeldeth us comfort, so teacheth it duty also you see: which being with care ever performed, as hee shall enable, our comfort is no presumption, but what hee commandeth, and alloweth.

Your next word in order is, Omnipotentem, Almighty.

It is so; and therefore of that now in order: where it must be remembred, that there be some attributes of God which have no relation at all to the creatures, but onely to God himselfe, shewing what manner of God he is in himselfe, and in his nature, as his Eternity, Immensity, &c. And there are some againe, which without relation to the creatures cannot be understood, as his Mercy, his Justice, and this his Omnipotency; especially, and I say especially, because if you marke it, ever it hath a speciall place. As when it was said, The Lord, the Lord, &c. presently commeth in, strong and mighty. In this Creed, next after God and Father, followeth Almighty, and in many other places. Exod.34.

But why is he called Almighty?

Some have thought that he is therefore called Almighty, because hee can doe all things, all things I say, and he that saith all, excepteth nothing. Why, can he sinne? yea, (say they) he can, but he will not: but this is both a foolish and a wicked opinion: for see the Apostles words; If we beleeve not, yet abideth he faithfull; he cannot deny himselfe. The Apostle doth not say, he will not, but, he cannot; why? because he is faithfull: how faithfull? surely by nature, & not by will, and what is of nature, abideth whilest the nature it selfe abideth. Againe, to sinne is not power, but weakenesse, as we see in our selves: or if you will have it a power, it is a passive power, such as falleth not into God: As Augustine noteth when he saith, Deus dicitur omnipotens faciendo quod vult, non patiendo quod non vult: God is said to be Almighty, by doing what he will, not by suffering what he will not. Others therefore have thought, that hee is called Almighty, because he can doe whatsoever he will doe, restraining his power, as not able to go further than he will, and alledging those places, He hath done whatsoever he will both in heaven and earth. And againe, Our God is in heavē, he doth whatsoever he will. But what an Argument is this, He hath done whatsoever he would; therefore he could have done no more, whereas there is no exclusive particle in the Scriptures named, you see. This therefore opinion is also false, and so proved by expresse Scripture. For God is able, saith Christ, to raise up children to Abrahā of these stones, yet he would not. And, I can pray to my Father, and he will give me more than twelve Legions of Angels, yet hee would not doe it. To which S. Augustine agreed in his time, when he said; Consequens est, ut quod est, esse potuerit; non est autem consequens, ut quod esse potuerit, sit; quia enim Dominus Lazarum suscitavit, sine dubio potuit, quia vero Iudam non suscitavit, num dicendum est quod non potuit? Potuit ergo quod noluit, &c. It followeth well, that that which is might be; but it followes not, that that which might be is; for because God did raise Lazarus, therefore without doubt hee could; but because he raised not Iudas, shall we say he could not? therefore hee could what hee would not. Damascene againe most plainly: Quicquid vult potest, non tamen quicquid potest, vult; potest enim mundo exitiū afferre, at non vult: Whatsoever he will, that he can; but not again, whatsoever he can, that he will; for he can bring destruction to the world, yet he will not. That therfore we may come to set downe some truth in the matter, wee must understand that there are two sorts of impossible things. The one of those which implying a contradiction, and having, as they speake in schooles, the prædicatum flat repugnant with the subjectum, are in their owne nature simply impossible, as to be created, and not created, to bee an elect, and not an elect, &c. For two contradictions can never bee both true. The other of those which imply a passive power not incident to God, and note, not power, but weakenesse, howsoever the phrase seemeth; as to sinne, to die, to be made to lie, &c. for these things though in nature they bee possible, and of creatures are done; yet to Gods nature they are impossible, and of the Creator cannot be done. And therefore Bishop Bonner spake very grossely of God, when hee said to Master Philpot; I tell thee, that God by his omnipotency may make himselfe to be this Carpet, if hee will. Which two sorts being excepted, wee may affirme, that there is nothing so impossible to men and nature, but with God it is possible. And therefore we now say and beleeve, that hee is called Almighty; not because he can doe all things, of what nature soever they bee (for you see many things he cannot doe;) neither yet, because he can doe as much as hee will, for his power reacheth further than his will; but because he is able to doe whatsoever, neither in its owne nature, nor to his nature is impossible, whether hee will it or no, and likewise to let and hinder. And this is that which is implyed in the Angels speech: With God nothing is impossible. And in our Saviours words; All things are possible with God: Which omnipotent power maketh a true distinction betwixt the true God, and all false and fained gods. This omnipotency also, though here ascribed to the Father, yet beleeve we as well to bee in the Sonne, and in the holy Ghost, because it is an attribute of the Deity; and the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the holy Ghost, is all one; the glory equall, the Majesty coeternall. And the Creed of Athanasius expresseth

2 Tim.2.13. Aug. de Civit. lib.5.10. Psa.133.3. Psal.115.2. Mat.3. Mat.26.53. Aug. de natura & gra. cap.7. Tom.3. Damas. orthodox fidei. lib.1. in fine. In the sixt examination of M. Philpot. Esa.9.9,10. Psa.33.9,10. Luke 1.37. Mat.19.26.

preſſeth it plainly: The Father is Almighty, the Sonne Almighty, and the Holy Ghoſt Almighty, and yet they are not three Almighties, but one Almighty.

I pray you now ſhew ſome uſe of this holy doctrine.

It hath moſt excellent uſes to Gods beleeving Children, if you marke them. As firſt to confirme and increaſe our faith in all his ſweet and comfortable promiſes: for ſee how I reaſon; Doe I beleeve my God to be Almighty? yea, and doe I indeed? Why then he is able to doe what he will, and hee will what he hath promiſed, and hee hath promiſed, that whenſoever a ſinner repenteth, he will forgive: therefore all the Devils in Hell cannot hinder him. Hee hath promiſed to ſave my ſoule, therefore he can doe it, and all my ſinnes cannot deſtroy my ſoule, if I hate them and leave them. He hath promiſed, that if I ſeeke firſt his Kingdome, and the righteouſneſſe thereof, he will doe as much for me as hee doth for the Lillies of the field, and for the young Ravens that call upon him: nay, much more, becauſe I am a more excellent creature than they; therefore if all the world would conſpire againſt me to keepe me downe, and make me poore, I ſhall not yet want for all that; but heaven and earth, men and Angels, ſhall doe for mee what he will, for he is Almighty. By this meanes Abraham had confirmed his faith in the promiſe, againſt his age and decayed body to beget a childe: and ſo may wee oppoſe it to all infirmities of memory, of wit, of want of learning, and ſuch like, that often are urged by our ſubtill adverſary, to diſcourage us from reading, from hearing, from writing, and many good duties. For what infirmity is above his Almighty power to helpe and ſtrengthen us?

Secondly, it is of great uſe to make us avoid ſinne, ſtill to remember that the Lord is Almighty: For what plagues can he powre upon us being ſo? Surely, ſaith the Pſalme, he can raine upon us fire and brimſtone, ſtorme and tempeſt, &c. He is able to make the world ring of his judgements, by laying them upon every Book-ſellers ſtall to bee ſeene and reade. He is able to conſume us with the breath of his mouth, and who can abide if he be angry?

Thirdly, it availeth greatly to make us pray as we ſhould doe, without wavering and doubting: for if he can doe what he will, and will what he hath promiſed; then aske without ſtaggering, for he is able: If you aske health, he is able; if you aske wiſedome, hee is able; if you aske his feare for your ſelfe and yours, he is able; if you aske neceſſaries, he is able; and what is above his power that you ought to aske? He can give the husbands heart to be ever knit as it ought, to his wife, and hers againe to him, if it bee deſired, &c. Pray therefore with aſſurance, beleeving his omnipotency.

Dan. 3. 17. Fourthly, it comforteth effectually in trouble and adverſity, in perill and danger, aſſuring our trembling thoughts of helpe if it be good, even in the middeſt of death, for hee is able: ſo did it David, as in many of his Pſalmes you ſee, and by name in that: Though I ſhould walke through the valley of death, yet will I not feare, becauſe thou art with me: thou I ſay, my Almighty God ever able, ever able to ſave whom thou wilt from all dangers of man and devill.

2 Cor. 9. Fiftly, it helpeth to move us to charity and loving compaſſion, and therefore ſaith the Apoſtle, Give not grudgingly or ſparingly, but chearfully, for God is able to make all grace abound.

Sixtly, it kindleth in our hearts a feeling thought of God, his free love and mercy, in electing us to life before the world was made: for was hee not able to have rejected us and caſt us away if he had would? was not the clay before him to doe withall as hee pleaſed, honour or diſhonor, were they not in his hand? ſurely he might have made us beaſts if he had would, and not men, Toades, Toades, and not heyres of glory with his Sonne Chriſt. Therefore I ſay this omnipotent power of his, well conſidered, cryeth unto us, be thankfull, be thankfull, &c.

Rom. 11. Seventhly, it ſtayeth us againe from giving raſh and haſty ſentence upon any whom wee ſee ill, and as yet badly diſpoſed, for God is able to touch him, and to call him when he will; yea, able to graft in, and able to breake off at his will.

8. Finally, in all things it comforteth and daſheth out thoſe fainting, fearing fantaſies that we are ſubject unto: for he can turne the hearts of Kings and Princes to me if hee will, hee can aſſwage the malice of my foes, he can bleſſe my labours and honeſt painfull travels any way, and no harme can happen to me by man, by devill, more than he will ſuffer and permit, for hee is Almighty: no ſtronger than he is able to enter upon him and ſpoile his houſe, no, my ſheepe, ſaith our God and Saviour, no man taketh out of my hands. This ſweet and comfortable doctrine of Gods omnipotency, would not be abuſed to preſumption and boldneſſe, to error and ignorance, and to the wronging of God himſelfe, as Popiſh doctrine doth in the matter of the Sacrament, but to the ends named with all feare and reverence, and with all love and thankfulneſſe.

So the Lord grant we may: And now if it pleaſe you, proceed in the next word; Creator of heaven and earth.

Of the Creation.

THis doctrine of the Creation of the world, and all things in it, is a matter wherin many men have grievouſly erred, yet is it a point of our faith, from which we may not be drawne for any any errors of men, but muſt conſtantly hold it, and learning daily more and more to underſtand, ſtill more and more bee thankfull to God for it. It is alſo a comfortable point to a Chriſtian conſcience as ſhall appeare: but having ſpoken of it upon the firſt Chapter of Geneſis, I will paſſe over what there is noted, to wit, of the perſons creating, Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghoſt, and not the Father onely: of the time when, the manner how, the end wherefore, and ſuch like points, referring you to thoſe notes.

I pray you then ſhew why this worke of Creation is here attributed to the Father onely ſince all the Trinity Created.

It is, aut ratione ordinis, aut miniſterii, aut qualiſcunq; differentiæ cauſa, either by reaſon of order, or miniſtery, or for ſome kinde of difference. As the Father being in order the firſt perſon, and this is the firſt worke, therefore it is attributed to him, as redemption being the ſecond, to Chriſt, and ſanctification being the third, to the holy Ghoſt.

And were ſome ſo grievouſly deceived, as you ſay, in this matter of the Creation?

It would be too long, and to little profit, to ſhew all the errors of mans braine in this point, yet touch them we may, to the end to ſtirre up our hearts to be thankfull to God for his further light moſt graciouſly vouchſafed unto our ſelves. The chiefe enemy therefore of this Article was Valentinus, out of whoſe Schoole came Baſilides, Saturninus, Cerdon, Marcion, the Manichees, and others; all which not only with corrupt and vile ſophiſtications, but with monſtrous and moſt manifeſt blaſphemous dotages corrupted the doctrine of Creation, revealed in Gods holy Word. The records whereof were they not read in Irenæus, Tertullian, and Epiphanius, it would hardly bee beleeved, that imediately after the Apoſtles times, ſuch not onely differing, but altogether monſtrous opinions, ſhould be ſpred in the Church. Surely ſo monſtrous, that when wee read them, wee cannot imagine almoſt what they would ſay. This Valentinus was an excellent Platoniſt, and with the mudd of Philoſophy ſo troubled the pure fountaine of Iſrael, that very common ſenſe abhorreth it: happely his intent at the firſt was by this meanes to make the Scriptures, or the Doctrine of the Church, which for plainneſſe and ſimplicity was deſpiſed, more acceptable to Philoſophicall wits: but it was not the way that God liked, and therefore turned to give Satan ſtrength againſt mens ſoules, not to credit that, which being from God, hath credit in it ſelfe, more than any man can give it. It is profitable to remember alſo what Nicephorus writeth of the three wayes which Satan in the beginning had to hinder the courſe of the Goſpell by; Firſt, ſaith hee, by theſe monſtrous and ſenſeleſſe opinions he did it, making the better ſort to ſuſpect that doctrine, that was thus groſſely polluted with abſurd aſſertions. Secondly, he drew theſe heretiques, Valentinus and his ſchoole to moſt foule and filthy luſts, and ſo made all men of honeſt diſpoſition, afraid of Chriſtian Religion, the profeſſors whereof and defenders, as they would ſeeme, were ſo vile and beaſtly. Thirdly, he raiſed up Simon, Marke, and others, and inſtructed them ſo in Magicke, that by their devilliſh actions, the credit of holy miracles, adjoyned to the Goſpell to give teſtimony to the truth of it, were ſuſpected and greatly impaired: and ſo daily more and more hurt both this matter of the Creation, and many other points of holy truth. If any man deſire to ſee the opinions and aſſertions themſelves, I thinke it better that they make recourſe to the Fathers before named, and others, than here to ſet them downe for Novices yet not inſtructed to reade and ſee. That one particular held by Marcion, Cerdon, the Manichees, &c. of all things not to bee created of one God, but good things of God, and ill things of ſome other: compare it with Eſay 45. 5. Iohn 1. 3. &c. remember that ancient diſtinction, even as ancient as Tertul. of malum culpæ, and malum pœnæ: his words be theſe: Separatis malis culpæ & malis pœnæ, malorum culpæ Diabolũ, malorum pœnæ Deum creatorem & autorem, definimus: There is an evill of ſinne, and an evill of puniſhment, which being diſtinguiſhed one from another, wee affirme God to bee the Creator and author of the evill of puniſhment, and the Devill to be the author of the evill of ſinne. Now the evill of puniſhment is of two ſorts: ſometimes there is a hurtfull matter, as venome, a Scorpion or the like, where the matter is created of God, and is a good thing to ſome uſes: but now after the fall of man, becauſe this weake nature of curs may bee many wayes hurt, theſe hurting things are counted evill, reade Wiſedome 1. 14. and Saint Auguſtine de moribus Manicheorum, lib. 2. cap. 8. Other evils of puniſhments there are, as death, diſeaſes, calamities, which deſtroy nature, and are not things made of God in the beginning. Wiſedome 1. 10, 13. God hath not made death, neither hath he pleaſure in the deſtruction of the living. By one man came ſinne, and by ſinne death, Rom. 5. 12. yet God for juſtice is ſaid to will and allow this deſtruction, becauſe he is called, and is a conſuming fire.

Vindicibus Flammis ſibi qui contraria delet: ipſeq; juſtitiæ regula ſola manet.

This deſtruction the Scripture plainly teacheth, 1 Corinth. 15. 21. Wiſd. 1. 13. Eſa. 45. 7. Amos 3. 6. Eccleſiaſt. 11. 14. Amos 4. Eſa. 28. 21. How much better than theſe madde men, was Ariſtotle, that could both thinke and write, that if men were borne under the earth, and there kept till they had diſcretion, not ſuffered to ſee any thing, and ſhould thence ſuddenly come into this world, and ſee all this glorious worke of Gods creation, profecto & eſſe Deos & hæc

Tertul lib. 2. contra Marcion. cap. 14.

Malum pœnæ. Malum etſi à Deo permiſſum & ordinatum à ſuit, ab eo tamen non eſt creatum, nec factum, neq; etiam fieri poteſt, cum privatio duntaxat ſit.

bee tanta opera Deorum eſſe crederent. Surely they would both beleeve that there was a God, and theſe ſo great workes to be his, and none but his.

Will you adde ſomething of the uſe of this knowledge of the Creation?

Verus Deus Chriſtianorum à falſis diis gentium diſtinguitur: hi enim aut Dæmones immundi, aut homines mortui, aut muta elementa & animalia, aut conficta ſtatuæ, &c, erant: at Deus Chriſtianorum res tam vivas, tam efficacia omnia prorſus creavit. Io. Heſſels.

With a very good will: and therefore know you that it is a moſt excellent and profitable knowledge, leading us firſt to the true worſhip of God, as error in the knowledge of the Creatures breedeth error in the knowledge of the Creator, and draweth the minde from God, and his true worſhip: for how I pray you came it to paſſe, that men adored and worſhipped divers creatures both celeſtiall and terreſtriall? certainly it proceeded not onely from the ignorance of God, the firſt cauſe of all things, but even from the ignorance alſo of naturall things: for could they have worſhipped either Sunne or Moon, or fire, or any creature, if they had knowne the creation of them by a ſuperiour cauſe; and that that which is made of another cannot bee God: but what ſaith the Book of Wiſdome? Surely all men are vain by nature, and are ignorant of God, and could not know him by the good things that are ſeen, neither conſider by the works the workmaſter: But they thought the fire or the winde, or the ſwift ayre, or the courſe of the ſtars, or the raging waters, or the lights of heaven to be governours of the world, and God, &c. Reade the whole Chapter, and the next to it. And how could they attribute to Creatures what belongeth to the Creator, if they truly did know the difference betwixt the Creator and his Creatures? Moſt profitable therefore is this knowledge, ſhewing us the divinity and power of God in creating, his wiſdome in governing, his juſtice in puniſhing, his mercy in reſtoring, his goodneſſe in glorifying, &c. where remember what S. Bernard ſaith; Opus recreationis & refectionis majus eſſe quam opus creationis & factionis. The worke of reſtoring fallen man, and as it were a new creating him, is greater than the firſt making of him. What S. Auguſt. alſo ſaith: Intelligat qui poteſt, judicet qui poteſt, an majus ſit juſtos creare, quam impios juſtificare? certe etſi æqualis eſt utrâq; potentia, hæc tamen majoris eſt miſericordiæ: Let him underſtand that can, and let him judge that can, whether it be a greater thing to create juſt men, or to juſtifie wicked men? ſurely, if we grant both powers to be equall, yet is the later greater mercy.

In Iohn.

O that monſtrous births could amend adulterous Parents.

Secondly, this doctrine of creation may make us, whatſoever we ſee, either of Creatures, or qualities in Creatures, to remember that God hath made them, and for ſome good and profitable end, and not unthankfully or careleſly to paſſe them over, as not worthy our conſideration, when it is the worke of our God. Not to reproach men with their naturall imperfections, but with aſcending thoughts to glorifie the granter of more mercy to our ſelves.

Thirdly, it armeth us ſtrongly againſt the feare of evill ſpirits, wicked men, or any other creature whatſoever, the Creator being ever above his work, and as able to deſtroy, as he was to make. He could rule Saul, he could rule Eſau, he could drowne Pharaoh and all his hoaſt, yea, he chaineth up Satan himſelfe, and all hell, within the limits of his good pleaſure. And as to deſtruction he is able to overturne them, ſo to be inſtruments of good alſo to his Children hee can guide them, which is a ſingular comfort. The Ægyptians favour the Iſraelites, the keeper of the priſon Ioſeph, &c. you know the Scriptures. Adde your owne experience to them, and all bee thankfull and chearfull.

Eſa. 49. 15. Zach 2. 9. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

Fourthly, how doth this doctrine fill my heart with aſſurance moſt ſweet, that God will never forſake me, nor leave me deſtitute of any good thing, when it ſheweth what things he created for me, before ever he formed my ſelfe? Is it poſſible that God, who before I was borne had care of me, that I ſhould not onely to uſe, but alſo to pleaſure, have ſo many things provided for me, goodly creatures in earth, glorious Angels in heaven to pitch their Tents about me, &c. is it poſſible I ſay, that this God ſhould now forſake me when I am borne, if I truſt in him, and ſerve him? No, no, it cannot be; and therefore be not faithleſſe, but faithfull, O my ſoule. Can a woman forget her childe, ſaith thy God, even the child of her body can ſhe forget? How hardly, if at all, yet if ſhe can, I cannot, nor will ever forget thee: he that toucheth thee, toucheth the apple of mine eye: therefore caſt thy care, I ſay againe, my troubled ſoule upon him, for he careth for thee, &c.

This may content concerning the uſe of this moſt comfortable point, and therefore now if it pleaſe you to proceed and take things in ſeverall that were created, you may.

Aug. ſupra Gen. ad Literam Ambroſ. de Sacra. cœna: cap. 9. Pſa. 104. 4. Pſa. 148. 2, 5. Col. 1. 16. Heb. 1. 7. In Orat. de Nata. Domini. Gen. 1.

I will follow that diviſion in the Nicene Creed, and in S. Ambroſe, of things viſible and inviſible, and will firſt touch the inviſible; namely, the creation of Angels, whereof the Scripture hath given us knowledge in the Pſalmes, Praiſe him all ye Angels of his, for he ſpake the word, and they were created. Then to the Coloſſians; By him were all things created which are in heaven, and which are in earth, things viſible and inviſible, whether they bee Thrones or Dominions, or Principalities or Powers, all things were created by him & for him: But when they were created, that is, in which of the dayes worke, the Scripture expreſly telleth not. Nazianzene thinketh that they were firſt made, then the world, and laſtly man: the ſame doth Hierome and Damaſcene hold, but they gueſſe onely ſo, without any certaine ground, and their gueſſe of others is diſliked, becauſe it may ſtrengthen that error, that the Angels being made, made the world. S. Auguſtine thinketh the creation of them is compriſed under the name of light, the firſt day: others under the name of heaven; others thinke they were made the ſecond day, and by and by fell ſome of them, becauſe cauſe it is not added there as in other dayes, Vidit Deus quod eſſet bonum, God ſaw that it was good, but as I ſaid, the Scripture expreſſeth not the day and time: and therefore S. Ambroſe his counſell is good, Libenter neſciamus, quod ſcire nec debemus nec poſſumus: Let us willingly bee ignorant of that which neither we ought to know, nor can know. And let it ſuffice us to underſtand thus much.

Firſt, that Angels were not of themſelves, neither begotten of the ſubſtance of God, but created.

Secondly, that from eternity they were not, for that is proper onely to him, by whom all things were made. Iohn 1.1. and 33. but that they were before man, it may be gathered out of theſe words in Iob; When the ſtars of the morning praiſed me together, and all the Children of God rejoyced, where waſt thou? v.4. &c. and it is manifeſt by this, that the Devill by the Serpent, deceived man as ſoone as he was created. How God created them, the Scriptures alſo teach, even by his Word, as he did all things elſe, Pſ. 149. In what eſtate? Surely in goodneſſe and integrity moſt great. Iohn 8.44. and Iude verſ. 6. from which excellent eſtate ſome of them fell, as hath bin ſaid, by ſinne, 2 Pet. 2. But what this ſinne was in particular is not expreſſed, in generall the Scripture accuſeth their pride, not expreſſing the manner, 1 Tim. 3.6. All which overthrow that ſenſeleſſe folly of the Saduces, that there are no Angels, Act. 23. From this time then of their fall, hath the diviſion ſtood of good and evill Angels.

Iob. 3,8.

See Aug de civ. lib 11. cap. 9. & 32.

This diviſion if you pleaſe to follow, you may begin with the good Angels.

Saint Auguſtine interpreting the 104. Pſalme, hath theſe words of Angels. Quæris nomen naturæ, ſpiritus eſt; quæris officium, Angelus eſt. Doeſt thou aske a name containing the nature of an Angell? then I anſwer thee, hee is a Spirit; but doeſt thou aske his office? then I anſwer, hee is an Angell. So by nature they are Spirits, and by office Angels; that is, Meſſengers, as a man is a name of nature, a Souldier a name of office. By theſe ſpirituall Meſſengers and Miniſters, the Lord executeth his pleaſure; as mercy to his Servants, Dan. 3.6. wrath and judgement to his enemies, 2 King. 19. an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand ſlaine by the Angell, Geneſ. 19. Act. 12. 23. hee chaſtiſeth alſo the godly by themſelves, 2 Sam. 24.15, 16.

Heb. 1.7 & ult. Eph. 6.11. Heb. 1 ult. 1 King. 22.20, &c. Gen. 19.13. Iudg. 13 3,4, 5. Dan. 16, & 9.21 Luk 1.13, &c.

What may we thinke concerning their knowledge?

Of their knowledge the Scripture maketh three degrees; The firſt is, that wherewith they were created, which was moſt excellent. Ioh. 8. They did not abide in the truth, & greater knowledge than the truth is not. The ſecond is by Revelation, as it pleaſeth God to impart unto them by uſing their Miniſtery. Such was that of Gabriel, revealing the Myſterie of the weekes, Dan. 6. and that to Elizabeth, and the Virgin Mary, Luke 1. The third is by experience, of which that may be underſtood, Eph. 3.10. To the intent that now unto Principalities and Powers, in heavenly places, might be knowne by the Church, the manifold wiſdome of God, and divers other places.

And what ſoberly may we thinke alſo of their orders?

I like well his judgement, that ſaid, there muſt needs be granted a ſeemly order ever to bee amongſt Angels. Sed perpetuos ordines diſtinguere, quorum ratione alii ſemper præemineant, alii ſemper ſubjaceant, temerariorum potius eſt, quam ſcripturas ſequentium: but to diſtinguiſh perpetuall orders, by which ſome muſt ever be above, and ſome ever below: it is rather the part of raſh heads, than of men that follow the Scriptures.

What thinke you then of thoſe words to the Coloſ. 1. 16. whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers?

Both by that place and others; as, 1 Cor. 15.24. Epheſ. 1.21. Epheſ 3.10. and Epheſ. 6.12. you may ſee and note the divers and ſeverall names and appellations, which the Scripture giveth to Angels: by miſtaking whereof men have made divers Orders and Hierarchies; Seraphin, Cherubin and Thrones in the firſt Hierarchy: Rule, Authority, and Power in the ſecond: Principalities, Arch angels, and Angels in the third: and deviſing many things of the difference and prerogative of thoſe three. But let S. Auguſtines judgement be your concluſion, who of theſe matters ſaid thus: Quid inter ſe diſtent quatuor illa vocabula, quib⁹ univerſam illã ſocietatẽ videtur Apoſt: eſſe complexus, dicant qui poſſunt, ſi tamen probare poſſunt quod dicunt, ego iſta me ignorare confiteor. What difference is betwixt thoſe foure words, wherein the Apoſtle ſeemeth to have comprehended all that ſociety, let them tell that can, ſo they will prove what they ſay, for ſurely I for my part muſt confeſſe, I am ignorant and know not. Againe, in another place: Eſſe Sedes, Dominationes, &c. firmiſſime credo, & differre inter ſe aliquid, indubitata fide teneo, ſed quo me contemnas, quẽ magnũ putas eſſe doctorem, quænam iſta ſint, & quid inter ſe differant neſcio, nec ea ſane ignorantia periclitari me puto. That there be as the Apoſtle ſaith, Thrones and Dominations, &c. moſt firmely I beleeve, & that there is ſome kinde of difference I alſo make no queſtion, but that thou maiſt ſet leſſe by me, whom thou takeſt to be a great Doctor, what they be, and what manner of difference this is, indeed I know not, neither doe I thinke that this ignorance is any whit dangerous to me. Againe, Eſſe inter Angelos aliquam differentiam non eſt dubium, ideo enim ſcriptura differentes

Dominationes. Poteſtates. Virtutes.

Aug. in Enchyrid. ad Laurentium, cap. 58.

Contra Priſcill. cap. 11.

differentes posſit appellationes, ſed quæ & qualis ſit illa differentia, ille ſolus novit, qui ita creavit, & nos tunc videbimus quando erimus ἰσάγγελοι: That ther is ſome difference amongſt the Angels there is no doubt to be made, for therefore doth the Scripture give them differing names and titles, but what, and of what ſort that difference is, he onely knoweth who hath ſo created them, and wee then ſhall ſee, when we ſhall be like the Angels. The later writers doe not ground any ſet orders amongſt them upon theſe words, but ſay, that they are called Dominations and Powers, becauſe they are miniſtri divinæ potentiæ & Dominationis; Miniſters of Divine Power and Rule. And for the words Cherubin & Seraphin, they force no ſuch matter: But the firſt ſignifieth volantes, flying; and the ſecond, ardentes, burning: they ſhew the nature, agility, and quickneſſe in their office and ſervice appointed them of God, not any ſet orders. The name alſo of Arch-angel ſignifieth a deputation to ſome high and difficult worke, as he that is an Embaſſadour, by reaſon of his office for the time is above other men, but his ſervice ended, returneth to his place againe.

Maſſorat. in loc.

Will you ſay any thing touching the number of theſe good Angels?

The number of them is moſt great, as you may ſee in many places of the Scripture, but certainly what the number of them is, no where is told. Daniel ſaith, thouſand thouſands miniſtred unto him, and ten thouſand thouſands ſtood before him. Iohn ſaith, then I beheld, & I heard the voyce of many Angels round about the Throne. Our Saviour himſelfe tels us of moe than twelve Legions that he could have called for, if he had pleaſed. And the Author to the Hebrewes ſaith, Ye are come to Mount Sion, to the Citie of the living God, the celeſtiall Hieruſalem, and to the company of innumerable Angels: By all which you ſee the number great, but not defined.

Dan. 7. 10. Apoc. 5. 11. Mat. 25. 53. Heb. 12. 22.

Of that opinion that every man hath his good Angell and his bad, what I pray you may we hold?

That of the good Angel was Origens conception, and Hieroms upon Matth. 18. 10. with others: It was alſo Plato his opinion, and Empedocles in Plutarch, with divers moe, but it hath no more ground nor warrant in the Word of God, but is rather contrary to the ſame. For if you marke the Scripture, you ſhall ſee ſometimes many allotted to one man, and ſometimes but one allotted to many men. An example of the firſt: Elizeus, 2 Kings 2. ver. 17. where the mountaine was full of horſes, and Charriots of fire, that is, of innumerable Angels to defend him againſt his enemies. Of the ſecond, Dan. 10. 13, &c. In the Pſalme it is ſaid, He ſhall give his Angels charge over thee, not any one particular Angel. And in the Goſpell, their Angels, not thy Angel. As for that in the Acts, it is his Angel, the meaning is taken by the learned to bee, it is the Lords Angel given or ſent to defend him, but not a peculiar Angel ever. And you may conferre with it that ſaying of the Pſalme: The Angel of the Lord pitched round about. The Angel, I ſay, of the Lord appointed for the time, or many Angels, but not any certaine one for all times during his life. Touching the evill Angel, that every man and woman hath a particular one, it was Gregorie his opinion, Biſhop of Rome. But the Scripture teacheth, that ſometimes a man is vexed of one, as Saul was, Iob, and Iudas, and ſometimes of moe, as he that had a Legion in the Goſpell, and Mary Magdalen with ſeven Devils.

Pſa. 91. 11. Mat. 18. 10. Act. 12. 15. This ſheweth rather what the opinion of the people was, than what the truth is. The Lord hath ſent his Angel, Ergo, it was not an Angel before attending on him. Pſal. 34. 7. Read Marlor. in Iohn 20. 12. Iudg. 13. 6. Mat. 16. 5. Apoc. 15. 6. Luke 24. 4. Act. 1. 10. Eſay 6. Ezek. 1. Luke 1. 22. Acts 10. 17.

Touching the bodies they aſſume upon occaſions, what teach you?

That they can aſſume bodies to be ſeene, felt, heard, and to eate, we know by many experiences, but buſily to diſpute of them ſhall bee very unprofitable curioſity. The Scriptures tell us that when good Angels have beene ſent to declare matters to men, they have appeared in the ſhape of men, and young men: as Gen. 18. 2. and 4. 19. 2. &c. Heb. 13 2. men I ſay of moſt ſingular beauty, and ſometimes with a heavenly kinde of gliſtering and ſhining brightneſſe. Sometimes they have appeared in bodies of fire, as in the viſion of Eſay, Ezekiel, &c. Sometimes they have appeared to men waking, and ſeeing: ſometimes ſleeping, ſometimes walking, but yet raviſhed with an exſtaſis, as Apoc. 1. 10, and many other places.

Iudg. 13. 16. Apoc. 19 10. Chap. 22. 9. 2 Kin. 6. 17, 18.

Becauſe you ſo often admoniſh to be ſober in this matter, I will aske no more of theſe good Angels, but pray you to ſhew now ſome uſe of this which you have ſaid.

Firſt, the creation of Angels teacheth us to think of them as of the creatures, and not to make gods of them, by praying unto them, as ſome doe; they are but ſervants, and ought not to have their Maſters honour given unto them: but if any man will ſo ſinne, let him remember how carefully even themſelves have ever refuſed ſuch ſervice done unto them with ſo great injury to the Lord their God that created them. In the Booke of Iudges, If thou wilt offer, offer to the Lord, ſaith the Angel. And in the Revelation, See thou doe it not, ſaith the Angel, for I am thy fellow ſervant, but worſhip thou God. Let him remember alſo the practice of the Prophet even in the preſence of Angels, and in his great perill and diſtreſſe; The whole mountaine was full of Angels, ſaith the Text, and yet the Prophet prayed unto the Lord. Wherupon ſoundly we may reaſon, that if in ſo great danger, and when the Angels were preſent, the godly Prophet would not pray to them, but to God, becauſe he knew God onely muſt be prayed unto, ſure when they were abſent, and he in no ſuch perill, he would not rob God of his honour, as many now a dayes doe, and will not be reformed.

Secondly, the fall of ſome of theſe Angels created, and created in innocency, as alſo of our ſelves, may moſt profitably remember us how weake wretches we are now become, when that integrity integrity is loſt, yet when we had it we could not ſtand, and what need we have of Gods ever mercifull and mighty hand to ſupport us, to ſtay and ſtrengthen us, and to hold us upright, conſtant, and abiding in the thing that is good. For if Angels fell, are we ſtrong? or if wee in that happy ſtate declined aſide, can we now corrupted and ſinfull truſt in our ſelves? O that we may feele, know, and with profit ever conſider that we cannot: and therefore pray early and late, earneſtly and heartily, carefully and continually, that the Lord would ſtrengthen us that wee may ſtand, and as the Prophet David ſaith, that he would knit our hearts unto him, that we may feare his Name: Knit, knit I ſay, for wee have need, Lord doe it, Lord doe it, for Jeſus Chriſt his ſake. Pſ.1.86.

Thirdly, the conſideration of the cauſe of their fall which was pride, may ſtrike and teach us with a true deteſtation of that ſinne if we be the Lords. For it threw them to hell, and ſhall it cary us to heaven? will not God ſpare his Angels, when they wax proud, and will he ſpare us? No, no, we may be ſure of his fearefull wrath if we take not heed. A good meanes to help us to take heed, is often to conſider how odious to men this foule ſin is, and what a lothing of it Gods bleſſed Spirit kindleth in their hearts, where he ruleth. For the firſt, we heare David proteſting in his Pſalm, that who ſo had a proud look and a high ſtomacke, he would not ſuffer him in his houſe. So hated he that in his houſe, which many love in themſelves. Solomon that wiſe Prince going about to reckon up ſix things which the Lord doth hate, beginneth with the haughty eyes as moſt deteſtable of all the reſt, and therefore deſerving to be ſet firſt. And in the 16. Chapter he in plaine words ſaith, all that are proud in heart are an abhomination to the Lord, and though hand joyne in hand he ſhall not be unpuniſhed. For the ſecond, we ſee and heare the moſt godly King and Prophet David, ſpeaking to his God; O my Lord, I am not high-minded, I have no proud lookes, I doe not exerciſe my ſelf in matters that are too high for me. Saint Iames ſaith, the Lord reſiſteth the proud, and giveth his grace to the lowly and meek. If it be good that I am proud of, I am unthankfull to the giver, and if it be evill, I am a foole to delight in that which ought to be hated. So be it good or be it naught, pride is naught I may be ſure, and to be avoided. The Fountaine of all floods is the Sea, and the fountaine of all good is the Lord, ſaith Saint Bernard, and therefore why art thou proud? It is a weakneſſe in my head, if drinke overturne me, it is more weakneſſe if a little doe it, and that but ſmall too. So is it weakneſſe in my heart if graces given to another end, puffe me up, and make me to ſwell with pride and vaine conceits in my ſelfe, as alſo with contempt of others better than my ſelfe: but if a few graces, and much meaner gifts than others have, doe this in me, O how great is my weakneſſe then! Thinke, thinke of it whileſt we have time, and weane our wanton hearts from flying theſe high pitches, before God and man begin to hate us as paſt recovery. We our ſelves give not our children clothes to have them proud of them, but to uſe them for the end they ought to ſerve to, and giveth God his graces to make us drunke with pride in them and for them? The beſt meate diſorderly uſed deſtroyeth the body, and ſweet graces abuſed to pride deſtroy the ſoule. Proud Senacherib is beaten downe. Proud Tyrus is ſharply ſcourged. Proud Nabuchodonoſar loſeth his Kingly Throne, and feedeth with beaſts. Proud Iezabel is eaten with Dogs. Proud Herod is eaten with Lice. Proud Pharaoh is drowned in the Sea: and ſhall it not move us? The lighter the ſtuffe is that you weigh, the higher it mounts: and the vainer the head is, of either man or woman, the prouder their lookes, words, and workes are towards all men. If bleſſed David begin to be proud, and to ſay tuſh, &c. Straight God turneth his hand, and bringeth him out of his dreame. If Miriam ſwell againſt her better, a preſent Leproſie is ſent to ſtoope her. Agar muſt be cooled if ſhe know not her Miſtreſſe, by Gods owne decree. And S. Paul in his pride is tumbled from his horſe, and made to know what humility is. The Tree firſt groweth downeward, and taketh roote before it riſe upward, and wax ſo high: and ſo, ſo muſt all children of truth if they ever riſe to their good, and not to their harme, lay a foundation in humili y, and grow downeward. Firſt, by low conceits of their own ability any way, which if they doe, the Lord, as he pleaſeth, is able to raiſe and keep up alſo when he hath raiſed, notwithſtanding any malice or envy whatſoever, that ſhall either burſt out, or lie hidden againſt his mercy beſtowed where himſelfe liked. A comfort more than ſweet, where there is cauſe to thinke of it. The Lord therefore make us humble and true deteſters of filthy pride. *Prov.*16.5. *Pſal.*131. Iam.4. *Serm.*13. in Cantic. Pſal.30.

Fourthly, the puniſhment of theſe Angels created, and falling from their firſt creation, aſſureth us, we ſhall never eſcape the deſert of ſin, if wee leave not the ſin. For thus reaſon Peter and Iude, we plainly ſee. They fell, and the Lord ſaith, They are reſerved in everlaſting chaines under darkneſſe to the Iudgement of the great day; therefore feare. 2 *Pet.*2. Iud.6.

Laſtly, their miniſtring may both feare us and comfort us; feare us, thus, that if the Lord have miniſters of his wrath in number ſo many, in agility and power ſuch as Angels be, whereof one ſlue three-ſcore and ten thouſand when God was angry for Davids numbring the people, and would have gone further had God not ſtayed him; and another ſlew foure-ſcore and five thouſand in the Hoſt of Senacherib in one night, &c. O how can wee hope or once thinke to eſcape his hand when he is angry? well may we ſee that no power or policy of any mortall creature can deliver us. Now he hath moe than twelve legions of them at his commandement, yea a thouſand thouſand: and ten thouſand thouſands, that is, infinite, infinite, to arme againſt us, one being able to deſtroy us all. What ſhould I ſay of Frogs, Flyes, Lice, and ſuch like; of Haile, Snow, Thunder, Lightning, Storme and Tempeſt, Fire and Water, and all the Creatures of God beſides, which alſo we know are ſtrong, if he appoint them to execute wrath and vengeance againſt us? Can then the ſinner that goeth on in his wickedneſſe, without repentance ever eſcape? O it is impoſſible we plainly ſee, and therefore let us feare betimes before it bee too late. For comfort againe it ſerveth thus; that if the Lord have ſuch watchmen to attend upon us, and to pitch their tents round about us, can we periſh? can tyrants have their will of us further than God pleaſeth? Is there any guard of wealth, wit, friend and allies like to this? if not, then remember upon what manner of perſons they only attend, and be inſtructed. They attend, ſaith the Pſalme, upon them that feare him, and it muſt move us if we love our ſelves: So doe you ſee in ſome part what uſe we may make of this doctrine of Angels, created and falling from their firſt eſtate, miniſtring and ſerving as God appointeth, to execute his wrath, or to ſhew his love to mankinde. More you may adde by your owne meditation daily, as God increaſeth knowledge and grace.

Heb.1.14. Pſal.34.6,7.

It ſhall ſuffice: and I will now deſire you a little to ſay of evill Angels more, whoſe fall you have touched in theſe uſes, and ſhewed the uſe alſo of that.

We know concerning their creation that they were good, created in innocency as others were, and to hold the contrary was the hereſie of the Manichees, and of the Priſcillianiſts, againſt whom Auguſtine writeth for it. Si quis dicat diabolum non fuiſſe prius Angelũ bonum, &c. If any man ſay that the devill was not firſt a good Angell, and that he had no maker of him, as Manicheus and Priſcillianus affirme, let him be accurſed. His nature is to hurt by all wayes and meanes he can, going about like a roaring Lion, and ſeeking whom he may devoure: but of himſelfe he can doe nothing, except God give him leave; as it is evident unto us in the example of Iob, whom hee could not touch till God gave licence, and then no further than hee was limited: and by the Heard of ſwine which he had no power neither to enter into till God ſaid, goe.

Aug de Gen. ad literam l.11.cap. 20,21,22,23. Idem de Civit. l.22.c.1,2,3.

Now if you aske why God permitted, anſwer may be made that hee doth it to the end his power over thoſe ſpirits might hereby be knowne, hee permitting and not permitting at his pleaſure. Secondly, that we might ever be prepared and inſtructed to reſiſt. Thirdly, that hereby we might be made better ſpiritually in ſoule, as all Gods children be after temptations, and outwardly alſo in things worldly, if God pleaſe, as Iob was, whoſe wealth after tryall was much increaſed more than it was before. Fourthly, that thus God might puniſh the wicked as juſtice requireth. And laſtly, that Satans malice and hatred towards us might bee better knowne than ever it would be, if this proviſion were not ſometimes to aſſoile us. See therefore and conſider with your ſelfe how great good Almighty God is able to draw unto his children out of Satans very malice againſt them, and feare not, but commit your ſelfe wholly to this mighty keeper your ſweet and gracious Father, leaving him to ſuffer and permit what he pleaſeth to be done unto you at all times, ſince he is able to give the iſſue with the temptation, and ſhall never lay more upon you than he will make you alſo able to beare, which is a comfort unſpeakable, and bleſſed be his name for it.

We know alſo touching theſe evill Angels or ſpirits that they can enter in and poſſeſſe men and women, but the manner how may rather be felt than expreſſed and laid downe. They can ſpeake alſo in creatures as appeareth in the Serpent that ſpake to Eve what himſelf underſtood not, as Saint Auguſtine ſaith, and by the foule ſpirit that ſpake to our Saviour Chriſt and told him his name was Legion. Orders amongſt them, it is thought by the learned, they have none, but thoſe words in this Chapter to the Epheſians, of Principalities, Powers, worldly Governors, Princes of the darkneſſe of this world, &c. are uſed rather to amplifie the power, ſtrength, and might of them to hurt and doe miſchiefe, than to declare any degrees amongſt them. Againe, every one of them tempteth unto any miſchiefe, and not one to this, and another to that, dividing (as it were) the matter amongſt themſelves, as it is to be ſeen in the temptation of Chriſt, and Iob, with others, where one and the ſame Spirit tempteth unto ſeverall evils. And as for the names we reade of, of the uncleane Spirit, the ſpirit of fornication, the ſpirit of errour, and ſuch like, they ſhew not divers offices in divers ſpirits, but divers effects in and by the one Spirit as God ſhall ſuffer. For the one Spirit may tempt me to error, and then be called the Spirit of error; to fornication, and then be called by that effect the ſpirit of fornication, &c. They can alſo aſſume unto themſelves bodies as we reade in the Scriptures and ſtories. Even into an Angell of light Satan is able to transforme himſelfe, and the Tripartite ſtory ſpeaketh of a devil that about foure hundred yeares after Chriſt went up and downe Crete, and perſwaded the Jewes that hee was Moſes come againe to carry them there hence to the land of Promiſe, which they beleeving were fearefully deſtroyed, many of them in the Rockes and waters.

Tentator.

2 Cor.11. Hiſt.trip.l.22. cap.9.

But whether I pray you can the ſpirits of the dead walke here in the earth or no?

Aſſuredly

Assuredly no: And for proofe, first consider the holy Scripture and word of God which saith of the dead, that they rest from their labours, and are blessed. Our Saviour said to the Theefe, This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise: meaning there to abide and tarry for ever, or else the comfort had been a little. Lazarus dying was caried into Abrahams bosome, that is, into happinesse and rest: Lord into thy hands I commend my spirit, saith Saint Steven, meaning with thee to rest and not to gad and walke abroad. And, all thy Saints are in thy hands, saith Moses plainly, agreeable to which is that in Wisdome: The soules of the righteous are in the hands of God, and no evill shall happen unto them; with many other places to like purpose, all plainly overthrowing this errour, that the soules of the dead can wander and walke in the earth. For if they be in hell, out of hell there is no escaping, the rich Glutton being not able to get out to walke and coole himselfe, as we learne and heare in the Gospell. And if they be in heaven, who should send them there-hence to wander on earth? not the devill, who beareth no such rule in heaven over Gods Saints. And not God, for he hath thousands of Angels to doe his will. Therefore assuredly none doth it. Next after Scripture, consider the judgement of ancient Fathers, & first of Saint Chrysostome, who at large speaketh of this matter. And searching the cause why in the Gospell it is said the spirits abode about the graves, saith, that in his time there were foolish conceits touching this thing, and that the devils kept about graves. First, to obscure the glory of the dead Martyrs, as though their soules after death had become devils. Secondly, to work errors other wayes, in mens hearts concerning the dead. But, saith he, if spirits separated from their bodies could walk about in earth, either would the rich Glutton himself have come to his brethren, or have intreated some other spirit to have come. Againe, if spirits did walk they must either do this of their owne authority, or by Gods: but of themselves they cannot, since we know the devils can doe nothing more than he will suffer them. And since we must needs grant, that if of themselves they could, sure they would be often with us, they being not now deprived of love, and become cruell. Which Saint Augustine thought a very true reason against this error. For surely, saith he, my deare mother Monica, who in her life time followed me over the Sea and land, would never thus long have been from me, if there had been any such walking of dead spirits as is talked of. By God his appointment neither can they doe it, seeing he forbids to take counsell of the dead, neither would, that any should be sent from the dead to the rich mans brethren, but Moses and the Prophets to serve them; it never being read in the Scripture that God used the dead to reveale and shew his truth unto men. Againe, these spirits that are said to walke have usually required things contrary to the word and condemned by the word; as Masses, Sacrifices, Pilgrimages and such like: therefore neither the soules of the godly are sent of God. This was Saint Augustines opinion, resolutely wishing all others so to be assured likewise. But you will say, saith Saint Chrysostome, that you have heard those spirits say, when they have been conjured and asked what they were, that they were the soules of such men and such women. Fye on it the lye, saith he, for it is a foule one. Et hæc quoq; oratio à fraude & deceptione Diabolica proficiscitur, non enim anima defuncti est quæ illa dicit, sed dæmon qui hæc ut audientes decipiat, confingit. And the very speech proceedeth from the fraud and deceit of the devill, which to deceive them that heare him, and to bring them into error, faineth these things, he being the Father of lies, and one that stood not in the truth. Yet againe thou wilt say they are in the very same apparell, and in all points as the party was alive. But so may they be, saith Augustine, and yet so far from being the parties, that the dead doe not know such things to be done in their likenesse. Even as you see in dreames the living are thought to appeare to him that sleepeth, and to be present with him, to speak and talk, and to expound hard matters, when it is nothing so, neither did those parties that are so dreamed of ever know it. So did my scholer Eulogius, saith he, thinke that I was present with him, and expounded an hard place in Tullies orations to him. These two godly Fathers then, Saint Augustine and Saint Chrysostome, you see, following the Scriptures before noted, utterly abhorre this folly. What then be those appearances that are seen? surely even as Chrysostome said, devils that deceive, when there is any such matter indeed. But many times the corrupt humours that are in our heads will make us think we see formes, and faces, and shapes, and shadowes that indeed are not at all there. And many a thousand times have false juggling hypocrites abused Gods people to establish their Idolatry, superstition and error, and such spirits now and then have met with their matches that conjured them well and thriftily not by any Holy water or crossing, but with sound blowes upon the bones of them. Such Monkish spirits did walke apace about other mens houses, when hypocriticall holinesse said they might have no wives of their owne: but thus much of this matter now may suffice.

1 Sam. 12. 23. Iob 7. 9, 10. Apoc. 14.

Deut. 33. 3. Wisd. 3. 1.

Hom. 2. de Lazaro in Mat. 8. hom 29.

Can wicked spirits also inchant at any time?

They can, as appeareth unto you in the seventh Chapter of Exodus. And how they can transforme the appearance of shape, the Daughter of Macarius, seeming to bee changed into a Cowe, sheweth. Also in Saint Augustine many examples. How againe they can deceive our senses may be considered. First, by making us not see, and not heare, or to see and heare what shape and sound they list. Saint Hierome in the life of Hilarion telleth strange things, as that Satan made Hilarion heare the cryes of yong children, the lowing of Oxen, the wayling of women, the roaring of Lions, the ſound of an armie, and ſuch like. Then fearefull ſights and ſhowes, all which Hilarion knew to be Ludibria dæmonum, the deceiving tricks of devils. It were too much to rehearſe what there, and elſewhere is read of this matter. Sometimes there is naturall cauſe in the Organ, or inſtrument, as eye, eare, &c. As the eye bee ſo charged with humors that we ſhall thinke we ſee through a five, that we ſee many round circles flying up and downe or about the Candle, faces and ſhowes of ſundry ſorts, the ball of the eye ſometime ſpreading it ſelfe, and making all things ſeeme greater, ſometimes contracting it ſelfe, and making all things ſeeme leſſe, ſometimes of one colour, ſometimes of another, all by a divers diſpoſition in the eye. Which divers effects in the ſenſes Satan is able to worke, as alſo to deale with the medium by which we doe ſee, and ſo deceive us. The powers of the minde againe may be diſturbed, as memory, reaſon, imagination, &c. By phrenſie, by Melancholy, &c. Yea even melancholy hath made men thinke they were brute beaſts, glaſſes, ſtooles, &c.

In vita Macarii Aug. de Civ. Dei lib. 18. c. 17. &c.

And can theſe wicked ſpirits foretell things to come alſo?

They can. But withall marke how. Surely firſt what they intend to effect and bring to paſſe themſelves if they can, that before hand they will tel ſhall come to paſſe. As if God permit them to hurt the fruits of the earth whereby a dearth and ſcarcity muſt needs enſue, then they beforehand can tell of the dearth. Secondly, they are more expert in naturall cauſes, than any man can be, and therefore by that meanes alſo they may foretell things to come; namely, when they are acquainted with the cauſe. Thirdly, what already is begun to be done, but yet unknowne to us, either by ſecreſie of the doing, or by a diſtance of place, they by their ſwiftneſſe, and further underſtanding than we have, are able to tell of before we either heare or know of it. Fourthly, if there be any propheſie in all the word of God that ſuch a thing ſhall be, they are able to foretell it, and we not underſtanding the Scriptures think they ſpeake by skill in themſelves, when indeed it is from the Scriptures that they have it. Finally, by inclinations and likelihoods, by occaſions and circumſtances fit to effect matters, they will gueſſe at things beforehand, and ſay thus and thus it ſhall be, yet often miſſing as well as hitting, if the one were as well obſerved as the other: but to reckon up all wayes of their skill would be long and not poſſible for man, therefore let theſe ſuffice for a taſte to judge others by, and onely adde this, that whatſoever by Aſtronomy, or judiciary Aſtrology, and calculation of nativities may bee done, that theſe ſpirits can know and underſtand better than any mortall man. And how much this way may be attained unto in the opinion of very learned men and good Chriſtians they that be learned alſo can tell or have heard. I beleeve not all that is written, I diſcredit not what hath been proved, but as for the thoughts of men, they cannot attaine to them, God having reſerved that as proper to his deity to know the heart, ſo doe many Scriptures teach us. Becauſe thou only ſaith Solomon, underſtandeſt the hearts of the ſons of men, that they may feare thee all the dayes of their life, &c. Againe, all hearts doth the Lord ſearch, and all the thoughts of the mind doth he underſtand. Behold (ſaith Iob) my witneſſe is in heaven, and my record is on high: As if he ſhould have ſaid, my heart and inwards are only knowne to him, and to none elſe. Againe, I know that thou canſt doe all things, and that there is nothing hid from thee. I am the Lord ſearching the heart, and trying the reines, ſaith God by Ieremie. Chap. 17. 10. In the New Teſtament the Apoſtles pray and ſay: Thou Lord which knoweſt the hearts of all men, ſhew which of theſe two thou haſt choſen. The like in the 15 Chap. and many moe places. Upon all which & ſo evident grounds of truth, S. Auguſtine, being once of opinion that devils knew mens thoughts, retracted it and changed his minde, as appeareth in his ſecond booke of retractations, and 30. Chapter: but of what we ſpeake or doe, of our geſtures, lookes and behaviour every way, they are moſt diligent obſervers, giving many times thereby ſhrewd gueſſes what inwardly we thinke, purpoſe, wiſh and deſire, and ſo preparing and fitting their wicked tentations, ſuggeſtions and allurements accordingly, with great advantage againſt both man and woman, which might yeeld us a profitable watch word to abſtaine from undecent ſpeeches, wanton lookes and geſtures, ſince thereby we diſcover to Satan what before he knew not againſt us. But alas ſo far are many from thinking of this, that they never pleaſe themſelves better, than when they on this ſort miniſter to Satan the greateſt ſtrength againſt themſelves, ſpeaking, looking, dalying, and dealing as if they deſired that Satan, not knowing, ſhould know their uncleane and ſinfull cogitations. But of this matter no further now.

Reade Beza his Epiſt.
1 Kings 8.39.
2 Chron. 6.30.
1 Chron. 28.
Iob 16.19.
Iob 41.2.
Acts 2.24.

Will you adde ſomething of the lying Miracles and wonders that the devill can doe, and theſe wicked ſpirits?

2 Theſ. 2. 9. Of this matter remember what the Apoſtle S. Paul hath written and witneſſed, when he ſaith, Antichriſts comming ſhall be full of ſuch ſtuffe. But all by the effectuall working of Satan. He then is the Maſter of the Mint where ſuch lying miracles are forged, all to deceive unſtaid mindes too much delighting in ſuch ſhowes, and too much crediting ſuch deceits.

What thinke you laſtly of the ſalvation of theſe wicked ſpirits?

That ever they ſhould be ſaved, let us know it was a foule error in ſo learned a Father as

Origen

Origen was, who lived about the yeere of our Lord two hundred and thirty, attributed to him, and reproved in him by Saint Augustine, in his booke of heresies the three and forty Chapter. The light of Gods word is evident against it. As goe thou cursed into everlasting fire, true of the reprobate, and therefore much more of the Devils. It cannot bee everlasting fire if it have an end to either. Many such places are there. The use whereof you may take out of the Apostle to the Ephesians, Even to perswade us to put on the whole armour of God there described; since we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against spirits and powers, as these Princes of darkenesse and death to all whom they overcome. Let us consider their fall, who once stood, and know that howsoever we runne, yet if wee give over and faile in our course as they did, with them for ever and ever wee also shall taste of confusion and death. Pray wee then humbly to the GOD of heaven to increase our faith and obedience daily, and to establish them to the end. Mat.25.

Thus much then may suffice of things invisible, and now if you thinke good to adde somewhat of things visible, also created by this our mighty God, Creator of heaven and earth, you may draw to an end of this Article.

The creation of things visible you reade in the booke of Genesis, whereof to speake also at large would be very tedious, and therefore I will refer you either to that which I have noted upon the first Chapter of Genesis, or to some better Treatises.

Yet I pray you let me aske two or three Questions, and I will give over; and first of the creation of monsters what you thinke.

None were created at the beginning. For all was good and exceeding good, which includeth perfection. Therefore since our fall these things have hapned to witnesse our sinnes daily unto our faces, yet so that withall they serve to declare the power of God: Of which in my opinion those words of our Saviour Christ in Iohn, of the blinde man, may thus far bee verified, that they fall out to the end the glory of God may be seen: for they shew (as I said) his power, they shew his justice, and they call upon us in their manner, not unfitly, to feare the Lord, to abhorre sinne, and to flie from all that offendeth. Againe, the blessing of a right shape, and the excellency of order in things created, where God vouchsafeth it, a great deale better by this meanes is discerned, seene and considered, our natures being ever Carendo magis quam fruendo, by wanting rather than having, to judge of a mercy and favour shewed unto us: a dulnesse which with all care we ought to reforme, praising the Lord with tongue and heart for the perfection of our members, for the full use of our senses, and for a comely, decent, and right disposition of our whole frame: which easily the Lord might have made otherwise if he had would.

My second question is of the Baptisme of these monstrous births, when and what manner of such creatures borne of women may be baptised.

Surely those births, in which after diligent search and view those things are not found, for which they may be reputed in the number of men, no Baptisme is to bee given. To others it may and ought.

The third question is this; how those imperfect births and bodies, which yet rightly may be reputed in the number of men, shall rise in the generall resurrection.

And I answer (if it bee not curious and needlesse to move such a question) that you may thinke if you will, as S. Austine did of this matter, namely, that in the resurrection, their imperfection shall be wanting, and their bodies glorious as others. Sure I am that this may boldly be affirmed, that no blemish now in this corruptible house, shall hinder any part of those incomprehensible joyes that are provided by God for his chosen, but my cup shall be full, my estate as sweet, and my table in heaven as richly decked, as in the undeceiving word of God is promised to true Faith, not to perfect bodies. Let this be our comfort therefore, and follow this. Aug. Enchirid. cap. 7.

Will you then goe any further in this Article?

This further is to be added, that as God thus created all things, and thereby hath shewed both power and mercy, so we doe beleeve also in calling him Creator of heaven and earth, that he ever hath, doth, and will by the same power, and goodnesse, keepe and preserve in their former estate all things by him created, and by his providence, government and will, all matters come to passe, both in heaven and earth. For thus first by the plaine testimonies of the word we are taught. Whatsoever (saith the Psalmist) pleased the Lord, that did he in heaven and earth, in the Sea, and in all depths. Marke the limits of Gods government, and see if there be any thing without this reach to be disposed of by others. Againe, but one God is in heaven, and hath done whatsoever he would. The eyes of all things waite upon him, and he giveth them meate in due season. Marke the Prophet Daniel, how often he repeateth that still at the time appointed, this and that should come to passe, I say at the time appointed: namely, by God. Giving to the Lord the whole government of whatsoever men attempt to doe, and whatsoever commeth to passe. And what is that in S. Iames so often read, and so often heard of us, that every good giving and perfect gift is from above, and commeth down from the Father of lights in whom is no variablenesse, neither shadowing by turning, but that as he created, so he still preserveth, governeth, and guideth, whatsoever ſoever he hath created, and to think otherwiſe is to erre, and to be deceived as there is ſaid. The Scriptures are full of ſuch teſtimonies. Secondly, by reaſon it ſelfe, the ſame is confirmed unto us. For whatſoever is done, is done either God willing, God nilling, or God not regarding. But to ſay any thing is done God nilling, were to make him not omnipotent, and to ſay any thing is done he not regarding, were to make him like the Epicures god, that ſporteth and playeth, not heeding the things of this life. Therefore it neceſſarily followeth, that by the will of God, that is, by his providence, all things are done. Another reaſon may be drawne from this diſtribution that all things are done either according to nature, or beſide nature, or by chance. But every of theſe are done by Gods providence. Therefore all things are done by his providence. The firſt member is confeſſed often in Scriptures. For what more agreeable to nature, than that the earth ſhould bring forth graſſe, the heavens give raine, &c? Yet this being ſo naturall the Prophet aſcribeth to God, and ſaith, Thou makeſt graſſe to grow, and herbs for the uſe of man, thou giveſt rain in due ſeaſon, &c. The ſecond member is proved by the reſurrection of the dead, by the death of Chriſt, by the Ravens that beſide nature fed Elias, by the Lions that did not devoure nor hurt Daniel, by the Fire which conſumed not the three Children in the furnace, by the Sunne which ſtayed his courſe for a whole day, and by divers ſuch like, which all were governed by the finger and will of almighty God. The third member is proved alſo in the Scripture by many examples; for how caſuall ſeemeth it that a Ram ſhould be caught by the hornes in the buſh to ſerve Abraham for his ſacrifice? yet this was Gods hand; that Eſau or any man ſhould goe to the foreſt to hunt, and quickly light upon his game, kill and returne? yet this is no chance in Eſaus eyes, but God, ſaith he, hath done this, and brought it to my hand. That the Daughter of Pharaoh ſhould walk abroad that way more than any other to finde and ſave little Moſes in the flagges? yet this was no chance, but Gods ruling, guiding, and gracious hand. That as a man loppeth a tree, his axe head ſhould flye off and kill a man, yet this is aſcribed to God, and not to chance: how many wayes may the plague of leproſie happen to a man, and ſeeme by meere caſualty, yet is the Lord ſaid to ſend it, &c. Where you ſit, where you ſtand, where you goe, where you lie, ſeemeth it not caſuall? yet ſaith the Prophet, Thou knoweſt my upſitting and down lying, thou art about my bed, and about my pathes, and ſpyeſt out all my goings. The caſting of the lots, a thing as caſuall in mans eye as any thing, is ruled by the Lord, as you know we reade. And we ſee it in practiſe, both in the diviſion of the land of Canaan, and the choyce of Mathias, and the finding out of Ionas. The lighting of a bird, how caſuall in ſhew, yet ſaith the Text, not a Sparrow lighteth upon the ground without the will of your heavenly Father. The Whale is not ſo ready to receive Ionas, but by Gods finger, neither doth the little worme bite the Gourd but by Gods finger. A third reaſon might be taken from the conſent of the Church ever given to this Doctrine, but it needeth not: Only I remember the ſpeech of Saint Hierome, worthy indeed to be remembred. Providentia Dei gubernantur omnia, & quæ putatur pœna medicina eſt. All things are governed by Gods providence, and that which ſeemeth to bee puniſhment is indeed a medicine, meaning the croſſes of Gods children. Et ſi quando invocatione ſummi Dei aliquid impetrent pro cupiditate ſua mala impii, vindicta eſt iſta, non gratia. Non enim de talibus dicit Apoſtolus fruſtra, &c. Quorum peccatorum fœlicitas perpetrandorum pœna eſt aliorum præcedentium, &c. And touching the wicked, ſaith another, if they obtain any thing at Gods hand by their prayer, which in their wicked deſire they wiſh to have, it is a puniſhment not a grace For of ſuch the Apoſtle hath not ſpoken in vaine: that God giveth them up to their owne hearts luſts: the proſperity of whoſe ſinnes to be committed is the juſt puniſhment of God upon ſinnes already committed. The Speech alſo of Baſil agreeth with Hierome. Apud Deum nihil improvidum eſſe agnoſcitur: cuncta enim oculus ille inſopitus ſpeculatur. Without the government of Gods providence there is nothing. For that unſleeping eye beholdeth all things. For the objections which by ignorant mindes are caſt out againſt this holy and comfortable Doctrine, I rather refer you to that which elſewhere I have written, than here againe to goe over them. Only remembring now that good ſaying; Permitti mala debuerunt, quoniam ut eſſent id bonum erat, ex quibus bonum futurum erat. Evils were to be ſuffered, becauſe it was good ſo to be in regard of good that ſhould come thereby. As for example, the affliction of a man worketh patience, experience, hope, &c. which are all good things. And that againe touching the wills of bad men, in quibus utique Dei non eſt quod mala ſunt, ſed quod ordinatæ ſunt. In which it is not of God that they are evill, but that being evill, yet they are by him ordered to his glory, and his childrens good, ſome way or other, as beſt pleaſeth his Majeſty.

Psal.135.6. Ier.27.5. Psal.115. Ephes.1.11. Dan.11.27,29. Iam.1.16,&c.

A word if you pleaſe to adde of the uſe, I ſhall be no further troubleſome.

The uſe of this doctrine is moſt ſweet to all that truly taſt it. And firſt it is effectuall and powerfull to ſtirre us up to glorifie GOD for all his mercies. For when I ſhall thinke that whatſoever happeneth unto me, the Lord ſendeth it: what commeth out of the heart and mouth, but that of Iob; Bleſſed, bleſſed be the Name of the Lord for it: eſpecially, in proſperity, when the face of the Lord moſt cheerefully ſhineth upon us, what pierceth the inward parts of a childe of God, but theſe and the like motions; O Lord! Lord! theſe hearts of men are turned unto Secundum naturam, præter naturã, fortuitò.

Deut. 11. 13. Pſal. 147. 8.

Gen. 22. Gen. 27. 20. Exod. 2. Deut. 19. 5. Levit. 14 34. Pſal. 139. Prov. 16. 33. Ioſua 14. Acts 2. Mat. 10.

In Ezek.

Vincent. in ſpeculo, l. 29. tom. 1. cap. 50.

Baſil. Hexa. l. 7.

unto me by thee,and not otherwiſe. From thee commeth their love,their favour,their benefits, and all that gladdeth my heart,thou art the fountain,& they are thy inſtrumẽts,ſuch as next after thee are to be regarded by me, but never before thee,or without thee. Alſo what any other creature yeeldeth me of comfort,profit,uſe or good any way,the power,the ſtrength, the way,& the meanes thereof is from thee my God,my ſtrength,my hope, and my ſtay for ever. And this is that duty which the Lord grieveth at to be wanting in his people,when by his Prophet Ieremy he ſaith thus: That they had an unfaithfull and rebellious heart,and did not ſay,let us now feare the Lord our God,who giveth us raine both early and late,and in due ſeaſon,and reſerveth unto us the appointed weekes of the harveſt.Secondly,it is a moſt notable worker of patience in us,even through our whole life,and in our greateſt afflictions. For doe I not beleeve that Chriſt my deare Saviour hath fully appeaſed the wrath of his Father againſt me,by his ever-pleaſing ſacrifice of himſelfe for me,and fully reconciled him unto me; doe not I beleeve this I ſay? God forbid but I ſhould. Then doe not I beleeve that this good God, thus reconciled, and made of an angry Judge,a ſweet,mercifull,and kinde Father to me,is all-ſufficient, and able to ſave me from any evill in this world that may hurt me,and as willing as able ever? How then may I thinke, being thus perſwaded of his power and will, but whatſoever befalleth mee in this world, be it to the fleſh never ſo ſowre,by that ever-mighty finger of his guiding & governing the intents of men, not to paſſe the bounds of his pleaſure, in the end ſhall worke to my good, the Apoſtle ſo expreſly alſo delivering out,that, All things worke for the beſt to them that love God,&c. Therefore never looke we at the thing happened ſo much,as at the bleſſed hand that guideth it. And ever have Abraham before your eyes for a patterne of practice in this behalf, who in the moſt bitter event that a father can taſte of, anſwered his queſtioning Childe where the Sacrifice was; My ſonne, my ſonne, God will provide; ſhewing thereby,that to reſt upon this Doctrine is ever a ſure way to overcome all temptations. Thirdly, it worketh in us that ſweet and comfortable ſecurity for the time to come,which the Apoſtle taſted of, when he ſaid, that not onely he was delivered out of the mouth of the Lyon for the time paſt, but alſo that the Lord would deliver him for the time to come from every evill work, and would preſerve him to his heavenly kingdome. And can we behold what is daily done by him? for the fowles of heaven, how he feedeth them,and for other creatures how he cloatheth them, none of theſe ſowing or reaping any thing,and can we doubt of his care and mercy to be much more for us? O how ſhould this bee a want moſt grievous to the Lord in us, and moſt unſeeming for men and women that have found what we have found at his hands? Fourthly, it breedeth in us alſo a providence over our matters, ſeeing the Lord to have wretchleſneſſe and careleſneſſe. Laſt of all,it driveth us to our knees early and late,to begge and deſire at this our good God his hand the continuance of this his ſweet providence over us, and for us, that by him wee may quietly ſaile over this ſea of a wicked world,and when his bleſſed will ſhall bee, arive in the haven of eternall comfort, that he in mercy hath provided for all his true children when this life is ended, his bleſſed and glorious, and everlaſting kingdome, to which we ſigh to come, as our fathers have done before us. The Lord grant us a happy comming to it, for his deare Sonnes ſake Chriſt Ieſus, our bleſſed Saviour, Amen, Amen. And thus much of this firſt Article ſhall ſuffice at this time.

2 Tim.4.

His Wiſdome knoweth what is fitteſt for us, his Power can beſtow it, his goodneſs will.

THE SECOND ARTICLE.

And in Ieſus Chriſt his onely Sonne our Lord.

THe former Article hath intreated of the Creator,which was the firſt part of the Creed. And now this ſecond part followeth with the perſon and office of the Redeemer, contained in ſixe Articles next enſuing: this ſecond and the third ſpeaking of his perſon,and the other foure of his office.

If you like ſtill to follow the order of the words, it will moſt helpe every weake memory.

It is my meaning, my labour looking wholly to the weakeſt. And therefore as the words expreſſe foure ſeverall things to be beleeved of this ſecond perſon in the Trinitie; namely,that he is Ieſus,that he is Chriſt,that he is the onely begotten Sonne of God,and that he is our Lord, ſo will I in like order follow them one after another, by the mercifull aſſiſtance of him that inableth all men both to write and ſpeake. Firſt,then,of his name Ieſus. It was given to him not onely the eight day when he was circumciſed, but by the Angell before he was conceived and borne. For ſo you know we read; Feare not Mary,for thou haſt found favour with God,and loe thou ſhalt conceive in thy wombe,and beare a Sonne,and ſhalt call his name Ieſus. And to Ioſeph. Ioſeph thou ſonne of David,feare not to take Mary to thy wife,for that which is conceived in her is of the holy Ghoſt; & ſhe ſhall bring forth a ſonne,and thou ſhalt call his name Ieſus. The reaſon alſo is expreſſed by the Angell in the ſame place; for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſinnes. The word Ieſus ſignifieth a Saviour,

Luke 2.21.

Luke 1.13,31. Mat.1.20,21.

Saviour, of an Hebrew roote Iaſchah to ſave. Therefore the Angels reaſon is, as if he ſhould have ſaid; He that in deed and truth is a Saviour, hee is rightly named a Saviour, that is, Ieſus; but the Sonne of God is in deed and truth a Saviour, therefore thou ſhalt call his name Ieſus. And if Ioſhua the ſonne of Nun, who led the people into the land of Canaan, and Ioſhua the ſonne of Iehozadah, who led the people out of the Captivity of Babylon into their countrey, and ſo were typicall Saviours or deliverers of a few, had this name of Jeſus vouchſafed them, how much more the Sonne of God, who was not in type and ſhadow, but in deed and truth is a Saviour of all that beleeve? If Jeſus had given them reſt, ſaith the Apoſtle to the Hebrewes, meaning Ioſhua the ſonne of Nun; then would he not have ſpoken of another day: but this Jeſus hath done it, becauſe he hath ſaved us from our ſinnes. Yea ſaith the ſame Apoſtle, He is able alſo perfectly to ſave them that come unto God by him, ſeeing hee ever liveth to make interceſſion for them. Our ſinnes he hath taken upon himſelfe, and his righteouſneſſe hee hath communicated to us, as witneſſeth the Apoſtle, when he ſaith; He hath made him to be ſinne for us which knew no ſinne, that we ſhould be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. And Saint Peter in theſe words, Chriſt ſuffered once for our ſinnes, the juſt for the unjuſt, that he might bring us to God. Saint Iohn againe as plainly as either of them: The blood of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſinnes; not from ſinnes, but from all ſinnes, which is a thing to bee marked of thoſe that will make him but a halfe Saviour. Againe, If any man ſinne we have an Advocate with the Father, Ieſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our ſinnes, and not onely for ours, but for the ſins of the whole world. He hath alſo delivered us from the puniſhment of our ſinnes: For he hath ſo vanquiſhed and overcome Satan, that now there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus. Death alſo ſo ſwallowed up in victory, that by him wee likewiſe have victory, and in joy may ſay, O death where is thy ſting? O grave where is thy victory? Finally, he hath given us his Spirit, whereby it is effected, that though ſinne remaine, yet it ſhall not raigne in our mortall bodies. For if that Spirit which raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, dwell in us, hee quickneth alſo our mortall bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in us. Truly therefore he hath ſaved us from our ſinnes by his merit and paſſion, and daily doth ſave us by his might and power: and therefore rightly and fitly is called Jeſus. Yea, comfortably in Gods unſpeakable mercy was this name impoſed, to aſſure us of his power in all frights and feares, terrors and temptations whatſoever. In conſideration of which aſſurance and ſtrength of faith ariſing hereby, is that, ſaid the Apoſtle, concerning perfection in Chriſt Jeſus.

Heb.4.8.

Heb.7.25.

2 Cor.5.21.
1 Pet.3.18.

1 Iohn 1.7.

2 Ioh.2.1.

Rom.8.1.
1 Cor.15.54.

Rom.6.12.

Coloſ.1,28.

A Saviour they will grant him that will not grant him the onely Saviour. What therefore ſay you to that?

Marke wee ſtill the Scriptures, and they ſhall ever ſhew us what is truth. How therefore ſpeake they of this matter, when they ſay thus: He that beleeveth in the Sonne, hath etenall life, and he that beleeveth not, hath not life, but the wrath of God abideth upon him. Doe wee not plainly ſee here, that all ſalvation is ſo in Chriſt, and by Chriſt, as that without him there is nothing but the wrath of God, and eternall death? What ſaith Chriſt againe himſelfe, but I am the way, the truth, and the life, no man commeth to the Father, but by me: by me; how then is not hee the onely Saviour? Adde thoſe plaine words of S. Peter, There is no ſalvation in any but in Chriſt, neither any other name under heaven whereby we can be ſaved. And that of Saint Paul, there is one God, and one Mediator betwixt God and man, the Man Chriſt Ieſus. All which Scriptures expreſly teach us, that Chriſt is not onely the Saviour of mankinde, but the onely Saviour. Which truely you may further confirme by theſe reaſons. The Decree of God can no man make void. The propoſition will be granted, and the aſſumption hath evident proofe. We are not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as a Lambe undefiled, and without ſpot, (now marke) which was ordained before the foundation of the world, &c. Againe, Saint Paul, Whom God hath ſet forth to be a reconciliation through faith in his blood, &c. with many other places, Coloſ. 1.19. Eſa. 14.27. Another reaſon, hee in whom onely the conditions of a true Mediator are accompliſhed and fulfilled, He onely is the Mediatour and Saviour, neither is there ſalvation in any other: but in Chriſt onely all theſe conditions bee fulfilled, therefore hee onely and none elſe is our full, perfect, and ſufficient Saviour. The conditions of a true Saviour, are theſe; That he ſhould be true man, becauſe the juſtice of God requireth, that in the ſame nature that ſinned, ſatisfaction ſhould be made, that he ſhould be juſt, for hee that himſelfe is a ſinner, cannot pay the debt, and make ſatisfaction for other ſinners. And thirdly, that hee alſo ſhould be true God, to the end that by the power of his Godhead, he might ſuſtaine the waight of Gods wrath in his fleſh, and reſtore unto us both our loſt innocency, and eternall life, that theſe are all fulfilled in Chriſt, and in Chriſt only the Apoſtle affirmeth, when he ſaith, He, he is made unto us wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification and redemption; which foure words containe all, if we more particularly liſt to explicate them. Where you plainly ſee that he doth not ſay Chriſt was given unto us of God ſupplementum, vel adminiculum; that is, in ſupply and helpe of wiſedome, and righteouſneſſe, &c. or in part of wiſdome, and righteouſneſſe, and ſanctification, and redemption, but he aſcribeth the whole effect unto him, and onely in him. Therefore the Ioh.3.16.

Ioh.14.6.

Act.4.12.
1 Tim.2.5.

1 Pet.1.18, 19.20.
Rom.3.25.

Exod.32.33.
Ezck.28.20.

Heb.7.26.

1 Cor.1.30.

con-

the concluſion followeth, hee is onely our Saviour, and our full, perfect, and ſufficient Saviour, not a halfe Saviour, not a part of righteouſneſſe and ſanctification, and our workes another part, but wholly, wholly he is all. And therefore moſt fitly, moſt truely, and moſt comfortably, in reſpect of us, and all feares of fleſh and blood, hee is called Jeſus, and is Jeſus, that is, a Saviour.

Doe they then rightly hold this Articles of our Chriſtian Faith, who either from Saints, or from themſelves, or any where, out of Chriſt looke for ſalvation?

No aſſuredly, for to beleeve in Jeſus Chriſt, as this Article requireth, is not onely to acknowledge and confeſſe that the Sonne of God is the Saviour, and the onely Saviour, but alſo by a true faith to embrace him ſo, and not one jot to decline and ſwerve from him. And as they are idolaters, which any way turne from God, as covetous men, & ſuch like, ſo they beleeve not, but deny the faith, which any way turn from Chriſt, as do the perſons whom you note. Thus are we taught by the Apoſtle, when he telleth the Galathians, that they are turned away from Chriſt to another Goſpell, becauſe partly by Chriſt, and partly by the worke of the Law, they looked to be juſtified, and ſo ſwerved ſometime from Chriſt, and did not wholly relie upon him. Againe, when he telleth the Corinthians that Chriſt is divided, whileſt ſome held of Paul, and ſome of Apollos, and ſome of Cephas, and ſome of Chriſt, Chriſt muſt be all, and Chriſt muſt be onely, or Chriſt will be none. Theſe Scriptures and many moe are plaine, wherefore you ſee their moſt fearfull eſtate that will not be perſwaded, but robbing Chriſt of his true honour, aſcribe it to other things. And for their profeſſing in words as we doe, and denying it in deeds, it increaſeth but their damnation, and no way excuſeth them. For in him aſſuredly all the treaſures of wiſdome and knowledge lie: And it pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſſe dwell. And, in eo completi eſtis, in him you are perfect, ſaith he, and he is the author and finiſher of our faith, &c. I cannot therefore beleeve in Jeſus, unleſſe I beleeve him to be my onely Saviour, and caſting away all other meanes deviſed and invented by man, reſt and relie onely upon him. Such was the faith of the Apoſtles, & ſo beleeved Peter when he ſaid in the name of the other Diſciples to Chriſt, Lord whither ſhall we goe? thou haſt the words of eternall life. So beleeved Paul, when he ſaid, I deſire to know nothing but Ieſus Chriſt, and him crucified. And, God forbid that I ſhould rejoyce in any thing but in the Croſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Againe, both in life and in death, Chriſt is to mee advantage. So I ſay againe muſt we beleeve and remaine in Chriſt, as the branch in the ſtocke, if we live by Chriſt. The Lord grant we may. Amen.

Eph. 5.5.

Gal. 1.6.

Gal. 5.4. 1 Cor. 1.12, 13.

Col. 2.3. Col. 1.19. Heb. 12.2.

Ioh. 6.68. 1 Cor. 2.2.

The Papiſts ſtrangely deſcant of this holy name Jeſus, but whether ſuch ſtuffe be worth the touch, I referre it to you.

Surely to rake up this Channell, were to ſtirre a great deale of foule matter, for in truth the follies of their Writers herein are moſt monſtrous, but ſaid I follies, I may ſay more and ſay but right, yet a little to manifeſt their blindneſſe. You muſt underſtand (ſay they) that there bee three manner of Pſalters. The firſt is called Davids Pſalter, containing thrice fifty Pſalmes. The ſecond is called the Pſalter of our Lady, containing thrice fifty Aves. And the third is called the Pſalter of Ieſu, containing fifteen principall Petitions, which ten times repeated make alſo thrice fifty; in the which Pſalter the glorious name of Ieſu is called upon 450. times. Theſe ten petitions may be ſaid upon our ten fingers, or ten beads, or reade in a Booke. For example: Ieſu, Ieſu, Ieſu, mercy, Ieſu, Ieſu, Ieſu, mercy, Ieſu, Ieſu, Ieſu, mercy; and ſo tenne times over, which maketh one petition. This they ſay ſhall bee very meritorious, becauſe it is written, Whatſoever you ſhall aske in my name, that you ſhall have, and there is no other name whereby we can be ſaved, &c.

This is moſt wonderfull blindneſſe, and boldneſſe, thus to abuſe unto ſuperſtition this holy name, and thus to pervert theſe holy Scriptures.

The Scriptures you ſee are farre from any ſuch ſenſe, the one promiſing that whatſoever wee aske in his name, that is, for his ſake, for his merits and paſſion, not for the word Ieſus, the literall word: and the other teaching that there is no other name, that is, no other meanes or way whereby we can be ſaved, not aſcribing our ſalvation to the word and ſyllables Ieſus: but heare more. Another of their learned Rabbies, going about to tell the greatneſſe of this name (not of him that hath the name, but of the literall word) ſaith, that all things are comprehended within theſe foure numbers, one, ten, a hundred, a thouſand, and then theſe numbers in the word Ieſus, wherefore he concludeth that it is a wonderfull name, which you ſee in him was a wonderfull trifling in a ſerious matter. A third findeth that name of God delivered to Moſes, Sum, I am, in this word Ieſus, and how? Forſooth, ſaith he, Ieſus hath three terminations, when it is declined, Ieſus, Ieſu, and Ieſum; now take the laſt letter of every termination, and you have S, V, M, which put together ſpell Sum. Then hee cryeth out: O nomen ineffabile! O nomen vere tetragrammaton, O gaudium Angelorum, latitia juſtorum, &c. O name that cannot bee expreſſed! O name truly tetragrammaton, O joy of Angels, and comfort of the juſt! Furthermore (ſaith he) this name, if you make it, hath three vowels, and two conſonants, which is a myſtery, for the three vowels, I, E, V, ſignifie the Trinity; and the two conſonants, or rather one one conſonant twice put, to wit, S, ſignifie the two parts of Chriſts humanity, his body and his ſoule. Therefore we muſt worſhip this name above all names. Which what profound Divinity it is, you ſee; others of them wickedly rob Chriſt of his divine power, vertue, and might, and aſcribe it to this literall word of his name, ſaying; This is the name that gave the blinde ſight, the deafe hearing, the lame going, the dumbe ſpeech, the dead life; and finally, that caſt out devils out of the bodies of men, &c. Then is told a tale of a Souldier that was helped out of Saint Patricks Purgatory, by this name. And how? Becauſe Saint Paul ſaid; He was not onely ready to be bound in Hieruſalem, but to die for the name of the Lord Ieſus: (a place, if you mark it, well applyed) therefore when his head was cut off at Rome, it gave three leapes, and at every leape ſaid three times, Ieſus, Ieſus, Ieſus.

Act 21.13.

Why S. Paul meant, as I take it, that hee was ready to die for the name of the Lord Ieſus, that is, for his Goſpell, truth, profeſſion of him, &c. not for the literall word Ieſus.

It is true, it is true, but thus blinde were, and are ſtill theſe men, refuſing all reformation of ſuch ignorance, and running headlong to their owne deſtruction, whileſt they place the vertue in the name that they ſhould have taught to be in the perſon of Chriſt, God, and Man, not once mentioning in all this, his mercy, merit, death, bloodſhed, love, or ſuch like.

I cannot omit that profound Doctor, whom Eraſmus mentioneth, that noted how many letters were in the word Ieſus, namely five, and then how ſ ſtandeth in the middeſt, betwixt two ſyllables, to ſignifie that even ſo Chriſt is in the middle, or Mediator betwixt God and us: with ſuch other good Stories more there, as though wee had no better meanes to prove Chriſt our Mediator, but by ſuch curious, idle, and fooliſh deſcant, as this. But thus left they the Fountaines of God, and digged Ciſternes to drinke on after their owne fancies; let us leave them therefore, and their dreames, and ſtill hold that which hath beene ſaid before, that this name was given him, not to be thus abuſed to ſuperſtition and folly, but to tell us, that as his name was, ſo indeed was he, a true, full, and perfect Saviour of his people from their ſinnes: not, I ſay againe, a halfe Saviour, as their Gabriel Biel writeth: principally by Chriſt, but not onely by Chriſt: our very reaſon abhorring to admit, that God would ſend from his boſome his owne deare Sonne into this vale of miſery, to take upon him the forme of a Servant, and to doe and ſuffer for us, as he did, to bee but a halfe Saviour. Auguſtine made better uſe of this holy Name, when he cryed, O Ieſu, eſto mihi Ieſus; O Saviour, be to me a Saviour. Et ſi ego admiſi unde me damare poſſis, tu non amiſiſti unde me ſalvare poſſis: And if I have committed for what thou maiſt juſtly damne me, yet thou haſt not loſt meanes and wayes whereby thou canſt ſave mee. O Jeſu, be to me a Jeſus, that is, a Saviour according to thy Name; where you ſee the godly Father looketh at his merit and worke of Redemption, not at letters and ſyllables of his name. So did that Archbiſhop Anſelmus, ſaying; O Ieſu, fac mihi ſecundum nomen tuum, miſerere mei ſecundum nomen tuum; verum eſt, conſcientia mea meruit damnationem, & pœnitentia mea non ſufficit ad ſatisfactionem, ſed miſericordia tua ſuperat omnem offenſionem: O Jeſu, doe to me according to thy name, have mercy upon me according to thy name: true it is, my conſcience hath deſerved damnation, and my repentance is not ſufficient to make ſatisfaction, but thy mercy taketh away all offence. O Jeſu, therefore doe to me according to thy name. From his name he ariſeth to his office, which indeed is a right uſe of his name, juſtly agreeing with that, Thou ſhalt call his Name Ieſus, a Saviour, becauſe he ſhall indeed ſave his people from their ſinnes, according to his Name: and which to ſignifie he ſhall be ſo called. S. Ambroſe againe; Si curari vis, medicus eſt; ſi auxilium petis, virtus eſt; ſi mortem timeas, vita eſt; ſi ire vis, via eſt; ſi tenebras fugis, lux eſt; &c. If thou deſired to be healed, he is a Phyſitian; if thou deſire help, he is power; if thou feare death, he is life; if thou wilt goe, he is the way; and if thou wilt flie darkneſſe, he is light. Still, ſtill, looking to his office, mercy, merit, and redeeming ſaving power: not to his literall name, as theſe ſuperſtitious Teachers doe. Finally, Saint Stephen cryed, Lord Ieſus receive my ſpirit: caſting his eyes to his perſon, and not to the word Ieſus.

I thinke the place to the Philippians not well underſtood, hath, and doth deceive them.

Phil.2.9,10.

Indeed they are eaſily deceived that will not ſearch for truth, and they are juſtly given over to ſtrong deluſions that delight in error, and have not a love of the truth: otherwiſe the place to the Philippians would not be miſtaken; but looke wee a little at the ſame, and marke from whence the Apoſtle tooke it, and compare ſpirituall things with ſpirituall things. The place is borrowed from the Prophet Eſay, and therefore by conference evident, that the word Name ſignifieth power, glory, honour, and authority, above all powers, glories, honours, and authorities, and bowing the knee, ſignifieth ſubjection, ſubmiſſion, and obedience of all Creatures to his beck, rule, and government: For what materiall knees have things in heaven, in hell, &c? This knew the ancient Father S. Origen, and therefore writing upon the 14. to the Romanes, where theſe words be againe, ſaith; Non eſt carnaliter hoc accipiendum, quaſi cœleſtia, ut Sol, Luna, Angeli, genua, aut linguas habeant, ſed genu flectere ſignificat cuncta ſubjecta eſſe, & cultui Dei obedire: Theſe words are not to be taken carnally, as though things in heaven, as the Sunne, Moone, Angels, &c. had knees, or tongues; but to bow the knee, ſignifieth that all things ſhall bee

Eſa.45.23.

ſubject,

ſubject, and obedient to the ſervice of God. This knew Saint Hierome alſo, and therefore ſaith, Non ad genua corporis, ſed ad ſubjectionem mentis, & inclinationem ſpectat, ſi David dicit, Adhæſit pavimento anima mea: It doth not belong to the knees of the body, but to the ſubjection and bowing of the minde, as David ſaith; My ſoule cleaveth to the earth, or to the duſt, (noting his inward humiliation, not a reall and outward matter:) For ſhall we thinke (ſaith he) that either heavenly things, or all earthly things have knees, &c? No, I ſay againe, but by this phraſe of ſpeech is meant ſubjection, whereof bowing of the knee is a ſigne; as when he ſaith, I have left mee ſeven thouſand which have not bowed the knee to Baal; that is, which have not beene ſubject to that Idoll. Fornicator libidini flectit genu, &c. The fornicator is ſaid to bow his knee to luſt, the covetous man to his riches or deſire, the proud man to his pride, &c. becauſe they are ſubject to theſe things. Et toties Diabolo flectimus, quoties peccamus. And ſo oft we bow to the Devill, as we commit ſinne, ſaith this good Father. The like in effect have Theophilact, Beda, Ambroſe, the Gloſſe, and ſome of their owne Papiſts: Imperio ejus ſubjicientur Angeli, homines, Dæmones; To this rule and government ſhall be ſubject Angels in heaven, men in earth, and Devils under the earth. This is to bow the knee to him, and this is for him to have a Name above all names. Let it ſuffice, both for anſwer to the place in the Philippians, and for declaration of this Popiſh ignorance and error.

1 King. 19.18. Rom.14.11.

Great is the judgment certainly, when men have eyes, and yet ſee not, ears, and yet heare not, hearts, and yet underſtand not, and God in mercy avert it from his people more and more. Great alſo was that favor mentioned in Luke, when he opened their underſtanding, that they might underſtand the Scriptures, and to the woman Lydia, whoſe heart God opened, that ſhe attended to the things which Paul ſpake, Act. 16 14. and the Lord grant it to us alſo in theſe dayes. for his Sonnes ſake, whoſe ſecond title of Chriſt now followeth, if you pleaſe.

Ioſephus. Hag. 1.1. Eſra. 3.2.

Firſt, this title of Chriſt is given to our Savior, to diſtinguiſh him from others that were called Ieſus as well as hee, who were many, the name in thoſe places and times being uſuall; as Ieſus the ſonne of Nun, Ieſus the ſonne of Iehozadeck, Ieſus the ſonne of Syrach, Ieſus Iuſtus, Coloſſ. 4.11. and many moe: but none of all theſe was Ieſus Chriſt: therefore this addition of Chriſt, you ſee, maketh a difference betwixt this our Ieſus, and all thoſe. And by the way, if I ſhould touch it againe, doth not even the common uſe of the name ſhew, that the place to the Philippians is not literally to be underſtood? For how could that name bee a name above all names, which ſo many had as well as he, if you reſpect the literall name? Therefore needs by name muſt be meant ſome other thing, as you heard before: even power, authority, rule, and government, which is in Chriſt above all others. Secondly, this title ſheweth his office, for it ſignifieth anointed. And this againe ſheweth the groſſe ignorance, or wilfull malice of Papiſts, in ſo extolling the bare word Ieſus. For whether is greater Henry a proper name, common to many of his ſubjects, or King, a name of office, peculiar to him. Mary or Queene, Iohn or Earle and Lord. As then Henry and King be, ſo is Ieſus and Chriſt: therefore judge whether is greater, if wee were to ſtand upon names and literall titles. This have ſome of their owne well ſeene and confeſſed; but I had rather alledge Scriptures.

Luke 2.11.

Firſt then conſider the firſt tydings, brought of this happy birth unto the ſhepheards, and marke how the Angels content themſelves not to ſay; Vnto you is borne a Ieſus, or a Saviour: but they adde much more comfort, which is Chriſt the Lord. Thereby preferring this Ieſus before all that ever were ſo called, by the title of his office. The like we read in Matthew, Of whom is borne Ieſus, which is called Chriſt. In Iohn we reade of a diſſention, &c. not whether hee was Jeſus or no, but whether he were Chriſt, knowing the greater moment to be in that.

Mar. 1.16. Iob. 7.43.

Againe, a Law was made to excommunicate whoſoever confeſſed him to bee Chriſt, not againſt calling him by the name Jeſus. In the ſame place you ſee the poore man, which had received ſight, to fall downe and worſhip, when he heard the title of the Sonne of God, and not doing it before in that ſort, though he knew his name to bee Jeſus. In the tenth of Iohn they would have ſtoned him, for ſaying he was the Sonne of God, and called it blaſphemy, but they did not, for the name of Jeſus. In Luke they demand of him, Art thou the very Chriſt, not, Art thou Jeſus? for they ſo called him, without offence: and when they heard this anſwer, they rent their cloathes; thereby declaring how farre greater it was to be Chriſt, than to have the literall name of Jeſus. All which places, with many moe, ought truly to teach, and perſwade our ſoules to looke for his office, that hath this name which is ſo comfortable, and not to bee Children playing with letters and ſyllables, and adoring titles with that honour that is due to the perſon, as theſe fond men doe, ſalving all the matter with a fooliſh diſtinction of Concomitancie, by which all Idolatry may be as well excuſed.

Ioh. 9.22. Ioh. 10.33. Luke 22.33.

Naturam caninam indicat, oſſibus literam hærere, inſcrutata veritatis medulla.

What office then doth this word Chriſt note unto us?

This ſhall you know, if you conſider in the Scriptures, who were commanded and appointed to receive the honor of anointing; namely, Kings, Prieſts, Prophets, for ſo you reade of Sauls anointing, and Davids, with the reſt; of Aarons, and Eliſha, with others. It was done to ſeparate them, for reverence and honour from others, and ſo the principall ſpices of the moſt pure pure Myrrhe,of ſweet Cinamon,of odoriferous Calamus and Caſſia, whereof the precious Oyle of holy oyntment way made,doe repreſent,&c. A ſweet oyntment doth delight not onely him that hath it,but many that are about him: ſo hee that hath the graces of God, is not onely profited by them,but doth benefit others with them: and repreſent the graces of the holy Ghoſt, wherewith they ſhould be indued fit for their offices, 2 John 2.20. For oyle maketh things gliſter and ſhine; ſo doth the Spirit of God the minds of them whom he poſſeſſeth: Oyle maketh things burne ſpeedily, and more vehemently; ſo doth the holy Ghoſt mens hearts and ſoules where he dwelleth. Oyle maketh chearfull, and ſo doth Gods Spirit, working peace of conſcience, the ground of all true comfort, and therefore moſt fitly indeed may be called, the Oyle of Gladneſſe. Finally, Oyle maketh bodies anoynted with it nimble, and full of agilitie: and ſo doth the holy Ghoſt make men fit and ready, and apt to doe their offices. Now Chriſt bare all theſe three offices for our good,and therefore as our King, as our Prieſt, and as our Prophet, hee was anointed, Acts 4.27. yet not with materiall oyle, as men bearing theſe Offices were, but with the thing ſignified by it,even with the Spirit, Act. 10.38.and yet not in meaſure as they, but without all meaſure, as witneſſeth the word of him in the Pſalme; Thou haſt loved righteouſneſſe,and hated iniquity,wherefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oyle of gladneſſe above thy fellowes. Of him ſpake the Prophet long before, ſaying: The Spirit of the Lord is upon me,becauſe he hath annointed me,&c. Which our Saviour himſelfe teſtifieth, when he expoundeth the place of himſelfe,Luke 4.18.

1 Sam. 9.16. Exod. 29.7. 1 King. 19.16. Exod. 30.23, 24, 25.

Iohn 3.34. - Pſa.45.7,8. Heb 1.9.

Eſay 62.1.

And was Chriſt anointed a King over us?

Of his Kingdome ſpake many Scriptures plainly, as you may eaſily call to mind in the Pſalme; I have ſet my King upon my holy Mountain; aske of me and I will give thee the Heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt ends of the world for thy poſſeſſion. Againe, thine Arrowes are ſharp to pierce the hearts of the Kings enemies, therefore the people ſhall fall under thee. The Prophet Ieremy ſpeaketh as much, ſaying, Behold,the dayes come (ſaith the Lord) that I will raiſe unto David a righteous branch, and a King ſhall raigne and proſper, and ſhall execute Iudgement and Iuſtice in the earth. Zachary moſt plainly, Rejoyce greatly,O Daughter of Sion, ſhout for joy,O Daughter of Hieruſalē; Behold thy King commeth meeke, ſitting upon an Aſſe,the Fole of an Aſſe uſed to the yoke. All which, and many moe, declare this Office in him to our comfort. And ſo doth the trembling of the earth, the cleaving aſunder of the Rockes,the darkneſſe of the Sunne, the opening of the graves, and ſuch like fearfull things at his paſſion,being,as it were, beginnings of his powerfull kingdome, when he had finiſhed his courſe in this life.

Pſal.2.6.

Pſa.45.5. Ierem.23.5.

Zach.9 9. Mat.21.5. Iohn 1.49. Apoc.1. Mat.26.

That he is anointed our King,then,I ſee it plain,but yet it appeareth not what maner of King he is.

Of that matter himſelfe inſtructeth us in the Goſpell,when he ſaith; My Kingdome is not of this world;ſhewing firſt,that he is a King, and then clearing himſelfe from that jealouſie which he knew the Kings of the earth would have in for it: making his kingdome not bee oppoſite to Magiſtracy here,but to be altogether Spirituall,and not earthly,of another World, and not of this. Then the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaketh of it when he ſaith; The Kingdome of God is not meat nor drinke, but rghteouſneſſe and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt; That is,the Kingdome of Chriſt conſiſteth not in baſe,vile,and earthly things,but in ſpirituall Grace; as,Righteouſneſſe and peace, &c. And this is the Kingdome of God whereof Chriſt ſpake, when he ſaid: The Kingdome of God is within you. To ſpeake yet more plaine. The Kingdome is that rule that Chriſt hath, in his,over all affections,powers,wils, deſires,&c. as where I rather feare,follow,obey,and yeeld to him, than to theſe, being contrary to him,except it be of infirmitie. To this Kingdome the Word and Spirit is the preparation in us; and,the Scepter therof in regard of him, for with righteouſneſſe ſhall he judge the poore,ſaith the Prophet, and with equitie ſhall he reprove,for the meeke of the earth,and he ſhall ſmite the earth with the rod of his mouth,and with the breath of his lips ſhall he ſlay the wicked.The Goſpell of God is the power of ſalvation to all that beleeve,ſaith the Apoſtle,and ſuch like places many. See then the difference of Chriſt Kingdome, from the kingdomes and Kings of this world. They have but temporary Kingdomes, and thoſe limited within a little ſpace. Hee an eternall kingdome, and reaching from the one end of the Sea to the other; yea, compriſing authoritie both in heaven and earth. Thy Throne O God is for ever and ever,ſaith the Pſalmiſt, as you heard before: and in the Goſpell as plain,He ſhall raigne over the Houſe of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdome there ſhall be no end: All power is given me in heaven and earth. Theſe Kings rule by a worldly Scepter,he by a ſpirituall, his Word and Spirit, as you ſee; teaching us by the one both the will of God,and the way to bee ſaved: and by the other working faith in our hearts, applying his benefits, and writing his Law in our mindes. Laſtly, theſe Kings care but for a temporary ſafety of their Subjects,and defend them but from outward and earthly enemies, but Chriſt our King ſaveth us with an eternall ſafety, and from all enemies ſpirituall as well as worldly; So that no man is able to take us out of his hand.

Though this kingdome be in earth,yet hee ruleth it after a ſpirituall manner. Rom.14. Luke 17.21.

Eſay 11.4. God made all things with his Word, and rules all things with his Word. Rom.1.16. Rom.10.17. 2 Cor.10 4. Epheſ.4.12. Heb.1 8,9. Pſa.45.7. Luke 1.32. Mat 28.18.

Ioh.10.28.

How now I pray you,may we make ſome good uſe of this doctrine of Chriſts Kingdome?

If this now ſaid be not enough,we may raiſe ſome further fruit of it by way of obſervation: as firſt it may be noted,that if Chriſt be our King,then he is our Law-giver,and if he be our King for

for ever, then alſo our Law-giver for ever. And was it ever leſſe than a fault for Subjects to make lawes without their King, or to repeale ſuch as be made by their King? ſurely in this matter it is in the Church as in the Commonwealth; yea, to make any law without him, is to give law to him, and not as ſubjects to receive lawes from him; whoſe law is it then that the people may not have either the Scriptures or prayers in a knowne tongue that they underſtand? that they may not reade them, talke of them, and labour to be inſtructed in them? that they may not as well drinke of the Cup at the Lords Supper, as eate of the Bread, it being as well ſaid, Drinke yee all of this, as Take, eate? whoſe law is it to breake the Cake into three pieces, and to eate all himſelfe alone, to bleſſe the people with the empty Chalice, to forbid meats, to obſerve daies, with many ſuch things? Are theſe Chriſt our Kings lawes? no, no, bleſſed be God, every childe almoſt ſeeth they be not. And therefore proud ſubjects are they; nay, no ſubjects at all to him, that either made them, or yet maintaine them; for theſe liberties overthrow his Kingly office we all ſee, if they be ſuffered.

Secondly, if the ſcepter of his Kingdome be the word, as in all the places before you ſaw it is, thinke with your ſelfe which kingdome the Popes is, wherein the word is not the ſcepter, wherein the Paſtors, by this rod, ſubdue not men unto God, but rather by fire, ſword, blood, tyranny, buls, pardons, mens traditions, &c.

Thirdly, if the word be the ſcepter of Chriſts Kingdome, and therefore called a ſcepter of righteouſneſſe, becauſe it maketh us love righteouſneſſe and hate iniquity, then may we hereby know whether we be of the kingdome of Chriſt, or no, every man making a carefull Chriſtian examination of himſelfe, how the knowledge of the word of God ruleth and over-ruleth him and all his actions; and often thinking of thoſe places in the Pſalmes; I have hated vaine inventions, but thy law doe I love. And againe, I love thy law, and all falſe waies I utterly abhor. This would cut the throat of vice and ſinne, of envy, hatred, malice, anger, reproches, and ſcorne amongſt us; of covetouſneſſe, extortion, uſury, bribery, and whatſoever is againſt God, and our owne ſalvation. For if the ſcepter of the word beare ſway, theſe cannot ſtill over-ſway as they doe in ſome: And if theſe ſtill doe captivate us, then ruleth not the word, then not Chriſt, for the word is his ſcepter; and if not Chriſt, then Satan, ſinne, death, and damnation: onely we tarry for the time that God ſhall cut us off, and then to woe is our way, as ſure as wee now live, for ever and ever. Further uſe we may make by further meditation if wee will, but I ſtay here, onely I adde this, that we learne this, with our eternall King, and his ſpirituall kingdome to bee content, not fearing thoſe that ariſe up againſt him, whatſoever they bee; for ſince his kingdome ſhall have no end, in vaine attempt they whatſoever they invent, and moſt vaine ſhall prove all their conſpiracies.

Pſal. 40.8.

Pſal. 119.113.

But beſide this Kingly office of Chriſt, thus ruling by his Word and Spirit, by his power and providence, is it not neceſſary to have ſome one Conſiſtory on earth, unto which all other places and perſons are ſubject, during the militancy of the Church in this world?

Indeed ſuch a dreame the favourers of Antichriſt have, ſaying; Rome is the place, and the Pope is the perſon; No man being able to awake or ſhake ſome of them out of it: though (God be thanked) many ſee and ſigh for ſo wayward a maintenance of ſo groſſe an error, yea, of ſuch deepe and damnable treaſon to Chriſtian Kings and Princes.

Why Sir, the Iewes had their high Prieſt, unto whom all great matters were brought, and who ruled all, &c.

Marke what the office of the high Prieſt was, and you ſhall well ſee, that within that circuit, through grace given him, hee was able to diſcharge the ſame as God accepted, but will it thereupon ſoundly follow, that what within ſuch a little compaſſe hee could doe, that another man may avoid through the whole wide world? Or may that government and policy fit the whole world, that aptly agreeth to a little piece and part of the world? let us not be headſtrong, but with conſcience and care to ſee truth weigh matters rightly. One fielde may well have one maſter, and be very well tilled, dreſſed and manured; therefore the great field of a whole world: Againe, doe wee not know, that that office amongſt the Jewes was a type of Chriſt our Lord, and is now aboliſhed and tranſlated to him, and onely to him, who remaineth a Prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedeck. Arguments drawne from types and figures, unto any perſon or perſons, ſaving to him of whom they were types and figures, will have a looſe conſequence, and often a wicked concluſion; as by particulars might bee ſhewed, if need were.

Yet, Thou art Peter, ſaid Chriſt, and upon this Rocke will I build my Church, and to thee will I give the Keyes, &c. which may ſeeme to give to Rome and Peter ſome prerogative.

Mat. 16.18,19. Luke 11.52. Matt.23.13.

Chriſt was farre enough from any thought of Rome when he ſaid ſo: and for Peter, I pray you heare and well note the expoſitions of the Fathers and Doctors of the Church upon theſe words. Hee meaneth by the Rocke, ſaith Gregory Nyſſen, Peters confeſſion, for a little before Peter had ſaid; Thou art Chriſt, the Sonne of the living God. Saint Hilary ſaith, Hæc eſt una fidei ſalix petra, quam Petrus ore ſuo confeſſus eſt: This is the onely happy Rocke of

Hil. de Trin. l. 2. Cyril. de Tria.

Faith, which Peter with his mouth confeſſed. S. Cyril ſaith, Petra nihil aliud eſt, quam inconcuſſa & firma diſcipuli fides : The rocke is nothing elſe but the unmoveable and firme faith of the Diſciple. S. Chryſoſtome ſaith, Super hanc Petram, id eſt, in hac fide & confeſſione ædificabo Eccleſiam meam : Upon this rock, that is, upon this faith and confeſſion will I build my Church. Saint Auguſtine, Petra erat Chriſtus, ſuper quod fundamentum ædificatus eſt Petrus. Non me ædificabo ſuper te, ſed te ædificabo ſuper me. The rocke was Chriſt upon which Peter himſelfe was built. I will not build my ſelfe upon thee, but I will build thee on me. Origen againe, Petra eſt quicunque eſt Diſcipulus Chriſti, &c. He is the Rocke, whoſoever is the Diſciple of Chriſt. And upon ſuch a rocke all Eccleſiaſticall learning is built. If thou thinke that the whole Church is builded onely upon Peter, what then wilt thou ſay of Iohn, and every one of the diſciples? Shall wee dare to ſay, that the gates of Hell ſhall not prevaile onely againſt Peter? Or are the keys of the kingdome of heaven given onely to Peter? &c. All which expoſitions wee ſee are ancient and farre from ſetling this proud Primacy, oppoſite to the Kingly office of Chriſt, either in Peter, or in any other.

Cyril. de Trin.

Chryſ. hom. 55. in Mat.

Aug ſerm. 13. de verbis dom. ſecundum Mat.

Orig. Tract 1. in Math.

But heare alſo what Biſhop Tunſtal, a favourer of Romiſh darkneſſe, could ſay to Cardinall Poole, in an Epiſtle written to him. Si ſuper Petrum, tum alia fundatio, &c. If upon Peter, then upon another foundation, alluding to the words of Paul. Other foundation can no man lay than they which is laid, which is Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. 3. 11. Indeed Saint Hierom ſaith, Iſtum locum Epiſcopi & Presbyteri non intelligentes, aliquid ſibi de Phariſæorum ſupercilio aſſumunt. The Biſhops and prieſts not underſtanding this place, have taken upon them ſome Phariſaicall pride, &c.

Cyp. de ſimpli. prælatorum.

Now for the Keys, as plaine againe are theſe Fathers on our ſide againſt them. Cyprian : In perſona unius, omnibus dedit claves, ut omnium unitatem notaret : hoc itaque fuerunt reliqui quod fuit Petrus pari conſortio præditi & honoris & poteſtatis : ſed exortum ab unitate factum eſt, ut Eccleſia Chriſti una demonſtraretur. In the perſon of one man Chriſt gave the keyes to all, that hee might note the unity amongſt them all : Even the ſame were the reſt that Peter was, endued with like fellowſhip, both of honour and power : but the beginning was made of one, that the Church of Chriſt might be ſhewed to be one. S. Auguſtine : Si in Petro non eſſet Eccleſiæ myſterium, non ei diceret Dominus, Tibi dabo claves : Si enim, &c. If Peter had not beene a myſtery of the Church, the Lord would not have ſaid unto him, To thee will I give the keyes : For if it was ſpoken onely to Peter, then hath not the Church that power ; and if the Church have it, then when Peter received the keyes, aſſuredly hee noted or repreſented the whole Church. Againe, the ſame Father in another place, Cum interrogati ſint omnes, ſolus Petrus reſpondet, & ei dicitur, Tibi dabo claves, quaſi ligandi & ſolvendi ſolus acciperet poteſtatem, cum & illud unus pro omnibus diceret, & hoc cum omnibus, tanquam perſonam gerens unitatis acciperet. When they were all asked, onely Peter anſwered, and to him it was ſaid, To thee will I give the keyes, as though he onely had received the power of binding and looſing, when indeed, as he ſpake for all, ſo he received this with all, bearing as it were in himſelfe the perſon of that unity that was amongſt them all.

Tract. in Iohn 50.

Orig. Tract. 1. in Mat.

Origen upon Matthew, Tibi dabo claves, cæteris quoque, &c. This ſaying, To thee will I give the keyes of heaven, is common to all : and thoſe things that follow, ſpoken as it were to Peter, are alſo common to all. Our learned Country-man Beda moſt plainly : Poteſtas ligandi & ſolvendi, quamvis ſoli Petro à Domino data videatur, tamen abſq; ulla dubitatione, &c. The power of binding and looſing, although only to Peter it ſeemeth to be given of the Lord, yet without all doubt it muſt be knowne that alſo to the other Diſciples it was given. Which expoſitions, as they are the reverend teſtimonies of grave antiquitie, ſo ought they in all modeſt mindes, not given over to wilfull obſtinacy and waywardneſſe, ſtrike this queſtion out of queſtion, of any proud primacy contrary to Chriſts Kingly office, eyther in Peter or any other whatſoever, as I ſaid before unto them. For more ſtrength you may adde the words of the Apoſtle to the Corinthians, God hath given us (marke, not to Peter alone) the miniſtery of reconciliation. Well therefore was it gathered and concluded againſt them, that if Chriſt had diſpoſed of the ſupremacy in theſe words to Peter, and made him chiefe over them all, then would not they, neyther durſt they have contended any more about that matter : but evident it is, that they did contend after, and therefore full well they knew the Lord meant no ſuch matter in that ſpeech. Reade of their contending in Mat. 20. 24. Luke 22. 24. Laſtly, conſider with your ſelfe Peters whole life after, and ſee if ever he tooke any ſuch ſuperiority upon him. No, he lived, ſpake, did every way, as a fellow, not as a Maſter, yeelding an account of his actions, and undergoing any ſervice impoſed upon him by the Church. Wherefore take this as a taſte of that truth we hold, and of their error that ſay the contrary, and I ſtay here.

2 Cor. 5. 18. Apoc. 9 1.

Iohn 21. 15, 16, 17.

What ſay you to Feed, feed, and Confirme thy Brethren, and I have prayed for thee, &c. Do not theſe words make Peter primate? &c.

Alas, what is in any of theſe, that is not common to others, feeding as his place requireth, confirming of others that are weake, Chriſt prayed for him, it being expreſſed by Chriſt himſelfe,

Iohn 17.

I pray not for theſe, but for all that ſhall beleeve through their words? &c. And if in reſpect of Peters great great fall, Christ had care to grace him the more, both for his comfort in time of neede, and others instruction not to despise him for his weakness, must therefore the Bishop of Rome challenge a Primacy over the world? What a consequence is this? but as the belly hath no eares, so men given over of God to beleeve lies, because they had not a love to the truth, shall have neither eyes to see, nor hearts to understand, that they might turne and bee healed. In our consciences can we thinke, that if Christ in these words: Feed, feed, had made Peter the Pastor of his universall Church, that it would have beene so strange to him to goe to the Gentiles, as wee reade it was? No, he would have known his charge, and regarded his charge without such vision of a sheete, such commandement further, &c. But still in our eyes let antiquity bee reverent and move us. Heare you therefore how Saint Augustine understood this place: Cum Petro dicitur, &c. When it is said to Peter, it is said to all: Loveſt thou me, feed, feed, &c. Farre then was S. Augustine from dreaming of a Primacy to Peter in these words. Heare how S. Ambrose understood it; Dominus dixit Petro, pasce, &c. The Lord said to Peter, feed my sheep, which sheep, and which flock, not onely blessed Peter then received, but with us hee received them, and with him we also all received them. S. Basil againe, Petre amas me? &c. Et consequenter omnibusque pastoribus ſq; & doctoribus eandem potestatē tribuit, &c. Peter loveſt thou me? &c. And consequently to all the Pastors and Doctors of the Church he gave the same power. A signe whereof is this, that all equally bind and loose as well as Peter. Many like testimonies could I shew, if these sufficed not fully to satisfie any reasonable heart how farre this place is abused when they goe about to prove Peters Supremacy and his supposed Successors.

Act. 10. & 11.

Aug. Dracone christiano. c. 30. Amb. de dignit. sacerd. cap. 2.

Basil de vita solitaria cap. 23

Certainly the darkneſſe is great which by this light cannot be overcome: but Gods judgements are a great depth, not for us to seek a bottome of, yet even for more satisfaction (if it need) and for more manifestation of the truth, what say you to reason? Is it not expedient in the Church of God for interpretation of Scriptures & hard doubts, to have such a head in earth, in whose voice al controversie may stay?

Saint Augustine and other old fathers give divers rules how to expound the hard and doubtfull places of Scripture, and yet never mention this way, which it had beene impossible for them to forget, if there had beene any such matter: nay, how needlesse were all those other rules and wayes, if God ordained such a chaire in this world. Judge therefore how foolish a dreame this is. Secondly, call to remembrance what worthy learning hath beene in some Bishops of Rome to performe such a service by, when Alphonsus de Castro witnesseth, that they knew not so much as Grammer, much lesse Divinity, and lest of all the deepe and difficult mysteries in the same, that they might expresse them to the contentment aud satisfaction of all doubters in the world. Alas for pity that men should reckon to be led by such as are more blind than themselves, and yet think to escape the ditch to, But what if they were hereticks also grosse and grievous, were they not like then to expound doubts well, and the Church like to receive some sucke from them? Remember Liberius an Arrian, Honorius an Eunomian, &c. Remember Sylvester the second, and Hildebrand which was called Gregory the seventh, with others, foule and damnable dealers with devils and Necromancy. Thirdly, consider how Leo himselfe being master of this chaire, sent to Ravenna to be resolved and satisfied in a doubt, so far was he from challenging this power to him and his chaire. And how the Bishops of Numidia sent to Cyprian & not to Rome to be satisfied, with such other examples divers, all shewing the falshood of this error.

Marcellinus offered unto Idols. Iohn the 23. denied the immortality of the soule; the resurrection of the body, and life everlasting. Leo 10. with indignation called a testimony of Scripture cited by Bembus a tale. Remember Iohn 13. taken and killed in the act of adultery. Alexander 6. convinced of incest.

Yet is there not use of them to appease Controversies, and to call Councels, &c?

Many good men be appeasers of Controversies, and yet challenge no soveraignty over their brethren for it, much lesse over all the world. As Saint Ambrose when he went into Franc to stay contentions, with many others. And for calling of Councels, good testimonies of story will tell us Christian Princes ever did it, the Bishops of Rome comming themselves upon such summons, and not taking the authority to send for others. Therefore neither will these pretences serve to ground that proud Primacy upon you plainely see. And so being indeed without ground, I might here stay, and say no more, yet for our fuller satisfaction wee may thinke of these points further. First, how Peter hath his limits set over the Circumcision, Gal. 2. 7. and not over the Gentiles, much lesse over all, where God could have set Paul over the Circumcision, and have made Peter, Doctor Gentium, the teacher of the Gentiles if hee had would: but hee foresaw this foule error then, which by that meanes would have beene much strengthened. Secondly, how ever when the Apostles contended about superiority, Christ hit them with this, vos autem non sic, with you it shall not bee so, unto which that agreeth after of S. Paul: Wee together are Gods labourers, and whether it be Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, all are yours: and that of Peter himselfe, Not as Lords over Gods heritage. but as examples to the flocke, &c. Thirdly, those words againe of our Saviour: As my Father sent me so I send you, but hee was not sent to carry any earthly government in worldly pompe over Kings and Princes, and making them kisse his feet, hold his stirrop, &c. Therefore not his Apostles. Fourthly, the Apostle S. Paul so often making mention of the Head of the Church, could hee, or would hee quite forget this great Bishop of Rome and his Successors, and never tell us of their great office and authority over us, and of our necessary duties and subjection to them? Surely hee would never have forgotten

Luke 22. 1. Cor. 3. 9, 22. 1 Pet. 5. 3. Iohn 20. 21.

Peter, you may think, being both his fellow Apoſtle and deare unto him. No, if he had beene appointed but a miniſteriall Head of the Church, hee would not have concealed ſo much, neither indeed had it beene faithfulneſſe in him, if he had, proteſting that hee delivered all the Counſell of God, and kept nothing back. Fiftly, conſider what I once mentioned before, how Peter never tooke any ſuch ſtate upon him, nor the Church acknowledged any ſuch office in him: but when he (being over the Circumciſion) went to the Gentiles, hee was called to an account, and brotherly cleareth himſelfe: hee is ſent into Samaria, and obeyed in the Counſell; as hee ſpeaketh, ſo he heareth others, and yeeldeth: he writeth as his fellow-miniſters, and equall in function with him, he is rebuked of Paul, and told his fault to his face, &c. All Arguments of a heart free, in that bleſſed Apoſtle, from this dreame, with many ſuch like places moe. Sixtly, how S. Paul writing to the Epheſians, exhorteth them to unity by this Argument; That there is one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſme, one Body, one Spirit, one hope of vocation, one God, and Father of all, &c. Never mentioning amongſt all theſe once one Viſible and miniſteriall Head here in earth, which yet had beene moſt fit to have beene named, had there beene any ſuch ordained of God. Againe, in the ſame place how hee extolleth them, of Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts, Doctors, and Paſtors, given for the government and inſtruction of the Church; never againe mentioning a greater univerſall Paſtor over all, that could not erre, that might not bee gaineſaid, that had both ſwords, that ſhould ride on mens ſhoulders, that ſhould crowne and uncrowne Kings with his heeles, that might diſpenſe with the Scriptures, that excelled the Emperor, as farre as the Sunne doth the Moone, &c. Could not the Apoſtle ſee ſuch a mote as this? O think of it, &c. Laſtly, how themſelves Biſhops of Rome, before Satan had full poſſeſſion of that ſeate, moſt truely acknowledged, and moſt religiouſly avoided this pride. Elutherius, about the yeere of our Lord, 177. writing to King Lucius, the firſt Chriſtian King of this Realme, ſaid to him thus: Tu es O Rex in regno tuo ſummi Dei vicarius: Thou art O King in thy Kingdome, the Vicar of the great God. William Rufus in his time, ſaw this Antichriſtian pride in Romiſh Biſhops; and therefore made a Law againſt ſo much reſorting to them, ſaying; Quia Petri veſtigiis non inhærent, præmiis inhiantes, nec ejus poteſtatem retinent, cujus ſanctitatem probantur non imitari: Becauſe they walk not in the pathes of Peter, but gape for gifts, neither doe they retaine his power, whoſe Holineſſe they are eaſily proved not to imitate. Gregory alſo, a Biſhop of Rome, ſaid: Ego fidenter dico, quiſquis ſe univerſalem vocat, vel vocari deſiderat in elatione ſua, Antichriſtum præcurrit. I ſpeak it boldly, whoſoever doth call himſelfe univerſall Prieſt, or deſireth to be ſo called, in his pride, he is the forerunner of Antichriſt. Againe, in another place he called this name a puffe of pride, a new name, a raſh word, fooliſh, proud, pompous, perverſe, ſuperſtitious, prophane, wicked; a name of error, a name of ſingularity, a name of vanity, a name of hypocriſie, a name of blaſphemy. Et nullus Deceſſorum meorum hoc tam profano vocabulo uti conſenſit, nos hunc honorem nolumus oblatum ſuſcipere: And none of my Predeceſſors ever conſented to uſe this profane word: my ſelfe would not receive this honor if it were offered. Quid tu Chriſto dices univerſalis Eccleſiæ capiti, in extremi judicii examine: qui cuncta ejus membra tibimet conaris hoc nomine univerſalis Epiſcopi ſupprimere? What wilt thou anſwer Chriſt the Head of the univerſall Church at the laſt Judgement day, for going about to bring all his Members in ſubjection to thy ſelfe, by this Name and Title of Univerſall Biſhop? The great Counſell of Nice and others alſo, divided the government of the univerſall Church to foure Patriarches, and gave it not to one Biſhop: notwithſtanding, they knew how needfull unity was.

Acts 11.3. Acts 8.14. Acts 15. 1 Pet. 5.1. Gal. 2.11.

Epheſ. 4.4.

Epiſt. 34.

Epiſt. 36.

This was Biſhop Tunſtals Argument when time was, but whither doe I runne in this vaine Dreame? This is enough if it bee not too much; pride began it, and the puniſher of pride will confound it in one day whole, as mercifully already he hath done in part. Peter never had it, never ſought it, ever abhorred it, and yet what Peter had, may not by and by be the Popes.

Having then thus ſpoken of Chriſt his Kingly Office, and of the proud croſſing Primacy challenged in Rome: the next point if you pleaſe to ſhew how alſo he was anointed a Prophet for us, and in regard thereof called Chriſt.

Firſt, generally of the name of Prophet, and then particularly of Chriſt. A Prophet with the Hebrews hath his Name either of a Word that ſignifieth to ſpeake, becauſe they ſpake the will of God to his people; or, of a word that ſignifieth to come, which in two reſpects agreeth to a Prophet, either becauſe people come to him, to bee reſolved of doubts and ſecrets; as 1 Sam. 9. when the Aſſes were loſt, and 1 Sam. 28. Saul in extremity would goe to conſult with the dead Prophet, in reſpect of which hee was called a Seer, or becauſe the Lord did, as it were, come to the Prophet by illuminating his minde with knowledge and underſtanding of his will, that he might reveale it to men. Of the Grecians he hath this name, either of ſaying; to wit, what before was opened unto him, or of interpreting obſcure Oracles, or ſimply becauſe hee foretelleth things to come, &c: Abraham is ſaid to be a Prophet, Becauſe hee was familiar with God, indeed with a ſingular ſpirit, having conference with God by viſions. Aaron is ſaid to bee a Prophet to Moſes, that is, an interpreter of his ſpeech to Pharaoh, becauſe Moſes ſpake not plaine. All which being conſidered & put together, we ſee, to propheſie, is to tell things paſt and done, done, as Moſes who writeth what was done long before he was borne: or things to come, as Eſay, Ieremy, Daniel, and the reſt, to expound and open propheſies word for word, to ſing Pſalmes and ſongs to God, as Aſaph and others, 1 *Chron.*25. 1 Kings 18. 29. to preach and open the ſenſe of the Scriptures, to teach, to exhort, to admoniſh, comfort, &c. 1. *Cor.*24. *Eph.*4. Of Prophets ſome be true and ſome be falſe, 1 Kings 22. *I will be a lying ſpirit in the mouths of all his prophets. Matt.*24. 2 *Pet.*2. Beware of them. The markes of falſe prophets be theſe and ſuch like: To tell a falſhood, to tell truth in the name of another god, or with a purpoſe to deceive, to tell things to come in a rage and fury, diſtracted and disfigured, and not underſtanding themſelves what they ſay, &c. Markes of true Prophets, verity, piety, underſtanding, &c. Verity, when things told are done; Piety, exhorting others to it, and themſelves following it carefully in all things; Underſtanding, when not diſtracted, but ſober and quiet, they well know what they ſay and doe, ſpeaking the words of truth and ſoberneſſe, Acts 26.25. The uſuall meanes laid downe were viſions and dreames, by which God was wont to reveale his will to his Prophets, yet had they Schooles and Univerſities, and were trained up in learning & knowledge, 2. *King.*1. and ſometimes God by extraordinary inſtinct and motion, ſtirred up men according to his wil, ſo were thoſe ſeventy, *num.*12. One of this calling did the Lord ever raiſe up to his people, according to his promiſe, that ſhould inſtruct his people in truth: yet ſo, that ever the minds of the godly were filled with this doctrine, that the Meſſiah ſhould come in the appointed time, a Prophet above all prophets, by whom all fulneſſe of knowledge, and the finall revelation of the truth ſhould come to the Church of God. Yea, the very Samaritans knew thus much, as appeareth by the womans ſpeech in the fourth of Iohn, I know well that the Meſſiah ſhall come, which is called Chriſt, when he is come he will tell us all things: According to which, in the fulneſſe of time, he came anointed our Teacher, Maſter, Inſtructer, and Prophet, to open the way of ſalvation fully unto us. The Lord thy God, ſaith Moſes, will raiſe up unto thee a Prophet like unto me from among you, even of your brethren, unto him you ſhall hearken. Vnto us a child is borne, ſaith Eſay, & you ſhall call his name Counſeller, becauſe to the Church aſſuredly he ſhall deliver the great counſell of his Father.

Gen. 20. Exod. 7.1.

Numb.12.

Iohn 4.25.

Deut.19.15.

Eſay 9.6.

Againe, Behold I gave him for a witneſſe to the people, for a Prince, and for a Maſter unto the people. The Spirit of the Lord is upon mee, and hath anointed me that I ſhould preach the Goſpel to the poore, hee hath ſent me that I ſhould heale the broken-hearted, that I ſhould preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of ſight to the blinde, that I ſhould ſet at liberty thoſe that are bruiſed, &c. Which place our Saviour applieth to himſelfe, and acknowledgeth, that in him it was fulfilled. Reade the ninth of Daniel, 29. and Iohn 15.15. In Matthew, This is my beloved Sonne, heare him. The Apoſtle Paul ſaith, He was made unto us not onely redemption and righteouſneſſe, but wiſedome alſo: That is, a Prophet fully endued with all ability to teach his Church: Yea, In him (ſaith the Apoſtle) are hid all treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge. And to the Hebrewes, In theſe laſt dayes hee hath ſpoken unto us by his Sonne: attributing unto him all perfection and fulneſſe above any Fathers or Prophets whatſoever that ſpake before him. In reſpect whereof, even our Saviour himſelfe forbiddeth his Diſciples to be called Maſters, yeelding his reaſon, for ye have but one Maſter. Theſe are ſufficient proofes of this office in our Saviour, in regard whereof alſo hee is called, Chriſt, anointed.

Chap.55.4.

Eſay 61.1. Luke 4. Matt.3. 16,17. Matt.17.5.

Coloſ.2.3.

But was there not a difference betwixt the anointing of our Saviour Chriſt, and the reſt of the Prophets in the Old Teſtament?

Yes indeed, for theſe, as you have heard, were anointed but with outward and typicall Oile; partly for a ceremony of their ordination and office, partly for a ſymbol, of neceſſary gifts to bee beſtowed upon them, fit for that office: but Chriſt was not anointed ceremonially and typically, but really with the holy Ghoſt, and that above his fellowes: ſo they in meaſure, hee above and without meaſure, Iohn 3. 34. And as thus betwixt their anointings there was difference, ſo in their office: for they were Prophets and Teachers, but not chiefe or higheſt, which Chriſt was, of whom all other prophets were ſent, and whatſoever they ſpake, by his Spirit they ſpake it, drawing all from his fulneſſe, Iohn 1.18. Iohn 15.15. The uſe of all which is, that wee content our ſelves with this only Prophet, and with his doctrine, which in all things is abſolute and perfect. For as it is ſaid by God; It ſhall come to paſſe, that whoſoever will not hearken unto my words which he ſhall ſpeak in my name, I will require it of him. And, If an Angel ſhall preach unto you otherwiſe, let him be accurſed, &c. Which uſe of the Papiſts hath been little obſerved, who moſt grieuouſly have abuſed Chriſts doctrine, and added to the ſame many patches of their owne inventings, as five Sacraments, Limbum patrum & puerorum, Purgatory, pilgrimages, &c. making thereby Chriſt our Lord not to have dealt faithfully with his Church, in delivering to it a full and perfect doctrine of ſalvation, as by his office of being a prophet was required, which once to thinke is moſt damnable injury.

Deut.19. Gal.1.

The third office remaineth in regard whereof he is called Chriſt, namely his Prieſthood.

Concerning his prieſthood, thinke with your ſelfe as ſome introduction to the conſideration of it, how man created in innocency fell from it; how in that miſery, comfort and helpe was promiſed in the ſeed of the woman: how that promiſe was confirmed by externall ſacrifices, as ſignes and viſible aſſurances of the ſame. How theſe ſacrifices were offered ſtill by the Maſter of the Family, his firſt borne ſucceeding him in that honor, till God choſe the tribe of Levi for that purpoſe, and exempted all the other Tribes from any further dealing that way; how this courſe continued till Chriſt our Saviour came, who was the truth of all thoſe figuring ſacrifices, and was anointed a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedeck, not with typicall oile, as they in the law, Exod. 29. but with the holy Ghoſt, and with an oath alſo, which they wanted, Pſal. 110.4. Heb. 7.21.22.

What now then appertaineth to his Prieſthood?

Conſider the difference betwixt Chriſt his Prieſthood, and theirs of the law, and it will give ſome light to your queſtion. The Prieſts of the law were but figurative and typicall, executing that office for a time; but Chriſt is the true Biſhop of our ſoules, and a Prieſt for ever, as hath been ſaid. Secondly, the Prieſts of the law were ſinners, and therefore needed dayly to offer up ſacrifice, firſt for their owne ſinnes, and then for the peoples: But Chriſt is an high Prieſt, holy, harmeleſſe, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners, and made higher than the heavens. Thirdly, they offered other ſacrifices, and that dayly; Chriſt offered himſelfe, and but once. Laſtly, the high Prieſt entred into the holy Place every yeare with other blood, and prayed for the people; Chriſt having redeemed us by his owne blood, entred once, not into the holy places that are made with hands, which are ſimilitudes of the true Sanctuary, but into very heaven, to appeare now in the ſight of God for us. By all which you may ſee thus much, that Chriſt partly performed his Prieſtly office in earth, and partly yet performeth it in heaven. In earth hee offered for us to his Father, firſt, his prayers, Ioh. 17. Heb. 5.7. then his owne body upon the Croſſe, Heb. 7.27. and thereby took away our ſins. In heaven he yet appeareth for us before the face of his Father, with this his ſacrifice once made for us, and available for ever for our reconciliation, Heb. 9.24 and 10.12. Wherefore there appertaineth to his office of Prieſthood mediation; for a Prieſt is inſtituted of God that he might bee (as it were) middle perſon betwixt him and the people. And to his mediation it belongeth that by prayer he make interceſſion, and by a ſacrifice or offering, an atonement and ſatisfaction.

Hebr. 7.27.

Chap. 9.25.

Rom. 8.34.

And doe not the Papiſts hold thus much?

In words they will make ſome ſhew, but your ſelfe be judge how their deeds anſwer. For how reſerve they to him this his honour of mediation onely, which you ſee aſcribed to him by this office of his Prieſthood, when they joyne creatures with him, yea preferre them before him, as more merciſull and pittifull, and therefore more uſually prayed unto and called upon by them? Beſide that damnable conſequence, that by this meanes they muſt bee omniſcient to know all that is done here on earth, and omnipotent, able to helpe when they know and are prayed unto. Otherwiſe, if either they knew not when we ſpeak, or cannot help when we want, why ſhould prayers be made to them? Then how deale they with his ſacrifice, when the Scripture plainly affirming, firſt, that being once made and offered by him, it never needeth to be done any more; and ſecondly, that it is ever available before God to the comfort and good of the true beleever, although but once offered; and they flatly tranſgreſſe from both by their damnable Maſſe, wherein and whereby they will have him dayly offered, yea, ſo many times a day as there bee maſſes in the world, aud that for the ſinnes of the quicke and the dead, Chriſts owne ſacrifice of himſelfe being not ſufficient? O ſinfull derogation from the Lords death, from his love, mercie, and favour ſhewed towards us in ſuch an high meaſure, if they had eyes to ſee it! And as groſſe a gain-ſaying of moſt plaine Scriptures, together with a proud ſetting up of an humane invention in ſtead and place of all this.

Heb. 9.26. once for all, & 10.12. & 18. once for ever.

You mention now that foule Idol of the Popiſh Maſſe, and may you not for ſome light to thoſe that will any way abandon wilfulneſſe, and ſeeke to underſtand the truth, ſhew ſome few reaſons againſt this wickedneſſe, without entring into any long diſcourſe, as the matter affordeth?

I may follow your mind: and yet when I have done, what is done but that which before by others hath beene done, and with wilfull, wayward, head-ſtrong perſons, deceivers of themſelves, doth no good: but the Spirit bloweth as where he liſteth, ſo when hee liſteth, and wee muſt abide both the Lords leyſure and pleaſure, and doe what we can.

Reaſons againſt the Popiſh maſſe.
Matth. 15.
Ier. 7.23. reade the place.
Rom. 12.1.
Rom. 15.
Heb 13.15.
Phil 4.
Phil. 2.
1 Pet. 2.5.
Apoc 10.

Firſt then conſider that every lawfull ſacrifice muſt have the warrant of the Word: for in vaine is God worſhipped with doctrines and devices of men: But the Popiſh Maſſe hath no warrant by ſo much as a title of Gods word, as we boldly affirme, till they ſhew the contrary, and then ſhall ſufficiently be able to anſwer what they ſhew: Therefore the maſſe is no lawfull ſacrifice. Secondly, whereſoever the Scripture ſpeaketh of ſacrifices to be offered by the Church now in the time of the Goſpell, it maketh them ſpirituall, as by the places quoted may moſt plainly appeare. Therefore away with all reall offerings never mentioned by the Lord, ſince the onely ſufficient ſacrifice of his Sonne. Thirdly, the maſſe caſts upon our Saviour this reproach, that he is not the onely Prieſt of the new Teſtament, which ſo expreſly is taught of him, Heb. 5.6. and 7.24 Fourthly, it overthrowes the merit of his death and paſſion, whilſt it makes our ſinnes not to be taken away by his owne ſacrifice as wee are taught they are, Heb. 10.12.14. but by the merit merit of the Maſſe. Fiftly, it overthroweth the holy Sacrament of the Lords Supper, it being impoſſible that they ſhould both ſtand together. For in the Sacrament the Lords purpoſe is to give us; Iohn 6.32. but in the Maſſe they give to God a price wherewith he muſt hold himſelfe ſatisfied. In the Sacrament the Lord teſtifieth unto us that with the one ſacrifice of Chriſt we are daily quickned, but in the Maſſe they teach that Chriſts ſacrifice profiteth nothing, unleſs it bee daily iterated by them. The Sacrament is celebrated by the whole Church, and the Maſſe by the Prieſt alone. Every doctrine that includeth contradiction in it ſelfe is falſe, but this doctrine of offering up Chriſt in the Maſſe doth ſo, therefore it is falſe. The contradictions are theſe and ſuch like. They ſay it is a ſacrifice reall, and yet inviſible, and the thing ſacrificed inviſible, which cannot be. Againe, they ſay it is Chriſt that they offer, and yet they pray God to accept it, which is abſurd. No Prieſt can doe more in ſacrificing for our ſinnes than Chriſt could. But Chriſt could not offer himſelfe without death, Therefore no Prieſt can do it. The words of the Apoſtle are plaine; For then muſt he often have ſuffered, Heb.9.26. But Chriſt dieth no more. Rom.6. Laſtly, the errors and blaſphemies that are to be found in the Canon of the Maſſe, ſhew how truely deteſtable it is and ought to be to all faithfull men and women ever. And if you deſire examples of what I ſay, take theſe inſtead of many moe ; The Prieſt ſpeaking of the bread and wine, ſaith, which we offer unto thee for thy holy Catholike Church; and for the redemption of our ſoules. A wicked blaſphemie to ſay bread and wine can do what in ſuch tender love God gave his Sonne, and the Sonne his owne life to doe. The Prieſt ſaith againe, worſhipping the memoriall of the Virgine, when the inſtitution is plaine ; Doe this in remembrance of me; Not of the Virgin, or any Saint whatſoever, Againe (they ſay) by whoſe merits and prayers (meaning Saints and creatures) we pray to be defended. Ah ſweet Saviour, what thankfulneſſe to thee is this to exclude thy merits, and accept of Saints merits? Doth thy humble birth, thy painefull life and moſt bitter death deſerve this at theſe mens hands, to have thy creatures and ſervants preferred before thee? But this is Popery, Lord, this is Popery, the only Religion as they ſay to be imbraced and followed. For thy mercy ſake open mens eyes to ſee it in his true colours, and to touch their hearts to love thee as thou deſerveſt. They pray God to make their oblation bleſſed in all things, and yet ſay it is very Chriſt that they offer, as though hee were not bleſſed already, and every way bleſſed without their unholy prayers. They pray God to behold their offering with a pleaſant countenance, in another place, and to accept it as he did vouchſafe to accept the righteous gift of bleſſed Abel, and the ſacrifice of Abraham. Not remembring or regarding the Scriptures that tell us Chriſt is ever acceptable to his Father, and his beloved Sonne in whom he is well pleaſed, not conſidering how wicked it is in them to compare the Sacrifice of Chriſt himſelfe, his owne body, his owne blood, really and ſubſtantially (for ſo they ſay it is) to the ſacrifice of bruite beaſts, which Abel and Abraham offered, and to ſeeme to attribute as much efficacy to the one, as to the other ; not conſidering how proudly, how fooliſhly, and abſurdly they make themſelves Mediators to God for his Sonne, when they ſhould joy and reſt onely in the mediation of him for them. Command thou againe ſay they, theſe to be brought by the hands of thy holy Angels unto thy high altar in heaven. Moſt abſurdly deſiring that to bee carried up into heaven which they eate and devoure. What needeth the helpe againe from an Angell, to carry it up into heaven, if it be the body of Chriſt ? Is not Chriſt able to lift up his owne body, that could aſcend when hee had finiſhed his time here upon earth ? or what need Chriſt to be conveighed to heaven, whom the heavens (as wee are taught) muſt containe till hee come unto judgement, and who ſitteth at the right hand of God his Father ſtill, as this abridgement of Faith doth aſſure and tell us ? Is not this good ſtuffe and ſound divinity? but heare more. Remember O Lord (ſay they) the ſoules of thy ſervants, which reſt in the ſleepe of peace, and grant them a place of refreſhing and reſt. Here is an other groſſe error to pray for the dead, contrary to all Scriptures, and a contradiction. Secondly in the prayer, they firſt affirming that the dead do reſt in peace, and yet after praying for reſt and refreſhing for them, &c. Many ſuch filthy flowers is their Maſſe ſtrewed withall if any man read the Canon and booke it ſelfe of an old print , but it is tedious to repeat them. Onely this one more I cannot paſſe over, and that is thus; Let the Prieſt bow himſelfe, ſaith the booke, to the hoſt, and ſay, I worſhip thee, I glorifie thee, I praiſe thee; and againe, Let us worſhip the ſigne of the croſſe. Is not this Idolatry fearefull and damnable ? The Scriptures ſay, worſhip God, and him onely ſhalt thou ſerve, a peece of bread is not God, neither any figure of a croſſe. Wherefore let it be called the Maſſe, becauſe it doth Miſſe the truth of God ſo greatly and grievouſly, and let the ſaying be true of it; Si ſpectes quantitatem vocis duæ ſunt tantum ſyllabæ, ſi pondus iniquitatis, eſt univerſa pernicies. If you reſpect the quantity of the word, it ſtandeth but upon two ſyllables, but if you conſider the weight of iniquity, it containeth all impiety, and is wholly ungodlineſſe. Wherefore let the uſe be to hold our ſelves contented with Chriſts onely Prieſthood, and ſacrifice once made upon the croſſe for us, knowing that if we ſin, we have him an advocate with the Father, and he is the propitiation for our ſins, and for the ſins of the whole world.

1 Cor.11.18. Cap.10.17. Mat.26.27.

Maſſe of Miſſing.

Gregor.

1 Iohn 2. 2.

This may ſuffice, if God in wrath have not cloſed our eyes, becauſe he purpoſeth to deſtroy us. Therefore now, if you like, to the words following; His onely Sonne our Lord.

He

He is called, God his onely Sonne, to distinguish him from adopted sonnes, meaning his onely naturall sonne. To be the adopted sonne of God is a great priviledge; if you respect the Father, it is God, a King; if your inheritance, it is heaven a kingdome, if your clothing, it is the righteousnes of Christ, if your meat, it is the heavenly Manna, if your servants, they are Angels. The Scriptures thus teach us, who of beleevers say thus, that they have received the spirit of adoption, whereby they cry Abba Father, that is, the Spirit that witnesseth unto them, they are accepted, and taken for sonnes of God; Rom. 8.15. Being thereto predestinated through Iesus Christ. Ephes. 1.5. And of Christ they teach that he is not an adopted sonne as we, but a naturall sonne, as I said, and coeternall with his Father. For we say, saith the Apostle, the glory of the word, that was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, as the glory of the onely begotten Son of the Father full of grace and truth. The use of this Title may be first to assure us that our faith, grounded upon Christ, is a true and right faith, because he is the true onely naturall Sonne of God. Secondly, to expresse unto us that unsearchable love of the Father, who spared not so deare a Jewell, but gave him for us that we might be saved. Lastly, to amplifie the Articles following of his birth and passion, which all have a greater edge by this Title and true nature of Christ. The Title of Lord is given him to shew us how all things in heaven and earth are given him to governe, and how indeed he governeth them. Our Lord he is called, because indeed he is ours many waies. Ours by Creation, for he made us, and we are his, and he ours. Ours by redemption, for he redeemed us. Ours by Mediation, for he is our Intercessor. Ours by government, for he saveth us, and many moe waies, and many moe waies which I passe over, he is ours. Let that Popish Title of (our Lady) given to the blessed Virgin by them be thought of in this place, by which they calling her our Lady, as they doe God and Christ our Lord, what do they but make her equall with God and Christ in power, and redemption? In which respect God is called our Lord. For it is no terme of civill and temporall dignity and authority, as when we say, our Soveraigne Lady the Queene, but a religious and divine honour that they ascribe unto her, calling her absolutely our Lady, as blasphemously, as the French men doe ridiculously call other Saints Monsieur and Madame. Yea they call stocks and stones, Our Lady. As our Lady of Walsingham, &c. D. Fulk Annot. in Math. See Epiphan. Hæres. 78.79.

Surely the feeling hereof is very comfortable if we consider it.

Indeed it is, and very profitable to amendment of life. For hereby we are taught that Satan, Sinne, nor death, bee any Lords over us, neither yet the fiercest tyrants that ever breathed out wrath, or yet may whilst we live in this world. But Christ is our Lord if he have his due, and we doe our selves no wrong. How then suffer we sinne to make us afraid, as though it were a greater Lord than our Lord? Why shrink wee to heare of death, which is vanquished, and cannot hold us in any danger? Why stand wee heartlesse at the thundring of mortall men, for our true faith to God stirred up against us? Is not Christ our Lord, I say againe, yea and Lord of Lords, and God over all that will doe us wrong? The strength of the Master comforteth the Servant, the might of the Land-lord cheereth the Tenant, and the subject feareth not in the power of his Prince? How much more may wee bee lifted up with all spirituall joy in this our Lord, Iesus Christ his onely Sonne our Lord, wherefore feele it, feele it, and pray for feeling. God for his mercy sake give us faith and feeling. And this may suffice of this Article.

Ioh 1.14.

Heb.1.5. Rom.8.32. Esay 9.6. Mich. 5.2. Iohn 17.5. Heb.7.17. Iohn 3.

THE THIRD ARTICLE.

Which was conceived by the Holy Ghost, borne of the Virgin Mary.

SInce it was necessary that our Mediator and Saviour should be God and Man, the former Article having spoken of his Godhead, most fitly this Article followeth with his humanity, and sheweth how of the flesh and blood of the Virgin Mary, he tooke a true humane Nature by the operation of the Holy Ghost, and united it to his Godhead, which as it is a great mystery by the testimony of Saint Paul, saying; without controversie, Great is the mystery of godlinesse, which is, God is made manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, &c. So must we behave our selves, modestly and soberly in the consideration of the same. For as Saint Basil saith, this is not unto us, nor for us much to inquire how Christ is come downe here below, and wherefore God is pleased rather with such a meane than any other: For thou man, saith he, wast lost, and so recoiled backe from the face of thy God, that thou couldest not come thereunto. Now hee is humbled and brought low to come unto thee. Wouldest thou dispute much thereupon? rather acknowledge with all humility this blessing of the Sonne of God; yea and with as great affection as thou canst or maist. For conclusion, remember his admonition that religiously gave it; Hoc loco mundior auditus requiritur & purior sensus. In this place a cleane eare is required, and a pure and holy sense.

Damus.

I note how ſtill you ſay that, he remained God, and retained his divine nature notwithſtanding his conception.

Very true, he was ſtill God, of the ſubſtance of the Father, begotten of the ſubſtance of his Father before all worlds, yet became man alſo of the ſubſtance of his Mother, borne in the world, perfect God and perfect Man of a reaſonable ſoule and humane fleſh ſubſiſting. The Scriptures alſo teach us as much, as the Evangeliſt Saint Iohn, when he ſaith, that Word which was in the beginning was made fleſh, that is, being ſtill God tooke a true humane nature unto him alſo. Saint Paul, when he ſaith, his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt our Lord was made of the ſeede of David, according to the fleſh. Againe, God ſent forth his Sonne made of a woman. Vnto which if we adde ſomething touching the unchangeableneſſe of God, the matter is more plaine, as that of Saint Iames: with whom is no variableneſſe nor ſhadow of change. And that of the Prophet, I am God and am not changed. That moſt notable place againe of the Apoſtle, Of whom are the Fathers, and of whom concerning the fleſh Chriſt came, who is God over all bleſſed for ever and ever, Amen. Marke the words, who is God over all, that is, ſtill, ſtill, and ever God, notwithſtanding the taking of humane fleſh. And for the purity and immaculate holineſſe of this conception, which is often to bee inculcated into the hearts of men, often reade and conſider how the Prophets, Eſay and Haggee foreſhewed it, when they ſaid, it ſhould come to paſſe that the glory of the ſecond Temple, ſhould bee much more greater than the glory of the firſt. For it ſhould be everlaſting. Was not this truely fulfilled in this pure conception of the Sonne of God, in which the power of the Holy Ghoſt, the ſame everlaſting word hath perſonally united the humane Nature, and begunne to dwell in it as in his owne Temple? As alſo Chriſt himſelfe, nameth his body a Temple, Iohn. 2. The Prophet Haggee in his ſecond Chaptet and thirteene verſe is very plaine againe and notable. Speake, ſaith he, now to Zerubbabel, the ſonne of Shealtiel Prince of Iuda, and to Jehoſua the ſonne of Jehozadeck, the High Prieſt, and to the reſidue of the people, ſaying, Who is left among you that ſaw this houſe in her firſt glory, and how do they ſee it now? Is it not in your eyes in compariſon of it, as nothing? Yet now be of good courage O Zerubbabel, ſaith the Lord, and be of good comfort, O Jehoſua, ſon of Jehozadek the High Prieſt, and be ſtrong all ye people of the land, ſaith the Lord, and do it, for I am with you ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. Yet a little while and I will ſhake the heavens and the earth, and the Sea, and the dry land, and I will move all Nations, and the deſire of all Nations ſhall come, and I will fill this houſe with glory, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. The ſilver is mine, the gold is mine ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. The glory of this laſt houſe ſhall be greater than the firſt, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, &c. Spoken likewiſe of Chriſt his becomming of Man as the former was. Let no unfit thought therefore ever enter into you, touching the holy conception, that it ſhould any way blemiſh the Divine Nature of Chriſt, but that he remained ſtill and ever God from everlaſting. Heare what Saint Baſil ſaith: Sicut ignis ferri proprietates non tranſumit: ſic ſane etiam humana Domini caro ipſa particeps facta eſt Deitatis, non propriam ſuam tradidit imbecillitatem, As the fire taketh not to it the properties of the yron; ſo the humane fleſh of our Lord was made partaker of the Deity, but ſhe did not tranſmit her imbecillity to the Deity. Gregory Nyſſen again; Chriſtus non eſt particeps eorum imperfectionis, ſed tradidit eis (corpori & animæ) divinitatis ſuæ virtutem. Chriſt is not partaker of their infirmity, and giveth unto them (to wit of the body and the ſoule) the vertue of his Godhead. Saint Auguſtine, Injuria ſui corporis affectam non fateor deitatem, ſicut Majeſtate Deitatis glorificatam novimus carnem. I doe not confeſſe that the Deitie was blemiſhed by the body, as the body or fleſh was glorified by the Majeſty of the Deitie. Many ſuch teſtimonies have the Fathers, but theſe may ſuffice. If a great King ſeeing a little childe in the mire ready to be choaked, and ſlaine, would put off his cloathes and go in to ſave the Babe, ut pollutusne à te accuſabitur, an laudabitur ut miſericors? Shall hee bee accuſed as polluted, or rather praiſed as mercifull? Behold the Sunne beames, are they polluted by any thing they ſhine upon? How much leſſe the Divine Nature of Chriſt, Nihil ibi turpe putandum eſt, ubi ſanctificatio ſpiritus fuit, nihil ibi dicas impoſſibile ubi aderat virtus altiſſimi, nihil de humana fragilitate cogites ubi plenitudo inerat Deitatis. Wee may not thinke there may be any blemiſh where the ſanctification of the Holy Ghoſt is; we may not ſay that any thing is impoſſible, where is preſent the power of the Almighty, we may not thinke of humane frailety, where there is the fulneſſe of the Deity.

Iohn 1.24.

Rom. 1.3. Gal. 4.4. Phil. 2.7,8. Heb. 2.14.16. Iam. 1.17. Malach. 3.6.

Contra. Fœlicianum.

I pray you Sir, was Chriſt indued with a reaſonable ſoule as we are?

Apollinarius the Hereticke with his Diſciples taught that Chriſt his Deitie ſerved in ſteede of his ſoule, and that he had no other ſoule. But Chriſt his owne words confute this wickedneſs, when ſpeaking of his reaſonable ſoule, which hee had aſſumed, and not of his Deitie ſubject to no ſuch paſſion, he ſaid, my ſoule is heavy to the death. The Apoſtle alſo confuteth it, when he ſaith; in all things it behooveth him to made like unto his brethren, if in all things, then in the principall part of our humane Nature a reaſonable Soule. True Man therefore was he both for body and ſoule, and that of his Mother he was Man, that promiſe proveth, The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruſe the Serpents head: And thoſe words alſo, Behold a Virgin ſhall conceive and bring forth a Sonne, and yee ſhall call his name Emanuel; which place Saint Mathew applies to the Virgin Mary,

Heb. 2.17.

Eſay 7.14. Mat. 1.22. Luke 1.43.

Mary. Hence it came that ſhee was called, the Mother of our Lord, and hee, the fruit of her wombe; Chriſt therefore paſſed not through his Mother as water through a pipe, as that wicked Heretike Valentinus taught, neither brought his fleſh from heaven, as the Manichees dreamed, neither had a fantaſticall body, as the Marcionites held, neither framed to himſelfe a body of the Elements, as Apelles affirmeth: But was true Man, as the former Scriptures have ſhewed. Yet for his ſoule it was not derived from the Virgin as a part of her, but it was made as the ſoules of other men bee, of nothing, by the power of God, and placed in the body: and when I ſay God, I meane the whole Trinity, both for his body and his ſoule, which S. Luke doth witneſſe, when he ſaith, The holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the Almighty ſhall overſhadow thee; and therefore the holy thing that ſhall bee borne of thee, ſhall bee called the Sonne of God: Here you ſee is preſent the Higheſt, underſtand by him the Father, the fountaine and the Author of the Deity. There is preſent the power of the Almighty, to wit, the Sonne, who properly took our Nature upon him, and there is the holy Ghoſt who did overſhadow her.

Euſeb. lib. 9. cap. 13.

And why was it requiſite that our Saviour ſhould be God and Man.

Surely becauſe the worke of our Redemption required it ſo to be. For firſt, man having ſinned, man muſt be puniſhed in the juſtice of God, and make ſatisfaction. Therefore it was requiſite that he ſhould be Man. Secondly, the evill that was againſt us muſt be taken away, and the good things wee had left, reſtored. But that none could doe except hee were God. Therefore our Saviour was alſo God. The evill that was againſt us was our ſinne, Gods wrath, the tyranny of Satan, and ſuch like, too great you ſee to bee vanquiſhed and ouercome, except the conquerour ſhould be more than man. The good things we had loſt, were Wiſedome, Righteouſneſſe, Sanctification, and Eternall life. Too great things againe for any that ſhould be but man, to bring unto us. Yet Chriſt (ſaith the Apoſtle) hath brought them unto us, being made of God unto us all theſe; that as it is written, he that rejoyceth, may rejoyce in the Lord. You ſee then why Chriſt was God and Man; God as was ſhewed in the ſecond Article, and Man as now followeth to be beleeved in this Article.

What gather you out of the word, borne of the Virgin Mary?

It teacheth us the Manner, with great humility; it teacheth againe, that it was in great poverty, to the end we may be content with what eſtate ſoever the Lord layeth upon us, bee it never ſo meane, and to give God thanks for it, as Mary did. My ſoule doth magnifie the Lord, &c. It teacheth the comfort of his birth, to ſay with the Angels, Glory be to God on high, &c. Againe, it teacheth us, to our unſpeakeable comfort, that his innocency and perfect holineſs covereth and hideth our ſinnes, wherein we are conceived, that they may never come in remembrance and ſight of God to do us hurt. This himſelfe teſtifieth, when he ſaith by Iohn; I ſanctifie my ſelfe for them, that they alſo may be ſanctified by the truth. He that vouchſafeth this favour, vouchſafe us alſo that thankfull feeling that is our due from us for the ſame. Amen, Amen.

Iohn 17.19.

THE FOVRTH ARTICLE.

Suffered under Pontius Pilate, &c.

TO the true knowledge of Chriſt, two points are neceſſary; namely, the knowledge of his Perſon, and the knowledge of his Office. Concerning his Perſon, in the former Articles wee have beene informed: And now followeth the Doctrine of his Office in the foure next following Articles. It conſiſteth of two points againe; to wit, of an Humiliation, and of an Exaltation. The Humiliation is expreſſed firſt generally in the word Suffered, and then particularly in his ſeverall degrees, Dead, buried, deſcended into Hell.

What then, I pray you, is firſt meant by this word Suffered?

In ſenſe thus much: I beleeve, that during the whole time of his abode here upon Earth, and eſpecially at his laſt end, he ſuſtained both in his Body, and Soule, the Wrath of God kindled againſt all makinde for ſinne, to the end, that by that Paſſion of his, as by a full, ſufficient, and perfect ſacrifice propitiatory, he might winne unto us, and for us, the favour of God, righteouſneſs, and everlaſting Peace. This ſuffering is plainely expreſſed by the Prophet Eſay in thoſe words: Surely he hath borne our infirmities, and carried our ſorrowes, yet we did judge him as plagued and ſmitten of God, and humbled: but he was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, he was broken for our iniquities, the chaſtiſement of our Peace was upon him, and with his ſtripes we are healed. Alſo by the Apoſtle Saint Peter: Chriſt hath ſuffered for our ſinnes, the Iuſt for the Vnjuſt, that he might bring us to God, and was put to death concerning the fleſh, but was quickned by the Spirit. And in the former Chapter againe: Who his owne ſelfe bare our ſinnes in his Body on the Tree, that wee being dead to ſinne, ſhould live to righteouſneſſe, by whoſe ſtripes wee were healed. Behold (ſaith Iohn) the Lambe of God, that taketh away the ſins of the World; namely, by his ſuffering: Who when hee was reviled,

Eſay 53.4,5.

1 Pet 3.18.
1 Pet.2.24.
Iohn 1.29.

reviled, reviled not againe, &c. Where we ſee ſome manner of his ſuffering.

But Chriſt being both God and Man, Whether did he ſuffer in both natures, or onely in one, and if but in one, in which?

My words before ſhewed this, when I ſaid in Body and Soule he ſuffered, that is, in his humane Nature, onely his Deity being not ſubject to any change, as alſo hath beene ſhewed before, and ſhall more againe hereafter in fit place: and my words both there and here are grounded upon the Scriptures, the Apoſtle ſpeaking thus to the Corinthians, That he was crucified concerning his infirmity, but liveth through the power of God. And Peter againe, as I noted before, That he was put to death concerning the fleſh, but was quickned by the Spirit. Now in his humanity I ſay he ſuffered, both in Body and Soule; the firſt being proved in theſe words, He bare our ſinnes in his Body upon the Croſſe: and the ſecond by his owne words, when he ſaid, My Soule is heavy to the death: beſides many other Scriptures. 2 Cor.13.4. 1 Pet.3.18.

You ſeeme alſo to note the time, how long he ſuffered.

I do ſo, when I ſay, During the whole time of his abode here on Earth, and eſpecially at his laſt end: And how true both are, conſider with your ſelfe. The firſt, is to be gathered from the Apoſtle, when he ſaith: He made himſelfe of no reputation, and tooke on him the forme of a ſervant, and was made like unto Men, and was found in ſhape as a Man, &c. For when did Chriſt thus humble himſelfe, but even as ſoone as he was conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, and borne of the Virgin Mary. Therefore even with his Conception his Suffering beganne. And if you obſerve S. Mathewes words, his very Conception was ſubject to ſome ignominy and hard conceit in Ioſeph himſelfe, till he was better taught. His Birth was ioyned to poverty great and extraordinary; by and by followed danger, by Herod to be deſtroyed; then flight into Ægypt, with one thing after another, as we plainly ſee: till his reſt was wrought by cruell death. See then how he ſuffered in Body from his firſt beginning whileſt he lived. And for the ſecond point, that this was chiefely and moſt of all at his end, who can deny it; he then being betrayed of his owne ſervant, taken by the Souldiers, led before the High Prieſts, then to the Iudge, then to Herod, and backe againe to Pilate, buffited, ſpit upon, and every way abuſed, crowned with Thornes, matched with Theeves, a Murtherer preferred before him, condemned without fault, and cruelly crucified, which was an accurſed death, feeling and bearing in his very ſoule, alſo, the burthen of his Fathers wringing wrath, due unto Man for his offences; yea, due to you, and due to me, to our eternall woe, had not hee ſtepped in for us, and thus ſuffered? Thankes, thankes be to his bleſſed Maieſty for it. Phil.2.7. Mat.1.19.

Laſtly, you ſpake alſo of the fruit of this his ſuffering, or of the end ſomething.

True it is, when I ſay to the end, that by that his Paſſion, as by a full, ſufficient, and perfect ſacrifice Propitiatory, he might free and deliver from death eternall both our Bodies and Soules, &c. And all this I learne from the Apoſtle, when he ſaith; God hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the Kingdome of his deare Sonne, in whom we have Redemption through his Blood, that is, the forgiveneſſe of ſinnes. For theſe words are as much as if he ſaid, That we are thus delivered and ſaved, it is the fruit of his Paſſion, even of Chriſt our Saviours Paſſion, and no way elſe do we attaine to it. To the like purpoſe are thoſe other words of the ſame Apoſtle againe in another place: That, that was impoſſible to the Law, in as much as it was weake becauſe of the fleſh, God ſending his owne Sonne in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſinne in the fleſh. For theſe words againe ſhew, That therefore Chriſt endured and bare the wrath of his Father againſt the ſinnes of mankinde in our fleſh, which he tooke upon him, that theſe our ſins in that nature thus puniſhed, he mercifully might free us from eternall damnation and puniſhment. So the point being proved, obſerve, That this Freedome and Mercy reacheth both to Body and Soule, becauſe Chriſt ſuffered both in Body and Soule. Secondly, that this his ſuffering was a Propriatory ſacrifice for us all that beleeve, according to the words of S. Iohn, He is the Propitiation for our ſins. Coloſ.1.13,14. Rom.8.3. 1 Iohn 2.2.

Then you mention a ſecond end of Chriſt his ſuffering; namely, that he might winne unto us the favour of God, righteouſneſs, and everlaſting life.

It is very true; and that for this end alſo he ſuffered, and by this meanes procured Gods love unto us, the Author to the Hebrews teacheth plainely, when he ſaith, The Throne of Grace lyeth open to us, that we may boldly come unto it to receive Mercy, and to find Grace in time & need, becauſe we have an High Prieſt which is touched with the feeling of our infirmities, & was in all things tempted in like ſort, but without ſin. Here you ſee Gods grace laid open to us by this meanes. Then for righteouſneſs, as plain is the Apoſtle to the Corinthians, ſaying, He hath made him to be ſin for us, which knew no ſin, that we ſhould be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. Thirdly, for life everlaſting, that by his meanes wee have obtained it, what more manifeſt than thoſe words to the Hebrews; Though he were the Son of God, yet learned he obedience by the things which he ſuffered, and being conſecrate, was made the Author of eternall ſalvation unto all them that obey him: for what is eternall ſalvation, but eternall life. Thus then ſeeing out of the plaine Scriptures what is meant by theſe words of this Article Paſſus eſt, hee ſuffered, and the true ends of his ſufferings, Heb.4.15,16. 2 Cor.5.21. Heb.5.8,9.

ferings, learne we (as we can reach unto) the incomprehenſible love of a ſweet Saviour, that thus would ſuffer for us the puniſhment due to us, to ſave us from death and never-ending ſufferings. Secondly, what an ugly thing ſinne is, that without ſuch a ſuffering, even of ſuch a one, could not be taken away. Thirdly, that if he thus hath ſuffered for us in his unſpeakeable love, ſurely it becommeth us alſo to go forth to him out of the Campe, bearing his reproach, ſince he hath left us an example, that we ſhould follow his ſteps. But of theſe more hereafter.

Heb.13.13. 1 Pet.2.21.

And why is the Judge mentioned under whom he ſuffered, namely, Pontius Pilate?

Becauſe we for our ſinnes and tranſgreſſions were to be ſet and ſummoned before the Judge of Heaven, there to receive a fearefull ſentence of juſt condemnation to eternall death, to the end wee might firmely beleeve that from this wee are freed by his appearance for us before an earthly Judge in this ſort, and receiving ſentence of death in this ſort, being himſelfe altogether innocent: therefore mention is made of his very name, and all ſcruple, feare and doubt removed from our conſciences; bleſſed, bleſſed be his name ever for theſe comforts. Now then ſee and conſider with your ſelfe the ſtrength of our faith, by comparing the propheſies and predictions before of his ſufferings, with the accompliſhment of all in his perſon. Eſay deſcribeth it, as if he had lived and ſeene it when it was performed: often read it, and often thinke of it with feeling. Himſelfe ſaid to his Diſciples, Behold we go up to Hieruſalem, and all things ſhall be fulfilled to the Son of man that are written by the Prophets. For he ſhall be delivered to the Gentiles, and ſhall be ſpitefully entreated, and ſhall be ſpitten on; and when they have ſcourged him, they will put him to death. Againe in another place: O fooles and ſlowe of heart, to beleeve all that the Prophets have ſpoken; ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and to enter into his glory? And he began at Moſes and all the Prophets, and interpreted unto them the things that were written of him. Now ſaith this Article, Credo, I beleeve that he thus ſuffered, and therefore my faith a true faith according to the Scriptures. Againe, by the mention of Pilate, wee receive confirmation alſo; for then ſhould our Saviour ſuffer by the Propheſie of Ezekiel, When the golden Crownes were taken from the heads of the Kings of Iudah. But that was now when Pilate a ſtranger ruled under Caſar: therefore even by this circumſtance we ſee our faith agreeth againe with the Scriptures, and is moſt true.

Eſay 53. Luke 18.31. Luke 24.25. Ezek.21.26.

The Article alſo mentioneth the manner of his ſuffering, and ſaith he was crucified.

This time of death was both before told and before appointed of God, and therefore ſtill according to the Scriptures we beleeve he ſuffered. The ſacrifices were lifted up to prefigure this, the brazen ſerpent was a ſhadow of it, Iohn 3.14. David foretold it when he ſaid, they pierced my hands and my feet. Our Saviour himſelfe ſaith, if I were lift up from the earth, I will draw all men unto me, ſignifying (ſaith the text) what death he ſhould die. And Saint Peter ſaith plainely, that even before the foundation of the world, Chriſt was ordained to redeem us with his precious blood: meaning to be ſhed upon the croſſe: with many other Scriptures teſtifying and foretelling this kind of death, The reaſon if it be asked why in this ſort, rather than otherwiſe he ſuffered, ſurely it was to yeeld us firme aſſurance that he hath taken upon him the curſe due to us, for as much as this death was by law accurſed, *Deut.*21.23. The truth of which reaſon the Apoſtle proveth to the Galathians ſaying: Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the Law, made a curſe for us, for it is written, curſed is every one that hangeth on tree. When I ſay then Credo crucifixum, I beleeve that he was crucified, it is full as much as if I ſhould ſay, I beleeve aſſuredly, and I beleeve comfortably, that what curſe was due to me for my many grievous tranſgreſſions againſt the Law, that ſame hath my deare Saviour taken upon himſelfe by ſuffering for me a kind of death which was accurſed by the Law, and ſo hath freed me from it, and all them that truely beleeve on him. For this death, though thus in it ſelfe horrible, yet did not overcome him, but he overcame it, and made that his ignominious Croſſe a triumphant Chariot of glory and victory, according to the Apoſtle, And hath ſpoiled principalities and powers, and hath made a ſhew of them openly, and hath triumphed over them in the ſame Croſſe. This is that wiſdome, even this preaching of the Croſſe, which to them that periſh is fooliſhneſs, but unto us which are ſaved it is the power of God. In this the bleſſed Apoſtle rejoyced, ſaying: God forbid that I ſhould rejoyce in any thing but in the croſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, whereby the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world. And this is it that indeed we all muſt joy in, that intend ever to bee ſaved. God for his ſweet mercy ſtrengthen us, and eſtabliſh us ever in our duties, and make us daily more and more ſuch creatures, as they ſhould be that have ſuch a God, ſuch a Chriſt and Saviour, and ſuch comforts vouchſafed unto them, to yeeld them juſt incouragement in well doing. Amen, Amen.

Pſal.22.17. Iohn12.32,33. 1 Pet. 1.19,20. Galat.3.13. 2 Coloſ.15. 1 Cor.1.19. Gal.6.14.

Vide Lavaterum de ſpectris parte prima cap. 9. de Paulo Marſo in Ovidium, de faſtis, &c.

Now followeth by degrees further this great humiliation of our deare Saviour the Son of God, and firſt, that he died, the meaning and uſe of which, I pray you in order declare unto me.

Concerning then his death, we muſt conſider firſt the truth of it, ſecondly that it was voluntary, and laſtly the fruit or end of it. The firſt is often affirmed in the Scriptures, and therefore firmely of all that will ever be ſaved to be beleeved. Saint Iohn expreſſeth it plainly when hee ſaith, all things being fulfilled, he bowed his head, and gave up the Ghoſt. Now we well know that that the ſeparation of body and ſoule, is a true, aſſured and certaine death. The Apoſtle againe affirmeth it, ſaying: He humbled himſelfe and became obedient unto the death, even the death of the croſſe. The ſlaine ſacrifices of the Law prefigured this death, ſo did the brazen Serpent lifted up, and Ionas in the Whales belly. The Prophets before told of this death, and the Scriptures in him, and by him, and of him were to be fulfilled. Daniel ſaith: and after threeſcore and two weeks ſhall Meſſiah be ſlain, and ſhall have nothing, &c. Eſay and others did the like, yea even by the mouth of all his Prophets, ſaith Saint Peter, did God beforehand ſhew what now thus he hath fulfilled. The ſecond point, that it was voluntary, is alſo as plain in theſe Scriptures. No man taketh my life from me, (ſaith our Saviour himſelfe the true witneſſe) but I lay it down of my ſelfe, I have power to lay it down, and have power to take it againe, &c. Likewiſe when it is ſaid, after all things were ended, he bowed his head and gave up the Ghoſt, doth it not plainely ſhew that voluntarily he did it? he did it no ſooner, he taried no longer, but when it was fit, and that every thing of him ſpecified to be done, had his true and full accompliſhment in him, then even then, and not before he bowed his head, to wit, willingly and of himſelfe, and gave up his ſpirit. Alſo when he went out to meet the Souldiers that came to apprehend him, and aſked them whom they ſought, told them that he was the man, ſtood before Pilate without any defence, not opening his mouth, with many other ſuch things to be obſerved of him: what did they ſhew, but his great willingneſſe to endure this death for us, and that it was in him wholy voluntary. Moſt fitly therefore doth the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, in conſideration of this, cite that ſaying in the Pſalme, In the volume of thy booke it is written of me, that I ſhould fulfill thy will O my God, I am content to doe it, &c. Content therefore was he we plainly ſee, and voluntary altogether was his death.

Iohn 19 30.
Philip. 2. 8.
Dan. 9. 26.
Acts 3. 18.
Iohn 10 18.
Heb. 10. 7.
Pſal. 40. 89.

The third point concerning the ends is as plaine againe, which were theſe, to make good the truth of God, and to give ſatisfaction to God for our ſins, neither of which but by this meanes could be done: for touching the firſt, God having in the Law (as I have ſhewed) ſo many waies prefigured the death of this eternall ſacrifice his deare Son, and namely by the Paſchall Lambe, as alſo foreſhewed it by his Prophets, it muſt needs bee performed accordingly, or elſe God ſhould not have been true in his word: wherefore this neceſſity our Saviour himſelfe mentioneth as he went to Emaus, ſaying; Ought not theſe things thus to be done, &c. Touching the ſecond table, it was likewiſe ſaid by God to our firſt Parents, that at what time ſoever they ſhould tranſgreſſe his commandement and eate of the forbidden fruit, they ſhould for their puniſhment die the death. They tranſgreſſed and ſo threw under this penalty both themſelves and all mankinde that ſhould come of them; from which, that our bleſſed Saviour might free us againe, it pleaſed him to put himſelfe in our ſtead, and to ſatisfie the juſtice of God for this our offence with his owne death. See it then plainly, and conſider it often, that otherwiſe then by death of ſuch a one, ſatisfaction to God for our ſinnes could not be made, for hee muſt dye that ſo could vanquiſh and overcome death, which none could doe but the Son of God, as hath beene ſhewed before. Againe, with ſuch an offering was our ſin to be wiped out as was in price and value equivalent both to our ſinne and Gods wrath: ſo was this offering of himſelfe made upon the Croſſe by our Saviour. And therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, We are redeemed with a price, (even a moſt excellent and incomprehenſible price) not with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a Lamb undefiled and without ſpot: Therefore he muſt die even to this end alſo. Yet notwithſtanding theſe neceſſities, ſtill & ſtill we muſt know it to be voluntary, and conſider the reaſon of that alſo, namely, that ſo he might teſtifie his obedience to God his father and ſo free us, which by a conſtrained and forced death he could not have done. The Apoſtle therefore ſaith: As by one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners, ſo by that obedience of that one ſhall many alſo be made righteous. So let it ſuffice to have ſpoken of his death, and thus let us ever be inſtructed in it. It followeth to note his buriall and the reaſon likewiſe of that.

Luke 24. 26, 27.
1 Cor. 6. 20.
1 Pet. 1. 18, 29.
Rom. 5. 19.

His buriall was prefigured by Ionas in the Whales belly, for as he was three dayes, and three nights there, ſo ſhall the Son of Man be three dayes, and three nights in the heart of the earth, ſaith the Goſpell. It was foretold by Eſay when he ſaid, He made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich, in his death, though he had done no wickedneſſe, neither was any deception in his mouth. And with one conſent the Evangeliſts ſpeake both of his buriall and his grave, where it was, how it was, &c. The reaſon why he was buried, and we conſtantly ought to beleeve it as an Article of our faith is, that the truth of his death thereby might be aſſured, and of no beleever ever doubted of, foraſmuch as the whole foundation of our ſafety ſtandeth in this, that Chriſt our Saviour truly and not fainedly dyed for us. Which was done by his buriall, wee not uſing to bury thoſe that be quick: for even as the rage and fury of the Sea ceaſed when once Ionas was thrown into it, ſo was Gods wrath againſt Mankinde ſtayed and aboliſhed, when once our deare Saviour was caſt into his grave, and ſo his death aſſured to all men. Again, by his buriall, our graves to the worlds end are ſanctified to us, not to be holes and pits of ignominie, and reproach, but Chambers, or beds, or holy reſting places, till the trump ſhall ſound, and we awake againe out of that ſleep to eternall joy and comfort. So ſaith Eſay, they ſhall reſt in their beds every one

Mat. 12. 40.
Eſay 53. 9.
Mat. 27. 60.
Eſay 57. 2.

that walketh before him, that is, their ſouls in heaven, and their bodies in the grave, as I have ſaid.

Yet one thing troubleth my minde, how you affirm that Chriſt hath ſatisfied the wrath of God by his death, ſeeing ſtill the puniſhment lyeth upon all men to die.

You move it well, but the anſwer is plaine, to wit, that now we die not to make ſatisfaction for our ſin, but to the end we may paſſe from ſin, and all ſinfull temptations to eternall comfort, joy and purity. So the caſe is quite altered, and death of a puniſhment become a bleſſing, a mercy, and great favour, as that which leadeth us not to paine, due to our offences, but to reſt and joy purchaſed by him that dyed for us. Here the very holy Apoſtle cryeth, O wretched man that I am who ſhall deliver me! and therefore wiſheth to be looſed and to be with Chriſt, but death endeth this griefe and yeeldeth the thing deſired with unſpeakable comfort. Therefore I ſay the caſe is altered, though yet we die, and bleſſed be God for it. Other commodities alſo come by our dying which we muſt not forget, as to make us wary and carefull not to offend, according to that ſaying of a wiſe man; In all things remember thy end, and thou ſhalt not offend. To make us glad and chearfull as Simeon was when he ſaid, Lord now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace, &c. And to beate us from that groſſe and foule affection of Popery, that by death men can merit both for themſelves and others eternall life. Concerning which error, moſt well S. Auguſtine in his time: Etſi fratres pro fratribus morimur, &c. Albeit one brother dye for another, yet is the blood of no Martyr ſhed for remiſſion of ſins; that Chriſt did for us. Imitari quis potuit morientem, nemo redimentem. In dying ſome man might follow Chriſt, but in redeeming no man could follow him. Leo alſo a Biſhop of Rome to the like effect; Quamvis multorum ſanctorum, &c. Though the death of many Saints hath been precious in the ſight of the Lord, yet the death of no guiltleſſe man was the propitiation for the world. Juſt men received crownes, they gave no crownes, and from their ſtrength ſprang patternes of patience, not merit of righteouſneſſe: for that alone was the office of Chriſt, as Baſil ſaith, who only was void of ſin, and only the undefiled Lamb of God, which taketh away the ſins of the world. Thus I truſt you are ſatisfied in your doubt.

Rom. 7.

Epiſt. 18. 83. & hom. 12. de paſſ. Chr.

I pray you firſt tell me; whereupon thinke you did ariſe theſe varieties of interpretations, and differences of Iudgement, about the meaning of this Article.

Some men, who (I doubt not) had a good meaning, being carefull that their Faith ſhould not out-run their underſtanding, when as they found an obſcurity in the matter, which they could not diſtinctly conceive, and a diverſity in the acception of the phraſe, which they could not handſomely compoſe: tooke that which was manifeſtly true, whereof they might be bold, and thought good to venture no further, where perhaps they might fall foule on ſome miſconceived opinions: thinking it a fairer courſe to content themſelves with that, whereto they were come, than to venture on a dangerous voyage to make a further diſcovery, and rather to loſe ſome part of an unknowne truth, than to ſeeke for that which was out of their kenning. Whiles therefore they feared the fabulous gulfe of Limbus Patrum, as though the ſoules of the Patriarkes had been in hell, till the ſoule of Chriſt came and delivered them: or the ſuppoſed miſchiefe of ſuffering the torments of the damned, if Chriſt in ſoule had viſited that priſon: they thought beſt to cut the knot which they could not untye, and to extend the deſcent of Chriſt no further, than either to the ſufferings of Chriſt in his life, wherein were the ſorrows of hell, or to his buriall in a grave, which is ſometimes taken for a degree of hell; or elſe, as they which would ſeeme ſomewhat more judiciall, to the eſtate of his ſoule, as it is oppoſed to the fruition of an earthly life, and not diſtinguiſhed by the difference of good and evill in the life to come. The ſingular interpretations whereof are ſeverally true, and proceed by degrees one further than another, yet the beſt comes ſhort of the right meaning of the Article.

I beſeech you then paſſe over theſe differences, and come to the right interpretation of the words.

This we ſhall attaine unto by conſideration of the ſeverall acceptions of the word Hell. Hell in the Scriptures is taken ſometimes figuratively, ſometime properly. Properly and originally it ſignifieth the priſon of the damned, where there is an everlaſting fire prepared for the devil and his Angels. Figuratively it ſignifieth ſomething precedent, arguing the horror, or elſe concomitant bringing either corruption or deſolation. In this figurative ſenſe it ſignifieth three things. Firſt, as it concernes both the ſoule and body of man, yet living in this Mortall conjunction. Thus it ſignifieth extreame and great ſorow: So in the Pſal. The ſorowes of hell have compaſſed me, that is, moſt great and bitter ſorows: So in the book of Samuel: The Lord killeth and maketh alive, the Lord bringeth down to hell, and raiſeth up again: that is, the Lord layeth where it pleaſeth him extreame ſorowes, even ſorowes in the higheſt degree, and yet healeth againe with his refreſhing comforts in time convenient. Now in this ſenſe I beleeve Chriſt deſcended into hell, that is, that he endured moſt horrible and unſpeakable ſorowes, due to me and mankinde, for our fall from God. And this, as hath been noted, in the entrance when he ſaid; My Soule is heavy to the death: In the progreſſe, when his ſweat were like drops of blood Trickling down to the ground. And in the end when he dolefully cryed, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me: yet deſpaired not Chriſt, as appeareth by that double Title, of my God, my God. Who offering up his

Pſal. 18. 5.
1 Sam. 2. 6.

Mat. 27.
Luke 22. 24.
Mat. 27.
Heb. 5. 7.

his Prayers and Supplications, with ſtrong cryes and teares unto him, that was able to ſave him from death, was heard in that which he feared. And this ſenſe is very true, and might happily ſuffice, if the order of the Article did not draw us on further, and it were not properly included in the Article of his ſufferings. For when it is ſaid; Suffered, dead and buried, Then come in theſe words. He deſcended into Hell, noting, as it appeareth by the very order, ſome further thing incident to Chriſt after his buriall.

Secondly, in a figurative ſenſe Hell is ſometimes taken for the grave; ſo in the Pſalme, Our bones are ſcattered at the mouth of Hell, as when one cutteth and cleaveth Wood upon the earth, that is, at the graves mouth. So many other places which are ſo taken by the learned, and may well be afforded them in a figurative ſenſe. Hell in this ſenſe appertaineth to the dead body of man, and is a priſon appointed for the cuſtody thereof, untill the day of the Reſurrection. And in this ſenſe there is a manifeſt truth of Chriſts deſcent into hell: But all that is properly contained in the Article of his buriall, and therefore this further branch of this Article muſt in all congruity yeeld us a further doctrine. Thirdly, in a figurative ſenſe, Hell is ſometimes taken for a generall eſtate of the dead, arguing a deſolation of ſuch comforts as are in this life, and not determing the diſtinction that is between happineſſe and miſery in the life to come. So Iacob: I will go down into hell unto my ſon Ioſeph, mourning; that is, I ſhall with ſorow enough depart hence into that other world, where my ſon Ioſeph is. In this generall ſenſe doth S. Hierome take hell: Infernus eſt locus in quo animæ recluduntur, ſive in refrigerio ſive in pœnis pro qualitate meritorum; Hell is a place wherein Souls are impriſoned, either in eaſe or paine, according to the quality of their good or bad cauſes. Neither is that of S. Auſtine contrary to this: Nondum inveni & adhuc quæro, nec mihi occurrit, Inferos alicubi in bono poſuiſſe Scripturam duntaxat Canonicam; I have made enquiry, as yet I doe, and hitherto could never finde, that the Scripture onely Canonicall, did ever take hell in a good ſenſe. True; for although he, who brought light out of darkneſſe, turnes thoſe judgements, which lye as curſes upon mankinde, into bleſſings unto his children, and brings them by the gates of hell into the Haven of their deſire: yet alwayes this tranſlation from one world to another hath a penalty in it ſelfe, and the generall eſtate lyes under the curſe, although in the particular, by every degree of the humiliation of Chriſt, the elect are freed from it, and ſo brought to an heavenly inheritance. Hell therefore is ſometime taken in a generall and indifferent ſenſe, noting unto us the ſtate and condition of Soules departed, not in their finall end, in which ſenſe Hell is properly oppoſed to Heaven, but onely in an accidentall conſideration; and this two wayes; the one, how they are cut off from all comforts in the land of the living; the other, what opinion and reckoning is held of them in the hearts of the living. Of either of theſe we have divers teſtimonies in the holy Scriptures. Thus David complaineth: I am counted with them that go down into the Pit, I am as a man that hath no ſtrength: Free among the dead, like the ſlain that lie among the dead, whom thou remembreſt no more, and who are cut off thy hand. Thou haſt put away mine acquaintance far from me: Thou haſt made me an abhomination unto them, I am ſhut up and I cannot come forth. Wilt thou ſhew wonders to the dead? Shall the dead ariſe and praiſe thee? &c. Thus Iob bewaileth. There is hope of a tree, if it be not down, that it will ſprout again, &c. but man dyeth and waſteth away: yea man giveth up the Ghoſt, and where is he? As the waters fail from the Sea, and the flood decayeth and dryeth up: So man lyeth down and riſeth not, till the heavens be no more, they ſhall not awake, nor be raiſed out of their ſleep. Thus Solomon forewarneth to do whatſoever our hand findeth to do, while we are in this life. For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wiſdome in hell whither thou goeſt. Thus Eſay triumpheth over Babylon, How hath the oppreſſor ceaſed? the golden City ceaſed? Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meete thee at thy comming, &c. Art thou alſo become weak as we? art thou become like unto us? Thy pomp is brought down to hell, the worm is ſpred under thee, &c. How art thou fallen from heavē O Lucifer ſon of the morning? how art thou cut down to the ground, which didſt weaken the nations? &c. And yet more plainly in ve. 16. Is this the man that made the earth to tremble? and did ſhake the kingdome, &c. Thus you ſee a further degree than death or buriall: namely, when men are judged as utterly vanquiſhed and overcome of death, that death hath ſwallowed them up, and raked them ſo into his power, as a conquerour doth one whom he hath utterly ſubdued, and this with a kinde of ignominy and reproach, as being brought to the duſt of death, without any help or hope. Thus Ionas confeſſeth. The Lord heard me out of the belly of hel; That is, when I was given over, as a man devoured utterly of the conqueror death. Wherefore this alſo is a true interpretation of theſe words, that Chriſt, as Eſay ſpeaketh, was taken from the land of the living, and that his ſaving help was now deſpaired of, as the Diſciples that went to Emaus complained, ſaying; But we truſted it had been he who ſhould have redeemed Iſrael. Theſe figurative acceptions of hell are all true, and may well ſerve as circumſtances, either as precedent, or concomitant unto the true, reall and proper deſcent of Chriſt into hell, and ſo in part alſo may excuſe the diverſity of learned mens judgements in ſundry interpretations of this Article. But for all this we muſt know and beleeve that the humane ſoule of our Saviour Chriſt, although ſeparated from the body, yet ſubſiſting in the Deity, had a further degree of humiliation to accompliſh, in hell, even as the body ſepara-

Pſal. 141. 7.

Gen. 37. 35. Oſee 13.

Aug. in Gen. ad lit. l. 3. ca. 33.

Pſal. 88. 4. &c.

Eccl. 9. 10.

Eſay 14. 4. &c.

Ion. 2. 2.

Luke 24. 21.

ted from the ſoule, yet ſubſiſting in the Deity, had a conflict with corruption in the grave, according to that of S. Athanaſius: Sepulchro quidem id quod corporeum erat, quia ibi corpus aderat, recipiente inferno vero id quod incorporeum fuit. The grave taking what was corporall, for there was his body, and hell that which was not corporall.

I pray you tell me what ground you have of this Doctrine.

Beſides the Articles of the Creed, wherein the pythineſſe of every word, and the clearneſs of their order, give great weight and evidence to this interpretation, we have firſt the holy Scripture. Not to trouble you with many places, wherein may be ſome ambiguities: This is moſt cleare, Thou ſhalt not leave my ſoule in hell: neither ſuffer thy holy one to ſee corruption. Wherein the ſtate of Chriſts Soule, and the ſtate of Chriſts body, in their ſeparation by death, by an equall compariſon, are lively and properly deſcribed unto us. This S. Peter in the Acts challengeth as proper unto Chriſt, and not common to him with David; becauſe Davids body ſaw corruption in his Sepulchre, but ſo did not Chriſts. Now, if the firſt part of the verſe be taken figuratively, then muſt the latter, and ſo loſing the proper immunity of Chriſts Soule, we ſhall loſe alſo the incorruption of Chriſts Body: and ſo being careleſſe of one Article, we ſhall be deprived of two. And if the verſe in both members be taken properly, then neceſſary it is, that Chriſts Soul, after the departure from the Body, was in ſuch ſort, and unto ſuch end in Hell, as his Body was in the grave. But the matter is ſure, and the purpoſe is plaine, that his Body was in the grave, where it prevailed againſt corruption, and therefore it is as evident, that his Soule was in Hell, properly ſo taken, where it prevailed againſt bondage and damnation. This one place therefore being properly taken, as needs it muſt, doth plainly convice, that there his Soule was, where it was not left. Secondly, we have the conſent of all antiquity, whoſe cleare Judgement, they that goe about to obſcure, ſeeme to me to caſt a miſt before the Sun; or as Elihu ſpeaketh, With clouds he covereth the light, and commandeth it not to ſhine, by interpoſition. Thirdly, we have the cleare judgement of the Church of England, in few, but pithy words, in the third Article, as Chriſt dyed for us, and was buried; ſo alſo it is to be beleeved, that he went downe into Hell. So as he was buried, that is properly and literally underſtood, ſo muſt we underſtand this deſcent into hell.

Pſal. 16. 10. Acts 2. 27.

Iob 36. 32.

Art. Cleri, 1562.

I pray you beare with mine importunities, and let me learne of you what was the purpoſe of this deſcent in Soule.

Even the ſame that was of his buriall. What was the purpoſe of his buriall? You will ſay, to ſhew he was truly dead. True: But yet more to ſhew, that though he was in the houſe of corruption, yet no corruption could poſſibly ſeize upon his moſt pure body: Even ſo in Soule hee had a degree of humiliation to accompliſh: wherein quaſi peccator, as S. Hierome ſaith, & ſpecie condemnati, as S. Athanaſius ſaith, he went into the houſe of deſolation, the priſon of ſinners, the place of the damned, to ſhew that no vaſtity could have place in his ſoule, the gates of hell could not prevaile againſt him, and that it was not poſſible he ſhould be holden by it. As in the life of Chriſt no terror could quaile him, in his grave no corruptible could touch him, ſo in hell no bonds, no bondage could detain him. Thus ſpeaketh Athanaſius, In Sepulchro incorruptibilitatem, & in deſcenſu Inferorum, ſolvendæ mortis poteſtatem oſtendit, He ſhewed in the grave incorruption of the Body, and in hell a powerfull diſſolution of death. And in another place, a little before, more plainly: Peccati quidem condemnationem in terra Psaculi ſive execrationis abolitionem in ligno, corruptionis redemptionem in Sepulchro, mortis condemnationem in Inferno peregit; Hee hath brought to paſſe, while he lived on the Earth, that ſin ſhould be condemned; when he hung on the Croſſe, that the curſe ſhould be aboliſhed; when he lay in the grave, that corruption ſhould be abandoned: when he was in hell, that death ſhould be condemned. Hereby you may ſee a diſtinct purpoſe of Chriſts deſcent in Soule, and ſo theſe three branches of this Article ſhew three degrees of his humiliation, which fitly anſwer to the three branches of the next, wherein are alſo three degrees of his exaltation; his death, to his Reſurrection; his buriall, to his aſcenſion; his deſcent into hell, unto his ſitting glorioufly at the right hand of God his Father. Thus you have the whole meaning of this Article, compriſing as much as is neceſſary to be beleeved, and avoiding of that, whereby any might poſſibly be offended. God grant us in this and in the reſt we may be of one minde and one ſpirit.

Acts 2. 24.

De Incarn. Chriſt. p. 278.

THE FIFTH ARTICLE.

Now followeth, if you pleaſe, the fifth Article; namely, How the third day he roſe againe from the Dead, &c.

Phil. 2. 7, 8, 9.

AND now ſhall you ſee the truth of that to the Philippians by S. Paul written, namely, That after he had made himſelfe of no reputation, and tooke on him the forme of a ſervant, and humbled himſelfe, and became obedient to the death, even to the death of the Croſſe, God highly exalted him, and gave him a Name above all Names, &c. For firſt, hee is raiſed from the Dead; ſecondly, he is taken into Heaven; and thirdly, there ſitteth at the right right hand of God: all three notable degrees of his Exaltation. The first is many wayes testified and confirmed to us by the Scriptures, by Prophets, Evangelists, Apostles, and all: In stead of many, let that one Chapter to the Corinthians suffice: Christ rose againe the third day, according to the Scriptures, and was seene of Cephas, then of the twelve, after that hee was seene of moe than five hundred brethren at once, &c. He did eate, speake, converse, and that often with them. He sheweth his hands and his side, and bade Thomas not be faithlesse, but faithfull. The Angell said, He is risen, he is not here: The Pharisies, and that rabble, hyred the Watch to say the contrary: All, with many moe sound proofes of his resurrection. And if Christ be not risen (saith the Apostle) then is our preaching in vaine, and your Faith is also vain, yea, we are false witnesses, and you yet in your sinnes, &c. His resurrection upon the third day was expressely foretold by Hosee the Prophet, when he said, After two dayes will he receive us, and in the third day will he raise us up, and we shall live in his. Likewise by our Saviour himselfe, when he mentioned the Type of Ionas in the Whales belly. Justly therefore doe we hold this as an Article of our Christian Faith, That he rose againe from the Dead. For well saith S. Augustine, Non magnum hoc est credere, quod mortuus sit Christus, hoc enim & Iudæi & Pagani, & omnes iniqui credunt, fides Christianorum Resurrectio Christi est; It is no great matter to beleeve that Christ dyed; for both Jewes and Pagans beleeve as much, yea all wicked ones; but that Christ rose againe, this is the Faith of Christians.

Psal 16.10. Esay 53.19. Dan 9.26. Mat.20.19. Iohn 2 19. Iohn 12.24. 1 Cor.15.1.

Hos.6.2. Mat.12.

What is the fruit and use of Christs resurrection?

First to shew, that albeit he seemed to be overcome and vanquished of Death, yet indeed it was not so; but he most victoriously overcame death, to his glory and to our eternall comfort. Of which fruit, the Prophet Hosee, and out of him the Apostle, Death is swallowed up in victory: O Death, where is thy sting, O Grave where is thy victory? To our everlasting comfort I say, because that by thus overcomming of Death, he hath made us partakers of that Righteousnesse, which he by death did purchase for us; for by his Death he satisfied for our sins, and by his Resurrection he freed us from them. This distinction betwixt the fruit of the death of Christ, and of his Resurrection, the Apostle plainly teacheth in these words, He dyed for our sins, and rose againe for our justification; noting by his death, sin to be taken away, and by his Resurrection, Righteousnesse to be restored. And surely, when Christ dyed, our sinnes were condemned in him, and received their punishment; and when he rose againe, we were justified by him: for if but one sin had remained unsatisfied for, and untaken away, Christ had never risen againe, the reward of sin being death. But he now being risen againe, it is most manifest, that by death sin was fully taken away, and by his Resurrection Righteousnesse restored to us, and we justified. Which is the argument of the Apostle againe, when he saith, If Christ be not raised againe, your Faith is vaine, and you are yet in your sins: inferring by consequence thus much, That because Christ is raised againe, therefore neither is our Faith vaine, nor we in our sinnes: but he is risen for our full justification, as he dyed a true and perfect ransome for sins. And this is one and the first fruit of this Article.

Hos.13.14. 1 Cor.15.54.

1 Cor.15.17.

A second is this, That by vertue and power of this his Resurrection, we daily rise more and more to newnesse of life. This we learne by the Apostle, when he saith; Wee are buried then with him by Baptisme into his death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead to the glory of his Father, so we also should walke in newnesse of life: for if we be planted with him to the similitude of his death, even so shall we be to the similitude of his Resurrection, &c. Even then as a Plant conjoyned unto the stock, draweth juyce and sap from the same: so we engrafted into Christ, draw from the vertue of his death to die unto sin, and from his Resurrection, to rise unto righteousnesse and all amendment of life: According to that saying againe; If yee be risen with Christ, that is, if the fruit and benefit of his Resurrection be in you, seeke those things that are above, that is, rise up continually unto newnesse of life and conversation. Set your affections on things that are above, and not on things which are on the earth: Let your conversation be in Heaven, and live from hence-forward, not any more you, but Christ in you. This is the second fruit of this Article.

Rom.6.4.

Coloss.3. Philip.3.20. Gal.2.20.

A third fruit, That by this Resurrection of our Head we also are assured of a glorious Resurrection in that great day appointed. Which Doctrine of comfort we learne from the Apostles mouth, when he saith, If the Spirit of him that raised up Iesus from the dead, dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortall bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. Also, by that notable Chapter to the Corinthians, where this matter is handled at large: Where note carefully, that Christ is not proposed as a private man, rising from the dead, but as the first fruits of the dead: And in the first fruits, all the rest of the lump is sanctified, wee well know: For if we beleeve (saith the Apostle) that Iesus is dead, and is risen, even so, them which sleep in Iesus, will God bring with him.

Rom.8.11. 1 Cor.15. 1 Thes.4.14.

Thus see wee the truth of this point of our Faith, and the Use. Much more might bee said of this large Matter, but I hope this may suffice. The Papists deny not this Article, for that were too broad: but shamefully they abuse our Saviour; when on Easter day in the morning they they raiſe up a Poppet, and make him walke by wyers and ſtrings, ſaying, That is Chriſt. So carnall is their Religion in all things, that with carnall and groſſe repreſentations they teach that which by the evidence of the Word were to be ſoundly ſetled in the peoples hearts: for this pleaſeth the ignorant multitude much, and bringeth to theſe Jugglers great advantage; but let them goe.

THE SIXTH ARTICLE.

Your next Article in order is the ſixth.

Of his Aſcenſion into Heaven.

THis is the ſecond degree of his Exaltation, oppoſed to the ſecond degree of his Humiliation, as you heard before: The meaning whereof is, that he was taken up into heaven, his Diſciples beholding and looking upon him, and there ſhall remaine for our good, till he come againe to judge both the quick and the dead at the later day. Both which members have their plaine proofe in Gods Word: For touching the firſt, Saint Marke ſaith in his Goſpell: So after the Lord had ſpoken unto them, he was received into heaven, and ſate at the right hand of God. Saint Luke in his Goſpell ſaith: Afterward he led them out into Bethania, and lift up his hands and bleſſed them: And it came to paſſe, that as he bleſſed them, he departed from them, and was caried up into heaven. But happily you may think theſe places doe not expreſſely mention, that his Diſciples ſaw his Aſcenſion: but if you marke them, they muſt needs be ſo taken, for there was no departure of either from other, but even ſpeaking and bleſſing them, he viſibly departed before their eyes, and they ſaw him goe: Yet even in this point of expreſſe mention of ſight, the Holy Ghoſt doth ſatisfie you in the Acts of the Apoſtles, when it is thus ſaid: While they beheld, he was taken up; for a Cloud tooke him out of their ſight: And the Angels ſaid to them, Ye men of Galilee, Why ſtand ye gazing into heaven? This Jeſus, which is taken up from you into heaven, ſhall ſo come as ye have Seen him goe into heaven. Therefore he vaniſhed not away like a Spirit or Ghoſt, but (as I ſaid) viſibly departed, taking Body and Soule out of this World till the latter day: till the latter day, I ſay againe, becauſe ſo alſo teacheth the Scripture, ſaying, The heavens muſt containe him, untill the time that all things be reſtored which God had ſpoken by the mouth of all his Prophets ſince the World began, &c. Whereto S. Paul agreeing, biddeth the Coloſſians ſeeke theſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God. Now, that this ſhall be for our good, as plainly againe we have his own word, It is good for you that I goe herehence, I goe to prepare a place, &c. which more particularly ſhall be ſhewed when we come to the uſe of this Article.

Mar. 16. 19.

Acts 1. 9. Beheld.

Scene.

Acts 3. 21.

Coloſſ. 3. 1.

But it ſeemeth, that the promiſe of Chriſt to be with his till the end of the World is againſt this remaining of his in heaven.

Not at all, if we conſider, that in Chriſt be two Natures, his Humanity and his Deity, as before hath been ſhewed: For both theſe Natures, by their ſeverall properties, will make true both theſe aſſertions, being ſeverall: According to his Humanity, he remaining in heaven; and according to his Deity being ever with us. Saint Auſtine very plainly and very fully expreſſeth thus much, whoſe words are theſe: Secundum ineffabilem & inviſibilem gratiam impletur quod ab eo dictum eſt, Ecce vobiſcum ſuero omnibus diebus uſq; ad conſummationẽ ſæculi; Secundum carnem vero quam verbum aſſumpſit, ſecundum id quod de Virgine natus eſt, ſecundum id quod à Iudæis comprehenſus eſt, quod ligno confixus, quod de Cruce depoſitus, quod Linteis involutus, quod in Sepulchro conditus, quod in Reſurrectione manifeſtatus, non ſemper habebitis me vobiſcum: Quare? Quia converſatus eſt ſecũdum corporis præſentiam quadraginta diebus cum Diſcipulis ſuis, & eis deducentibus videndo, non ſequendo, aſcendit in Cœlum, & non eſt hic: Ibi enim ſedet ad dextrã Patris, & hic eſt, non enim ſeceſſit præſentia Majeſtatis; that is, according to his inviſible and unſpeakable grace, that is true that is ſaid of him, Behold, I will be with you to the end of the World; but according to the fleſh, which the Word received, according to that he was born of the Virgin Mary, according to that, he was apprehended of the Jewes; according to that, hee was nailed to the Tree, taken downe from the Croſſe, wrapped in Linnen clothes, laid in the grave, and was declared in his Reſurrection; theſe words are true, You ſhall not ever have me with you: Why? becauſe he was converſant with his Diſciples, according to his bodily preſence, forty dayes, and they going with him, looking upon him, but not following of him, he aſcended into heaven, and is not here; for there he ſitteth on the right hand of God the Father: And againe, he is here, for he is not departed according to the preſence of his Majeſty. Thus doth the Father, by diſtinguiſhing Chriſts Natures, anſwer and reconcile that contrariety you name. And this

Aug. in John, tract. 50. 109.

this diſtinction alſo you may note in Saint Paul often; as when he ſaith, Chriſt concerning the fleſh to bee the Seed of David, but touching the Spirt of Sanctification, the Sonne of God. Chriſt concerning his infirmity, to have beene crucified, but yet to live through the power of God; with many ſuch places. Peter alſo doth the like in theſe words; Hee was put to death concerning the fleſh, but was quickned by the Spirit. So that this diſtinction, I ſay againe, of his two natures, is moſt neceſſary, both for the queſtion that you move, and for many others. Great therfore is their error, that confound theſe two natures, by confounding their properties, and ſo fall into that foule and damnable hereſie of Eutiches.

Rom.1.3,4.
2 Cor.13.4.
1 Pet.3.18.

You ſeeme then to ſay, That Chriſt, concerning his Humanity and Body, is not every where, but yet concerning his Divinity, his Majeſty, Grace, and Spirit, to be ever with his: which, under correction, me thinks, is to divide and pull aſunder his two Natures, granting the one to be where the other is not, and ſo to make two perſons in Chriſt, as there be two natures: which was the hereſie of Neſtorius.

There is no ſuch matter, if you rightly underſtand and take the truth of this point: Which that you may the better doe, enter we into a little further diſcourſe of this ubiquity of Chriſt: and the rather, becauſe it is moſt perverſly urged by Papiſts, to the hurt of Chriſtian truth, concerning the Sacrament. Firſt then conſider the Scriptures; ſecondly, reaſon; and thirdly, the old and ancient Fathers. The Scriptures are ſo plaine, as nothing can bee plainer, That Chriſt, as concerning his body, is not, neither can be in moe places at once than one, and that is (till his ſecond comming againe) in heaven. Ne dubites Chriſtum eſſe in aliquo loco cœli propter veri corporis modum. Aug. Epiſt. 57. ad Dardanum. He is riſen (ſaith Saint Mathewes Goſpell) and is not here; not here, I ſay againe, albeit he had a glorified bodie, ſaith Saint Gregory upon the place. The poore ye ſhall ever have with you, ſaith our Saviour in Iohn, but me ye ſhall not have ever with you; meaning as concerning his body. For otherwiſe, concerning Deity, Majeſty, Grace, and Spirit, I will (ſaith he) be with you to the end of the world. Theſe things have I told you, that when the houre ſhall come, ye might remember that I told you them: And theſe things ſaid I not unto you at the beginning, becauſe I was with you, but now I goe my way to him that ſent me, &c. It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I goe not away, the Comforter will not come, &c. Note how he had his time with them, and then he ſpared not to tell them ſome things, and how his time came to goe away from them, and no more to be with them; againſt which time he prepared their hearts to ſtrength, by telling them thoſe things which before hee did not. How can this going away, and being away, be underſtood, but of his bodily preſence onely, ſeeing otherwiſe we have his promiſe, That he will ever be with us to the end of the world? The heavens muſt containe him, till all things be reſtored, &c. meaning ſtill touching his body and bodily preſence. Which place maketh me remember Saint Auguſtines words, as they are quoted by Gratian; Corpus in quo reſurrexit, in uno loco eſſe oportet: The body of Chriſt, wherin he roſe againe, muſt needs be in one place. And the great out-cry that a Popiſh Doctor made, when time was, of the falſification of theſe words, by putting in oportet, muſt; for poteſt, can: but, as it was truely ſaid then, if there have beene any corruption, it hath beene wrought by Gratian well neare foure hundred yeares agoe, and not by us, yet is Gratian a great Popiſh piller, as all men know. And for the matter it ſelfe, if Saint Auguſtine had not the verbe oportet, yet this place of Saint Peter, which now I alledge out of the Acts hath it as you ſee, Quem oportet quidem cœli capiant; whom the heavens muſt containe. Thus true and deſerved are Popiſh ſlanders and out-cries. In the eleventh of Iohn againe, our Saviour ſaith, Lazarus is dead, and I am glad that I was not there; not there, I ſay againe. And if you object that his body now was not glorified, and therefore was locall, remember Saint Gregories note before of his glorified body, that even that was riſen, and not there. And that glorified bodies be alſo locall, remember our Saviours words, I goe to prepare a place for you, &c. A place for your glorified bodies. Many moe places may bee alledged to this end, but theſe are ſufficient and moſt plaine. Come we therefore to reaſon, and ſee how even that alſo inforceth us to this truth, that Chriſt, as concerning his Deity, is every where; and concerning his humanity, not every where, but in heaven: whatſoever is every where, that is infinit and incomprehenſible, but Chriſts body is not ſo, becauſe there is but one infinite; therefore the body of Chriſt is not every where. Secondly, the Chriſtian faith holdeth a diſtinction of natures in Chriſt, and conſequently a continuance and remaining of properties, and therefore this being one property of a true humane body to be locall, and not every where; Chriſts body holdeth it, and is not every where. This is confirmed by Saint Auguſtines words, Tolle ſpatia corporibus, & nuſquam erunt, & quia nuſquam erunt, non erunt; deny to bodies their limitation of place, and they ſhall be no where, and becauſe no where, therefore not at all; Tolle ipſa corpora qualitatibus corporum, non erit ubi ſint, & ideo neceſſe eſt, ut non ſint; take away from bodies the qualities of bodies, and there will be no place for them to be in, and therefore the ſame bodies muſt needs be no bodies at all. The Papiſts ſay, that Chriſts body in the Sacrament hath neither quality, nor quantity, nor forme, nor place, nor proportion of body, Ergo, by Saint Auguſtines doctrine, no body. Againe, Omne corpus eſt quantum, omne quantum circumſcriptum; every body is a quantity, and every quantity circumſcribed: Chriſts body is ſo, and therefore not every where.

Mat.28.6.
Ioh.12.8.
Mat.28.
Iohn 16.4, &c.
Act.3.21.
Iohn 14.
*Epiſt.*57. ad Dardanum.

where. Thirdly, there is no uſe now of the bodily preſence of Chriſt, for what is there belonging to the office of a Mediator, that Chriſt cannot this day and ever effect for his choſen, without his bodily preſence? Let a Papiſt name it. Fourthly, S. Auguſtine granteth not to the ſoule of Chriſt, that it can be every where, therefore much leſſe can his body. The nature of Angels, ſaith S. Baſil, giveth them not any ubiquity: therefore Chriſts body admitteth it not. Fiftly, whatſoever is in many places at once, is, and needs muſt be God; but Chriſts body is not ſo; therefore not every where. Sixtly, no naturall body can receive in it ſelfe at once to bee locall and not locall, a quantity and no quantity, circumſcribed and not circumſcribed; as ſaith Vigilius: Therefore Chriſts body being alſo a naturall and true body cannot doe it. Wherefore ſaith Saint Auguſtine, we may not ſo goe about to maintaine the Godhead of Chriſts humanity, as that we overthrow or hurt the truth of his body. Which ever we ſhall aſſuredly doe, if wee take from a true body the neceſſary and unchangeable properties of a true body. And thus doth reaſon by a powerfull evidence confirme alſo unto our conſciences, that Chriſt our Saviour, concerning his body, is not in many places ſtill in the world, as Papiſts doe affirme, but only in heaven, as the Scriptures doe teach. Adde now in the third place the teſtimony of grave and learned antiquity, which as a mighty ſtreame floweth from theſe worthy Fathers in their times to reſolve any man, though hee were as hard as Thomas to beleeve a truth. Saint Cyril ſaith: Chriſtus non poterat cum Apoſtolis verſari in carne poſtquam aſcendiſſet ad Patrem: Chriſt could not be converſant with the Apoſtles in the fleſh, after hee had aſcended unto the Father. And if not with the Apoſtles, then I hope not with Popiſh ſhavelings in their Maſſe. Saint Origen ſaith: Non eſt homo qui eſt ubicunq; duo, aut tres in ejus nomine fuerunt congregati, neque homo nobiſcum eſt omnibus diebus uſq; ad conſummationem ſeculi, neque congregatis ubique fidelibus homo eſt præſens; ſed virtus divina quæ erat in Chriſto: It is not Chriſt, as being Man, that is whereſoever two or three be gathered in his name; neither Chriſt, as being man, is with us all dayes unto the end of the world; not Chriſt, as being man, is preſent with the faithfull every where gathered together; but the divine power (or Nature) that was in Chriſt. Which onely place of ſo ancient of a Father, if we had eares, for truth might yeeld a man more than halfe a ſatisfaction in this matter. Saint Auguſtine concurreth with it in ſenſe effectually, when he ſaith; Videte aſcendentem, credite in abſentem, ſperate venientem, ſed tamen per miſericordiã occultam etiam ſentite preſentem: See you Chriſt aſcending into heaven, beleeve in him being abſent, truſt in Chriſt that he is come, and yet by his ſecret mercy feele him preſent. Saint Gregory ſaith: Verbum incarnatum manet & recedet. Manet Divinitate, recedet corpore: The word incarnate both abideth with us, and departeth from us. It abideth with us by the Godhead, it departh from us by the body, or Manhood. Saint Auguſtine ſaith: Ibat per id quod homo erat, manebat per id quod Deus erat. Ibat per id quod uno loco erat, manebat per id quod ubique erat: Chriſt departed by that he was man, and abode by that hee was God. Hee departed by that hee was in one place, and abode by that that is in all places. And in another place, Dominus noſter abſentavit ſe corpore ab omni Eccleſia, & aſcendit in Cœlum: Our Lord, as touching his body, abſented himſelfe from his whole Church. Infinite almoſt are the teſtimonies of Fathers touching this matter, even to the end; but I may not bee infinite in this little abridgement, and therefore I will adde one moe, and ſo leave them, which is out of Fulgentius, a very worthy place to be duely regarded, and ever remembred. Theſe be his words: Secundum humanitatem ſuam localiter erat in terra; ſecundum divinitatem, & Cœlum implevit, & terram. Vera humanitas Chriſti localis eſt: vera divinitas ſemper immenſa eſt. Caro Chriſti abſque dubitatione localis eſt: Divinitas tamen ejus ubiq; ſemper eſt. Permanſit in Chriſto immenſa divinitas, ſuſceptâ eſt ab eo localis humanitas. Quomodo aſcendit in cœlum, niſi quia localis, & verus eſt homo? Quomodo adeſt fidelibus, niſi quia idem immenſus eſt & verus Deus? That is, Chriſt, according to his Manhood, was placed in the earth, but according to his Godhead he filled both heaven and earth. The Manhood of Chriſt is contained in place: The Godhead of Chriſt is infinite, and in all places. The fleſh of Chriſt is doubtleſſe in one place: The Godhead of Chriſt is for ever in every place. There remained ſtill in Chriſt the infinite Godhead, there was received of him a locall Manhood. How aſcended he into heaven, ſaving that he is very man contained in place? How is he preſent with the faithfull, ſaving that he is infinite and true God. Vnus idemque Chriſtus ſecundum humanam ſubſtantiam aberat cœlo, cum eſſet in terra; & dereliquit terram cum aſcendiſſet in cœlum: Chriſt being one according to the ſubſtance of his Manhood, was abſent from heaven when he was on earth, and forſooke the earth when he aſcended into heaven. Now then ſee the evidence of truth out of all theſe Fathers. See how carefully they defend the properties of each nature, giving to the Godhead a power to be every where, but keeping the Manhood to a place, becauſe a true body hath that property. Wherefore I ſtay with theſe teſtimonies, and now having ſhewed thus much, I ſay, concerning your objection, that it followeth not at all, what ſeemeth to you to be a neceſſary conſequence, namely, that either if his manhood be not in all places where his Godhead is, there ſhould be a ſeparation of his Natures; or if his Godhead and Manhood be ever unſeparably united, then whereſoever

Aug. ad Dardanum. Baſ. de S. S. c. 22

Aug. ad Dardanum, Epiſt. 57. Cavendum ne ita divinitatem aſtruamus hominis, ut veritatem corporis auferamus. Secundum hanc formam non eſt putandus ubiq; diffuſus. Cyril. in Ioan. lib. 11. cap. 3. Orig. in Mat. tract. 32.

Aug. in Pſal. 46.

Greg. de Paſch. hom. 30.

Aug. in Ioan. tract 78.

Aug. in Ser. in ſer. 2. Paſch.

ſo ever the one is, the other muſt alſo bee. For by many plaine examples you may ſee the contrary. As by the Sunne and his beames, which are never ſeparated, and yet the body of the Sunne is not everywhere where the beames bee. Your eye and your ſeeing are never ſeparated, and yet your ſight goeth and reacheth further than the ſubſtance of your eye doth. The man and woman that dwell in charity, dwell in God, and God in them; yet whereſoever God is, they are not, by reaſon of that conjunction. My head, and mine arme are united in one body, yet not in one place. The body of the tree, and the bough; the line, and the center; the Starre, and his Spheare; with many ſuch things, plainly ſhew, that albeit things be conjoyned together, yet may the one extend further than the other without any diviſion or ſeparation. And therefore neither doth this union of natures in the perſon of Chriſt, give an ubiquity to his body, neither the difference of place take away, or impeach his true union. Wherefore when Pope Nicholas would have brought that new Popiſh Article of Tranſubſtantiation into the Creed, hee would firſt have utterly removed this whole Article of Chriſts aſcenſion into heaven: for theſe two Articles may not well ſtand together by any conſtruction in one Creed.

The fruit and uſe of this Aſcention, what is it?

Firſt, that in heaven we have him an Advocate to make interceſſion for us, *Rom.*8. 34. Secondly, by him our fleſh and nature is poſſeſſed of heaven, to aſſure us, that wee ſhall as verily follow in our appointed times, and there live and abide for ever, as he plainly is gone before us to provide for us. Thirdly, that he hath, and doth, and to the end ſhall ſend his bleſſed and holy Spirit to us, the pledge and pawne of our election, by which we ſet our mindes on things above, and not on things below; we aſcend in thought, will, and deſire, to the place that abideth, ſighing to be cloathed with our houſe, which is from heaven, wiſhing to be looſed, & be with Chriſt; becauſe whileſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord. All three ſingular profits of this happy Aſcention, if the Lord bleſſe the knowledge of them to us.

Tertul. l. de reſur. carnis, ſecure inquit eſtote cara & ſanguis, uſurpatis, & cœlum, & regnum Dei in Chriſto. Negent et in cœlo Chriſtum, qui vobis cœlum negaverint.

What ſenſe have the words following? Hee ſitteth at the right hand of GOD the Father Almighty.

God neither hath right hand nor left hand, as man hath, but by this phraſe, the Scripture ſpeaking according to our capacities, and after a cuſtome uſed amongſt us, noteth the glory and honour of our Saviour, now aſcended, and reſting in heaven concerning his bodie: For with us here in earth we know it a faſhion, when a man will give honour and preheminence to another, to place him and ſet him upon his right hand. So did Salomon to his mother, when ſhee came to ſpeake with him, called for a ſtoole, and ſet her on his right hand: To which cuſtome David alludeth in his Pſalme, when he ſaith: Vpon thy right hand did ſtand the Queene in a veſture of gold, &c. So the ſenſe, as if we ſhould ſay, I beleeve that Chriſt is now no longer compaſſed about with infirmitie, as before he was here upon earth; but being aſcended, hee ſitteth now at Gods right hand; that is, hath obtained honor, and Majeſty, and glory, and in ſuch ſort remaineth my kinde and carefull Interceſſor, to whom with comfort and confidence I may ever reſort, and know that he is both willing, and able to helpe me. Saint Pauls words, in my opinion, may well bee alledged as a Commentary of this ſitting of our Saviour in heaven, who to the Epheſians writeth thus; He hath ſet him at his right hand in the heavenly places, Farre above all Principality, and Power, and Might, and Dominion; and every name that is named, not in this world onely, but in that alſo which is to come. And hath made all things ſubject under his feet, and hath given him over all things to be the head of the Church, &c. See what honour and Majeſty the Apoſtle deſcribeth, and know that thus Chriſt ſitteth in heaven at the right hand of God his Father, and note this as the third degree of his exaltation. Adde unto it the ſecond to the Philppians, which will ſay as much, and ſee the note of the Margent there. To which of the Angels (again ſaith the Apoſtle to the Hebrews) ſaid God at any time, ſit at my right hand till I make thy enemies thy footſtool? Noting by the compariſon of Angels and Chriſt together, the excellency of the honour that Chriſt hath attained after his great humiliation, above all Angels. And by the words, donec, &c. plainly teaching us, that, hæc eſt dextra Dei, this is the right hand of God, the power of God given to Chriſt, in which he ſhall overcome all his enemies. Which when he hath done, Ceſſabit Chriſtus ſedere ad dextram patris; Chriſt ſhall ceaſe to ſit at the right hand of God, not that he ſhall not there be equall to his Father. But ſee Maſter Deering.

The third degree of Chriſts exaltation.

1 King. 2. Pſal 45.

Epheſ. 1. 20.

Heb. 1. 13.

And what further uſe may we make of theſe words?

Two ſweet and comfortable uſes. The one, that thus ſitting as Lord, and King, and Head of his Church, he giveth by his holy Spirit, gifts and graces to us here remaining, yet as pilgrims from him. According to the ſaying of the Apoſtle; Vnto every one of us is given grace, according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt. Wherfore he ſaith, When he aſcended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men; According to the words of Saint Peter, Since he by the right hand of God hath been exalted, and hath received of his Father the promiſe of the holy Ghoſt, hee hath ſhed forth this which now ye ſee and heare; what he therefore received without all meaſure, we by this his ſitting at his Fathers right hand, obtaine from him, to our great and endleſſe good. The other profit we have by this, to bee defended and ſaved from all our enemies by his power. Pſalm. 110. 1.

Pſal.

*Pſa.*2.9. *Zach.*2.12. For if when he lived on earth in infirmitie,and obſcurity, the winde and waters obeyed his will, and the Devils trembled at his power, and could doe no otherwiſe than he would ſuffer them; What ſtorme or tempeſt of a roaring Tyrant can further now prevaile againſt any of his, than hee for his glory and their good ſhall ſuffer? Therefore in a ſure beliefe of this holy Article, we may boldly ſay with Saint Paul, in all dangers and feares; Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? Shall tribulation,anguiſh, or perſecution,or famine,or nakedneſſe,or perill,or ſword? As it is written,For thy ſake are we killed all the day long,and are counted as ſheepe for the ſlaughter; Neverthelеſſe,in all things wee are more than Conquerours,through him that loved usc,&. He is able we ſee, by his glory, and he is willing, becauſe he is our Head. The head never abideth the hurt of any member. Onely therefore beleeve,be ſtrong,expect comfort in his appointed time,and amidſt the waves of any woe ever meditate of theſe uſes,lifting up a thankfull heart to God the Father,Sonne,and Holy Ghoſt for them. God for his deare Sons ſake make us thankfull. And let this ſuffice for this Article.

THE SEVENTH ARTICLE.

From thence he ſhall come to judge both the quicke and the dead.

BEcauſe our Lord and Saviour, who is aſcended to his Father, and there ſitteth on his right hand; that is, governeth, ruleth, and judgeth all, yet ſo doth it, that both wee his faithfull ſtill remaine ſubject to the Croſſe,and many injuries, and the wicked, to our ſight,eſcape oft unpuniſhed: Therefore leſt either with the adverſity which often befalleth us, or by any cruell and proud inſolency of man, we ſhould be too much daunted and caſt downe, hee mercifully in his Word promiſeth a judging day, which here in this Article is now mentioned, to the ſtrengthning of the faith, and comforting of the hearts of all thoſe that truly,and conſtantly beleeve it. For the more and the greater our affliction is, the more and the more may wee bee aſſured of this day. The ſenſe therefore of this Article is thus much: I beleeve, and conſtantly hold my ſelfe aſſured, that my deare Saviour will one day come againe in his owne appointed time,bodily,with great glory and Majeſty, to give every man according to his works; pronouncing to his faithfull,that in this world have endured many wrongs, a moſt comfortable Come: and to the wicked,that have done what they liſt,with great pride and boldneſſe,a moſt dreadfull Goe: And therefore in hope thereof I endure with patience the ſtate allotted mee in this life, by his good pleaſure,knowing that the afflictions of this life can never be worthy the joyes then,and in that day to be revealed and received.

Then ſo comfortable, I ſee,will be the doctrine of this Article,that without offence,by way of Queſtion, for my inſtruction, I may demand many things,as the hiſtory of the Article, that there ſhall be a judgement,when,where,how, under what Iudge, and who ſhall be judged; with ſuch like queſtions: then the ſweet and profitable uſe of all.

And very well ſhall I like that you follow your owne minde, which if it bee a meanes to profit you, I hope alſo it will profit others: and ſo being the thing I onely ayme at, wc all ſhall bee pleaſed, obtaining what we wiſh, and this labour performed to his right end.

Iude 14,15. Firſt then I will ſhew you,that there ſhall bee a day; which by many evident Scriptures is aſſured. Enoch, the ſeventh from Adam, propheſied of this day, ſaying; Behold, the Lord commeth with thouſands of his Saints,to give judgement againſt all men,and to rebuke all the ungodly among them of their wicked deeds,which they have ungodly cõmitted,and of all their cruel ſpeakings, which wicked ſinners have ſpoken againſt him: Vnto which ſort of men, ſaith S. Iude,is reſerved the blackneſſe of darkneſſe for ever. Our Saviour Chriſt ſaith in the Goſpell of Saint Matthew:

Mat.24 30. Then ſhall appear the ſigne of the Sonne of Man in heaven,and then ſhall all the kindreds of the earth mourne,and they ſhall ſee the Sonne of Man come in the clouds of heaven,with power,and great glory. And he ſhall ſend his Angels with a great ſound of a Trumpet, and they ſhall gather together his Elect from the foure windes, and from the one end of the heavens unto the other. Afterward againe in the fifteenth Chapter moſt fully and plainly. Where purpoſely are joyned the deſtruction of Hieruſalem, and this great day,that we might be aſſured by the one, which quickly followed, of the certainty of the other,which as aſſuredly ſhall follow. S. Paul hath a notable teſtimony againe of this day to the Theſſalonians,where he ſaith; It is a righteous thing with God, to recompence tribulation to them that trouble you, and to you which are troubled, reſt with us, when the Lord Ieſus ſhall ſhew himſelfe from heaven,with his mighty Angels in flaming fire,rendering vengeance to thē that doe not know God,& which obey not the Goſpell of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt,wch ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting perdition,frō the preſence of the Lord,and frō the glory of his power,when he ſhal come to be glorified with his Saints,& to be made marvellous in al thē that beleeve. In which words you ſee not onely the affirmation of this appointed day: but a reaſonable alſo, and an inevitable Argument drawne from the juſtice of God, that it muſt be ſo. For it is a righteous thing (ſaith he) with God to puniſh the wicked, and to reward the good. But that in this life is not alwayes done. Therefore in Gods juſtice there muſt bee another day wherein this ſhall be done according to right. Caſt your eye to that great flood, and to that fearfull deſtruction of Sodome by fire, and thinke of them as types and ſhadowes of this day. Remember thoſe words of the Wiſe-man: Rejoyce O young man in thy youth, and let thy heart cheare thee in the dayes of thy youth, and walke in the wayes of thy heart, and in the ſight of thine eyes; but know, that for all theſe things God will bring thee to judgement. And againe in the next Chapter; Let us heare the end of all, Feare God and keepe his Commandements, For this is the whole duty of man. For God will bring every work into judgement, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good or bad. Remember S. Pauls words to the Corinthians, VVe muſt appeare before the Judgement Seate of Chriſt, that every man may receive the things which are done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or evill. And oppoſe all theſe witneſſes, to the ſcoffes and mocks of Atheiſts, and wicked ſpirits in the world, denying, as they dare, the comming of this day. Of which ſort were thoſe in the Prophet Zephaniahs time: who frozen in their dregs, ſaid in their heart, The Lord will neither do good nor evill. And thoſe in Saint Peter, ſpoken of, who being mockers, and walking after their luſts, ſaid, Where is the promiſe of his comming? for ſince the Fathers dyed, all things continue alike from the beginning of the creation. And thoſe blinde Saduces in our Saviours time, who denyed the reſurrection, and conſequently the comming of Chriſt unto Judgement. Furthermore, by the cauſes of this judgement you may aſſure your heart of the certainty of it. Which cauſes are theſe and ſuch like. That God may ſhew himſelfe juſt, and a right rewarder of every man according to his works, which in this life doth not alwayes appeare, as hath beene ſaid, becauſe the wicked flouriſh, and the godly ſuffer many bitter afflictions. Secondly, that the body, which, together with the ſoule, hath either glorified or diſhonoured God, may together with it receive puniſhment or mercy, and that openly, which at this firſt death is not done, the body reſting in the earth till that day. Thirdly, that the Majeſty of Chriſt may appeare to their terrour, who by his humilitie in this life tooke occaſion to refuſe him, and fall from him; of which cauſe Saint Auguſtine ſpake, when he ſaid; Illa ipſa forma erit; quæ ſub Iudice ſtetit, ipſa judicabit, qua judicatus eſt: ut videant impii Gloriam ejus, in cujus manſuetudinem fremuerunt. It ſhall be in that ſame ſhape of his wherein he ſtood before the Judge (here on earth) in that ſame wherein hee was judged ſhall he judge, that all may ſee his glory, againſt whoſe meekneſſe they ſhewed contempt. Againe, in another place, Sedebit Iudex, qui ſtetit ſub Iudice, & damnabit reos, qui falſo factus eſt reus. He ſhall ſit as Judge, which (here) ſtood before a Judge, and he ſhall condemne the guilty, which (here) falſly was made guilty. Fourthly, for this cauſe ſhall there be a judgement, that Gods poore lameneſſe ſo ſcorned and deſpiſed in this world, may alſo in glory with their Lord and Maſter appeare, to the great aſtoniſhment of their proud enemies. Of which that notable place in the Booke of Wiſedome ſpeaketh: Then ſhall the righteous ſtand in great boldneſſe before the face of ſuch as have tormented him, and taken away his labours. When they ſee him they ſhall be vexed with horrible feare, and ſhall be amazed for his wonderfull deliverance; and ſhall change their mindes, and ſigh for griefe of minde, and ſay with themſelves; This is he whom we ſometimes had in deriſion, and in a parable of reproach. We fooles thought his life madneſſe, and his end without honour. How is hee accounted among the children of God, and his portion is among his Saints? Therefore we have erred from the truth, the light of righteouſneſſe hath not ſhined unto us, and the Sunne of underſtanding roſe not upon us. With many moe words there, worthy reading often, and often remembrance. Laſtly, becauſe neither good nor bad ceaſe to profit or hurt by examples, yet remembred, by children and friends taught by them, by bookes written by them; and many ſuch other wayes. But now all ſhall be full, and ſo a due judgment according to all. Thus doe I hope you ſee ſufficiently the firſt point you inquired of: namely, the certainty of this day, this laſt and great appointed Judgement.

Eccleſ.11.9.

Chap.12.laſt.

2 Cor.5.

Zephan.1.12.

Cauſes of the ſecond judgement.

My heart is eſtabliſhed, I thanke God, and I well know Heaven and Earth ſhall paſſe, but one jote of his Word ſhall not paſſe till all things be fulfilled. Wherefore, if you pleaſe, I will attend to the ſecond point, when this day ſhall be.

And I will follow you in that order, wiſhing you to remember our Saviours words; Of this day and houre knoweth no man, not the Angels of heaven, nor the Sonne of Man, &c. And his Apoſtles after him, That to this Judgement hee ſhould come as a Theefe in the night, whoſe comming is unknowne, that every day may be obſerved (to be ready) in it. Incertum tempus ſemper paratam vult animam; An uncertaine time requireth a minde ever ready and prepared. But touching the words, that, not to the Sonne of Man himſelfe it is knowne: Underſtand them as touching his Manhood onely, and then that objection of the Arrians, for an inequality in the Sonne to the Father, is anſwered. Equall with his Father touching his Godhead, and inferiour to the Father touching his Manhood. And if yet yee will object, that all ignorance is the puniſhment

Aug.tract.19. Iohn ca.5.

Marke 13.32. 1 Theſ.5.1.

ment of ſinne, and our Saviour as man having no ſinne. Therefore neither as man any ignorance; I may anſwer you truly, that all ignorance is not the puniſhment of ſinne: For the Angels have ignorance, and know not of this day by name, yet no ſinne in them: But you will ſay you ſpeake of men, and not of Angels; ſo then doe I, and ſay that in Chriſt, as man, ignorance was no more the puniſhment of ſinne, than death was, which although in us it bee the reward of ſinne, yet was it not ſo in him, otherwiſe than he ſupplyed our place, and bare our ſinnes in his body: but notwithſtanding that this day is thus unknowne, yet the buſie braine of man ſtayeth not, but ſtill it is ſearching to know, what here wee learne cannot be knowne. And unadviſed Treatiſes have beene written, to ſatisfie mens curioſity herein. And they ſay, That albeit the day and houre be not knowne, as the Goſpell ſaith; yet ſome gueſſe may be given at further time. But S. Auguſtine ſaid, and with great conſideration; Si latet ultimus dies, latet penultimus; & ſi latet penultimus, latet antepenultimus, &c. If the laſt day be hidden, then can no man tell which is the laſt day but one; and if not that, then not which is the laſt but two, &c. To a further time, Eligo cautam ignorantiam, magis quam falſam ſcientiam; I chuſe therefore, ſaith he, rather an adviſed ignorance, than a fooliſh and unadviſed knowledge. Some, ſaith hee, have reckoned from the beginning of the world ſeven thouſand yeares, and then ſhould be this day. Others from the Aſcention of Chriſt have ſaid, ſhould be foure hundred: others, five hundred; others, a thouſand yeares, and then ſhould be his judgement; the falſhood of all which now appeareth. The old Jewes reckoned (as it ſeemed, following an old Oracle of Helias) two thouſand after Chriſt, but with as much certainty as the reſt: wherefore it is a very good ſaying of S. Auſten, and fit for any good mans contentment in this point: Tunc cuique veniet dies ille, cum venerit ei dies, ut talis hinc exeat, qualis judicatus eſt illo die: Then ſhall this great day of Judgment be rightly ſaid to come to any man, when that day commeth, wherein he ſhall depart hence, even ſuch an one as in that day he ſhall be judged. To which judgement of Saint Auſten, that as the day of death leaveth us, ſo the day of judgement ſhall finde us, that fully anſwereth of the Wiſeman; Looke how the Tree falleth, ſo it lyeth: which by the way, I might aske a Papiſt how it ſuteth with their doctrine of Purgatory? The Apoſtle ſaith alſo; Every man in this day ſhall receive according to that which he hath done in the body, (He doth not ſay, according to that which he hath ſuffered in his ſoule in Purgatory) whether it bee good or evill: but I leave them to thinke of an anſwer. And of this point I truſt this is enough.

Ignorantia rerum ſciendarum eſt peccatum, ſed ea non fuit in homine Chriſto.

Aug. in Pſal. 6.

De Civit. Dei. lib. 18. cap. 53.

Your next point is, to ſhew where the judgment ſhall be.

Mat. 24 30. And that alſo the Scripture plainly teacheth us, ſaying: It ſhall be in the ayre, and in the clouds: So are the words (if you remember) of our Saviour himſelf; Then ſhall appeare the ſign of the Son of Man in heaven, and then ſhall all the kindreds of the world mourne, and they ſhall ſee the Son of Man come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And the like words hath the Apoſtle after him, Saint Paul: Then ſhall we which live and remaine, be caught up with them alſo in the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the ayre, and ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord. By which places wee plainly ſee where this great judgement of all fleſh ſhall bee. The Jewes therefore erred in dreaming of the vale of Ioſophat, &c.

And what I pray you ſhall be the forme and manner of this judgement?

Luke 24. Surely it ſhall bee a day of great terrour and feare in many reſpects. And firſt, in regard of ſignes and ſights very ſtrange and fearfull; For there ſhall bee ſignes in the Sunne, and in the Moone, and in the Starres; and upon the Earth, trouble among the Nations, with perplexity; the Sea and the waters ſhall roare, and mens hearts ſhall faile them for feare, and for looking after thoſe things which ſhall come upon the world, for the powers of heaven ſhall be ſhaken. S. Matthew ſheweth how there ſhall be ſignes in the Sunne and Moone, to wit; the Sunne ſhall be darkned, and the Moone ſhall not give her light, and the Starres ſhall fall from heaven: by fearfull and ſtrange Eclipſes (ſaith Saint Chriſoſtome) ſhall this darkneſſe grow. Beda, by the bright glory of Chriſt, that day ſhall bee, as you ſee a Candle dimme in the brightneſſe of the Sunne ſhine. Origen and Ambroſe allegorically applyeth it to the Fathers of the Church, who they ſay in thoſe dayes, ſhall fall into error and apoſtaſie. Aretius a later writer ſaith; haply all theſe ſhall bee. And Calvin liking not to gueſſe at an unknowne matter, ſaith; Modum jam haud facile conjicere poſſumus, ſed dies ille judicabit: The manner of this darkneſſe in the Sunne and Moone now is hard to ſay how it ſhall be, but that day ſhall ſhew it.

Mat. 12. Secondly, it ſhall bee a fearfull day in reſpect of the great and ſtraight account which then is to be made; For every idle word we ſhall render a reckoning, ſaith the Goſpell, and God will bring into judgment every worke, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good or bad, ſaith the wiſe Preacher in his Booke, of our bodies and all the powers thereof; of our mindes, and all the graces thereof; of our goods, of our time, of our meanes and wayes whatſoever granted unto us to ſerve God, our neighbours and Countrey withall; and in a word, of things committed and omitted we ſhall give an account that day.

Thirdly, it ſhall be a fearfull day, in reſpect of the accuſers then againſt us: for firſt, Satan that great accuſer, and that common accuſer of all, ſhall ſtep up againſt us. All that ever wee have have hurt or wronged ſhall accuſe us: as the blood of wronged Abel cried to God againſt his brother. The good creatures of God provided in mercy for our comfort and uſe, and by us ſinfully abuſed, ſhall cry againſt us: our conſciences ſhall bee as thouſands of witneſſes againſt us, and the Judge himſelfe ſhall accuſe in that day, telling ſome that When he was hungry they did not feed him, when he was naked they did not cloath him, when hee was in priſon they did not viſit him, &c.

Fourthly, in regard of the dreadfull puniſhment that ſhall enſue then unto thoſe that ſhall taſte of Gods judging hand, it ſhall be a great and terrible day; which puniſhments are expreſſed with fearefull words, in that place of the Apocalyps, where it is ſaid; They ſhall drinke the wine of the wrath of God, they ſhall bee tormented in fire and brimſtone before the holy Angels, and before the Lambe, they ſhall have no reſt day nor night, and the ſmoake of their torment ſhall aſcend for evermore. Than the which words what can bee more dreadfull to a feeling heart? Adde unto them yet for more and further profit ſuch other Scriptures, wayes, and meanes, as tell us truely of this puniſhment: God is called the God of juſtice, Et Deus ultionum, the God of revenge, with divers ſuch names, to aſcribe a terror of his judgements. Therefore by his names conceive of this puniſhment. Then wee know his mercy is wonderfully amplified in the Scripture, and ſaid to be unmeaſurable and unſearchable. Now his mercy and juſtice are as two armes embracing and kiſſing one another. Therefore as the one is great, ſo is the other; and therefore as by the meaſure of one arme we know the meaſure of the other; ſo by Gods mercy know his iuſtice, and by his benefits, ſo many and great, his grievous puniſhments in this judging day, which ſhall bee as great. The eye hath not ſeene, nor the eare heard, neither mans heart ever able to conceive the joy and comfort prepared for the godly: and ſurely even ſo, neitheir eye, nor eare, nor heart of man hath ever comprehended the greatneſſe of the wrath of God, which in this day ſhall fully bee powred upon the wicked. The patience againe and long-ſuffering of the Lord, is it not wonderfull? Is it not paſt the reach of any man, who cannot endure in his whole life with patience (though unable to revenge) what God endureth in one houre, being Almighty, and able to doe what he will? And what is the Argument of the Apoſtle, but that as his ſuffering is, ſo will his wrath bee when the time commeth? for how elſe doth the impenitent ſinner heape up wrath againſt the day of wrath; but that an heape of patience and long-ſuffering in God will bring upon him one day a like heape of fearefull and dreadfull puniſhments, that contemneth chat mercy?

Apoc. 14. 10.

The names and phraſes of darkneſſe and blackneſſe, of fire and fornace, and brimſtone, of worme and woe, of weeping and gnaſhing, of binding hand and foot, with many ſuch like, doe vehemently expreſſe the terror of this day, in regard of puniſhment. How glad would the rich Glutton have been but of one drop of water to coole his tongue? How glad will the wicked bee at that day to have the Rockes and Mountaines to fall upon them and cover them, and all for feare of this great puniſhment now to enſue? The fire of this world was created for our comfort, and yet it is ſo terrible as to hold but one hand in it one day I am not able. O how much more dreadfull is that fire that was purpoſely made for puniſhment and torment, and not for good, when my whole body ſhall lie in it for evermore? We are not able to endure the pains of this life but in one part, if it bee extreme and raging, as head-ach, tooth-ach, gout, ſtone, and ſuch like: what thinke we then of every part of our bodies at one time to be in the moſt raging paine that poſſibly in this world can be in them? How could we ſuffer and endure all that? yet all that ſhould be nothing comparable to the paines inflicted at this day. The proportion againe of mans ſinne is it not great? and verily anſwerable ſhall the puniſhment be in this time. For as with Babylon, ſo with all men ſhall it be, God being not partiall, or a reſpecter of perſons, and of Babylon it is ſaid: Reward her even as ſhe hath rewarded you, and give her double according to her works, and in the cup that ſhee hath filled to you, fill her the double. In as much as ſhee glorified her ſelfe, and lived in pleaſure, ſo much give yee to her torment and ſorrow. Unto all which if we adde eternity, Lord, Lord, how truely ſaid the Apoſtle; It is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of God. Yet all this while we have expreſſed but pœna ſenſus, ſuch paine & puniſhment as is ſubiect to ſenſe, above and beyond all which a thouſand thouſand degrees is that puniſhment which is called pœna damni, comforts that the wicked in this day ſhall be deprived of, as the preſence of God and all heavenly Angels, Saints, and joyes: which againe to go over in particular would make a whole booke, and ſtill wee ſhall be ſhort for want of underſtanding of that which indeed is loſt by the wicked and found by the godly. Wherefore I ſay againe, and as you ſee truely, that, in regard of puniſhment, this day ſhall be a fearefull and a great day, even ſuch a day as the Prophet deſcribeth, when he ſaith; a day of wrath, a day of trouble, and heavines, a day of deſtruction and deſolation, a day of obſcurity & darkneſſe, a day of clouds and blackneſſe, &c. O that we may thinke of it to our good whilſt the Lord giveth time and ſpace. Amen.

Malach. 4.
Eſay 66.
Marke 9.
Matt. 8.
Iob 20.

Greg. quomodo tolerandæ pœnæ quæ reſervabat, ſi ferri non poſſit pœna quæ purgat. Chryſoſt. ſaith, not an Ague of 3. daies.

Heb. 10.

Sophony 1. 13.

Fiftly, in reſpect of the Judge and his unſpeakable Majeſty and glory wherein hee ſhall appeare that day: it will be a great and fearefull day. For who ſhall bee Judge but even hee whom the wicked ſo much and ſo long have contemned and deſpiſed? ſo ſaith this Article. From thence

He ſhall come to judge the quicke and the dead. Which He ? even Ieſus Chriſt before ſpoken of in divers Articles: ſo teacheth us our Saviour himſelfe in the 24. and 25. of S. Matt. and in the fift of Iohn, where he ſaith; The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgement unto the Son.

Acts 10.42. Acts 17.31.

So teacheth S. Peter, Cornelius, and his company, that Chriſt commanded them to preach unto the people, and to teſtifie that it is he that is ordained of God a Judge of quicke and dead. So teacheth Paul, that God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteouſneſſe, by that man whom hee hath appointed, whereof hee hath given an aſſurance to all men in that he hath raiſed him from the dead. Daniel propheſied of this many a day and yeere ſince, as you may ſee and reade in his ſeventh Chapter. And with what glory and Majeſty ſhall hee appeare? Reade and remember the words of the Goſpel: with power and great glory. The words of Daniel: The Thrones were ſet, and the Ancient of dayes did ſit, whoſe garment was white as ſnow, and the haire of his head like pure wooll, his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheeles as burning fire. A fiery ſtreame iſſued and came forth from before him, thouſand thouſands miniſtred unto him, and tenne thouſand thouſands ſtood before him, the Judgement was ſet, and the bookes were opened. Saint Iohn in his Revelation. Behold he commeth with Cloudes, and every eye ſhall ſee him, yea even they which pierced him through, and all kindreds of the earth ſhall waile before him, even ſo, Amen.

Dan. 7 9.

A good meditation when we looke upon the clouds, to thinke that one day they ſhall be our chariot, to meet this heavenly Iudge in.

1 Theſſ 4. 2 Pet. 3. 10.

Saint Paul ſpecifying this glory, ſaith: He ſhall deſcend from heaven with a ſhout, and with the voice of the Arch-angel, and with the Trumpet of God; All words of great and fearefull majeſty. Saint Peter ſaith, The heavens then ſhall paſſe away with a noiſe, and the Element ſhall melt with heat, and the earth with the works that are therein ſhall be burnt up: which is a great and fearefull glory, and to the wicked, whoſe conſciences ſhall cry within them againſt their horrible contempt of this mighty God, muſt needs make that day a dreadfull day.

But ſhall it be thus terrible to the godly alſo, and beleevers?

O no, God forbid: to them quite contrary it ſhall be, a day of the greateſt comfort that ever befell unto them; therefore are they willed to lift up their heads, to looke up, and to bee aſſured that their redemption and full deliverance is now come. To them it ſhall bee ſaid with ſweetneſſe not to be expreſſed, Come, come yee bleſſed of my Father, poſſeſſe the comforts now prepared for you before all worlds. O vox quam læta, quam dulcis! O voice, how joyfull, how ſweet! Acquiri poteſt, æſtimari non poteſt felicitas illius diei: The happy joyes of that day may be attained unto, but never expreſſed according to their greatneſſe. Gaudebant ſupra ſe de viſione Dei, infra ſe de evaſione inferni, intra ſe de conſcientiæ pace, circa ſe de hominum & Angelorum aſſociatione: They ſhall have joy above them by the ſight of God, joy beneath them by the eſcape of hell, joy within them, by the peace of conſcience, and joy round about them, by the bleſſed company and fellowſhip of men and Angels, ſaith that good Father S. Auſtine, in his meditation of this matter. Wherefore farre and farre different you ſee, ſhall this day bee to the godly, and to the wicked. The Lord for Chriſts ſake continue us in the number of the godly.

Yet remaineth the laſt point of this Hiſtory, who ſhall be judged?

This Article telleth us, Both the quicke and the dead: which agreeth with the Teſtimony of Saint Paul, 2 Tim. 4. 1. where hee ſaith; Ieſus Chriſt ſhall judge the quicke and the dead at his appearing, &c. Alſo with the teſtimony of S. Peter, He commandeth us to preach unto the people, and to teſtifie that it is he that is ordained of God, a Judge of quicke and dead. And in his Epiſtle, Which ſhall give accounts to him, that is ready to judge quicke and dead. Underſtanding by the dead in all theſe places, ſuch as before that time, bee departed out of this life: and by the quicke, ſuch as ſhall remaine then alive here on earth, and ſhall not die, but bee changed: For wee ſhall not all die, ſaith the Apoſtle, but wee ſhall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the laſt Trumpet: For the Trumpet ſhall blow, and the dead ſhall be raiſed up incorruptible, and wee ſhall be changed, which change ſhall bee in ſtead of the firſt death. This now is the Hiſtory of this Article fully and wholly, according to the points mentioned in the beginning.

Acts 10.42.

1 Cor. 15. 51. 1 Theſſ. 4. 15.

And an Hiſtory it is of great moment to a Chriſtian man: the Lord ſettle the remembrance of it both in man and woman, to a joyfull appearing at that day, for this life will end, this world will periſh, the falſe and flattering pleaſures thereof, whatſoever they be, will faile us, and at this day come either to an eternall comfort, or to an eternall woe. Which good to further, and harme to avoid the better, I pray you make ſome uſe of this Article.

The comfort of this day to the godly, I have partly touched before: and if yet more you will meditate of that, think what S. Iames ſaith, Be patient brethren unto the comming of our Lord: Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, untill he receive the former and the latter raine: Bee ye alſo patient therefore, and ſettle your hearts, for the comming of the Lord draweth neere. Grudge not one againſt another, brethren, leſt ye be condemned: behold the Judge ſtandeth before the doore. Where you ſee three ſeverall times mention made of the Judge, and of this his comming for the comfort and deliverance of his choſen, with an inference thereon, that therefore they ſhould indure whatſoever pleaſeth him him till then to ſend, with patience and contentment. The day of Harveſt is the Husbandmans ſatisfaction, and this day of juſtice likewiſe alſo ſhould bee ours; for wee ſhall receive then what wee deſire, and our enemies aſſuredly what is due to them. Thinke alſo of that crie in the Revelation, of the ſoules under the Altar of them that were killed for the word of God, and for the Teſtimony which they maintained, which cried with a loud voice, ſaying, How long Lord which art holy and true, doſt not thou judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? Making this day, a day of juſt requitall, and ſo a day of full contentment and comfort to them, that for good have beene fouly abuſed and wronged. In regard whereof, againe the ſame bleſſed Apoſtle Saint Iohn, with burning zeale of a fervent Prayer, deſireth the Lord to haſten that day, ſaying: Come Lord Ieſus come, Come and that quickly: Yea, ſuch a delivering day ſhall this be, that Saint Paul ſaith; It ſhall bee welcome in his manner, even to unreaſonable creatures. For the fervent deſire of the creature, ſaith hee, waiteth when the ſonnes of God ſhall bee revealed. Becauſe the creature is ſubject to vanity, not of it owne will, but by reaſon of him which hath ſubdued it under hope, becauſe the creature alſo ſhall bee delivered from the bondage of corruption, to the glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God. For wee know that every creature groneth with us alſo, and travelleth in paine together unto this preſent. And not onely the creature, but wee alſo which have the firſt fruits of the Spirit, even wee doe ſigh in our ſelves, waiting for the Adoption, even the redemption of our bodies. O day therefore of great contentment and comfort aſſuredly! Adde to this the conſideration of the Judge, that hee ſhall bee no other, but even that ſweet and gracious Saviour, which before for us was judged himſelfe, and hath taken away all curſe from us. Whereupon it followeth, that God being ſatisfied, and the curſe removed, hee ſhall not come to condemne us, but to ſave us. For now there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſu: Hee is a merciſull God, and wee bee his people; He is our Patron, and wee his Clients; Hee is our Head, and we his Members: How then may we feare any condemnation? No, the two ends of his Comming are to take us with all his number of his Elect into eternall joy, and to caſt his and our enemies into eternall woe; as evidently appeareth by that which hath already been ſaid, and by much more that might be ſaid.

Iam. 5. 7, 8, 9.

Apoc.6.9.

Chap.22.20. Rom.8.19.

Rom.8.1. 1 Cor.1.30.

O that wee may bee found in that day worthy in his mercy to receive favour, and if you have any advice for a Chriſtian man to prepare himſelfe the better for this time, ſpeake on, I begge it and crave it.

Surely to make ready for this day, a firſt ſtep muſt bee to looke to our faith: For this is that wedding garment, without which it ſhall ever bee impoſſible to pleaſe God. The ground of this is Chriſt, not Merit; the rule, not our fancies or good intents; not the Doctrines and Precepts of men, but the onely true and undeceiving written word of God.

Secondly, let us looke at the fruits of this our Faith, the holy and commanded workes of Charity, concerning which wee have many inſtructions in the Word. Take heed (ſaith the Goſpel) leſt at any time your hearts be oppreſſed with ſurfetting and drunkenneſſe, and cares of this life, leſt that day come on you at unawares: Watch and pray continually, that ye may be accounted worthy to eſcape all thoſe things that ſhall come to paſſe, and that ye may ſtand before the Sonne of Man. How alſo he will acknowledge our mercy to the poore, in feeding and cloathing them; to the ſicke and impriſoned, in viſiting and comforting them, with ſuch like you know as the Goſpel mentioneth: wherefore moſt fit to bee carefull of ſuch works. Againe, to beware of Antichriſt and Idolatry, is moſt fitly to prepare our ſelves againſt this day, ſo ſaith the Goſpel, and ſo admoniſheth Iohn in that heavenly Revelation, To keepe a good conſcience compriſeth much in little: Which good conſcience whilſt ſome have put away (ſaith the Apoſtle) they have made ſhipwracke concerning faith. Such was Hymeneus and Alexander, with many moe. To be often reading and meditating of good things, is to make ready for this day.

Luke 21. 1 Theſſ.4.15. Chap.5.12. 1 Pet.3.

Matt.24. & 25.

Matt.24. Apoc.14.& 18 Act.24.16. 1 Tim.1.19.

Thus did hee, of whom we reade, that ſaid he had a booke conſiſting but of three leaves, and yet thoſe three leaves hee could never reade over. The firſt leafe, hee ſaid, was a Red leafe; the ſecond, a White leafe; and the third, a Blacke leafe. The Red leafe contained the bloody Paſſion of our ſweet Saviour. The White leafe contained all other the mercies and benefits of God, vouchſafed to man in generall, and to him that had this good Booke in particular. The Blacke leafe had written in it all the plagues and puniſhments of the wicked, which are many, and terrible but to be once thought upon, Thus had his three leaves a great deale of matter, and fitly teacheth us, what readings and meditations are fit for us. S. Hieroms ſpeech is often heard of, and yet little I feare me followed, who ſaid; Whether I eate or drinke, ſit or ſtand, walke or ſleepe, ever, ever me thinks I heare that voice in mine eare, Surgite mortui, & venite ad judicium: Ariſe yee dead and come unto judgement. This was a wiſe courſe to keepe ſtill in his minde the remembrance of this time. Et maxima eſt pœna peccati, metum & memoriam amiſiſſe extremi Indicii. And it is the greateſt puniſhment of ſinne, to have loſt the feare and remembrance of the laſt judgement, ſaid a wiſe man in his time.

Againe, another, Maxima eſt virtutum cuſtodia timor: The greateſt preſerver of vertue is feare: for Qui pavet, cavet, hee that feareth, bewareth. If a Title intended at an Aſſize againſt any land of ours, maketh us ſo vigilant, carefull, and fearefull: O how much more againſt this day ſhould our thoughts gather together to have all well, ſeeing not a weake adverſary, but a ſtrong devill ſhall bring downe his Niſi prius, to try with me, not a Title of land, but a Title of life, and that eternall, not with an Ejectione firmæ, but an Ejectione Cœli, for ever. A mighty enemy to this preparation, is delay, and poſting off from day to day, which how dangerous it is, often with your ſelfe thinke, and beware it. They ever cry to morrow, to morrow, who are wedded and glued to the pleaſures of this life. And there bee two little words, ſaith another, but of one ſyllable a piece, not much differing in letters, but Lord, Lord, what a difference in profit; Nunc, Tunc, Now, Then, hee that loſeth his Now, ſhall rue his Then, as the fooliſh Virgins that came too late; as the rich Glutton that burned in hell, and as weeping Eſau that tarried too long. To day therefore, no day, even before to morrow, ſaith the holy Teacher, If you heare his voice harden not your hearts, &c. Bleſſed are your eyes for they ſee, and your eares, for they heare, ſaith the Goſpel, and bleſſed was the Woman that bare our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, as were the pappes that gave him ſucke; but rather, rather ſaith Chriſt himſelfe, Bleſſed are they that heare the word of God and keepe it. Thus may wee learne how to be ready for this day: Which the Lord grant for his Sonnes ſake. Amen.

THE EIGHT ARTICLE.

The next Article is the Eight.

I beleeve in the Holy Ghoſt.

AND this you muſt remember to be the third part of the Creed, according to that diviſion made in the beginning, wherein two things fall out to be handled; the one of the perſon of the Holy Ghoſt; and the other of his Office.

But firſt I pray you, ſhew the meaning and ſenſe of this Article, and what we beleeve of the Holy Ghoſt?

The ſenſe and meaning is this, that wee beleeve the holy Ghoſt to bee true and Coeternall God with the Father and the Sonne. And that hee is given to every one of us, to mee, to you, and all the Elect of God, that hee may make every one of us by a true faith, partaker of Chriſt and all his benefits, that hee may comfort us in all our diſtreſſes, and abide with us for ever.

Firſt, then as I conceive you, wee beleeve him to be God; and ſecondly, to bee Coeternall with the Father and the Sonne, that is, to be another perſon diſtinct from Father and Sonne; and thirdly, that his Office is as you ſay.

You conceive me rightly: for thus doth our true Catholike Faith leade us to hold ever concerning the holy Ghoſt, as I have partly ſhewed before in the firſt Article, when by reaſon of the word, Father, I ſpake of the Trinity and Unity.

Yet I pray you in this place alſo, adde ſome thing, that more ſpeech may in Gods bleſſing give more light and ſtrength in the truth.

Be it ſo then: And firſt, that the Holy Ghoſt is true God, thinke of theſe reaſons, and ſuch like uſed by learned men in this matter, Firſt, wee are commanded to beleeve in the holy Ghoſt, as you ſee by this Article, but wee may not beleeve in any thing except it bee God: For Ierem.17.5. thus ſaith the Lord, Curſed be the man that truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his arme, and withdraweth his heart from the Lord. Therefore the holy Ghoſt is true God. Thus proved our Saviour his Godhead, when he ſaid; Yee beleeve in God, beleeve alſo in mee. As if he ſhould have ſaid, you muſt beleeve onely in God, and in nothing elſe: but I require you to beleeve in mee, Iohn 14.1. and I teach you, that you may ſafely doe it, and in duty ought to doe it; therefore aſſured be it, That I am God.

Secondly, the Sacrament of holy Baptiſme, may not bee adminiſtred in the name of any creature: for when S. Paul ſaith, Were yee baptized into the name of Paul: Hee ſheweth the abſurdity of ſuch a courſe; but in the name of the holy Ghoſt our Saviour expreſly teacheth and requireth Baptiſme to be adminiſtred: as well as either in his Name, or in his Fathers. Therefore the holy Ghoſt is true God.

1 Cor.1.13.

Matt.28.19.

Thirdly, He that knoweth the minde of God, and ſearcheth out his depths, he is God: For who hath knowne the minde of the Lord, ſaith the Apoſtle, Or who was his Counſeller? &c. meaning beſide God: But the holy Ghoſt doth this, as the ſame Apoſtle witneſſeth, when hee ſaith; The Spirit

Rom.11.34. 1 Cor.2.16.

ſearcheth

ſearcheth all things; yea, the deepe things of God. And the things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God. Therefore the holy Ghoſt is true God. 1 Cor.2.10,11.

Fourthly, he that doth the works which onely God doth, hee is God, but ſo doth the holy Ghoſt; therefore the holy Ghoſt is God. The firſt is proved by our Saviour Chriſt, who thereby proveth himſelfe to bee God; Becauſe he did whatſoever things the Father did. The ſecond is proved by the worke of Creation, whith is aſcribed to the holy Ghoſt, as well as to Father or Sonne; by the worke of preſervation, which is alſo aſcribed to him, *Pſal.*104.30. By the worke of raiſing up of the dead, John 5.21. *Rom.*8.11. By the worke of regeneration, Ierem. 31.33. Iohn 3. 5. 6. and ſuch others: All which being workes peculiar to God, are yet aſcribed to the holy Ghoſt; as appeareth by the places named: Therefore the holy Ghoſt is true GOD. Iohn 5.19,&c Gen.1.2. Pſal.33.6. Iob 33.4.

Fiftly, by expreſſe Scripture this is proved, in which Scriptures hee is named and termed God; as I have ſhewed before, and ſpare now to goe over them againe.

Sixtly and laſtly, by his proceeding from the Father and the Sonne, for nothing can ſo doe that is not God: therefore the holy Ghoſt is true God. And by the ſame very arguments and teſtimonies he is alſo proved to be Coeternall with the Father and the Sonne; for if hee be God, then is the Eſſence of the Godhead all one; and conſequently, the Coeternity all one: To the ſhame of theſe ſhameleſſe Hereticks, Arrius, Macedonius, and others, who denied in their times the Divinity of the holy Ghoſt, and taught him to be a perſon created, of whom Councels have beene aſhamed, and I ſpare to ſay any more. That he is another diſtinct perſon from the Father and the Sonne, and the Unity of the Godhead hurteth not the Trinity of Perſons it may ſuffice that hath beene ſaid in the firſt Article. Act.5.34. 1 Cor.6.19. 1 Cor.3.16. 2 Cor.6.16. 1 Cor. 12.4,5. Iohn 15.26. Gal.4.6. Phil.1.19. 1 Pet.1.11.

You may then, if you pleaſe, come unto the office of this bleſſed Spirit, mentioned even now by you.

And this is all in all: for knowing his office, I know and beleeve that hee is given of God to me to that end. And ſhould I beleeve but theſe things of his perſon, proved out of his word: I ſhould doe but as the devils doe, for they alſo beleeve as much: but when I take hold of the promiſes of God, that his Spirit ſhall be given mee ever to ſuch ends: this is Faith, and this is to beleeve in the holy Ghoſt, according to this Article, which promiſes that hee ſhall bee given to the Elect, and dayly is given, in many places of the Scriptures wee reade of; as when the Apoſtle ſaith to the Romanes: Yee have not received the ſpirit of bondage to feare againe, but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby wee cry Abba Father. And leſt you ſhould tie that teſtimony to the Romanes, it followeth in the next verſe: The ſame Spirit beareth witneſſe with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God. And if we be children, we are alſo heires, even the heirs of God, and heires annexed with Chriſt, &c. To the Galathians likewiſe: Becauſe yee are ſonnes, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Sonne into your hearts which crieth Abba Father. Wherefore thou art no more a ſervant, but a ſonne, and if a ſonne, then alſo the heire of God through Chriſt. Rom.8.15. Gal.4.6.

Saint Iohn againe, Hereby we know that he abideth in us, even by that Spirit which abideth in us: So that dayly wee ſee the Lord giveth this bleſſed pledge to his Elect, and for one amongſt the reſt; I beleeve in the Holy Ghoſt, that is, that the Lord my God will give even to me this his Spirit. Now, to what ends hee is given, and what is his office, the Scriptures and holy Fathers doe alſo teach. To make us partakers by faith of all Chriſts benefits, ſaid I before, and ſo ſaith S. Paul to the Corinthians, But yee are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but yee are juſtified in the name of the Lord Ieſus, and by the Spirit of God: ſhewing as you ſee how the elect become partakers of theſe mercies of waſhing, &c. even by the Spirit who applieth them unto them. In other places, when he wiſheth, The grace of our Lord Ieſus, and the love of God to any; he adjoyneth the Fellowſhip of the Spirit, without which, neither the favour of God, nor the goodneſſe of Chriſt can be taſted: for, The love of God (ſaith another place) is ſhed abroad in our hearts by the holy Ghoſt, which is given unto us. And for our reconciliation with God, it hath his foundation in the obedience and blood of Chriſt ſhed for us, but the communication of both theſe is, By the ſanctification of the Spirit, ſaith S. Peter. 1 Iohn 3.24. 1 Cor.6.11. 2 Cor.13.11. Rom.5.5. 1 Pet.1.2.

Marke therefore how the Spirit is the bond, whereby our deare Saviour tieth us to himſelfe, and without which, whatſoever Chriſt did or ſuffered for man, becommeth utterly unprofitable to him. And therefore rightly did I ſay, this is his office to make us partakers of all Chriſts benefits. Hee comforteth us alſo in all our occaſions, which is a ſingular point of his office. I will pray the Father (ſaith our Saviour in the Goſpel) and hee ſhall give you another comforter, that hee may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him, but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you. Remember with this place the words in Zachary, where hee is called the Spirit of grace, and lay them together, that you may ſee how hee comforteth, namely; firſt, by aſſuring us that wee are in grace according to the teſtimonies befor recited, that hee beareth witneſſe with our ſpirits, that wee are the children of God, and ſonnes, and heires, than the which what greater comfort? Iohn 14.16,17 Zach.12.10.

Secondly, becauſe hee exciteth and ſtirreth up to grace, even to all grace and goodneſſe, which being obeyed, bringeth with it ſweet reſt and comfort againe, as ſinne and impiety bringeth horror and feare. Hee teacheth us to pray with ſuch vehemency of heart, as Anna did, when the fleſh of her face ſhaked with vehemency; and as the Apoſtle ſaith, With groanes that cannot bee expreſſed. Hee giveth us motions to good, and abhorrings of evill. And who can ſay, that Ieſus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghoſt? Who can either doe good, or eſchew evill, but by this guide? From theſe fruits of this Spirit, ſpringeth that unſpeakable ſweet ſecurity, whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaketh when he ſaith: Wee have peace with God through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by whom alſo through faith, we have had this acceſſe into his grace, wherein we ſtand and rejoyce under the hope of the glory of God. Neither that onely, But we rejoyce in tribulation, &c. A notable example of which were the Apoſtles in thoſe primitive times, when they went forth, rejoycing that they were thought worthy to ſuffer for his Name. And when it pleaſeth him to adde that, Hee abideth for ever, this comforteth beyond the reach of either penne or heart. For hereupon it followeth, that ſo ſure is our ſalvation with him in that eternall and joyfull Kingdome, that we cannot fall from it finally: for this bleſſed Spirit is the pledge of our inheritance, whereby wee are ſealed to the day of redemption. Hee therefore abiding with us for ever, needs muſt wee bee ſure of that whereof hee is a pledge, and an earneſt given, which is the very peace of God that paſſeth all underſtanding, and the comfort, as I ſaid, that neither with penne nor heart I can reach unto, to deſcribe in his full greatneſſe and ſweeneſſe. O ſweet office therefore of a bleſſed Spirit! And O thrice blinded men with darkneſſe of Rome, that will teach us to doubt of our ſalvation! Wee have this Spirit as a pawne, and the promiſe of his abode for ever with us, though the times may come through grievous temptations, that wee may not thinke ſo for a while: well therefore ſaid Saint Auguſtine, Filium ſuum dedit Deus in pretium redemptionis, Spiritum ſanctum in privilegium amoris: His Sonne hee gave for a price of redemption, his holy Ghoſt for a priviledge of his love. And moſt well the old Father Irenæus: Quia diabolus ex cœlo protruſus eſt, ideo quoque Spiritum ſanctum deſuper mittit, ut ibi habeamus paracletum, ubi habemus adverſarium: Becauſe the Devill was thruſt out of heaven, therefore did God ſend alſo his Spirit, that there wee might ever have a Comforter, where wee were ſure ever of an enemy.

1 Sam.1. Rom.8. 1 Cor.12.3.

Rom.5.1,2,3. Rom.8.31. Acts 5.41. Acts 9.31.

Iren. li.1, ca 39.

Furthermore, our Saviour ſheweth this notable office of the Holy Ghoſt, when he ſaith; Ille docebit, ille ſuggeret, He ſhall teach you, and hee ſhall remember you. Docebit ut ſciatis, ſuggeret ut velitis: Hee ſhall teach you that you may know, hee ſhall remember you, that you may have will and knowledge, ſaith the Gloſſe. He ſhall teach you all things: Quia niſi idem Spiritus cordi adſit audientis, otioſus eſt ſermo Doctoris. Ecce vocem loquentis pariter omnes audiunt, ſed non ſimiliter proficiunt. Cum quod vox diſpar non ſit, quomodo diſpar eſt profectus & intelligentia, quoſdam ſpecialiter docet: Becauſe except the ſame Spirit be preſent to the heart of the hearer, the ſpeech of the Teacher is unprofitable. Behold the voice of the ſpeaker, all heare alike, and together, but they profit not alike. Since then the voice is not differing, How commeth the profiting and underſtanding to be ſo different, but that there is an inward Maſter that teacheth the underſtanding of the voice to ſome eſpecially?

Gloſſa in Ioan.14

Greg. in Evang. hom 30.

Thus farre Gregory: but how teacheth this inward Maſter, will you ſay? One teacheth you thus; Docet interius inſpirando, dirigendo, & ad ſpiritualia elevando: ſicut enim qui guſtum infeſtum habet, de ſaporibus rectè non judicat, ita ſine Spiritu ſancto non guſtamus divina, juxta illud, animalis homo, non percipit quæ ſunt Spiritus Dei: Hee teacheth by inward inſpiration, by directing and raiſing us up unto ſpirituall things: for even as a man or woman that have loſt their taſte, cannot judge of reliſhes, either of meat or drinke rightly: ſo, without the holy Ghoſt we cannot judge of heavenly matter; according to that ſaying, The naturall man perceiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe unto him, neither can hee know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. Non tot milia ad fidem Petrus, &c. Peter could never have gained ſo many thouſands at once to the Faith, except that Spirit, which ſpake outwardly by the mouth of the Preacher, had ſpoken alſo inwardly to the heart of the hearer.

1 Cor.2.14.

In a word, of this bleſſed office of this moſt bleſſed Spirit, one ſpeaketh thus: Ille lavat quod eſt ſordidum, ille rigat quod eſt aridum, ille fovet quod eſt frigidum, ille regit quod eſt devium, &c. He waſheth that which is foule, he watreth that which is dry, he cheriſheth that which is cold, he guideth that which goeth aſtray, &c. Such a Jewell is this bleſſed Spirit, where it pleaſeth him to blow, where it pleaſeth him to ſhew his mercy and his goodneſſe. O that we may be in the number of ſuch. Amen. Amen.

And Amen againe ſay I with you, praying you to the better effecting hereof, to ſhew how this holy Spirit may be either kept or loſt.

It is a good motion. And therefore know you, that ſo long as we keepe this precious Jewell, As wee fight a good fight, having faith and a good conſcience, which ſome have put away, ſaith the Apoſtle, and as concerning faith have made ſhipwracke: By faith hee underſtandeth Doctrine, and eſpecially the Goſpell; and by a good conſcience the execution of a mans duty: For a good conconſcience maketh a man ſincerely, rightly, and ſoundly, to walke as he ought in his place evermore, ſayling forward in ſuch courſe to the Haven that receiveth all men in their times, even the houre of death and diſſolution, which maketh an end of all travell. So long then (I ſay againe) as we retaine ſound doctrine in our judgement, and holy actions in our life, ſo long this bleſſed gueſt abideth and dwelleth with us: but if wee fall either to error in the one, or viciouſneſſe in the other, and ſo continue, we grieve him, we loſe him, we ſhall be forſaken of him. O take heede therefore, ſaith the Apoſtle, that you grieve not the holy Spirit of God, by whom yee are ſealed unto the day of Redemption: but let all bitterneſſe and anger, wrath and crying, and evill ſpeaking be put away from you, with all maliciouſneſſe: Be yee courteous one to another, and tender hearted, freely forgiving one another, even as God for Chriſt his ſake freely forgave you. Tergat ſordes pravi operis, qui Deo præparat domum mentis. Let him wipe away (ſaith that good Father) the filth of all evill doings, that prepareth for God the houſe of his mind. Thus may we keepe, and thus may we loſe this bleſſed gueſt.

1 Tim.1.18,19

Eph. 4.30.

Greg.

O Sir, but what if through ſinfull careleſneſs in theſe things a man hath grieved this bleſſed Spirit, ſo that either he is departed, or ſheweth not his ſweetneſs as he was wont, is there no way to riſe again, and to recover ſo happy a gueſt?

Yea, bleſſed be God there is hope left; if we therefore by ſinne have hurt our ſelves, let us not dye in thoſe ſinnes as Saul did in his, but ſhaking them off as the Lord inableth, know that this holy Spirit may be recovered againe by earneſt and hearty prayer, wee crying with David, as David did in this want; O Lord, O Lord, Let me feele the comfort of thy Spirit againe, and ſtabliſh me with thy free Spirit: By true and ſincere repentance, God comfortably teſtifying that, He will not the death of a ſinner, but that there is joy in heaven over any ſinner that repenteth: And by a holy and an amended life hereafter, ſaying againe with David, in faith and aſſurance, Teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God, let thy good Spirit lead me into the land of righteouſneſſe.

1 Chron. 10. Pſal. 51.

Ezek. 18. Luke 15.

Pſal. 143. 10.

Thus may we riſe if we have fallen, and thus may we gaine what we have loſt; for as for thoſe Hereticks that denied the ſame, their impious error is to be abhorred. And this loſing I meane of fruits and effects, ceaſing for a time upon our juſt deſerts: for finally loſe the elect cannot, by the mercy of God, this holy Spirit, and where finally he is loſt, hee never was by ſanctifying Grace, as elſewhere I have ſhewed at large. End we therefore with Saint Hieromes good ſaying, Juſti vocabulum non amittit, qui mox per pœnitentiam reſurgit. He loſeth not the name of a righteous man, that ſtraight way riſeth by repentance. And thus much of this Article.

THE NINTH ARTICLE.

The next Article is the ninth.

I beleeve the Holy Catholicke Church, the Communion of Saints.

COncerning this Article, you may firſt conſider the order, then the ſenſe and meaning. In order it is the fourth and laſt part of the Creed, according to our firſt diviſion: and is added as the end of all that hath gone before; for why were the heavens and earth created, why was the Lord Jeſus incarnate and ſuffered: and in one word, why was all done that is mentioned in the former Articles, but for the Church, that is, for ſuch as the Lord ſhould call to the uſe and benefit of them? Therefore, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, after the former Articles concerning the Trinity, it followeth, that the Church ſhould be ſpoken of and annexed, Vt Conditori ſua Civitas, habitatori ſua domus, & Deo ſuum templum, As the Citty after the builder, as the houſe after the owner, and as the Temple of God after God. For the ſenſe and meaning, it is as if I ſhould ſay; I beleeve that God ever hath had, ever hath, and ever ſhall have to the end of the world, a certaine flocke gathered of all ſorts of men, and choſen by him to eternall life, which by his holy Spirit and Word, agreeing in true faith, hee gathereth, defendeth, and preſerveth: and I beleeve that of this Church I am a true living member, and by his grace ſhall ever ſo remaine.

Patris miſericordia, filii victima, ſanctificato S. S. pertinet ad Eccleſiam.
Aug. Enchirid. 56.

What ſay you of Children, which by age are not yet capable of this outward calling?

I do reckon them with their Parents, according to the Scriptures: For the promiſe is made unto you (ſaith S. Peter) and your Children, and ſo it was, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed. And the unbeleeving Husband is ſanctified to the Wife, and the unbeleeving Wife is ſanctified to the Husband, elſe were your children uncleane, but Now they are holy.

Acts 2. 39. Gen. 17. 7. 1 Cor. 7. 14.

How is the Church uſually divided?

The

The Church is either univerſall, that is, as wee uſually ſpeake by the Greeke word Catholike, or it is particular. The univerſall or the Catholike Church is the whole company of thoſe, that from the beginning of the world, either have beleeved, do beleeve, or ſhall beleeve to the end: a part whereof is now in heaven, and is called, The Triumphant Church, another part yet living and remaining in earth, which is called, The Church Militant, which Militant Church is divided againe into particular Churches; as into the Church of England, the Church of Ireland, the Church of Scotland, France, Spaine, &c. Theſe Churches being not the whole, but parts of the whole. Againe, a particular Church may be divided into the Old, and into the New; underſtanding by the Old that which was before Chriſt; and by the New, that which hath beene ſince Chriſt, and eſpecially ſince his Aſcenſion into heaven, collected now of many Nations, and not tyed to one, and called now of Chriſt, Chriſtian, or Eccleſia Chriſtiana, the Church of Chriſt.

Apoc. 7. 9.

Epheſ. 2. 13. Act. 11. 16.

In the Nicen Creed read at our Communion, it is called, Vna, Catholica, Apoſtolica, One, Catholike and Apoſtolike Church: and here in this Apoſtles Creede it is called Sancta, holy: The reaſon of which Title and Names I pray you ſhew me.

It is called una, one; not becauſe it is Commorant, and abiding ever in one place, for the Church is ſcattered farre and wide over the face of the Earth, neither yet becauſe it hath one ſort, or the ſame Ceremonies: for every Church hath in it this liberty, obſerving the generall rules of the Apoſtle, that the Ceremonies be decent and orderly, and for edification, neither becauſe they depended upon one man in earth, and had one Head in earth, upon whoſe judgement they ſo relied, as what he ſaid that was true: but becauſe there is a ſpirituall unity, and an aſſured conſent in doctrine, concerning ſubſtance and faith.

Saint Auguſtine noteth how variable and differing the writings of Philoſophers were, and how conſonant, and without any diſagreement holy Writers of Scriptures are, which aſſuredly were thus; becauſe the latter had both Tongues and Pennes guided by the Holy Ghoſt, and the former had not ſo. Even in like ſort is the Church called Vna, and hath unity in it, becauſe it imbraceth this one Prophetical, and Apoſtolicall doctrine thus written by them ſo guided by the Holy Ghoſt, and when the truth of the ſame is confirmed by the Spirit of God, in the hearts of them which appertaine to the ſame.

Vna Eccleſia dicit, cum unam propheticam & Apoſtolicam doctrinam amplectitur, cumque ejuſdem doctrinæ veritas in cordibus illorum qui ad eandem Eccleſiam pertinent per S. S. confirmatur.

There be many places of Scriptures which ſpeake of this unity in the Church, and make it, as it ſeemeth, a right note to know the Church by.

Cant. 6. 6. Iohn 10. 16. Rom. 12. 5.

It is very true that divers ſuch Scriptures there be, as in the Canticles: My beloved is one, my Dove is one: in the Goſpell, The Shepheard is one, and the ſheepfold is one: and we being many, are one Body in Chriſt, ſaith Saint Paul, with other places many; but both theſe Scriptures, and the former Title in the Creed, are to be underſtood not of the viſible, but of the inviſible Church of the Elect alone, which indeed is called the Body of Chriſt, becauſe moſt neerely it is ioyned to Chriſt her head. It is called the Spouſe of Chriſt, becauſe it is loved of him, and becauſe by a ſpirituall Matrimony Chriſt hath ioyned himſelfe to her. It is called the Sheepfold of Chriſt, becauſe it heareth his voice. And when you ſpeake of a note or marke to know the Church by, you muſt underſtand the viſible Church conſiſting not of Elect alone, but mixed with Elect and reprobate together.

Is Vnity then a note and marke to know the viſible Church thus mingled with good and bad by?

No: Vnity it ſelfe, without any addition is not ſuch a note and marke, but you muſt adde Faith and true Doctrine; and then Vnity in faith and true Doctrine, is a marke and note of a true Church.

Why, is not Vnity of it ſelfe a note and marke, without any Addition?

No, becauſe in the reprobate and wicked there may be great unity, and among thoſe that are of the true Church, much difference and diſagreement in ſome matters: both which aſſertions I will make plaine unto you. And firſt touching unity and agreement amongſt the wicked, how agreed they together that worſhipped the golden Calfe, and would needs have Aaron make it? How they that with one conſent would needs have a King given them, reiected Samuel that was a faithfull governour, and God alſo as himſelfe teſtifieth; Non rejecerunt te, ſed rejecerunt me. They have not caſt thee away, but they have caſt mee away. What an Vnity and conſent was amongſt thoſe foure hundred falſe Prophets, againſt one poore Micheas, and in all the people in the time of Ieremy, againſt the true worſhip of God. How was Jeſus Chriſt himſelfe by a conſent and unity amongſt wicked ones, crucified and put to death? What an Vnity ſpeaketh the Holy Ghoſt of; when he ſaith: All, both ſmall and great, rich and poore, free and bond, received the marke of the beaſt. The great City of Epheſus maketh a great out-cry againſt Saint Paul, with an unity for their Idoll-Goddeſſe Diana.

Apoc. 13. 16. Act. 19. 28.

After the Aſcenſion of Chriſt, the Kings of the Earth, and all men are againſt Chriſt and his Goſpell, ſeeking to kill and ſley Men, Women, and Children, that profeſſed him. Herod and Pilate were made friends, and agreed together. David ſaith, The Kings and Princes of the Earth have met and agreed together againſt the Lord, and againſt his anointed. Saint Iohn ſaith, of the friends friends and favourers of Antichriſt : Hi unum conſiliũ habent, & vires ac poteſtatem ſuam tradent beſtiæ, hi pugnabunt cum Agno : Thoſe ſhall have all one Counſell, and one minde, and ſhall deliver over their ſtrength and their power to the beaſt, and ſhall fight againſt the Lambe.

Luke 23. Pſal. 2.

Chryſoſtome ſaith, Expedit & ipſis dæmonibus obedire ſibi invicem in Schiſmate: It is good even for the Devils themſelves to be obedient one of them to another in their diviſion. Symmachus and other like maintainers of the heatheniſh Idolatry ſaid, Æquum eſt, quicquid omnes colunt, unum putari: It is meet that whatſoever all men worſhip be counted one. And thus the Heathens and Infidels would ſeeme to hold that Vnity. So you ſee the firſt aſſertion true, that amongſt the wicked there is often Vnity ; and therefore of it ſelfe bare Vnity without an addition of Verity, cannot be a note to know the true Church by : but by the Fathers, Vnity without verity is tearmed conſpiracy. I will end therefore this point with that of Saint Auguſtine : Vt eſt Dei una Eccleſia: Sic eſt Diaboli una Babylon: As God hath one Church: ſo hath the Devill one Babylon. That is, as God hath a Church wherein there is unity: ſo hath the Devill a Babylon wherein there is alſo unitie. But how theſe unities differ, both hath and ſhall appeare to all men that wilfully cloſe not their eyes upon the truth.

Chryſ. in Mat. hom. 29.

Amb. lib. 5. Epiſt. 30.

De civit. Dei.

Now for the other point, that variance and diſagreement in ſome matters may bee in the godly, it is alſo as plaine, if you reade either Scriptures, Fathers, or Stories, or any thing. What a ſtirre the Papiſts keepe with us about thoſe names of Lutherans, and Zuinglians: who knoweth not, crying it out in every Conventicle or halfe-penny Pamphlet, that we are nothing but ſects, and are divided amongſt our ſelves and cannot agree, as though whereſoever any diviſion and diſſention is, by and by it ſhould follow that there were no true Catholicke Church. But why forget theſe men what they reade : or what would they have ſaid, if they had beene in the firſt times of the Apoſtles ; when one cryed, I hold of Paul, another, I hold of Cephas, another, I hold of Apollo ? When Paul ſharply rebuked Peter, as not walking with a right foot ? When Paul and Barnabas fell ſo bitterly out that they departed one from another ? When Origen mentioneth the Chriſtians were divided into ſo many factions, as that they kept no more but the name of Chriſtians in common among them, being no way elſe like Chriſtians ? When Socrates ſaith, for their diſſention and ſundry ſects, they were laughed at, and jeſted at openly of the people in their Stages and common game-playes? When that gracious Emperour Conſtantine tooke the Biſhops bills, exhibited to him in complaint one of another, and caſt them all in the fire, ſighing to ſee the number of variances and brawlings in the Church, ſuch, that it might juſtly ſeeme a miſery paſſing all miſeries ? When the whole Eaſt part of the Church was divided from the Weſt, onely for leavened bread, and onely for keeping of Eaſter day, no great matter to be ſo ſtriven for? And when in all Councels, new Creeds, and new Decrees continually were deviſed? If you thinke it ſtrange that I ſay, take particulars knowne to every man that readeth. Theophilus called Epiphanius Hæreſiarcha, the Grand Captaine and Father of Heretiques. Saint Hierome writing to Auguſtine ſaith : In Epiſtola tua quædam hæretica eſſe judicavi. I judged that there were certaine hereticall errors in thy Epiſtle. Saint Auguſtine againe willeth Saint Hierome to acknowledge his error and to recant. Eraſmus ſaith, Illa ætate in chartis erat fides potius quam in animo, ac pene tot erant Symbola quot profeſſores: At that time faith was in bookes, rather than in heart ; and in a manner there were ſo many ſundry Creeds, as there were profeſſors of the faith. Clemens Alexandrinus hath a great ſaying, which I pray you marke. Vos Chriſtiani diſſidetis inter vos, & tot ſectas habetis, quæ licet omnes Chriſtianiſmi titulum ſibi vindicent, tamen alia aliam execratur & condemnat. Quare veſtra religio vera non eſt, nec à Deo originẽ ducit : Yee Chriſtians diſſent among your ſelves, and maintaine ſo many ſects; Which ſects notwithſtanding they all claime the title of Chriſtian Religion, yet one of them curſeth and condemneth another. Therefore your Religion is not true, neither hath her beginning or ground from God. See, ſee, and ſettle in your hearts the infirmities of good men that are true members of Chriſts true Church, and bewaile this in your ſelves, this ſinfull fleſh I ſay, in which dwelleth no good thing (ſaith the Apoſtle) but condemne not truth for mans frailty, as you ſhall doe, if you will ſay whereſoever is any diviſion and contention among the profeſſors of Religion ; there by and by is no truth, nor true Church. Saint Chryſoſtome hath a like notable ſaying worthy remembrance, and hitting with the ſpeeches of Papiſts and other dull men in theſe dayes ; Venit Gentilis & dicit, vellem fieri Chriſtianus, ſed neſcio cui adhæream, multa inter vos ſunt pugnæ, ſeditiones, ac tumultus, Neſcio quod eligam, quod præferam. Singuli dicunt ego verũ dico. The Infidell or Heathen commeth and ſaith, I would bee a Chriſtian man, but I know not whom I ſhould follow. There is much ſtrife and diſſention, and trouble amongſt you, I cannot tell what doctrine to chuſe, to ſet before other ; for every one of you will ſay, I ſay truth. Can any thing bee ſpoken more like to ſome men in theſe daies? God grant their contempt of God jump not with the Heathens as neare as their ſpeeches doe. The ſame Father ſaith againe, ſpeaking of faithfull Chriſtians ; Hanc ob cauſam ridiculi facti ſumus & Gentibus & Iudais, dum Eccleſia in mille partes diſcinditur: For this cauſe we are ſcorned and laughed at, both of Jewes and Gentiles, while as the Church is thus rent in a thouſand Eraſ. in Vita Chryſoſt. Hierom. in Epiſt. ad Aug. Eraſ. in præfat. in 2. tom. Hier.

Chryſ. in Act. hom. 33.

Chryſ. in Epiſt. ad Gal. c. 1.

thouſand parts. Theophilact, Epiphanius, Chryſoſtome, Auguſtine, Ruffine, Hierome, Cyril, and Theodoret, being all Fathers, ſaith a moſt Reverend Father, being all Chriſtians, and being all Catholikes, quarrelled one againſt another with very bitter and endleſſe contentions. In that African Councell in the time of Cyprian, on both ſides were many learned Biſhops diſſenting ſharply about rebaptizing of ſuch as had beene baptized by Heretiques. The uſe of all which woefull experiences may not bee eyther to diſcredit theſe Reverend Fathers, which as great lights in Gods Church, are worthy to bee honoured of us, or to prove falſe the Religion which they profeſſed, which wee well know was true and holy, but to ſhew that unity in it ſelfe is no certaine note to know the Church by, as being often among the wicked, neither diſſention a true cauſe to diſallow a Church, having been in ſo worthy a Church, and ſuch notable Fathers and chiefe lights of ſuch Churches. Alſo to leade to the due conſideration of the true cauſes of ſuch and the like contentions ever, and ſo to take away the ſtumbling block from before our feet, that Satan tempt us not to miſtake. Which cauſes are theſe. Firſt, the malice of Satan, of which the ancient Father Leo, ſpake when he ſaid ; Diabolus Gentium vocatione cruciatur, & quotidiana poteſtatis ſuæ deſtructione torquetur, dolens, utique ſe deſeri, & verum regem in locis omnibus adorari. Parat fraudes, fingit diſſentiones : The Devill is ſore grieved with the calling of the Heathen to the Faith, and with the daily decreaſing of his power, ſorrowing to ſee himſelfe forſaken, and (Chriſt) the true King to bee worſhipped in all places. Therefore he deviſeth guiles, and imagineth diſſentions. Secondly, the ſeeds of ſelfe-love remayning ſtill in the beſt men, as doe all other reliques of ſinne. Thirdly, Ignorance, for we all ſee but in part, and yet often truſt too much in our skill. Other cauſes might be named, but theſe are chiefe and may ſerve at this time.

Leo Serm. 6. in Epiphania.

Yet Sir, I truſt you doe thinke unity a great bleſſing of God where hee vouchſafeth it to the Church.

True unity I do ſo. Which as I have ſaid before out of the Fathers, is unity in verity ; ſuch ſuch as Papiſts have not, nor their Romiſh Church. For the whole ſhew and ſubſtance of their Unity ſtandeth in this, to give eare to themſelves, and to put Chriſt to ſilence. But the true and Chriſtian Unity is this, that the whole flocke of Chriſt heare the voyce of the onely ſhepheard and follow him. For the very band of unity is verity.

The Papiſts ſay they have great unity in their Church, and wee have nothing but diſſention in ours.

Illyricus hath written a booke exceeding well of the ſects and diſſentions that are amongſt Papiſts, which abundantly anſwereth their falſe bragge of ſuch great unity. And in this booke hee nameth divers ſorts and kindes of unity, which indeed are to bee found in the Romiſh Church, and amongſt theſe Counterfeits and pretended Catholikes. The firſt is, Vnitas Satanica, ſuch unitie as is among Devils, for there is a wily wary peace, leſt if this kingdome were divided it ſhould fall and come to naught. And one Raven (as the common ſaying is) doth not picke out the eye of another. The ſecond is Pax Ethnica, ſuch peace as is among Heathens : which is, when men therefore agree leſt they ſhould ſeeme to bee contentious, regarding more the ſpeech of men, than right of cauſe, and contented rather to doe as other doe, than to make any ſtirre, although it be evill that they doe. So ſpeaketh Lodovicus Vives of one that having no good will to go to the Maſſe of himſelfe, yet ſometimes did goe to ſerve the time, but with this item : Eamus igitur ad communem errorem, quandoquidem ita vultis: Let us therefore goe to a common error, ſeeing you will needs have it. The third is Pax Belluina, ſuch an unity as is amongſt beaſts, when men underſtand not one jot of Religion, but wholly follow other mens opinions, and thinke all thoſe things true which commonly among men are received, of which ſort was that Colliar, who being tempted of the Devill, and asked of his faith, anſwered he was of the ſame faith that he was of. More than which anſwer the Devill could draw nothing from him. The fourth is Pax Iſcariota, ſuch peace as was in Iudas Iſcariot, when men corrupted with gifts and gaine, thinke, or pretend to thinke one thing. And this kinde of unity I tell you goeth farre in the Romiſh Church, as that Councell of Baſil can witneſſe, in which by this meanes Pope Eugenius got many to be of his ſide, as Æneas Silvius writeth, who was after Pope. The fifth is Pax Tyrannica, a Tyrannous unity, when men by cruelty are feared, and forced to hold one opinion. This unity alſo goeth farre in Popery, and the Spaniſh Inquiſition may witneſſe. The ſixt is Conſenſio Herodiana, ſuch unity and agreement as was in Herod, when he was content to agree with Pilate, and both of them to deſtroy Chriſt. So can thoſe Romiſh Saints agree together to bee at unity, to make waſte the houſe of God, and to root out all that call upon him. Laſtly, there is an agreement for the belly ſake, when men cannot tell how to live elſe and bee in any account in the world. All which kindes of unity are in Popery we well know, and therefore well may bee called Popiſh unities. But happely yee would ſee particulars. Doe the Papiſts then thinke ſome, agree ſo well together, and are there no debates among them ? Why then doe the Scotiſts, and the Thomiſts agree no better about Meritum congrui, & condigni ? Why vary they ſo much about originall ſinne in the the Virgin Mary, about a ſolemne vow and a ſingle life? Why ſay their Canoniſts that ſhrift is appointed by the poſitive law of man, and their Schoolemen contrariwiſe, that it is appointed by the law of God? Why doth Albertus Pius diſſent from Cajetanus, Thomas from Lombardus, Scotus from Thomas, Occam from Scotus, Alliacenſes from Occam. And why do their Nominalls diſagree from their Realls; What might be ſaid of that great diverſity of Fryers and Monkes, ſome putting holineſſe in eating of fiſh, ſome in eating of hearbes, ſome in wearing of ſhooes, and ſome in wearing of Sandals, ſome in going in a linnen garment, and ſome in wollen, ſome of them called white, and ſome blacke, ſome being ſhaven broad, and ſome narrow, ſome ſtalking upon pattents, ſome going barefooted, ſome girt, ſome ungirt. And touching that controverſie of the Sacrament, Oh how many ſeverall opinions have they, one flat contrary to another? It is not at this time a fit trouble for us to goe over them.

Perſonam habere malunt quam faciem they had rather have a vizard than a naturall face. Seneca. Doloſi homines dolo'æ veſtes. Crafty man, crafty coate. Macrob.

Yet I pray you go on with this matter of their diſſentions, becauſe they boaſt ſo ſhameleſly of ſuch great Vnity, and condemne us for want of it.

Remember wee then that horrible ſtirre that was among the Popes themſelves about the yeere of our Lord, 900. I ſay, among nine of them one after another. Stephen the ſixt abrogated all his predeceſſors Formoſus decrees, and not content with that, hee tooke up his body which was buried, and cut two fingers of his right hand off, and commanded his body to bee buried againe. After him ſucceeded Pope Rhomanus, Theodorus the ſecond, John the tenth, who ratified and confirmed the doings of Formoſus. After them followed P. Sergius, who diſanulling all their Acts, tooke up againe the body of Formoſus, cut off his head, and commanded his body to be throwne into Tyber the great River in Rome. What a notable Vnity was this amongſt Popes? Come wee to P. Vrbanus the ſixt, againſt whom ſtood up a contrary Pope in France, named Clement, betweene whom many battels were fought, and many thouſands ſlaine. Pope Vrbanus beheaded five Cardinals together after long torments; and Biſhop Aquilonenſis, becauſe he did ride no faſter, was had in ſuſpition, and ſlaine and cut in pieces by Vrbanus ſouldiers at his commandement. O Popiſh Unity, behold the heat of it! Behold, theſe great Fathers that be made God, and more than God, how they agree and love together. Come to their agreement in doctrine, and you have had a taſte before. Yet adde now that in the Councell of Baſil, and in Conſtance before that, was decreed that the Pope ſhould be ſubject to generall Councels, but now this Canon is reverſed, and generally the Papiſts hold contrary, that the Pope is above Councels. Some teach the Pope may erre, others ſay no. That place of the Goſpel, where Chriſt ſaith, I have prayed for thee Peter: The Divines of Paris underſtand generally of the whole Church, but Bellarmine and others onely of Peter, and his ſucceſſors, that they ſhould not erre. Some of them teach that the vow of ſingle life is annexed to Prieſthood by the Law of God; others that it is but onely the Law of man brought and impoſed. Some of them utterly diſlike that any Images of the Trinity ſhould be made, others allow it and gainesay the former. A thouſand moe of ſuch particulars may be named, but I referre you rather to Illyricus booke, mentioned before, Maſter Willets good collection in his fourth pillar, with others.

Ex Polychron.

But doe the Papiſts diſagree in matters of any moment?

Surely in ſuch matters as ſhake the very pillars and grounds of Religion, as that the Holy Ghoſt is not the ſame Eſſence with the Father and the Sonne. That he proceedeth onely from the Father, and not from the Sonne. About the Canonicall bookes of Scripture. Stapleton an Engliſh Papiſt, being not aſhamed to ſay that the Church by her authority may adde more bookes to the Canononicall Scriptures, with many moe like points, ſuch as the like they ſhall never ſhew to have beene in queſtion amongſt us.

Math. Pariſ. fol. 82. 4.

Yet amongſt us we cannot deny but there be and have beene varying opinions.

But about what? ever in any matter of ſubſtance? No, God be ever praiſed and thanked for his mercy: The harmony of our Confeſſions is extant to ſhew our true and holy conſent herein. We joyne throughly altogether in one head, in one Goſpell, in one way of ſalvation, in one ſumme of Religion, and altogether with one mouth, and one ſpirit we glorifie God the Father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But in ſome matters about diſcipline and Church-government, about apparell and ceremonies, there hath beene more than happely ſhould have beene if mens firſt thoughts had beene as wiſe as their ſecond, which yet now (the Lord be thanked and continue it) is very well appeaſed. And dare our Papiſts compare thoſe light differences with their fiery flaſhes, and bloody battels to death and ſlaughter? No, let them lay their hands on their mouths, and ſee Gods Spirit ruling, where his word is made the true rule and touchſtone to try all Doctrines by, and not the will of any mortall man, much leſſe of ſuch a ſinfull ignorant guide as their Pope is. If any thing yet remaine amongſt us, God is able alſo to end even this. And we remember well S. Auguſtines good and comfortable ſpeech. Recte dicitur glacialem nivem calidam eſſe non poſſe, &c. Very true it is that Snow frozen cannot be hot, &c. but that Snow may be diſſolved into water, and that water made hot. So may ſuch men, as now during their opinions will not agree, bee changed by Gods bleſſed working, and then thoſe melted and changed ged men will agree and conſent with us. What is ſo contrary in judgement as a Jew and a Chriſtian? yet God hath promiſed that he will turne the hearts of thoſe Fathers (the Jewes) unto their children, and the hearts of the children (the Chriſtians) unto their Fathers. And Saint Paul ſaith, the Iewes ſhall be grafted into the tree, if they abide not in unbeliefe. For God is able to graft them in againe. What is there ſo contrary as light and darkneſſe? Yet the Prophet ſaith: Illumina tenebras meas, lighten my darkneſſe. Wherefore by all this that hath beene ſaid you ſee why the Church in the Creed is called One, and Unity is to be judged by Veritie, and not Veritie by Unitie. According to that notable ſaying of Cyprian, who affirmeth the Church to bee one, as there is one light of the Sunne, although many beames; one Tree, although many branches; one fountaine, although many ſprings; becauſe Unity is kept in the Originall; underſtanding by Originall not the Pope, but Chriſt. So there is one Church, although many particular Churches, becauſe Unity is kept with Chriſt, which is the Originall. It is not to be looked therefore whether men doe agree amongſt themſelves, but whether they agree with Chriſt, or no. For if with him they be at variance, and diſſent from him as Papiſts do, all their agreement amongſt themſelves is to no purpoſe, but termed of the Father, as hath beene ſaid, a plaine and flat conſpiracy. The Apoſtle therefore prayeth the Corinthians that they would all ſpeake one thing, and that there might be no diſſention among them, but they knit together in one minde, and in one Iudgement; meaning Faith, or Truth. Which our Saviour maketh plaine by his words (to which Saint Paul was not contrary) ſaying, That they may be one as we are. Here is the patterne of right Unity. And Saint Paul when he calleth it the Unity of the Spirit. Epheſians 4.

I am fully ſatisfied with thus much of Vnity: and therefore now if you pleaſe go to the ſecond Title given to the Church, of Holineſſe, and ſhew how the Church is ſaid to be holy.

The Church is ſaid to be holy, quia Chriſti ſanguine lota, purgata & redempta eſt, & Spiritu ſancto donata, qui eam ſanctificat. Becauſe it is waſhed by the blood of Chriſt, clenſed and redeemed, and indued with the Holy Ghoſt, who doth alſo ſanctifie it. And this Title diſtinguiſheth the true Church from the Malignant. If it be any plainer, wee may ſay the Church is holy after two ſorts, Renovatione, Imputatione; by Renovation, and Imputation. By Renovation, becauſe daily the members thereof are renewed by the working grace of the bleſſed Spirit unto holines and righteouſneſſe more and more. But this holineſſe is imperfect ever whilſt we live in this fleſh, as appeareth by that bleſſed Apoſtle Saint Paul in that ſeventh Chapter to the Romanes, where he complaineth of a Law in his members rebelling againſt the Law of his minde, and ſo leading him captive, that the good which he would do he could not doe, and the evill which he would not doe, that did he, &c. Of this degree of holineſſe ſpeaketh the ſame Apoſtle to the Corinthians, when he ſaith: Let us clenſe our ſelves from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, and finiſh our ſanctification in the feare of God: Where the word finiſhing noteth our imperfection we ſtill grone under whilſt we live in this world, till the day of releaſe come when we finiſh our courſe and ſo our ſanctification in his holy feare: By imputation the Church is ſaid to be holy, becauſe the holineſſe and righteouſneſſe of Ieſus Chriſt is imputed to her. And in this reſpect ſhe may be ſaid to be perfectly holy; for this holineſſe is moſt perfect of our deare Saviour, thus in a bottomleſſe mercy and goodneſſe imputed to her, and every one of us particular members of her. Of which our Saviour ſpeaketh, when he ſaith: For their ſakes ſanctifie I my ſelfe, that they alſo may be ſanctified through the truth. Saint Paul alſo in thoſe words to the Romans; God ſetteth out his love towards us, ſeeing that while we were yet ſinners Chriſt dyed for us. Much more then being now juſtified by his blood, we ſhall bee ſaved from wrath through him. For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Sonne, much more being reconciled we ſhall be ſaved by his life, &c. And in his words to the Epheſians; Chriſt loved his Church, and gave himſelfe for it, that he might ſanctifie it and clenſe it, as you heard before, which is the holineſſe of Renovation, and (which followeth) that he might make it to himſelfe a glorious Church, not having ſpot or wrinckle, or any ſuch thing, but that it ſhould be holy and without blame: which is the holineſſe of imputation. For were it not that they are not imputed, many are the ſpots and wrinckles of the Church whilſt ſhe is militant. Saint Auguſtines words alſo are to the ſame end upon the Pſalme. The Church is holy; quia accepit gratiam ſanctitatis, gratiam Baptiſmi & remiſſionis peccatorum. Becauſe ſhe hath received the grace of holineſſe, the grace of Baptiſme, and the forgiveneſſe of ſinnes. After this ſort, I beleeve there is no death, no ſinne in the Church: Becauſe ſuch as beleeve in Chriſt are not ſinners, are not guilty of death, but iuſt and holy, and Lords over both ſinne and death, in Chriſt appointed and aſſured of eternall life. But this holineſſe hitherto ſpoken of is a note of the inviſible Church, and therefore cannot be applyed to the viſible, in which, though there be many that live holily, yet there be many Goates mingled, and holineſſe is knowne onely to God. So taught is man to deceive hypocritically.

But as I thinke the Papiſts take another courſe when they ſpeake of this holineſſe of the Church.

Indeed they doe, and looke at building of Churches, giving of Almes, erecting of Colledges, planting of Hoſpitals, maintaining of Maſſes, Shrines, Shrift, Images, Lights, Obſequies, Malach 4. Rom. 11.

Vna De Vnitate Eccleſiæ.

1 Cor. 1. 10.

Iohn 17. 11.

Sancta. Epheſ. 5. 26.

Adde here Maſter Wilkets examples of holy life.

2 Cor. 7. 1.

Iohn 17. 19. Rom. 5. 8, 9, 10.

Epheſ. 5. 27.

Inchoatè Perfectè. Aug. in pſal 85.

Obſequies, Month mindes, and Yeare mindes, vow of ſingle life, faſtings, with ſuch like.

This they call holineſſe. Their Doctrine alſo they ſay is holier than ours, and therefore their Church, verè Sancta, truly holy, that hath ſuch holy Doctrine, and ſuch holy workes. But if Popery be a holy Doctrine, let the devill alſo be a Saint. For what more impure and unchaſte Religion ever can be than Popery? It Canonizeth for Saints, and inrolleth up for Martyrs arrant Traitors againſt their Prince and countrey.

It teacheth ſimple fornication betwixt ſimple perſons is no ſinne, juſt as he in Terence ſaith: beleeve me it is no ſinne for a yong man to haunt Harlots. It teacheth that a Prieſt keeping a whore, liveth more holily and chaſtly, than hee which hath a wife in lawfull Matrimonie. And for common Stewes it alloweth it and maketh a gaine of it. But happily proofes will like you better than bare affirmations, and therefore hearken to them, Is qui non habet uxorem, & pro uxore concubinam habet, à Communione non repellat: Hee that hath not a wife (ſaith their owne Decree) and in ſtead of a wife hath a Concubine, let him not be removed from the Communion. Diſt.34 Concil. Toletan.1. c.17.

And the Rubrick upon the ſame diſtinction ſaith thus: Qui non habet uxorem, loco illius Concubinam habere licet: It is lawfull (lawfull I ſay, and marke it) for him that hath not a wife, to have a Concubine in ſtead of her. And if they would mince the name of a Concubine, S. Auguſtine ſaith: Velis, nolis, illa quæ dormit tecum præter uxorem, Meretrix eſt. Will thou, nill thou, ſhe that ſleepeth with thee beſide thy wife, is thy whore. And Saint Hierome ſaith, though ſhe be univira, that is appropriate to one man, and no man keepeth her but that one man, yet ſhe is Meretrix univira: that is an appropriate whore and no better, that is a whore kept by one man. Aug. de tempore Serm.16.4. Hier. ad Euſtochium de cuſtodia virginit. Tom.1.

That counſell of the Canon Law; Si non caſtè, tamen cautè, if not chaſtly, yet charily, is it holy counſell? Agreeth it not with that of the holy Ghoſt? For the avoiding of fornication let every man have his Wife? Doth not the whole conſtitution intreat: De Concubinis Clericorum, of removing Prieſts Concubines, and ſay: Clerici hujuſmodi Concubinas tenent communiter, honeſto apparatu, & nomine appellationis Sororiæ: Prieſts commonly keep ſuch Concubines in honeſt apparell, under the name of their Siſters. And was this holineſſe to be boaſted of, as Papiſts doe of their holy Church? Another of their Doctors ſaith this; Quamvis tactus & oſcula ſint preludia incontinentiæ in laicis, ſecus tamen eſt in clericis, nam Clericus præſumitur iſta facere pro claritate: Notwithſtanding handlings and kiſſings in lay perſons be the occaſions or beginnings of incontinent behaviour: yet in Prieſts it is far otherwiſe. For a Prieſt is preſumed to doe theſe of charity and good zeale. Yet, Si Clericus amplectitur mulierem, laicus interpretabitur quod cauſa benedicendi eam hoc faciat. If a Prieſt imbrace a woman, a Lay-man muſt judge that he doth it to the intent to bleſſe her. O holy Church of Rome: is not this good Divinity? but one more of theſe favourable interpretations I cannot omit, and that is this. 1 Cor.7. Petrus Ravennas.

When Otho in his conſtitution mentioned, had commanded that Prieſts within one moneth ſhould put away their Concubines, and after keep neither the ſame nor any other: the gloſſe moſt kindly expoundeth it, that they ſhould not keepe either the ſame, or any other, by the ſpace of a whole moneth together: otherwiſe, ſaith it, a Prieſt ſhould run into danger for any ſhort holding of his Concubine; which thing indeed were too too rigorous, conſidering the frailty of our time.

Stand you not amazed at this ſhameleſneſſe of theſe Popiſh Doctors and Maſters? Thus might I weary you a whole yeare with ſuch foule teſtimonies of their moſt unholy holineſſe if it were needfull; but you ſee enough. They place adultery, inter minora crimina, amongſt the ſmaller ſinnes and offences. They write, that if a Prieſt keepe ſundry Concubines, yet the Biſhop may diſpenſe with him to execute his office notwithſtanding. That he that keepeth but one Concubine, caſtè vivit, liveth chaſtly. Their Pope Ione, was ſhee not a holy head of their Church, that they ſay is ſo holy? The open ſtewes, is it not maintained, and a yearely revenue taken for it?

Doe they not abound in admirable number? In the yeare of our Lord, 1565. by a perfect view taken, there were found in Rome, eight and twenty thouſand women of that ſort. And in the yeare before, 1564. upon Twelfe day at night, there were ſeen ſeventeen Coaches of Curtizans arriving together even into the Popes owne palace.

They write in excuſe of it, that it is a neceſſary evill, the heat of the country requireth it, &c. But S. Auguſtine ſaith, Non vult Deus tale lucrum compenſari tali damno. God will not have ſuch a gaine recompenſed with ſuch a loſſe. And the holy Ghoſt teacheth, that we do not evill, that good may come of it: for if we doe, our damnation is juſt. Tertullian ſaith, Lupanaria execrabilia ſunt coram Deo. Stewes are accurſed before God. Abycienda ſunt falſa remedia, quæ periculis ſunt graviora. We muſt caſt away vain remedies, that are worſe than the maladies they are uſed for, ſaith another. The heates of Jewry are thought to paſſe all the heates of Italy, and yet God ſaith unto the Jewes, Non erit meretrix de filiabus Iſrael, nec ſcortator de filiis Iſrael. There ſhall be no whore of the daughters of Iſrael, nor whore-keeper of the ſons of Iſrael. Rom.3. Deut.23.

And who knoweth not, that the Emperour Iustinian, notwithstanding all those Popish necessities and policies, straightly commanded, That harlots be banished out of all Townes. If a man rebuke swearing in this holy Church, he is by and by suspected for a Lutheran: so was Sanpaulinus, and thereupon examined, condemned, and burned: Master Fox, pag. 904. The Lord Cobham, Sir Iohn Oldcastle openly confessed, that whilst he was a Papist, all unholinesse abounded in him, and he never amended, till he knew that despised doctrine of Wicliffe. Roger Holland, first a Papist, afterward by Gods mercy, a Martyr, confesseth the like, that he was most uncleane upon presumption of Auricular confession to the Priest, and giving some money to him to doe his penance for him; which indeed was lawfull then, their owne glosse saying: Potest jejunare per alium, vel potest dare nummum pro jejunio. He may fast by some other man, or else he may give money to redeeme his penance. In a word, is that a holy profession that reprobates may attaine unto? And what requireth Popery more than may bee found in a very reprobate? See your selfe, and reade Master Perkins good Treatise of this matter.

M. Fox pag. 2849.

Truly, but that I know it to be written, that God will give over such as contemne his truth, unto strong delusions, I could never thinke that either men durst write, and doe thus, or that such as reade it, should not by and by be smitten with a detestation of such a Religion. But what say you of their good workes? for of their evill workes we heare too much, saving that it is needfull to open the truth, that if God bee pleased, some may be profited.

2 Thess. 2.

Surely, even of their good workes also I must say it truly, that they are far from holy works, and from making them holy, as they teach, and would beare the world in hand: for I marke it well, and wish you also to marke it with me, that when S. Paul to the Ephesians speakes of righteousnesse and holinesse, he addeth this word, True holinesse; thereby noting, that in the world there is also a false, fained, and counterfeit holinesse, which Saint Chrysostome thought of when he wrote thus: Offendes multos, qui quamvis sermonem veritatis non acceperint, & foris sint, operibus tamen pietatis ut apparet sunt conspicui. Invenies viros misericordes, compatientes, justitiæ vacantes, sed nullos facientes fructus operum, quia nescierunt opus veritatis. Thou shalt finde many, who although they have not received the word of Truth, and are yet without, nevertheless abound with the workes of piety, as it seemeth. Thou shalt finde many mercifull men, full of compassion, and carefull of justice; but shewing no fruits of workes indeed, because they know not the worke of truth. And to him agreeth S. Hierome, saying: Possumus dicere frustra aliquos munera offerre Deo, & eleemosynis atq; oblationibus putare Deum posse placari, cum ipsi non extruxerint in seipsis templum Spiritui Sancto: tunc enim prosunt eleemosynæ & munera quæ offeruntur in altari, cum seipsum quis ædificaverit templum Dei, & post hanc ædificationem dona obtulit. We may say, that in vaine some men offer gifts to God, and thinke that God may be pleased with Almes deeds, and Oblations, when they have not built in themselves a Temple to the holy Ghost: For then profit Almes, and Offerings, when a man hath made himselfe the Temple of God, and afterward offereth. So that we see both by Scriptures and Fathers, that the way to have the fruit good, is first to have the tree good, which cannot be, but by the seed of the Word.

Ephes. 4. 24.

Chrysost. de fide & legenatura, & S. Sancto.

Order therefore would, that these counterfeit Catholikes should first prove unto us the raising up of this Temple of God in themselves, and then talke of their workes. But even as Ethnickes teach good workes, so doe they: for Ethnickes and Pagans built houses for Religion and Learning after their maner, and did many such workes as Papists boast of. Compare the Catalogue of good workes which God maketh in the 11. Chapter to the Hebrewes, with this bead-roll of Popish works, and how doe they differ? Not a word shall you finde in that Chapter of all their workes, as of Buildings, Fastings, Masses, Dirges, Lampes, Lights, Chantries, &c. but great commendation of others, which they never so much as name.

Abraham is there praised for leaving in faith his owne Countrey, as many of our brethren did in Queen Maries times: And others for other fruits of faith, which I leave to your reading; onely praying that the difference may bee noted betwixt Gods Spirit, and the spirit of Popery: the one being heavenly, the other altogether earthly. For if an earthly man, that never knew Christ, should bee asked, Whether to build a Church, or to goe at Gods commandement into a strange countrey (as Abraham did) were a better deed, hee would answer the first. And so doth a Papist jumpe with him, the world ever liking and loving her owne.

But doe you not thinke it some blot to us, that they say we have no Temples, neither did our Fathers build any.

God forbid every slander of theirs should be a blot to us: when they say we have no Churches, they meane of our owne building; and therefore they would conclude us not to hold truth; but is the truth of a Church tyed to a materiall house of stone and timber? May not a man or woman bee the Temple of the holy Ghost, unlesse they have such places erected by such as were of their Religion? Did not the Jewes dwell in Tabernacles in the desart, and yet worship God rightly? Christ we know had a Church of true beleevers in the Mountaines, in the Wilderneſſe, and in ſhips, teaching them in all theſe places as effectually as in any Synagogues and Temples. God dwelleth not in Temples made with hands, and ſhall wee tye his Church to ſuch places? The priſon was Iohn Baptiſts Church, and there hee had his Diſciples, and taught them, thither they reſorted to him, and were edified. Paul did the like, and begot Oneſimus his ſpirituall ſon in bonds, as alſo in his paſſage to Rome, and at Rome, by the ſpace of two yeares, whilſt he was priſoner, as you may reade in the Acts. It was ſaid of our Fathers, and I pray you marke it, That they had darke Oratories, but light hearts. Now a generation is ſprung up of counterfeit Catholikes, that have light Churches, and darke hearts. Theſe men are like the Diſciples of Chriſt, when in an earthly conceit, they wondred at the temple of Jeruſalem, and at the goodly ſtones and workmanſhip, and would have had their Maſter Chriſt to have done ſo too: goodly Images, painted windowes, deep Organs, great Tapers, and Candles, ſweet ſavours and cenſings, with ſuch like, are high matters in theſe mens eyes; and they blindly thinke theſe things to argue a Church, and truth, which may be amongſt Heathens and Turkes. But were all the Churches in the whole world built, thinke they, by Romiſh Catholikes? Aſſuredly the moſt of them were built by Jewes, and by Heathens: and by Popiſh profeſſors many have been ſuffered to decay, that were built to their hands, as that wicked diſpenſation may witneſſe, granted by a Pope in ſyllables, leſt the foulneſſe of it ſhould appeare to all men, Non re, te con, Ru do, that was, non reſidere, not to bee reſident, tenere concubinam, to keep a Concubine, and to ruinate his houſes.

in

Mat. 11.

Epiſt. Philem. 10.

Acts 28.

Mat. 24.

O new and ſtrange kinde of building of holy Catholikes: Conſtantine built many Temples before Popery peeped out of the ſhell, Charles the great built Schooles for Divinity in Germany, and Univerſities in France and Italy, not for Popery, but for the Word of God to bee truly taught in, and holy Fathers to be read in, commanding that at their Tables alſo they ſhould ſtill reade ſome peece of S. Auguſtines workes, and eſpecially of the holy Bible. Shall wee in England looke at our owne Nation? What Princely benefits and favours have the Kings and Queenes of England done to Univerſities, and for good learning? How did King Edward the third love Wicliffe, and defend him againſt the rage of Romiſh deſtroyers? The ancient Britans, ſaith Beda, had their Churches and Temples, neither receiving the Romiſh Religion, the Romiſh yoke, nor the Romiſh Auſtin. What worthy workes have been done in our memories by that mighty and famous Prince, King Henry the eighth, by worthy and zealous Lords, Ladies, and other inferiour ſubjects of this Engliſh Church, both in raiſing up new Colledges, new Schooles, new Hoſpitals, in giving ſtates of maintenance to Schollers, to maimed Soldiers, to poore Maidens mariages, to Priſons, to decayed Houſholders, to yong beginners? &c. What an honorable worke is before our eyes for the liberall Sciences in London? Doe not yet many live, that heard that great Traytor Campian, before he fell to Romiſh treaſons, preach at Sir Thomas Whites funerall, that worthy Citizen, from whom came ſo many honorable workes of piety and zeale, and there in his Sermon to ſay, That indeed Papiſts built ſomewhat, but in moſt great cheapneſſe of all things, and helped with infinite hands: Sir Thomas White farre otherwiſe, and many moe. Away therefore with this Popiſh brag, and know we, that had we never a Church built either by Proteſtant or Papiſt, yet we may be the true Church of God: but yet we have Churches, God be bleſſed, and many honourable remembrances of true piety, charity and zeale, in ſuch as have worſhipped God as we doe. And for all true fruits of faith, and all true holineſſe, we ſhall ever, by Gods grace, goe before them, and ſtop their mouthes. But in hypocriticall ſhewes, and guilefull purpoſes, we hate to be like them.

We faſt rightly, and as we ought: but we ſcorne their maner, to except againſt ſome meates, and to eate plentifully of that that nouriſheth the fleſh ten times more. We pray as we ought, according to the meaſure of grace given us, but their numbrings, and bablings, and ſcornings with God, we juſtly abhorre. Almes wee give, and ſhall ever doe, by Gods grace; but we blow not up Trumpets, as they doe. In a word, our Church is truly holy, and theirs no way holy, but a very Cage of uncleane Birds and filthy facts, as hath beene ſhewed ſufficiently.

Reade S. Jerome ad Nepotian. & ſee Popiſh faſts deſcribed.

Surely enough hath been ſaid, and the Lord in his mercy open their eyes, that they may be ſaved. And now I pray you goe to the next Title given to the Church in this Creed; namely when it is called Catholike, and ſhew the reaſon why ſhe is ſo called.

Catholikes.

It is a ſtrange thing that Papiſts ſhould be ſo blinde as to conclude of the name, as they doe, that becauſe their Church of ſome is called the Catholike Church, therefore it is ſo: And becauſe they are called Catholikes, therefore they are ſo; as though to be called, and to bee, were both one, when as things be certaine, names uncertaine and variable.

That Temple in mount Garizim was called Gods Temple: therefore was it ſo? No. Our Saviour was called a deceiver, and a Galilean: ſo were alſo the Chriſtians called Galileans; yet we know they were not ſo. The Jewiſh high Prieſts were called many yeares after Chriſt, by that name, when the Office was gone, and they no high Prieſts indeed. And the Apoſtle ſaith, many in heaven and earth had names of Gods, yet were not, there being but one God.

Iohn 4.20.

Acts 23.4.

1 Cor. 8.5.

Apoc.2.9. Chap.3.9. Apoc.3.17.

Acts 19.Diana.

They call themſelves alſo Iewes, ſaith the Angell in the Apocalypſe, but they are not. The Church of Laodicea ſaid ſhe was rich,&c. But thou art poore,and naked,and blinde,and miſerable,ſaith God. Mahomet called himſelfe a Prophet, and ſo ſtill is called; but therefore is hee ſo? No. That Epheſian Idoll was called a great goddeſſe,yet was none. And falſe Chriſts ſhall come,ſaith the Goſpell,which ſhall have the name,but not be Chriſt: So are the Papiſts called Catholikes, but are not. The beginning of this name was for difference, being oppoſite to Schiſmatikes and Heretikes; which Heretikes abounding heretofore in many places, were called by the name of their Sects: and for difference betwixt them and the true Chriſtians, they themſelves would call the Chriſtians Catholikes, not that they thought them ſo, but onely, as I ſay, for difference; as at this day the Arrians call us that confeſſe a Trinity, and worſhip the Sonne as coequall with the Father,Catholikes; but this not from their hearts, as thinking us to be ſo. By the name therefore to conclude, is a fooliſh Argument, falſe in Schooles, and falſe ever.

And thus we reaſon on the contrary part, That which was not from the beginning with the true Church, cannot be a certaine note to know the true Church by; which is plaine in every mans eye to be ſo: but this name of Catholike was not from the beginning given to the true Church, but there was a time when ſhe was not ſo called, and yet a true Church. Therefore the name is not a certaine note,I meane a certaine and ſure eſſentiall note,ſuch as being given, ſheweth a Church, and being not given, taketh away a Church. The aſſumption is proved by the old Jewiſh Church, which was a true holy Church, and yet never was called Catholike. The Chriſtian Church alſo for a time, was quite without this name, and had it not, neither was any Chriſtian man in the Apoſtles time called a Catholike, as Pacianus witneſſeth; which by the way may tell us, that this Creed which now we expound, and is called the Apoſtles Creed, as ſuppoſed to be made by them, was not indeed ſo, becauſe in this the Church is called Catholike, but by ſome others after their times, was collected out of their Writings. To ſay then this Church is Catholike, or this perſon is a Catholike, becauſe ſo called, were as much as if a man ſhould ſay, this is a Philoſopher,becauſe he hath a beard; this is a Scholler, becauſe he hath a gowne, &c. When the true way to know both,is by doctrine,and profeſſion. S. Auguſtine hath a very fit ſaying for this matter,which I pray you note: Quomodo ergò gloriaris te eſſe Chriſtianum? Nomen habes,& factum non habes: ſi autem nomen ſecutum fuerit opus, dicat te quiſquam Paganum,tu factis oſtende te Chriſtianum: nam ſi factis non oſtendis te Chriſtianum,omnes te Chriſtianum vocent,quid tibi prodeſt nomen,ubi res non invenitur? How doſt thou boaſt thy ſelf to be a Chriſtian? Thou haſt the name,but thou haſt not the deed. If then the deed follow the name, let ſome man call thee a Pagan, and thou by deedes ſhew thy ſelfe a Chriſtian: for if thou doſt not, though all men call thee a Chriſtian, what will the name profit where the thing is not found? So ſay we to the Papiſts, if they will have the name of Catholikes, let them ſhew by deedes that they be ſo: otherwiſe things be not proved by names. But you will ſay, What is the deed of a Catholike? Surely,as one ſaith,to keep all the commandements of God; but I refer them to Vincentius Lirinenſis, whom they would ſeeme ſo much to regard, who ſaith thus: Ille eſt verus & Germanus Catholicus qui veritatem Dei,qui Eccleſiam,qui Chriſti corpus diligit, qui divinæ religioni,qui Catholicæ fidei nihil præponit,non hominis cujuſpiam authoritatem,non amorem,non ingenium,non eloquentiam,non Philoſophiam. He is a true and right Catholike(not that is called ſo) which loveth the truth of God, which loveth his Church, and the body of Chriſt, which preferreth nothing before holy Religion, and the Catholike faith,not any mans authority, not love, not wit, not eloquence, not Philoſophy. Thus then let Papiſts prove themſelves Catholikes: if not,the golden name is like a golden ring in a ſwines ſnout, to no purpoſe but to be abuſed. The Arrians, and divers other Heretikes were called Catholikes.

Epiſt.1.ad Symproniam.

Aug.tract.5.in Epiſt. Joan.

Res ex nomine non definitur.

Catholicus dicitur qui ſervat universa Dei mandata. Pacianus loco prædicto.

It muſt needs be very fooliſh to reaſon from the name to the thing,and you have made it plaine. But why now thinke you is the Church called Catholike?

It is a Greeke word,and ſignifieth Univerſall,not ſtraightned, as in the time of the Jewes, but ſcattered far and wide over the face of the earth. For more plainneſſe, you may ſay the Church is called Catholike in three reſpects,in reſpect of Place,in reſpect of Perſons,in reſpect of Time.

Mat.10.5,6. In reſpect of place, becauſe now it is not ſaid as then; Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, and into the Cities of the Samaritanes enter not, but goe to the loſt ſheep of Iſrael: that is, now the Church is not tyed to any one place of the world, kingdome, or country, or city, or houſe, as moſt abſurdly the Papiſts ſeeke to tye it to Rome.

Mat.28. But now that enlargement is made that we heare of in Mathew, when Chriſt ſaid to the ſame Diſciples whom before he limited and bounded: Goe ye unto all nations, to teach and baptize them,&c. unto all nations I ſay, and marke it: for this enlargement is it that maketh the Church to be called Catholike, that is, univerſall in reſpect of place, enlarged to all places of Epheſ.2.11.&c. the world, and not ſtraightned to any place, as I ſaid. Many foretellings were of this univerſality before, and now it is accompliſhed ever ſince Chriſt, who hath broken downe the partition-wall even in this reſpect alſo. The ſecond Pſalme propheſied of it, and foretold it in theſe words: Aske of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. See the large limits of Chriſt his Church now under Chriſt, and know that in regard hereof truly and rightly it is called Catholike, or univerſall. Then in regard of perſons it is ſo called, becauſe it is not tyed to ſome ſorts of perſons, but belongeth to all, that is, to all ſorts, though not to every one of every ſort. Thus teacheth the Apoſtle when he ſaith; Now there is neither Iew nor Grecian, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, but all are one in Chriſt Ieſus : that is, there is no condition of men living, that have cauſe to complaine in deſpaire that God hath caſt them wholly away, and ſuffereth not his Church and graces to reach to any of them: Rich men cannot ſay it, poore men cannot ſay it, wiſe men cannot ſay it, ſimple men cannot ſay it, but ſome of all ſorts God hath mercy on, and ſome of all ſorts have entrance into his Church here militant on earth, and ſo ſhall be ſure to live with it triumphantly in heaven for ever. Therefore the Apoſtle would not ſay, no wiſe men, no mighty men, &c. but not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called, allowing ſome to be ſaved of all ſorts: in regard whereof, I ſay, it is called Catholike, that is, univerſall: for univerſally it reacheth to all ſorts and kindes, and conditions of perſons. Thus teacheth that deſcription of gates belonging to the holy Jeruſalem in the Apocalypſe: On the Eaſt part there were three gates, on the North part three gates, on the South ſide three gates, and on the Weſt ſide three gates, meaning by Jeſus Chriſt there is now a way, and entrance, and paſſage for all nations, and for all ſorts of perſons into his Church: for in every Nation he, he I ſay, be he poore or rich, noble or ignoble, or of what condition ſoever, that feareth God, and worketh righteouſneſſe, is accepted. Laſtly, in regard of Time, the Church is alſo Catholike: for at all times a ſinner that repenteth himſelfe unfainedly, is accepted. So you ſee how and why the Church now under Chriſt, is called Catholike.

it

Gal. 3. 28.

1 Cor. 1. 18.

Apoc. 21. 3.

Acts 10.

Why is it called Apoſtolike?

Apoſtolica.

Chiefly and moſt properly becauſe it is founded upon the Doctrine of the Apoſtles, and not upon any Traditions or Fancies of Men. Tertullian ſaith, ſome Churches are called Apoſtolike, becauſe by ſome Apoſtles they were firſt founded and erected: and others which were not ſo, yet propter conſanguinitatem doctrinæ non minus Apoſtolicæ deputari, for the conſanguinity in doctrine are no leſſe eſteemed Apoſtolike.

Depræſcript.

The great queſtion may now follow, if you pleaſe, how this Holy, Catholike and Apoſtolike Church is to be knowne.

It is ever knowne by ſuch notes and markes as God hath laid downe in his Word to know it by. But the Papiſts tell us of other notes, than ever they ſhall bee proved to bee notes indeed: And therefore it ſhall not be amiſſe firſt to conſider their falſe markes, and then to come to our true Notes.

Antiquity.

The firſt of them is Antiquity, which your owne reaſon will tell you cannot be a note to know the true Church by, becauſe there was a time when the true Church of God had no ſuch marke, as in the beginning: for as mankinde had a beginning, and then could not be ſaid to bee old; ſo had the Church a beginning,, and at that time had no Antiquity for a marke. The Papiſts ſay at this day they convert new Iſlands and people to the Romiſh faith; will they ſay then that thoſe Churches which they ſo plant be not true, becauſe they be new? Every thing hath a beginning, and muſt have time before it can be old: Faith and Religion had ſo here in earth, and therefore were ſometime without Antiquity.

Secondly, the falſe Church hath alſo Antiquity: for from the beginning, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, there were two cities, the city of God, and the city of the devill, and our common ſpeech is, where God hath his Church, the devill hath his Chappell. Therefore Antiquity is a very unſure marke, your ſelfe ſee. The ancient Fathers would not reaſon from Antiquity, but from verity. Hæreſes non tam novitas quam veritas revincit, quodq; adverſus veritatem ſapit, hoc erit hæreſis, etiam vetus conſuetudo: Truth, ſaith Tertullian, doth convince hereſies rather than newneſſe; and that which ſavoureth againſt truth is hereſie, although an old cuſtome. Cyprian ſaith, Conſuetudo ſine veritate, vetuſtas erroris eſt: Cuſtome without truth is oldneſſe of error. And againe, if only Chriſt be to be heard, we may not regard, what ſome before us have thought fit to be done, but what he that was before all men, even Chriſt, did: for wee may not follow the cuſtome of men, but the truth of God. A notable ſaying, and able of it ſelfe to anſwer all men in this matter of Antiquity, would they give ſuch a learned Father his due credit and reverence. Ignatius ſaith; Antiquitas mea Ieſus Chriſtus eſt, my Antiquity is Jeſus Chriſt. Arnobius ſaith, Religionis autoritas non eſt tempore eſtimanda, ſed Numine, nec quo die, ſed quod colere cœperis intueri convenit, quod verum eſt, ſerum non eſt. Saint Auguſtine confeſſeth, that the Heathens uſed thus to alledge Antiquity as the Papiſts doe, and anſwereth them as we now doe, Quod anterius eſt, inquiunt Ethnici, falſum eſſe non poteſt, &c. The heathens ſay, the Religion that was firſt, cannot be falſe. As though Antiquity and old cuſtome could prevaile againſt the truth. No ſaith he, we may not ſay, quarè modò, quarè ſerò, why commeth it now;

Tertul. de vet. virg.

Epiſt. 74. ad Pomp.

Ignat. ad Philadelph.

Aug. in quæſt. Novi & vet. teſt. quæſt. 114. De cev. lib. 10. cap. 32.

now, why commeth it ſo late? for the counſell of God that ſent it, is unſearchable to the wiſdome of man. Saint Ambroſe telleth how Symmachus in his time pleaded for Paganiſme againſt the Chriſtians, by this argument of Antiquity and Fathers, ſaying: they ought to follow the ſteps of their fore-fathers, who likewiſe followed ſuch as went before them againe, and all of them governed their countrey in great happineſſe, &c. But Ambroſe anſwered them as we doe now the Papiſts, that no Antiquity ought to prejudice Verity. And therefore if you will repell any thing, ſhew it to be falſe, and if you will receive any thing, ſhew that it is truth. This is a true and ſound courſe, when antiquity will deceive. If antiquity and verity goe together, it is ſafe and honorable; but beware of old error. The yong Prophet you reade that had ſtood well, and denyed to break Gods commandement, yet by an old Prophet was deceived. And old bootes, and old bottles, old bread, and old garments, deceived wiſe and zealous Ioſua with the reſt. Leaven may be old, and yet naught, and to be taken heed of. Cain was elder than Abel, Iſmael than Iſaac, Ioſephs brethren than himſelfe, yet worſe. It was well anſwered therefore of Apollo to the Athenians, to ſay that that was the beſt religion which was oldeſt, and that was the oldeſt which was beſt. Thereby notably teaching, that antiquity and goodneſſe ought ever to goe together, and that we muſt judge antiquity by goodneſſe: for without it, it is nothing worth. How old is at this day the hereſie of the Saduces: of the Phariſies: that Chriſt had but one nature: That falſe interpretation of the Law which Chriſt correcteth? The hereſie of them that joyned circumciſion with the Goſpell continueth ſtill in Africa amongſt the Æthiopians, being now above 1500. yeares old. Therefore is it good? No. Neſtorius hereſie remaineth ſtill amongſt the Georgians, and is above twelve hundred years old, yet naught. The departure of the Greek Churches from Rome, is as old as the tyranny of Rome, yet Papiſts will not allow it for his antiquity. Creſconius the Heretike, told Saint Auguſtine that they had received that opinion of their Fathers, and they of their fathers, and ſo on. True let it be ſaith S. Auguſtine, at errantes ab errantibus, but deceived men received it of deceived men; even as the Jewes at this day receive it of their fathers, and they of theirs before, that Chriſts Diſciples ſtole his body out of the Sepulchre, and that he did not riſe againe. O marke it, and ſee what it is to goe by antiquity, without verity alſo goe with it. How then can antiquity be a note to know the Church by, ſince that you have ſeene the Church at the beginning had it not; the falſe Church alſo now hath it, and the godly Fathers never regarded further than it had verity joyned with it? Wherefore the Prophet wiſely biddeth them, looke among the old wayes for the good way, and walke in that, noting that there be old wayes naught.

Ambr. lib. 5. Epiſt 30.

1 King. 12.

Ioſua 9.

1 Cor. 5. 7.

Luke 20. 27. Marke 12 35. Mat. 5.

But if Antiquity were a true note and marke, have the Papiſts it more on their ſide than we on ours?

No indeed, and that ſhall I alſo make plaine unto you: For had their Religion been of ſo long continuance, why did they not prove it ſo by the examples of the Primitive Church, and by the Fathers and Councels of old times? Fire and ſword have beene ever their meanes, and not true proofe of ſound Antiquity; Why doe they yet ſtill daily corrupt the ancient Monuments of learning, when they new Print them, making them ſay what they never ſaid, and ſtopping them when they liſt from ſaying what indeed they did ſay? Have we not their curſed Index expurgatorius to be ſeene, and ſentences left out according to the ſame? O they ſhall never be able to cleare themſelves from this wickedneſſe; We have too many proofes againſt them; therefore little truſt they to true Antiquity aſſure your ſelfe, further than it is corrupted. Their whole body of doctrine is new, and far from any long continuance. That maine point of their Pope, his Supremacy, who knoweth not the beginning of it? Victor was the firſt that ever ſet foot into it, when hee would take upon him to cenſure the Eaſt Churches; becauſe they would not celebrate Eaſter according to the manner of Rome, and the Weſt Churches; yet farre was Victor from dreaming of ſuch a height as now it is come to: but even that little ſtep of Victor was rebuked by Irenæus, and diſpleaſed many other godly Catholike Fathers, and Churches. This Victor was a good man, imbraced the truth, but in this erred, as Irenæus told him. Afterwards came to that Sea of Rome, Zozimus Bonifacius the ſecond, and Celeſtinus, who ſent Embaſſadours to the ſixth Councell of Carthage where Saint Auguſtine was preſent, praying that the forraine Biſhops might be allowed to appeale to Rome in their grieſes, as was decreed (ſaid they) in a Canon of the Councell of Nice; The Councell anſwered, that they remembred no ſuch Canon, but they would ſearch, and ſee, which having done, and finding that ſuggeſtion to be falſe and forged, ſharply rebuked Celeſtinus for it, and made a law flat contrary to that deſired Supremacy, that no man out of Africa ſhould appeale to Rome: This did Auguſtine, and two hundred and ſixteene Biſhops more with him in that Councell. Marke I pray you theſe beginnings of pride and forgery. Then in time after againe began the Biſhop of Conſtantinople, Iohn, to contend with the Biſhop of Rome, Gregory, for ſuperiority over all, and Gregory told him, that whoſoever ſought ſuch authority was a very Antichriſt, or at leaſt a fore-runner of him. Out, at laſt, came Boniface the third, and and got it of the Traytor Phocas, when he had murthered the Emperour his Lord and Maſter, which was in the yeare of our Lord 606. This is the true Story, and the great Antiquity of this high point of Poperie, the Popes Supremacy. Other particulars I could thus runne over, but it would be long, and, if God will, I ſhall doe it where it ſhall be more fit. But in a word, was there any Tranſubſtantiation decreed before the Councell of Lateran, 1215? Was Shrift before that? Was there any Communion under one kinde, before the Councell of Conſtance, 1414? VVherefore let it ſuffice, that a worthy Father of this Engliſh Church, did offer it to all the learned Papiſts in the world, to prove any of thoſe ſeven and twenty points then named of their Popiſh Religion, by any one ſufficient ſentence out of any old Catholike Doctor or Father, or out of any old generall Councell, or out of the holy Scriptures of God, or by any one example of the Primitive Church, by the ſpace of 600. yeares after Chriſt, and hee would yeeld and ſubſcribe. Alas, what Antiquity call you this, that for ſo long time after Chriſt was not begun? Surely the Papiſts have learned of Conjurers and Sorcerers, who, working by Devils, yet ſay they have their skill from Athanaſius, Cyprian, Moſes, Abel, Adam, and the Angel Raphael: So ſay they, all is from Auguſtine, Hierome, Ambroſe, and holy Antiquity; which is nothing ſo, but of themſelves deviſed, and that very lately in compariſon of any Antiquity: Surely they are as vaine herein, as ſome in our dayes, that will needs goe with their Pedigrees to Noah his Arke.

And have wee any better Antiquity on our ſide?

Yea, bleſſed be God, wee walke in light, and truth abideth light, and ſeeketh no corners. There is no writing, or monument of learning, in this world, ſo ancient as the Scripture, for it was before all; and this offer we ever made, and ſtill make, that if any point wee hold of faith and ſalvation, be not ſoundly and truly to be proved out of theſe Scriptures, we will forſake it; we adde to theſe Scriptures, as witneſſes of truth taken out of them, the holy and reverend Fathers and Councels, which for the ſpace (as you have heard) of 600. yeares after Chriſt, ſtand wholly for us in thoſe chiefe points, and utterly againſt them. This is Antiquity then indeed, and without deceit, when Verity out of Scripture is the ground of humane Teſtimony.

How then commeth it to paſſe, that this ſhameleſſe charge of Novelty is ſo imputed unto us, and laid upon us?

Becauſe the Devill is no changeling, but ſtill continueth his old manner of ſlandering the truth: And it may doe you good to obſerve this point: The Lord our God is one for ever, and from everlaſting, ſo is his truth, yet of wicked men this imputation of New, New, hath ſtill beene given it. The wicked Haman ſaid ſo of the Jewiſh obedience in that time; Thou haſt in thy Kingdome a people that uſe new Lawes of their owne, and deſpiſe thy Lawes. Hester 3. S. Paul at Athens, was charged to bee a ſetter out of new gods, and what new doctrine (ſay they) is this? Acts 17. Saint Origen ſaith, that Celſus ſcoffed at the Goſpell by the name of Novelty; and Euſebius ſaith, that the Chriſtian Religion from the beginning, of very ſpite was called New and ſtrange: So that it is but Satans old malice, and old manner, to ſtirre up his inſtruments ſtill to jeſt at Religion, as New, and we muſt be content. He ſaid it well that ſaid it; Quod verum eſt, ſerum non eſt: The thing that is true, is never too late: or as Saint Bernard ſaid, Hæc Novitas non eſt novella vanitas; This Novelty is no new vanity, but the ancient inheritance of the Church of God, &c.

Orig. contr. Celſum. Euſeb. lib. 1, c. 14 Arnobius. Bern. de vita ſolitaria.

This note then of Antiquitie proveth a very unfit note to know the Church by, what elſe I pray you put they?

Secondly, they put Univerſality for a great token to know the Church by; But we anſwer that the Church had not, nor hath not ever Univerſalitie, and therefore it is not a true marke, which may bee wanting, and yet the Church remaine. Now that it had not this note, remember the beginning when it conſiſted but of a few: and that it hath not, remember the end, when Chriſt ſaith, Shall I finde faith on earth? Luke 18.8. Remember the Arke that had but eight in it, when all the reſt were drowned: Gen. 9.6. Remember Lot and his little company: Gen. 19. Remember the words of our Saviour himſelfe, Little, little flocke, feare not, &c. The way that leadeth to heaven is ſtrait and narrow, and few there be that finde it. Luke 12.32. Mat. 7. Where is Univerſality and Multitude in all theſe places? O marke it, and know, that though there be foure hundred falſe Prophets, and but one Micheas, yet that one is better than that foure hundred. Caleb and Joſuah being but two, were more accepted than thouſands others, that never entred into the Land of Promiſe. You know the Story, thoſe two Tribes that departed not, were better than the other ten that fell away; and that one cleanſed Leaper that returned to give thankes, was better than the other nine. The Sower went out to ſow his ſeed, and there was but one good ground, divers ill. The Lords counſell therefore is ever good, ever right, ever ſafe to be followed; Non ſequeris multitudinem, Thou ſhalt not follow a multitude. Againe, we anſwer, that the malignant Church of Satan, hath, and ſhall have ever, the ſway for number, and therefore Univerſality and multitude cannot be a note to know the Church by. The Antecedent is proved by the words

1 King. 22. 8. Numb. 14. 1 King. 22. 28. Mat. 13. Exod. 23. 2. Vniverſality.

Mat.7.

words of Chriſt; Broad is the way that leadeth to deſtruction, and many there be that finde it; Alſo by the Title of Satan, who is called Princeps hujus mundi, The Prince of this world, becauſe he hath his kingdome in the greater part. This knew the Fathers well, and therefore they ſpake and wrote as they did of this matter. Chryſoſtome, One man that doth the will of God, is better than a thouſand that doe it not; for hence commeth all confuſion and overthrow, that as in Theaters and Stages at playes, ſo in the Church and matters of truth wee looke for Multitude. In matters that goe by voices, true it is that we rather number them than weigh them, but in matters of Religion, we muſt rather weigh them than number them. For when Cæcilius had the greateſt applauſe, he was moſt doubtfull of his well doing, it being a ſuſpitious thing, as Socrates ſaid, to pleaſe a multitude, becauſe lightly they never like but what is ill. Non enim tam benè agitur cum rebus humanis, ut meliora pluribus placeant; argumentum peſſimi turba eſt: For it goeth not ſo happily with man in this world, that the beſt things pleaſe the moſt, but rather is the multitude an argument of the worſt. What profit I pray you (ſaith Chryſoſtome) is there in a great deale of hay, comparable to that within a few precious ſtones? Surely non in numeri multitudine, ſed in virtutis probitate multitudo conſiſtit. Elias unus erat, ſed totus mundus non dignus erat qui rependeret ipſi: Not in multitude of number, but in goodneſſe of vertue doth a multitude conſiſt. Elias was but one, and yet the whole world was not worthy to be weighed unto him. Where are they, ſaith Nazianzene, Qui multitudine Eccleſiam definiunt, & gregem exiguum aſpernantur, which judge of the Church by multitude, and deſpiſe the little Flocke? Surely, if he lived now he might ſee the Papiſts to doe this, making Multitude and Univerſality to be a marke to know the Church by, and reproaching ſuch as profeſſe Gods Goſpell with paucity and fewneſſe every day. But they ſhould remember what a Biſhop of Rome ſometimes ſaid, when Conſtantius the Emperour, being an Arrian, ſaid to him; Quota pars tu es orbis terrarum, qui ſolus facis cum homine ſcelerato, ac orbis terrarum & totius mundi pacem diſſolvis? What part of the world art thou, being but one man, which only ſtandeſt with a wicked man, and breakeſt the peace of the whole world: meaning when hee tooke Athanaſius his part againſt the Arrians? The Biſhop Liberius anſwered, which I pray you mark: Non diminuitur ſolitudine mea verbum fidei, O Emperour, the word of Faith is not made one jot the leſſe by my being but one, for the time was, when there were but three that withſtood that wicked decree, and were caſt therefore into the fiery furnace. Yet thoſe three were in the right, and all the reſt, ſo many thouſands, did amiſſe. A worthy anſwer, and ſo fit for theſe times, as nothing can be more fit, were it marked.

Ad Pop. Antioch: Hom.28.

Seneca de beata vita, lib.2.2.

Ad Pop. Antioch. Hom.40.

Then number was no ſigne to boaſt of, nor fewneſſe to bee aſhamed of, in the judgement of a Biſhop of Rome; But now the caſe is altered, how truely, they will one day know with woe and ſorrow. Nevertheleſſe, if you looke at the Church, and conſider it in regard of her ſelfe, the multitude is great, as you may ſee by thoſe words in the Apocalypſe; After theſe things I beheld, and loe a great multitude, which no man could number, of all Nations and Kindreds, and People, and Tongues, ſtood before the Throne, and before the Lambe, cloathed with long white Robes, and Palmes in their hands. And here on earth is our number ſo ſmall as Papiſts would make it? No, no; bleſſed be God for his mercy: They were told many yeares agoe, by a Reverend Father of this Church, that the Kingdome of England, the Kingdome of Scotland, the Kingdome of Denmarke, the Kingdome of Sweden, the Duke of Saxony, the Duke of Brunſwick, the Palſgrave of Rhene, the Duke of Wittenburg, the Langrave of Heſſia, the Marques of Brandenburge, the Prince of Ruſſia, all other the Earles and Noblemen, and great Cities through the whole Countrey of Germany, the mighty Common-weales of Helvetia, Rhetia, Vallis Tellina, with ſo many hundred thouſands beſides, in France, Italy, Spaine, Hungary, and in the Kingdome of Pole, are not few, as the Papiſts would make them. O no, it grieveth them full ſore that they are ſo many: Wherefore though we clap not our wings, and crow as Papiſts doe, of multitudes, and ſo many and ſo many; yet, the Lord have glory and praiſe, our number is not little: wee remember that good ſaying of Arnobius, and our adverſaries ſhould doe well to remember it too; Ne nobis de noſtra frequentia blandiamur. Multi nobis videmur, ſed Deo admodum pauci ſumus. Nos gentes nationeſque diſtinguimus, Deo una domus eſt, mundus hic, totus: Let us not flatter our ſelves of our great multitudes. Unto our ſelves wee ſeeme many, but unto God we are but a few. We put difference betweene Nation and Nation, but unto God this whole world is but one Houſe. This counſell is good for both ſides, that who ſo will rejoyce, may rejoyce in the Lord.

Apoc.7.9.

This is enough of their ſecond Note; what I pray you is their third?

Succeſſion.

They joyne to Antiquity and Univerſality, Conſent: of which, becauſe I have ſpoken ſufficienly in the Title of Unity before, therefore I will here make their third note Succeſſion, a matter of great importance with them, and much talked of by many, that cannot tell what it meaneth more than Beetles: and that neither this (as they ſpeake it) can bee any marke to know the Church by, I ſhall plainly ſhew you. Chriſt ſaith, In Cathedra Moſis ſedent Scribæ & Phariſei, (by order of Succeſſion) The Scribes and Phariſies ſit in Moſes Chaire.

Annas

Annas and Caiaphas touching ſucceſſion, were as well Biſhops as Aaron and Eleazar. Of ſucceſſion Saint Paul ſaith to the faithfull at Epheſus; Scio quod poſt diſceſſum meum introibunt Lupi rapaces. Ex vobis ipſis exurgent viri perverſa loquentes: I know that after my departure hence ravening Wolves ſhall enter, and ſucceed me. And out of your ſelves there ſhall (by ſucceſſion) ſpring up men ſpeaking perverſly. Therefore Saint Hierome ſaith; Non ſunt ſanctorum filii qui tenent loca ſanctorum: They are not alwayes the children of holy men, that by ſucceſſion have the places of holy men. Of the Church of Rome by name, that thus boaſteth of ſucceſſion, Cornelius the Biſhop of Britenio, in the late Councell of Trent, ſaid thus; Vtinam non à religione ad ſuperſtitionem, à fide ad infidelitatem, à Chriſto ad Antichriſtum velut prorſus unanimes declinaſſent: Would God they were not gone, as it were, utterly by conſent together, from religion to ſuperſtition, from faith to infidelity, from Chriſt to Antichriſt. Theſe few words, conſidering either the ſpeaker, or the place where they were ſpoken, may much move us: For ſurely they reach home, if God have not wholy forſaken us, and left us to a damning deluſion. They are gone from religion to ſuperſtition, from faith to infidelity, from Chriſt to Antichriſt, and yet becauſe they ſucceed in the place, the bare place ſhall worke wonders; this is the power of Popiſh ſucceſſion, if any man will beleeve them. But Chryſoſtome ſaith, as Gratian alleageth him; Non Cathedra facit Sacerdotem, ſed Sacerdos Cathedram; It is not the Chaire that maketh the Prieſt, but it is the Prieſt that maketh the Chaire. And indeed as Saint Hierome ſaith, there appeared but cold helpe in the Chaire many times: For Marcellinus the Pope, notwithſtanding his Chaire, was a foule idolater, and condemned in the Councell of Sinneſſa, by three hundred Biſhops, notwithſtanding his ſucceſſion of Peter, and all the priviledges of his Sea. Marcellinus in conſpectu Synodi cecidit in terram. Ibi ergo jacentem eum & moram facientem damnaverunt; Marcellinus (ſay the words of the Councell) in preſence of the Councell, fell upon the earth, and while there he lay and continued, they condemned him. Subſcripſerunt igitur in ejus damnationem, & damnaverunt eum extra Civitatem: Therefore they ſubſcibed to his condemnation, and caſt him out of the City. Pope Silveſter the ſecond, notwithſtanding the vertue of his Chaire, was a Conjurer, and gave himſelfe whole, body and ſoule unto the Devill, and by the Devils procurement was made Pope. Pope Zozimus corrupted the whole Councell of Nice, falſifying one Canon, thereby to have gotten primacy and government over the reſt; but the Fathers, aſſembled in the Councell of Africa, where were preſent Saint Auſten, Alypius, and two hundred and fifteene other Biſhops, ſuſpecting the difference of the Popes Copy from their Copy, ſent into the Eaſt to the Biſhop of Conſtantinople, Alexandria, and Antioch, for a Copy taken out of the Originals, which remained among them, and ſo tooke the Pope with the manner, his onely Copie differing from all, and all theirs agreeing, and having no ſuch Canon for his Supremacy. Alypius the Biſhop of Tagaſta ſaid, hee was much moved with this tricke of Legerdemaine, ſo boldly to be offered to ſo reverend a Councell. The Pope Liberius, notwithſtanding his Chaire, became an Arrian Heretike. Pope Celeſtinus was a Neſtorian Heretike. Pope Honorius was a Monothelite Heretike, confeſſed by Papiſts themſelves. Pope Iohn the two & twentieth was condemned by the Schoole of Paris for an Heretike. Lyra ſaith, many Popes have fallen into Hereſies. And Petrarcha ſaith, Rome is a Sanctuary of all Hereſies. If theſe authorities move not, adde the Councell of Baſil, which ſaith: Multos Pontifices in errores, & hæreſes lapſos eſſe legitur: Wee read, that many Popes have fallen into errors and hereſies. Æneas Sylvius, that was after Pope, ſaith: Of the Popes of Rome wee might ſhew forth very many examples, if time would ſuffer, that they have beene found either heretikes, or elſe defiled with other vices. Pope Hildebrand was charged by the Councell of Brixia, to bee an Adulterer, a Church-robber, a perjured perſon, a man-killer, a Sorcerer, and a Renegate of the faith. Pope Adrian himſelfe ſeemed to bee moved with theſe and the like qualities in Popes, and therefore was wont to ſay: Succedimus non Petro in paſcendo, ſed Romulo in Paricidio: Wee ſucced not Peter in feeding, but Romulus in killing. And is this Succeſſion ſuch a note to know the Catholike Church by? O vaine men, that will goe about to deceive Gods people with ſuch a Succeſſion in place onely, without either doctrine or manners. They are true ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles, that ſuceed in vertue, holineſſe, truth, and ſo forth: not that ſit upon the ſame ſtoole. Faith commeth by hearing, ſaith Saint Paul (not by ſucceſſion) and hearing commeth (not by Legacy, or inheritance from Biſhop to Biſhop) but by the Word of God. They are not alwayes godly that ſucceed the godly: Manaſſes ſucceeded Ezechias, and Ieroboam ſucceded David. By ſucceſſion, the Turke, this day, poſſeſſeth and holdeth the foure great Patriarchall Sees of the Church, Conſtantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Hieruſalem. Touching ſucceſſion of place, Chriſt ſaith; Deſolation ſhall ſtand in the holy place: And Saint Paul ſaith; Antichriſt ſhall ſit in the place of Chriſt. The ſame place that received the one ſhall receive the other, to wit, the Temple of God; and as Auguſtine and Chryſoſtome ſay, the Church of Chriſt. In the later dayes (ſaith Saint Paul) ſome ſhall depart from the faith: He ſaith not, they ſhall depart from their place: So that there may be a ſucceſſion in place, by Saint Pauls doctrine, and yet no ſucceſſion in Faith; And ſhall wiſe men regard ſuch a ſucceſſion

Acts 20. 29.

Dist. 40. Multi in opere imperfecto, Tom. 34.

Tom. 1.

Con. Africa. Can. 101.

Concil. Carthag. 6. cap 4.

Platina in vita Laur. Valla de donat. Conſtant. Lyra in Mat. 16 Concil. Baſil in Epiſt. Synodali. Æneas Sylvius de geſtis Concil. Baſil. lib. 1.

Petrus Pariſ.

Mat. 24. 2 Thes. 2.

Chryſ in locum Aug. de Antichriſt. Tom. 9.

ceſſion? God forbid. Saint Iohn ſaith, If any man come unto you, and bring not this doctrine, ſalute him not. He ſaith not, unleſſe he keepe his place, ſalute him not, but unleſſe hee keepe this doctrine. It is doctrine then, that ſhall diſcry both the true Church and the falſe; it is doctrine that ſhall diſcover Antichriſt, and let us all marke it: Succeſſion of place will not doe it, as wee plainly ſee. Nicholaus Lyra, for all their keeping of place, ſaid almoſt three hundred years agoe; Ab Eccleſia Romana jamdiu eſt quod receſſit gratia: It is long ſithence the grace of God is departed from the Church of Rome. A filly hold then is it to hold by place, when their owne friends ſay, grace is gone. Irenæus biddeth Biſhops looke that Chariſma veritatis, the undoubted gift of truth, goe with their Epiſcopall Chaires; which hee would never have done, if a bare Chaire would have ſerved any man to make all the world to ſtand in awe of him, and to hang upon his Oracles. No. Nadab and Abihu ſucceeded Aaron rightly, and yet becauſe they offered ſtrange fire, therefore by fire they were deſtroyed from the ſight of the Lord: So ſhall they, ſaith Irenæus, that bring ſtrange doctrine: And let it be noted.

Lyra in 2 Theſ. 2

Irenæus lib 4 c. 4

Theſe are great things againſt ſucceſſion, ſo much ſpoken of by Papiſts: Yet, I pray you, did not the ancient Fathers much ſtand upon it, and often alledge it againſt Hereticks?

It is very true: but no way are the Papiſts helped by thoſe Fathers allegations: And that you may fully and perfectly underſtand it, I will acquaint you with the manner of the Fathers dealing in this matter.

Firſt then, after they by Scriptures had taught, that the Apoſtles doctrine was ſuch as they affirmed, then (and not before, or without this) they would ſhew how that doctrine by a continuall ſucceſſion, in moſt worthy Churches had remained and beene kept. In which ſort to uſe ſucceſſion is very good and profitable; for men are much ſatisfied with the witneſſe of time, concurring with the Scripture, which ever ought to be the ground.

Secondly, as with doctrine they would joyne ſucceſſion, ſo againe with ſucceſſion, whenſoever they ſpeake of it, they would joyne doctrine, and not ſtand upon bare ſucceeding in the place, as now Romiſh Catholikes doe: For full well knew they, that ſuch a ſucceſſion was no argument at all to prove any thing; And if in any place there bee not expreſſe mention of Doctrine, yet by conference of other places in the ſame Father, you ſhall plainly ſee they ſo underſtand it, and meane it.

Thirdly, the Fathers uſed this argument againſt ſome heretikes, that either denyed the Scriptures, or corrupted them, or perſwaded the people, that the Apoſtles ſo taught privately, and in ſome places: or obtruded their owne writings for Canonicall rules of judgement and Faith. And in all theſe caſes what could the Fathers better doe, than flie to the living voyce of the Church, and to ſhew by ſucceſſion from time to time, that there was no ſuch matter ever taught by the Apoſtles, whoſe ſucceſſors theſe heretikes would needs bee. Divers other ſuch caſes I could name unto you.

Sir, I well ſee in all theſe a true and right uſe of ſucceſſion, becauſe doctrine in them all is reſpected, and would our Catholikes prove that, we ſhould ſoone I thinke agree to like of their doings. But I pray you, in theſe diſcourſes of ſucceſſion, doe not the Fathers ſtill name the Church of Rome firſt? This have I heard Papiſts take hold of, and make a great matter of, for the dignity of Rome, and ſo by conſequence Romiſh Decrees at this day.

It is very true that the Fathers uſually ſo doe; but yet the Bels ring for many cauſes beſides wedding, though they cannot ſee it. And in this matter underſtand you the truth, which is this, That the Fathers did not thus rehearſe the Church of Rome, becauſe ſhee then ruled and governed all other Churches in the world, and exerciſed juriſdiction over them, for the fathers knew nothing of this uſurped power that now is, as long ſince hath beene offered them in challenge to ſhew, for ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt; but they did it, becauſe that Church of Rome was then one amongſt all the reſt, moſt knowne, moſt worthy and excellent. VVhy? Both for the excellency and dignity of the City, for the ſeat of the Empire in it, for the preſence of Paul and Peter, ſometimes there, the one proved by Scriptures, to wit, that of Paul, and the other beleeved, though upon no ſure ground and proofe: And laſtly, for the ſingular vertue of the Biſhops then that ruled that ſea; whereof, in a row, (as I remember) thirty, or one and thirty, were conſtant Martyrs, for the Goſpell of Jeſus Chriſt, even this Goſpell now Preached amongſt us, and perſecuted by the Biſhops of Rome that now are, ſo is Rome changed now from Rome that was; and whatſoever was then an occaſion of glory, is now taken away by theſe proud ſucceſſors in place onely, and not in vertue. If then our Catholikes would ſoundly conclude any thing of this reciting of Rome: Firſt, when they talke of ſucceſſion, they muſt prove, that thoſe who ſince the Fathers times have ſucceded in that Sea, hold the ſame Faith, and teach the ſame Doctrine which thoſe godly Biſhops then did; A thing ſo impoſſible to be done, as they dare not once goe about it, but labour to blinde the eyes of ſimple people, with the naked place, never letting them know the change that is now. But quæſivi Romam in Roma, & non inveni Romam: I have ſought Rome (ſaith one) in Rome, and yet I cannot finde Rome. His meaning was, that he looked for old Rome, ſuch as it was when theſe Fathers lived, and gave it this preheminence in their writing, in this Rome that now is; and behold he could not finde it. So farre, farre differeth this Rome now from that then. Yet we muſt be borne downe with a ſucceſſion in this place, without proofe of any like doctrine, vertue and goodneſſe. Wherefore to conclude this matter of ſucceſſion, ſince there was a true Church long before there was or could be any ſucceſſion of Biſhops, and in the Jewiſh Synagogue in the time of Chriſt there was a lawfull ſucceſſion, and yet no true Church; plaine it is, that ſuch a ſucceſſion as the Papiſts ſpeake of, to wit, of perſons and place, can bee no true argument to diſcerne the Church by, which is the point we have ſtood upon.

gave

I pray you, before you goe to the true and right notes indeed of the Church, touch that great error of theirs, that the true Church is ever viſible, and hath an eternall glory in this world: for this (in ſome ſort) they make alſo a marke to know the Church by.

It is true that they hold this dreame, namely, that God not onely hath ever a Church in this world, but that the ſame is alſo outwardly glorious and beautifull. VVe on the other ſide acknowledge the firſt, but conſtantly and boldly deny the latter, ſaying, that this outward ſhew is often taken away, and the Church hid from the eyes of men, conſiſting of few in reſpect of the other multitude: which affirmation of ours, they either malicionſly or ignorantly underſtand and publiſh, as though we ſhould ſay, that ſometime there is no Church in the world; as though there could not be a Church unleſſe it had externall glory and ſhew, that is (as themſelves expound it) unleſſe there were a great viſible number of men and women publikely acknowledged for the Church, amongſt whom is order and government of Prelates and people, and that in one place by a continuall ſucceſſion of Biſhops, even ſo eaſie to bee knowne to bee the Church, as it is eaſie to ſay, and point this to bee England, that France, that Spaine, &c. The groſſeneſſe of which aſſertion, as alſo the undoubted truth of ours, may thus appeare. Firſt, if we conſider the complaint of Elias, who ſaw none left that feared God, none that he could acknowledge for a childe of the Church, when yet God told him hee had in Iſrael 7000. that had not bowed their knee to Baal. Were not theſe hid from the eyes of Elias? were they viſible? had they an outward glory and ſhew? Surely this place will never be avoided by any device, do they what they can, but it will plainly prove what we ſay, and diſprove their error. Secondly, if we marke a multitude of teſtimonies in the new Teſtament; as that of our Saviour Chriſt in Luke, When the Son of man cõmeth, ſhall he find faith in the earth? It ſheweth, that the Church ſhall conſiſt in few, and have ſmall ſhew in this wicked world. Feare not little flocke, many be called, few be choſen. All the world followed the Beaſt, power was given him over every kindred, tongue, and Nation; and he made all, both ſmal and great, rich and poore, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: and that no man might buy and ſell, ſave hee that had the marke of the Beaſt, or the name, or the number of his name. What plaine proofes be theſe of a great Apoſtacie from the faith, and of a little number of faithfull people without port, or ſhew, as our adverſaries would have it? That notable teſtimony againe of the woman forced to flie into the wilderneſſe, and there to remaine for a time to avoid the fury of Antichriſt, doth it not prove that the Church doth ſometimes flie the eyes of men? Surely, it proveth, that we hold a truth in ſo ſaying, and that the contrary aſſertion is both againſt the Scriptures, and the Holy Ghoſt. For how can that Church be ſaid to flie into the wilderneſſe, which ever hath a viſible place, a viſible glory, and a great company in this world? Many like places of Scripture may bee thought of to this end. Thirdly, let the Church in our Saviours time bee thought of and bee marked. VVas it ſo glorious and viſible, ſo apparant and beautifull, as theſe men teach? Stood it not in a few obſcure perſons; as in Ioſeph, Mary, Simeon, and ſuch like? In a few Publicans, and Fiſhermen, no people of note or account with the State? They that had the ſhew, hated and perſecuted Chriſt and his Members, and therefore could not be the Church. And of both parts together the Church could not conſiſt, unleſſe they will ſay that the Church may conſiſt of men that confeſſe a contrary Faith; ſome loving Chriſt, beleeving in him, hearing and receiving his word, &c. Others reviling him, and railing upon him, calling him a Deceiver, a falſe Prophet, a Blaſphemer, and moſt worthy of Death: yea, in the end killing and ſlaying him indeed. The Shepheard was ſmitten, and the ſheepe ſcattered. VVere the Scribes and Phariſes ſcattered? After Chriſt was riſen the ſheepe came together againe; but how fearfully, how ſecretly, for feare of thoſe that had the outward ſhew of the Church, the Scribes, Phariſes, High-Prieſt, and wicked Jewes. Alas, poore glory that was here, and yet true Diſciples, and true beleevers in Jeſus Chriſt. Doe we no wrong therefore to the flock of Chriſt: conclude wee not externall viſible port to be ever in the Church, for feare we condemne the generation of his children, who one day will judge and ſhew us our error to our woe.

Claram ſemper eſſe & glorioſam.

1 King. 19.

Luke 18.8.

Apoc. 13.

Fourthly, we may come to the times next after Chriſt, and there ſee the like againe. In the time of the ten Perſecutions under Dioclefian, Maximian, Valerian, and other cruell and bloody Tyrants, the authors and cauſers of theſe great Maſſacres of true Chriſtians, what was the face of Gods Church then? Had it glory and ſhew in the earth, was it not trampled and trodden upon, defaced and diſgraced, and driven into corners? were not Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons, and and all degrees of Profeſſors ſmitten with the fury of thoſe times, and as much as lay in men, rooted from the earth? No man looked out, but hee was apprehended, and haled to the ſlaughter. Yet God kept a ſeed, but farre, farre from that worldly glory that Papiſts ſpeake of, and were there no other proofe, this example of thoſe times were enough. Then gave the Lord reſt to his poore flocke, aud theſe bloody times ceaſed, (for he knoweth when to ſtrike, and when to ſpare; when to trie, and when to comfort: O bleſſed be he, and all thoſe that truſt in him) but got they then any ſuch glory? No, no. Then caſt the Devill hereſie into the Church in ſuch abundance, that all became darke and obſcure againe. Arius, and his curſed hereſie, how ſpread it over all the world? Ingemuit totus orbis, & ſe Arianum eſſe miratus eſt: The whole world (ſaith Saint Hierome) ſorrowed and wondred that ſhee was become an Arian. The Biſhops themſelves fell from the truth, who ſhould have upheld others, and ſcarce five Catholike Biſhops that withſtood this hereſie, were to be found upon earth. Athanaſius, Hilarius, and a few others, ket the foundation, and were miſerably abuſed and caſt out of their plaees into baniſhment. The true faith (ſaith Saint Hilary) was not then to bee ſought in Cities, in Temples, in Houſes: ſed in carceribus, in montibus, in voraginibus; but in priſon, in Mountaines, in Caves, that is, in holes hid, not ſet upon a hill in worldly ſhew and glory. Amongſt thoſe, ſaith Athanaſius, that haunt the Rocks and Caves, is the little childe ſaved, whom Herod would deſtroy, and who ſo profeſſe the name of Chriſt, they are hid, as in Elias time. Et qui erant firmiores reliquis, illi partim pro fide fortiter exulabant, partim toto orbe latitabant: And they (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) that were ſtronger than the reſt; partly endured baniſhment ſtoutly for the truth, and partly did lie hid in all the world. Yet, the Biſhop of Rome, Liberius, fainted and fell, as Athanaſius witneſſeth. This, this is the glory that the true Church hath in the world, when God thinketh good, and we muſt marke it. To bee hid and beaten into holes and caves, and in mans eyes to be cleane gone out of the world: Although even then, as Saint Auguſtine ſaith; Eccleſia in frumentis Dominicis conſervatur: The poore Church is ſaved in the Lords wheate. Perſecution is ever the companion of the Church; and therefore not glory and outward ſhew. For theſe bee two contraries. You ſhall be hated of all men for my ſake, (ſaith our Saviour) and they ſhall caſt you out of their Synagogues, yea the time ſhall come, that he which killeth you ſhall think he doth God good ſervice. Often, often have they fought againſt me from my youth up, may Iſrael now ſay (that is the Church) but they have not prevailed againſt me. The Plowers plowed upon my backe, and made long furrowes. This is the ſong of the New Church. Surely if multitude and outward ſhew may bee a note of the Church, it is as ſtrong with the Turkes and Sarazens againſt the Papiſts, as with them againſt us. I thanke thee O Father (ſaith our Saviour) that thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes. In few therefore, and poore ones often conſiſteth Gods Church, and not in glorious gliſtering Prelates of this world. Even according to the Prophets ſaying; I will leave in the middeſt of thee an humble and poore people, and they ſhall truſt in the Name of the Lord. Marke I pray you, an humble and poore people, not a glorious and ſhining companie. Why is the Church compared to a treaſure hid in the field, but becauſe it is alſo hidden from the eyes of the world, and often inviſible, onely appearing to ſuch as God giveth eyes unto to ſee it. Why is it made an article of our beliefe, to believe the Church: that is, that God ever hath a Church here on earth, if it bee as viſible and plaine as the Kingdome of England, France, and others be? Faith (ſaith the Apoſtle) is of thoſe things which are not ſeene, nor ſubject to the ſenſe. Which though properly it be undeſtood of the whole Church, Univerſall, Militant, and Triumphant, yet it is alſo true of particulars.

Euſeb. l. 8.

Hillarius contra Auxentium circa finem.

Athanaſ orat. 1. contr. Arianos & in Epiſt. ad ſolitariam vitam agentes.

Aug. Epiſt. 48.

Epiſt. 48.

Luke 21.17. Iohn 16. Pſal. 129.

Mat. 11.25.

Soph. 3.12.

Finally, if the reverend teſtimony of antiquity may carry any ſway in our mindes, this matter is clearly adjudged with us againſt our adverſaries. Saint Auguſtine compareth the Church to the Sunne, Moone, and Starres, becauſe as theſe are ſometimes clouded over, and hid, ſo is the Church. Yea, in expreſſe termes he ſaith; Impiis perſecutoribus ſævientibus Eccleſia non apparet: Sometime by the rage of cruell and wicked perſecutors the Church is not ſeene. Vbi nunc tandem illi ſunt qui paupertatem nobis objiciunt opeſq; ſuas inſolenter jactant, qui Eccleſiam multitudine definiunt, gregemq; exiguum aſpernantur? Where are they (ſaith Nazianzene) which caſt in our teeth our poverty, proudly boaſting of their riches, who define the Church by multitude, and deſpiſe a little flocke? Chryſoſtome in a number of places ſaith onely, onely by the Scriptures can the Church be knowne, which hee never would have ſaid, if ever with eye it might have beene ſeene. Wherefore ſtand we comfortable in this Doctrine, that the Lord hath his Church, though not ever viſible, and pray we for the peace and proſperity yet of it, as may ſtand with his bleſſed will and pleaſure.

Epiſt. 80.

Nazianz. in Serm. de ſe, &c. contra Arianos.

Surely theſe grounds are plain if the Lord in judgment cloſe not our eyes, and I reſt ſatisfied with them. Now praying you, if you pleaſe, to lay downe your true Notes, which we ſtand upon.

Theſe Notes are the true preaching of the Word, and the due adminiſtration of the Sacraments, as by many plaine proofes may appeare. And firſt concerning the VVord, the Apoſtle ſaith of the Epheſians, that they are Citizens with the Saints, and of the houſhold of God, and as a note therof addeth, built upon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, Ieſus Chriſt himſelf being ing the chiefe corner ſtone, &c. underſtanding by the Prophets and Apoſtles the doctrine of them.

Epheſ. 2.20.

In the ſecond of the Acts it is ſpecified againe, that they continued in the Apoſtles doctrine, &c. A marke to know the Church by. The place is notable, and mentioneth other notes alſo if you looke upon it. Moſes to the Iſraelites ſaith thus; Keepe and performe all the Commandements of the Lord, for this ſhall be your wiſedome, &c. before the eyes of all men, that is a certaine proofe and teſtimony that you are the Church and children of God. The Pſalme ſaith, The Lord hath ſhewed his word to Iacob, and his ſtatutes to Iſrael. He hath not done ſo to any Nation, neither have they knowledge of his lawes. What is this, but where the word is, there is Gods flocke, and where it is not, there is no flocke of his. For what the Lord peculiarly giveth to his Church, living and abiding here amongſt prophane Nations, that is a badge and marke of the Church, but the word of God, the law of God, the doctrine of God is ſuch, as this Text affirmeth, granted to Iſrael, denied to other nations. Therefore it is a true note of the Church of God. Where propheſie faileth, the people periſh, ſaith Salomon: and therefore the word preached is a token of the Church. For by periſhing he meaneth, not that they die and are taken out of this world, or their earthly ſociety overthrowne, for all this may be without preaching, but they periſh from being a Church, and the people of God, if the word faile and be taken from them. The parable of the Sower ſheweth that there is the field of God, where the ſeed is ſowne. Where two or three are gathered together in my Name (ſaith our Saviour Chriſt) there am I in the middeſt of them. That is, whereſoever the name of Chriſt is called upon, and the doctrine of Chriſt ruleth, there is Chriſt, there is the Church. They have Moſes and the Prophets, let them heare them. Therefore to have the word and to heare it, is the way to eſcape hell, and conſequently a true note of the Church of God. My ſheepe heare my voice, &. And he that is of God heareth Gods word, as likewiſe hee that heareth not is not of God. A number other like places there be, all proving and ſhewing what a ſure marke to know the Church by the word of God is.

Pſal.147.19,20.

Prov.29.18.

Matt.13.

Matt.18.

Luke 16.

Iohn 10.

Secondly, for the Sacraments we ſee what in Geneſis the Lord ſaith, when hee inſtituted Circumciſion: and in Exodus when hee ordained the Paſcall lambe. Theſe two Sacraments made a difference betwixt that people and all others, inſomuch, that they called them uncircumciſed, that is, people not belonging to the Covenant of God, nor knowne to bee the Church and children of God. For then theſe were Sacraments and markes of Gods people, as now our Baptiſme and the Lords Supper bee, thoſe being abrogated, and theſe appointed and commanded of God in their place. Reade the 1 Cor. 1.13. 1 Cor. 11.20,23. the laſt of Matthew, where Chriſt joyneth both word and Sacraments, ſaying, Goe teach and Baptize. If it were needfull to adde to this the Teſtimonies of the Fathers, I might eaſily doe it and bee long in them. But let one or two ſuffice. What a notable ſaying was that of Epiphanius in his time? Montanus invenitur diſcors à Scripturis, ſi itaque diſcors eſt, alienus eſt à ſancto Catholica Eccleſia. Montanus the Heretike is found diſagreeing from the Scriptures. If therefore diſagreeing from them, then a ſtranger from the holy Catholike Church. Making as you plainly ſee the Scriptures to bee the badge of the true Church.

Gen.17.10,11. Exod.12.

1 Cor.1.13. 1 Cor. 11.20, 23. Matt 28.

*Hæreſ.*48.

Chryſoſtom ſaith: Nunc nullo modo cognoſcitur volentibus cognoſcere qua ſit vera Eccleſia Chriſti, niſi tantummodo per Scripturas: By no meanes at this time can they that are deſirous to know which is the Catholike Church know it, but onely by the Scriptures. Many ſuch ſpeeches more hath he alſo which I omit: Ireneus ſaith; Quod præconiaverunt, poſtea per voluntatem Domini ſcriptis tradiderunt columna & fundamentum fidei futurum: That which they preached, they after by the will and commandement of God wrote, that it might bee the piller and foundation of our Faith. Now what is a piller and a foundation, but a marke of the Church? For that which the Church ſtayeth upon, and which holdeth up the Church that it may continue, ſtand, and be ſure, that is a true marke and note. Tertullian againe moſt notably: Aliæ Eccleſiæ quæ non ſunt ab Apoſtolis inſtitutæ, tamen ſi in eadem fide conſpirent, non minus Apoſtolicæ diſputantur propter conſanguinitatem Doctrinæ. Other Churches that were not inſtituted by Apoſtles, yet if they agree in the ſame faith are as well reckoned Apoſtolicall, for the conſanguinity of Doctrine. It is then doctrine, true doctrine, and Apoſtolicall doctrine that maketh a Church, and a Church as truely and rightly to bee called Apoſtolicall, as if it had firſt beene founded by one of the Apoſtles themſelves. Ibi eſt Eccleſia Dei, ubi Deus apparet, & loquitur cum ſervis ſuis: There, there (ſaith Saint Ambroſe) is the Church of God, where God appeareth and ſpeaketh with his ſervants; to wit, by his word. Wherefore I will end with that ſpeech of Albertus, which I pray you marke, Eccleſiam radicatam eſſe in Sacramentis, & doctrina Prophetarum: The Church is rooted in the Sacraments and doctrine of the Prophets. This may ſuffice for our part, truth being ſtrong, and needing little falſe worke, or much to bee ſaid for the upholding of it.

*Chryſoſt. in Mat. hom.*44. in opere imperfecto. *Aug de unit. Eccleſ. cap.*16. Ego ipſam Eccleſiam requiro ubi ſit: tu ergo nos doce Auguſtine ubi ſit, reſp. Quæ audiendo verba Chriſti & faciendo ædificat ſuper petram. *Hierom. Eccleſia non in parietibus, ſed in dogmatum veritate conſiſtit. in Pſal.*133.

Is not Diſcipline alſo required in the Church?

It is required as you may ſee by the place in Matthew; If thy brother offend, &c. Alſo by the Excommunication of the inceſtuous Corinthian. But if the Governours bee negligent in this behalfe, wee may not deny the Church for that defect, as long as theſe other Notes be there. No, if even in the Word and adminiſtration of the Sacraments ſome fault creep in, yet as long as the foundation is held, the Church ceaſeth not even for that. Reade the 1 Cor. 3.12 and ſee the firſt: Reade the 1 Cor. 11.21. and ſee the ſecond: Yet Corinth is not denyed the name of the Church by the Apoſtle. Let us rather know, that we are bound to joyne our ſelves to this Church, whereſoever it is with theſe badges, and profeſſe our ſelves zealous and quiet members of it, *Hebr.*10.25. 1 *Cor.*11.20. *Pſal.*42.

Matt.18. 1 Cor.5.

What further will you adde touching this matter of the Church?

I neede to goe no further, but leave you by all theſe things to gather your ſelfe how farre that Idolatrous Church of Rome is from being the true Catholike Church, yet to the end it might be more plaine: I pray you a little conſider how that glorious Prelate that is taken for the head of that Church, and from whoſe will no Romiſh Catholike may ſwarve, agreeth either with the manners, or with the Doctrine of that bleſſed Apoſtle Saint Peter, whom he will ſeeme to follow, as heire to all that was in him. And firſt for manners.

It appeareth by the Story of holy Writ, that Peter was a faithfull Apoſtle, and Miniſter of the Word; the Pope is no Miniſter, but Maſter and Lord of our faith, if wee will beleeve him. Peter was rightly and duely called to his office; The Pope by bribery, factions, fraud, violence, treaſons, and all wicked practices, yea even by expreſſe capitulating with the devill ſometimes attaineth to that Sea. Proofs are many and well knowne to all that reade and know Stories,

Mat 8. 1 Cor.9. Peter was a married man, as appeareth by the Text of Chriſts healing his wives mother. The Pope abhorreth to be tyed, but wickedly liveth in luſt unlawfull, and hath beene wounded in the very act by her husband whom he abuſed. Yea, the ſinne of that ſide, in his behalfe, that is well knowne, paſſeth modeſty to be expreſſed, and more, and more ſhall the day of the Lord reveale in the ſight of men and Angels, when he ſhall come to lay open what was done in darkneſſe, that it may be judged. Peter ſuffered himſelfe to be rebuked both of his Maſter Chriſt, Mat.16. Gal. 2. Act.11: and his fellow Apoſtle Saint Paul, yea of more vulgar perſons that thought he offended in going to Cornelius.

But O what a matter were it to ſay the Pope might bee rebuked of any, when ſo vehemently we are taught by his Doctors, that if hee ſhould apparently draw many thouſands to hell, yet none may be ſo bold as to ſay, Sir, why doe you ſo? Peter was ſo farre from lifting himſelfe up above others, that together with them he was content to be ſent to the Samaritans. But by the whole Church, may not the Pope bee ſent upon buſineſſe: that were a diſparagement indeed not to bee ſuffered. Cornelius ſent for Peter and he came, but will the Pope come being ſent for, or ſit and cauſe the higheſt powers come to him? Peter moſt humbly calleth himſelfe a fellow Elder, but the Pope will be called head of all: Lord of Lords, and King of Kings, ill agreeing with this, ſervant of the ſervants of God. Peter when Cornelius fell downe before him, earneſtly forbade him, ſaying: Ariſe, for I alſo am a man. This ſucceſſor of Peter ſuffereth all the world to fall downe unto him, and to kiſſe his feet, treadeth upon the Lords annointed Vice-gerents here on earth, and thinketh all due, and more too. Peter in his owne perſon preached the Goſpell, Baptized, and adminiſtred the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, yea any part and office of the Miniſtery he deſpiſed not. His ſucceſſor neither preacheth, baptizeth, nor any thing, but ſometimes ſaith Maſſe, to the end he may crucifie Jeſus Chriſt againe.

Epiſcopus Epiſcoporum, Ordinarius ordinariorum, cauſa cauſarum.

Peter exhorteth all Chriſtians to be at peace and unity, hee himſelfe being moſt peaceable through his whole life. The Pope hath beene, and is a very firebrand in all Chriſtendome, ſetting Princes and Kingdomes and variance one againſt another, abſolving their ſubjects from their due obedience, and mingling heaven and earth together, to the end that by diſcord hee might grow, finding it profitable to fiſh in troubled waters. Peter was poore, and ſaid, Silver and gold have I none. But this pretended ſucceſſor batheth himſelfe in the treaſures of all kingdomes, which by ſubtile practices he draweth unto him. Peter exhorteth Miniſters to care for their flocke, not for filthy lucre, but of a willing minde. This Succeſſor ſelleth for lucre heaven and earth, and Chriſt and all his merits, yea all the gifts of God are matters of money to him, though Peter ſaid to Simon Magus, thy money periſh with thee, becauſe thou haſt thought the gift of God was but a mony matter. How truly propheſied he of ſuch a crue, when he ſaid, through covetouſneſſe ſhall they by fained words make merchandiſe of you, &c. Finally, Peter payed tribute both for Chriſt and himſelfe, but this order little pleaſeth his Succeſſor, who ſeeketh tribute of all the earth, but payeth none. Is not this now a good agreement? O how can that be the Church of Chriſt that hath a head thus differing from the holy Apoſtle, whom ſo vainly he perſwadeth men he doth ſucceed?

Auro cœlum pandit. Auro Chryſtum vendit. Vendit Roma Deum, vendit ſacra, vendit honores.

2 Pet.2.3.

There is haply ſome better agreement betwixt them in doctrine.

No ſure, and that you will ſay when you looke into it, as light and darkneſſe, truth and error, ſo agreeth the doctrine of theſe two; the one a faithfull Paſtor, the other a ravening wolfe. Peter teacheth us, the words of the Prophets to be a moſt ſure ground. The Pope and his Church, that it is a leaden rule that may be bowed & turned every way. Peter compares the Scripture to a light,

2 Pet.1.19. 2 Pet.1. therein therein giving teſtimony to the plainneſſe, and perſpicuity of the word. The Pope ſaith it is darke, obſcure, and hard to bee underſtood. Peter admoniſheth that if any man ſpeake in the Church, hee ſpeake as the words of God. The Pope ſetteth in the place of the word of God his Decrees and Canons, his falſe and erronious doctrines, his ſuperſtitious precepts, and conſtitutions, as far from the word of God differing, as he himſelfe is from a holy Paſtor and faithfull Miniſter of the word. Peter calleth the word, not a mortall ſeed, but an immortall. The Pope and his Church call it, a dumbe and dead letter, with many ſuch blaſphemies. Peter inſtructeth all Chriſtians to ſanctifie the Lord God in their hearts, and to bee ready alwayes to give an anſwer to every man that asketh them a reaſon of the hope that is in them with meekneſſe and reverence. The Pope and his Doctors teach the people, it is all-ſufficient if they ſimply obey and aske no queſtions more than the horſe doth of his Maſter why hee turneth his head this way and that, if they beleeve as the Colliar did, that is, as the Church of Rome; and how beleeveth the Church of Rome? even as the Colliar. This is Divinity enough for Popiſh Catholikes. Peter telleth all good children, that they doe well in taking heed to the word of the Prophets, as to a moſt ſure word, and as a light that ſhineth in a dark place, untill the day dawne, and the day ſtarre ariſe in their hearts. The Pope flatly forbiddeth theſe Scriptures to the people, and will not have them read, nor taken heed to, but keepeth them by all meanes from them, and burneth them as heretikes that meddle with them. Peter biddeth us perfectly truſt on that grace that is brought unto us in the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, and make our calling and election ſure, &c. The Pope condemneth ſuch aſſurance of faith for preſumption and pride, and teacheth us that we ever ought to doubt, and he that will be of another minde, that popiſh Councell of Trent layeth upon him their great Curſe. Peter telleth us, We are not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, but with the precious blood of Chriſt as of a Lambe undefiled, and without ſpot. Neither is there ſalvation in any other, for among them there is given no other name under heaven whereby we muſt bee ſaved. To him give all the Prophets witneſſe, That through his Name all that beleeve in him ſhall receive remiſſion of ſinnes. The Pope overthroweth all this doctrine of S. Peter; and teacheth us a number of other wayes to attaine remiſſion of ſinnes by, beſide Chriſt; as by his Maſſes, Faſtings, Almes-deeds, wilfull poverty, ſingle life, Pilgrimages to Churches, Saints, Tombes, Reliques, and ſuch like devices of men, for filthy lucre and gaine, which by theſe waies in a mighty meaſure grew to Rome and Romiſh Idolaters. In a word, for gold and ſilver we may have what we liſt, and doe what wee liſt; a Pardon ſerving both for what is paſt, and to authorize us for what is not done, which Pardon ſhall be larger and narrower as my purſe openeth. O the filthy Pardons that I could here mention, having them in my cuſtody to ſhew, if need were! Peter by a viſion from heaven is taught, That he ſhould call no meat uncleane which God had made cleane. The Pope by his Lawes and Canons, maketh meats ſanctified to our uſe ſo uncleane at ſome times, that he which taſteth of them then, is in danger both of a Fagot here in this world, and of Purgatory fire in the next.

1 Pet.4.11.

1 Pet.1.23.

1 Pet.3.15.

Act.10.15.

Finaliy, S. Peter, being the Lords choſen Apoſtle and faithfull Servant, commandeth to honor the King, denouncing the judgements of God to them that deſpiſe authority: but O the indignities that are done to theſe higher Powers by that proud Prelate. They are brought to hold his ſtirrop, to kiſſe his feet, and to wait bare footed and bare legged at his gate in extreme weather, till it pleaſe him to be reconciled with them. Much farther might I go in this matter, but I think I weary you, and ſure my ſelfe am moſt weary to think of theſe groſſe hypocriſies in this ſinfull man, which yet many poore deceived ſoules will not ſee.

2 Pet.2.

Wherefore let thus much ſuffice to ſhew both in life and doctrine how wicked hee is, and agreeing with him, whoſe ſucceſſor hee maketh himſelfe, even as harpe, and harrow. Can that Church then, I ſay againe, that hath ſuch a Head bee the Church of God, for which wee ought (as ſome doe) offend againſt the holy government wee live under, and caſt away from us our due obedience, both to the Supreme Magiſtrate and our Countries juſt loves? No, no, we are deceived, and we are abuſed, God in mercy give eyes to ſee it.

Amen I beſeech him: And now if you pleaſe, adde one word of that which followeth in this Article; The Communion of Saints.

They are fitly added to ſhew thus much, that although the Church bee Catholike, that is, in all Countries, places, times, and ages, as God pleaſeth, and the members thereof in that ſort, diſperſed and ſeparate farre aſunder, yet is there a double Communion amongſt them: for as all the members of the body communicate with the Head, and one with another, ſo doth the members of the Church. They have a Communion with Chriſt their Head, and one with another alſo, though farre aſunder. Of the firſt ſpake thoſe words; I am the Vine, and you are the branches, hee that abideth in me, and I in him, the ſame bringeth forth much fruit, for without me can you do nothing. Thoſe againe, God is faithfull, by whom ye are called unto the fellowſhip or Communion of his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Ioнh 15.5.

1 Cor.1.9.

And in Iohn, That you may have a Communion with us, and that our Communion may bee with the Father, and with his Sonne Jeſus Chriſt. The ſeale of this Communion is the holy

1 Iohn 1.3.

By uſe, not by property. 1 Cor.12.12. Rom. 12.4,&c. 2 Cor.9.7. Acts 4.32. Acts 5.4.

Sacrament, which therefore the Apoſtle calleth, The Communion of the blood of Chriſt, &c. Of the ſecond, that of Iohn you ſee ſpeaketh; namely, of our communion amongſt our ſelves.

This is performed when every man cheerefully and carefully uſeth all graces and gifts beſtowed upon him to the publike good of the whole, as any way he can. Of which many places of Scripture ſpeake, which I leave to your owne view; who ſo doth not thus, ſinneth againſt this Article, and this holy Communion of Saints. This may ſuffice of the whole Article.

THE TENTH ARTICLE.

Now followeth in order the tenth Article, which is:

I beleeve the forgivenſſe of ſinnes.

AND it is a good order, that after the Article of the Church ſhould immediatly follow the priviledges, or mercies, wherewith the Lord adorneth his Church: the firſt whereof is remiſſion of ſinnes: a matter ſo touched by me in that Petition of the Lords Prayer, as thither I may referre you for this point, and ſpare my labour: yet for orders ſake briefly, you may in this Article conſider who forgiveth ſinne, for whom, what ſinnes, how, and to what end:

I will aske theſe things then in order, and ſo your expoſition ſhall bee more plaine. And firſt, who forgiveth ſinne?

Eſay 43.25. Ier.31.34. Pſal.51. We ſinne onely againſt God, becauſe his Commandement forbidding it, maketh it ſinne: otherwiſe to man it were but an iniury.

Wee affirme and hold that onely God, and none but God that forgiveth ſinne, which wee truely learne out of the holy Scriptures. It is I, it is I, ſaith the Lord, that put away thine iniquities for mine owne ſake, and will not remember thy ſinnes: Which words are repeated by the Prophet Ieremy and others often. The Prophet David acknowledged this in his 51. Pſalme, when ſo vehemently hee beggeth mercy and forgiveneſſe at Gods hands onely, and rendred this reaſon of his ſo doing, Quia tibi ſoli peccavi: becauſe onely againſt thee have I ſinned, and done this evill in thy ſight. The Phariſees not knowing that Chriſt was God, tell him hee offendeth, when hee ſaid; Sonne be of good comfort, thy ſinnes are forgiven thee. For who, ſay they, can forgive ſinnes but onely God, which ſaying Chriſt doth not deny: grievouſly therefore doe they offend, that aſcribe this power unto creatures.

Matt.9.2,3. In the Lords Prayer we are taught to ſay to God onely, remitte nobis, &c.

What ſay you then to thoſe words of authority given to the Miniſters of Gods word; Whoſe ſins yee remit, they are remitted? &c. Alſo to the words following in the Lords Prayer; As we forgive them that treſpaſſe againſt us. Is not here power given to men to forgive ſinnes?

So the Miniſters have committed unto them, Miniſterium reconciliationis, not reconciliationem ipſam, for that is the fruit of his paſſion.

The words you ſpeake of are thus to be underſtood: Whoſe ſinnes ye remit, that is, whoſe ſins yee pronounce to bee remitted of God according to his word and promiſe. For this onely is the Miniſters authority to a true penitent ſinner wounded inwardly, and afflicted with griefe that he hath tranſgreſſed, to pronounce his comfort, the ſweet promiſes of God made to ſuch repentance, and to aſſure him in the name of the Lord, that according to the ſame his ſinne is forgiven: which comfort ſo given to the poore ſoule, the Lord ratifieth with his promiſe, Whoſe ſinnes yee remit they are remitted; but of this more when wee come to the power of the bodies. And for the words in the Lords Prayer; the meaning is not, that wee forgive to our brethren their ſinnes, as they bee ſinnes, and as God forgiveth us, but wee forgive them as treſpaſſes, that is, loſſes, hurts, and damages: even ſo truely and unfainedly, ſo fully and willingly, as wee would have the Lord to forgive us our offences againſt him, which are ſinnes indeed, in regard of his Commandements to the contrary.

For whom doth God forgive ſinnes?

1 Iohn 2.12. 1 Iohn 17. 1 Iohn 2.1. 1 Cor.1.

Onely for his deare Sonnes ſake, our bleſſed Lord and Saviour, ſo ſaith the Scripture: Little children I write unto you, becauſe your ſins are forgiven you for his names ſake: His blood cleanſeth us from all ſin. He is the propitiation for our ſinnes. He is made of God wiſedome, and righteouſneſſe, and ſanctification, and redemption unto us; that according as it is written. Hee that rejoyceth may rejoice in the Lord: with a number ſuch places. Moſt wickedly therefore doe they that to this onely accepted Advocate with God his Father, joine others, as the Papiſts doe, attributing to Saints and creatures, and to their owne deviſed workes, what onely for his ſake is to be obtained, and in him and for him onely ſhould be ſought and begged. For hee onely is the ſeed of the woman that brake the Serpents head. He onely is the ſeed of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, in whom all the Nations of the earth are bleſſed. He onely was wounded for our tranſgreſſions, and broken for our iniquities: He onely hath trod the Wine-preſſe, and of all the people there was none with him. Away therefore with thoſe verſes of popiſh Religion.

Gen.3.15. Gen.18.18. Eſay 53.5. Eſay 63.3.

Con-

Confiteor, tundo, Conſpergor, conteror, oro,
Signor, Edo, Dono, per hæc venalia pono.

That is to ſay in Engliſh:

I am confeſt unto the Priſt,
I knocke my heart and breaſt with fiſt:
With holy-water I am beſprent,
And with contrition all yrent.
I pray to God and heavenly hoſt,
I croſſe my forehead at every poſt;
I eate my Saviour in the bread,
I deale my dole when I am dead:
And doing ſo, I know I may.
Challenge my pardon at the judgement day.

No man commeth to the Father but by me. And whatſoever you aske the Father in my Name, that will he give you, ſaith our Saviour to us: other promiſes by theſe Popiſh meanes we have none. 1 Iohn 1.7.

What ſinnes doth God forgive?

All, even all, and marke it with comfort; ſo ſaith the Word. The blood of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth us from all ſinne. And againe, If wee acknowledge our ſinnes, hee is faithfull and juſt to forgive us our ſinnes, and to cleanſe us from all unrighteouſneſſe. Actuall therefore and Originall, and all, the Lord forgiveth to a true penitent ſoule. Therefore wicked is that popiſh Doctrine, that Originall ſinne is forgiven by Baptiſme; and for all actuall offences committed after Baptiſme, partly by Chriſts blood, and partly by our owne ſatisfaction, wee attaine and get the pardon of them. For the Lord forgiving all, all, as you heare in his Sonne, and for his Sonne, what remaineth to bee purged away by our miſerable and ſinfull ſatisfactions? See it, ſee it, and abhorre it zealouſly thus to rob God of his honour.

How doth God forgive ſinnes?

Even perfectly and fully, both Pœnam & culpam, both the fault and the puniſhment; as I have largely proved elſe where, confuting that Popiſh doctrine to the contrary. Men forgive faults by halfes, and quickly fall out againe, where they ſay, they have forgiven, but God doth not ſo. Miſerable man ſaith; I will forgive, but I will not forget. God doth not ſo, but both forgetteth and forgiveth to our endleſſe comfort; For I have put away thy tranſgreſſions (ſaith the Lord) like a cloud, and thy ſinnes like a miſt: The Sunne utterly diſperſeth clouds and miſts, and ſo doth God forgive. Hezekias ſaid, God caſt them behind his backe, that is, quite forgot them. And Micheas ſaith, God throweth the ſinnes of his people into the bottome of the Sea, noting a full remiſſion of them, with many ſuch teſtimonies. Yea, ſo hee forgiveth, as the forgiven creature ſhall never come into judgement; and that is fully, I know you will confeſſe, otherwiſe we muſt needs come into judgement. Eſay 44.22. Eſay 38.17. Mich.7.19. Rom.8.33,34.

To whom doth God grant this mercy?

To all the company of his Elect, and to them onely, ſo ſaith the Scripture; the people that dwell therein, that is, in the Church; and ſo conſequently are his ſheep, and of his fold, they, they ſhall have their ſinnes forgiven. They ſhall bee called, The holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, &c. Therefore this mercy is a peculiar prerogative of the Church, and not common to all, as ſome have dreamed, inferring upon it the ſalvation of all, &c. Eſay 33.24. Eſay 62.12.

What further uſe will you make of this Article?

A comfort of comforts it is, that that which I would give tenne thouſand worlds for, is ſo aſſured unto me, that it is made an Article of Faith. Such a mercy is the forgiveneſſe of ſinnes; as that David caſting aſide all worldly matters whatſoever, crieth out in this ſort; Bleſſed, bleſſed is the man to whom the Lord imputeth not his ſinnes: for what will the whole world profit a man, if he loſe his owne ſoule? Sinne is the deſtruction both of body and ſoule; and therefore ſee what the mercy of remiſſion of ſinne is. Pſal.32.

Againe, many are the woes and griefes which in this life we are ſubject unto, and ſuch, many of them, as wee would rather make choice of death, than long to endure the ſmart of them: But I will ſpeake it boldly, and moſt truly, if all the woes that man can endure were laid upon one, they all worke not ſo fearefully upon him, as a ſmall taſte of Gods wrath, due to ſinne, without hope of mercy doth: for this ſhaketh and ſhivereth, renteth and teareth above the ability of any tongue to expreſſe, Were it the tongue of an Angel. Deſpaire? O hell! O fire! O fury! What may wee reade, what have ſome ſeene with their eyes of this agony? Now ſee the comfort of the Article.

I beleeve the forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, that is, even of my ſinnes, my ſinnes, my ſinnes, muſt every man ſay. For to beleeve other mens to bee pardoned, and not mine, is, not to beleeve the the Article. And how would God have me to beleeve this comfort? O marke! Surely even as I beleeve there is a God, That Jeſus Chriſt is his Sonne, was conceived by the holy Ghoſt, borne of the Virgin Mary, ſuffered uuder Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, buried, &c. Even as I beleeve any Article, which I thinke moſt horrible to doubt of: ſo, ſo certainly and aſſuredly, firmly and faithfully, conſtantly and comfortably, would the Lord have me beleeve the remiſſion of my ſins upon my true and hearty repentance: otherwiſe never had he ſuffered his Church, to make it, and keepe it to this day an Article of Faith. Doubt of this therefore, and doubt of all the reſt, and ſo bee no man but a monſter. There is no God, no Church, no Reſurrection, no Life eternall, if there be no pardon of ſinne to a mourning ſoule, that groneth for griefe, to think of ſinne committed to ſo good a Father, ſo ſweet a God, ſo gracious a Creator. And if I beleeve theſe Articles, and bluſh to thinke of any true charge to the contrary, thinke O my ſoule thou heareſt thy God ſpeake: ſo, ſo ſure is the remiſſion of thy ſinne, and ſo to bee beleeved of thee, if thou wilt not be unthankfull for my mercy, that to this end have made it an Article of Faith, as well as the reſt. O Lord, O Lord I beleeve, but for Jeſus ſake helpe my weakneſſe and unbeleefe. Amen, Amen. But remember I ſay, to a penitent ſinner this comfort is preached, not to any proud and preſumptuous offenders. To a penitent ſinner that humbleth himſelfe by confeſſion, and by crying continually for mercy, mercy. To a penitent ſinner that laboureth to cut off ſinne, and never to doe ſo againe for who would pity a man that having taſted of a bitter diſeaſe by miſ-diet, and recovered of it, by and by will careleſly or preſumptuouſly fall to his courſe of ſurfetting againe, unmindfull of his former ſmart. Therefore ſee the way wee muſt walke in, as well as the comfort wee wiſh for, and uſe the one to obtaine the other. Not elſe, not elſe, aſſure our ſelves, for God is juſt as well as mercifull. He giveth not grace to ſnorting, ſleeping worldlings, that thinke of nothing but earth and earthly pleaſures: But to him will I looke, ſaith the Lord, even to him that is poore, and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my words. For the ſacrifice of God, ſaith the Pſalme, is a troubled ſpirit, and a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou ſhalt never deſpiſe.

In infirmity without perfection, yet in ſincerity without diſſimulation. Venus face had a Mole, & the beſt affection hath infection.
Eſay 66.2.
Pſal. 51.

Saint Auguſtine parteth all the people of the World into two companies; the Synagogue of Satan, and the Church of God, into Babylon and Ieruſalem, into the ſonnes of the Earth, and the Citizens of Heaven. Wee cannot bee in both companies; wee cannot follow our luſts with the one, and enjoy remiſſion of ſinnes with the other. Many earthly Cities have Cuſtomes and Lawes differing, yet not ſo differing, but one may enjoy freedome in two of them: but heaven and earth have ſuch unreconciliable variance, as no peace can bee compounded betweene them: but hee that is free in the one, muſt needs be diſfranchiſed in the other; hee that is friend to the one, muſt needs be foe to the other; he that hath given his faith to the one, muſt ſweare againſt the other. It is as poſſible for light to agree with darkeneſſe, for life to be friends with death, for the Arke of God and the Idoll Dagon to lodge quietly in one place, as for a man to ſerve God and Mammon, to bee true to the Lord and to the world, to bee free denizon beneath and above, to have an earthly converſation in the pleaſures of ſinne, without ſorrow and amendment; and to enjoy the priviledge of a child of God, mentioned here in this Article, the pardon and forgiveneſſe of his ſinnes. Wee muſt bee in the world, but not of the world, uſing the world as though we uſed it not, eſteeming of our houſes as of Innes to reſt in, not Tabernacles for ever to dwell in; taking the commodities of this earth but as ſtaves in our hands, which wee will ſet downe at the laſt ſtep of our journey; or as Oares to row with, which we will leave willingly, and lay aſide when wee come to the haven where we muſt land. Wee muſt pray continually to have our underſtanding lightned with Gods truth, our affections ſtrengthened by his will, and our actions reformed by his Word; wee may not look back with delight to our old ſinnes, as Lots wife did to Sodom, nor returne in our hearts to Egypt againe, as the murmuring Iſraelites did, neither wiſh to tarry on this ſide Jordan without the land of Promiſe, as thoſe two Tribes and a halfe did: but as Daniel opened his windowes towards Jeruſalem, ſo caſt we our eyes to heaven ever, & ſo live, As when we are looſed we may be with Chriſt. As the Eagle caſteth her bill and reneweth her youth; and as the Snake ſtrippeth her skinne and becommeth ſmooth: ſo muſt wee leave the rotten rags of Adams corruption, and put on the innocency of Chriſt, which is the wedding garment, wherewith whoſoever is not cloathed, wee know the diſgrace and puniſhment that will light upon him. Saint Auguſtine hath a ſaying worthy noting; Duas Civitates duo faciunt amores, Hieruſalem facit amor Dei; Babyloniam amor ſeculi: Interroget ergo ſe quiſquis quid amet, & inveniet unde ſit Ciuis: Two loves make two Cities; the love of God maketh Jeruſalem; the love of the world Babylon. Let every man deale truly with his owne heart, and ſee of what City hee is a Citizen. It is a good ſaying againe of Saint Chryſoſtome, Nos ſumus in mundo, ut puellus in utero: We are in this world as the childe is in the wombe. The neerer the birth, the quicker and ſtronger is the childe, the neerer our death, the better Chriſtians ſhould wee bee all of us. The love of God and godlineſſe will make us bleſſed: the love of this tranſitory world will deceive us. Wee ſee the Spider of a dry ſlime that commeth of his body, laying his webs in every place with great diligence, and preſently preſently commeth a puffe of wind or a bruſh, and ſweepeth both him and his labours away: ſo ſhall it be with theſe lovers and labourers for the world. If this web ſtand and be not ſwept away, what catcheth he but a flye? So thinke of it that you may be moved with it. I need not to apply it further. The blinde Mole in like ſort is making his heaps, and ſuddenly the pike ſtriketh him through. In the Revelation, the word of God is likened, To the ſound of many waters, to the Thunder, and to harping with Harps, All theſe in regard of ſeverall effects in mens hearts. To carnall men it is an idle ſound; as if Neptune were moving the Sea: to others it is terrible and fearefull, as if Iupiter threw his thunder-bolt amongſt them; theſe be wounded, but want the medicine: but to the Elect it is ſweet muſicke, as if Apollo played upon his Harp. Now let every one make choyce of his company, and ſit downe with his fellowes. Surely, a change you ſee by this muſt be in his, if we ever will be able to beleeve this article. And with S. Auguſtine I end: Anima debet prius reſurgere per gratiam, quam Corpus reſurgat ad gloriam: The ſoule muſt riſe againe in newneſs of life by grace, before the body ſhall riſe to glory. Of which Reſurrection of the bodie, the next Article ſpeaketh, Chap. 14.

THE ELEVENTH ARTICLE.

And if you pleaſe now to that Article, for it followeth in order.

I beleeve the Reſurrection of the body.

THe meaning of which words is; I beeleve that not onely my ſoule after it is departed out of my body, ſhall immediately bee taken up to Chriſt her head, but that this fleſh alſo rayſed up by the power of Chriſt, ſhall be united againe to my ſoule, and made like the glorious body of Chriſt. 1. Phil. 23. Luke 23. 43. A doctrine full of comfort and profit, yet denyed of many in open wordes, and I feare of moe in effect and heart. In the book of Wiſdome, ſee how the wicked ſpeake: Our life is ſhort and tedious, in the death of a man there is no recovery, neither was any known that hath returned from the Grave, &c. Act. 23. 8. The Saduces denyed that there was any Reſurrection, any Angels, or Spirits. The vaine Athenians hearing the bleſſed Apoſtle ſpeake of a Reſurrection, laughed him to ſcorne, and ſaid; They would heare more of this matter, in a mock, Acts 17. 32. Hymineus and Philetus ſaid, It was paſt. 1 Tim. 2. 18. And many moe examples are there to this end.

Wherefore it ſtands us upon to be grounded in this doctrine, and to bee ſure of that which we beleeve, which wee well may be, if wee marke the Scriptures. And as the worthieſt place to begin withall, that notable diſcourſe to the Corinthians, where ſee what followeth of the denyall of it: If there be no Reſurrection (ſaith the Apoſtle) of the dead, then is not Chriſt riſen. And if Chriſt be not riſen, then is our preaching vaine, and your faith is alſo vaine And we are found falſe witneſſes of God: for we have teſtified of God, that he hath raiſed up Chriſt, whom he hath not raiſed up if ſo be the dead be not raiſed, for if the dead be not raiſed then is Chriſt not raiſed. And if Chriſt be not raiſed, our faith is in vaine, and we are yet in our ſins, and ſo they which are aſleep in Chriſt are periſhed. Yea if in this life onely we have hope in Chriſt wee are of all men the moſt miſerable; for, ſiducia Chriſtianorum eſt reſurrectio mortuorum: The truſt of Chriſtians is the reſurrection of the dead, as Tertullian ſaith. All theſe inconveniences follow if this article be denyed. But now in the affirmative, all theſe are falſe, and therefore there is certainely a Reſurrection of the dead: for Chriſt is riſen from the dead, and is ſet forth unto us to be conſidered of, not as a private man apart and by himſelfe, but as the firſt fruits; and the whole heape is ſanctified in the firſt fruits, therefore he being riſen, we alſo muſt riſe.

Wee beleeve that this our ſelfe-ſame fleſh wherein wee live, although it die and come to duſt, yet at the laſt ſhal returne again to life by the meanes of Chriſts Spirit which dwelleth in us, and that then verily, whatſoever we ſuffer herein the mean while for his ſake, Chriſt will wipe away all teares and heavineſs from our eyes, and that we through him ſhall enjoy everlaſting life, and ſhall for ever be with him in glory. Apoſt. Anglic. 362.

Secondly, Chriſt is to be conſidered alſo as oppoſite to Adam, and therefore it followeth, that as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive. In Adam we die, becauſe by nature we were and are borne of him, and by Chriſt we live, becauſe by him we are made the children of God by grace.

1 Cor. 15. Abſurdities following on the deniall of this Article. 1. Argument.

Thirdly, God muſt raigne, and the kingdome be delivered up to the Father. The firſt degree of which kingdome ſtandeth in the reſurrection of his Son, who is the head, and the ſecond degree in the full conjunction of the members with the head. Therefore there muſt be a reſurrection: for otherwiſe neither the Father can be King above all, neither Chriſt be Lord of all: for neither ſhould the power of Satan, and death be overcome, not the glory of God be full in his Son, nor his ſons in his members. 2. Argument.

Fourthly, by the end of Baptiſme this doctrin is proved: for they which are baptized are baptized for dead, that is to ſay, that they may have a remedy againſt death, becauſe that baptiſme is is a token of regeneration; or the beginners in Religion, when their death approached made haſt to bee baptized, that their bodies might bee waſhed and cleanſed againſt the joyfull day of Reſurrection; as Epiphanius well noteth upon the words: Therefore there is a Reſurrection, otherwiſe what needed this remedy. Fiftly, unleſſe there were a Reſurrection of the dead, why ſhould the Apoſtles ſo daily caſt themſelves into danger of ſo many deaths? Why are wee in jeopardy (ſaith Saint Paul) every houre? Sixtly, if there bee no Reſurrection of the dead, why doe wee give our ſelves to any thing elſe ſave to eating and drinking? but this is moſt abſurd, therefore there is a Reſurrection of the dead. Thus doth the Apoſtle argue this matter in that place, with much more, if you looke on it. Other Scriptures, alſo, many there are beſide this moſt notable, ſome ſpeaking of the immortality of the ſoule and of the body. As of the ſoule, that in the Goſpell alledged by Chriſt againſt the Saduces; God is the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and yet he is no God of the dead, but of the living: therefore Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob live, but not in body till the Reſurrection, therefore in ſoule. The godly beleevers (ſaith our Saviour) paſſe from death to life: but how can this be, if the ſoule did not live after the body is dead? Therefore the ſoule liveth, and the ſpirit (as the Wiſe man ſaith) returneth to him that gave it. And we know (ſaith the Apoſtle) that if our earthly houſe of this Tabernacle be deſtroyed, we have a building given of God, that is, an houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the Heavens, and therefore wee ſigh, deſiring to bee cloathed with our houſe which is from heaven, &c. Now this could not be, except the ſoule remained after the death of the body, and were taken up to her Head, Chriſt; I deſire to be looſed, and to bee with Chriſt, ſaith the Apoſtle: noting moſt plainly the life of the ſoule with Chriſt, after it is looſed from the body. The examples of Chriſt himſelfe, of Lazarus, of the Theefe, of Stephen, and others, prove the ſame: Finally, the ſoules under the Altar of them that were killed for the Word of God, which cryed with a loud voice to the Lord to revenge their blood, &c. Wicked therefore was the error of the Saduces, denying this holy Doctrine; and at this day of the Anabaptiſts and the Epicures. Groſſe alſo are Popiſh prattles of their fained Purgatory: For the ſoules of the Righteous are in the hands of God, where no evill can hurt them, &c. Of the bodie againe wee have the like teſtimonies to our comfort: as that notable place in the Prophet Ezekiel; The hand of the Lord was upon mee, and carried me out in the ſpirit of the Lord, and ſet me downe in the midſt of the Field, which was full of Bones, and he led me round about by them, and behold there were very many in the open Field, and loe they were very dry. And he ſaid unto me, Sonne of Man, can theſe bones live? And I anſwered, O Lord God thou knoweſt. Againe he ſaid to me, Propheſie upon thoſe dry Bones, and ſay unto them: O yee dry bones heare the word of the Lord, Thus ſaith the Lord God unto theſe Bones, Behold, I will cauſe Breath to enter into you, and yee ſhall live: And I will lay Sinewes upon you, and make Fleſh grow upon you, and cover you with Skinne, and put Breath in you, that you may live, and you ſhall know that I am the Lord. So I propheſied as I was commanded, and as I propheſied, there was a noyſe, and behold there was a ſhaking, and the Bones came together, bone to his bone, and when I beheld, loe the Fleſh and the Sinewes grew upon them, and above the Skin covered them, but there was no breath in them. Then ſaid he unto me, propheſie unto the Winde, propheſie Son of Man, and ſay to the Winde, Thus ſaith the Lord God, Come from the foure Windes to breathe, and breathe upon thoſe ſlaine, that they may live. So I propheſied as hee had commanded mee, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and ſtood up upon their feet an exceeding great Army, &c. Daniel againe in his Propheſie, Many of them that ſleepe in the duſt of the Earth ſhall awake, ſome to everlaſting life, and ſome to ſhame and perpetuall contempt. Iob alſo as plaine as any, I am ſure that my Redeemer liveth, and he ſhall ſtand the laſt upon the Earth: and though after my skinne Wormes deſtroy this body, yet ſhall I ſee God in my fleſh, whom I my ſelfe ſhall ſee, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and none other for me, though my Reines are conſumed within me. Our Saviour Chriſt in the Goſpell, The houre ſhall come, in which all that are in the grave ſhall heare the voyce of the Son, and they ſhall come forth that have done good unto the Reſurrection of Life, but they that have done evill unto the Reſurrection of Condemnation. And in a moment (ſaith the Apoſtle) in the twinckling of an eye, at the laſt Trumpet, we ſhall be changed: For the Trumpe ſhall blow, and the dead (that is, the dead bodie) ſhall be raiſed up uncorruptible, and we ſhall be changed, &c. And in the Apocalypſe, I ſaw a great white Throne, and one that ſate on it, from whoſe face fled away both Earth and Heaven, and their place was no more found. And I ſaw the Dead, both great and ſmall, ſtand before God, and the Bookes were opened, and another Booke was opened, which is the Booke of Life, and the Dead were judged of thoſe things which were written in the Bookes according to their Workes. And the Sea gave up her Dead which were in her, and Death and Hell delivered up the Dead which were in them, and they were judged every man according to their Workes. Many moe Scriptures are there to this end, but theſe ſuffice; which therefore I have fully and at large laid downe, becauſe they are moſt notable, and every man hath not a Bible to reade them in. Many arguments alſo might bee framed for proofe hereof, as the great care of Buriall and Burying-places ever among the old Patriarks; and ſince their time, in the godly, the deſire of man and wife to be buried together, with friend to friend, and all a family as they died: all which was only in hope of this joyful day of reſurrection; ioy-

The Immortality of the ſoule proved.
Mat.22.32.

Iohn 5.24.
Eccleſ.12.9.
2 Cor.5.1.

Apoc.6.9,10.

Ezec.37.1.

Dan.12.2.

Iob 19.25.&c.

Ioh.5.28.

1 Cor.15.52.
1 Theſ.4.16.
Apoc.20.11.

joyfull, I ſay, to the godly, but terrible and wofull to the wicked. Good Ioſeph, in hope of this, commanded his bones to bee removed with them when they ſhould depart, as you know the ſtory. Talia pietatis officia ad mortuorum corpora pertinent propter fidem Reſurrectionis aſtruendã. Such duties of godlineſſe (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) doe appertaine to the dead, in token that wee beleeve the Reſurrection. They did beleeve not onely the Reſurrection of a Body, but of this Body, that is, of their owne Bodies they then enioyed, and ſo muſt wee: For ſo teacheth the Scripture, as you heard in Iob, and the other places before; otherwiſe it ſhould rather be a Creation of a new, than a Reſurrection. And the Apoſtle ſaith, This corruptible, this, this, pointing as it were his finger at that which we now have, even this corruptible, and not any other, ſhall put on incorruption. Non poteſt enim expreſſius loqui, niſi cutem ſuam manibus teneret; for hee could not ſpeake more plainely (ſaith Tertullian) except he ſhould hold his skinne in his hands. Alſo our Saviours words are, That of all that the Father had given him, he would loſe nothing, but would raiſe it up againe at the laſt day; meaning even the ſame, and not any other: And as the death of this fleſh came by Adam, ſo the life of this fleſh alſo muſt come by Chriſt. The word of Reſurrection noteth as much, which is, riſing againe: For how can a new Body be ſaid to riſe againe, having never beene before? God killeth and maketh alive againe, what? but that which was dead: therefore it muſt be the ſame Body; for a new Body did never die. Our Bodies are the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt, our Members the Members of Chriſt; therefore to ſay they ſhall rot to duſt, and never riſe againe, how abſurd is it? Can the members of Chriſt utterly and finally periſh? This Body againe which I have now, is ſaid to ſleepe, therefore this Body muſt awake againe, or elſe it was not a ſleepe, but an utter periſhing.

The ſame body ſhall riſe againe. Did they beleeve the Reſurrection of the ſame bodie? Iohn 6.39.

Againe, why ſhould the Apoſtle pray, That both Body and Soule may be blameleſſe in the day of the Lord, if this Body riſe not, but another, 1 Theſ. 5. 2. Cor. 7. The Juſtice againe of God requireth, that the ſelfe-ſame Body which hath done either good or bad, ſhould be partaker of his owne fruits: the Hand, which hath beene open to receive bribes, the foot, which hath beene ſwift to ſhed blood, the Tongue, that hath ſpoken proud things, the eies, that have beheld vanitie, the eares, that have beene open to admit wicked ſlaunders, the minde, that hath beene a neſt of wicked imaginations, the Head that hath deviſed ſtill miſchiefe, the Heart, that hath boiled in luſt and revenge, ſhall feele then the reward of ſuch Workes; and ſo in the contrary, for well-doing. Thoſe Bodies that have borne part of the Burthen, and heat of the day, ſhall have part of the penny and wages.

Reade Calvin. Epiſt. 78. Parell to Calvin his error novis corp. non iiſdem.

The Hebrew Doctors to teach this, have deviſed a Parable in this ſort: A man planted an Orchard, and going from home, was carefull to leave ſuch Watchmen as both might keepe it from ſtrangers, and not deceive him themſelves: Therefore he appointed one blind, but ſtrong of his limbes, and the other ſeeing, but a Cripple. Theſe two, in the abſence of their Maſter, conſpired together, and the blind tooke the lame upon his ſhoulders, and ſo gathered the fruit. Their Maſter returning, and finding out this ſubtlety, puniſhed them both together. So ſhall it be with Body and Soule in this day: the Body blind, but ſtrong to ſinne; the Soule ſeeing and knowing, but unable to worke outward Wickedneſs without the Body; both conſpiring and agreeing together to treſpaſſe, 2 Cor. 5. 10. The Papiſts attribute our Reſurrection to the reall eating of the fleſh of Chriſt, and ſay, it is not onely to be aſcribed to the Spirit of Chriſt: alledging for proofe thoſe words of Iohn, He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, hath life everlaſting, and I will raiſe him up againe in the laſt day. But wee anſwer them, That theſe words we know, and the eating of Chriſts fleſh, here meant, we know: But where is that reall, and ſubſtantiall, and carnall eating? Where did Saint Iohn ever tell them, that Chriſts body is eaten with teeth, and conveyed further in ſuch groſſe and fleſhly wiſe into the belly? Saint Auguſtine expounding the ſame words, ſaith, Crede & manducaſti; Credere in Chriſtum, hoc eſt manducare Panem vivum: Iſte Panis interioris hominis quærit eſuriem; Beleeve thou in Chriſt, and thou haſt eaten Chriſt; to beleeve in Chriſt, that is the eating of the Bread of life: This Bread requireth the hunger of the inner Man. Mathias Doringe, a Franciſcan Fryer, in Pſa 110. ioyned with Lyra, ſaith: Hoc verbum nihil directe pertinet ad Sacramentalem, vel corporalem manducationem; This ſaying of the ſixt of Iohn pertaineth nothing directly to the Sacramentall or corporall eating. His reaſon is, becauſe the Sacrament was not as yet ordained, and by way of prognoſtication who ſo will ſay they were ſpoken, hee ſaith he is a curious Heretike, and his fancie may as eaſily be deſpiſed as proved, &c.

Michael Vehe, another Popiſh Doctor, ſaith. Tract. 5. contr. Lutherum. Quam multum firmitatis habeat hæc ratio, hinc claret, quod verbis Chriſti abutitur, in peregrino ſenſu, quæ enim de Spirituali manducatione, &c. How weake this reaſon is, appeareth hereby, that he abuſeth Chriſts words in a ſtrange meaning: for the words which were ſpoken of the Spirituall eating, he wreſteth to the eating of the Sacrament; of which eating of the Sacrament, Chriſt in theſe words in the ſixt of Iohn ſpeaketh nothing. Which thing is well proved by this reaſon: For many have ſpirituall life by the grace of God, and bee lively members of Chriſts body, that were never partakers of the Sacrament, &c. Eccius alſo, that great Pillar of their Church, ſaith, ſaith, Ad Sacramentum hîc oculus non eſt habendus; In this ſixt of Iohn we may have no eye unto the Sacrament. Many others of their Doctors might be recited to the ſame end, if theſe ſufficed not. God forbid that our Reſurrection ſhould depend upon this ſtring: for then all the Patriarchs, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob, Moſes, Aaron, &c. ſhall never riſe againe, but are periſhed; all the Prophets are gone, and all Chriſtian children that depart this life before they receive the Sacrament.

1 Cor. 15. Leave therefore this wicked Popiſh Doctrine, and know, that our Reſurrection is cauſed (as Saint Paul ſaith) by the Spirit of God that dwelleth in us. Origen ſaith, Reſurgemus propter Spiritum habitantẽ in nobis, neceſſe eſt enim Spiritui reddi habitaculum ſuum; We ſhall riſe againe, becauſe of the Spirit that dwelleth in us; for of neceſſity the Spirit muſt have his Houſe reſtored to him. S. Auguſtine ſaith moſt notably, Hæc mea tota ſpes eſt, & omnis fiducia: Eſt enim in ipſo Ieſu Chriſto Domino noſtro unuſcujuſq; noſtrũ portio caro & ſanguis: ubi ergo portio mea regnat, ibi ego me regnare credo; This is my whole hope, and all my truſt: for in Chriſt Jeſu our Lord is fleſh and blood, which is a portion of every of us: therefore where a portion of mine reigneth, there I beleeve that I ſhall raigne too. S. Cyril ſaith, Quamvis mors proter peccatum in naturam noſtram inſiliit, tamen quia filius Dei homo factus eſt, omnes profectò reſurgemus; Although death be fallen into our Nature becauſe of ſin, yet becauſe the Sonne of God is made Man, doubtleſſe wee ſhall all riſe againe.

In Ioan, lib. 4. cap. 15.

Thus the Spirit of God is the cauſe and the worker of our Reſurrection. The Sacraments alſo are meanes, and inſtruments, and ſeales hereof, but not cauſes. Therefore in the councell of Nice, the holy Myſteries are called Reſurrectionis noſtræ Symbola, The pledges or tokens of our Reſurrection: Where the Councell ſpeake in the plurall number, and not of one Sacrament as Popery doth; and other Fathers expreſly of Baptiſme, as Baſil who ſaith, Dies Paſchalis eſt pignus Reſurrectionis, Baptiſmus verò eſt potentia & vis ad Reſurrectionem, Eaſter day is a pledge of Reſurrection, but Baptiſme is a power and ſtrength unto Reſurrection. Ignatius ad Trullian. ſaith, Vt credentes in mortem ejus per Baptiſmũ participes ejus Reſurrectionis efficiamini. That beleeving in his death, by Baptiſme yee may be made partakers of his Reſurrection. In the Councell of Wormes it is written thus, In aquas demerſio, in infernum deſcenſio eſt, & rurſus ab aquis emerſio reſurrectio eſt, the dipping in the water is the going downe into Hell, and the comming out from the water is the Reſurrection. See therefore our truth, and Popiſh lies; hold that which is good. All this is done by the power of Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe raiſing of Lazarus and others from death, was a type and ſhadow of it, which the Apoſtle in plaine words expreſſeth to the Romans: Hee ſhall alſo make them like to his owne glorious body: as the words to the Philippians expreſſely mention; Not changing the ſubſtance, but the quality. Which what a comfort is it to us, and what a powerfull might in him, may the more appeare, if wee conſider well the true qualities of our bodies now: they are vile, they are baſe, and full of infirmities; and therefore in the Scriptures compared to meane things; as to the Graſſe, to the Flower of the Field, to Duſt and Aſhes, to Houſes of Clay, &c. Our bodies when they are young, are weake twigs, when they are old, they are rotten Trees; in the beſt age like veſſels of glaſſe, broken with a ſmall knocke: yea, ſaith Saint Auguſtine, more brittle than glaſſe a great deale: for glaſſes by good looking to, doe endure often longer than they that made them, but ſo can never our weake bodies. Every creature, ſaid one once, liveth of his owne; but fraile man, for the maintenance of a fraile body, hath a licence to begge, and craveth the helpe of every creature. The Sunne lendeth him light, the Ayre breath, the Water drinke, the Fowles of heaven, the Beaſts of the Earth feede him, and cloath him, as we ſee. And would we conſider well whence every thing is, it would teach us modeſty and moderation. The fine linnen that cloathed the rich glutton, and at this day amongſt us carrieth ſuch a ſhow in great Ruffes like Wind-Mill ſailes: whence is it, but the barke and skinne of the Line and Flaxe? The glorious Silke that many exchange all their Land for, what is it but the excrements of the Wormes? The gold and pearles more regarded than Heaven in our times, are the very guts and bowels of the earth. And the haire that gliſtereth, as the gold upon many a head, it is borrowed even of the dead Creatures. They that be come of Noble houſes, of great Stockes and ancient houſes, yea, are the borne Peeres of the Royall blood; their bodies are vile and ſubject to diſeaſes, as unable to endure labour, heat, cold, or to abide hunger, thirſt, want of ſleepe and reſt as other men.

De ſancto Bapt.

In Rom. 8. lib. 16. Medit. 14. cap. 5.

Rom. 8. 11. Made like to his glorious body. The true qualities of our bodies. Eſay 40. 10. Gen. 18. 27. Iob 4. 19.

Great Alexander was perſwaded by flatterers, that he was the Sonne of Iupiter, a God, and no Man; but by want of ſleepe when he was weary, and by ſmart of body when he was wounded, confeſſed that he was Mortall as others be. The ſame Alexander with a proud minde ſailing up Nilus, with a purpoſe to find the ſpring thereof, which yet never could be knowne, was perſwaded by an old man to returne: who alſo gave him a Pearle, with this hidden and ſtrange propertie, that being laid in ballance with any Mettall, it was too heavy; but covering it with duſt, a feather was heavier than it. By which was meant, that Alexander himſelfe, who in his life time was too ſtrong and mighty for all the world; being dead, was as weake as other men: ſo brittle, ſo baſe, ſo ſubject to infirmitie is the body of the greateſt Monarch.

O let this holy Meditation ſnub our mounting conceits of birth, ſtrength, youth, beauty, wiſedome, and ſo forth: Let it take away, that too much curioſity in attiring and pampering our fleſh; the wind may not blow upon ſome of us, nor the Sun ſhine upon us at any time. No dainties are daintie enough, no apparell coſtly enough: ſurely we are made of the ſlime of the earth, and we muſt returne to duſt againe.

The very higheſt of us all muſt ſay and acknowledge with holy Iob: The grave ſhall be my houſe, and I ſhall make my bed in the darke. I ſhall ſay to corruption, thou art my Father; and to the Wormes, you are my Siſter and Mother. There is an old riddle what that ſhould be that is both Mother and Daughter: and the anſwer is of the Ice, which firſt is made of Water, and ſo is the Daughter, and then bringeth forth water againe, and ſo is the Mother: but it may as well be ſaid of the bodies of men, which firſt are made of duſt, and ſo returne againe to the ſame: yet theſe bodies thus fraile, and this fleſh thus vile ſhall hee change in this joyfull day, and keeping the ſubſtance, make them in quality like to his owne glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able to ſubdue all things unto himſelfe. They were ſowne in corruption, but they ſhall riſe in incorruption; they were ſowne in diſhonour, but they ſhall riſe in glory; they were ſowne in weakeneſſe, but they ſhall riſe in power; they were ſowne naturall bodies, but they ſhall bee raiſed ſpirituall bodies: And in a word, Be like the Angels in Heaven (ſaith our Saviour) and ſhine as the very Sunne. Phil.3.20.21. Math.22.30.

A notable reſemblance whereof was that transfiguration of our Saviour in the Mount. The difference alſo of the two Hieruſalems; the one deſcribed with houſes, gates, walls, ſtrong and faire, yet made of timber, Stone, and ordinary matter. But the new Hieruſalem is moſt glorious, the walls of Jaſper, the foundations of precious ſtones, the gates of pearle, the pavement of pure gold: ſuch difference ſhall this change make in our bodies. Now they are as gold mingled with Earth; then they ſhall be like gold purified ſeven times in the fire; then all teares ſhall be wiped away, all infirmities ceaſe, all deformities end, and there ſhall be health without ſickneſſe, ſtrength without weakeneſſe, pleaſure without paine, youth without age, and whatſoever may be joyfull, felicity with certainty, and life without death, with the bleſſed Trinity for ever. And what a comfort, I ſay is this, that ſo many infirmities ſhall be loſt, and ſo heavenly qualities got in their place. Math.17.

O Death: why ſhouldſt thou feare us, when we loſe ſuch evill, and gaine ſuch good by thee? What though ſickneſſe waſte me to nothing, what though diſeaſes vexe me continually, what if the biles of Iob were upon me all, and ſuch miſery as never had any; yet that body ſo tortured and troubled with all this, ſhall not the Lord caſt away for that vileneſſe, but after my tryall holding Faith in him, give me a death full of mercy, and a Reſurrection againe of the ſame body, full of glory: nothing can hinder him whoſe power is infinite; nothing ſhall hinder him, whoſe mercy is unmeaſurable. O heart, be glad to thinke of this; and O my Soule, bee cheerefull in hope. That day ſhall recompence all afflictions, and were they never ſo great, they cannot bee worthy of the comfort of that day to bee reveiled to all thoſe that poſſeſſe their ſoules in patience, and cleave to him.

Surely the ſweetneſſe of this doctrine is very great, and therefore the more you prove it, the more we joy to heare this truth and certainty.

There are in Nature many reſemblances of it, which we may obſerve with great contentment. The Sun ſetteth, and the day is cloſed up in darkneſſe, ſaith Tertullian that learned Father, yet the Sun riſeth againe the next morning, and the day dawneth out of his darkneſſe. The Moone waneth every moneth, and becommeth ſmall to our eye, yet it groweth againe, and hath his glorious light as before. The Trees in Winter are as dead before us, and all their beautifull leaves withered, waſted, and fallen away; yet the Spring comming they revive againe, and are cloathed as beautifull as they were before. The Lion alſo being too long ere he finde his prey, when hee returneth home, findeth his whelps dead, and with very roaring reviveth them againe. The Pellican by her blood quickneth her young ones. The fire lieth hid in the flint ſtone, yet a ſmall force will make it appeare: Our nailes being pared, and our haire cut, grow againe. And if the dead parts of the body be reſtored by the ordinary power of God in nature, much more ſhall his mighty power reſtore the bodies of men.

The Phœnix is burned unto aſhes, yet reneweth againe out of thoſe aſhes, and ſo dieth to live againe (ſaith Lactantius,) ſo that theſe very creatures do teach us to beleeve this Article: but above all in this matter, ever thinke of Gods power and Will; was it eaſie for his power to create all things of nothing in the beginning, and ſhall it bee impoſſible to reſtore againe what he ſo created? Difficilius eſt creare quæ non fuerunt, quam reparare quæ fuerunt. It is harder, ſaith S. Gregory, to create things that never were, than againe to reſtore things that once were. Of the ſeed of Man is made Man, and we wonder not at it, and why out of Earth may not riſe againe that body, that at the firſt was made of it. If you ſay this is naturall, that of Mans ſeede Man ſhould grow; what I pray you is that Nature but the decree of Gods divine pleaſure, by which alſo the dead are appointed to riſe againe: for it is his Will to declare both Mercy and Juſtice Gods Power and Will. His Power. The two ſure grounds of this Article. His Will.

Juſtice this way. To recompence (ſaith the Apoſtle) tribulation to them that trouble you, and to you which are troubled reſt with us when the Lord Jeſus ſhall ſhew himſelfe from Heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming fire, rendring vengeance to them that doe not know God, and obey not the Goſpell of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which ſhall bee puniſhed with everlaſting perdition, from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his Power,&c. Thus comforted themſelves the holy Martyrs in their times, ſaying; Quid ſi Tyrannus ſit interfector corporis mei, cum Deus ſit Suſceptor animæ, & erit reſtitutor corporis mei? Quid ſi membra laceret inimicus cum capillos annumeret Deus? What if the Tyrant kill my body, ſeeing that God will receive my ſoule, and alſo reſtore my body againe? What if the enemy teare in peeces my members, ſeeing God hath numbred the haires of my head? This Will of God is further taught us by many Scriptures. Thy dead men ſhall live (ſaith the Prophet Eſay) even with my body ſhall they ariſe, Awake and ſing yee that ſleepe in the Duſt, for thy dew is as the dew of Hearbes, and the earth ſhall caſt out the dead.

Eſay 26.19.

I will open your Graves (ſaith Ezechiel) againe, and bring you forth of your Sepulchers. If we beleeve that Jeſus is dead and riſen, even ſo they that beleeve in Jeſus will God bring with him. The Names alſo given in Scripture to death, do ſhew this will: for it is called often a ſleepe. Brethren, I would not have you ignorant concerning them that ſleepe, that you ſorrow not as they that have no hope.

Ezek.37.14. 1 Theſ.4.14.

And S. Auguſtine in regard thereof ſaith, Quinque Virgines fatuæ, & quinque ſapientes dormierunt, id eſt moriebantur: mors enim in Scripturis dicitur ſomnus propter Reſurrectionem velut evigilationem. The five fooliſh Virgins, and the five wiſe ſlept, that is, dyed: for death is called a ſleepe in the Scriptures, in reſpect of the Reſurrection, which is as it were a waking again: yea, death is a ſweet ſleepe, without dreames, as Socrates named it; not an everlaſting ſleepe, as Secundus the Philoſopher ſaid to Adrianus the Emperour: It may bee called a brazen ſleepe, a ſtrong and long ſleep; for ſo Homer thinketh of it. The Maide is not dead (ſaith our Saviour) but ſleepeth, and our friend Lazarus ſleepeth, but I go to awake them: with many moe ſuch Teſtimonies. Whereupon the Church-yards were called ſleeping places, and regarded as wee ſee. Neither the infinite goodneſſe of God to his people, nor the unheaped meaſure of his ſeverity againſt the ungodly could be ſhewed, if this change ſhould not be: For now the joy of the Elect and paine of the wicked, is but a dreame to that which ſhall be: For your ſhame (ſaith the Prophet) you ſhall receive double, everlaſting joy ſhall be unto you. Which place Lyra, and the interlined gloſſe expound of joy of ſoule and body.

Iohn 11.

Cœmeteria.

Againe, the truth of God cannot ſtand if this change ſhould not be; for hee hath given us his word and promiſe, to raiſe us up at the laſt day, and that no one haire of our head ſhall periſh. When thou makeſt a feaſt, call the poore, lame, &c. who cannot reward thee, but it ſhall be recompenced at the reſurrection of the juſt. Finally, marke how in the time of Nature God tooke away Henock, in the time of the law Elias, and in the time of grace our Saviour himſelfe, and you may ſee it plaine, that God hath taken away from death his Plea of preſcription, and by theſe examples alſo ſhewed that we ſhall riſe againe. What if our bodies be conſumed to aſhes in the fire, dryed in ſhew to nothing in the ayre, rotten to duſt in the earth, ſwallowed up of the fiſhes in the Sea, thoſe fiſhes taken and eaten of men, thoſe men devoured of wild beaſts, thoſe beaſts conſumed by foules, yet ſhall this mighty and Almighty G O D by his power reſtore this againe according to his promiſe. Abſit ut aliquis ſinus Naturæ ita recipiat aliquid ſubtractum à ſenſibus noſtris ut omnino Creatoris lateat ſcientiam aut effugiat poteſtatẽ. For God forbid, ſaith (Saint Auguſtine) that any ſecret place ſhould be thought ſo to hide any thing removed from our ſenſes, that it can either be kept from the knowledge of the Creator, or avoid his power.

Luke 14.

But looke how eaſie it is for the Husband-man by his ſervants to gather the wheat into his barne: ſo eaſie is it for God by his Angels to bring all people before him. The Potter of his Clay can make a better faſhion againe after he hath altered the firſt, and yet the ſame Clay in ſubſtance. Shall Napkins bee brought from Pauls body to the ſicke, and diſeaſes depart from them? ſhall the ſhadow of Peter helpe the weake? Elizeus by ſending his ſtaffe revive the Sunamites Sonne, and his bones after he was dead, revive a man that was put into the grave to him? And ſhall not our mighty God change our bodies according to this Article? Aarons Rodde had leaves, bloomes and Almonds: Moſes Staffe was made a living Serpent. Sara her dead wombe was Mother to a Sonne. And theſe (ſaith Epiphanius) are ſome tokens of our Reſurrection. More of theſe tokens we had before. Reade in Iob the power of that great Leviathan, and of Behemoth, and iudge by this power in his Creatures what is the power of our mighty Creator. If one Angell, which is but a Creature, can in one night bring downe to death an hundred foureſcore and five thouſand of the greateſt men in Senacheribs Armie, O what can God doe with all the Angels in heaven his ſervants at Commandement to doe his will? It is poſſible with God that a Camell or a Cable ſhould be drawne through the eye of a Needle.

Therefore

Therefore death cannot ſhut up the grave ſo cloſe, but God can and will draw out thence our vile bodies, and make them like to the glorious body of Chriſt. The garments of the Iſraelites waxed not old, neither were their ſhooes worne in forty yeares, and death ſhall never waſt mens bodies further than God is able to reſtore. God out of ſtones is able to raiſe up children unto Abraham, and out of duſt cannot he reduce us? Chriſt raiſed Lazarus that was foure dayes dead, as eaſily as the Widowes Son that was but new caried out: for as the beame of the eye (ſaith S. Auguſtine) diſcerneth things neare and afar off in like ſpace: So doth the power of God with like facility revive late and long dead. Si ratio quæritur non erit mirabile, ſi exemplum poſcitur non erit ſingulare. Demus aliquid poſſe Deum, quod fateamur nos non poſſe inveſtigare: Tota ratio facti in talibus eſt potentia facientis: If reaſon be ſought, (ſaith S. Auguſtine) it will not be ſtrange, if an example be asked it will not be ſingular. Let us grant that God can doe ſomething, the reaſon whereof we cannot finde out: In ſuch things the whole reaſon of the deed is the power of the doer. Aug. ad Voluſianum.

Wherefore to conclude this point: the Authority of the Scriptures, the reaſons of the Apoſtle, the name of death to be a ſleep, the manner of buriall, the things in Nature ſo lively reſembling; with the Iuſtice, Mercy, and Truth of God, are ſtrong chaines we plainly ſee to uphold our faith in this article; I beleeve the reſurrection of the body.

The Lord increaſe our faith, and make us thankfull for his comforts. I truſt thus much may content any ordained of God to be ſaved. But now if you pleaſe to adde a word of the manner of this great day, it will alſo be acceptable.

I like his modeſty well that ſaid, Dies ille indicabit: That day ſhall ſhew the manner of it. In the meane time content your ſelfe with theſe Scriptures. The Trump ſhall blow, and the dead ſhall be raiſed up incorruptible, and we ſhall be changed. We which live and are remaining in the comming of the Lord ſhall not prevent them which ſleepe. For the Lord himſelfe ſhall deſcend from heaven with a ſhout, and with the voice of the Archangell, and with the Trumpet of God, and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. Then ſhall we which live and remaine be caught up with them alſo in the clouds to meet the Lord in the Ayre, and ſo ſhall wee ever be with the Lord. 1 Cor. 15. 2. 1 Theſ. 4. 15.

Of the end will you ſay any more?

That which hath been ſaid may ſuffice, which in ſubſtance was this: to give honour and immortality to ſome; ſhame and indignation and wrath to others: Rom. 2. 7, 8. For all ſhall riſe both juſt and unjuſt. Acts 14. and the wicked incorruptible alſo, but unto ignominie and without glory, to burne and yet never be conſumed. Reſurgit juſtus ut judicet, Peccator ut judicetur, impius ut ſine judicio puniatur. Wherefore I end as the Apoſtle doth: Be we ſtedfaſt, unmoveable, abundant alwayes in the words of the Lord, for as much as we know that our labour is not in vain in the Lord. Lord ſtrengthen us, and come Lord Jeſu, come quickly: Amen.

THE TWELFTH ARTICLE.

The laſt Article is this.

I beleeve everlaſting life.

AND this is the laſt in order, becauſe it is the end of all the reſt, containing the reward of our faith, even eternall joy. And the meaning of it is, as if it were ſaid. I beleeve that as I have the ſeed of eternall life ready ſowne in my heart, which is very ſweet, and a ſure ſtaffe to reſt on in all miſeries of this life whatſoever: So ſhall I with Jeſus Chriſt in his kingdome enjoy that perfect bliſſe both of body and ſoule; that no eye hath ſeen, nor eare hath heard, neither poſſibly can be comprehended of mans heart, and ſhall then and there praiſe the Lord God without ceaſing, and yet without wearineſſe. The drift of it is alſo to teach us, that perfect and full felicity is not in this earth, but reſerved in heaven for all thoſe that have fought a good fight, and finiſhed their courſe in a true Faith. And truly if a man ſoundly beleeve this Article, he will never ſuffer his heart to be afflicted with theſe earthly things; but knowing that if his earthly houſe of this Tabernacle be deſtroyed, he hath a building given of God, that is, a houſe not made with hands, but eternall in the heavens: He will with the ſame Apoſtle ſigh, deſiring to be clothed with his houſe which is from heaven, and ſo further as followeth in that place. For alas, what is in this world worthy our heart, if we conſider things as we ought with wiſdome, conſcience, and religion. Mundi lætitia eſt impunita nequitia. The mirth of this world is but unpuniſhed wickedneſſe (ſaid old S. Auguſtine) in his time. And doe we not often looke Apoc. 21. 4. 2 Cor. 5. Serm. 37. de verb. Domini.

upon the Maps wherein are Kingdomes, Provinces, Cities, Seas, and yet all is but paper, upon which if but one drop of water fall, it indangereth the blotting out of the greateſt Palace there? ſo ſo is mans heart full of Caſtles and Towers, and glorious dreames, till the time of his touch come: but then with one fit of an Ague, he feeleth his joy in them all blotted out: and he ſaith with the Wiſe man, Vanity of vanities, and all is meere vanity.

Could David goe when he had Sauls armour put upon him? No, he ſaid, I cannot goe: and putting them off againe, betooke himſelfe to his ſcrip and ſling. So ſo doth the burthenſome traſh of this world hinder many a man that he cannot goe to his God, that he cannot fight againſt his cruell enemie, and overcome him. And therefore if he caſt theſe things away, by caring leſſe for them, and preferring better things before them; Certainly he ſhall doe better, and the victory ſhall be his to an immortall comfort.

When a man ſwimmeth in the water, if his head goe under he is gone, unleſſe he recover it up againe, but whilſt he keepeth his head above, all is well. So it is with this flattering world, whilſt we uſe it, as though we uſed it not; and keep our head above the water, that is, our heart from the immoderate care of it, we are in ſafety, but diving once under the love of it, and ſinking with the weight and burthen of it, we are gone, had we a thouſand lives: unleſſe the Lord with his gracious hand pluck us up againe. Therefore (ſaith the Spirit of God) if riches encreaſe, ſet not your hearts upon them. And moſt notably Cyprian to the like end: Arridet mundus ut ſæviat, blanditur ut fallat, allicit ut occidat, extollit ut deprimat. Vna hæc placida, ſolida, firma & perpetua ſecuritas, ſi quicquid in rebus humanis ſublime ac magnum videtur, oculis ad cœlum elatis infra conſcientiam tuam jacere poſſis gloriari: The world fawneth, that it may be cruel; flattereth, that it may deceive; allureth, that it may ſlay; lifteth up, that it may throw downe. This only is pleaſant, ſound, firme, and perpetuall ſecurity: if whatſoever in theſe worldly matters ſeemeth excellent, high, and great, with eyes lifted up to heaven, thou maiſt truly boaſt to be inferior to thy conſcience, that is, ſubject to thy contempt, not thou captive to the deſire thereof. For every mans inordinate deſire (ſaith S. Auguſtine) is to him like a tempeſt that toſſed the ſhip, and indangered them all, as in the Goſpell. Amas Deum? ambulas ſuper mare: Amas ſeculum? abſorbebit te. Amatores ſuos vorare novit, potare non novit: And loveſt thou God, ſaith he? thou walkeſt then upon the Sea. But loveſt thou the world? It will ſup thee up. For it knoweth how to devoure his lovers, but not how to give them any good.

Serm. 13. de verb. Domini.

The world weigheth without weights, and meaſureth ever without rule, both weight and rule is the love of it ſelfe, and blinde, falſe corrupt affection. It is like the Quick-ſilver that readily cleaveth unto the gold, and changeth the colour of it like it ſelfe: but as ſoone as the gold toucheth the fire, this cleaving matter departeth away, and will not abide any ſuch tryall.

Iudit. 13.

See it in Haman that fortunes foole; to day dining with King and Queene, to morrow hanging upon his Gibbet. See it in Holofernes, ſhaking the City with his feare, and ſuddenly his head brought in a Wallet by the hand of a woman. See it with feeling in proud Antiochus, of whom you reade in the booke of Machabees, breathing out but now moſt fearefull threats, and ſaying in his pride, I will make Ieruſalem a common burying place of the Iewes when I come thither. But the Lord Almighty and God of Iſrael ſmote him with an incurable and inviſible plague. For aſſoon as he had ſpoken theſe words a pain of the bowels, that was remedileſſe, came upon him, and ſore torments of the inward parts, and that moſt juſtly. For he had tormented other mens bowels with divers and ſtrange torments. And ſo he that a little before thought he might command the floods of the Sea, and weigh the high Mountaines in a ballance, and reach the Stars of heaven, now was caſt downe on the ground, and caried in a horſliter, declaring unto all men the manifeſt power of God: So that wormes came ont of his body in great abundance, his fleſh fell off by lumpes, and all his army was grieved at his ſmell, with much more in the place, if you will reade it.

2 Mach. 9. 4.

Eutropius.

See it in Valerian the Emperour, who was taken of the Perſian King, and as often as he went to his horſe was his footſtoole to raiſe him up. Moſt well therefore in my opinion ſaid Saint Auguſtine: Omnia hujus mundi gaudia ſunt ſolatia miſerorum, non gaudia beatorum: All the joyes of this world are the comforts of men in miſery, not the joyes of men happy and bleſſed. The rich man ſaith, Soule, ſoule, thou haſt much goods laid up for many yeares, live at eaſe, eate, drinke, and take thy paſtime, and even that night the Lord taketh away my ſoul, and then whoſe are all thoſe things that he hath provided? Nabal is ſecure and ſetteth little by David: his wealth is his confidence, and his anſwers proud and unkinde. But ſuddenly he is in extreame danger, and loſeth his life.

Luke 12. 19.

1 Sam. 15.

Many a Silk-worme ſitteth in this world beſotted with the pleaſures of this life, and ſaith in heart as Babylon in the Apocalyps: I ſit like a Queene, and am no widow, neither ſhall I ſee mourning. But the Lord anſwereth, In as much as this party hath glorified himſelfe, and liveth in pleaſure, ſo much give ye to him torment and ſorrow: His plagues ſhall come at one day, death and ſorrow, and famine, and he ſhall be burnt with fire, for that God which condemneth him is a ſtrong Lord, &c.

Apoc. 18.

This

This is the end of this Worlds glory, and therefore nothing to be ſo joyed in, as many men doe, but our eyes and heart to be pitched upon our future Eſtate, and this Article ever to bee in remembrance, Credo vitam æternam, I beleeve everlaſting life: Then ſhall follow true joy indeed, ſuch as I may make account of, and praiſe the name of God for ever, that hath vouchſafed to make me partaker of it. O difference, difference of that Eſtate and this: There is that felicity and happineſſe, that no tongue created either of Man, or Angell, can expreſſe the ſame, no imagination conceive, no underſtanding comprehend it. 1 Cor. 2. Eſay 64. But as it is reported of a learned Geometrician, that finding the length of Hercules foot upon the Hill Olympus, drew out his whole body by the proportion of that one part: ſo we by ſome little glympſe vouchſafed unto us in the Scripture, and ſome other circumſtances agreeing thereunto, may frame a conjecture of the matter, though far it will come behinde the thing it ſelfe. It is called in Scripture a Crowne of glory, a Throne of Majeſty, a Paradiſe, or place of pleaſure, a life everlaſting. S. Iohn in the Apocalypſe, as well for his owne comfort, being then in baniſhment, as for ours, and all that ſhall reade it, to the worlds end, takes in hand to deſcribe it by compariſon of a City, affirming, That the whole city was of gold, even of pure gold, with a great and high wal of the precious ſtones called Iaſper, the foundations of the wal of the city were garniſhed with all maner of precious ſtones; the firſt foundation, was Jaſper; the ſecond, of Saphire; the third, of a Chalcedonie; the fourth, of an Emeraude; the fifth, of a Sardonix; the ſixt, of a Sardius; the ſeventh, of a Chryſolite; the eight, of Berill; the ninth, of a Topaze; the tenth, of a Chryſopraſus; the eleventh, of a Jacinth; the twelfth, an Amethiſt: And the twelve gates were twelve Pearles, & every gate is of one Pearle, and the ſtreet of the City is pure gold, as ſhining glaſſe. And this City hath no need of the Sun, neither of the Moone, to ſhine in it, for the glory of God doth light it, and the Lambe is the light of it, with more in that place, if you looke upon it. All this to give us a conceit of the infinite value, glory, and Majeſty of this felicity prepared for us in heaven, though ſtill, ſtill, wee muſt be far ſhort of it, as it is indeed. For if the frame of this world, which is but as a Cottage of his meaneſt ſervant (and that made onely for a time, to beare off as it were a ſhowre of rain) be ſo Princely, ſo gorgeous, ſo magnificent, ſo full of Majeſty, as we ſee it to be, O what is the glory of that place which is appointed for all eternity, as the Houſe and Palace of the Almighty God and all his friends? Certainly it paſſeth all underſtanding and capacity of ours, as the Apoſtle to our great comfort ſaith, neither can the heart of man comprehend it. As he was able, good Saint Auguſtine meditated of it in this ſort. O Lord, Lord, ſaith he, if thou for this vile body of ours give us ſo great and innumerable benefits, from the firmament, from the Ayre, from the Earth, from the Sea, by light, by darkneſſe, by heate, by ſhadow, by dewes, by ſhowres, by windes, by raines, by birds, by fiſhes, by beaſts, by trees, by multitude of hearbs, and variety of plants, and by the miniſtery of all thy creatures; O ſweet Lord I ſay againe, what manner of things, how great, how good, and how innumerable are thoſe which thou haſt prepared in our heavenly country, where we ſhall ſee thee face to face? If thou doe ſo great things for us in our priſon, what wilt thou give us in our Palace? If there be ſo great ſolaces in theſe dayes of Teares, what joy ſhall there be in that day of Mariage? O my Lord and God, thou art a great God, and great is the multitude of thy magnificence and ſweetneſſe, and as there is no end of thy greatneſſe, nor number of thy wiſdome, nor meaſure of thy benignity: ſo is there neither end, number nor meaſure of thy rewards towards them that love thee, and ſigh for thee. Thus far S. Auguſtine in his feeling of this, prepared comfort, which in this Article wee beleeve, when we hold faſt the Article of Eternall life.

Apoc. 2. & 3. Mat. 16. Luke 10. Apoc. 21. 17. &c. In ſoliloquiis animæ ad Deum. Pſal. 30.

Others have deſired to feele alſo this ſweetneſſe, and to comfort their ſoules with this hope, by framing a conceit of the three places wherein Man is at ſeverall times, and of the difference of them: The firſt, his Mothers wombe; the ſecond, this world; and the third, Heaven: And looke (ſay they) how far this world, thus glorious and great, paſſeth the darkneſſe of our Mothers wombe; ſo, and much more, in all beauty, delights, and Majeſty, ſhall that place of bliſſe paſſe this world againe, that yet doth pleaſe ſo many of us: And as much as a Man living in this world doth paſſe a childe in his Mothers belly, in ſtrength of body, beauty, wit, underſtanding, learning, and knowledge; ſo much, and far more, doth a Saint in Heaven paſſe men of this world in all theſe things, and many moe beſides: and as much horrour as a man would have to turne into his Mothers wombe againe, ſo much would a glorified ſoule to returne into this world againe, &c. O joy above all joyes, paſſing all joy, and without which there is no joy. When ſhall I enter into thee (ſaith Saint Auguſtine) that he may poſſeſſe me in thee, that made both thee and me. O everlaſting Kingdome, O Kingdome of all eternity, O light without end, O peace of God that paſſeth all underſtanding, in which the ſoules of the Saints doe reſt with thee: Doe they know what they doe, that loſe this place for the loane of this world? That preferre this vale of miſery before this Eternity? That are caried away with building goodly Houſes, and patching peeces of Land together, till ſuddenly death ſtrike, and they both leave that and loſe all this? No, no, they doe not. And therefore bee wee aſſured, that as their courſe is quite amiſſe, ſo is ours moſt happy and good, if before all things we labour to live with our heavenly Father in this joy, when hence we muſt, and be no more ſeene. Lord, Lord, touch our hearts with it, and make us ever ſay in feeling, I beleeve eternall life.

Amen, I beſeech God. And now that this difference hath been ſo plainly ſhewed, what elſe may we note in this Article.

It doth further teach us patience in theſe worldly woes, whatſoever they are, that now and then we fall into, either of body or minde. For never are they ſo extreamely laid upon any, but that ſome ſweetneſſe of Gods comforting Spirit droppeth into our hearts together with them; which when we feele, then let us riſe up in joy, and remember that wee beleeve this Article of eternall life, where that ſweetneſſe ſhall be more by infinite degrees, and continue for ever without abatement, and in regard whereof, and hope whereof, who will not ſay to his ſoul, O ſoul be patient, endure theſe griefes contentedly, thy God ſitteth at the Sterne, and moderateth all; the haires of thy Head are numbred, and not one of them can fall to the ground but by his pleaſure. Tyrants may breathe out their bloody Edicts, Malice and Envy may rage horribly, ſickneſſe and diſeaſes may grievouſly vex us, but ever, ever, he is where he was that ruleth all, he ſitteth betwixt the Cherubins, and laugheth them to ſcorne that ſo ſcorne his, and Health is his to give full eaſily, if his pleaſure be ſo. Wherefore tarry his time, abide his Will, joy in his pleaſure, and caſt both heart and eye to this, I beleeve Everlaſting life.

It doth alſo yeeld to us a marvellous ſtrength againſt all doubting feare of our election and ſalvation: For what place hath God left for that, when it is an Article of Faith to beleeve Eternall life: And I, I, muſt beleeve it for my ſelfe. As well may the devill, or Popery, tell me, that I cannot be aſſured there is a God, or Chriſt, or Holy Ghoſt, or Church, or any of the other Articles, as to tell me, that I cannot be aſſured of Eternall life; for I am as ſtraitly bound to beleeve this as any of thoſe, this being an Article as thoſe are: Whereof, becauſe upon the Lords Prayer, I have ſpoken much, I here ſpare it. But ſee you the comfort, take hold of the ſweetneſſe, bleſſe God, both Father, Son, and holy Ghoſt for this mercy; telling Satan, or his Inſtruments, That if they perſwade doubt, they perſwade the deniall of an Article of Faith, which may not be in a childe of God.

Laſtly, by theſe whole twelve Articles we are taught that Doctrine, ſo maligned by the devill and devilliſh men, That we are juſtified by faith in Jeſus Chriſt, and not by our own Works, either wholly or partly: whereof meaning to write particularly in another conference, I heare name it not. The Papiſts in word dare not deny this Article, but in effect they overthrow it: For when Chriſt ſaith of himſelfe, I am the Life and the Way, they ſay, Their Pope is the Life and the Way: And when Chriſt ſaith, Thy faith hath ſaved thee, goe in peace, they ſay, Thy Workes have ſaved thee, goe in peace. Againe, when he ſaith, This is Eternall life, to know thee the only true God, and him whom thou haſt ſent, Jeſus Chriſt, they ſay, Eternall life conſiſteth in obedience to the Church of Rome, and in beliefe of whatſoever there is taught. Wherefore, as he ended, ſo end I this our true Faith, grounded on the Scripture: in regard whereof, we deteſt all Phariſaicall Leaven, and all Herodian and Machiavellian Sectaries, ſaying with the Apoſtle, That if an Angell from Heaven ſhould perſwade us contrary to this, wee hold him accurſed.

Iohn 14. Luke 7. Iohn 17.

To God be glory and praiſe: and the Lord confirme and increaſe our Faith. Amen,
Amen.

AN ALPHABETICALL TABLE TO THE BOOKE of the CREED.

A

ANswer by Sureties in Baptisme approved. 167
Articles of the Creed are not a figure of Prayer, but the badge a Christiā is known by, 169. the fourfold division of it, 171
Acceptations of the word Symbolum. 170
Assurance of our salvation against Popish doubtings, proved. 175
Alanus convinced by a childe. 178
Augustine, his opinion concerning the difference of Angels. 185
Angels may assume sensible bodies, 186. their pride and fall ought to breed a detestation and feare of the like. 187
Apparitions of dead parties are devillish impostures. 189
Antiquity ought to be reverenced, and to move us. 200
Alexander the Pope convinced of incest. 201
Adoption in Christ. 206. vid. privilege.
Apolinarius his heresie confuted. 207
Angels ignorance. 220
Antiquity and goodnesse ought to goe together, ibid. Antiquities corrupted by the Papists. 237
Absurdities following the denyall of the resurrection. 252
Alexander his pearle. 254

B

BEliefe in God. 177
Blindnesse of man. ibid.
Bishop Boner his grosse speech of God. 181
Baptisme not allowed in monstrous births, 191. it is a power and strength unto resurrection. 254
Bowing the knee at the naming of Iesus interpreted. 196
Bodies glorified, nevertheless are locall. 215
Booke of three divers coloured leaves. 223
Beliefe of everlasting life yeelds a marvellous strength against all doubting feare of our Election and Salvation. 259

C

CAtechisme, what it signifieth, 165. and who was the first Author thereof, ibid. the use thereof. 166
Conscience to bee made in the choice of God fathers and Godmothers. 167
Creation of the world, why attributed to the Father onely. 183
Covetousnesse is Idolatry. 195
Christ added to the name of Iesus, for distinction sake from others, 197. the name of Christ more odious to the Iewes, than that of Iesus, ibid. his Kingdome, 128. his Law and Scepter, 199. his eternall Priesthood, 203. why he is called Lord, 206. why it was requisite that he should be both God and Man, 208 his humanity only suffered, 209. his suffering began with his conception, ibid. the fruit of his Passion, ibid. and of his Resurrection, 213. he ascended visibly into Heaven, 214. how he may truly be said, to be, and not to bee, ever with us, ibid. his ubiquitie argued, 215. his Godhead infinite, but his Manhood locall, 216. in what sense hee is said to sit at the right hand of God. ibid.
Causes of the second Iudgement. 219
Clouds of the ayre must bee the Chariot of the just. 221
Constantine, his great charity. 229
Church how said to be Holy, 232. how Catholike, 236. and how Apostolike, 237. and how it is to be knowne, ibid. not alwayes visible 243. and so proved by the Fathers. 244

D

DOctrine of the Creed is the light of the soule, 170 Doctrine of the Sacraments, 176. vid. Vse.
Doctrine is the true tryall of the Church. 241. 245
Doubting and wavering in faith. 174

Distinction of persons makes no plurality of Gods. 179
Distinction of the fruit of Christs Death and of his Resurrection. 213
Difference of the persons in Trinitie. 280
Difference betweene Christs Kingdome and these of the world 198
Death of Christ made his Crosse glorious, 210. it was voluntary. 209
Deathes plea of prescription taken away. 256
Day of judgement proved, 218. vid. Judgement: when and where it shall be, and the manner of it. 220,&c.
Discipline requisite in the Church. 245

E

ERrors venome, 172. errors and blasphemies in the Canon of the Masse. 205
Examination of the Scriptures 173
Evill of sinne, and evill of punishment, 183. how evils are to be suffered. 192

F

FIelds never so cleane reaped, but that some gleanings remaine. 165
Faith must not be generall, but particular, 172. foure sorts of faith, 172. faith is a knowledge, 173. whereof a man ought to make to himselfe particular application, 175. firme and certaine. 176.&c.
Folly and blindnesse of the Papists. 195
Feare is the greatest preserver of vertue. 223

G

GOd his promises slandered by the Papists, 176. his truth and wisedome, 178. in what respect hee is termed Almighty, 181. his protection is the most safe, 187. why God permitteth the devils to doe hurt, 188. all things are done by his providence, 192. his right hand. 217
Gregory his invective against the Popish title of universall Bishop. 202

H

HIssing of the Serpent. 169
Holy Spirit, how he may be either kept or lost, 227. his proceeding from the Father, and Sonne, denyed by the Papists. 231
Holinesse with the Papists. 233

I

IUstification of the wicked, is a greater mercy than the Creation of the just. 184
Imperfections of nature ought not to be upbraided. ibid.
John the 13. taken and killed in the act of adultery. 201
Judgement-day proved, 218. vid. Day, when and where it shall be, and the manner of it. 220,&c.
Ignorance of the Angels. ibid.
Immortality of the soule proved. 252

Joyes of this world are comforts of men in misery. 258

K

KNowledge of man is but in part, and so is his obedience, 169. Knowledge is hatefull in the kingdome of darknesse, 173. Knowledge which we have by hope, grounded upon Gods promises, is so sure, that it cannot be deceived. 176

M

MIracle-mongers. 171
Macarius his Daughter metamorphosed. 189
Melancholly, and the strange effects thereof. 190
Markes of false and true Prophets. 203
Masse derived of missing. 205
Mans sinne and his punishment shall bee proportionable, 221. his three places of being. 259
Mirth of this world, is but unpunished wickednesse. 257

N

NAmes given of events, 166. and otherwise, ibid. and the use of them, ibid. when wee heare our names, wee ought to remember our promise made in Baptisme. 168
Name of Prophet. 202
Nature is the decree of God divine pleasure. 255

O

OBedience paradoxall. 173
Omnipotency of God cryeth to us to bee thankefull, 182. and restraineth us from giving rash judgement. ibid.
Origen his foule error, that the Devils might be saved. 190
Oyle of holy Oyntment. 198
Office of the Iewish high Priest, 200. Office of the holy Ghost. 226
Originall sinne, not remitted in Baptisme. 249

P

PRivation of Baptisme. 168
Peace and doubting cannot dwell together. 176
Pride provoketh punishment. 187
Profession in words, and denyall in deeds encreaseth damnation. 195
Popish priviledges from Peter disproved, 199. 220. derogation from the Lords death. 204
Power equally given to Peter, with the other Apostles. 201
Peter his limits, ibid. his difference from the Popes. 246
Priviledge of Adoption in Christ, 206. vid. Adoption.
Penance by deputie. 233

R

REasons against the Masse, 204. and for what cause Pilate, under whom Christ suffered, is mentioned in the Gospell. 210
Reasons of the titles and names of the Church. 226

Reſurrection of Chriſt, with the fruit and uſe thereof, 213. and the vertue and power thereof. ibid.
Reading and meditating of good things, is a good preparation for the day of Iudgement, 223. what Readings and Meditations are fit for us. ibid.
Rome loſt in it ſelfe. 242
Remiſſion of ſinnes belongs to God onely, 248 and is given to the humble. 250

S

SAcraments, their Doctrine and uſe. 176
Satans three wayes to hinder the Goſpel. 183. hee can doe no hurt without Gods permiſſion, 188. he is the Father of lying miracles. 190
Salvation is from Chriſt onely. 194
Servants are comforted in the ſtrength of their Maſter. 206
Sects of the Papiſts. 230
Scripture the moſt ancient of all Antiquities. 239
Spirits of the dead walke not, 188. 189. how evill ſpirits can foretell things. 190
Sinne, and the ugline ſſe thereof, which without Chriſt his ſuffering, was not to bee aboliſhed. 209
Succeſſion in place, without ſucceſſion in faith. 241

T

TRuth and wiſedome of God. 178
Trinitie of the perſons, and and unity of the Godhead proved, 179. vid. Unity.
Thoughts of the heart are onely knowne to God. 190
Terror of the Iudge at the laſt day, 221. to the wicked, but not ſo to the juſt. 222

V

VSe of the Sacraments, 176. vid. Sacraments.
Unity of the Godhead, and Trinity of the perſons, proved, 179. vid. Trinity.
Unity of it ſelfe is no true marke of the Church, 228. it is to be judged by verity. 232
Vertue ſuperſtitiouſly placed by the Papiſts in the literall word Jeſus. 195
Ubiquity of Chriſt, argued. 215
Union of natures in the perſon of Chriſt, gives no ubiquity to his body. 217
Verity is the bond of unity. 230
Variance betwixt Heaven and Earth. 249

W

WAntonneſſe in ſpeech and geſture, betrayeth our heart to the Devill. 190
Worlds glory. 259

The end of the Table of the Catholike Faith.

A

VERY FRUIT-FVLL EXPOSITION OF THE COMMANDEMENTS,

BY WAY OF QVESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR GREATER PLAINNESSE.

Together with an Application of every one to the Soule and Conſcience of Man, profitable for all, and eſpecially for them that (being not otherwiſe furniſhed) are yet deſirous both to ſee themſelves, and to deliver to others ſome larger ſpeech of every point, that is but briefly named in the ſhorter CATECHISMES.

By the Right Reverend Father in GOD, GERVASE BABINGTON, late Biſhop of Worceſter.

Whereunto is newly annexed a Table, containing the principall Matters in this Booke.

PSALME 119. 59.

I have conſidered my wayes, and turned my feet into thy Teſtimonies.
I made haſt, and prolonged not to keep thy Commandements.

LONDON,
Printed by M. FLESHER.
1637.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE, HIS VERY SINGVLAR GOOD LORD AND MASTER,

HENRY EARLE OF PEMBROKE, LORD HARBERT of Cardiffe, Marmion, and S. Quintine, and of the moſt Honourable Order of the Garter, Knight : G.B. increaſe of all mercy and comfort in CHRIST JESUS for ever.

HE Lord knoweth, who ſearcheth my heart and reines (Right Honourable, and my very ſingular good Lord) that being placed in the Vniverſitie with ſo great content, both for profit, pleaſure, and the exerciſe of my Miniſtery in ſuch place, as it pleaſed God moſt mercifully to bleſſe it in, to my great comfort, I had little deſire to make change of that eſtate, ſo accompanied both with theſe and many other ſpeciall commodities, till it pleaſed him that hath his times and opportunities for all men, to direct mee to your Lordſhip, in ſuch ſort as he did, and there firſt of your ſelfe, and afterward of my Honourable good Lady, to make me heare ſo carefull, ſo Chriſtian, and ſo zealous a regard both of your ſelves, and your whole retinue, to be directed in the courſe that became the profeſſors of the Goſpell, and the enjoyers of theſe happy dayes under ſo famous and renowned a government, of ſo worthy, bleſſed, and gracious a Princeſſe. And then I muſt needs confeſſe, I felt a forcing reſolution after I had a while ſtriven with the loſſe of theſe forenamed benefits, with the farre ſeparation of my ſelfe from all my friends, and with the diſcomforts incident now and then even to the beſt ſervices. So was it (my good Lord) your zeale and affection to your God, that then firſt perſwaded me. And truly, the ſelf-ſame thing it was, that ever after retained me, more unable than many, but as willing as ever was any to the uttermoſt both of power and life to doe your Lordſhip ſervice. The very ſelf-ſame thing it is alſo out of all queſtion, that ſhall ever, above any worldly commodity that may be offered them, procure unto your Lordſhip, both in one place and other, thoſe that love vertue and upright dealing. For very well with themſelves will they ever imagine (as indeed it ſhould be) that where the Lord is feared and honoured as hee ought to bee, there faithfull ſervice will both be regarded, and conveniently rewarded, there men ſhall be judged according to proofe, and not according to prattles, there heate of affections ſhall not ſtirre to ſudden and undeſerved diſpleaſure, but conſcience to give every man his due tryall, ſhall finde out the innocency of the true dealer. And what ſhould I ſay ? There they will aſſure themſelves, every man ſhall be uſed with convenient incouragement, credit, and comfort, if his dealings doe deſerve the ſame, beſides many moe very ſpeciall vertues of a maſter fearing God. Wherefore, if I ſhould wiſh unto your Lordſhip in a thouſand termes many ſeverall and ſingular bleſſings, and afterward include them all in one :

truly it muſt be this, that you may ever know the God of your father, and ſerve him with a perfect heart and a willing minde: Know him I ſay, by learning what he willeth, and ſerve him by daily practiſing, as he enableth of that will. For thus to the Lord you ſhall become obedient, to your Prince faithfull, for your Country carefull, to your ſervants, that breake both body and braines in your affaires, and beare the brunt of many an unknowne toyle and hazard, comfortable and beneficiall, to thouſands that live under you, honourable and good, and to every man (in a word) ſo affected and diſpoſed, as they that are already in all dutifull right your owne, may ſo remaine: and they that are not, by ſo cheerefull uſage and honourable vertue may daily be added and won unto you. Wherefore (my good Lord) with all Chriſtian care continue your happy courſe in the wayes of the Lord, and what Solomon ſaith, remember often: Heare counſell and receive inſtruction (meaning from the Lord) for they ſhall make a man wiſe in time. Yea they ſhall ſo eſtabliſh a man in the eyes of the Lord, as that his ſeed ſhall inherit the earth, and his name never be blotted out. Continue alſo that Chriſtian care to other the deſolate flocks of the Lords people, that with ſo great and juſt praiſe your Honour hath ſhewed of late ſo many wayes. And amongſt all, or rather even above them all (as many ſpeciall cauſes binde me to wiſh) I moſt humbly and heartily beg the ſame to your Towne of Cardiffe, unable peradventure in many things, but unwilling I hope in nothing, to deſerve both favour and furtherance in all cauſes tending unto good. Amongſt whom your Lordſhip in zeale to their good hath left me, and to whom for your Lordſhips ſake I vow my ſelfe if I may doe them good. Yet not more to them than to the whole Countrey, and even the meaneſt member therein; they being all in generall ſo deare unto your Lordſhip as many private ſpeeches have declared: what my power enableth me unto, both for duty unto your Honour, and affection to themſelves, I truſt they ſhall ever finde in me, and as faithfull an heart withall as ever had ſtranger amongſt them. And if your Lordſhip ſhall vouchſafe thereunto your Honourable and loving aſſiſtance in their worldly cauſes when they have need, then may they ſay their affections are thrice well beſtowed upon your Honour, and their ſervice due ten thouſand times, if it were more. Preſently I have endeavoured, both for them and others, to lay downe a briefe collection of ſuch things concerning the Commandements of God, as in larger manner both before your Lordſhip and them were handled. And I preſume to offer the ſame to your Lordſhip both for my private duty, being bound, if ever was any, to be thankfull, and that alſo it comming unto them under the ſhadow and ſhield of your Lordſhips protection, whom they ſo reverence and honor, may be the more welcome and the better accepted of. For the Chriſtian Reader elſewhere, that ſhall weigh my drift, and conſider the place whereunto eſpecially I intend it, I aſſure my heart of his godly and loving acceptance, notwithſtanding the matter hath been handled by more able inſtruments by much, becauſe it is not in the ſame manner, and the Lord may be glorified in all mens gifts. Only therefore of your Lordſhip I now moſt humbly beg, that with wonted favour this ſmall travell may be accepted, and that under your Lordſhips name I may leave it to the world, as a ſpeaking witneſſe (when I am dead) of my thankfull heart for all your Honourable goodneſſe to me, which hath been ſuch, as I wiſh may encourage upon my ſpeech any that ever ſhall bee thereunto requeſted to ſucceed him in his place, who now enjoyeth it. So the Lord of power and mercy multiply his Spirit upon your Lordſhip, with all the bleſſed fruits of the ſame, and grant you ever that grace, that hath promiſe both of this life, and that which is to come, Amen.
From London this 1. of December.

Your Lordſhips moſt humble bounden to death,

GERVASE BABINGTON.

TO
THE RIGHT WORSHIP-
FVLL SIR EDVVARD MANXELL, SIR

EDVVARD STRADLING, Sir WILLIAM HARBERT, Knights: And to Maſter WILLIAM MATHEVV, and Maſter THOMAS LEVVIS, Eſquires: with all other Gentlemen in Glamorganſhire, that feare GOD:

G. B. wiſheth encreaſe of the ſame, to the benefit of the Church, and their owne everlaſting comfort.

SO often as I conſider (Right Worſhipfull) our happy dayes under the bleſſed government of a moſt gracious Princeſſe, and how we are become even a wonder, as it were, and an aſtoniſhment unto many Nations, for the mercies that we enjoy by her meanes: ſo often me thinke, even with melting hearts in a ſweet conceit, wee ſhould caſt our ſelves downe before the Lord, and make a double vow unto him. Firſt, that wee will with perfect hearts, and moſt willing mindes, know and ſerve ſuch a gracious God, as amidſt ſo many dangerous devices of intended overthrow to her perſon, ſo mightily preſerved her Majeſty, and ſo mercifully hath at this day ſet her over us, daily ſtill dealing both with her and us, according to his old loving kindneſſe and mercy, keeping her to us in deſpite of all the Caytifes on the earth. Secondly, that with hand and with heart, with body and bowels, and with eſtate, whatſoever the Lord ſhall give us within or without us, we will honor and obey, pray for, and preſerve to our powers amongſt us, ſo famous and renowned, yea, ſo wonderfull an inſtrument of all comfort and good unto us, in reſpect of other Princes of the Earth. But O the ſin of our ſoules, and the ſtains of our thankleſſe hearts, in both theſe duties ſo due ten thouſand times of us! For whom we ſhould know, we neglect to know, as his mercies bind us, our mighty God and heavenly Father. And whom we ſhould thus obey and honour, pray for, and praiſe God for day and night, with very weeping and woe, that we can be no more thankfull unto her, and for her our nurſing Mother, and moſt gracious Queene, her we diſobey in holes and in corners, (to ſay no worſe) and dead without feeling, not conſidering the bleſſing of her, we provoke both our God, and her gracious heart to diſpleaſure with us. What proofe this latter hath, and what unwiſhed matter to furniſh out a larger complaint, I ſpare to ſpeake, I rew to thinke it, there are witneſſes moe, than I would there were, that know it. Thoſe things which more beſeeme my Pen and Paper, I preſume unto your Worſhips to follow a little further: and firſt the neglect that aboundeth every where to furniſh the rooms alotted thereunto with ſufficient men, both for gifts and good will to diſcharge the duties of true Miniſters. A thing ever commanded, a thing ever needfull, and a thing in theſe dayes of ours, even above all dayes, required, both in thankfulneſſe to the Lord, and in care to have her Highneſs obeyed, which ariſeth with Religion, and ſo both Gods mercy and her Majeſty ſtill to remaine among us. For him that ſerveth us, and thus dealeth with us from day to day, doth not very ſenſe inſtruct us, we muſt ſerve againe, if we will enjoy him? And is this to ſerve him, to retaine unto our ſelves the wages, that he hath provided for ſufficient men, and to thruſt into his cloath we care not whom? to furniſh his harveſt with idle loyterers, and never to looke after, no, nor accept being offered, moſt painfull labourers? No, no, he knoweth it, that muſt judge it, it is not. Yea, men themſelves know it, if the Lord would give feeling, and ſtrength to defie that ſpirit of having, that cryeth within, and ſaith, reſerve it to thy ſelfe. Yet leſt any ſhould pretend the contrary, where I wiſh them well reſolved of this point, may it be lawfull for me, with your loving leaves, ſomething to lay downe in this behalfe, that I would wiſh him to conſider, who is not perſwaded of this duty, if I were to ſpeake with ſuch an one: Firſt, then, I would have him view the Word of God that ſhall ſtand and judge us all, when heaven and earth ſhall periſh; than the which Word nothing can be more contrary to this ſinne, if either we reſpect the time of the Law, or of the Goſpell: For in them both, this is ever delivered, and ever beat upon, that the people of God ſhould be taught, and men choſen out in ability, ſuch as the people might require the Law at their mouthes, though the meaſure and manner were divers, as it pleaſed God to give his gifts unto them. Which thing ever drew with it then, and at this day ſtill truly doth infer, a godly regard, and even a neceſſary conſcience, when any place is void, by the Lawes we live under alotted to that uſe, to furniſh it as ſufficiently as we poſſibly can and may for that uſe. Otherwiſe by us it commeth to paſſe, that the people are not taught. Now, this offence groweth either by negligence, or by covetouſneſſe. By negligence, when (not weighing or feeling the ſinne of it) we are drawne by affection, or kindred, or other mens ſuits, to beſtow ſufficient places upon inſufficient perſons. By covetouſneſſe, when to reſerve a portion to our ſelves, wee doe the like. Both which are grievous offences, both againſt God and our Countrey, and in the Word very plainly condemned. If the firſt be the cauſe, then crave I moſt heartily the conſideration of theſe, and the like concluſions. The Lord threatneth to the Watchman death, that warneth not his people, and ſaith he will have Their blood at his hands, becauſe he did not cry. Now, by me hath beene put in ſuch an one very careleſly and negligently for affection, or ſuch like, that though he would, yet for want of ability cannot cry: and alas! how then can I want my portion in that wrath of the Lord, that is threatned againſt all ſuch defaults? Secondly, as it is love in the Miniſter to his God, to feed his ſheepe, ſo it is aſſuredly in the Patron to cauſe them to be fed. Contrariwiſe, it is want of love in the Miniſter, if hee do not feed, and is it not as much in the Patron, if by his default it come to paſſe? Thirdly, it is a great fault we thinke, to give the calling to an unworthy one, and is it no fault to give the living to ſuch an one? Thus then we ſee how the word quickneth our conſciences in this behalfe, if we be not dead. And a number more reaſons might yet be brought, if I ſhould make a Treatiſe in a Preface. Only this one more I muſt needs remember, which me thinke ſhould awake any man alive in this matter. In the ſixth of Mark it is ſaid of Chriſt, That going out, and ſeeing a great multitude of people gathered together, he had compaſſion of them, becauſe they were like ſheepe without a Shepheard, and he went out and taught them many things. And in the Greeke it is more vehement, expreſſing as it were an aking of his heart, as we call it, or a yearning of his bowels, to ſee ſo pittifull a ſight, as ſo many people without a Teacher. Vpon which notable place I have uſed in my ſelfe to make two concluſions. Firſt, a comfort, then a feare. My comfort is this, that he which mourneth to ſee his people want the benefit of his Word, will give his people his Word if they ſeek it, and wiſh it, and where he hath vouchſafed it already there continue it, bleſſe it,

Ezek. 3.

Iohn 21. 15. Tit. 2.

Mar. 6.

it, and give it power if we pray. For otherwiſe, how ſhould it paine him to ſee it wanting? My feare is this, that if his heart ake to ſee the ſheepe deprived of a ſhepheard, he will aſſuredly be revenged even in great wrath of them that are the cauſers of it. And for Chriſt his ſake let it be conſidered. For as we live, wee may not alwayes looke to laugh, if we make our God to mourne. Thus then, if negligence be the cauſe that a Countrey is not furniſhed with ſome able Miniſters, mee thinke we may awake our hearts by the Word of the Lord, and weighing it well, receive from him ſome better feeling in ſo great a matter. But if covetouſneſſe bee the cauſe, and we greatly given to ſequeſter that benefit to our ſelves, ſaving onely ſome portion to one to beare the name, then marke wee againe the witneſſe alſo of the ſame Scriptures, againſt us, even in this. And to ſave mine owne labour, my judgement being young, heare I beſeech you the proofes and reaſons againſt this ſinne, by a godly and grave Divine intreating of this matter, laid downe unto my hands. Firſt, hee alledgeth againſt it the deſcription of a wicked Prince in the Booke of Samuel, amongſt whoſe evils this is named one, that hee will take the tythes and give them to his ſervants; concluding thereon, that if the King might not take the tythes to himſelfe, becauſe then they were due to the Prieſts by Gods owne order and commandement for the maintenance of his ſervice: Surely no private man now may doe it, ſo long as by authority the ſame are eſtabliſhed for the Miniſters maintenance and ſupport. Secondly, if in the Law he was accurſed that removed the mere ſtone of the field, becauſe hee did wrong in ſucceſſion to divers: ten thouſand times more is the removing of the Miniſters living, ſubject to the Lords wrath, becauſe both preſently and ſucceſſively it is hurtfull to a number moe, and in a greater matter. Thirdly, by the Prophet Malachy, the Lord complaineth in expreſſe termes, that the taking away of tythes and offerings from that end that they were appointed unto, was a robbing and ſpoyling of him, yea even ſuch a ſpoiling, as he would viſit with a great and grievous curſe. Now, if it were ſo then, all the world muſt confeſſe, it is no leſſe now, ſo long as authority ratifieth this meanes to maintaine the Miniſters, and therefore aſſuredly will have a ſharpe revenge. Fourthly, in the Goſpell, the Jewes alledge it unto Chriſt as an argument of love to them & their Nation in the Centurion, that he had built them a Synagogue, plainly inſinuating that they would have judged the contrary, if hee had ſpoiled their Synagogue of his maintenance. And Chriſt reprehendeth not this concluſion. Fiftly, if David the King ſtanding in ſo great diſtreſſe for water, yet would not drinke of the water of Bethleem, becauſe it was gotten with the danger of ſome few mens temporall lives: ſhould it not teach a great conſcience to any man in the world, that taſteth of God and his truth, and hopeth for comfort in another world, how he (not needing peradventure, but abundantly provided for otherwiſe by the mercy of his God) drinketh and eateth that which is gotten with apparent hazard of eternall life from the bodies and ſoules, God knoweth of how many? Truely (Right Worſhipfull) it ſhould, and the power of hell is not able to deny it: But ſuch is the meate and drinke, or other maintenance whatſoever, that wee reape by the Church, when it is due to another, for another purpoſe, and therfore you know the concluſion. Sixtly, all thoſe places in the Scriptures commanding and enjoyning the world to a maintenance, and ſufficient maintenance of able Teachers in it, doe plainly prove the ſinne of this, to ſequeſter to our ſelves the living allotted to them unleſſe ſome other equivalent, or ſufficient way bee taken for them by authority. Againe, if that grave and learned Father S. Auſten, was ſo highly offended, and ſo ſharpely rebuked a Gentleman in his time, for taking away his owne gift, which before he had given to the maintenance of his Church: would he not have beene a ſevere cenſor againſt them, think we, that ſhould have takē away what neither they nor any of theirs ever gave? If the Stories ſo commend the Noble Emperour Conſtantine for commanding goods taken from the Churches to bee reſtored to them againe, would they not have blotted him as well, if he himſelfe had beene a ſpoyler of the ſame? If the Romanes ſo dealt with Q. Fulvius, for uncovering a part

1 Sam. 8. 15.

Deut. 27. 17.

Mal. 3. 8.

Luke 7. 5.

1 Chro. 11. 10.

2 Cor. 9. Gal. 6, &c.

Poſsidon. in vita Aug. 10. 24.

Euſeb. li. 10. c. 5.

Tit. Livius l. 42.

part of Iunoes Temple, to cover an other Temple in Rome with the ſame titles, that they miſliked him, condemned him, told him Pyrhus, or Hanibal, would not have done ſo, told him it had beene too much to have done to a private mans houſe, an inferior place to a Temple; and in concluſion, forced him to ſend home thoſe tiles againe. May not ſuch as garniſh either themſelves or their houſes with Church livings, & leave neither teacher, nor almoſt tiles where both ſhould be; well conſider by it, what this people would have thought of them, if they had lived there? and what is the conceit of a people prophane, in reſpect of theirs that know and ſerve the Lord? Theſe then, and divers other reaſons, which for feare of length, I pretermit, alledgeth he there againſt this foule offence. Onely one place more I muſt needs remember, and it is a good one, to wit, how Balthaſar King of Babylon, himſelfe, his Princes, his Wives and Concubines, drinking and feaſting in the veſſels of Gold, taken from the Temple, even then eſpied the fingers of an hand, writing upon the wall before his face, That his Kingdome God had numbred and finiſhed, weighed him in the Ballance, and found him too light, and therefore divided and given his Government away to the Medes and Perſians. At which ſight his countenance changed, his thoughts were troubled, his loynes looſed, and his knees ſmote the one againſt the other. O Lord, that we could thinke of this Hand, and feare the ſentence of this Writing, as oft as we eate the Corne of the Barne, or ſolace our ſelves with any maintenance whatſoever, taken of our ſelves without authority, from the Temple. But I am too long. For mine owne part, I have ever contented my ſelfe with this reaſon, That, that which is enjoyed without warrant either of Gods Law, or mans Law, is unjuſtly enjoyed, and will aſſuredly, one way or other, have a ſcourge: but ſuch is the fruition of Eccleſiaſticall living, not altered from that uſe by the Magiſtrate, therefore unjuſtly enjoyed, and to our aſſured puniſhment. Now, that it hath neither warrant of God nor Man, it appeareth. For the Scriptures you have heard againſt it: and touching the Lawes of men, I have had it alſo from the Learned in them, that they condemne it. For to begin with the Common Law of this Land; Firſt, therein it is true, that an Advouſon, in reſpect of the Patron, is accounted no Aſſets to yeeld a recompence, becauſe it is not valuable. Secondly, the Writ of Quare impedit, for the Patron, hath theſe words in it: Quod permittat præſentari ad Eccleſiam quæ vacat, & ad indubitatam ſpectat donationem, which word (donation) eſt libera diſpoſitio. Thirdly, this Law ſaith, the Patron, hath but Ius donationis, and the Ordinary Ius admiſſionis: and therefore compelleth the Patron to beſtow it in a time, or elſe to loſe it by lapſe, apparantly therein denying him any leave to retaine it either in whole or part for ever to himſelfe. Fourthly, it doth affirme very pretily and ſignificantly that the true right, and ſimple propriety of the Church, is neither in Patron, Parſon, nor Ordinary, neither in any man living: but that the fee ſimple of it is alwayes in ſuſpence, and, as the very words of Law are, (in nubibus) affording thereby this good reaſon againſt this ſinne, that it is a great wrong for a man to make a commodity to himſelfe of that which Law cannot finde he hath, but is kept and preſerved by law as farre from mans poſſeſſing, as the Clouds are diſtant from our handling. Fiftly, this Law ſaith further, that in time of Vacation, both the fee and freehold of the Church is in ſuſpence, and in nubibus, and that then though both Patron and Ordinary with ſome conſent will by their grant charge the Church with any rent and penſion, that yet notwithſtanding the ſame charge is no otherwiſe of force againſt the Incumbent, but that he muſt perforce hold himſelfe contented, if he will have it, ſeeing hee cannot have the benefit otherwiſe than by the preſentation of the one, and admiſſion of the other: that is in plaine words, it alloweth not the alienation of any profits from the Incumbent, though both of them conſent. Sixtly, when this Common Law, thus hating this law we ſpeake of, was by the corruption of men abuſed in this point, and Patrons uſurping upon the Church, began to make gain by Symonie of their Advouſons & Preſentations, it was and is provided by Statutes and poſitive Lawes, with a paine and penalty therein appointed, that if

if any Incumbent come in by Symonie, then ipſo facto the Church is void, and all Bils and Bands and Deeds for the performance of any ſuch penſions be alſo void. Much more could the learned yet alledge even out of this Common law againſt this ſinne, I know if they were to handle it; but this may ſuffice in ſtead of more where conſcience is made of offending lawes, and the godly government of a Realme. Now, for the Eccleſiaſticall lawes, if I ſhall alſo note a little thence, manifeſt it is, and truly very worthy marking, how ſtrongly they alſo ſtand againſt this vice we ſpeake of. For firſt, by the very names they give to Patrons they overthrow it, terming them advocatos Eccleſiarum, Vicedominos, Cuſtodes, Gardianos, &c. all being names of fidelity, government, and carefull preſervation of the Church. For the word, Patronatus, doth not ſignifie Dominum in Eccleſia, but noteth very well, ſervitii ſollicitudinem. It is called Gratia, quod ex gratia vel gratis conferri debeant beneficia: alſo advocatia, becauſe they ſhould defend and tender the eſtate of the Churches whereof they be Patrons, as Advocates doe the cauſes of their Clients, and ſo for the other names mentioned even now before. And hereupon the law giveth them all due and poſſible reverence, even as Maſters from their ſervants, and fathers from their children. It giveth them preheminence both in the Church, and abroad, in ſitting, ſtanding, going, and ſuch like. It is provided likewiſe, that if theſe Patrons or their children fall into decay, they ſhall bee moderately maintained at the deſcretion of the Ordinary, by the Church goods, whereof they are Patrons: and this is the onely profit they are to take of the Church. They lay no ſervice nor bondage upon the Church. Tenetur etiam Patronus protegere Eccleſiam, & reparare, ſi minitetur ruinam, & de bono Sacerdote providere: that is, the Patron alſo is bound to protect the Church, and to repare it, if it be like to fall to ruine, and carefully to provide a good Miniſter. Marke it, Nam jus Patronatus, &c. For the patronage, ſaith the law, is ſuſpended, if the Patron preſent an unworthy one, yea, his right, for ever by that law, as ſome thinke, paſſeth to the Biſhop, and he ſhall never preſent more: but if not ſo, yet at the leaſt he ſhall be deprived of that turne, if he preſent an unfit man, even by the Law in this Land in force. Furthermore in theſe lawes there are ſo many notable rules, and, as it were, axioms or principles touching the duty of Patrons, as might with great profit and pleaſure bee noted, if I had not already too much paſſed the bounds of a Preface, in a deſire to prevaile ſomething with ſome in this matter. As patronus non poteſt præſentare ſeipſum, A Patron cannot preſent himſelfe, as God knoweth now many doe in effect. Againe, debet præſentare gratis, alias eſt Simonia: He muſt preſent freely, or elſe it is Symonie, and no excommunicate perſon or Symoniſt ſhal be a Patron to preſent. Patronus non eſt vere Dominus Eccleſiæ, &c. The Patron is not the Lord of the Church, but as it were an Advocate and Defender, neither may he adminiſter the goods of the Church. Ius Patronatus nullum jus proprietatis Patrono tribuit: The right of Patronage giveth no propriety to the Patron. A notable ſaying. Againe, Patronus facere poteſt, & debet, &c. The Patron both may and ought to take heed that the fruits of the Church doe not goe to any other uſe. Alſo that permiſſion of the Ordinary by thy Law to take any Oath, if hee will, of every Incumbent for his cleare entrance, if there were nothing elſe in the world againſt it, doth ſtrike a blow to the ſoules of them that ſo offend, and that a great one. What ſhould I note that which yet is moſt worthy noting in this Law, to wit, that Venditio juriſpatronatus prohibita eſt, niſi univerſitas quædam prædiorum, cui hoc jus accedat, diſtrahatur. That is, that the right of Patronage may neither be bought nor ſold, nor paſſe in ſpeciall words in any alienation, but in generall only, with the land whereunto it is appertaining. For the ſaid Law admitteth no Patronage in groſſe. Or thoſe expreſſe words againe, donatio & permutatio permittitur, not venditio, I warrant you. What ſhould I note the moſt exact ſtraitneſſe of theſe Lawes in making the very mind of the Patron coveting reward of the gift of his Church, as Symonie before God, which they call mentalem Symoniam? With a number ſuch like notable rules and places. So that we ſee even thoſe lawes alſo deteſt it, and condemne it.

By right of patronage ariſeth to the Patron, Honos, Onus, and utilitas, write the Canoniſt, what utility you ſee.

C. ex literis. C. de jur. C. cum ſæculum. Extra de jure patronatus.

it. And now then to conclude this matter, if I thinke there is a God, and a day of judgement to come for mee and all my doings, what ſhould my heart miniſter to maintaine me in this evill, when God and man be againſt it? But why ſhould I bee thus tedious in this matter? Truly, that it might appeare, if God ſo will, how farre the corruptions wherein ſome ſleepe, as in no offences, differ from the Lawes of God and man, and from ſincerity of former times and ages. But againe, why unto you (Right Worſhipfull) ſhould I write ſo much? Truly, that by your godly care, conſcience and endeavour (having the places that you have) this great wound of your countrey may by little and little be relieved, and better proviſion daily made for the winning of that good, that bringeth with it ten thouſand bleſſings promiſed by the Lord. Which care and Chriſtian conſideration (as places fall) I moſt heartily crave in the name of Jeſus Chriſt, unto whoſe ſervice I am called, both for his glory, your owne diſcharge, and the benefit of that place, which I wiſh may ever be, as the bleſſed of the Lord. I cannot be thought to plead any benefit for my ſelfe, becauſe I want the tongue, and therefore I am more bold. But now I ceaſe to follow it any further. The ſecond thing that I greatly rue our want in, is the carefull and good bringing up of children in learning and vertue, whileſt they are fit: Which how it wanteth for want of Schooles amongſt us, would God I ſaw no more, than I had ability (without charge to any) to redreſſe: But what wanteth in me, aboundeth in you, and might it pleaſe the Lord, to give will to your ability, in this alſo to promote his glory, and to benefit thouſands in your countrey, truly his heart hath mercy to accept it kindly, and his hand hath bleſſings to reward it richly. Other things alſo yet more there bee, which theſe happy dayes of peace would have us carefull of. But ſome other times ſhall ſerve to name them, and encreaſe of grace ſtirre up to doe them. For this time therefore I leave off to trouble your Worſhips any further, beſeeching you moſt humbly and heartily to conſider the mercies of the Lord which we all enjoy, by his Word, by her Majeſty, by moſt happy helpes about her, by freedome of our conſciences, by plenty and peace, by health and great comfort a thouſand wayes; and in thankfulneſs for them all, to vouchſafe your aſſiſting hearts and hands to theſe duties ever, that may long provoke the Lord our God to be thus good and gracious to us. Of which number are theſe that I now have named, the preaching of his Word, & the carefull bringin up of children in good letters. For my ſelfe can doe no more, either for my duty to this honourable Lord, to whom I owe ſo much, or for all the goodneſſe wherewith your ſelves and many others in the Country ſo lovingly and liberally have encouraged me, but vow my ſelfe to you at your direction, with any paines in my power whileſt I live, to doe you ſervice. And that I doe with as deſirous an heart to the good of every one, as ever had ſtranger in the place. The Lord in mercy now multiply his Spirit upon you, give your helpe to mee, and confirme my paines to you, that his Name may be knowne upon earth amongſt us, and his ſaving health in everlaſting comfort enjoyed of us. London the firſt of December.

Your Worſhips bounden in the Lord ever,

GERVASE BABINGTON.

TO THE GODLY READERS, AND ESPECIALLY TO THEM AMONGST WHOM THIS Author and my ſelfe exerciſe our Function.

IT hath pleaſed God (good Reader) to uſe my Miniſtery, not in one, but in moe places in this maner, ſtill to ſucceed the Author of this Treatiſe, to water that he hath planted, to labour in the harveſt, whereof he caſt the ſeed; to feed, and further to bring on thoſe, of whom he was the ſpiritnall Father, and by the immortall ſeed of Gods Word, firſt begat them; and ſtill to enter upon his labours, and goe forward with his beginning: Alwayes to my great helpe and comfort, (God knowing otherwiſe my wants and weakneſſe) the eaſilier to wade there where he had broken the ice, the plainlier to goe on, and lead others, where he had beaten the path, and more readily to build upon, and reare up, where he had laid the foundation, and ſquared the frame, and with leſſe paines to keepe a going that which he had moved, and ſet a going. God having thus dealt mercifully with me in my Miniſtery, & by the hand of this author thus holpen me; I thought my ſelf in duty bound, in reſpect of this courſe which God hath taken with me, (and eſpecially by his meanes) to give to thee ſome teſtimony of this his worke for thy further profit, and withall to him ſome witnes of my good will. Supposing my ſelf, in reſpect of the former cauſe, as fit to doe this as another, and knowing the effect, and having reaped the profit of theſe his labors, and daily reaping it, being and abiding in the place where this ſeed was caſt, I thought I ought to doe as willingly, & as readily as any other. If for no other cauſe, yet to cõmend this eſpecially to them to bring forth further fruit among whõ it was firſt ſown, and in whoſe hearts I doubt not, but it took root now long ſince. An eſpeciall commendation of this worke, if I would take that way, might be d awne from the workman of it moſt plentifully from his ſtocke and kindred, education, and ſuch like; which becauſe it is rare fruit on ſuch trees, to ſome may make it ſeeme the better: but I paſſe over theſe ſhews and outward leaves to deck it with, it having enough in it ſelf to commend it, leſt if I ſhould long ſpeake of this colour and grace, I ſhould ſpeak the leſſe of him, or of the thing it ſelf, minding not to ſpeak much of either, and but little in all. And as I paſſe the ſtock from whence this graft was taken, ſo will I not ſtand to ſhew you where it was ingrafted and planted, in what Vniverſity, in what Colledge, what root he took, what ſufficient time he grew, how he ſpread there, and what liking, which would make this fruit to many, not without cauſe to reliſh the better. But to come that which commeth nearer to the bringing forth, and producing of this worke, when he was firſt planted by a Fellowſhip in that famous Coll. of the holy and undivided Trinity, in Cambridge, wholly, and moſt eſpecially conſecrated to the ſtudy of him and his knowledge, whoſe name it beareth: ſo ſtraight he tooke himſelfe to that ſtudy, wherby he might be moſt ſerviceable to Gods Church, and ſome tryall firſt had of his gifts, as it were avowed himſelfe a man to the Lord, to ſerve in his tabernacle: Not long after, that betimes he might begin to be profitable, and bee profitable long; God touching his heart, he tooke on him the Miniſtery, and ſo mercifully God dealt with him, that withall he placed him in one certain charge not farre from his Colledge; that he might have where to ſow, be ſtill at hand to ſow, and know both what, and how to ſow, and to his comfort ſee the growing up, and fruit of it. Now having there painfully labored by the ſpace of almoſt two years, & ſeen the effect of that promiſe, with what meaſure ye mete, ſhal be meaſured to you againe, and unto them that have, ſhall more be given, that though he caſt it in with full hand, and ever a zealous heart to doe good in a continued courſe; yet God ſo bleſſed it, that the harveſt over-abounded his labour, and exceeded his hope; and that little towne was a candle light, ſet on a candle-ſticke, and a Tower upon the top of a hill. When God to his comfort had thus encouraged him in his Law, he by great means calleth him from this little town (where he had no paſtoral charge) to a greater charge, and in reſpect of the change and dignity of the place whither he was called, it was as it were, from Tecoa to Bethel, from preaching in ſome uplandiſh and country towne in the wilderneſſe of Judea, to Herods Court, or as indeed in many reſpects, it well may be ſaid, by a Sergius Paulus unto his houſe. When he had there continued now a whole yeare and more, to the good reformation and great benefit of that moſt honourable Family; it pleaſed God that his Sergius Paulus leaving as it were Nazareth, went and dwelt for a time in Capernaum, which is neare the Sea, in the borders of Zabulon, lon, and Nepthalin, beyond Jordan; in Galilee of the Gentiles, out of the borders of Paleſtina. I hope I may without offence allude unto that place, in all points it ſo fitly anſwereth: where a while abiding by his means God wrought, that the people which before in compariſon ſate in darkneſſe, ſaw great light, & to thẽ which ſate in the region and ſhadow of death, light was riſen up. Of this place, & this people, he having yet further cõpaſſion, they being as ſheep without a ſhepheard, wandring in the mountains, and the harveſt there great, and the labourers few; the Lord moved his heart to remaine there, and wrought this in the heart of his moſt honourable Lord; himſelf to forgoe him, and leave him there, for the further increaſe of God his Church, & for the tender love he bare, and good he would to this people; where, what pains had been taken, & good hath been done, it is by more witneſſed than I need make relation: and this worke, and ſome others of this Authors; ſince that time come forth, give open teſtimony, though I hold my tongue: I would not have ſaid thus much of the man, if the places themſelves, of which I have ſpoken, were not ready to ſay and ſet down more than I have ſaid; and this have I ſaid, that God in him may be glorified, they among whom he liveth, for him thankefull, and to admoniſh him what proceedings theſe beginnings require. The worke it ſelfe might many wayes beſide be commended, the matter and principall ground of it is the Law of God, brought from the higheſt heaven, given by God himſelf to his ſervant Moſes, with thunder and lightnings, and the ſound of the Trump exceeding loud, on Mount Sinai, the mountaine all on ſmoak; the Lord deſcending upon it in fire, &c. and all the mount trembling exceedingly; given to all the Iſrael of God, appertaining to all men, containing infinite bleſſings for the hearers and doers of it, and innumerable and intollerable curſes and plagues for the breakers thereof, either by negligence or contempt. This principall, not laid upon with any borrowed colours to hide the ground, but the workmanſhip and engraving of it, is out of the matter it ſelfe, ſo that ſtill the ground and marble thereof may appeare, and dealt withall in this manner fitly anſwering to the ſubject matter, delivered as it were, in thunder, with a ſpirit as hot as fire, zealous with judgement, ſetting an edge by received ſtrength, even upon this raſor. The place alſo, and perſons where, and for whom this worke was both made and uttered, may adde much grace unto it. In a moſt honourable Family, and for it, and with good liking, and profit there: and commonly men like that the better, which liketh them well, and that which profiteth ſuch, profiteth many. If it wet the mountaines, it will water the valleyes; and if it be ſweet oyntment for the head, it cannot be but acceptable to the reſt of the parts, and to the borders of the garment: The dew from Hermon, and the Mountains of Sion, trickleth downe ſweetly upon the valleyes about. And if this make it profitable to others, becauſe delivered here, then muſt it be moſt profitable to this Family it ſelf, for which it was made, and firſt for it alone, and now is by me eſpecially to it commended. It is fruit of your own ground, the voyce of your owne Shepheard, the ſound of your proper Trumpet, and therefore you muſt both know it, and like it the better, and thereby be warned the ſooner. It is a leſſon, which already you have learned, and therefore it may and muſt be more ready than others. It is not now firſt commended to you, but againe recommended to your eyes, which heretofore hath beene ſent by your eares to your minde, and to your hearts, and by a great vehemency and zeale of ſpirit, wherewith this Anthour aboundeth. Which although ſo much, and with ſuch life and moving; will not now altogether appeare in this writing, as when it was with the lively voyce and earneſt ſpirit delivered, becauſe that God promiſeth to that, the more eſpeciall bleſſing, yet ſhall you eaſily ſee, that it is a worke comming out of the ſame fountaine; a print ſtamped with the ſame ſeale; and ſparkles flying out of the ſame flame. Which the more they ſhal inflame you, which ought moſt to inflame you, you having beene already with them ſet on fire, the more they ſhall heate others, and by your example be profitable to all, which is that the Author wiſheth, and I his well-willer heartily pray for to him who is the able worker of it: to whoſe eſpeciall grace (good Reader) in reading this worke, to direct thee, I commend thee.

Mat.4.13,4.

Exod.19. 16, &c.18,&c.

Thine in the Lord Jeſu,

ABRAHAM CONHAM.

CERTAINE PROFITABLE QVESTIONS AND ANSVVERS VPON The COMMANDEMENTS.

The first Question.

HATH there ever beene in the world amongst men some Religion?

Answ. Yea, for to make all men inexcusable, the Lord hath ingrafted in the mind of every one a secret sure perswasion, that there is a God: who as he made man, so is he of man to be served and obeyed. By which secret perswasion it came to passe, that there was never from the beginning of the world any Region, Towne, or House, wherein was not some Religion.

Quest. Then is not Religion a policy of man, to keepe people in obedience?

Answ. No, It were horrible to thinke so, for it is plaine that Religion is of nature and by nature, though true Religion be not.

Quest. How prove you that?

Answ. First, very reason teacheth it: For what policie could ever have made man, the Lord of all creatures, fall downe and worship the vilest creatures, unlesse there had beene something before in his nature to leade him to it? Secondly, it is plainly proved in the example of Pilate, who assoone as hee heard that Christ was God, even by very nature feared and stood in awe of him: And by the example of Gamaliel, with divers others. Iohn 19.8. Acts 5.39.

Quest. Seeing then that there hath beene ever in the world some Religion, because it is naturall, whether is there but one or many?

Answ. There can be but one true Religion, but of false there have beene and are divers, and ever will be, till Christ come againe unto Judgement.

Quest. What false Religion can you name?

Answ. There hath been and is false Religion in the Church, and out of the Church. In the Church, Popery: Out of the Church, the religion of the Iewes, of the Gentiles, and of the Turkes.

Quest. What is the Religion of the Iewes?

Answ. They obstinately denying that Christ is yet come, worship God still with sacrifices, burnt offerings, and other ceremonies of Moses Law. Hist. Magdeburg.

Quest. What the Gentiles?

Answ. Their religion is a confused worshipping of all things: for so we reade in the 14. of the Acts of the Apostles, in the 17. and in the 19. And the Poet saith of them thus:

Quicquid humus, pelagus, cœlum mirabile gignit
Id dixere deos, colles, freta, flumina, flammas:
That is,
What so the earth, the sea, the heaven doth wonderfull beget,
As hils, seas, flouds, and flames of fire, for gods that they have set.

Quest. What the Turkes?

Answ. Their religion is a masse of all Heresies, denying Christ to be God, and vainely worshipping with mans devices.

Quest. What is true Religion?

Answ. True Religion is the true worshipping of God, and the keeping of his Commandements.

Quest. Whence is it to be learned?

Answ. Onely out of the written word of God, and not out of mans head or writings.

Quest. How is that proved?

Answ. Both by Scripture and reason sufficient.

Queſt. What Scripture?

Anſw. Eſay 29.13. God threatneth to plague them, becauſe their feare or religion towards him was taught by the precept of men. *Micah.*4.2. He ſhall teach us, and we will walk in his paths. *Dan.*9.10. Daniel confeſſeth, that becauſe the people obeyed not Gods voice, therefore all their worſhip was ſinne.

Queſt. What reaſon?

Anſw. By many might it bee proved, but theſe may ſuffice. Firſt, whatſoever pleaſeth God muſt bee according to his will; but his will is onely knowne in his Word, and therefore if our religion pleaſe God, it muſt be according to his Word. Secondly, if whatſoever be not of faith, is ſinne, and faith onely is out of the Word, then what religion ſoever is not out of the Word, is ſinne. Thirdly, the practice of Gods Church hath ever beene both to reforme religion, and to confute hereſies out of the Word, and by the Word: and therefore the ſame muſt ever bee the ground of our religion.

Queſt. How is it to be learned out of the Word?

Anſw. By hearing it preached, by reading it our ſelves, by prayer, by conference one with another, by meditations, and by this exerciſe of Catechiſing,

For the other, they are uſuall meanes indeed, but this manner of Catechiſing it is a new device not knowne to our old Fathers. No, it is no new device, but an old cuſtome and ancient, begun as ſoone as ever God had a Church, and continued ever ſince.

Queſt. How may that be proved?

Anſw. Firſt, in the fourth of Geneſis it appeareth, that even Adam the firſt man uſed it to his ſonnes, teaching them to worſhip God with Sacrifices, or elſe they could never have done it. Againe, we ſee Abraham uſed it to his houſhold, and God commended him for it. For if hee had not by this exerciſe well inſtructed his ſervants before, would they ever have ſuffered him to cut away their fore-skins? In many places alſo beſide, did God flatly command all parents to uſe it to their children. In the ſixt to the Hebrews mention is made of the parts of the Catechiſme then uſed; the ancient Fathers have carefully travelled in this exerciſe, and all well ordered Churches have ever had their Catechiſmes, which we alſo have and reade, therefore no new device.

Queſt. What be the parts of the Catechiſme?

Anſw. The parts of the Catechiſme are theſe two generally, Doctrine, and Diſcipline, and under Doctrine theſe foure contained:

To wit,
- The Law of God, a ſumme whereof is in the ten Commandements.
- Faith, a ſumme whereof is in the the twelve Articles.
- Prayer, a forme whereof is the Lords Prayer.
- The Sacraments.

Of theſe parts in order afterwards: Now to ſome queſtions in your booke. And firſt.

Queſt. What is the chiefeſt thing that every one ought to be moſt carefull of ſo long as they live?

Anſw. Every one ought to be carefull of theſe two points: firſt, and chiefly, how to be ſaved in the day of Judgement, before Gods judgement ſeat, and ſo to come to life everlaſting. Secondly, how to live according to Gods holy will during our life. In which two points wholly ſtandeth the glory of God, ſo much as of man ought to be ſought for.

Queſt. How may the firſt be proved?

The firſt reaſon drawne of the vanity of all things.

Anſw. The great vanity of all earthly things which men ſo hunt after, doth ſhew, that our care ſhould not bee ſo much of theſe matters as it is, but rather how to have our ſoules ſaved, when all theſe ſhall have their end. For conſider even the chiefeſt deſires of men ſeverally, and ſee how in the attaining of them there is no ſtayed comfort, and yet often doe men faile after much endeavour, and not attaine to them.

Queſt. What chiefe deſires of men can you name unto me?

Mirth and ioy.

Anſw. Mirth and joy: a light and a cheerefull heart is greatly wiſhed and ſought for of all men, by Muſicke, by Jeſters, by ſports and Players, by much coſt and many meanes as they can, and are able: neither is this ſimply to be condemned in all: yet heare what ſentence the Spirit of God hath given of it by the mouth of his ſervant, who tried the ſame, and let his experience be our knowledge: I ſaid to my heart, ſaith hee, goe too now, I will prove thee with joy, therefore take thou pleaſure in pleaſant things, and behold this alſo is vanity: I ſaid of laughter thou art madde, and of joy, what is this that thou doſt? And in another place, Better it is to goe into the houſe of mourning, than of feaſting, becauſe this is the end of all men, and the living ſhall lay it to his heart. Anger is better than laughter, for by a ſad looke the heart is made better. The heart of the wiſe is in the houſe of mourning, but the heart of the fooles, is in the houſe of mirth.

Eccleſ.2.1.

7.4.

Mille parit luctus mortalibus una voluptas.
For every joy that man doth here poſſeſſe,
A thouſand woes his minde doe dayly preſſe.

The ſecond, Riches.

Secondly, to take up riches alſo in this world, and to poſſeſſe great wealth, it is a thing endevoured almoſt of all. Happy is he, and wiſe accounted, who can faſteſt attaine unto it, yet heare and and note the ſpeech of S. Iames amongſt numbers moe to the ſame end: Go to now, ſaith he, ye rich men, weepe and howle for your miſeries that ſhall come upon you, your riches are corrupt, and your garments moth-eaten, your gold and ſilver is cankered, and the ruſt of them ſhall witneſſe againſt you, and ſhall eat your fleſh as it were fire. To build and inhabite great and goodly houſes, how many bewitched with vanity, delight in it, and with much care and coſt apply themſelves unto it? yet ſee they, or may ſee the ſpeech of Salomon upon experience, ſaying, I have made me great works, I have built me houſes, I have planted me vineyards, I have made me gardens and orchards, and planted in them trees of all fruit, &c. Yea even whatſoever mine eyes deſired, I with held it not from them, neither withdrew I my heart from any joy: then I looked on all my workes that my hands had wrought, and on the travell that I had laboured to doe, and behold all is vanity, and vexation of the ſpirit, and there is no profit under the Sun. When it ſhall be ſaid to them, as it was to the purpoſing Builder in the Goſpel: Thou foole this night ſhall they take away thy ſoule: then may it alſo follow, and fitly be demanded, whoſe ſhall theſe ſtately houſes be? Thus either may they know the vanity of their dealing, but yet will not: or elſe doe they know it, but regard it not.

Iames 5.1.

Building.

Eccleſ 2.4.

Luke 12.20.

Apparell againe is another of the raging deſires of many: Even a world it is to ſee how all, as dead, do taſte no ſin in it, but ſpend and ſpare not what poſſibly may be gotten to beſtow on it, yet what beginning had it? Was it not then invented, when man had ſinned, grievouſly offended God, and caſt himſelfe away both body and ſoule? Seeing then in our integrity it was not uſed, but after ſin beſtowed on man to hide his ſhame withall, what may it ever beate into us, but our rebellion againſt the Lord, our ſin and curſed diſobedience? How ſhould the ſight of it, and uſe of it humble us, and not puffe us up, ſeeing it plainly telleth us, wee are not as we were when no apparell was worne, and yet no ſhame thereby? Were it not monſtrous pride, if a redeemed priſoner, conditionally that he ſhould ever weare an halter, ſhould wax proud of his halter? Mans apparell is the badge of a ſinner, yea of a condemned and curſed ſinner, and therefore the pride of it, and the delight in it, no doubt very monſtrous before the Lord, and hatefull. If every ſilken ſute and gorgeous gowne in England ſhrouded under it a ſaved ſoule, and a ſanctified body in the ſight of God, O happy then England of all the Nations under heaven! But if under ſuch garded garments may, and doth lodge a body and ſoule abhorred of the Lord, that in the day of wrath ſhall find no favour; then is it not apparell that ought to be ſought after, but in the day of Judgement how he may be ſaved. What ſhould I ſay of favour and credit with great Eſtates in the world, of countenance and authority? O how doe men deſire it, and ſeeke it, ſue and ſerve for it, their care both day and night is how to attaine the faſteſt to it, and yet what more tickle than the ſtate hereof, if God gave us hearts to marke it? For how ſoone faded the credit of David, with his wavering maſter Saul? How ſuddenly changed the liking of that King into cruell hatred of a faithull ſervant and ſonne in law? Haman as it were to day ſet at the Kings Table, where none but the King and Queene were, the next day quite out of favour, and hanged up full high. What credit had Ioſeph with his Maſter, when he committed all things to him that ever he had, ſaving his wife, to be at his direction? Yet even in a moment without cauſe falſly ſlandered, all credit loſt, and he clapt cloſe up in priſon. Many ſuch examples hath the Word, and all Hiſtories; and therefore truely ſaid he it, whoſoever ſaid it, as the Counter, ſo is the Courtier, for that ſtandeth even now for a thouſand pounds, and by and by through a little remove but for a halfepeny; and ſo he, to day in all glory, to morrow in little or none. Yet not more the Courtier, than even every man in his place & ſervice, to day truſted, to morrow ſuſpected, to day loved, to morrow miſliked, to day with deſire entertained and made of, to morrow as needleſſe caſt off & contemned. Fickle therefore is the worldly favour, and greater good there is for men to ſeek after.

Apparell.

Credit and favour with the world.

1 King. 18.

Heſter 7.

Gen 39.

Great matches in mariage for their children, another of the dayly deſires of worldly men. This they ſeeke, this they covet, this day and night they beate their heads about. Yet daily examples bee before their faces, of ſorrow and torment not to be expreſſed, growing to Parents by ſuch proud and greedy attempts, beſide the continuall griefe the ſon or daughter, ſo beſtowed, often riſeth and goeth to bed withall. Therefore I ſay, to go no further, ſince theſe uſuall deſires of men in this world are often not attained unto their liking, though greatly laboured for, and yet if they be attained even in great meaſure, have no certaine or ſure comfort in them, but all the pleaſure in them, and by them, quickly fadeth away, ſtrongly it proveth, that our chiefe care ſhould not be of theſe things, but rather what our caſe ſhall be in another world, when all theſe things ſhall have their end, which is the matter I have rehearſed them for. Another proofe of the ſame may this be, the revealed will of God the Lord teſtifieth, hee would have all men ſaved, and come to the knowledge of his truth; hee would not the death of a ſinner, &c. therefore unleſſe wee alſo ſet our care to the ſame end, namely, how we may be ſaved in the day of Judgement, we oppoſe our ſelves not onely againſt our owne good, but even againſt the Lords will, we ſtrive with our God, and we ſhall ſurely reape the reward of ſuch as rob him of his creatures.

Mariages.

The ſecond reaſon to prove that our chiefe care ſhould bee how to be ſaved.

Thirdly, the horror of Hell, and condemnation, prove that our care to bee ſaved ſhould bee great. For what meane thoſe fearefull names of hell, of priſon, chaines of darkneſſe, the lake burning with fire and brimſtom, the depth, pitch and brimſtone, weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, the worme that never dieth, the fire that never goeth out, with a number ſuch like, I ſay what meane they, or why hath the Spirit of God ſet them down? but to ſtrike a terror into us of damnation, and conſequently thereupon a true care to be ſaved?

The third.

The fourth. Fourthly, the unſpeakable and endleſſe comfort that there ſhall be had, with all the children of God, Patriarches, Prophets, Apoſtles, Martyrs, yea with the Lord himſelfe, and all his Angels, with Chriſt our Saviour and Lambe ſlaine for us, who ſhall wipe all teares from our eyes, doth cry upon us with ſhriking ſound, now while wee have time, to uſe our time to ſee mercy, and ſeeke mercy, to embrace it and take it, offered to ſuch good unto us, and never in ſecurity paſſing our opportunity, to be cauſes that then we ſhall heare theſe words, Depart ye wicked into endleſſe woe. What an honour would I thinke it, if the Prince among a great multitude ſhould ſpie me out, call me to him, embrace me, ſpeake kindly to me, take mee with him, place mee by him, and ſo forth? How would my heart dance hereat, and all men talke of my good hap? Now is the paſſing of a mortall Prince on earth, like the comming of Jeſus Chriſt in the cloudes? Is the honour they can give comparable to that the Lord of lords ſhall give to his Elect? O my heart feeleth what my pen cannot write, there is no compariſon betwixt the perſon, the places, the preferments; and therefore if the one ſo joy me that for it I would take any paines, thrice dead is my heart within me, if to obtaine the other it be not carefull.

The fifth. Laſtly, the examples of care continuall and great ever in Gods children, how they might ſerve him and pleaſe him, that hereafter they might ſit with him, and never part from him, ought mightily to perſwade us to bee like unto them in this endeavour, their labours, their watchings, their ſufferings, all ſhot but at this end, the glory of the Lord, and their owne ſalvation, and how great were they? What ſpeeches of deſire, even above all treaſure, to be ſaved in the great day, have they uttered? And ſhall wee not follow them? God forbid. This therefore proved unto us is the firſt point of a Chriſtian man and womans care, namely, that it ought to bee this, how they ſhould be ſaved in the day of Judgement, and ſo come to life everlaſting.

Queſt. How is the ſecond point proved unto us, namely, that in the meane time, ſo long as we live in this world, we ought to be carefull to live according to Gods holy will?

Our election proveth it. Epheſ.1.4. Our creation proveth it. Epheſ.2.10. Our redemption proveth it. Luke 1. Our iuſtification proveth it. Rom.6.2.

Anſw. Surely it is proved very ſtrongly unto us, both by our Election, Creation, Redemption, Juſtification and Vocation, if we will marke them. For why hath the Lord elected us to eternall joy in Chriſt Jeſus? that we might conclude liberty thereon to ſinne at our pleaſure, as many wicked ſpirits reaſon? No, no. But let the Apoſtle be judge, and tell us why? who ſaith, He hath choſen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him in love. So ſaith he of our creation alſo, that wee are the Lords workmanſhip created in Chriſt Ieſus to good workes, which God hath ordained that we ſhould walke in them. And of our redemption S. Luke plainely ſpeaketh, that we are delivered out of the hands of our enemies, that we ſhould ſerve him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our life. Our juſtification hath ever joyned with it inſeparably, the grace of ſanctification, and they cannot be parted. For, how ſhall we, ſaith the Apoſtle, that are dead to ſin, live yet therein? &c. as followeth in the place. Laſtly, of our vocation the Apoſtle S. Peter ſaith thus: As he that hath called is holy, ſo be you holy in all manner of converſation. So that we ſee thereby all theſe meanes proved unto us, that wee ought as long as wee live to bee carefull of this, that wee behave our ſelves according to the will of the Lord, which is the ſecond point whereof in your queſtion you demanded ſome confirmation.

Queſt. But how can we know we are diſcharged before Gods Iudgement ſeat?

Anſw. Your booke anſwereth you, that we can never know how we be diſcharged before the judgement ſeat of God, untill ſuch time as we know our owne miſerable eſtates, by reaſon of the greatneſſe of our ſinne, and the horrible puniſhment which we deſerve for the ſame. And the proofes your booke uſeth are plaine to inferre this concluſion: For doth a man ſeeke to the Phyſitian that hath no need of health, either to bee procured or preſerved by his meanes? No, our own experience doth approve the ſpeech of Chriſt to be true, when he ſaid, The whole have no need of the Phyſitian, but the ſicke. For indeed it is the diſeaſed that take care to be helped. It is the travelling and heavy laden ſoule that ſigheth to be refreſhed. It is the ſinner that thinketh of all ſinners he is the chiefeſt, which longeth for pardon. And to end, as Chriſt came not to call the righteous, but the ſinners to repentance, ſo aſſuredly it is the ſinner, I meane he that indeed feeleth the weight of ſin, and knoweth his own miſerable eſtate by reaſon of it, and the puniſhment due unto it, I ſay it is that man and that woman, that ſeeks what way to be diſcharged, and none elſe.

Matt.9.12. Matt.11.14. Matt.9.13.

Queſt. And how do we know the greatneſſe of our ſin, and the horrible puniſhment due to the ſame?

Anſw. Wee know it, ſaith the booke, by the Law of God rightly underſtood, the ſumme whereof is contained in the ten Commandements. For, by the Law commeth the knowledge of ſin, ſaith S. Paul, and reade the 7. Chapter from the 7. verſe to the 13. and marke it. Fifely, then followeth the firſt part of my diviſion of the Catechiſme before, to wit, the Law.

The Booke. Queſt. What is the firſt Commandement?

Anſw. Thou ſhalt have none other gods but me.

Queſt. What is the meaning of this Commandement?

Anſw.

Anſw. The Lord ſtraitly chargeth us in this Commandement, that we worſhip God alone. Which worſhip ſtandeth in foure points. Firſt, that wee love God above all. Secondly, that wee feare God above all. Thirdly, that we make our prayer to none but to God. Fourthly, that we acknowledge God alone to be the guider and governour of all things, of whom we receive all the benefits that we have, and therefore that we truſt and ſtay upon him alone.

Queſt. Can we doe any of theſe things unleſſe we know God?

Anſw. No, it is impoſſible, for all theſe duties ſpring of the knowledge of God, and the more we know him, the more we love him, the more we feare him, and every way ſerve him.

Queſt. And what is the firſt point of the knowledge of God?

Anſw. To know that there is a God, without which knowledge, ſaith the Apoſtle, no man can come unto God. Heb. 11.6.

Queſt. What wayes have we to know that there is a God by?

Anſw. Firſt, we know by the creatures that there is a God. For the Heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament ſheweth his handy worke, ſaith the Prophet. To whom agreeth the Apoſtle alſo, ſaying, that, That which is to bee knowne of God, is manifeſt in them. For the inviſible things of him, as his eternall power, and Godhead, are ſeene by the creation of the world, &c. As by the greatneſſe of the world, and of many particular creatures in it, as alſo by his making all things of nothing, wee ſee his great power; by the variety and notable order of the creatures, we ſee his wiſedome; and by the uſe that we have of them, we ſee his goodneſſe, &c. Pſal. 19. Rom. 1.19.

Queſt. How elſe know we that there is a God?

Anſw. By his Word written, as our fathers in old time did know him, becauſe they heard him ſpeake to them. For by his word he is to us, as by his audible voice he was to them, unleſſe we be Infidels.

Queſt. Thirdly, how?

Anſw. Thirdly, The Spirit of God knoweth the things that are of God, and doth reveale them, ſaith the Apoſtle; among which this is one, that there is a God. Which the ſame Spirit doth ſo engrave in every one that is elected, as he that feeleth not himſelfe paſt doubting of it, is very juſtly for to feare he belongeth not yet unto the Lord.

Queſt. Fourthly, how prove you there is a God?

Anſw. Every mans conſcience accuſing him, and fearing him when he doth evill, excuſing him and comforting him when hee doth well, telleth him plainely there is a God, which puniſheth evill, and rewardeth good. And this reaſon prevaileth with the moſt deſperate that ever was, or is, at ſome time or other, more or leſſe.

Queſt. How many Gods are there?

Anſw. But one onely God. And that to my heart I prove; Firſt, by the Scriptures, There is one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſme, one God and Father of all. And in another place, There is one God, and one Mediator betwixt God and man, even one man Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, by all the prayers of the godly in the Church, which are directed but to one onely God, and therefore wee know there are no moe. Thirdly, by the Commandement where he ſaith not, Thou ſhalt have none other Gods but us, but in the ſingular number, none but me. Fourthly, by the conſent of Gods Church, which hath ever from time to time condemned them as Heretikes, which ſaid there were any moe. And laſtly, reaſon: for God is infinite, and there can bee but one infinite. Therefore but one God, &c. Epheſ. 4.16. 1 Tim. 2.

Queſt. How many Perſons are there?

Anſw. Three Perſons. As firſt I learne by the third of Matthew, where the Father ſpeaketh from Heaven, and ſaith, This is my beloved Sonne, heare him; The Sonne is baptized, and the Holy Ghoſt like a Dove deſcendeth. Secondly, by the word of Chriſt, Goe and teach all Nations, baptizing them, in the Name of the Father, of the Sonne, and of the Holy Ghoſt. If there had beene any more perſons, Chriſt would have named them, and have commanded the ſame to bee done in their names alſo: or elſe there is inequality in the Godhead: therefore wee know there are but three perſons and no moe. Matt. 3.

Queſt. What is God?

Anſw. No man is able to define fully what God is in his Eſſence. But we muſt content our ſelves to know him by his Attributes, namely, that hee is ſtrong, mighty, mercifull, wiſe, ſlow to anger, and of great goodneſſe, and ſo forth, as he is deſcribed unto us by himſelfe in his Word.

Queſt. What is now the firſt duety that ſpringeth of the knowledge of God?

Anſw. Of this knowledge of God ariſeth firſt a true love of him before and above all things whatſoever. Which is, when my heart even effectually feeling how greatly he loved mee firſt, in electing, creating, redeeming and juſtifying mee in Chriſt Jeſus, beſides infinite benefits elſe beſtowed in body and mind upon mee, doth even burne in affection towards him againe, ſubmitteth it ſelf wholly to him, ſerveth him with cheerefulneſſe, and maketh in truth more account of him and his will, than of all the world, yea, than even of mine owne ſalvation, if they could come in compariſon together.

Queſt. How proue you that I am thus bound to loue God?

Anſw. It is proued by Chriſt our Saviours words, He that loueth father or mother, ſiſter or brother, wife or childe, or any thing more than mee, is not worthy of mee, and by the practiſe of the bleſſed Apoſtle, who when he knew Chriſt once, accounted thoſe things which were vantage unto him, loſſe for Chriſts ſake, yea, euen all things hee eſteemed loſſe for the excellent knowledge ſake of Chriſt Ieſus his Lord, and did judge them to be nothing but dung that he might winne Chriſt. Matt.10.37. And certainly, what heart of man or woman ſoeuer knoweth God indeed what hee is in himſelfe, and to all men, and particularly to it many thouſand waies, as impoſſible it is, it ſhould not loue God againe above all, and euen grone that it can loue him no more, as it is impoſſible fire ſhould want heat, or water moyſture.

Queſt. What branches hath the loue of God ſpringing out of it?

Anſw. Whoſoeuer loueth God loueth alſo his Word, the Miniſters of the Word, the poore, and all that feare God, for theſe with ſuch like are the branches of the loue of God, which if they be not in man and woman, certainly, neither is the other in them it ſelfe. And as theſe all are commanded, ſo are the contraries forbidden and condemned by this Law. What the contraries are beſide that by theſe they may bee knowne, they are expreſſed more fully in the examination of conſcience touching the ſame, annexed at the end of this Commandement. Pſal. 119.103. Luke 10. 1 Theſ.5. 1 Iohn 3.17. Pſal.15.1.

Queſt. What is the ſecond duty that followeth of the knowledge of God?

Anſw. To feare him above all.

Queſt. What is meant here?

Anſw. Indeed in the Scripture the feare of God doth uſually ſignifie all Religion, but here it ſignifieth onely a part of the worſhip we owe unto God.

Queſt. And what is it?

Anſw. This feare is a reuerent awe of God, whereby we are loath to offend him, both becauſe we loue him, and becauſe he is able to puniſh us.

Queſt. This ſeemeth to import ſome difference of feare.

Anſw. Very true it is. For there are two kindes of feare of God, one a ſeruile feare, dreading puniſhment: another joyned with loue of God, called a ſon-like feare, & this is meant here.

Queſt. How may we know whether this true feare of God be in us or no?

Anſw. Truely as we know there is fire by the ſmoake, and that a man liueth by his breathing, ſo wee may know by the effects that the feare of God doth bring forth in them in whom it is, whether it be in us or no.

Queſt. Why? what be the effects?

Anſw. As the banke doth keepe the water from ouerflowing, ſo doth the feare of God in man or woman keepe our ſinne that it ſpread not as otherwiſe it would. We ſee it in practiſe proued before our eyes. For when Pharaoh King of Ægypt, commanded them to kill every male childe that was borne of the Iſraelitiſh women, what kept out their cruell murther both from hand and heart, but this banke, the feare and awe of God, more than man? for ſo ſaith the Text, the Mid-wives feared God, and therefore did not as the King commanded them. The like may we ſee in Iob, who ſaith, Gods puniſhment was fearefull to him, therefore he oppreſſed not the fatherleſſe. In Ioſeph alſo very notably, whoſe heart nor body filthy adultery with his Miſtris could ſtaine, becauſe this banke of the feare of God was ſo ſtrong and good in him. Laſtly, the Scripture proueth it plainly to us, when in ſeuerall places it joyneth to the feare of God a departing from euill as an inſeparable effect thereof. For moſt aſſuredly it is ſo. If wee nothing depart from our old ſinnes, and yet ſay, we feare God, we lie, and there is no truth in us. Exod.1.17. Iob 13.32. Gen.39. 1 Iohn 2.8.

Queſt. If then in this view of the effects of it, we finde that either it is not in us yet at all, or at the moſt but very little, how may we obtaine it, or encreaſe it?

Anſw. Firſt, a very good way to breed or encreaſe this reuerent awe and feare of God in our ſelues, is an often and earneſt meditation of Gods power, how he is able to deale with us, to puniſh us and plague us, if we do not feare him, and this we learne by theſe words of Chriſt: Feare not them that can kill the body, and then can doe no more: but feare him that can caſt body and ſoule into eternall fire. For they ſound unto me as if Chriſt ſaid thus, marke how farre Gods power exceedeth mans power, and how much more fearefully hee is able to puniſh you than man can, and let this great power of the Lord over body and ſoule to caſt them both into hell for ever, make you feare the ſame God above all, and ſtand in awe of his Majeſty. And aſſuredly if we had grace to think of his power indeed effectually, it would marvellouſly profit our ſoules to this end. Secondly, another good way and meanes is, a due meditation of the great mercies of God, proued by the Pſalme; With thee there is mercy, therefore ſhalt thou be feared. And laſtly, by diligent learning the Word of God preached or read unto us. For ſo wee reade in the Law, Gather thy people together, men, women and children, and the ſtranger that is within thy gates, that they may heare and learne to feare the Lord. See how hee ſaith, by hearing men learne this feare of God, and breed it or encreaſe it. How the feare of God is gotten. Mat.10.16. Pſal.130.

Queſt. When is the feare of God to be learned?

Anſw.

Anſw. At all times, but eſpecially when opportunitie either of teaching or learning doth ſerve us. For that we ought to take opportunity of teaching, our Saviour Chriſt himſelfe affirmeth, ſaying, Yet a little, and the light is with you, walke while ye have the light. And that we ſhould then learne when we our ſelves are able and apt to learn, the Wiſe-man ſheweth in theſe words: Remember thy Creator in the daies of thy youth, before thy evill daies come, and thy yeeres approach, wherein thou ſhalt ſay, I have no pleaſure in them. Alſo the often and ſudden loſſe of hearing and ſeeing by ſundry occaſions doth vehemently admoniſh us to take time while time is, and learne to feare God while we may. For to day we can reade peradventure our ſelves, and if not, yet at leaſt heare others, but to morrow, who is ſure he ſhall either have eyes to ſee to reade himſelfe, or ſenſe of hearing to heare others? Therefore againe take time when we may. Eccleſ.12.1.

Queſt. What is contrary to the feare of God?

Anſw. Too much to ſtand in feare of men and threats, ſo that by them wee are driven to any unlawfull things. Too much to feare God himſelfe and his Iudgements, as deſperate men doe, which nouriſh no hope of his mercy and goodneſſe. Thirdly, ſecurity and too little feare of God, with many ſuch moe. All theſe are contrary to the true feare of God, which wee ſpeake of, and are as well forbidden here as the other is commanded.

Queſt. What is the third duty of this Commandement?

Anſw. Thirdly, we are here commanded to make our prayers to none but to God.

Queſt. How may it be proved that only God of true Chriſtians is to be prayed unto, ſince other Doctrine is delivered by the Church of Rome?

Anſ. Firſt it is proved by the words of the Apoſtle Paul, How ſhall they call upon him in whom they have not beleeved? as though he ſhould ſay, beleefe muſt needs ever go before prayer, whereupon then thus we may reaſon: We muſt onely pray to him in whom we muſt beleeve, but we may and ought beleeve onely in God the Father, God the Sonne, and God the Holy Ghoſt, therefore onely to theſe three perſons one onely God muſt our prayers be directed. Rom.10.

The firſt propoſition we ſee proved by Paul, the ſecond by the Articles of our Faith and all the Scripture, the concluſion followeth upon them both. Secondly, it is proved by Chriſt himſelfe, who teaching his Apoſtles to pray, and in them all other men, biddeth them neither call upon Angell nor Saint, no not upon his Mother Mary. But when you pray, ſaith he, ſay, Our Father which art in Heaven: That is, what forme of words ſoever you uſe, ever direct your prayers unto God, and to him onely. And Father in this place ſignifieth any of the three perſons, and is not to be reſtrained onely to the firſt perſon.

Thirdly, we have no commandement to pray to any but to God onely, wee have no promiſe to bee heard if wee doe, no example in Scriptures of any godly man or woman that hath done it ever at any time, or upon any occaſion; wee have no puniſhment threatned if we doe it not: But to pray to God wee are commanded, wee are promiſed to bee helped, wee have examples, and we are threatned if wee doe it not. Therefore whether of theſe two is to be done, who ſeeth not? Pſal.50.

Queſt. What is the fourth duty of this Commandement?

Anſw. Fourthly, we are bound by this law to acknowledge God alone to be the guider and governour of all things, of whom we receive all the benefits that we have, and therefore that we truſt and ſtay upon him alone.

Queſt. Here are three ſeverall things affirmed very worthy to be ſeverally conſidered, and therefore firſt I pray you, how is it proved that God guideth and governeth all things?

Anſw. Beſides a number of other places which might be alledged to prove it withall, a very good teſtimony is that in the pſalme: Whatſoever pleaſed the Lord, that did hee in Heaven and earth, in the ſea, and in all the depth. Where marke well the ſpace of the Lords dominion, in Heaven he ruleth, in earth he ruleth, in the ſea he ruleth, and in all theſe whatſoever it pleaſeth him, that doth hee at all times and ſeaſons. The like ſpeech againe hath the ſame Prophet in another place, But our God is in heaven ( ſaith he ) and doth whatſoever he will. The eyes of all things wait upon him, and he giveth them meat in due ſeaſon. So then nothing without him is done at any time, but his power almighty guideth and governeth all things. Pſal.135.9. Pſal.115.3. Pſal.145.15.

Queſt. How is it proved that all good commeth to us from this directing providence of the Lord?

Anſw. The holy Ghoſt in plaine words affirmeth it by his Apoſtle Iames, Every good giving and every perfect gift is from above, and commeth downe from the Father of light. Iames 1.17.

Queſt. This doctrine is plaine. And yet notwithſtanding ever it hath had, and even in theſe daies hath ſome enemies. Such objections as I have heard at times, I will propound unto you, and I pray you anſwer them. The firſt is this, if God rule all things by his providence and direction, then muſt he needs bee author of ſin alſo, in that he hindereth it not, but ſuffereth it to be done.

Anſw. I anſwer to this your firſt doubt thus: That the argument is not good, neither followeth, that becauſe all things are done by his providence, therfore he ſhould be author of evill. For one may bee author of an action, and yet not of the evill in the action, and in this ſimilitude we ſee: if a man cut with an evill knife, he is the cauſe of cutting, but not of evill cutting or hackling of the knife, but the badneſſe of the knife is the cauſe of that. Againe, if a man ſtrike the ſtrings of an inſtrument that is out of tune, hee is the cauſe that the ſtrings ſound, but that they ſound jarringly and out of tune, that is in themſelves, and the man that ſtriketh is not to be blamed for it. Therefore, ſeeing one may be the cauſe of an action, and yet not of the evill in the action; if God be the cauſe of an action, muſt the evill in the thing need proceed of him? Nay, contrarily this doctrine is a ſealed truth, that no evill commeth of God in any worke, but though in every thing that is done, the Lord be ſome worker, yet as he doth it, it is ever good. Mark but an example or two. Iob.1. Iobs great adverſity proceedeth of God, and by God in ſome reſpect; it proceedeth of Satan alſo, and of the Caldeans that robbed him. Yet ſee, that which Satan did maliciouſly, and the Caldeans covetouſly, that did the Lord well and to good purpoſe, to the glory of his name, to the inſtruction and comfort of us all, and to Iobs great benefit alſo. Gen 38. Ioſephs affliction againe, it came by God, by his brethren, by his light miſtreſſe, and over credulous maſter, but yet ſo much as God did was well done, to the great benefit of his father and friends after; and what the other did, was evill, and wrongfully done to Ioſeph. The like againe may bee ſaid touching the death of Chriſt. Had not God his worke in it, when his determinate counſell appointed it, and delivered him up? Had not Iudas his worke in betraying him? Had not the Iewes their worke whoſe wicked hands crucified and ſlew him? Yet that which they did moſt horribly, the Lord himſelfe did in unſpeakeable mercy to all our endleſſe comforts. Therefore whatſoever proceedeth of God, as it commeth from him, it is moſt good, although the ſame thing, as it commeth of man and by man, be wicked and evill, and no author of evill is he, though guider and governour of all things. Acts 2.23.

hackling

Queſt. My ſecond doubt then is this, if God governe all things by his providence, then looke how he liſts to have things, and ſo ſhall they bee, men cannot change his will, and therefore it ſkilleth not what we doe.

Anſw. Surely, the concluſion is very wicked, and no way followeth upon Gods providence. For albeit he direct all things, yet wee muſt ever uſe the meanes that God hath appointed notwithſtanding, for ſo wee ſee Gods children ever did, and tempted not the Lord by any ſuch wicked ſpeech as this. Rebecca heard Gods owne mouth ſpeake it, that he would of her two ſonnes Eſau and Iacob make two Nations, and the elder ſhould ſerve the yonger, whereby ſhe well knew Eſau could not kill Iacob, whatſoever he threatned: yet did ſhe not preſume careleſly thereon, and ſaid to her ſelfe it skilled not what ſhe did, but ſhee uſed the ordinary meanes to ſave Iacobs life, and ſent him out of the Country for a time. Gen.27. Numbers of theſe examples are in the Scripture. Let this one moe of Chriſt himſelfe ſuffice, who prayed to his Father to glorifie him, and yet was he moſt ſure of it before; all to teach us to uſe ordinary meanes. Therefore Gods providence never ought to prejudice ſuch meanes as hee hath appointed to obtaine any thing by, neither indeed doth in the godly. Iohn 17.

Queſt. My third objection is this, If God ruled all by his providence, then ſhould there be no miſorder at all in the world as there is?

Anſw. No more there is in deed and truth, I meane in reſpect of God.

Queſt. No; Is not this evill in the world, and in regard of God wrong, that evill men ſhould thrive and flouriſh as they doe, and the godly not?

Anſw. No indeed. For good men and women are afflicted in this world for their good, namely, that they may not be condemned with the world. And evill men receive Gods bleſſings to make them without all excuſe, and to encreaſe their damnation if they ſerve not God.

Queſt. Why, but did not Iosephs brethren ill, and they that killed Chriſt?

Anſw. Yea indeed they did horribly as I have ſaid before, but yet God directed all to his glory, to the benefit of his Church, and our everlaſting comfort by Chriſt, and therefore in Gods government all was then well, and ever is.

Queſt. What then is the concluſion?

Anſw. The concluſion is this, as hath beene ſaid, that in truth there is no miſorder in the world in reſpect of God. For all that ever he doth, or letteth be done is good and for good, but all miſorder is in reſpect of man.

Queſt. What is the fruit and uſe of this Doctrine of Gods providence?

Anſw. Very great, for it maketh us in weale and woe give glory to God, who ſends all. It maketh us patient to beare things better, becauſe the Lord doth ſend them: it maketh us hang ſtill upon him for comfort, who will not ſee us want, and many good fruits it worketh in us, if throughly we be perſwaded of it.

Queſt. Next now what manner of conſequence is this in the Booke, that becauſe God guideth all things; and of him we receive all things; therefore we ſhould truſt and ſtay upon him alone?

Anſm. The conſequence is very good. For the former, ſetled in the heart once by faith, ever begetteth the ſecond in man or woman, and they cannot be parted. We ſee a plaine proofe of it in David, who being indeed perſwaded that the Lord was his ſhepheard, by and by concludeth thereupon, therefore ſhall I want nothing. Pſal. 23.

Queſt,

Queſt. But what if I a fraile man or woman do yet find my ſelfe weake in truſting to the Lord, and in the Lord, when trouble aſſayleth me, how might I helpe this great infirmitie, and increaſe my truſt in the Lords mercy?

Anſ. Firſt, whenſoever we are tempted to doubt of any thing, it is a ſpeciall thing preſently to conſider the promiſes of God, touching that matter, and in them the generality and the certainty. As for example, if this cogitation ſhould ariſe in me, Certainly if I doe not as the world doth, I ſhal never carry credit in the world, nor come to any wealth and eſtate like others: by and by I ſhould remember what is written touching this matter, namely, Seeke the kingdome of God firſt and principally above all, and then ſhall all theſe things be caſt unto you. And againe, Them that honour me, them will I honour, with many ſuch. Then having the promiſes, conſider next the generality of them, and ſee if they be limited either to poore or rich, or any, ſo that you may not boldly lay as good hold of them as any, and well ſhall you ſee they are not. Thirdly, I muſt weigh the certainty of them, and the truth of them. For is my God a lyar? Shall I miſtruſt his word, and thinke it ſhame to doubt an earthly friend? God forbid. And if he hath ſpoken it, that theſe worldly things ſhall bee caſt upon thoſe that ſerve him ſo farre as is good for them, is not he able to performe his promiſe, and to make his word good, unleſſe I uſe ungodly and unlawfull extraordinary meanes? God forbid. Avaunt then and avoid foule Devill may I ſay: for I beleeve the promiſes of my God, ſo true, ſo generall, made to all men and women, old and young, rich and poore, and ſo certaine, as nothing can be more. I beleeve them, I ſay I beleeve them, and by his promiſes my truſt encreaſeth. Thus may we doe in all doubts elſe whatſoever. For if it be a benefit to body or mind, in this world or the next, we ſerve him ſo farre as it ſhall be good for us. For godlineſſe hath the promiſe of this life, and that to come. Therefore never let Satan prevaile, for either God is no God, or you ſhall want no good thing: onely be of good comfort, be ſtrong, and truſt in the Lord, and he ſhall comfort your heart.

Mat. 6.
1 Sam. 2.
1 Tim. 4.
Pſal. 84.
Pſal. 27.

Queſt. What other way tell you me?

Anſ. Another good way to encreaſe and confirme your truſt in God, is in all griefes very diligently to meditate of the Lords great power and ability to helpe you: how ſoone he can doe it, how eaſily he can do it, even in the twinkling of an eye, were your caſe never ſo hard. And ſurely no more able is he than willing, ſo farre forth as ſhall be to your good, bee aſſured of it. For God forbid that ever we ſhould thinke that he, who before we were reconciled unto him, ſo loved us, as that he robbed himſelfe even of his owne deare Sonne for our ſake: now when we are reconciled to him by ſo deare a price, wanteth good will to doe leſſe things for us. Yet that this meanes might the better ſinke in your mind, marke I pray you how even God himſelfe hath taught his children to uſe it, knowing the profit of it to this end. As in his ſpeech with Abraham, why hath he theſe words to him? I am God all-ſufficient, but to inſinuate to Abraham that if any diſtruſt or weakneſſe in any thing ſhould aſſault him, by and by he ſhould helpe himſelfe, and ſtrengthen his faith with meditation of his infinite power whom he ſerved and followed.

Gen. 17.

So againe more plaine in another place, Feare not Abraham, I am thy ſhield. As if hee ſhould have ſaid, If any doubt ariſe, Abraham, feare not, but preſently have recourſe to the conſideration of this, that I am thy ſhield. For may it be, that I which have taken upon me thy defence, cannot doe it; is my power ſcant, or want I ability to doe any thing that I will doe? If I do nor, then let the conſideration of my power be thy ſtrength. Againe, ſee it in practice, and note the fruit of it. Do we not know how eaſily Abraham might have doubted of Gods promiſe, that he ſhould have a child, if he had conſidered either the age of himſelfe, or the deadneſſe of his wives body, in courſe now paſt by much to beare a child? Yet ſaith the Apoſtle, Abraham ſtrong in faith, doubted not. And why ſo? Truely he uſed this meanes that now I tell you of, and with meditation of Gods power ſtrengthened his faith. For ſo it followeth in the Text, Hee was fully aſſured that he which had promiſed, was alſo able to doe it. Able I ſay, and marke the words.

Rom. 4.

And the very ſame wee reade of Paul, who therefore ſaith hee fainted not under affliction, neither was aſhamed of the croſſe of Chriſt, becauſe he was perſwaded and ſoundly ſettled touching the Lords ability to keepe that which he committed unto him. So then ſee how the conſideration of Gods power ſtrengthned them, and why ſhould it not confirme us as well in all our feares? And marke in any caſe how in all theſe places with Gods power is ever underſtood his willingneſſe alſo: for they did not ſerve theſe two, as ſubtile Satan would perſwade us to doe.

2 Tim. 2. 12.

Queſt. Have you yet any more of this counſaile?

Anſ. Yea, this alſo is another excellent helpe for us weake wretches to confirme our hearts by, namely, to weigh well what troubleth us, and then to ſearch, aske and ſeeke if in the Scripture there be any example of any that ever was in the like caſe: and to ſee what his end or iſſue was, comforting our ſelves with aſſuring hope of the like, ſince God is no reſpecter of perſons. This wiſedome is learned of David, who ſaith, if God be mercifull to him, and helpe him, it will be a forcible meanes to make others truſt in his mercy. For they ſhall reaſon in their hearts, ſaith

Pſal.34.6. ſaith David,and ſay,*This poore man cried unto the Lord,and he heard him.*Therefore he will doe the like to us, wee are aſſured of it. What is then that troubleth your conſcience ? Have you beene an adulterer,or a murtherer?ſo was David,and yet found mercy.Have you perſecuted the Church and children of God any waies?ſo did Paul grievouſly,and yet found mercy. Have you beene an Idolater?Manaſſes was a cruell Idolater,and yet found mercy.Have you denied Chriſt and his truth upon any occaſion, and ſhrinked from your God ? ſo did all the Apoſtles, and yet found mercy. Nay have you with oath forſworne him?ſo did Peter,and yet found mercy. Then take Davids counſell. Marke how all theſe in their ſeverall ſins cried unto the Lord, and found his ready pardon, and gather ſtrength by it, for he is the ſame God that ever he was, as loath a ſinner ſhould die as ever he was, and that body and ſoule of yours coſt him as much as ever did theirs:therefore feare not, for he loves you as truly as ever he did them. And his hand is out with helpe in it, onely beleeve, and take hold of it, it is your owne.

Queſt. I pray you ſtill go on in this matter as long as you will.

Anſw. Onely this one more will I advertiſe you of, and it is as profitable as any of the reſt, namely, to note and very diligently to weigh what experience of the Lords goodneſſe you your ſelfe have had heretofore, and by triall had make ſtrong your heart for that which is to Gen.32. come. Thus did Iacob when he was to meet with his brother Eſau. Firſt,he looked upon Gods commandement to him to returne, and thereby he aſſured himſelfe God would not leave him helpleſſe when he tooke in hand nothing but by his will : and ſecondly,he well marketh what a God hee had ever found him till that day, whereof faith inferreth a comfortable concluſion, Iacob, feare not, God thy God is no man, that he ſhould change, hee hath defended thee, and 1 Sam.17. ſtill be aſſured of it he will defend thee. Thus did David when he ſhould fight againſt Goliah, he remembred what helpe he found againſt the paw of the Beare and the Lyon, and then aſſu-
Mat.16.9. red himſelfe by paſſed proofe of ſo good a God,he ſhould not miſcarry with the Philiſtim.Thus dealt Chriſt with his doubting Diſciples for want of food, willing them to remember what a Deut.7. multitude with a very little they had ſeene relieved, and yet plenty remaining, and even for ſhame by paſſed tryall of Gods power to be ſtrengthned in aſſurance touching what was come. And if you reade the 7. of Deuteronomy, the 18. verſe, it is a very fit place to this end. But per-1 Cor. 8. adventure you will ſay it is not ſound building,to conclude,becauſe God hath been good,therefore he will be good. Yes indeed is it,and that courſe of building which the Scripture uſeth in ſundry places. By name it is the argument of Paul to the Corinthians, that therefore God would confirme them to the end, becauſe hee had begun a good worke in them , and becauſe God is faithfull, marke that.

Philip.1.6. The like doth the ſame Apoſtle to the Philippians, Theſſalonians, and to Timothy, beſides
1 Theſ.5.24. other places. And Peter in his Epiſtles againe the very ſame. And I pray you marke but what
2 Tim.4.18. you know.Doth not the former tried goodneſſe of a mortall man worke in him that findeth it
2 Pet.1.3. a good opinion, and even a confidence in that man,if he ſhould need againe to him ? O what compariſon betwixt man and God ? The one is mutable in liking and favour, the other whom Pſal.27. he loveth , to the end he loveth them : the one ſubject to diminution of power, ſo that if hee would be as good as he hath beene, yet can hee not : the other in power almighty ever, ſo that what he will,he can at all houres. Therefore challenge you the Lord as David doth, boldly ; I warrant you : Thou haſt beene my ſuccour, O Lord,then leave me not now,neither forſake me O God of my ſalvation.

Queſt. Doe now all theſe duties inferre thanksgiving unto the Lord ?

Anſw. It muſt needs be ſo: for certainly,if we be bound to know, to love,to feare,to truſt in, and pray to the Lord at all times, and for all wants, by the ſame law we muſt needs be bound to give thankes unto him for that meaſure of grace which in any of theſe duties he beſtoweth upon us, and for his great benefits which we receive.

Queſt. But hath this duty no other proofe ?

1 Theſ.5 18. Anſw. Yes indeed: Expreſſe and plaine commandements, that in all things wee ſhould give Pſal.103. thankes; Evident practices of Gods Children, as of David, crying upon his ſoule to praiſe the Luke 1. Lord, and upon all that is within him to praiſe his holy name : Of Mary, profeſſing that her ſoule did magnifie the Lord, and that her ſpirit rejoyced in God her Saviour. With many ſuch like.

Saying of grace at the Table. Queſt. Since then this duty both is commanded, and hath of Gods children beene ever upon all occaſions ſo carefully performed, me thinkes at our meats eſpecially we ſhould remember it.

Anſw. Truly you have named a time and occaſion, when indeed Chriſtians ſhould neither 1 Tim. forget nor ſhame to looke up unto the Lord, and to praiſe his name. For even then have they his mercies before their eies, to put them in minde. Which if they receive thankfully, they receive rightly : if not, then very dangerouſly, both in reſpect of the creatures themſelves, which,as the Apoſtle ſaith,are not ſanctified otherwiſe unto us, that we may receive them with a good conſcience , than by the word and prayer; and alſo in reſpect of the breach of Gods Commandements , who expreſly willed his people Iſrael , and in them even all others, that that when they had eaten and filled themſelves, they ſhould bleſſe the Lord their God for the good land which he had given them. Beſide which reaſons yet even further wee have the practice of the godly to call upon us for this duty. For it is well noted, that the ſame people choſen of the Lord, the Jewes I meane, did not ſit downe to eate, but, either the good man of the houſe, or hee that was Primarius in menſa, that is, the chiefe man at the Table, did take either the bread, or the cup in his hand, and ſo holding it, prayed unto the LORD, that he would vouchſafe to bleſſe them and thoſe his good gifts, which then they were about to receive at his mercifull hand. Likewiſe after meat they gave him thankes for it. Hence commeth the mention of taking the Cup twice by our Saviour Chriſt in Luke, the former taking was this ſaying of grace and giving of thankes which I ſpeake of; the other was the celebration of his Supper. How even of purpoſe alſo doth the Evangeliſt mention this ſame practice ſtill in Chriſt, ſometimes ſaying, When they had ſung a Pſalme, ſometime, When hee had given thankes, &c. alſo to teach us, that every ſuch precept and practice ſhall condemne us, if we do not the like.

Deut.8.10.

Luke 22.10.

Mat.14.19. Marke 6.41. Marke 14.16.

And truely if men and women would looke into their hearts, and not flatter themſelves in dangerous ſecurity, and would even ſay to themſelves, Why doe not I ſay Grace, or cauſe it to be ſaid in that place where I am chiefe, and ought to doe it, what thinke you would they finde to be the true cauſe indeed? Certainely nothing but ſhame and baſhfulneſſe, becauſe it hath not beene uſed. But O fearefull ſhame, that ſhameth to doe Gods Commandements, and ſo conſequently maketh us eate our owne damnation, the creatures being not ſanctified unto us. And O damnable following of our wicked cuſtome, and leaving the cuſtome of Chriſt and his children. God in mercy awake us. For aſſuredly we little know what we do, when we pretermit and ſhame to doe this duty to the Lord.

Rom.16.3,& 4.

Queſt. You have well ſatisfied me touching the neceſſity of this duty, and now I aske you another queſtion, whether we may not alſo give thankes to men, whatſoever they ſay or doe to us, yea if they drinke but to us at the Table, we muſt ſay, I thanke God?

Anſw. Truely to be perſwaded that any kindneſſe or good can come to us by men and from men whereof our mercifull God is not the ſender and giver, working by thoſe inſtruments, were very wicked and horrible: but for the phraſe of ſpeech, my heart knowing God to be the author, I may well and lawfully uſe it to the inſtrument no doubt, and ſay, I thanke you, at any time or upon any occaſion, when I reape the benefit of their love, and by name upon ſuch occaſion as you named.

And this I take to be warranted by the practice of Paul, who no doubt in heart knew God to be author of all his good, and yet are his words directed to the inſtruments, Greet Priſcilla and Aquila, ſaith he, my fellow helpers in Chriſt Ieſus, which have for my life laid downe their necke, unto whom not onely I give thankes, but alſo all the Churches of the Gentiles.

Queſt. As you have ſaid of tht other duties, ſo I take it in this alſo: namely that whatſoever is contrary or againſt it, is as well forbidden us by this firſt Commandement, as this is commanded.

Anſw. It is very true. Both the pretermiſſion of thankes for any goodneſſe upon body or minde, our ſelves or ours, temporall or eternall, beſtowed by the Lord, as alſo the aſcribing of it to our ſelves, our wit, our ſtrength, policy, friends, or any thing, it is horrible, and a breach of this Commandement, Thou ſhalt have none other gods but me.

Queſt. Thus reſt I inſtructed more than I was touching this Commandement, the firſt of all the ten, And onely I could wiſh, if ſo you might, that you would ſhew me ſome way how profitably to examine mine owne heart touching this law, and how with my ſelfe I might meditate upon it fruitfully, and with feeling.

Anſ. Indeed your requeſt hath great profit in it, and that courſe or practiſe yee now deſire, ſhall any man or woman find very fruitfull, if they doe uſe it. For even as in earthly matters our affection and love cleaveth faſteſt to them, that in greateſt extremities have brought us helpe and eaſe: and as there is nothing that will blow up the coale of the remembrance more vehemently, and make it flame out into open ſhew of a thankfull heart more effectually, than ſome true meditation of the greatneſſe of danger, and grievouſneſſe of eſtate that we were in before: So in heavenly and ſpirituall things, the ſame is found as true, or rather more, that ſight of greateſt good procureth greateſt meaſure of ſuch fruit as out to flow thereof. For by example, what ſo kindleth in a man the heat of burning love, and maketh his heart to flame with true affection to his God, as doth a lively ſight of that fearefull eſtate, utter extremity, deſperate and damnable condition, that he was once ſubject unto, without all recovery by himſelf, or any creature, either in heaven or earth, but onely Jeſus Chriſt, the Sonne of God, God and Man; together with a ſight of a certaine ſafety from the ſame?

Did not this bring that bleſſed woman, and happy Saint of God, Mary Magdalen, to ſuch a ſweet taſte and great love, as that her melting heart miniſtred teares to her weeping eyes, wherewith ſhe waſhed the feet of her deare Saviour, wiped them with the haires of her head, kiſſed them, anointed them with precious ointment: and what was it which that woman thought too much for ſuch a friend?

True

True it is therefore, that the leſſe we ſee the goodneſſe of our God, the leſſe we love him: but great is the affection of them to whom many ſinnes are forgiven.

